A quantity of iron rails was shipped to be carried to a certain place, for a sum to be paid here, ship lost or not lost. The shippers insured them by a policy "warranted free from particular average, unless the ship be stranded, sunk, or burnt"; with a clause authorising the assured to "sue, labour, and travel for, in, and about, the defence, safeguard and recovery of the goods." The ship was neither stranded, sunk, nor burnt; but there was a constructive total loss of her by perils of the sea. The rails were saved, and sent on in other vessels to their destination, for which the assured was compelled to pay freight to an amount not exceeding the value of the rails:—Held, that this freight was not recoverable under the policy. Ib.

A cargo of bacon was insured from Liverpool to New York by a policy containing the exception "warranted free from average, unless general, or the ship be stranded, sunk, or burnt," and a suing and labouring clause in its ordinary form. The ship in the course of its voyage was disabled and the cargo discharged. Part of the bacon was condemned and sold, and the remainder sent on in two vessels; all of which was proper under the circumstances:—Held, that neither the extra freight incurred by reason of the transhipment, nor the cost of warehousing, surveying and cooperage of the goods, could be recovered under the policy. Booth v. Gair, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 291; 33 L. J., C. P. 99; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1326; 9 L. T. 386; 12 W. R. 106.

—— Parol Evidence—"Particular Charges."]—Evidence was given to shew that expenses incurred in saving the subject-matter of insurance were, by usage, called "particular charges" and not "particular average":—Held, that such evidence was admissible, but that it was in affirmance of the common law, and did not control or vary the policy, and left the case exactly in the same position as if it had not been given. Kidston v. Empire Marine Insurance Co., supra.

Question for Jury.]—Where goods are in consequence of the perils insured against lying at a place different from the place of their destination, damaged, but in such a state that they can at some cost be put into a condition to be carried to their destination, the jury, in order to ascertain whether there is a constructive total loss of the goods, must determine whether or not it is practically possible to carry them on,—that is, whether to do so will cost more than they are worth; and, in determining this, the jury is to take into account all the extra expenses consequent on the perils of the sea, such as drying, landing, warehousing, and re-shipping the goods; but they are not to take into account the fact that, if they are carried on in the original bottom, or by the original shipowner in a substituted bottom, they will have to pay the freight contracted to be paid; that being a charge to which the goods are liable when delivered, whether the perils of the sea affect them or not. Farnworth v. Hyde, 36 L. J., C. P. 33; L. R. 2 C. P. 204; 15 L. T. 395; 15 W. R. 340—Ex. Ch. Affirming, 1 H. & R. 433; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 997.

When the original bottom is disabled by the perils of the sea, so that the shipowner is not bound to carry the goods on, and he does not choose to do so, the jury is not to take into account the whole of the cost of transit from the place of distress to the place of destination which must be incurred by the goods owner if he carries them on, but only the excess of that cost above that which would have been incurred if no peril had intervened. Ib.

Damage by Fire.]—In a policy upon a steamer, in the ordinary form, the hull and the machinery were separately valued, with a clause, "average on the whole or on each as if separately insured." The steamer had discharged her cargo at C., and whilst she lay there without any cargo on board, her hull was damaged by fire. The cost of repairs to the hull amounted, after a deduction of the usual one-third, to 386*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*, including 9*l.* 0*s.* 1*d.* of Lloyd's surveyors' fees. An additional sum of 55*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.* was expended in extinguishing the fire. It was proposed to add this to the other sum, so as to take the case out of the common three per cent. memorandum:—Held, that these expenses must be apportioned to the hull and machinery according to their respective values, and that only the sum due for the hull could be added to the direct loss on the hull. Oppenheim v. Fry, 5 B. & S. 348; 33 L. J., Q. B. 267; 10 L. T. 539; 12 W. R. 831—Ex. Ch. And see Achard v. Ring, 31 L. T. 647; 2 Asp. M. C. 422.

Replacing Copper when Vessel damaged and Sold.]—A vessel insured on a time policy started from Calcutta for England. While proceeding down the river Hooghly, she sustained some damage by an accidental collision with a steam-vessel, and after a few days was found to leak so much, as to render it necessary to return. She underwent some repair, and was re-coppered, and again set sail for England; but she was again compelled to return, was put into dock, her wales, &c. removed, for the purpose of examining the condition of her timbers, and was ultimately found so defective as to render it inexpedient to repair her, and consequently she was sold as she lay, for the purpose of being broken up. The assured claimed for an average, and also for a total loss; the jury negatived the latter, and, as to the former, returned the following verdict:—"Verdict for the plaintiff on the first issue, sufficient not having been paid into court to cover the expense of stripping off and replacing the copper, for all the repairs and charges on both occasions of the return of the vessel to Calcutta actually incurred, and also what would have been necessary for replacing the wales, which we consider was the consequence of the collision":—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover anything in respect of the replacing of the wales, that expense not having been actually incurred. Stewart v. Steele, 5 Scott (N.R.) 927.

On Loss of Freight.]—The plaintiffs, shipowners, entered into a charterparty which provided for payment of freight at a specific rate, and that "If any portion of the cargo be delivered sea damaged, the freight on such sea-damaged portion to be two-thirds of the above rate." They effected an insurance with underwriters, "To cover only the one-third loss of freight in consequence of sea damage as per charterparty." Sea damage happened, and one-third of the freight on the sea-damaged portion of the cargo was deducted by the charterers from the total amount of freight:—Held, that the subject-matter of insurance was "the one-third loss of freight in consequence of sea damage," and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover from each underwriter only such proportion of the amount of the loss as the amount of his subscription bore to the total sum for which the underwriters subscribed the policy. Griffiths v. Bramley-Moore, 48 L. J., Q. B. 201; 4 Q. B. D. 70; 40 L. T. 149; 27 W. R. 480; 4 Asp. M. C. 66—C. A.

—— Advances.]—A policy was effected at and from the river Plate to Canton and back, on specie shipped in the river Plate, and on the returns thereof, in any description of merchandise, with liberty to declare and value thereafter. The assured chartered a vessel on a voyage from Buenos Ayres to Canton and back, and they were to pay for the voyage 10,000 dollars, in manner following: viz. "in China, all the sums that might be necessary for the payment of the port charges, and other incidental expenses, the latter not exceeding 2,000 dollars, and the balance at thirty days after the vessel's return to Buenos Ayres." The underwriters had no notice of the terms of the charterparty. The assured shipped on board this vessel at Buenos Ayres a quantity of specie, consigned to an agent at Canton, who, on the ship's arrival there, advanced to the captain a sum of money, being the amount of the port charges, and a further sum of incidental expenses; and he shipped other goods on board the vessel, on account of his principals, for the homeward voyage. No valuation was ever made in pursuance of the liberty reserved by the policy. The vessel, on her return voyage, was lost:—Held, that the assured were not entitled to recover the two sums paid by their agent at Canton, for port charges and other incidental expenses, as part of the value of the merchandise shipped at Canton, and insured by the policy, inasmuch as the money agreed to be paid there was not properly freight, and had no distinct relation to the goods shipped. Winter v. Haldimand, 2 B. & Ad. 649.

A. let his ship to freight and charter to B. for a voyage, the probable duration of which was eight months, at 100*l.* per month, and, by the charterparty, B. was to make the advances for sailing charges, on account of the money payable for the hire of the ship, miscalled freight; B. insured 300*l.* with C., for money advanced on sailing charges, and A., at the same time, insured with C. 400*l.* on freight. Upon a total loss:—Held, that C. was not entitled to consider A.'s policy as effected on gross freight, and that, the amount being 800*l.*, A. was his own insurer for a moiety of the risk. Etches v. Aldan, 1 M. & Ry. 165; 31 R. R. 309; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 65.

A ship was chartered to proceed to Cardiff, there load a cargo of coals, and "therewith proceed to San Francisco, and deliver the same on being paid freight at the rate of 4*l.* 10*s.* per ton, the freight to be paid by good and approved bills on London, at six months' date from the date of sailing, less cost of insurance, to be effected by charterer at ship's expense, or in cash, less 800*l.*, which is to be paid on delivery of cargo." The charterer, under the terms of the charterparty, loaded the coals, and gave in payment of freight two bills of exchange. During the voyage the ship sustained damage, for the repair of which expenses were incurred, and these were admitted to be general average charges:—Held, that the freight paid in advance was not recoverable, and that the charterer was liable to contribute general average in respect of it. Trayes v. Worms, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 159; 34 L. J., C. P. 274; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 639; 12 L. T. 547; 13 W. R. 898. See also Palmer v. Blackburn, ante, col. 1259.

1. NOTICE.

a. Form of.

"Abandon" — Use of Word.]—The word "abandoned" is not necessary in a notice of abandonment; any expressions which inform the underwriters that it is the intention of the assured to give up to them the property insured, on the ground of its having been totally lost, is sufficient. Currie v. Bombay Native Insurance Co., 6 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 302; 39 L. J., P. C. 1; L. R. 3 P. C. 72; 22 L. T. 317; 18 W. R. 296. See also King v. Walker, post, col. 1279.

Insurance Broker—Notice to Settle for Total Loss.]—If an insurance broker requires the underwriters to settle as for a total loss, and to give directions as to the disposition of the property insured, this does not amount to an abandonment. Parmeter v. Todhunter, 1 Camp. 541.

Where the goods exist, there must be an abandonment of freight, although the ship is incapable of prosecuting her voyage. Ibid.

b. By whom Given.

If one of several, jointly interested in a cargo, effects an insurance for the benefit of all, he may give notice of abandonment for all. Hunt v. Royal Exchange Assurance Co., 5 M. & S. 47; 17 R. R. 264.

The deposit of a policy on a ship at sea, which is afterwards injured by perils insured against and condemned, does not invest the depositary with an implied authority to give notice to the underwriter of abandonment as for a total loss. Jardine v. Leathley, 3 B. & S. 700; 32 L. J., Q. B. 132; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1035; 7 L. T. 783; 11 W. R. 432.

c. Time for Notice.

Nature of Delay.]—The assured must not delay to give notice of abandonment, but sufficient time must be allowed to enable the assured to exercise their judgment whether the circumstances entitle them to abandon. Currie v. Bombay Native Insurance Co., supra.

A ship sailed on its outward voyage to New Zealand. More than a month afterwards the owners chartered it to M. to bring home a cargo from Calcutta. By this charterparty, after discharging at New Zealand, it was to sail to Calcutta, and being there tight, staunch and strong, and every way fitted for the voyage, the charterer bound himself to put on board a specified cargo for England at a stipulated freight. The owners then effected a policy, in the usual form, against perils of the sea, upon the freight to be earned on this homeward voyage. The ship was seriously injured in the outward voyage; it was repaired as well as the master, with insufficient funds, and at a place not capable of making full examination and effecting complete repairs, could get it repaired: and with the ship thus partially repaired he sailed from the place where the ship then was, and arrived at Calcutta, where the fullest examination and the completest repairs could be had. He immediately tendered the ship to the agents of the charterers for the homeward cargo. They, on the ground that the charterer had become bankrupt, refused to load a cargo. The master then had the ship fully examined, and it was found that the injuries on the outward voyage had been such that the complete repair of the ship, to render it fit for the voyage home, would exceed the value of the ship when repaired, and the amount of freight to be earned. The owners, on receiving this intelligence, abandoned:—Held, that this was a loss of freight occasioned by the perils of the sea, that no notice of abandonment to the underwriters on freight was necessary, and that if a notice of abandonment to the underwriters on freight had been necessary, the notice here would not, under the circumstances, have been too late. Rankin v. Potter, 42 L. J., C. P. 169; L. R. 6 H. L. 83; 29 L. T. 142; 22 W. R. 1; 2 Asp. M. C. 65.

On the 8th September the master wrote to the owners at Belfast a letter, which they received about the 10th October, giving a detailed account of the damage which his ship had met with, and estimates of the probable expenses of repairing and refitting her. On the 15th the owners wrote a letter to the captain, in which they left him to act as he considered best for the interests of all concerned. On the 8th December the captain wrote a letter to the owners, which they received on the 9th January, 1860, stating that he had made up his mind to abandon and sell the hull, &c. on account and for the benefit of all concerned. On the 13th December he attended before a notary public, and formally declared that he abandoned the ship to the underwriters. On the 7th January, 1860, the ship was sold by auction under his orders, and was afterwards broken up:—Held, that the notice of abandonment was not in time. Grainger v. Martin, 4 B. & S. 9; 8 L. T. 96; 11 W. R. 758—Ex. Ch.

Duty of Assured after Information.]—When the assured receives full and reliable information that the subject-matter of the insurance is in imminent danger of becoming a total loss, he is bound, in order to enable him to recover as for a constructive total loss, immediately to give notice of abandonment to the underwriter, and his omission to do so will not be excused because afterwards the subject-matter of the insurance is justifiably sold. Kaltenbach v. Mackenzie, 48 L. J., C. P. 9; 3 C. P. D. 467; 39 L. T. 215; 26 W. R. 844; 4 Asp. M. C. 39—C. A.

Notice must be given in Reasonable Time.]—A ship, having been ashore, was got off and taken to Dunedin, her port of destination, where she remained from 4th July to the 14th April following. She then sailed for Calcutta to be repaired, and to carry out a charter. On arrival at Calcutta, it was found that it would cost more to repair her than she was worth; and on 2nd August notice of abandonment was given:—Held, that the abandonment was too late, and that the underwriters were liable only for the partial loss by stranding. Potter v. Campbell, 16 W. R. 401.

Where the captain of a vessel, which had been damaged by stormy weather, arrived in London on the 25th April, where his owners resided; and the latter received the ship's papers on the 3rd May following, and the broker who effected the policy gave verbal notice of abandonment to the underwriters on the 5th:—Held, that such notice was given in due time. Read v. Bonham, 6 Moore, 397; 3 Br. & B. 147; 23 R. R. 587.

On the 23rd of September, 1859, a ship having been compelled by sea-damage to put into a port near the Cape of Good Hope, the master had her surveyed, and on the 18th of October, 1859, wrote to the ship's husband at Liverpool describing what had happened, and telling him to give the underwriters notice. On the 18th of November he again wrote, describing the damaged state of the ship, and stating that, in the opinion of the surveyors, she could not go home with a partial repair, but that she would not be worth the amount it would take to repair her. This letter was forwarded to the underwriters. On the 24th of November the master executed a notarial act of abandonment, and on the 9th of December sold the ship. On the 20th of December he again wrote to the ship's husband stating that it would be for the interest of all concerned to abandon and sell instead of repair, and that he had accordingly sold the ship, and he requested due notice to be given to the underwriters, who were then informed of the sale. The ship would not in fact have been worth the expense of repair:—Held, that there was sufficient notice of abandonment to make a constructive total loss, and that the notice was in time. King v. Walker, 3 H. & C. 209; 33 L. J., Ex. 325; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 43; 13 W. R. 232—Ex. Ch.

A ship insured in a valued policy, having sustained damage such as to require repairs, put into Falmouth on the 12th November for that purpose. She was there moored with part of her cargo on board, the residue having been taken on shore. After the repairs were commenced, and before they were completed, she was, on the 2nd December, sunk by a peril of the sea, and lay submerged, with the portion of the cargo on board, until raised by the ship's agents. On the arrival of the ship the master appointed B. her agent, and on the day after she sank A. arrived at Falmouth with full authority from the assured to act for him in all matters concerning the ship as according to the best of his judgment would be best for all concerned. A., having come to the conclusion that it would cost more to raise and repair her than she would be worth when repaired, gave notice of abandonment to B. on the 4th December, and on the same day the captain, by instruction of A., gave notice to the brokers who had effected the policy, who on the 9th December gave notice to the underwriter:—Held, that if this was such a state of things as would constitute a total loss, the notice of abandonment was given in time. Kemp v. Halliday, 6 B. & S. 723; 35 L. J., Q. B. 156; L. R. 1 Q. B. 520; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 582; 14 L. T. 762; 14 W. R. 697—Ex. Ch.

Upon the first notice of a total loss the assured are bound to abandon; but it must appear that they had notice, or the policy will not be vitiated. Abel v. Potts, 3 Esp. 242; 6 R. R. 826.

Where the assured receive intelligence of such a loss as entitles them to abandon, they must make their election in the first instance; and if they abandon, they must give the underwriters notice in a reasonable time; otherwise they waive their right to abandon, and can only recover as for an average loss. Mitchell v. Edie or Ede, 1 Term Rep. 608; 11 A. & E. 888; 9 L. J., Q. B. 187; 3 P. & D. 513; 1 R. R. 318.

The assured are bound to give notice of abandonment at the earliest opportunity; notice given five days after they received intelligence of the loss, held too late. Hunt v. Royal Exchange Assurance Co., 5 M. & S. 47; 17 R. R. 264.

An insured vessel arrived damaged at Kinsale on November 24th; surveys were held on December 2nd and December 14th, when it was found that repairs would exceed the value of the ship. Notice of abandonment was given in London on January 6th:—Held, the notice was too late. Aldrich v. Bell, 1 Stark. 498; 18 R. R. 814.

Election.]—The insured is entitled to a reasonable time for examining into the state of a damaged cargo, before he makes his election on the question of abandonment. Gernon v. Royal Exchange Assurance Co., 2 Marsh. 88; 6 Taunt. 383; Holt, 49; 16 R. R. 630.

A vessel sailing with corn, insured from Waterford, in Ireland, to Liverpool, by a policy with a memorandum to be free from all but general average, was stranded near Waterford on the 28th of January, and the vessel continued, at high tide, under water for near a month, during which time, from the 31st, the assured, at low water, were employed in saving the cargo, the whole of which was damaged, but the greater part recovered, and kiln-dried; but no notice of abandonment was given to the underwriters in London till the 18th February, though there is a constant regular intercourse between Waterford and Liverpool, where some of the assured lived; which was holden to be out of time; for, whether or not, upon such a policy, where there was an opportunity of sending on the corn which was saved to the place of its destination within two months after the accident, in another vessel, the assured were entitled to abandon as in case of a total loss; at all events they ought to have made their election to abandon within a reasonable time, and they cannot take the chance of endeavouring first to save and make the best of the cargo on their own account, and afterwards abandon when they find that they cannot turn it to their advantage. Anderson v. Royal Exchange Assurance Co., 7 East, 38; 3 Smith, 48; 8 R. R. 589.

When it is uncertain whether the damage done to a cargo by a peril insured against will result in a total or partial loss, the assured is not bound to make his election how to treat it as soon as some incipient damage has occurred; and his right to claim indemnity for a total loss does not mature till the facts constituting such a loss are ascertained. Browning v. Provincial Assurance Co. of Canada, L. R. 5 P. C. 263; 28 L. T. 853; 21 W. R. 587; 2 Asp. M. C. 35—P. C. See also Fleming v. Smith, post, col. 1285.

Embargo.]—The blockade of Havre being publicly notified here on the 6th September, and no notice of abandonment given till the 14th October, nor any excuse substantiated for not giving it sooner for want of competent authority before nor any new authority shewn for giving it then:—Held, that the notice was out of time; and this, though the plaintiff's agents in this country had no notice till the 17th October of the decree for restoration of the ship and goods in question, which had been pronounced on the 8th of October. Barker v. Blakes, 9 East, 283; 9 R. R. 558.

The owner of a cargo of flax-seed, insured "at and from America to Limerick," himself residing at that place, on the 11th February, 1808, received information that the ship, with the flax-seed on board, had been detained at Philadelphia by the American embargo; but did not give notice of abandonment till the 11th June following: the flax-seed was intended for sowing, and might have been employed for that purpose had it arrived before the 10th of May, but afterwards would have been scarcely of any value:—Held, however, that the plaintiff might have waited till the 10th of May before abandoning; but the abandonment on the 11th June was out of time. Kelly v. Walton, 2 Camp. 155.

The assured of goods having received intelligence on the 8th of January, 1811, that the ship's papers were taken away on the 7th of December preceding, by the Swedish government, within whose port she was, did not give notice of abandonment to the defendant underwriter till the 17th of January; but though such notice was too late, supposing an abandonment to be necessary, yet, as the goods were finally seized, and unladen by orders of that government on the 30th of April following:—Held, that the ineffectual notice of abandonment before given did not preclude the assured from recovering as for a total loss, without any abandonment. Mellish v. Andrews, 15 East, 13; 13 R. R. 351.

By Scots Law.]—Consideration of the question whether in Scotland constructive total loss is to be taken from the date of notice of abandonment, or from the date of commencement of action. Shepherd v. Henderson, 7 App. Cas. 49; 9 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (4th ser.) 1—H. L. (Sc.)

d. Acceptance of.

Effect.]—If notice of the abandonment of a ship is given by the insured to the insurers, and the insurers then say and do nothing, the conclusion is that they do not mean to accept the abandonment. But if they, by their agent, take possession of the ship, and then repair it and retain it in their possession for some time without repudiating the notice or informing the insured as to the character in which they are acting, then there is a constructive acceptance of the abandonment by the insurers. Provincial Insurance Co. of Canada v. Leduc, 43 L. J., P. C. 49; L. R. 6 P. C. 224; 31 L. T. 142; 22 W. R. 929; 2 Asp. M. C. 338.

And a constructive acceptance produces the same effect on the rights of the parties as an express acceptance. Ib.

When the agent who took possession of the ship, &c. was instructed to look after the interest of the insurance company, his acts in pursuance of those instructions, coupled with the non-repudiation of the notice of abandonment, having been such as to be evidence from which an acceptance might be inferred, the company was bound by his acts. Ib.

After the acceptance by the insurers of the abandonment of a ship, they become liable as for a total loss. Ib.

Estoppel.]—Underwriters intending to resist an abandonment are bound to do so within a reasonable time; where, therefore, the assured, four days after a notice of abandonment had been given, called a meeting of the underwriters at Lloyd's, three of whom attended, and authorised the assured to act as if no insurance had been effected (the ship having been wrecked, and three-fourths of her cargo, consisting of wines, either lost or impregnated with salt water), and the damaged wines were accordingly advertised for sale; but, previously to its taking place, some of the underwriters forbade it, and rejected the notice of abandonment, after more than two months had elapsed, during which time they had not interposed:—Held, that their silence for so long a time was such an acquiescence by them as to amount to an acceptance of the abandonment; and that they could not afterwards prevent the sale. Hudson v. Harrison, 3 Moore, 288; 3 Br. & B. 97; 23 R. R. 575.

Evidence of.] — The question whether the underwriters accept the abandonment or not is a question of fact; but the circumstances of the case may be such that a jury may be told, as a matter of law, that if they think the underwriters have done certain acts which are consistent only with their having accepted the abandonment, then they ought to find that the abandonment has been accepted. Shepherd v. Henderson, 7 App. Cas. 49—H. L. (Sc.)

When a ship sustains a partial loss, the insured cannot abandon, nor is the answer of the underwriters, desiring them "to do the best they can with the damaged property," evidence of their assent to make it a total loss, Thellusson v. Fletcher, 1 Esp. 73; 1 Dougl. 315.

Where there was a loss by capture, intelligence of which was received, and an abandonment made, and a recapture took place before the notice of abandonment was given, but there was no intelligence received of such recapture until after some steps had been taken by the underwriters :—Held, to amount to an acceptance of the abandonment by them. Smith v. Robertson, 2 Dow, 474 ; 14 R. R. 174.

Acceptance by some Underwriters, Rejection by others—Right to Share of Ship.]—The owners of a ship abandoned her as a constructive total loss, and some of the underwriters paid 500*l.* on that footing. Other underwriters resisted the claim, and were held liable for a partial loss to the extent of 20 per cent. on the ship's value. Some years afterwards the first set of underwriters sued the shipowner for 700*l.*, as the value of their share of the ship, which had been repaired, and for 700*l.* as their share of her earnings :—Held (by the Lord Ordinary), that the pursuers were entitled to 400*l.*, being their share of the ship, less 20 per cent., with interest. The shipowner appealed, tendering a share in the ship on the footing that the underwriters were liable for their share of losses :—Held, that the tender came too late, and that the judgment below must be affirmed. Whitworth Brothers v. Shepherd, 12 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (4th ser.) 204.

2. In What Cases.

Purpose of Voyage.]—The owner may abandon if the voyage is not worth pursuing. Hamilton v. Mendez or Mendes, 1 W. Bl. 279 ; 2 Burr. 1198.

Insurance on Freight.]—Abandonment is not necessary upon a loss in an insurance on freight. Mount v. Harrison, 4 Bing. 388 ; 1 M. & P. 14 ; 6 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 6.

There need be no abandonment of freight, where the goods specifically exist, although the ship is incapable of prosecuting the voyage. Idle v. Royal Exchange Insurance Co., 3 Moore, 115 ; 8 Taunt. 755 ; 21 R. R. 538.

Where Unnecessary.]—It is a principle of insurance law that no abandonment is necessary where there is nothing which, on abandonment, can pass to or be of value to the underwriters. Rankin v. Potter, 42 L. J., C. P. 169 ; L. R. 6 H. L. 83 ; 29 L. T. 142 ; 22 W. R. 1 ; 2 Asp. M. C. 65—H. L. (E.)

When, therefore, there was a policy on ship, and also on charterparty freight (that is, freight to be earned by the carriage homeward of a cargo chartered to be put on board at a distant port), and the ship was so injured on the outward voyage that the shipowner abandoned to the underwriter on ship, there was nothing to pass to the underwriter on charterparty freight, and, consequently, there was no necessity for abandonment to him. Ib.

Voluntary Acceptance.]—Where a ship policy contained a provision that the ship should not be within the Gulf of St. Lawrence within a prescribed period, and the ship went into the gulf within the prohibited time and was wrecked ; and notice was given of an abandonment, and was accepted by the insurers, it was contended by them that the ship was not insured when she was lost, as the insurance did not extend to a loss in the gulf within the prohibited time, and that an abandonment can be of no avail where there is no insurance :—Held, that the vessel was in fact insured, that the loss occurred during the time and upon a voyage described in the policy, but there was a breach of one of the warranties ; and if, after a constructive total loss and notice of abandonment, the insurers, with full knowledge of all the facts, accept the notice, they cannot, when called on to pay the amount insured, resile and rely on a breach of warranty. By the voluntary acceptance of the notice of abandonment, an agreement is entered into which closes the whole matter. Provincial Insurance Co. of Canada v. Leduc, 43 L. J., P. C. 49 ; L. R. 6 P. C. 224 ; 31 L. T. 142 ; 22 W. R. 929 ; 2 Asp. M. C. 338. And see Cammell v. Sewell, 5 H. & N. 728 ; 29 L. J., Ex. 350.

On Sale of Ship and Cargo.]—A vessel was insured on a voyage from Saigon to Hong Kong. The ship sailed from Saigon on 14th January, 1871, and on the 22nd she struck upon a bank and was damaged. On the 24th she was towed to Saigon and discharged her cargo. She was then surveyed, and the surveyors recommended she should be sold. On 7th February the owners' house at Singapore made up their minds to sell, and wrote to the captain to that effect. On 11th February the ship was condemned, and on the 23rd was sold. On 27th February the Singapore house wrote to their agents in London, stating the survey, and that the ship had been sold, and directing them to inform the underwriters in London. On 11th March the insured firm claimed for a total loss against the underwriters : —Held, that notice of abandonment was necessary, that no such notice was given, and that the assured was consequently not entitled to recover. Kaltenbach v. Mackenzie, 48 L. J., C. P. 9 ; 3 C. P. D. 467 ; 39 L. T. 215 ; 26 W. R. 844—C. A.

A vessel was stranded and frozen in the St. Lawrence in the beginning of the winter ; and on the breaking up of the ice in the spring, she was found to be in imminent peril ; and after several surveys, both ship and cargo were sold under circumstances which the jury found to constitute a reasonable necessity for an immediate sale, the expense of getting the ship afloat and repairing her, and of forwarding the cargo (timber) to its destination (Liverpool) being greater than their value when so respectively repaired and carried :—Held, that the underwriters on cargo were liable as for a total loss, without notice of abandonment ; the information of the loss and of the sale having both reached the assured at the same time. Farnworth v. Hyde, L. R. 2 C. P. 204 ; 18 C. B. (N.S.) 835 ; 34 L. J., C. P. 207 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 349 ; 12 L. T. 231 ; 13 W. R. 613.

A ship was so much damaged by perils of the sea, that in order to render her seaworthy it would cost more to repair her than she would be afterwards worth, and the captain sold her to a purchaser who partially repaired her, and sent her upon a voyage, which she never completed in consequence of her infirmity :—Held, that the assured was entitled to recover as for total loss without giving notice of abandonment. Cambridge v. Anderton, 2 B. & C. 691 ; 4 D. & R. 203 ; R. & M. 60 ; 1 Car. & P. 213 ; 2 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 141 ; 26 R. R. 517.

A vessel was driven into a port where there was no dock to receive her. It appeared that she had suffered so much by sea perils, that, upon examination and survey, it was judged expedient to break her up, and to sell her for old timber :—Held, that the assured was bound to abandon before he could call upon the underwriters for a total loss; the ship not being a wreck, but, however maimed and damaged, existing in specie as a ship. Bell v. Nixon, Holt, 423.

—— Converting Partial into Total Loss.]—A ship being obliged to put into a place of safety in the course of her voyage, in consequence of damage incurred by a sea peril; if the owner does not abandon, but merely applies to the underwriters for directions how to proceed upon an estimate of the expenses of repair, who decline interfering, he cannot afterwards convert it into a total loss on account of the expenses of the salvage being found in the result to have exceeded the value of the ship, which was ultimately sold in the place into which she had been driven by distress; though the sale was directed by the assured to be made on account of all concerned. Martin v. Crokatt, 14 East, 465; 13 R. R. 281.

A vessel insured under a time policy, from August, 1841, to August, 1842, encountered very severe weather in the Indian seas, and was compelled in May, 1842, to put into the Mauritius. The master wrote to the owners, telling them of the injuries which the vessel had received, of the necessity to make extensive repairs, of his intention to borrow money on bottomry for that purpose, of the sum required, and of the impossibility of getting the money, except on the undertaking to return direct to England, instead of proceeding to Bombay, as originally intended. He further stated, that on account of the very low state of freights in India, this would be better for their interests, which he said he consulted in everything he did. The agents for Lloyd's at the Mauritius, who were employed by the captain to act for him, wrote letters to the same effect. These letters were received at intervals between September and December, 1842, and in the latter month the owners wrote to the agents, expressing their surprise at the amount required, but saying at the same time that they supposed what was done was the best that could be done under the unfortunate circumstances in which the ship was placed. The owners wrote to the agents in London, apprising them of the expected arrival of the vessel, and directing them to do what was needful. The vessel did arrive on the 27th March, and was at first taken possession of by the agents for the owners. On the 30th March the owners abandoned to the underwriters :—Held, that they were not entitled to recover as for a total loss; for, first, assuming notice of abandonment to be necessary in a case of constructive total loss, the notice here had not been given in time; and, secondly, the conduct of the owners on the receipt of the letters amounted to an election to treat this as a partial loss, and they could not afterwards, on the arrival of the vessel, when they found that the cost of repairs much exceeded the market value of the vessel itself, convert this partial into a total loss. Fleming v. Smith, 1 H. L. Cas. 513.

Notice of abandonment is necessary in order to convert a constructive into an absolute loss. Ib.

—— Contested Suit—Appeal.]—A cargo on board a ship bound from Liverpool to Matamoras was insured against the usual perils, including "takings at sea, arrests, restraints and detainments of all kings, princes and people." The policy also contained a suing and labouring clause, by which, in case of misfortune, it was provided that "it shall be lawful to the insured, their factors, servants and assigns, to sue, labour and travel for, in and about the defence, safeguard and recovery of the subject-matter of this insurance, or any part thereof, without prejudice to this insurance, the charges whereof the company will bear in proportion to the sum hereby insured." It was also provided that the "acts of the insurer or insured, in recovering, saving or preserving the property insured, shall not be considered a waiver or an acceptance of abandonment." The ship sailed on her voyage, and being captured by a United States cruiser, was taken into New Orleans, where the captors instituted a suit for her condemnation in the prize court. The insured contested the suit, electing to treat the seizure as a partial loss. They obtained the judgment of the court in their favour. Against this judgment the captors, on the 1st of July, 1864, appealed, and the judgment was suspended. On the 12th of September, the insured gave a formal notice of abandonment, which the insurers refused to accept. They also subsequently informed them that endeavours were being made to sell the ship and cargo, that they were resisting such sale, and they requested them to assist in giving bail to prevent it. They refused to interfere. The sale of the goods could have been prevented by depositing the full value of the goods, or by giving bail for them, and the insurers had opportunity for taking either of such steps but declined to do so. The ship and cargo were then sold by order of the prize court, and the insured gave a fresh notice of abandonment, which was again refused. The insured could not, under the circumstances, by any means which they could reasonably be called upon to adopt, have prevented the sale :—Held, that although the insured had at first elected to treat the loss as a partial one, and although the fact of the appeal against the judgment would not justify them in changing their election, and claiming for a total loss, yet that the sale of the cargo by order of the prize court did amount to such a change of facts as would give them a right, if they chose, to maintain an action upon the policy for a total loss. Stringer v. English and Scottish Marine Insurance Co., 10 B. & S. 770; 39 L. J., Q. B. 214; L. R. 5 Q. B. 599; 22 L. T. 802; 18 W. R. 1201—Ex. Ch.

Master electing to Repair.]—A shipowner insured ship and freight. On leaving Pernambuco in June, 1839, the ship struck on a rock and put back. After survey, she was repaired at a cost exceeding the value of ship and freight. The master was compelled to borrow on bottomry of ship, freight and cargo. In December, 1839, the owner, on being shewn a letter addressed to the lenders on bottomry, in which the great expense of the repairs was stated, gave notice to his underwriters of abandonment of ship and freight. The ship arrived, and the freight was paid under an order of the admiralty court to the bottomry bondholders. The owner sued his underwriters on the policy as for a total loss. The jury found that the master acted bonâ fide in repairing the ship :—Held, that the master might have abandoned at Pernambuco, but having elected to repair, he must be taken to have so elected as the owner's agent, and that the owner, being bound by his election, could not recover. Benson

v. Chapman, 2 H. L. Cas. 696; 8 C. B. 950; 13 Jur. 969—H. L. (E.)

Mutiny—Abandonment.]—Ship insured at and from Liverpool to the coast of Africa, &c. and from thence to the West Indies and America. The crew mutiny, and propose to take the ship to an enemy's port; the boatswain, who is put in charge, against the orders of the mutineers takes the ship to Barbados, where the mutineers are seized and the ship and cargo sold by the government agent for the benefit of all parties:—Held, that the assured was entitled to abandon and recover for a total loss. Brown v. Smith, 1 Dow, 349; 14 R. R. 78.

Condemnation for Illegal Slave Trade—Reversal of Decree—Abandonment—Total Loss.]—See Lozano v. Janson, ante, col. 1108.

Of Substituted Vessels.]—In an action upon a policy upon goods from Cadiz to Monte Video and Buenos Ayres, and also "on cash on account of freight, 216*l.*," the declaration alleged the shipment of the goods and the prepayment of the 216*l.* on account of freight; and that, whilst prosecuting the voyage, the vessel encountered a storm, and sustained so much damage that she became and was disabled from proceeding without being repaired, and could not be repaired so as to proceed without incurring an expense greater than her value would have been when repaired, together with the freight which she would have earned on the voyage; that the master was obliged to and did abandon the voyage and the earning of the residue of the freight; that the freighter procured two other vessels to carry the goods on, at a rate of freight exceeding the freight originally payable under the charter-party; and that the sum so paid in cash on account of the freight, by reason of the premises, became and was wholly lost to the plaintiff. That one of the substituted vessels sustained so much damage that she was obliged to put back to Gibraltar and there unload, and the goods were sent on to Monte Video by the other; and that, by reason of the premises, the plaintiff sustained a total loss of the sum so paid in cash on account of the freight, and was put to charges in transhipping the goods:—Held, that the declaration disclosed a sufficient justification for the master's abandoning the voyage, and consequently that the plaintiff was entitled to recover as for a total loss of the prepaid freight. De Cuadra v. Swann, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 772.

A plea, that the substituted vessel into which the goods were first transhipped, at the time the goods were first at risk on board of her, was not seaworthy, is a bad plea. Ib.

Duty of Captain to await Answer of Insurers.]—In an action on a policy on an iron steamer, on which the owners claimed to recover a constructive total loss, by reason of necessary abandonment and sale at a distant port, not a repairing port, but within thirty days' post of London, on account of a hole in one of the plates at the bottom, and also a supposed starting of rivets and plates caused by a strain sustained by the vessel in a severe gale; it being admitted that a mere hole in the bottom may be repaired, and the case therefore turning on the supposed injuries to plates and rivets; the jury was directed to consider whether the ascertained state of the plates and rivets was such as either itself shewed or raised a reasonable presumption and probability that the state of the rivets and plates outside was such as to be unsafe, and their real state could not be ascertained without a heaving down for external examination, which could not be done except in a repairing port; and whether, even if so, the only alternative was abandonment, and whether the captain ought not to have awaited an answer from the underwriters before abandonment. Lindsay v. Leathley, 3 F. & F. 902; 11 L. T. 194.

Effect of Sale of Cargo.]—In an action against underwriters on a policy upon a cargo of coals to Yokohama, it was proved that the ship received such damage as to render it necessary to put into Hong Kong; and that when there competent persons decided that the cargo should be sold, as there would be great danger of spontaneous combustion if conveyed to its original destination. No notice of the abandonment of the cargo was given to the underwriters until the claim was made for the total loss, but the coals had been publicly sold at Hong Kong. The proceeds of the sale had been handed over to the shipowners, and they had offered them to the charterers, less a considerable sum which they withheld in payment of pro ratâ freight, on condition that they should receive a receipt in full of all demands. This the charterers declined to give. The underwriters refused to pay, upon the ground that the charterers had not abandoned the cargo:—Held, that the public sale, per se, vested the proceeds of the sale in the underwriters, and that the charterers had done nothing subsequently which shewed an election on their part to take the proceeds. Saunders v. Baring, 34 L. T. 419; 3 Asp. M. C. 133.

Amount Recoverable.]—An insured who abandons can only recover for the actual loss at the time of his abandonment. Hamilton v. Mendez or Mendes, 1 W. Bl. 276; 2 Burr. 1198.

Upon a policy on flax, valued at so much, and warranted free of particular average, if the vessel is wrecked and the assured does not abandon, but labours to save the cargo, and in fact saves a part (one-sixteenth), though much damaged, he is entitled to recover as for a total loss of that part which was in fact totally lost, but not for the rest which was saved to him in specie, though deteriorated. Davy v. Milford, 15 East, 559. See 15 R. R. 279, n. See Ralli v. Janson, 6 El. & Bl. 422; 25 L. J., Q. B. 300.

Ship and Cargo Sold.]—Notice held to be necessary though the ship and cargo have been sold and converted into money when the notice was received. Hodgson v. Blackiston, 1 Park. Ins. (8th ed.) 400, n.

3. On Loss by Perils of Sea.

Nature of Loss.]—Owners of ships are not entitled to abandon unless at some period of the voyage there has been a total loss; and where the jury has found only an average loss occasioned by the perils of the sea, the court is precluded from saying there has been a total loss. Cazalet v. St. Barbe, 1 Term Rep. 187; 1 R. R. 178.

A loss of voyage for the season by perils of the sea is not a ground of abandonment upon a policy on goods, with a clause of warranty, free from average, where the cargo is in safety, and not of such a perishable nature as to make the loss of voyage a loss of the commodity, although the ship is rendered incapable of proceeding in the voyage. Hunt v. Royal Exchange Assurance Co., 5 M. & S. 47 ; 17 R. R. 264.

Where damage to the ship from perils of the sea during the voyage, covered by the policy on ship, was such as to justify abandonment to the underwriter on ship before the cargo was put on board, the insured freight could not be earned : —Held, that there was therefore a total loss on the policy on freight. Rankin v. Potter, 42 L. J., C. P. 169 ; L. R. 6 H. L. 83 ; 29 L. T. 142 ; 22 W. R. 1 ; 2 Asp. M. C. 65.

Goods Damaged.]—Where a ship was wrecked, but the goods were brought on shore, though in a very damaged state, so that they became unprofitable to the assured :—Held, that the underwriters on the goods, who were freed by the policy from particular average, could not be made liable as for a total loss by a notice of abandonment. Thompson v. Royal Exchange Assurance Co., 16 East, 214.

Policy on goods (copper and iron) at and from L. to Q., warranted free of particular average, and the ship, owing to sea damage in the course of her voyage was obliged to run into port and undergo repair, and some part of the goods was damaged, and the repairs detained her so long as to prevent her reaching Q. that season, and no other ship could be procured at that or a neighbouring port to forward the cargo in time, so that the voyage was abandoned, and the ship afterwards sailed on another voyage :—Held, that this was not a total loss of the goods, and that the assured could not abandon. Anderson v. Wallis, 2 M. & S. 240 ; 3 Camp. 440.

A ship was wrecked on the 21st December, and three-fourths of her cargo, consisting of wines, were either lost or impregnated with salt water ; and the assured gave notice of abandonment as for a total loss on the 23rd (being the day on which they heard of the loss), and before the remains of the cargo were brought on shore :—Held, that it amounted to such a loss as warranted the notice of abandonment. Hudson v. Harrison, 6 Moore, 288 ; 3 Br. & B. 97 ; 23 R. R. 575.

—— Desertion by Crew.]—A ship being deserted at sea by the crew for the preservation of their lives, the assured on goods abandoned. She was afterwards towed into port, but the goods were so much damaged as not to be worth sending to their place of destination :—Held, a total loss. Parry v. Aberdeen, 4 M. & Ry. 343 ; 9 B. & C. 411 ; 7 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 260.

4. On Capture.

Total Loss.]—An insured ship being taken, the insured may demand as for a total loss, and abandon to the insurer. Goss v. Withers, 2 Burr. 683 ; 2 Ld. Ken. 325.

Recapture.]—An abandonment offered to be made by the assured to the underwriter, upon intelligence brought of the capture of the goods insured, which the underwriter refused to accept, does not entitle the assured to recover as for a total loss, where, before action brought, the goods were recaptured, and arrived at the place of destination, by which a partial loss only was sustained ; for the assured can only recover an indemnity for such loss as he has sustained at the time of action. Patterson v. Ritchie, 4 M. & S. 393 ; 16 R. R. 498.

On an insurance on ship from Rio de Janeiro to Liverpool, she was captured, and afterwards recaptured ; but in the interval, the assured, having received intelligence of the capture, gave notice of abandonment ; and after the recapture the ship arrived at Liverpool, having sustained a partial damage :—Held, that the assured could only recover as for a partial loss. Brotherston v. Barber, 5 M. & S. 418 ; 17 R. R. 378.

Where there was a loss by capture, intelligence of which was received, and an abandonment made, and a recapture took place before the notice of abandonment was given, but there was no intelligence received of such recapture until after some steps had been taken by the underwriters :—Held, to amount to an acceptance of the abandonment by them. Smith v. Robertson, 2 Dow, 474 ; 14 R. R. 174. See also Miller v. Fletcher, Underwood v. Robertson, post, col. 1301.

—— Partial or Total Loss.]—A ship insured from Jamaica to Liverpool was captured in the course of her voyage, and recaptured in a few days ; and the assured having received intelligence of the capture, but not of the recapture, gave notice of abandonment ; and soon after receiving intelligence of the recapture, and that the ship was safe in the possession of the recaptors, in a port in Ireland, but without any further knowledge of her state and condition, he persisted in his notice of abandonment ; but the ship was afterwards restored to his possession without damage, and arrived at Liverpool, and earned her freight ; the salvage and charges of the recapture amounting only to 15*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.* per cent. :—Held, that he was not entitled to abandon ; it appearing in the result, that, at the time when the notice of abandonment was given, it was in fact only a partial and not a total loss, as the assured supposed ; and there being no subsequent circumstances, such as the loss of voyage, high salvage, &c., to continue it a total loss. Bainbridge v. Nielson, 10 East, 329 ; 1 Camp. 237 ; 10 R. R. 316.

A ship insured under a valued policy was sunk in deep water. On April 15th, the insured gave notice of abandonment, which the insurers declined to accept. In July, the insurers, at great cost, raised the ship. The insured in December sued the insurers for a constructive total loss. The insurers pleaded that the loss was partial only. It was admitted that the ship could not have been raised and refitted at an expense equal to her value when fit for sea ; but it was also admitted that at the date of the action, the expense of fitting her for sea would be less than her value when ready for sea :—Held, that the loss was partial only ; the date of the action being the material time. Bainbridge v. Nielson (supra) and Falkner v. Ritchie (2 M. & S. 290) followed. Blairmore Co. v. Macredie, 24 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (4th ser.) 893.

An assurance was effected at and from Quebec to Teneriffe, on a cargo consisting of wheat, fish, and staves, and there was the usual memorandum in the policy as to "corn and fish being free from average unless general" ; and the ship was captured, and afterwards recaptured, and sent by the recaptors to Bermuda, where a scarcity prevailing, an embargo was laid on the export of provisions ; and the cargo being landed, it was found that a considerable quantity of the wheat was so damaged by sea-water, that it was thrown overboard by order of the magistrates, for the sake of the public health; and the other part of it, being also damaged, was sold by the captain, as well as the fish, at a profit; and he put up the ship for sale, which he purchased at one-fourth of her value, for the benefit of the owners; and having repaired her, and being refused permission to ship the remaining quantity of wheat to Teneriffe, he directed it to be sold, and bought it for the benefit of those concerned; and by leave of the governor, the embargo being then raised as to the West India Islands, he shipped the same for Madeira, where he arrived and delivered it and took in a cargo of wine for London, with which he arrived:—Held, that the assured, who had abandoned the ship on receiving intelligence of the circumstances which had happened previously to the time of her being permitted to proceed to Madeira, was entitled to recover as for a total loss on the whole of the goods insured. Cologan v. London Assurance Co. 5 M. & S. 447; 17 R. R. 390.

—— Expense of Refitting.]—Insurance on a ship, which, during her voyage, while loading her homeward cargo, was seized by the crew and carried away to a distant country, and the cargo plundered and the ship deserted, but was afterwards retaken by another ship, and was brought, with a small remaining part of her cargo, to an English port (not the port of her destination), and part of her rigging was gone, and she could not be made fit for a voyage again without considerable expense in providing a crew and stores:—Held, that this was not a total loss, so as to entitle the assured to abandon after notice of the recapture. Falkner v. Ritchie, 2 M. & S. 290; 15 R. R. 253.

—— Running Blockade.]—Goods were insured at and from L. to any port in the river P.; the policy was effected, and the ship sailed, after notification that those ports were blockaded: the ship was captured by the blockading squadron in the river P., but was rescued by her own crew, and brought back with the goods undamaged to L.; notice of abandonment was given in the interval between intelligence of the capture and of the rescue; but, after the rescue, in fact, there was no intention to violate the blockade:—Held, that the voyage as insured was not illegal; but that the assured had no right to recover for a total loss by reason of their having offered to abandon, because the abandonment must be viewed with regard to the ultimate state of facts at the time when the offer to abandon was made. Naylor v. Taylor, 9 B. & C. 718; 4 M. & Ry. 526.

Restitution.]—An abandonment made after capture, under circumstances which would entitle the assured at the time to recover as for a total loss, is not defeated so as to become an average loss only, by the mere restitution and return of the ship's hull, before action brought, if the restitution is under such condition as to make it uncertain whether the assured may not have to pay more than its worth. M'Iver v. Henderson, 4 M. & S. 576; 16 R. R. 550.

—— Payment of Ransom by Master.]—A vessel chartered to Oporto, St. Ubes, and Gottenburg, being taken at Oporto by the enemy, was liberated on payment by the master of a sum of money, and on condition of his bringing home in her to England, English prisoners to be exchanged for an equal number of French: upon the news of the capture, but after the time of the ship's liberation, the owners abandoned the ship to the insurers; upon her arrival at Portsmouth, the captain refused to deliver her, unless on repayment of the ransom, which the owner refused:—Held, that the owner being entitled to retake his ship, which was safe at Portsmouth, the loss of the voyage did not enable him to recover upon a policy on the ship as for a total loss, nor could he recover, as for an average loss, the sum which had been paid by the master for the ship's ransom, and which being an illegal payment, the plaintiff was not bound to repay to the master. Parsons v. Scott, 2 Taunt. 363; 11 R. R. 610.

Purchase after Sale by Captors.]—Where a ship insured had been captured, and brought into a neutral port, and sold by the captors, and the captain bought her for the benefit of the owners:—Held, that they were only entitled to recover on a policy the sum paid by the captain, and what was expended on her outfit, and could not recover for a total loss. M'Masters v. Shoolbred, 1 Esp. 237; 5 R. R. 735.

Capture and Recapture—Recovery as for Total Loss—Salvage.]—A ship being insured from London to Carolina, was taken by a Spaniard, and retaken by an English privateer, who carried her into Boston, where no person appearing to give security she was condemned and sold, and, after the recaptors had their moiety, the residue remained in the court of admiralty at Boston. Defendant brought an action at law on the policy and recovered, and plaintiff, by his injunction-bill, insisted, that defendant ought to have recovered no more than a moiety of the loss. The court refused the injunction, for, as defendant had offered to relinquish the salvage, he was entitled to recover the whole money insured. By 13 Geo. 2, c. 4, s. 18, the recapture of a ship is the revesting of the owner's property; so that it is doubtful whether the act can operate when insurances are made, interest or no interest. Salvage must be deducted out of the money recovered by the policy, if come to the hands of the assured. Pringle v. Hartley, 3 Atk. 195.

—— Abandonment — Ship Restored before Action Brought.]—See Ruys v. Royal Exchange Assurance Corporation, ante, col. 1108.

5. Embargo and Confiscation.

Position of Consignees of Foreigner.]—A foreigner, insuring in this country his ship or goods on a voyage, is not obliged to abandon upon an embargo laid on the property in the ports of his own country, as his assent is virtually implied to every act of his own government, and makes such embargo his own voluntary act; and goods having been consigned by such foreigner on his own account and risk, to British merchants here, who in consequence of such consignment made advances to the foreigner, and made insurance on his account, debiting him with the premiums, the goods were afterwards abandoned in consequence of such embargo:—Held, that, as the foreigner could not recover against the underwriters, his consignees could not recover their advances under a policy made for the benefit of the foreigner, though made in their names, as interest might appear; however, they might have insured their separate interests by a policy made on their own account. Conway v. Gray, 10 East, 536, overruled by Aubert v. Gray, ante, col. 1091. And see Conway v. Forbes, 10 East, 539; and Maury v. Shedden, 10 East, 540.

Inability to Discharge.]—If a cargo of a perishable nature is insured from A. to B., with the usual memorandum, and in the course of the voyage information is received by the master that the port of B. is shut against ships of his nation, in consequence of which the commander of the convoy orders the ship to proceed to another port, and the cargo is there sold by orders of the vice-admiralty court for a very small sum of money, the assured cannot abandon as for a total loss. Hadkinson v. Robinson, 3 Bos. & P. 388; 7 R. R. 786.

In a case of insurance upon goods consigned to a particular port, if, on the arrival of the ship there it is found to be in the hands of an enemy; that circumstance does not warrant the assured to abandon. Lubbock v. Rowcroft, 5 Esp. 50; 8 R. R. 830.

A party, having shipped goods on an adventure to St. Petersburg on board a vessel chartered for the purpose, made insurance on ship and goods in the common printed form in blank; and by a written memorandum in the policy, the underwriters agreed to pay a total loss in case the ship should not be allowed by the Russian government to discharge her cargo at St. P., on which voyage the vessel had then sailed, chartered by the plaintiff:—Held, that the insured was entitled to recover upon this policy on an allegation that the vessel on her arrival at St. P. was not allowed by the Russian government to discharge her cargo, but was obliged to return back with it, by which the value of the cargo was reduced below the amount of the invoice price, together with the charges paid thereon, and the premiums of insurance. Puller v. Glover, 12 East, 124.

Where a neutral ship, bound from America to Havre, was detained and brought into a British port, and pending proceedings in the admiralty, the king declared Havre in a state of blockade, by which the further prosecution of the voyage was prohibited:—Held, a total loss of the voyage, which entitled the neutral assured to abandon. Barker v. Blakes, 9 East, 283. And see Cases ante, col. 1239.

Sale—Condemnation Reversed.]—An American, properly licensed to export saltpetre from Calcutta to America, having insured it for the voyage, the ship was seized by the captain of a British ship of war at the Cape of Good Hope, and the cargo condemned, unshipped, and sold by order of the court of admiralty there, whose sentence was afterwards reversed on appeal here, and the property ordered to be restored, or its value paid to the owner, though upon payment of the captor's costs:—Held, that the assured might recover as for a total loss, without notice of abandonment, the thing insured being wholly lost to the owner by the unshipping and sale of the commodity at the Cape, under the order of the court there; and that such loss was recoverable against the underwriters, on a count alleging it to have happened by the unlawful seizure and detention of a British ship of war; however questionable it might have been, if notice of abandonment had been necessary, whether such a notice, not given till after the receipt of a second letter from the Cape, announcing the condemnation, landing, and sale of the goods, was in time, when a prior letter of advice had stated the seizure and detention, on which no notice had been given; and the court of appeal allowing the captor his costs, on the reversal of the sentence of condemnation, did not the less shew the original seizure and detention to be unlawful. Mullett v. Shedden, 13 East, 304; 12 R. R. 347.

6. On Loss by Other Means.

Desertion by Crew.]—A ship received considerable damage from tempestuous weather, and the crew, completely exhausted, deserted the ship on the high seas for the mere preservation of their lives; and the ship was then taken possession of by a fresh crew, who succeeded in conducting her safely into port. The ship having been sold under the decree of the admiralty court to pay the salvage, and it not appearing that the assured had taken any means to prevent such sale:—Held, that they had no right to abandon, and that there was no more than a partial loss. Thornely v. Hebson, 2 B. & Ald. 513; 21 R. R. 381.

A ship being deserted at sea by her crew for the preservation of their lives, the assured on goods abandoned. She was afterwards towed into port, but the goods were so much damaged as not to be worth sending to their place of destination:—Held, a total loss. Parry v. Aberdeen, 4 M. & Ry. 343; 9 B. & C. 411; 7 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 260.

Barratry.]—Barratry of the master is a ground of abandonment as for a total loss, though the goods ultimately reach their destination through the agency of strangers to the assured. Dixon v. Reid, 1 D. & R. 207; 5 B. & Ald. 597; 24 R. R. 481.

7. Effect of, on Freight and Cargo.

Charterparty Freight.]—Where there was a policy on ship and also on charterparty freight (that is, freight to be earned by the carriage homeward of a cargo chartered to be put on board at a distant port), and the ship was so injured at the outward port that the shipowner abandoned to the underwriter on ship, there was nothing to pass to the underwriter on charterparty freight, and consequently there was no necessity of abandonment to him. Rankin v. Potter, 42 L. J., C. P. 169; L. R. 6 H. L. 83; 29 L. T. 142; 22 W. R. 1; 2 Asp. M. C. 65.

Priorities.]—A shipowner having first insured his ship with A., and his freight with B., for a certain voyage, and having notice of an embargo laid on the ship in a foreign port, abandoned the ship and freight to the respective underwriters, and received from them the whole amount of their subscriptions as for a total loss of both; first undertaking, by a memorandum on the ship policy, to assign to the underwriters thereon his interest in the ship, and to account to them for it; and afterwards undertaking, by a similar memorandum on the freight policy, to assign to those underwriters all right of recovery, compensation, &c. The ship being afterwards liberated, and earning freight, which was received by the assured:—Held, that however the question of priority as to the title to the freight might have been as between the different sets of underwriters litigating out of the same fund, and however the weight of argument might preponderate in favour of the underwriters on the ship; yet that the assured, who had received the freight from the shippers of goods, was at all events liable on his express undertaking to pay it over to the underwriters on freight; and that, without deducting the expenses of provisions, wages, &c., which were charges on the owner before the abandonment, and on the underwriters on ship afterwards. Thompson v. Rowcroft, 4 East, 34. S. P., Leatham v. Terry, 3 Bos. & P. 479.

Freight Earned.]—Upon a hostile embargo in a foreign port the owner, who had separately insured ship and freight, abandoned them to the respective underwriters, which abandonment was accepted by them; after which the embargo was taken off, and the ship completed her voyage and earned freight:—Held, that the assured could not recover as for a total loss of freight, the freight having been in fact earned; or, supposing it to have been in any other sense lost to the assured by the abandonment of the ship to the underwriters thereon, it was so lost, not by any peril insured against, but by the voluntary act of the assured, in making such abandonment. M'Carthy v. Abel, 5 East, 388; 1 Smith, 524; 7 R. R. 711.

An abandonment to the underwriters on ship transfers freight earned subsequently to such abandonment, as incident to the ship. Davidson v. Case, 5 Moore, 116; 8 Price, 542; 2 Br. & B. 379; 5 M. & S. 79; 17 R. R. 280.

Ship and freight were insured by separate underwriters. The ship was captured, and ship and freight abandoned to the respective underwriters, who each paid a total loss. The ship was recaptured, performed her voyage and earned freight:—Held, that the underwriters were entitled to the freight. Ib.

Captain acting as Agent of Insurers.]—A ship having been chartered to carry troops to Calcutta, by a charterparty, under which a portion of the freight was made payable on the completion of the voyage, when about 700 miles beyond the Mauritius caught fire. The ship put back to the Mauritius, where, being found to be greatly damaged, she was abandoned to the underwriters as totally lost, and the abandonment was accepted. The captain having chartered another ship and forwarded the troops to Calcutta, the freight was received by the shipowners' agents:—Held, that, in forwarding the troops, the captain acted as agent for the owner and not for the underwriters; and that the underwriters, to whom the ship had been abandoned, were not entitled to any benefit from the freight so received. Hickie v. Rodocanachi, 4 H. & N. 455; 28 L. J., Ex. 273; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 550; 7 W. R. 545.

Compensation.]—Owners of a ship effected policies of insurance on freight and on ship for a voyage from St. John's, New Brunswick, to Liverpool, the goods on board being their property. The ship was stranded off the port of Liverpool, and notice of abandonment was given to the underwriters on the ship: part of the cargo was then brought in lighters to Liverpool, and the ship, having been so lightened, was brought with the remainder to Liverpool: this was done by the owners at their expense: subsequently the abandonment was accepted by the underwriters:—Held, that nothing in the nature of freight for the entire voyage passed to the underwriters on the ship on the abandonment of the ship, but that they were entitled to compensation in the nature of freight from the owners of the ship, as owners of the goods, for so much of the cargo as was brought in it from the place of stranding to Liverpool, and that the principle on which it was to be calculated was the sum for which that part of the cargo might have been forwarded to Liverpool in another ship at the current rate of freight. Miller v. Woodfall, 8 El. & Bl. 493; 27 L. J., Q. B. 120; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 302. See Burnand v. Rodocanachi, 51 L. J., Q. B. 548; 7 App. Cas. 333; 47 L. T. 277; 31 W. R. 65; 4 Asp. M. C. 576—H. L. (E.)

Title to Cargo, when Accruing.]—The title of underwriters to a cargo of an abandoned vessel does not date from the acceptance of an abandonment, but has relation back to the time of the loss. Cammell v. Sewell, 5 H. & N. 728; 29 L. J., Ex. 350; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 916; 2 L. T. 799; 8 W. R. 639—Ex. Ch.

A foreign vessel sailing with a cargo of timber, consigned from a foreign port to Hull, went ashore on the coast of Norway. The captain, without waiting for instructions from the consignee, and without any absolute necessity, made sale by auction of the timber, in the manner prescribed by the law of Norway, and the purchaser consigned the timber to the defendants for sale in his behalf. The agents of the plaintiffs' underwriters, who had received notice of abandonment before, but had accepted it after the sale, in the meantime instituted a suit in the superior diocesan court of Drontheim against the captain and the purchaser to set aside the sale, and to compel the purchaser to deliver up the cargo to the underwriters. That court confirmed the sale. On trover subsequently brought by the plaintiffs against the London consignee of the purchaser for the recovery of the cargo:—Held, that they were entitled to maintain an action for the conversion, but that they were estopped by the judgment of the Norwegian court. Ib.

On abandonment, the owner becomes trustee for the underwriters on ship, and is bound to assign. Scottish Marine Insurance Co. v. Turner, 1 Macq. H. L. 334; 17 Jur. 631; 1 W. R. 527.

Where a ship has received injuries entitling the owner to treat her as totally lost, and where he consequently abandons her to the underwriters on ship, they are entitled to all freight afterwards earned. Ib.

Upon such constructive loss and abandonment the freight, if earned, will belong, not to the owners, but to the underwriters on ship. Ib.

Freight, while the ship is in the course of earning it, belongs to the underwriters paying for a total loss. Stewart v. Greenock Marine Insurance Co., 2 H. L. Cas. 159; 1 Macq. H. L. 382.

Deduction of Expenses.]—While a ship was forcibly detained in a foreign port, the owner abandoned first the ship and then the freight, to the different sets of underwriters thereon, who paid as for a total loss; after which the ship was liberated, reshipped her cargo, which had been taken out, and returned home, earning freight, which was received by the assured. Assuming that the assured after an abandonment of the ship, might abandon the freight to another set of underwriters, the ship and freight are salvage to the different underwriters after deducting the following expenses, which must be apportioned between them according to their several interest: 1. The expenses of the ship and crew in the foreign port, including port-charges, besides the expense of shipping the cargo, which exclusively belongs to the underwriters on freight: 2. Insurance thereon: 3. Wages and provisions of crew from their liberation in the foreign port till their discharge here: 4. Wages (provisions were supplied by the foreign government) to the crew during their detention. But the assured was not entitled to deduct out of the freight received, payable to the underwriter on freight: 1. Charges paid at the port of discharge on ship and cargo: 2. Insurance on ship: 3. Diminution in value of ship and tackle by wear and tear on the voyage home. Sharp v. Gladstone, 7 East, 24; 3 Smith, 39; 8 R. R. 583.

XII. SALE, BY MASTER, OF SHIP AND CARGO.

1. Ship, 1297.
2. Cargo, 1301.

1. SHIP.

When Allowed.]—The master of a vessel has no power to sell her so as to affect the insurers, except under circumstances of stringent necessity: such circumstances as, after sufficient examination of her condition, after every exertion in his power, within the means at his disposal, to extricate her from peril or to raise funds for the repair, leave him no alternative but to sell her as she is. Cobequid Marine Insurance Co. v. Barteaux, L. R. 6 P. C. 319; 32 L. T. 510; 23 W. R. 892; 2 Asp. M. C. 536—P. C.

In cases of extreme necessity, and where the ship, having got aground, cannot, in the opinion of persons competent to judge, be raised, the captain may sell her for the benefit of the owners; but it can only be in cases of extreme necessity; and the survey, &c. must be made on the best information, and with the most pure good faith. Hayman v. Molton, 5 Esp. 54; 8 R. R. 837.

A vessel struck upon a rock outside a harbour, and it was necessary to lighten her in order to get her off at the next high tide, and for that purpose her master entered into a contract with one G., who was the only person at the place who had a sufficient number of men to render effectual assistance, to find the labour required for that purpose. G. supplied only a small number of men, who worked very languidly in discharging the cargo for two or three hours, and at the end of that time G. persuaded the master to cancel this contract, and to call a survey of the vessel and sell her. G. and some men he brought accordingly made a survey, and by it found the mainmast raised one inch, the main combings parted, the deck plank opening, and the vessel unseaworthy, and advised that the ship and cargo should be sold for the benefit of all concerned. The master then sold her to G. for a very small sum of money. When the vessel struck on the rock there was a strong breeze blowing, but it afterwards got calmer, and at the time of the sale the weather was good, and the vessel lying on her bilge with no more danger than she had been in from the time she struck, but there was evidence that if the wind veered round to the south or west the sea would have heaved in and the vessel would have broken up in a short time. As a fact, directly after the sale G. brought a number of hands to discharge the cargo, and so got the vessel off and floated her at the next high tide, and he afterwards repaired and made her seaworthy at a trifling expense. In an action against the underwriter on a policy of insurance on the vessel for a constructive total loss, the judge ruled, on the above facts appearing at the end of the plaintiff's case, that there was no evidence upon which the jury could reasonably find the urgent necessity for the sale of the vessel at the time she was sold, and he accordingly withdrew the case from the jury and directed the verdict to be entered for the defendant:—Held, by Lord Coleridge, C.J., that such ruling was right. Hall v. Jupe, 49 L. J., C. P. 721; 43 L. T. 411; 4 Asp. M. C. 328.

Held, by Grove, J., that it was wrong, and that the case should not have been withdrawn from the jury. Ib.

A captain of an insured ship, which has been injured by perils of the sea, is not justified in selling the ship instead of repairing it, unless he either has not the means of getting the repairs done at the place where the vessel is obliged to put in; or cannot get them done except at such an expense as would render it undoubtedly improper to repair, if the ship were not insured; or has not money in his possession sufficient to pay for the repairs, and is not in a situation to raise it by loan or otherwise, except at such an extravagant rate as would prevent a prudent man, in the exercise of a sound and vigorous judgment, from undertaking the repairs under such circumstances. Somes v. Sugrue, 4 Car. & P. 276, 284.

Where a ship received damage by striking on a rock, which rendered her unsafe for another voyage unless repaired; and she was twice surveyed and condemned by the authorities of the place to which she was insured; and the captain bonâ fide sold her for firewood; and she might have been repaired but for the negligence of the resident agents of the owners:—Held, that the underwriters were not liable for a total loss. Tanner v. Bennett, R. & M. 182; 27 R. R. 743.

A ship being wrecked, was sold by the owner and master, and soon after got off by the purchaser and repaired, though at a great expense. The owner could not treat this as a total loss, unless the sale at the time, in the exercise of a sound judgment, appeared most beneficial for all parties. Doyle v. Dallas, 1 M. & Rob. 48.

If the ship was likely to be repairable, so as to come to England with any cargo, which upon her arrival would be worth the sum laid out on her, it cannot be treated as a total loss, though she cannot be made fit to carry the cargo originally intended for her. Ib.

Freight was insured from A. to B. The ship sailed, but was obliged to put back from stress of weather, when she was found to be incapable of complete repair, and the cargo was accordingly unloaded and the ship sold. In an action on the policy for a total loss:—Held, that the insured was bound to use all reasonable endeavours to repair the ship, so as to have carried the cargo, or part of it, which would have operated as a salvage. Green v. Royal Exchange Assurance Co., 1 Marsh. 447; 6 Taunt. 68; 16 R. R. 571.

Where, by means within the reach of the master, a ship can be so treated as to retain the character of a ship, he cannot, by selling her even bonâ fide, convert the average into a total loss, but the underwriters are entitled to have those means used on their account. Gardner v. Salvador, 1 M. & Rob. 116.

Where it was proved that the master sold bonâ fide, and professedly for the benefit of all concerned, yet, since it was not further proved that the sale was absolutely necessary, and really for the benefit of all, the assured were not entitled to recover as for a constructive total loss, without notice of abandonment. Knight v. Faith, 15 Q. B. 649 : 19 L. J., Q. B. 509 ; 14 Jur. 1114. See Rosetto v. Gurney, ante, col. 1236.

When Repairs Effected.]—Freight was insured on ship and cargo of timber from Quebec to London, and the ship sailed from Quebec, and on her voyage down the River St. Lawrence sprung a leak, and it became necessary for the preservation of the lives of the master and crew to run her on shore, where she took the ground on the outside of a reef of rocks, and was there fixed, and exposed to the full force of the stream, and in the way of the drift ice then forming and floating down the river. One of the part-owners and agent for the others resided at Quebec, and after two surveys, in which the surveyors stated, as their opinion, that it would be prudent to sell the ship and cargo, the master, under the direction of such part-owner, sold the same; the ship, however, survived ; was repaired by the purchasers, and afterwards brought a full cargo to London. In an action on the policy against the underwriters on freight for a total loss :—Held, that the master was warranted in selling the ship and cargo. Idle v. Royal Exchange Insurance Co., 3 Moore, 115 ; 21 R. R. 538.

Where ship, freight, and passage-money where insured for 13,000*l.*, at and from London to the East Indies and back ; and the ship sailed seaworthy from Calcutta on her homeward voyage, and afterwards received considerable damage by stormy weather, so as to render it necessary for the captain to put back there ; and immediately on his arrival, he gave notice of abandonment to the agents for Lloyd's resident there, and desired that their surveyor might be present at the surveys of the ship ; and the agents replied, that they had no authority to accept abandonments ; and after three several surveys of the ship by competent persons, at two of which the surveyor for the agents attended, and it was found that the expense of repairing her would be from 4,000*l.* to 5,000*l.* ; and the captain, having ineffectually attempted to raise money by hypothecation of the ship (having no funds to repair her himself), sold her for 1,200*l.* ; and the jury found that what had been done by him was for the benefit of all concerned, and gave a verdict for the assured as for a total loss :—Held, that the sale was justifiable ; and the court refused a new trial. Read v. Bonham, 6 Moore, 397 ; 3 Br. & B. 147 ; 23 R. R. 587.

Where a vessel was so much injured by perils of the sea, that, in order to render her seaworthy, it would cost as much to repair her as she was originally worth, or as much as would build a new ship, and the captain sold her to a purchaser, who repaired her and sent her on a voyage, which she never completed in consequence of her infirmity :—Held, that the underwriters were liable as for a total loss, although the vessel remained in specie at the time she was sold. Cambridge v. Anderton, 4 D. & R. 203 ; 2 B. & C. 691 ; 1 Car. & P. 213 ; R. & M. 60 ; 2 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 141 ; 26 R. R. 517.

Where a ship was so shattered in a storm, that it was found, on survey, that the expenses of repairing her would far exceed her original value, and the captain sold her bonâ fide for the benefit of all concerned, and the purchaser shortly afterwards broke her up :—Held, that this was such an urgent necessity as justified the sale. Robertson v. Clarke, 8 Moore, 622 ; 1 Bing. 445 ; 2 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 71 ; 25 R. R. 676.

If a vessel is so much injured by a storm, that in the opinion of the master, who exercises a fair and honest discretion on the subject, she cannot be repaired but at an expense exceeding the amount of a total loss, and he accordingly sells her, the owner may recover from the insurer as for a total loss, although it eventually turns out that the vessel might possibly have proceeded on her voyage. Robertson v. Caruthers, 2 Stark. 571 ; 20 R. R. 738.

Where a vessel was driven by tempestuous weather into a foreign port, and in order to defray the expenses of repairing (without which she could not have proceeded on her voyage), the captain was obliged to sell part of the cargo :—Held, that the underwriters on a policy on goods were not liable for a total loss by perils of the sea. Sarguy v. Hobson, 3 D. & R. 192 ; 2 B. & C. 7 ; 4 Bing. 131 ; 12 Moore, 474 ; 1 Y. & J. 347 ; 1 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 222 ; 26 R. R. 251. S. P., Powell v. Gudgeon, 5 M. & S. 431 ; 17 R. R. 385.

Cause of Loss—Stranding.]—A ship insured in 1,000*l.* for a year, ending 23rd September, was stranded, got off, and brought into the harbour of Santa Cruz, on September 16th. She remained there with her crew on board till the middle of October, and during that time was pumped, and her cargo was discharged into other vessels. Being then beached and surveyed, she was found so much damaged by the accident that the necessary repairs could not be done at Santa Cruz, there being no dockyard, workmen, or materials there ; nor could she be taken to any port where she could prudently have been repaired. Afterwards, in October, the master (who was a part owner, and interested in the policy) sold her for the benefit of those whom it might concern, and she fetched 72*l.* No notice of abandonment was given. A special case, in an action against the underwriters, set forth these facts, stating also that the vessel "received her death-blow" by the perils of the sea, on September 16th, but that the damage was not ascertained till the 24th :—Held, that the assured were entitled to recover for partial loss by the stranding before September 23rd, though the loss was not ascertained till after that day ; the proximate cause of loss, the injury by stranding, having taken place during the year covered by the insurance. Knight v. Faith, 15 Q. B. 649 ; 19 L. J., Q. B. 509 ; 14 Jur. 1114.

Held, also, that the ultimate loss did not prevent such recovery, for that the partial loss by stranding caused an actual prejudice to the assured, which was not merged in the final loss resulting from the sale, even assuming this to have been a total loss necessarily consequent upon the stranding, the loss being one, which, as total, the insurers were not liable to pay for. Ib.

A ship and goods being insured for a voyage, if the ship is taken and recaptured, and, on the recapture, the captain, acting fairly for the benefit of his employers, sells the ship and cargo, and thereby puts an end to the voyage, the insured will recover as for a total loss. Milles v. Fletcher, 1 Dougl. 231.

Underwriters on goods insured from London to Demerara were held liable for an average loss, where the ship, being captured and recaptured, was sent into St. Thomas's stripped of all her hands, and the captain, not being able on his arrival there to procure a fresh crew, or to raise money to pay the salvage, immediately sold the ship and cargo, and broke up the adventure. Underwood v. Robertson, 4 Camp. 138; 16 R. R. 760.

Evidence of Condemnation.]—A notarial copy of the condemnation of a ship as not being worth repairing, is only evidence of the fact of her having been condemned, not of the particular defects on which the condemnation was grounded. Wright v. Barnard, 2 Esp. 700; 5 R. R. 767.

Authority of Vice-Admiralty Court.]—The vice-admiralty courts abroad have no authority, upon the mere petition of the captain of a ship, bound on a foreign voyage, to decree the sale of such ship reported upon survey not to be seaworthy or repairable, so as to carry the cargo to its place of destination, but at an expense exceeding the value of the ship when repaired. Reid v. Darby, 10 East, 143.

Where the master of a ship on a voyage from Calcutta to London, laden with indigo, was obliged to put into Mauritius from unseaworthiness, and there abandoned ship and cargo, which were bonâ fide sold by public auction, under the orders of the vice-admiralty court:—Held, in an action by the owner against the purchaser of the indigo; 1st, that there being no pressing necessity for the sale, the master could confer no title upon the vendee; 2nd, that a judgment in tort against the owner of the vessel for not delivering the cargo, pursuant to the bill of lading, was no bar to this action; and 3rd, that an unavailing demand of the proceeds in the vice-admiralty court did not prevent the plaintiff from recovering the full value of the indigo from the defendant. Morris v. Robinson, 5 D. & R. 35; 3 B. & C. 196; 27 R. R. 322. And see Hunter v. Prinsep, 10 East, 378; 10 R. R. 328.

Unnecessary Sale by Master.]—See Alcock v. Royal Exchange Assurance Corporation, 13 Q. B. 292; 18 L. J., Q. B. 121; 13 Jur. 445, post, col. 1321.

2. CARGO.

Duty of Master to Communicate.]—A master of a vessel cannot at an intermediate port sell goods which are damaged, and cannot be carried to the port of discharge, without communicating with their owner. Acatos v. Burns, 47 L. J., Ex. 566; 3 Ex. D. 282; 26 W. R. 624—C. A.

The authority of the master to sell goods of an absent owner is derived from the necessity of the situation in which he is placed; and consequently to justify his selling, he must establish a necessity for the sale, and an inability to communicate with the owner. Australian Steam Navigation Co. v. Morse, 8 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 482; L. R. 4 P. C. 222; 27 L. T. 357; 20 W. R. 728.

A captain of a ship is not justified in selling the cargo at a foreign port, although it is impossible to prosecute the original voyage, and although a sale of the goods is the most beneficial course for the owner of them. Wilson v. Millar, 2 Stark, 1; 19 R. R. 670. S. P., Joseph v. Knox, 3 Camp. 332.

Liability of Shipowner.]—Although the captain of a ship finds it impossible to reach his port of destination, he has no implied authority to sell, for the benefit of the shippers, the cargo in a foreign port into which he is driven; and if he does so, though acting bonâ fide for the interest of all concerned, this is a tortious conversion for which the shipowner is liable. Van Omeron v. Dowick, 2 Camp. 42.

Where the captain of a ship, which was in a sinking state from the effects of tempestuous weather, put into a port short of his destination, and believing that the expense of repairs would frustrate the owner's adventure, he sold the cargo under the order of a vice-admiralty court, but it appeared that he might have forwarded it to its port of destination by another vessel, and repaired his own ship at a great expense:—Held, that he ought either to have done the one or the other; and that he had no authority to sell the cargo: and that, consequently, the shipowners were liable to the owners of the cargo for the non-delivery thereof, although the bill of lading merely stipulated for a conveyance, "the dangers and accidents of the seas and of navigation, of what kind soever excepted." Cannan v. Meaburn, 8 Moore, 127; 1 Bing. 243; 2 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 60.

The master of a vessel is not justified in selling any part of the cargo for the repairs of the ship in a foreign port, except in the case of urgent necessity. Campbell v. Thompson, 1 Stark. 490.

A., having shipped goods on board of a vessel which was driven into a foreign port by stress of weather, part of these goods was sold by the captain to defray the expenses of repairing the vessel; A. is entitled to deduct from the demand for the freight the sum for which the goods have been sold; and the circumstances of the shipowners, having, during the voyage, assigned the freight to a third person, makes no difference. Ib.

The master of a ship, which is completely wrecked in a foreign port, has no authority to sell goods on freight saved from the wreck, unless there is an absolute necessity for such sale; though he acts bonâ fide, and according to the best of his judgment; and where the goods are sold by public auction, such sale is, at all events, not binding on the owner of the goods, where the conduct of the vendee imports knowledge of the weakness of the captain's title to sell. Freeman v. East India Co., 1 D. & R. 234; 5 B. & Ald. 617; 24 R. R. 497.

Sale of Part.]—Where a vessel, having sailed from her port of lading, with a cargo of goods, was obliged to put back in consequence of a peril of the sea, and it being discovered that part of the cargo which was taken out was damaged by sea-water, and could not be re-shipped without a delay of six weeks, the captain, in the exercise of a sound discretion, sold the damaged goods, sailed with the remainder, and arrived in safety:—Held, that the underwriters were not liable pro tanto for the loss of the freight of the goods sold. Mordy v. Jones, 6 D. & R. 479; 4 B. & C. 394; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 250; 28 R. R. 305.

Consignee or Purchaser.]—Where a captain without absolute necessity or authority sold a cargo, and the sale was confirmed by a foreign court, on a suit by the underwriters to set aside the same:—Held, that though the underwriters might otherwise have been entitled to maintain an action for conversion, they were estopped by the judgment of the foreign court. Cammell v. Sewell, ante, col. 1296.

1. RETURN OF.

a. Policy Void.

If a policy is avoided by misrepresentation without fraud, the assured is entitled to a return of the premium. Feise v. Parkinson, 4 Taunt. 640; 13 R. R. 710.

Where a policy contained a warranty that the ship was in port on a previous day, and it was held to mean the port whence she departed, and not any port, and the ship was on that day safe in another port:—Held, that the insured was entitled to a return of the premium. Colby v. Hunter, M. & M. 81; 3 Car. & P. 7.

To an action on a policy, a plea that the insurer was induced to enter into the policy by a false representation of a material fact made by the assured and their agent, such misrepresentation being, at the time it was made, false, to the knowledge of the insured and their agent, is supported by proof, either of concealment or of misrepresentation, not fraudulent. Anderson v. Thornton, 8 Ex. 425.

Where a policy is avoided by concealment or by misrepresentation, not fraudulent, the assured is entitled to a return of the premium, and the policy is conclusive evidence of the receipt of the premium by the insurer. Ib.

B. effected a policy in the name of M. There being no goods of M. on board, and the policy therefore void, M. may sue to recover the premium. Martin v. Sitwell, Show. 156.

Policy entered into by Fraud.]—Policy entered into by fraud of assured; premium returned. Wilson v. Ducket, 3 Burr. 1361. Aliter, now. Tyler v. Horne, 2 Marsh. Ins. 661, infra; Chapman v. Fraser, ibid.

Insurance after Loss known.] — Where the assured had heard of the loss before the order to insure was given:—Held, that the premium should be returned. Tyler v. Horne, 1 Park, Ins. (8th ed.) 455.

Non-communication of Accident by Master.]—See Gladstone v. King, ante, col. 1186.

b. Voyage Illegal.

Cannot be Recovered.]—The premium paid on an illegal insurance to cover a trading with an enemy, cannot be recovered back, though the underwriter cannot be compelled to make good the loss. Vandyck v. Hewitt, 1 East, 96; 5 R. R. 516.

A foreigner cannot recover back the premium paid by him upon a policy, if the voyage is in contravention of the British laws. March v. Abel, 3 Bos. & P. 35.

Prize taken before Declaration of War.]—After a proclamation by the king in council to detain and bring into port all Danish vessels, a hired armed ship of his majesty took and carried into Lisbon a Danish vessel, and sold her cargo there towards defraying in part the expense of necessary repairs, but without the authority of a court of admiralty; and afterwards took in a cargo on freight for England, and sailed on the 3rd November for Lisbon, on which day hostilities were declared against Denmark, by another proclamation of the king in council; after which an assurance was made on the ship and freight by order and on account of the captors:—Held, that a statement in a case reserved, that the insurance was on account of the captors, precluded the consideration whether a count in the declaration could be sustained, averring the interest to be in the crown, and the insurance to be made on account of his majesty; and that the captors had no insurable interest, as they could claim nothing of right, but only ex gratiâ of the crown, the "Dane" having been seized and detained before any declaration of war against Denmark, and the captors having no claims to prize under the prize acts. But as there was no fraud in the captors in effecting the policy, nor anything illegal in the voyage or insurance:—Held, that the assured were entitled to recover back the premium, which had not been paid into court. Routh v. Thompson, 11 East, 428; 10 R. R. 539.

Agent Paying in Ignorance.]—An insurance having been made on goods at and from a port in Russia to London, by an agent residing here, for a Russian subject abroad, which insurance was in fact made after the commencement of hostilities by Russia against this country, but before the knowledge of it here, and after the ship had sailed and been seized and confiscated:—Held, that the policy was void in its inception; but that the agent of the assured was entitled to a return of the premium paid under ignorance of the fact of such hostilities. Oom v. Bruce, 12 East, 225; 11 R. R. 367.

Delay in obtaining Licence.]—Where a licence was obtained and insurance effected from Riga to Hull, on goods the produce of Russia, on board a Swedish ship, but the ship sailed three days before the letter directing the licence to be obtained reached the agent; the letter having been delayed by contrary winds beyond the usual time, the licence was obtained two days afterwards, and the insurance effected subsequently to that:—Held, that though the voyage was in its inception illegal, being contrary to 12 Car. 2, c. 18, s. 8, nevertheless the assured might recover back the premium. Hentig v. Staniforth, 5 M. & S. 122; 17 R. R. 293.

Renunciation.]—An assured, upon a policy effected in terms sufficiently large to comprehend an illegal adventure, and who intends thereby to cover an illegal adventure, cannot recover back the premium without some formal renunciation of the contract made known to the underwriter before the bringing the action, although the adventure is never entered upon. Palyart v. Leckie, 6 M. & S. 290; 18 R. R. 381.

Navigation Laws.]—A policy upon ship and cargo for a voyage illegal under the navigation laws held void; and the premium cannot be recovered back. Lubbock v. Potts, 7 East, 449.

Licence to Trade—Retrospective Operation.] Policy on a ship at and from a place within the limits of the South Sea Company's charter, the ship not having a licence from the company to trade at the date of the policy or up to her loss. The assured not being aware that she had no licence, procured a licence before they knew of the loss and as soon as they could, the licence purporting to apply to a time before the loss:—Held, that the licence could not operate retrospectively, and that, the ship being forfeited, the premium was not returnable. Cowie v. Barber, 4 M. & S. 163; 16 R. R. 368.

Insurance Illegal as to Part of the Goods.]—A policy was made upon the supposed efficacy of a licence granted contrary to the navigation laws covering British and enemy's goods. As to the former the licence was good, as to the latter void:—Held (the assured not resisting the claim to that amount), that the premiums in respect of the British interest insured should be paid to the underwriter. Shiffner v. Gordon, 12 East, 296.

c. Risk not Commenced or Incomplete.

Risk not Begun.]—Where the risk has not begun, to whatsoever cause it may be owing, the premium must be returned; but wherever it has once begun, although it ceases immediately, there will be no apportionment in return of premium. Upon a policy at and from London to Halifax, warranted to depart with convoy from Portsmouth, the contract and risk are divisible at Portsmouth, as two independent contracts and risks. Tyrie v. Fletcher, Cowp. 668.

Upon a policy "at and from such a port to any other port or place whatsoever, for twelve months, at 9*l.* per cent., warranted free from capture," the risk is entire; and therefore, if once begun, there can be no return of premium. Ib.

If a risk is not run, the insurer shall return only a proportionate part of the premium. Stevenson v. Snow, 3 Burr. 1237; 1 W. Bl. 315, 318.

If an insurance is made on two distinct risks, and one of them is not run, the insurer refunds a ratable part of the premium. Ib.

Where the captors of a ship insure their interest therein, they are not entitled to a return of premium, though afterwards adjudged to be no prize, and restitution is awarded. Boehm v. Bell, 8 Term Rep. 154; 4 R. R. 620.

Warranty not Complied with.]—If a ship, seaworthy to lie in port, sails without being rendered seaworthy for the voyage, upon a policy "at and from," there can be no return of premium. Annen v. Woodman, 3 Taunt. 299; 12 R. R. 663.

In an insurance on a ship at and from Hull to Bilboa, warranted to depart from England with convoy, the voyages from Hull to Portmouth, where she meets the convoy, and thence to Bilboa, may be considered as distinct; and in case of a loss between the two latter places, an apportionment and a return of premium may be demanded. Rothwell v. Cooke, 1 Bos. & P. 172.

Whether Entire Contract.]—An insurance on a ship and goods at and from A. to B., during her stay and trade there, at and from her port or ports of discharge in C., and at and from thence back to A., is an entire contract; and if the loss happens at any time after the commencement of the risk, there shall be no return of premium. Bernson v. Woodbridge, 2 Dougl. 781.

By a policy on a ship for a year, the underwriter stipulated to return a part of the premium if sold or laid up for every uncommenced month:—Held, that the words "lying up" meant a lying up for the season without being employed for the current year, and therefore, that where a vessel, insured for one year had been laid up for several months during the year, but was employed again within the year, that was not such lying up as entitled the assured to a return of the premium. Hunter v. Wright, 10 B. & C. 714; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 259.

Premium for Convoy.]—Where a total loss is recovered, there cannot also be a return of premium for convoy, because the total loss includes the entire premium added to the invoice price. Langhorn v. Allnutt, 4 Taunt. 511; 13 R. R. 663.

Return of Premium—Average Loss.]—Insurance on goods to be shipped on board a certain ship, part of the premium to be returned "if she sails with convoy and arrives":—Held, that the whole of the specified part of the premium was to be returned if the ship arrived, though there was an average loss on the goods. Simond v. Boydell, 1 Dougl. 268.

—— If Ship Arrives—Capture and Recapture—Salvage.]—The insurer on freight agreed to return part of the premium "if the ship sailed with convoy and arrived":—Held, that the assured were entitled to that return, the ship having sailed with convoy and arrived, though she had been captured and recaptured and the assured had had to pay salvage. Aguilar v. Rodgers, 7 Term Rep. 421; 4 R. R. 478.

—— Arrival, where.]—"To return 5 per cent. if the ship sails with convoy for Gottenburg and arrives, and 5 per cent. more if she sails for her port of delivery and arrives":—Semble, a return of premium may be due for her arrival at Gottenburg although she never arrives at her port of delivery. Leevin v. Cormac, 4 Taunt. 483, n.; 13 R. R. 654.

—— Risk not Divisible.]—Policy of insurance "at and from Jamaica to Liverpool; warranted to sail before the 1st August." The ship did not sail before the 1st August:—Held, that the risk was not divisible and that the assured was not entitled to a return of any part of the premium. Meyer v. Gregson, 3 Dougl. 402.

d. Ship in Safety.

No Interest.]—An insurance being made without interest, and the premium paid, the insured cannot recover back the premium after the ship has arrived safe. Lowry v. Bourdieu, 2 Dougl. 468.

Where there is an insurance on ship and freight, and the ship arrives in safety, and earns freight, the assured cannot afterwards claim a return of premium on the ground that he had no insurable interest on account of a defect in his title to the ship. M'Culloch v. Royal Exchange Assurance Co., 3 Camp. 406; 14 R. R. 765.

Over Insurance.]—An insurance was effected on the 12th April on a cargo of cotton, then at sea, by five several policies at the rate of fifty guineas per cent.; and on the 13th, news of the vessel's safety having arrived, a further insurance was bonâ fide effected by six different policies, at ten and five guineas per cent. The latter insurance, added to the former, exceeded in amount the value of the subject-matter insured, but the former of itself did not:—Held, that the assured were entitled to a return of premium on the amount of the over-insurance, to which the underwriters who subscribed the policies of the 13th April were to contribute ratably, in proportion to the sums insured by them respectively (the amount of over-insurance to be ascertained by taking into account all the policies), but that no return of premium was to be made in respect of the policies effected on the 12th. Fisk v. Masterman, 8 M. & W. 165; 10 L. J., Ex. 306.

Short Interest.]—Where there is an insurance on freight, if the ship is chartered for the voyage and is guilty of a deviation after sailing upon it and before any goods are loaded, the assured are not entitled to any return of premium for short interest. Moses v. Pratt, 4 Camp. 297; 16 R. R. 794.

Where a ship is insured for twelve months, at the rate of so much per month, though the risk ceases at the end of two months, there will be no apportionment nor return of premium. Loraine v. Tomlinson, 2 Dougl. 585.

"Arrival."]—A clause in a ship policy at and from Lisbon to Cadiz, and at and from thence to Flushing, at a premium of 20*l.* per cent., to return 8*l.* per cent. if the ship insured sailed with convoy from Cadiz for England, and 2*l.* per cent. more for convoy from England to Flushing, or 10*l.* per cent. if with convoy for the voyage, and arrived, does not entitle the assured to a return of premium of 8*l.* per cent. in consequence of the ship's arrival merely in England with convoy from Cadiz, she being afterwards captured before the arrival at Flushing, for "arrived" means at the ultimate port of destination. Kellner v. Le Mesurier, 4 East, 396; 1 Smith, 72; 7 R. R. 581.

Under a policy on goods from London to any ports or places in the Baltic, backwards and forwards, with leave to touch, stay and trade at all places, for all purposes, and to take in and discharge goods wheresoever the ship might touch at; and in case it should be found dangerous to enter such ports and places, or the captain was not allowed to discharge the cargo, with leave to return, until he found a port which he could enter with safety; the insurance to continue until the ship and goods arrived at as above; upon the ship until moored at anchor twenty-four hours in safety, and upon the goods until the same should be there discharged and safely landed, at a premium of fourteen guineas, to return 7*l.* per cent. for arrival; with warranty of the goods free from capture or seizure in the ship's port or ports of discharge:—Held, that the assured were entitled to a return of 7*l.* per cent. premium "for arrival," under circumstances which discharged the underwriters from any loss. Dalgleish v. Brooke, 15 East, 295; 13 R. R. 476.

Re-Insurance.]—The defendant, who had insured a cargo by a certain vessel lost or not lost for a certain voyage, believing such vessel to be overdue, effected a policy of reinsurance with the plaintiff on the same cargo and risk. Before effecting the policy of reinsurance, the vessel and cargo had in fact arrived safely at the port of destination; but this was not known to either the plaintiff or defendant at the time the policy was effected:—Held, that the policy had attached, and that therefore the plaintiff was entitled to the premium at which it had been effected. Bradford v. Symondson, 50 L. J., Q. B. 582; 7 Q. B. D. 456; 45 L. T. 364; 30 W. R. 27—C. A.

After Receipt.]—Where the assured claims and receives the return premium due upon the arrival of the vessel, and the policy is adjusted upon that footing, he cannot, without an express stipulation, resort again to the underwriter in any contingency of the adventure. May v. Christie, Holt, 67; 17 R. R. 608.

Return of Premium—Policy Effected after Ship's Arrival.]—Action by insurance brokers to recover the premium in respect of a war risk, policy effected after the arrival of the ship at her destination, both parties being ignorant of the fact:—Held, that the premium was not returnable. Natusch v. Symondson, 7 Q. B. D. 460, n.

e. Other Matters.

Winding up—Set off—Claims on Policies and unpaid Premiums.]—The official liquidators of an assurance company admitted that a certain amount was due from the company on a claim made before the winding-up order, upon the loss of a ship insured:—Held, that the policy-holder was entitled to set off against the amount sums due from him for unpaid premiums. Bates & Co., Ex parte, Progress Assurance Co., In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 496; 18 W. R. 722.

Evidence of Receipt—Policy.]—In an action by the assured against an underwriter for a return of premium, the policy is conclusive evidence of the receipt of the premium by him. Dalzell v. Mair, 1 Camp. 532. And see De Gaminde v. Pigou, 4 Taunt. 246.

Return of Premium under Mistake—Recovery on Policy.]—See Reyner v. Hall, 4 Taunt. 725; 14 R. R. 650, ante, col. 1263.

—— Action for—At Law or in Chancery.]—On the 16th of September, A. (since dead) insured a cargo of wheat at Lloyd's in 5,400*l.*, at the rate of 60*s.* per cent., which policy was duly subscribed by the agent of the defendant for 100*l.* A. forged bills of lading for the cargo, and on the 5th of October obtained an advance of 5,000*l.* from the plaintiff's agents on the security of the bills. On the 28th of October the plaintiff discovered the forgery, and subsequently applied to the defendant and the other underwriters for repayment of the premiums on the policy, on the ground of no interest having attached, but repayment was refused. After the death of A. (whose representatives could not be found) the plaintiff filed a bill, praying that it might be declared that he was entitled to be repaid the 60*s.*:—Held, that a court of law was the proper tribunal to decide the question as to whether the defendant was liable to repay the premium, as the fact of a person being only the equitable assignee of a legal demand was not a ground for changing the forum. Hoskins v. Holland, 44 L. J., Ch. 273; 23 W. R. 477.

Custom as to Order of Liability of Underwriters.]—Plea and proof of a custom that underwriters shall be liable in the order in which they subscribe the policy for the amount of the loss, and that subsequent underwriters shall return the premium, less ½ per cent., and bear none of the loss. African Co. v. Bull, 1 Show. 132

Policy Assigned—Assignor Bankrupt.]—Right to sue for return of premium. See Castelli v. Boddington, 1 El. & Bl. 66, 879; 22 L. J., Q. B. 5, post, col. 1313.

2. PAYMENT—ACTION FOR.

Credit given for Receipt.]—Although generally an underwriter, having subscribed a policy, and thereby confessed the receipt of the premium, is estopped from afterwards claiming the premium against the assured, yet, where by the fraud of the assured the underwriter is induced to give credit for the premiums to the broker, and the broker to give credit to the assured, the underwriter is entitled to receive the premiums from the assured. Foy v. Bell, 3 Taunt. 493; 12 R. R. 691.

An underwriter, after executing a policy, and giving credit to the broker for the premium, may recover the premium, if it appears that the assured (to cover a balance due from the broker to himself) procured him to effect the insurance, debiting the assured in account with the premiums, and lodging the policies in the hands of the assured, to enable him to receive the losses. Mavor v. Simeon, 3 Taunt. 479, n.

The broker effecting the policy, being the common agent of the assured and of the underwriter, while the premium remains in his hands for the one party, and the policy for the other, and having received notice of events which entitled the assured to a return of premium before action by the underwriter to recover the full premium, is authorised to deduct such return, and only to pay over the difference to the underwriter. Shee v. Clarkson, 12 East, 507; 11 R. R. 473.

On Bankruptcy—Deductions by Brokers.]—In an action by assignees of a bankrupt underwriter against the defendants, insurance brokers, for the balance of an adjusted account between the bankrupt and the defendants, and also for premiums of insurance on policies underwritten by the bankrupt with them as brokers, before the bankruptcy, the brokers are not entitled to deduct for returns of premium due on policies, the premiums of which policies formed a part of the adjusted account, except where the events entitling them to such returns were not known till after such adjustment; nor can they deduct for returns of premium on some of the policies, for the premiums of which the action is brought, the events entitling them to such returns having happened before the bankruptcy, though the returns were not adjusted; nor can they deduct for returns on other policies for the premiums of which the action is brought, the events entitling them to such returns having happened since the bankruptcy, but before the commencement of the action; the brokers not having a commission del credere, nor being personally interested in any of the insurances. Parker v. Smith, 16 East, 382; 14 R. R. 366.

Action on a policy on goods, alleging an average loss. By the policy, a portion of the premium was to be returned if the risk ended in England. Pleas, set-off, and bankruptcy of the plaintiff. Replication, that before the bankruptcy the plaintiff transferred the goods and the policy, and his right to recover for the loss to F. Rejoinder, that before the bankruptcy the risk had ended in England, whereby the plaintiff became entitled, under the policy, to a return of the premium:—Held, first, that the first plea was bad, as the action was for unliquidated damages. Boddington v. Castelli, 1 El. & Bl. 879; 1 C. L. R. 281; 23 L. J., Q. B. 31; 17 Jur. 781; 1 W. R. 359—Ex. Ch.

Held, secondly, that the rejoinder to the replication was no answer to the second plea, because, although the beneficial interest under the policy, so far as related to the return of the premiums, passed to the assignees, and though there was only one contract, yet that the bankrupt was entitled to sue on the policy as a trustee for F., to recover for the loss, as two separate actions on the policy were maintainable, one for the return of the premium and another for the loss. Ib.

—— Order and Disposition.]—A. and B. were members of a partnership; A. died, and B. became bankrupt:—Held, that premiums due on policies effected in A.'s name during his lifetime were not in the order and disposition of B. Brett v. Beckwith, 26 L. J., Ch. 130; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 31; 5 W. R. 112.

Held, also, that the joint creditors of A. and B. were entitled to have the separate estate of the deceased partner administered, and to an account of the joint estate in the hands of the executors of A. and the assignees of B. Ib.

Description "as Agents."]—Insurance brokers who, without a del credere commission, effected policies in their own names, in which they were described "as agents," cannot, in an action for premiums by the assignees of a bankrupt underwriter, who had subscribed these policies, set off a total loss which had happened before the bankruptcy, but which had not been adjusted, although the policies had always remained in their hands, and they had actually paid the amount of the loss to their principal. Baker v. Langhorn, 4 Camp. 396; 2 Marsh. 215; 6 Taunt. 519; 16 R. R. 662.

In an action by assignees of a bankrupt underwriter against brokers for premiums due to the bankrupt, the brokers may set off, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 171, a loss which occurred before the bankruptcy, on a policy underwritten by the bankrupt, and effected by them in their own names, "$\frac{\text{and}}{\text{or}}$ as agents" for a principal for whom they were acting on a del credere commission, without the bankrupt's knowledge. Lee v. Bullen, 8 El. & Bl. 692, n.; 27 L. J., Q. B. 161; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 557.

When Insurance Illegal].—Where credit was given by insurance brokers, in an account delivered in by them to an underwriter for the premiums of reassurances declared illegal by 19 Geo. 2, c. 37, after which the assured gave notice to the brokers not to pay the money over to the underwriter, and indemnified them for withholding it:—Held, that the underwriter could not maintain an action against the brokers to recover such premiums as for money had and received by them to his use, the transaction being illegal, and the money not having been actually paid, but only credit given for it on account. Edgar v. Fowler, 3 East, 222; 7 R. R. 433.

Set-off—On Death of Underwriter.]—In an action by the executors of an underwriter against a broker, for premiums due on policies, subscribed by the testator, the broker cannot set off returns of premium, which returns became due after the testator's death. Houstoun v. Robertson, 2 Marsh. 138; 6 Taunt. 448; 4 Camp. 342; Holt, 88; 16 R. R. 655.

Even when the policies were effected under a commission del credere. Houstoun v. Bordenave, 2 Marsh. 141; 6 Taunt. 451; 16 R. R. 657.

Express Promise by Assured to pay Premiums—Liability of Broker—Custom.]—The rule of law based upon the recognised custom in the ordinary course of business of marine insurance, by which the broker and not the assured is held liable to the underwriter for payment of the premiums upon a policy of marine insurance, is not rendered inapplicable by the fact that the policy contains an express promise by the assured to pay the premiums to the underwriter. Universo Insurance Co. of Milan v. Merchants Marine Insurance Co., 66 L. J., Q. B. 564; [1897] 2 Q. B. 93; 76 L. T. 748; 45 W. R. 625—C. A.

XIV. ASSIGNMENT OF POLICY.

After Interest Ceased.]—When the interest of the insured has ceased before loss, a subsequent assignment of the policy is ineffectual. North of England Pure Oilcake Co. v. Archangel Maritime Bank and Insurance Co., 44 L. J., Q. B. 121; L. R. 10 Q. B. 249; 32 L. T. 561; 24 W. R. 162; 2 Asp. M. C. 571.

The plaintiffs purchased linseed, to be delivered at a destined port in the United Kingdom, and paid for in fourteen days from being ready for delivery by cash, less discount, or at seller's option (which was not exercised) on handing shipping documents less interest. The sellers, before the sale to the plaintiffs, by policy made with the defendants, insured the linseed, including all risk of craft and boats to and from the ship or vessel, and also any special lighterage, each lighter or craft being considered as if separately insured. The vessel containing the linseed arrived at a port in the United Kingdom, and the cargo was landed by means of public lighters employed by the plaintiff, one of which was sunk when loaded, and the linseed on it partly lost and partly damaged. This loss, which was within the terms of the policy, occurred before delivery of the cargo had been completed, and before the plaintiffs had paid the price. After the cargo had been completely delivered, the sellers assigned the policy to the plaintiffs, who sued the defendants in respect of the loss above mentioned:—Held, that as there was no express contract that the policy should pass to the purchaser on the sale of the linseed, and as none could be implied from the terms of the sold note, the interest under the policy remained in the sellers until delivery; and as on delivery on board the lighter the plaintiff's interest ceased and the policy lapsed, no interest under it could pass to a subsequent assignee. Ib.

After Loss.]—A policy of marine insurance can be assigned, under 31 & 32 Vict. c. 86, s. 1, after loss, so as to entitle the assignee to sue upon it in his own name. Lloyd v. Fleming, 41 L. J., Q. B. 93; L. R. 7 Q. B. 299; 25 L. T. 824; 20 W. R. 296; 1 Asp. M. C. 192.

In an action upon a policy of marine insurance by the executors of E., deceased, against an underwriter, the declaration alleged that a policy on goods in a ship was underwritten by the defendant, that the goods were lost by the perils insured against, and that after the loss, "the policy of insurance, together with all rights accrued under and by virtue thereof," was, by the assured, for good consideration, duly assigned to E. in his lifetime:—Held, that although the assignment was made after loss of the goods, yet as the policy, "together with all rights accrued under it," had been duly assigned to E., he became "entitled to the property thereby insured," within the terms of 31 & 32 Vict. c. 86, s. 1, and was entitled to sue upon the policy in his own name, and that the declaration was good. Ib.

Set-off.]—The assured had, subsequently to the date of a policy of insurance on goods executed a deed of inspectorship under the Bankruptcy Act (24 & 25 Vict. c. 134), s. 192, and was suing on behalf of third persons who had made advances upon the shipping documents:—Held, that he was entitled to recover, and that the underwriters were not entitled to set off the amount of a debt due from the assured to them, under the mutual credit clause of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 171. De Mattos v. Saunders, L. R. 7 C. P. 570; 27 L. T. 120; 20 W. R. 801; 1 Asp. M. C. 377. See Boddington v. Castelli, 1 El. & Bl. 879; 1 C. L. R. 281; 23 L. J., Q. B. 31; 17 Jur. 781; 1 W. R. 359—Ex. Ch., infra, col. 1313.

In an action by the assignee of a policy of marine insurance, the insurers are not entitled to set off a debt incurred with them by the assured for premiums on policies effected with them by the assured after the date of the assignment; for the claim under a policy for a loss is for unliquidated damages to which no set-off could be pleaded at law, under the statutes of set-off in an action by the assured, nor in equity in a suit by the assignee, and therefore the debt incurred by the assured is not a "defence" open to the insurers under 31 & 32 Vict. c. 86, s. 1, that statute being intended merely to amend procedure and not to alter the rights of the parties to the policy; nor is the debt incurred by the assured the subject of "set-off" or "counter-claim" within the meaning of the rules of the supreme court, Ord. XIX. r. 3. Pellas v. Neptune Marine Insurance Co., 49 L. J., C. P. 153; 5 C. P. D. 34; 42 L. T. 35; 28 W. R. 405; 4 Asp. M. C. 213—C. A.

Who Entitled to Policy Moneys.]—A cargo of wheat, fully insured, having fallen in value, was sold, including the freight and the full insurance at a reduced price, to be paid in cash, in exchange for the bills of lading and policies effected with approved underwriters. The policies were transferred to the purchaser, but with an indorsement limiting the transfer to an amount sufficient only to cover the price at which the cargo was sold. The cargo having suffered a total loss, Wood, V.-C., held that the sellers were entitled, as against the purchaser, to the balance of the insurance moneys in excess of the amount for which the policy was transferred. But upon an appeal:—Held, that the purchaser was entitled to the whole proceeds of the policy. Ralli v. Universal Marine Insurance Co., 4 De G. F. & J. 1; 31 L. J., Ch. 313; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 495; 6 L. T. 34; 10 W. R. 278.

Sale on London Floating Conditions—Sufficiency of Policy Delivered.]—Upon the sale of a floating cargo upon London floating conditions, the question whether the policy assigned is sufficient in amount is for the jury. Tamvaco v. Lucas, 3 B. & S. 89; 31 L. J., Q. B. 296; 6 L. T. 697; 10 W. R. 733—Ex. Ch.

Goods sold at Sea—Policy Assigned—Recovery on Policy by Assignor.]—Goods were insured from H. to a market in Europe, part of premium to be returned if risk ended in United Kingdom. The assured sold the goods at sea, and assigned the policy. An average loss occurred, and the goods were delivered in England. The assignor afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that he could nevertheless sue upon the policy for the average loss as trustee for the purchaser, although the right to sue for return of premium had vested in the assignees in bankruptcy. Castelli v. Boddington, 1 El. & Bl. 879; 1 C. L. R. 281; 23 L. J., Q. B. 31; 17 Jur. 781; 1 W. R. 359—Ex. Ch.

Sale — Interest of Third Parties — Policy Moneys.]—A. sold minerals to B. at 40*s.* per ton, B. agreeing to resell at the best price, and in case the selling price exceeded 50*s.* per ton, to pay half of the difference between that price and 40*s.* to A. B. insured the minerals for 100,000*l.* A part of the minerals was consumed by fire, and B. agreed with the insurance company to abandon to them the entire heap (about 10,000 tons, less the part consumed), the insurers paying B. 58*s.* per ton for the whole, the market price being then higher:—Held, that A. was entitled to recover from B. half the sum received from the insurers in excess of 50*s.* per ton. Gillespie v. Miller, 1 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (4th ser.) 423.

Agreement to Insure—War Risk.]—See Birkett v. Engholm, ante, col. 546.

XV. SUBROGATION.

Subrogation of Assurer to Rights of Assured.]—The insurer, after payment to the assured of the money due under his policy, stands in the place of the assured in respect of the property in and rights to the ship or goods insured; but the owners, and not the insurers, must take proceedings for restitution before commissioners for prizes. Randal v. Cockran, 1 Ves. Sen. 98.

—— So he is entitled to freight earned by the abandoned ship. Stewart v. Greenock Marine Insurance Co., 2 H. L. Cas. 159. S. P., Case v. Davidson, 8 Price, 542; 5 Moore, 116; 2 Br. & B. 379; 17 R. R. 280. Affirming, 5 M. & S. 79.

As to the right of the underwriter to recover damages payable by the owner of a ship that has damaged the insured ship in collision, see Sea Insurance Co. v. Hadden, 53 L. J., Q. B. 252; 13 Q. B. D. 706; 50 L. T. 657; 32 W. R. 841; 5 Asp. M. C. 230, post, col. 1332; Yates v. Whyte, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 272; 5 Scott, 640; 7 L. J., C. —— Right to Salvage and Compensation.]—Satisfaction having been made under a royal commission for distribution of prizes to the insured, such of the insurers as had paid held entitled to restitution, though foreigners; but not those who had compounded and renounced salvage. Blaauwpot v. Da Costa, 1 Eden, 130.

Advances to Master at Port of Loading—Constructive Total Loss—Freight collected at Port of Discharge—Deductions—Advanced Freight.]—By charterparty it was provided that "sufficient cash for ship's ordinary disbursements at port of loading to be advanced to the master by charterers or their agents . . . ship paying 2½ per cent. including insurance. Master to give his draft on owners or consignees as required and customary to cover same, which shall be paid out of the first freight collected." Advances were made and the ship proceeded on her voyage, but became a constructive total loss when close to her port of destination. She was subsequently brought to her port of destination, where she discharged her cargo. The master's draft for advances ultimately came into the hands of the consignees. The freight was collected by the shipowners. In an action by the underwriters on hull and machinery against the shipowners to recover the whole of the freight so collected:—Held, that the shipowners were entitled to deduct the sum advanced at the port of loading from the freight collected by them, inasmuch as the underwriters were only entitled to the charterparty freight earned from the use of the ship after abandonment. The Red Sea, 65 L. J., Adm. 9; [1896] P. 20; 73 L. T. 462; 44 W. R. 306; 8 Asp. M. C. 102—C. A.

1. GENERALLY.

a. Parties.

Contract by Agent.]—L., an agent of B., insured goods belonging to B. that were being sent by ship from Montreal to St. John's, Newfoundland. The insurance company's agent issued to L. a "certificate of insurance," which stated that L. had insured the goods. It was the custom of the company to issue subsequently a policy stating that "X. Y., as well in his own name as in the name of every person to whom the same shall appertain," had insured the goods. On a loss occurring:—Held, that the omission in the certificate of the words "as well as in his own name," &c., did not, either by the Canadian or by the English law, preclude B. from suing the insurance company in his own name. Brown v. Provincial Insurance Co. of Canada, L. R. 5

P. C. 263; 28 L. T. 853; 21 W. R. 587; 2 Asp. M. C. 338.

An agent, who insures for another with his authority, may sue for the insurance money in his own name. Provincial Insurance Co. of Canada v. Leduc, 43 L. J., P. C. 49; L. R. 6 P. C. 224; 31 L. T. 142; 22 W. R. 929. See also Sunderland Marine Insurance v. Kearney, post, col. 1327.

Pledgee of Bill of Lading.]—Where a consignee of goods pledges the bill of lading with another person, as a security for advances made by him, and upon an agreement that the consignee shall effect an insurance on the goods for the benefit of the pledgee, and deposit the policy with him, the pledgee may sue on the policy in his own name. Sutherland or Sunderland v. Pratt, 12 M. & W. 16; 13 L. J., Ex. 246.

Assignee.]—A person who assigns away his interest in a ship or goods, after effecting a policy upon them, and before the loss, cannot sue upon the policy, except as a trustee for the assignee, in a case where the policy is handed over to him upon the assignment, or there is an agreement that it shall be kept alive for his benefit. Powles v. Innes, 11 M. & W. 10; 12 L. J., Ex. 163.

Indorsee of General Policy.]—S., a shipbroker, was directed by the plaintiff, a shipowner, who was liable for loss by jettison, to take out an open policy against jettison on deck goods, and S. shortly afterwards received from the plaintiff a notice declaring the shipment to be on deck per "La Plata," from Grimsby to Ostend, of certain specified goods. S. not being able to effect such a policy as the plaintiff required, caused a declaration as to the risk insured against, similar to the notice which he had so received from the plaintiff to be indorsed on a general policy, which had been effected a month previously by S.'s agents in their own names, and in that of any other person to whom it might appertain, from any port on the east coast of Great Britain to any port on the continent between Hamburg and Havre, upon any kind of goods, "to be valued and declared as interest might appear." The defendant underwrote this policy, and also put his initials to such declaration. There were other goods in other vessels belonging to other persons, in which the plaintiff had no interest, also declared by indorsement on the policy. The plaintiff was duly informed by S. that the risk by the "La Plata" had been covered not upon the plaintiff's own policy, but on S.'s general one:—Held, that the plaintiff could not sue the defendant on such policy, as it had never been made with the plaintiff, nor with any one on his behalf, nor had it ever been ratified by him. Watson v. Swann, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 756; 31 L. J., C. P. 210.

Third Parties—Claim for Indemnity—Underwriters—Suing and Labouring Clause.]—The defendant insured his ship under a policy containing the usual suing and labouring clause. In an action to recover for work alleged to have been done and expenses incurred by the plaintiffs for the defendant, at his request, in respect of attempting to save the ship during the continuance of the policy:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to bring in the underwriters as third parties under Ord. XVI. r. 48, because they did not, by the suing and labouring clause, contract to indemnify the defendant in respect of any contract made by him with the plaintiffs. Johnston v. Salvage Association, 19 Q. B. D. 458; 57 L. T. 218; 36 W. R. 56; 6 Asp. M. C. 167—C. A.

Service of Writ out of the Jurisdiction—Underwriters Resident Abroad.]—The plaintiff brought an action in England on a policy of insurance against several underwriters. Having served his writ of summons on two of the underwriters who were within the jurisdiction, he obtained leave under Ord. XI. r. 1 (g) to serve his writ on the other defendants who were residing out of the jurisdiction. Thanemore Steamship Co. v. Thompson, 52 L. T. 552; 5 Asp. M. C. 398.

Plaintiff Bankrupt.]—The assured sold the goods at sea and assigned the policy; afterwards an average loss took place, and the assured became bankrupt. Held, that he could sue on the policy as trustee for the purchaser. Castelli v. Boddington, 1 El. & Bl. 879; 1 C. L. R. 281; 23 L. J., Q. B. 31; 17 Jur. 781; 1 W. R. 359—Ex. Ch.

Bankruptcy of Insured—Subsequent Loss—Right of Assignees.]—The benefit of a policy of insurance, previous to the bankruptcy of the insured, upon a loss after it passes; and gives a right of action to the assignees, not capable of set-off against a debt from the bankrupt. Blagden, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 466; 2 Rose, 249.

Policy Moneys in hands of Stakeholder.]—Money alleged to be payable under a policy was by consent of assurer and assured handed to a third person to hold as trustee for the person entitled. The person so entitled can recover from the stakeholder only and not from the original debtor. Ker v. Osborne, 9 East, 378.

Tug and Tow.—Contract by tug owner to insure against collision and indemnify tow; who must sue underwriters. See The Lord of the Isles, supra, col. 681.

Mutual Insurance Society—Some Members sued on behalf of all.]—A member of a mutual shipping insurance club, whose members are numerous, and whose affairs are managed by the members generally, assisted by the treasurer and secretary, may maintain a suit in equity against some of the members, as representing the whole, to recover, by contribution among the members, the amount of his loss. The treasurer and secretary of such a club are properly made co-defendants, there being no committee of management, and they being the acting managers of the association. Bromley v. Williams, 1 N. R. 413; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 240; 8 L. T. 78; 11 W. R. 392.

Subscription by Syndicate — Partnership—Joint or Several Liability.]—The defendants, the "Shipowners' Syndicate," a group of underwriters not members of Lloyd's, authorised their manager to underwrite policies of marine insurance on account of the several persons forming the syndicate. The plaintiffs, who were underwriters at Lloyd's, effected a policy of re-insurance with the manager. The policy was in the ordinary form of a Lloyd's policy, except that it contained the following special clause: "It is specially agreed that the assured are hereby entitled, by way of further security for the performance of the obligations of the subscribing underwriters and of each and every of them, to the benefit by way of first charge of the policies of reinsurance effected, or to be effected, and all moneys received thereunder." The subscription was as follows: "The Shipowners' Syndicate (Reassured)." Then followed the names of the members of the syndicate, of whom the manager was one, with the respective proportions underwritten by them set against each name, and it concluded in the following terms: "of 79,300*l.*, seventy-nine thousand three hundred pounds, 4th March, 1895. The Shipowners' Syndicate, Reassured. John M. Corderoy, Manager":—Held, that the liability of the members of the syndicate on the policy was several only and not joint. Tyser v. Shipowners' Syndicate, 65 L. J., Q. B. 238; [1896] 1 Q. B. 135; 73 L. T. 605; 44 W. R. 207; 8 Asp. M. C. 81.

b. Time for.

Delay.]—When goods are insured for a voyage, the time of the loss occurring is not necessarily the time when the peril is encountered and the vessel driven ashore. Browning v. Provincial Insurance Co. of Canada, L. R. 5 P. C. 263; 28 L. T. 853; 21 W. R. 587; 2 Asp. M. C. 35.

A ship, with flour as part of her cargo, was seen in the Gulf of St. Lawrence on the 22nd of November, 1867, and nothing more was heard of her until May, 1868, when she was found ashore at Anticosti, all hands having been lost. On the 29th November, 1867, a violent storm had commenced in the Gulf, and there was a strong probability that the ship was capsized and driven ashore in that gale. Part of the flour insured was subsequently saved and sold by an agent of the insurance company. The action to recover on the policy was not brought until March, 1869. The policy containing a proviso that no action should be brought on it unless within a year after the loss was incurred, the insurance company contended that the assured was too late to bring an action:—Held, that the loss was not in its inception total, and only became so when it was found that it was impossible to carry the flour to its destination, and that it was necessary to sell it. Consequently the assured was not precluded by lapse of time from bringing his action. Ib.

c. Evidence.

Discovery of Ship's Papers in Actions on Policy.]—In an action against an underwriter of a policy of marine insurance for his proportion of the amount insured, he applied for a stay of proceedings till discovery of ship's papers should be made by a person on whose behalf the policy had been effected, but who had ceased to be interested in it, and was not under the control of the plaintiffs, real or nominal, and was out of the jurisdiction of the court:—Held, that as the person from whom discovery was required was not interested in the action, and the persons by and for whom respectively the action was brought had no power over him, the defendant was not entitled to the order. Fraser v. Burrows, 46 L. J., Q. B. 501; 2 Q. B. D. 624.

An action having been brought on a policy of marine insurance by the mortgagees of thirty-two sixty-fourths of the ship, and it appearing that the plaintiffs had no ship's papers, but that the ship had been sailed by the mortgagor, who was the managing owner, and who had since died, the defendants applied for an order that not only the plaintiffs, but the mortgagor or his representatives, and also all persons interested in the proceedings and in the insurance on the ship, should produce upon oath the ship's papers, and that in the meantime all the proceedings should be stayed:—Held, that the old practice had not been superseded by the Judicature Act, 1875, Ord. XXXI. rr. 11—18, and that the defendants were entitled to the order, which must remain in force, until, at all events, the plaintiffs had satisfied the court that they had applied to the mortgagor and done all in their power to produce the ship's papers. West of England and South Wales District Bank v. Canton Insurance Co., 2 Ex. D. 472.

Risk not wholly Marine.]—In an action upon a policy of insurance, in which the risk was of a mixed nature, the transit being partly by sea and partly by land, and in which perils of "transit or conveyance" had been substituted for "of the seas," the defendants had, before delivering their defence, applied for the usual order for discovery of "ship's papers" under the old practice:—Held, that the peculiar practice of granting discovery of ship's papers was applicable to actions brought upon marine policies alone, and could not be extended. Henderson v. Underwriting Association, 60 L. J., Q. B. 406; [1891] 1 Q. B. 557; 64 L. T. 774; 39 W. R. 528.

Letters between Assured and Master.]—In an action on a policy, the defendant is entitled to inspection of all papers in possession of the plaintiff, relative to the issue, including letters between the plaintiff and the master. Rayner v. Ritson, 6 B. & S. 888; 35 L. J., Q. B. 59; 14 W. R. 81.

Ship's Log.]—Log of ship insured ordered to be produced for inspection in an action upon the policy. Kellock v. Home and Colonial Insurance Co., 12 Jur. (N.S.) 653.

Log Book of Man-of-War Convoying.]—Action on policy, to prove the time of sailing of a ship under convoy, the log book of the man-of-war which convoyed the fleet is evidence. D'Israeli v. Jowett, 1 Esp. 427.

"All Persons Interested"—Form of Order for Discovery.]—In an action on a policy of marine insurance to recover the amount of a particular average loss, the defendant is entitled, without an affidavit, and under the old practice, which has not been affected by the Judicature Act, to an order staying proceedings until the ship's papers and other documents have been produced by the plaintiff and all persons interested in the proceedings and in the insurance, the subject-matter of the action. China Transpacific Steamship Co. v. Commercial Union Assurance Co., 51 L. J., Q. B. 132; 8 Q. B. D. 142; 45 L. T. 647; 30 W. R. 224—C. A.

Usage.]—In an action on a policy in the usual form on ship, boat, &c., evidence of usage that the underwriters never pay for the loss of boats on the outside of a ship, slung upon the quarter, is inadmissible. Blackett v. Royal Exchange Assurance Co., 2 C. & J. 244; 2 Tyr. 266; 1 L. J., Ex. 101.*

Usage is admissible in evidence to explain the construction of a policy in the parts written by the parties as well as in the printed form. Preston v. Greenwood, 4 Dougl. 28.

Action on a policy on fish, by the ship "Duchess of Gordon," at and from Newfoundland to a port in Portugal; the ship carried out a cargo of salt from Lisbon, with which she arrived at Newfoundland on the 21st July. As soon as she was unloaded she proceeded in ballast to Sydney, where she arrived on the 25th August, and took in a cargo of coals. This she carried back to Newfoundland, and delivered there in the beginning of October. Between the 21st of that month and 8th November, she was loaded with a cargo of fish, which was the subject of the insurance, and soon after sailed with convoy for Oporto, but was totally lost:—Held, that evidence of the usage of the trade was admissible to show that the risk began from the loading of the ship with fish, and not from the loading of the first cargo. Ongier v. Jennings, 1 Camp. 505, n.

A custom of Liverpool that underwriters are not liable, under the ordinary form of policy, for general average in respect of the jettison of goods stowed on deck is a valid custom, and in an action upon a policy in the ordinary form, the defendants pleaded the custom above as to so much of the declaration as related to the jettison of the goods:—Held, that the custom might be imported into the contract, and that the underwriters were not liable. Miller v. Titherington, 7 H. & N. 954; 31 L. J., Ex. 363; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1039; 9 L. T. 231; 10 W. R. 356—Ex. Ch.

Nature of Risk—Amount of Premium.]—If the question is whether the addition of a place, by name, in a policy, would have varied the risk, or whether, on the other hand, such place was implied in the words actually used, it is material evidence, in favour of the latter construction, that the premium in either case would have been the same. Preston v. Greenwood, 4 Dougl. 28.

Lloyd's Lists.]—In an action on a policy, Lloyd's shipping list is admissible against the underwriter, without proof of his having seen it, and is primâ facie evidence of the time of sailing. But where there was a concealment by the insurer of material facts, and an allegation of facts, which were untrue, viz. as to the time of sailing, and the underwriter had acted thereon, without, in fact, seeing the list at Lloyd's:—Held, that the underwriter was not bound thereby, and that the judge ought to point out to the jury, as material, such concealment and misrepresentation. Mackintosh v. Marshall, 11 M. & W. 116; 12 L. J., Ex. 337.

Lloyd's register of shipping is not admissible to show that a vessel is considered as copper-fastened. Freeman v. Baker, 5 Car. & P. 475.

In an action on a policy of insurance, Lloyd's list is evidence against the assured, it being shown that the broker had read it before the policy was effected. Bain v. Case, 3 Car. & P. 496.

Lloyd's books are evidence of a capture; but not of notice of a loss to any person in particular; but, coupled with other evidence, they may go to the jury. Abel v. Potts, 3 Esp. 242; 6 R. R. 826.

Signature of Policy.]—Proof of signature of the policy by an authorised agent satisfies an allegation of signature by the defendant. Nicholson v. Croft, 2 Burr. 1188.

Contemporaneous Agreement.]—In an action on a policy on a ship, alleging a loss by capture, it is competent to the defendant to show, under the general issue, that, by a written agreement entered into by the parties contemporaneously with the policy, the risk was to be confined to a capture in time of war. Heath v. Durrant, 1 D. & L. 571; 12 M. & W. 438; 13 L. J., Ex. 95; 8 Jur. 131.

—— Parol Evidence.]—Parol evidence of what passed at the time of effecting a policy is not admissible to restrain the effect of the policy. Weston v. Emes, 1 Taunt. 115.

Slip.]—The slip on which underwriters take down the risks they insure is not evidence of insurance. Rogers v. M'Carthy, 3 Esp. 107. And see cases, ante, col. 1032.

Of Agency.]—In an action on a policy subscribed by the defendant's agent, under a power of attorney, it is sufficient proof of the agency that the defendant is in the habit of paying losses upon policies so subscribed by the agent in his name, without producing the power of attorney. Haughton v. Ewbank, 4 Camp. 88.

An admission of the subscription of the underwriter to a policy does not dispense with proof of the agency of the party effecting the insurance. Palmer v. Marshall, 1 M. & Scott, 161; 8 Bing. 79; 1 L. J., C. P. 19.

Evidence that one who signed the policy was accustomed to sign policies for the insurer:—Held, not sufficient proof of agency. Courteen v. Touse, 1 Camp. 43; 10 R. R. 627.

Injunction to Stay — Commission to West Indies.]—Injunction to stay proceedings at law on policy, and commission for examining witnesses in the West Indies, granted, as the voyage was at and from Carthagena to Porto Bello, and the facts must necessarily arise in the West Indies. Chitty v. Selwyn, 2 Atk. 359.

Certificate of Lloyd's Agent.]—A certificate as to damage of goods insured made by a Lloyd's agent abroad is not admissible in evidence as proof of damage in an action by the assured against the underwriter, a member of Lloyd's. Drake v. Marryat, 1 B. & C. 473; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 161; 25 R. R. 464.

Proof of Ownership.]—Ownership in an action on a policy may be proved by parol evidence. Robertson v. French, 4 East, 130; 7 R. R. 535.

In an action upon a policy, ownership of the vessel proved by evidence that A. had ordered and paid for stores for her. Thomas v. Fogle, 5 Esp. 88.

Plaintiff, in an action for loss of goods on a policy, produced a bill of parcels receipted by one Gardiner, of Petersburgh, and proved his handwriting:—Held, that this was admissible against the underwriters. Russell v. Boheme, 2 Str. 1127.

Discontinuance — Costs — Examination of Witnesses before Master.]—In an action on a policy, owing to the plaintiff's delay in producing papers ordered to be produced, the defendant did not plead until a year after declaration.

Meanwhile, to save expense, the defendant examined witnesses before the master, under 1 Will. 4, c. 23, s. 4. The defendant pleaded unseaworthiness, &c., and paid 25*l.* into court on the money counts for the premium. The plaintiff took the money out of court and joined issue on the other pleas, but afterwards discontinued:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to the costs of the witnesses examined as incurred before instructions for plea, within Reg.-Gen., H. T., 1853, r. 12. Previte v. Adelaide Fire and Marine Insurance Co., 32 L. T. 768; 2 Asp. M. C. 577.

Unnecessary Sale by Master — Evidence of Drunkenness.]—On an issue between a shipowner and the insurers whether the ship has been totally lost, it appeared that she had gone ashore, and when on shore had been sold by the captain to a person who succeeded in getting her afloat. The defendant's case being that, if proper judgment had been exercised, a total loss might have been avoided:—Held, that he might give evidence of habitual drunkenness on the part of the captain, shortly before he sailed. Alcock v. Royal Exchange Assurance Corporation, 13 Q. B. 292.

Perils of the Sea—Salvage not by reason of Perils Insured against — Judgment in rem, effect of.]—The master of a steamship that had run short of coal employed another to tow her to her destination. The owner of the latter recovered salvage against the former in admiralty. In an action by the owner of the salved vessel against an underwriter, who had insured against perils of the sea, to recover the money paid for salvage:—Held, that the defendant was not concluded by the admiralty judgment from showing that the loss did not arise from perils insured against. Ballantyne v. Mackinnon, 65 L. J., Q. B. 616; [1896] 2 Q. B. 455; 75 L. T. 95; 45 W. R. 70; 8 Asp. M. C. 173—C. A.

Opening Rule.]—Where several underwriters entered into a consolidation rule, to abide by the determination of the court on a point reserved for their consideration at the trial of a cause, viz. as to whether a notice of abandonment had been given in due time, the court would not allow such rule to be opened, on an affidavit stating that the owner had received letters from the captain abroad, informing him of the loss and sale of the ship before the arrival of the latter in London: as notice should have been given to the plaintiff to produce such letters at the trial; or they should, at all events, have been adverted to by affidavit, when the motion was made to the court on the point reserved. Read v. Isaacs, 6 Moore, 437. See also Foster v. Alcez, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 892; 4 Scott, 535, ante, col. 1161.

Reference to Arbitrator.] — Where several underwriters entered into a consolidation rule, by which they undertook to abide the event of the verdict, and the cause was referred by consent before trial, and the arbitrator awarded the aggregate sum due to the assured from the underwriters at large—the court would not order it to be referred back to the arbitrator to insert the amount of the sum due and payable from each underwriter individually, without the consent of such underwriters. Kynaston v. Liddell, 8 Moore, 223.

Actions having been brought against eight persons upon mutual insurance policies, the court, at their instance, granted a rule for consolidating them, upon the terms that they should admit the amounts for which they were respectively liable, in case their liability should be established, and should consent, if necessary, to an order, referring it to the master to settle the same. Lewis v. Burkes or Banks, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 330; 27 L. J., C. P. 247; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 663; 6 W. R. 652.

—— Compulsory.]—Two actions having been brought by the same plaintiff against different defendants, on the same policy, the court consolidated them, after a declaration had been delivered in one, and an appearance entered in the other, at the instance of the defendant in the latter action, though the plaintiff objected. Hollingworth or Hollingsworth v. Broderick, 4 A. & E. 646; 6 N. & M. 240; 1 H. & W. 691.

Where a plaintiff brings several actions upon the same policy against several underwriters, the court will not, without his consent, make a consolidation rule upon the terms of both plaintiff and defendants being bound in all the actions by the event of one. Doyle v. Anderson, 1 A. & E. 635; 4 N. & M. 873.

Where two actions were brought by the same plaintiffs against different defendants, on different policies on the same ship, the court refused, at the instance of the defendants, to compel the plaintiffs to consolidate, and to be bound by one of the actions, without their consent. M'Gregor v. Horsfall, 3 M. & W. 320; 6 D. P. C. 338; 7 L. J., Ex. 71; 2 Jur. 257.

Where upwards of forty actions were brought against underwriters of the policies of insurance, one of which had been assigned by memorandum of transfer signed by some of them, before the bankruptcy of the assured, the court made an order for consolidation, the general principle laid down being, that all actions should be stayed except such as might be really necessary to determine the liability of distinct defendants in each class of cases, the defendants to be bound by the result, but not the plaintiffs. Syers v. Pickersgill, 27 L. J., Ex. 5; 6 W. R. 16.

The court ultimately settled that there were two classes of cases, and that two actions should be allowed to proceed. Ib.

Actions against separate underwriters of the same policy were usually consolidated—per Tindal, C.J. Sharp v. Lethbridge, 4 Man. & G. 37; 4 Scott (N.S.) 722; 11 L. J., C. P. 189.

Restraining Second Action.]—Where actions against underwriters have been consolidated by rule, and the defendant has obtained a verdict in one, the court will not restrain the plaintiff from trying a second cause, included in the rule, till the costs of the first are paid. Doyle v. Douglass, 4 B. & Ad. 544.

Payment into Court.]—Where sixty actions were pending on a policy on a ship, which had been insured to a very large amount, and a consolidation rule had been entered into, in which the plaintiff and the other defendants agreed to be bound by the decision in this action; the plaintiff having recovered a verdict, on which a rule nisi had been obtained for a new trial, the court refused to order the defendant to pay the amount recovered against him into court, or to invest the same upon the ground that the great arrear of causes on the new trial paper would prevent the rule nisi coming on for argument for a long time, and that the losses and risk of the plaintiff were thereby greatly increased. Ohrly v. Dunbar, 1 N. & P. 244 ; 5 A. & E. 824 ; 2 H. & W. 454 ; 6 L. J., K. B. 15.

e. Payment into Court.

Effect of.]—In an action on a policy, with a count for money had and received, if the defendant pays no money into court, but establishes as a defence that the risk never commenced, the plaintiff is entitled to a verdict for the premium, though no demand of premium was made by his counsel in opening the case. Penson v. Lee, 2 Bos. & P. 330 ; 5 R. R. 614.

Payment of money into court in an action on a policy admits that the ship was seaworthy. Harrison v. Douglas, 6 N. & M. 180 ; 3 A. & E. 396 ; 1 H. & W. 380.

Where, by the term of a policy in a mutual insurance club, the amount of the loss is not to be drawn before a specified day, the defendant, by paying money into court, precludes himself from objecting that the action is brought too soon. Ib.

A plaintiff, having declared on a policy, with a count for money had and received, the defendant paid the amount of the premiums into court on that count, pleading to the count on the policy so as to raise that of unseaworthiness. The plaintiff took the money out of court in satisfaction of the claim under the count for money had and received. At the trial, the defence of unseaworthiness having been given up, a special case was stated for the opinion of the court, which was afterwards taken to the exchequer chamber, and in both courts it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover as for an average loss. The amount of the average loss was referred to, and ascertained by, average-staters, but this not being done before the argument of the case, a nominal judgment for 3,500*l.* was entered up for the purpose of taking the case into error :—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to enter judgment and take out execution for the entire amount of the average loss, without giving credit to the defendant for the amount paid into court, and taken out by the plaintiff. Carr v. Royal Exchange Assurance Corporation, 5 B. & S. 941 ; 34 L. J., Q. B. 21 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 265 ; 11 L. T. 595 ; 13 W. R. 204.

Payment of money into court to the amount of a valued policy is not an admission of a total loss. Rucker v. Palsgrave, 1 Taunt. 419 ; 1 Camp. 557.

In an action on a valued policy, the payment of money into court upon a count for a total loss is not an admission of such total loss by capture. Ib.

But it admits the interests of the plaintiff as averred. Bell v. Ansley, 16 East, 146 ; 14 R. R. 322.

After Consolidation.]—See Ohrly v. Dunbar, supra.

f. Arbitration.

Condition precedent.]—A. effected in a mutual insurance company a policy on ship, one of the conditions of which was, that the sum to be paid to any insurer for loss should, in the first instance, be ascertained by the committee ; but if a difference should arrive between the insurer and the committee, "relative to the settling of any loss, or to a claim for average, or any other matter relating to the insurance," the difference was to be referred to arbitration, in a way pointed out in the conditions :—"provided always, that no insurer who refuses to accept the amount settled by the committee shall be entitled to maintain any action at law or suit in equity on his policy," until the matter has been decided by the arbitrators, and "then only for such sum as they shall award" ; and the obtaining the decision of the arbitrators was declared a condition precedent to the maintaining of an action :—Held, that these conditions were lawful, and that (even should the difference relate to other matters than those of mere amount) till award made no action was maintainable. Scott v. Avery, 5 H. L. Cas. 811 ; 25 L. J., Ex. 308 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 815 ; 4 W. R. 746.

A policy was subject to the following rule :—"All average claims and claims of abandonment shall be adjusted and settled, conformably to the custom of Lloyds' or the Royal Exchange, by a professional average-stater ; but should the committee or the assured be dissatisfied with the adjustment, they may refer the same to two professional average-staters, or to other competent persons, with power to such two persons to appoint an umpire, and the award of such two persons shall be final ; and all other cases of dispute, of whatever nature, shall be referred in like manner ; but the committee or assured by mutual consent may refer all such adjustments or disputes to one person only, whose award shall also be final ; and no action at law shall be brought until the arbitrators have given their decision" :—Held, that no action could be maintained on the policy for a total loss until the claim had been adjusted and settled by arbitration in pursuance of the rule. Tredwen v. Holman, 1 H. & C. 72 ; 31 L. J., Ex. 398 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1080 ; 6 L. T. 127 ; 10 W. R. 652.

Bar to Action.]—A mutual insurance society, registered pursuant to 25 & 26 Vict. c. 89, issued to one of its members a policy of insurance on his ship "Hermione," which was afterwards lost. The policy referred to the articles of the association, the 39th of which provided that the directors should have full power to decide and determine all disputes, &c., arising between the society and its members concerning insurances, &c., and the decision of the directors should be final and conclusive, and no member of the society should be allowed to bring any action, &c., except as was provided, &c., and the directors might, if they thought fit cause any claim or demand to be submitted to an average-adjuster, "and in every such case the decision or award of such average-adjuster shall be final and conclusive on the society and claimant, and every person interested in such claim, and no appeal shall be allowed therefrom." By the 84th article, a means was provided by which any member who was dissatisfied with the decision of the directors might obtain a reconsideration of his claim. The "Hermione" having been lost the assured made a claim, but the directors decided that he had no claim upon the society. He then brought an action :—Held, that the decision of the claim by the directors, subject to the right of obtaining a reconsideration, under the 84th article, was not binding, and that the action was maintainable. Edwards v. Aberayron Mutual Ship Insurance Co., 1 Q. B. D. 563 ; 34 L. T. 457 ; 3 Asp. M. C. 154—Ex. Ch. Reversing 44 L. J., Q. B. 67 ; 23 W. R. 304.

Arbitration Clause—Jurisdiction of Court.]—A clause in a policy that in case of dispute the matter shall go to arbitration does not oust the jurisdiction of the courts. Kill v. Hollister, 1 Wils. 129.

g. Pleading.

Claims—Voyage.]—On a policy at and from Pernambuco, or any other port or ports in the Brazils to London, "beginning the adventure from the loading the goods on board the ship on the termination of her cruise, and preparing for her voyage to London." The ship, on the termination of her cruise, touched at Pernambuco; but failing to procure a cargo there she proceeded for St. Salvador, and was lost on her voyage thither. The voyage is well described in a declaration on the policy as from Pernambuco to London. Lambert v. Liddard, 1 Marsh. 149; 5 Taunt. 480; 15 R. R. 557.

In an action on a policy, the declaration stated that after the making of the policy the ship sailed; the evidence was, that she sailed before: —Held, that the variance was immaterial. Peppin v. Solomons, 5 Term Rep. 496.

Goods were insured at and from Mogadore to London; the declaration averred "that after the loading of the goods the ship departed on her intended voyage, and while in the course of her voyage was lost by perils of the sea": —Held, that this was a material allegation, and therefore the ship having been lost while at her moorings, and before the cargo was completed, the insured could not recover. Abitol v. Bristow, 2 Marsh. 157; 6 Taunt. 464.

—— Losses.]—Where a declaration states a total loss occasioned by the sale of the ship in a port of refuge, to which she had been driven through injuries by storms, and at which port the captain sold her, because he had no sufficient funds to repair her:— Held, that the declaration was good as sufficiently stating a loss by perils of the sea; and that the plaintiff, the insured, might recover for a partial loss on such a declaration. Devaux v. Astell, 4 Jur. 1135.

In an action on a policy, the court refused to allow a count on a loss by perils of the sea together with a count on a loss by barratry, or to restrain the defendant from setting up, as a defence to the former count, that the loss was occasioned by barratry. Blyth v. Shepherd, 1 D. (N.S.) 880; 9 M. & W. 763; 11 L. J., Ex. 293; 6 Jur. 489.

A partial loss of freight may be recovered upon a declaration alleging a total loss. Benson v. Chapman, 8 C. B. 950; 2 H. L. Cas. 696; 13 Jur. 969.

In an action against an insurer for a total loss of the ship, the plaintiff may recover for a partial loss. Gardiner v. Crossdale, 1 W. Bl. 128; 9 Burr. 904.

A declaration on a policy stated that the defendants were assurers of ships, and "thereupon the plaintiffs by certain persons, using and carrying on business and in the policy designated by the names, style and firm of Dewar & Culliford, the agents of the plaintiffs in that behalf," made with the defendants a policy purporting that the persons so using, and in the policy designated and described by the name, style and firm of Dewar & Culliford, as agents, as well in their own names as for others, so did make assurance. The declaration then stated that the ship was stranded, that the waters flowed over the corn, goods, &c., which became thereby wetted, damaged and spoiled, whereby the plaintiffs sustained an average loss on the corn to a large amount, and thereby the corn, &c., became of no use and value to the plaintiffs:— Held, that it was not bad on the ground that it did not show the amount that the defendants became liable to pay by reason of the average loss, nor on the ground of its not stating, with certainty, whether the plaintiffs meant a total or only a partial loss. Sturge v. Hahn, 4 Ex. 646; 19 L. J., Ex. 119.

Traverse in Conjunction.]—Assumpsit upon a policy of insurance wherein the defendant assured, lost or not lost, from London to the Mediterranean and back to London upon the "M." and her tackle, &c., valued at 300*l.* The declaration averred that the said ship, tackle, apparel, ordnance munition, artillery boat, and other furniture were by perils of the sea, sunk and destroyed. The defendant pleaded in bar that the ship and her apparel arrived, and traversed without this, that the said ship, tackle, &c. were sunk and destroyed. The plaintiff demurred in law, on the ground that the traverse was in the conjunctive, that the said ship and &c., was sunk and destroyed. Judgment for the plaintiff. Goram v. Sweeting, 2 Wms. Saund. 202, 205.

—— Conditions precedent.]—K. and N. declared in an action against a company for insurance on the freight of goods to be carried in a ship, on a deed-poll, sealed with the seal of the company; which deed recited that K. had represented to the company that he was interested in or authorised as owner, agent or otherwise, to make the assurance after mentioned with the company, and had covenated to pay 12*l.* 12*s.* to them as a premium at four per cent. for the assurance; and it was agreed that in consideration of the 12*l.* 12*s.* the capital stock and funds of the company should, according to the provisions of the deed of settlement of the company, be liable to make good and be applied to pay all such losses and damages thereinafter described, as might happen to the subject-matter of the policy in respect of the sum of 300*l.*; and it was declared that touching the adventures and perils which the capital stock and funds of the company were made liable to by the assurance, they were of the sea, &c.; and the capital stock and funds of the company should bear the charges of assurance in proportion to the sum assured, and that the interest of the assured was on freight; provided, nevertheless, that the capital stock and the funds of the company should alone be liable according to the provisions of the deed of settlement, to answer and make good all claims and demands whatsoever under or by virtue of the policy, and that no shareholder of the company, his or her heirs, executors or administrators, should be in anywise subject or liable to any claims or demands, or be in anywise charged by reason of the policy, beyond the amount of his or her shares in the capital stock of the company; it being one of the original and fundamental principles of the company, that the responsibility of the individual proprietors should in all cases be limited to their shares in the capital stock. That thereupon the company became insurers to the plaintiffs for 300*l.* on the freight to the amount of all the money insured; and that the vessel with the goods on board was wholly lost by perils of the sea; and the plaintiffs thereby lost the freight of the goods. Judgment was entered for 300*l.* in their favour: —Held, first, that the declaration was not deficient for omitting to allege that the company had funds; for that (1), it appearing that defendants were a corporation, the remedy against them would only be upon the corporate funds, and the proviso made no difference in this respect, but the action lay whether there were funds or not. And (2), if the existence of the funds had been a condition necessary to the maintenance of the action, it lay upon the company to deny, and not upon the plaintiffs to assert, the existence of the funds, which, in default of denial, would be presumed to exist. Sunderland Marine Insurance Co. v. Kearney, 16 Q. B. 925; 20 L. J., Q. B. 417; 15 Jur. 1006; —Ex. Ch.

Held, secondly, that it was not a valid objection that the contract appeared to be collateral, and the demand not liquidated, and an action of debt therefore not maintainable; for that (1), the liability of the action was direct, and not merely contingent on the existence or non-existence of the funds; and (2), the declaration claiming 300*l.* for a total loss, which after verdict must be assumed as a fact, the claim was for the liquidated sum of 300*l.* Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the action was maintainable by K. and N. jointly, because the deed poll enured to the benefit of all interested in the assurance, and the declaration showed the interest to be in K. and N. jointly. Ib.

The rules of a society established for mutual assurance of traders against bad debts, after stipulating for the payment of premiums, provided that, "if the premiums on any policy should not be paid within fifteen days after the same should fall due, the directors might with the approbation of the council, either declare such policy void, or enforce the payment of the premiums." In a declaration on a policy, the plaintiff averred that he had done all things necessary on his part, and had been ready and willing to do all things according to the policy, rules and regulations, which it was necessary that he should be ready and willing to do, and that all things had happened which it was necessary should happen, to entitle him to be paid by the society the loss after mentioned, and that a reasonable time for payment thereof had elapsed. It then went on to aver that a loss had been incurred, and that the society had refused to pay:—Held, that this general averment was sufficient, without showing the various steps required by the rules of the society to entitle the assured to recover. Bamberger v. Commercial Credit Mutual Assurance Co. or Society, 14 C. B. 676; 3 C. L. R. 568; 24 L. J., C. P. 115; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 500.

The society pleaded, that after the making of the policy and more than fifteen days before action, a premium became payable by the plaintiff and was not duly paid, whereupon the directors of the society, with the approbation of the council, cancelled the policy and declared the same void, whereof the plaintiff had notice: —Held, that the plea disclosed a sufficient answer to the claim. Ib.

The defendant, and four others, were jointly sued upon a policy upon a ship and cargo for a total loss. The declaration was in the usual form, and alleged an agreement between the plaintiff and the insurers, "that the capital stock and funds of the company should alone be liable to answer and make good all claims and demands whatsoever under or by virtue of the policy;" and that no proprietor of the company should in anywise be liable, or charged, by reason of the policy, beyond the amount of his shares in the capital stock of the company. There was an express averment that sufficient capital, stock and funds of the company existed to pay the amount of the policy:—Held, that notwithstanding the above stipulation, the declaration showed that the policy had been properly declared upon as a joint contract. Dowdall v. Hallett, 18 Q. B. 2; 21 L. J., Q. B. 98; 16 Jur. 462—Ex. Ch.

Partial Loss—Unliquidated Damages.]—An action for a partial loss under a policy of insurance, even after adjustment, is an action for unliquidated damages, so that set-off cannot be pleaded. Castelli v. Boddington, 1 El. & Bl. 66; 22 L. J., Q. B. 5; 17 Jur. 457; 1 W. R. 20. Affirmed on other points, 1 E. & B. 879; 23 L. J., Q. B. 31; 1 C. L. R. 281; 17 Jur. 781; 1 W. R. 359—Ex. Ch.

Semble, unliquidated losses on a policy of insurance cannot be made the subject of set off. Thompson v. Redman, 11 M. & W. 487; 2 D. (N.S.) 1028; 12 L. J., Ex. 310.

Policy under Seal—Simple Contract.]—Declaration on a policy sealed with the insuring company's seal as upon a simple contract. Semble, the declaration is good. See Roper v. English and Scottish Marine Insurance Co., cited, 1 Arn. Insurance (6th ed.) 157, n.

Evidence of Cost of Salvage.]—Although it is not particularly laid in the declaration, the expense of salvage may be given in evidence in an action on the policy. Cary v. King, see Ca. t. Hard. 304.

Averment of Order to Effect Policy—Proof.]—Plaintiffs declared on a policy averring that they were persons resident in Great Britain who received the order for and effected the insurance; this held to be a material averment and not sustained by a letter received by them after the policy was effected, directing them to insure; although the policy was originally on goods on board the "Ann," or ships, or by whatsoever other name the ship should be named; and the plaintiffs upon receipt of the letter procured a memorandum to be made on the policy signed by the defendant, declaring the interest to be on board the "Herald," the ship mentioned in the letter. Bell v. Janson, 1 M. & Sel. 203.

Insurance by Agent—Declaration.]—Action on policy by plaintiff as agent for owner of cargo insured; there being an indorsement that the policy was effected in trust for the cargo owner:—Held, that a declaration on the policy generally, without setting out the agency, could be proved by evidence of the above facts. Peron v. Frone, 2 Barnard. 304.

Pleading—Release.]—Declaration on a policy on board a ship at the suit of D., W. and A.; W. alleged that the policy was made by them as well in their own names, as for and in the name of every other person to whom the same did appertain; and it was averred that one T. L., and the plaintiff A. W., or one of them, were or was then and from thenceforth until the loss interested in the goods. Defendant pleaded a release by D. W. for himself and his partner A. W. The plaintiffs replied setting out on oyer the deed of release, by which it appeared that the intention of the parties was to release only the sums set opposite to their names, and the declaration averred that such moneys were due upon other contracts. Semble, that the replication was bad as argumentative. Held, also, that the plea was good. Wilkinson v. Lindo, 7 M. & W. 81.

Defences.] — A declaration stated that the plaintiff made a policy with an assurance company, upon the goods, body, tackle, apparel, &c., of a ship valued at 5,000*l.*; that the ship and freight were warranted free from average, under 3*l.* per cent., unless general, or the ship was stranded; that the capital stock and funds of the company should alone be liable to make good all claims and demands under that policy, and that no proprietor of the company should be charged by reason of that policy beyond the amount of his share in the stock of the company; that the company became insurers to the plaintiff for 1,500*l.*, and the policy was signed by the defendants as directors of the company, and in consideration of the payment of the premium, at their request, the defendants undertook that the company should perform all things contained in the policy to be performed by them; the declaration alleged that the ship ran aground, that it was necessary for her safety to let go the larboard bower anchor and kedge anchor, and to cut away the cables from the anchors; that the anchors and cables were left in the sea, and lost to the plaintiff; that afterwards the ship was further strained, damaged and broken, whereby the plaintiff sustained a general average loss. Second breach, that the ship being stranded and damaged, the plaintiff sustained an average loss on the ship, her masts, ropes and cables, to a larger amount than 3*l.* per cent. on all the moneys insured thereon, to wit, to the amount of 50*l.* by the hundred for each and every hundred insured thereon, whereby the company became liable to pay to the plaintiff a certain sum of money, to wit, 200*l.*, being their proportion of the average loss in respect of the 1,500*l.*, and that though the funds of the company were sufficient, the defendants had not paid the losses. The defendants pleaded that the anchors and cables were not left in the sea, and lost; also that the plaintiff had not suffered an average loss on the ship or vessel, her masts, ropes and cables, to the amount of 3*l.* per cent. on all the moneys issued thereon: —Held, first, that the pleas were bad, the traverses being too large. Dawson v. Wrench, 3 Ex. 359; 6 D. & L. 474; 18 L. J., Ex. 229.

Held, secondly, that the stipulation that the ship and freight should be free from average under 3*l.* per cent. was not a proviso which required to be pleaded, and that the second breach was bad, as it did not distinctly aver that the loss was more than 3*l.* per cent. on the value of the ship. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the defendants were entitled to judgment on the second breach, notwithstanding the plea was bad. Ib.

Held, lastly, that the defendants were personally responsible, it being averred that the funds were sufficient, and that it was not necessary to allege notice to them of the loss. Ib.

To a declaration on a valued time policy, averring a total loss, the defendant pleaded only a plea of fraudulent concealment:—Held, that a total loss was not admitted; for if that allegation had been traversed the plaintiff might have recovered as for a partial loss. King v. Walker, 3 H. & C. 209; 33 L. J., Ex. 325; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 43; 13 W. R. 232—Ex. Ch.

To a declaration on a policy alleging that the insurance was made by A., as agent for the plaintiff, and on his account, and for his use and benefit, and that A. received the order for and effected the insurance as such agent, the defendant pleaded the policy was not made by A. as agent for the plaintiff, or on his account, or for his use and benefit, and that A. did not receive the order for or effect the insurance as such agent: — Held, bad, on special demurrer, as amounting to non assumpsit. Redmond v. Smith, 7 Man. & G. 457; 2 D. & L. 280; 8 Scott (N.R.) 250; 13 L. J., C. P. 159; 8 Jur. 711.

The two companies, incorporated pursuant to 6 Geo. 1, c. 18, for the purpose of granting marine insurances, are empowered by 11 Geo. 1, c. 30, s. 43, in all actions of covenant, on any policy of assurance under their common seal, to plead generally that they have not broken the covenants of the policy:—Held, that this right of pleading was not taken away by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, s. 3, which repeals so much of any act, commonly called public, local and personal, or of any act of a local or personal nature, whereby a party is enabled to plead the general issue, and give any special matter in evidence. Carr v. Royal Exchange Assurance Corporation, 1 B. & S. 956; 31 L. J., Q. B. 93; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 384; 6 L. T. 105; 10 W. R. 352.

In an action on a policy, with the common memorandum, on a share in the Atlantic Telegraph Company, alleging a total loss of the cable by perils of the seas, the defendant pleaded that the subject-matter of the insurance was not, nor was any part thereof, during the continuance of the risk covered by the policy, lost by the perils insured against or any of them. Issue having been joined on this plea, the plaintiff recovered in respect of a small portion of the cable only, the rest not having been lost by the perils insured against, the damages on the portion recovered exceeding 3*l.* per cent. on the value of the policy: —Held, that the plea might be taken distributively, and that the verdict should accordingly be entered for the defendant as to all the claim, except so far as related to the loss of the portion of the cable on which the plaintiff succeeded. Paterson v. Harris, 2 B. & S. 814; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 173.

Replications.]—A declaration stated that S., before his bankruptcy, made a policy on the ship "Defiance," that the ship and goods should be valued at 2,500*l.*, and averred a loss and non-payment by the defendant of the sum insured. Plea, that the official assignee of S. made another policy upon the ship and goods, valued at 2,500*l.*, in case of loss on average, the adjustment to be made irrespective of any other assurance, and averring the identity of the ship, the interest, the risk, the amount of the interest and loss and that the insurers had paid the plaintiffs, who had accepted 2,500*l.*, as the agreed indemnity for the loss, and which was a full indemnity. Replication, de injuriâ:—Held, that the replication was bad, as the plea amounted to a discharge, and not to an excuse. Morgan v. Price, 4 Ex. 615; 19 L. J., Ex. 201.

2. RIGHTS OF INSURERS.

Action by Assignee of Policy—Set-off by Insurers of Claims against Assured.]—In an action by the assignee of a policy of marine insurance, the insurers are not entitled to set off a debt incurred with them by the assured for premiums on policies effected with them by the assured after the date of the assignment; for the claim under a policy for a loss is for unliquidated damages to which no set-off could be pleaded at law under the statutes of set-off in an action by the assured, nor in equity in a suit by the assignee, and therefore the debt incurred by the assured is not a "defence" open to the insurers under 31 & 32 Vict. c. 86, s. 1, that statute being intended merely to amend procedure and not to alter the rights of the parties to the policy; nor is the debt incurred by the assured the subject of "set-off" or "counter-claim" within the meaning of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1876, Ord. XIX. r. 3. Pellas v. The Neptune Marine Insurance Co., 49 L. J., C. P. 153; 5 C. P. D. 34; 28 W. R. 405; 4 Asp. M. C. 215—C. A.

Cancellation of Policy.]—Two actions were brought by the same plaintiff against an insurance company upon two marine insurance policies. After issue had been joined, an order was made staying one action until the other had been tried, on the terms of the defendants being bound in both by the result of the one which should be tried. But the plaintiff was not to be bound. The company, who resisted payment upon the allegation that the policies had been obtained by fraud, afterwards filed a bill in equity to restrain the actions, and to have the policies delivered up and cancelled. No injunction was moved for. An order was made in the suit staying the proceedings until after the decision of the action. Ultimately the action which was tried was decided in favour of the company, on the ground that the policy had been obtained by fraud. The plaintiff at law then delivered up both policies to the company. Upon the suit coming on for hearing:—Held, that a decree must be made for cancellation of both policies; and that the defendant must pay the costs of the suit. London and Provincial Insurance Co. v. Seymour, 43 L. J., Ch. 120; L. R. 17 Eq. 88; 29 L. T. 641; 22 W. R. 201; 2 Asp. M. C. 169.

After Payment of Valued Policy.]—Compensation paid aliunde to the assured, in respect of a loss not covered by a valued policy, cannot be recovered by an underwriter who has paid as for a total loss; since the loss insured against is not diminished by the compensation, and the assured is not estopped from alleging that there was an excess in value above the amount agreed in the policy. Burnand v. Rodocanachi, 51 L. J., Q. B. 548; 7 App. Cas. 333; 47 L. T. 277; 31 W. R. 65; 4 Asp. M. C. 576—H. L. (E.) And see Blaauwpot v. Da Costa, 1 Eden, 130.

Insurer, after satisfaction, stands in place of the assured as to the goods, salvage and restitution in proportion for what he paid. Randal v. Cockran, 1 Ves. 98.

And see XI. ABANDONMENT, supra, cols. 1294 seq., XV. SUBROGATION, supra, col. 1313.

Salvage.]—A ship being insured from London to Carolina, was taken by a Spaniard, and retaken by an English privateer, who carried her into Boston, where no person appearing to give security, she was condemned and sold, and after the recaptors had their moiety, the residue remained in the court of admiralty at Boston. Defendant brought an action at law on the policy and recovered; and plaintiff by his injunction bill insisted that defendant ought to have recovered no more than a moiety of the loss. The court refused the injunction, for as defendant had offered to relinquish the salvage, he was entitled to recover the whole money insured. By 13 Geo. 2, c. 4, s. 18, the recapture of a ship is the revesting of the owner's property, so that it is doubtful whether the act can operate, when insurances are made, interest or no interest. Salvage must be deducted out of the money recovered by the policy, if come to the hands of the assured. Pringle v. Hartley, 3 Atk. 195.

Separate Policies on Ship and Freight—Payment for Total Loss on Ship—Right of Underwriters on Ship to Damages recovered by Assured for Unearned Freight.]—The defendants effected a policy of insurance on their ship for 1,000*l.* with the plaintiffs; but insured the freight with other underwriters. The ship, while proceeding to her port of loading under a charterparty, was run into and damaged by another ship. The defendants abandoned her to the plaintiffs, who settled with them as for a total loss. The defendants afterwards recovered in the admiralty division against the owner of the other ship, damages in respect of the loss of the ship, and also of the freight which had not been earned:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover the damages recovered in respect of the loss of freight, such damages being in the nature of salvage on freight; for freight which has not been earned is not an incident of the ownership of the ship, and does not therefore pass to the underwriters, who have paid as for a total loss on the ship. Sea Insurance Co. v. Hadden or Hodden, 53 L. J., Q. B. 252; 13 Q. B. D. 706; 50 L. T. 657; 32 W. R. 841; 5 Asp. M. C. 230—C. A.

Underwriter after Payment under Policy entitled to Damages for Collision recovered by Assured.]—A.'s ship damaged B.'s. B., after he had received a sum of money under a policy which he had effected on his ship, brought an action against A., and recovered damages for the injury done to his ship:—Held, that the underwriter was entitled to the amount recovered for the sum paid on the policy. White v. Dobinson, 14 Sim. 273.

Ships of same Owner in Collision—Right of Action in own Name.]—There is no independent right in underwriters to maintain in their own name, and without reference to the person insured, an action for damage to the thing insured. Simson v. Thomson, 3 App. Cas. 279; 38 L. T. 1; 3 Asp. M. C. 567.

Although the underwriters have paid for a total loss, and are entitled to all the rights in the injured ship which belong to its owner, yet if that owner cannot assert a right for damages against the wrongdoer, neither can the underwriters. Ib.

Two ships, the property of the same owner, collided; the underwriters paid the insurance effected on the lost ship, and then claimed to rank pari passu with the owners of cargo destroyed, in the distribution of the fund lodged in court by the owner as proprietor of the ship which did the damage:—Held, that the underwriters had no such right under the circumstances of the case. Ib.

The underwriters' right must be asserted in the name of the person insured, but if he is the person who has caused the damage, the right cannot be maintained against himself—Per Lord Cairns. Ib.

The underwriters of the lost ship have no right of action against the owner of the ship that did the mischief, as he himself had no such right, inasmuch as, being the owner of both vessels, any right of action he had must be a right of action against himself, which is an absurdity, and a thing unknown to the law—Per Lord Penzance. Ib.

Damages.]—Underwriters have been held to be entitled to the damages recovered from a colliding vessel in case of a valued policy, though the amount insured is less than the actual value of the vessel insured. North of England Iron Steamship Insurance Co. v. Armstrong, 39 L. J., Q. B. 81; L. R. 5 Q. B. 81; 21 L. T. 822; 18 W. R. 520.

Interest Vesting in.]—In all cases of insurance upon a ship, in which the subject is not totally annihilated, the assured claiming for a total loss, must give up to the underwriters all the remains of the property recovered, together with all the benefit or advantage incident to it; or rather such property vests in the underwriters. Stewart v. Greenock Marine Insurance Co., 2 H. L. Cas. 159; 1 Macq. H. L. 382.

Defence of Suit in Admiralty.]—Insurers admitted to defend a suit in admiralty, in default of appearance by the master or owners. The Regina del Mare, Br. & Lush. 315.

Policy set aside for Fraud — First Underwriter signing as Decoy Duck.]—Where the first underwriter signs the policy as a decoy duck, under an agreement between himself and the assured that he shall not be called upon to pay in case of loss, the policy will be set aside for fraud. Wilson v. Ducket, 3 Burr. 1361.

Action by Underwriters to restrain Holders from Proceeding on Policy.]—If a policy is liable to be completely avoided, as on the ground of fraud or misrepresentation, a court of equity has jurisdiction to direct its delivery up and cancellation, but it has no jurisdiction to direct the cancellation of a policy to any claim on which there is a good legal defence, or to declare that there is no liability upon it. If there is danger of the evidence for the defence being lost, the remedy is, not an action for cancellation, but an action to perpetuate testimony. Brooking v. Maudslay, 57 L. J., Ch. 1001; 38 Ch. D. 636; 58 L. T. 852; 36 W. R. 664; 6 Asp. M. C. 296.

Contribution between Insurers—Wharfingers' and Merchants' Policies.]—See North British and Mercantile Insurance Co. v. London, Liverpool and Globe Insurance Co., 46 L. J., Ch. 537; 5 Ch. D. 569; 36 L. T. 629—C. A.

Assignment of Right of Action—Use of Name—Subrogation.]—A payment honestly made by insurers in satisfaction of a claim by the insured under a policy granted by the insurers is such a settlement of a claim made under the policy as entitles the insurers to the remedies available to the insured. And when the insured have given a formal assignment of all their rights and causes of action in respect of the property insured, with the stipulation that the assignment shall not authorise the use of the name of the insured, such an assignment is a legal chose in action under the Queensland Judicature Act (40 Vict. c. 86), which follows the English Judicature Act, 1873, s. 25, sub-s. 6. King v. Victoria Insurance Co., 65 L. J., P. C. 38; [1896] A. C. 250; 74 L. T. 206; 44 W. R. 592—P. C.

The respondents paid a claim in respect of a loss occasioned by the negligence of the government, represented by the appellant. The insured assigned to them, on receiving the amount of the claim, an assignment of all rights of action against the government, subject to the stipulation that the assignment should not authorise the use of the insured's name in legal proceedings:—Held, that there had been a valid assignment of a legal chose in action, and that it was not competent for the appellant to plead that the loss was not within the risks covered by the policy. Ib.

3. Bankruptcy.

Proof of debts arising upon insurance of ships must be against the separate, not joint estate. Angerstein, Ex parte, 1 Bro. C. C. 399. S. P., Lee, Ex parte, 1 Bro. C. C. 400.

Upon separate commission of bankruptcy the benefit of an insurance effected by bankrupt on his own account on joint property is not liable to joint creditors. Browne, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 136.

Upon a separate commission of bankruptcy, the benefit of an insurance effected by the bankrupt upon his own account on a ship of which he was joint owner is not liable to the joint creditors. Parry, Ex parte, 5 Ves. 575.

4. Interest Recoverable.

Before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 29, an underwriter on a policy was not liable to pay interest on the amount of his subscription, although he had no colourable ground for refusing to pay the loss, unless a distinct demand of the money had been made at an earlier period for that purpose. Bain v. Case, M. & M. 262; 3 Car. & P. 496. S. P., Kingston v. McIntosh, 1 Camp. 518.

5. Chancery Jurisdiction.

Action on Policy—Jurisdiction in Chancery—Demurrer.]—To a bill brought to recover a sum due upon a policy of insurance the defendants demurred, because the plaintiff's remedy was at law. Demurrer allowed. De Ghetoff v. London Assurance Co., 4 Bro. P. C. 436.

Chancery Jurisdiction.]—A bill was filed by the underwriter of a policy of insurance on a ship, to have the policy delivered up, on the ground of deviation and unseaworthiness, but only deviation being proved, the bill was dismissed. Thornton v. Knight, 16 Sim. 509; 13 Jur. 180.

In Case of Fraud.]—See Wilson v. Ducket, ante, col. 1333.

Early Actions on Policies of Assurance.]—Luster v. Cowell, 2 Keb. 430. Goram v. Fouke, 2 Keb. 722.

Mayor's Court of Bristol—Custom—Trial by Tales Jury.]—Action on policy in mayor's court of Bristol. There being a deficiency of jurymen, a tales was awarded and verdict for the plaintiff :—Held, in error, that the custom alleged as to trial by tales was not good. Paul v. Knight, 2 Keb. 222.

Court of Policies of Assurance.]—Prohibition refused where the defendant had appeared in the court of policies of assurance. Oyles v. Marshall, Style, 418.

Rule nisi for prohibition to court of assurances. Delbye v. Proudfoot, 1 Show. 396.

Plea of action brought for same cause in the court of assurances :—Held, no bar to an action at common law. Came v. Moy, 2 Sid. 121.

1. Retainer and Employment.

Joint and Several.]—Where a power of attorney, signed by the defendant, was given to fifteen persons by name, "jointly or separately, to sign and underwrite all such policies of assurance as they or any of them should jointly or separately think proper" :—Held, that this was to be construed as a joint and several authority ; and that the plaintiff might maintain an action on a policy underwritten by four of the persons therein named. Guthrie v. Armstrong, 1 D. & R. 248 ; 5 B. & Ald. 628.

Delegation.]—Semble, that under a power of attorney by A. to B. "to underwrite any policy of insurance not exceeding 100*l*., and to subscribe to the same his (A.'s) name, and to settle and adjust losses," although B. cannot delegate his whole authority to another, yet, having signed a slip for the policy, the signature of his clerk for him, and in his absence, to a policy made in pursuance thereof, is a good execution of the power, that being only a ministerial act, which he might authorise another to do for him, but he must himself execute the power in all matters in which his judgment and discretion are requisite. In the present case, the policy, after it was so executed by the clerk of B., having been shown to A., who then offered terms of settlement :—Held, that A. had adopted the act of B. Mason v. Joseph, 1 Smith, 406.

Where a party gave an order to a firm, consisting of several persons, to effect an insurance :—Held, that he was bound by an insurance effected by another firm, where both firms had several partners in common. Dickson v. Lodge, 1 Stark. 226 ; 18 R. R. 764.

Nature of Authority.]—A person, who has several times allowed an agent to subscribe policies in his name, is bound by such signature ; and evidence of his so having allowed it to be done, is sufficient without producing a power of attorney. Neal v. Erving, 1 Esp. 61 ; 5 R. R. 720.

The authority of a broker employed to effect a policy may be revoked after the underwriters have signed the slip, till such time as they have actually subscribed the policy ; and if the broker, having procured a slip to be written, on terms within the scope of his original authority receives an intimation from his principals, that they will not submit to these terms, and afterwards effects the policy, and pays the premiums to the underwriters, he can maintain no action against his principals for commission or for money paid. Warwick v. Slade, 3 Camp. 127 ; 13 R. R. 772.

A broker at Liverpool was authorised by his principal in London to underwrite in the name of the latter policies of marine insurance not exceeding 100*l*. on any one vessel. The broker underwrote a policy for 150*l*. It is well known in Liverpool that the amount for which a broker can underwrite the name of his principal is limited, but the limit is not disclosed. In an action on the policy :—Held, that the broker having exceeded his authority, and the contract being indivisible, the policy was void. Baines v. Ewing, 4 H. & C. 511 ; 35 L. J., Ex. 194 ; L. R. 1 Ex. 320 ; 14 L. T. 733 ; 14 W. R. 732.

—— To Cancel.]—The authority given to a broker, when he is to effect a policy, does not extend to warrant him in cancelling it. Xenos v. Wickham, 36 L. J., C. P. 313 ; L. R. 2 H. L. 296 ; 16 L. T. 800 ; 16 W. R. 38.

After the broker had prepared a slip, and the proposed insurer had accepted it, and had prepared a policy in accordance with it, a desire was expressed by him and assented to by the underwriter, that the policy should be cancelled, on which a cancellation was in form effected :—Held, that this was not effectual as to the assured, who had not, in fact, given the broker any authority to cancel the policy. Ib.

Usage as to Cancelling—Written Contract excludes.]—The usage of insurance brokers at Liverpool is that if, on the occasion of a policy for time being cancelled before the expiration of the time, the premium, or a part of it, is to be returned ; the return made only in respect of unbroken months ; but a contract made by a proposal in these terms : "We will thank you to render us a credit note for unexpired term, say from the 12th instant to the date of the expiration of the policy," and an acceptance in these : "Please to hand bearer stamped policies, &c., to put forward terms for cancelling," must be construed as having been made irrespective of and excluding the usage. Baines v. Woodfall, 6 C. B. (N.S.) 657 ; 28 L. J., C. P. 338 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 19.

2. Duty and Liability.

Negligence in Effecting.]—A broker who has neglected to insure the premium according to the directions of his principal, cannot set up as a defence, that he was directed also to insure against British capture ; for that is not a crime so as to render the whole insurance illegal, though it would be void pro tanto. Glaser v. Cowie, 1 M. & S. 52.

An agent who acts bonâ fide in effecting an insurance for his principal is not liable to be called upon by him because the insurance might possibly have been effected on better terms. Moore v. Mourgue, Cowp. 479.

It is gross negligence in an insurance broker employed to insure goods from a certain point in their voyage home, to effect a policy "at and from" that point, "beginning the adventure from the loading thereof on board." Park v. Hammond, 6 Taunt. 495; 2 Marsh. 189; 4 Camp. 344; Holt, 80; 16 R. R. 658.

Insurance brokers were ordered to effect a policy "at and from Teneriffe to London":—Held, that they were liable for not inserting in it a liberty "to touch and stay at all or any of the Canary Islands," that being usually inserted in policies from Teneriffe. Mallough v. Barber, 4 Camp. 150.

It is the duty of a broker, under an undertaking to effect a particular insurance, to give notice to his principal of his inability to effect it. Callander v. Oelrichs, 6 Scott, 761; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 58; 8 L. J., C. P. 25.

A broker, in pursuance of instructions previously received from Sunderland, effected a policy at Lloyd's at a time when a letter lay on his table at the coal exchange unopened, announcing the ship's loss:—Held, that the jury was warranted in finding that this was no such want of diligence as avoided the policy. Wake v. Atty, 4 Taunt. 493; 13 R. R. 660.

A broker effecting an insurance, omitted to communicate a material letter, by reason whereof the assured failed in actions against some underwriters, and offered the broker the defence of others; and on his refusal, without further consulting him, made restitution to others who had paid the losses without suit:—Held, that the assured might recover against the broker as well the amount of these losses so unpaid, as of the others. Maydew v. Forrester, 5 Taunt. 615; 15 R. R. 597.

If a merchant orders an insurance broker to effect a policy for time, on a cargo of corn, without giving any direction as to those with whom the policy is to be effected, and the insurance broker effects the policy with one of the chartered companies, by whose policies corn is warranted against partial losses, although the ship is stranded; upon a large partial loss happening upon this cargo after a stranding of the ship, the merchant cannot maintain an action against the insurance broker for not effecting the policy with private underwriters, who, by the common form of a policy, would have been liable for this partial loss. Comber v. Anderson, 1 Camp. 523.

Merchants in London receive from a stranger living abroad a bill of lading and letter requesting them to insure the goods. They decline to receive the goods or to do business for the consignor, but acting bonâ fide with a view to his interest indorse the bill to a friend of his, who afterwards fails with the proceeds in his hands:—Held, that the merchants were liable to the consignor for the amount. Corlett v. Gordon, 3 Camp. 472; 14 R. R. 813.

Indorsing Memoranda—Alteration of Voyage.]—An insurance broker had been employed by a merchant to procure policies to be underwritten upon a ship and cargo from L. to St. T., with leave to call at M. and T. On the arrival of the ship at M., the supercargo advised the merchant of an alteration in the course of the voyage. The merchant put the letter containing the information into the hands of the broker, with instructions to do the needful with it. The broker accordingly procured memorandums to be indorsed on the policies, containing permission to call at certain places not mentioned in the policies. The vessel was lost at a place not covered by the memorandums. In an action against the broker for negligence in not having procured alterations conformable with the instructions contained in the letter:—Held, that the evidence of insurance brokers and underwriters as to what alterations of the policies a skilful insurance broker ought, in their judgment, to have procured, having in his possession the policies, the invoices of the goods, and the bills of lading, and also the letter of the supercargo, and being instructed to do the needful, was admissible. Chapman v. Walton, 3 M. & Scott, 389; 10 Bing. 57; 2 L. J., P. C. 210.

Negligence in not Effecting—Measure of Damages.]—A., a merchant at Seville, wrote to B., his agent at Liverpool, desiring him to insure a cargo of fruit to that place. B., acting bonâ fide, instructed one C., a person who had occasionally acted as A.'s agent in London, to get a policy effected there. C. for that purpose employed one D., an insurance broker, who effected the insurance in his own name, and afterwards received the amount of a loss from the underwriters, but retained it, claiming a lien for a debt due to him from C. in respect of premiums and commission on former transactions. In an action by A. against B. for negligently omitting to effect a good and available insurance upon the cargo, and neglecting to take steps to get the money, the judge, treating it as immaterial whether the letter of instructions from B. to C. had been shown to D. or not, ruled that B. had violated his duty as agent, by employing another agent in London instead of effecting the policy himself, and that he was responsible for the whole amount received from the underwriters by D.:—Held, that this was not the true measure of damages; for that if B.'s letter of instructions had been shown to D. at the time he was employed to effect the policy, he could acquire no lien upon the proceeds for the debt due to him from C., and his unlawful detention of the money could not give A. a right of action against B. for the whole amount so received by D., though B. might be liable for some nominal damages in respect of the breach of his duty as agent, and therefore that fact ought to have been ascertained. Cahill v. Dawson, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 106; 26 L. J., C. P. 253; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1128.

Question for Jury—Time for Effecting.]—In an action against an insurance broker for not effecting an insurance pursuant to his retainer, the declaration, after stating his employment to cause an insurance to be made on the plaintiff's ship tackle, &c., and his acceptance of such employment, alleged, by way of breach, that, although a reasonable time had elapsed, and before the loss of the ship, yet he did not nor would within such time cause to be made, according to the custom of merchants, insurance upon the ship, tackle, &c.; nor cause the same to be insured; nor a policy of insurance to be made, subscribed, and underwritten thereon from and against the perils of the sea and other risks usually borne by underwriters; nor did nor would cause the plaintiff to be insured in respect of the ship, tackle, &c., from and against such perils; nor did nor would cause to be made thereon any insurance or policies of insurance subscribed or underwritten; but he so to do, wrongfully and in breach of his duty and retainer, wholly neglected and refused. It appeared that the broker had, shortly after he had been so employed, contracted with the Newcastle Commercial Insurance Company for an insurance on the plaintiff's ship, &c., and shortly afterwards obtained from the secretary of the company what purported to be copies of the policies. Stamped policies were afterwards subscribed, but not given out, it being the practice of the company to retain them in their possession until wanted in consequence of a loss. There was no precise evidence as to the time when the stamped policies were actually executed; the evidence being, that it was usual to execute them very shortly after the order. To a demand for the policies on the part of the plaintiff after the loss of the vessel, the broker sent an evasive reply. It was left to the jury to say, whether or not the broker had procured the policies to be executed within a reasonable time. The jury having found for the plaintiff, and the judge being satisfied with the verdict, the court refused to grant a new trial. Turpin v. Bilton, 6 Scott (N.R.) 447; 5 Man. & G. 455; 12 L. J., C. P. 167; 7 Jur. 950.

Agents.]—An agent employed to ship and insure goods having wilfully omitted to insure them is liable to the same extent as an underwriter would have been had he insured. Smith v. Price, 2 F. & F. 748.

The owners of the goods having, after a partial loss, agreed with the agent to sell to him the goods at a price less than the invoice price, asserting that they were worth the invoice price, and also that the loss was total:—Held, that as these were matters rather of opinion than of fact, the statements would not, even if untrue, amount to fraud, which would avoid the agreement. Ib.

—— Nature of Authority.]—On the employment of any mercantile or commercial agent, it is for the jury, in the absence of any express evidence of the nature of his duties on such employment, to judge, from their own knowledge, what those duties are; and thus, on the employment of an insurance agent to effect an insurance, or get it effected, it is for the jury, in the absence of any express evidence, to judge whether he was employed to get the insurance effected, or only to place the business in the hands of brokers to effect it; and whether he is responsible for their neglect or default, especially in not getting it effected with responsible insurers, and in not informing his employer, the insured, who they are, in order to enable him to sue them. Hurrell v. Bullard, 3 F. & F. 445.

Correspondents.]—A merchant abroad, having effects in the hands of his correspondent here, may compel him to procure an insurance for him. Smith v. Lascelles, 2 Term Rep. 187; 1 R. R. 457. And see Wallace v. Tollfair, 2 Term Rep. 188, n.; and Smith v. Colligan, 2 Term Rep. 288, n.

If a merchant here has been accustomed to procure insurances for his correspondent abroad in the usual course of trade, the latter has a right to expect an insurance at the hands of the former, unless some previous notice is given to the contrary. Ib.

If a merchant abroad sends bills of lading to his correspondent here, and at the same time gives directions to procure an insurance, the latter cannot accept the bills of lading without obeying the orders to insure. Ib.

If a merchant abroad, interested in goods and the freight of a cargo, mortgages them to his creditor here, for payment of money at a certain day, and by letter, inclosing the bills of lading, directs him to insure; the latter will be liable to an action for not insuring, notwithstanding the mortgage has become absolute before the letter is received. Ib. See also as to neglect in reinsuring, Great Western Insurance Co. of New York v. Cunliffe, post, col. 1345.

Liability of Broker for Premiums—Promise by Assured to Pay].—See Universe Insurance Co. of Milan v. Merchants Marine Insurance Co., ante, col. 1311.

3. Authority to Pay and Receive Losses.

To Pay—Not Implied.]—An insurance broker has no implied authority to pay the assured losses, either total or partial, for the underwriter who employs him. Bell v. Auldjo, 4 Dougl. 48.

If an insurance broker, when a loss happens upon a policy which he has effected, pays the assured the full amount of the money subscribed, he cannot recover back any part of it, upon the ground that, before the loss happened, one of the underwriters upon the policy had become insolvent, and that he was not aware of the fact when he paid the money. Edgar v. Bumstead, 1 Camp. 411; 10 R. R. 713.

If an insurance broker, living at a distance from his principal, upon a loss happening, gives him credit in account for the money due from the underwriters, he cannot a considerable time after make a demand upon him for the amount of the sums subscribed by several of the underwriters who have become insolvent without paying. Jameson v. Swainstone, 2 Camp. 546, n.; 11 R. R. 794, n.

The plaintiff instructed a broker to insure his ship; the broker signed a policy on behalf of the defendant, an underwriter. The ship was lost, and the plaintiff received from the defendant a credit note for payment in respect of the loss. Credit notes are usually paid within a month from their date. At the time of signing the policy, and also of the adjustment, the broker had money of the defendant sufficient to pay the loss. Nearly three months after the credit note was given the broker stopped payment. The plaintiff then applied to the defendant for the amount of the loss:—Held, that the plaintiff had not induced the defendant to believe that he looked to the broker for payment, and that the defendant was liable. Macfarlane v. Giannacopolo, 3 H. & N. 860; and see X. Losses, ante, cols. 1266 seq.

—— Notice on whose behalf Policy Effected—Overplus.]—Insurance brokers who have effected a policy, without notice that it is not on account of the person from whom they receive the order, have no right to pay the overplus of the policy moneys remaining after deduction of their balance to the agent, and if they do so the amount may still be recovered by the principal. Mann v. Forrester, 4 Camp. 60; 15 R. R. 724.

against agent of insured for money had and received, being money paid to the agent by underwriters for a loss, which afterwards was ascertained to be a foul loss. The money had been passed in account to the principal, but no bills accepted or new credit given in respect of it:—Held, that the plaintiff could recover. Buller v. Harrison, 2 Cowp. 565.

To Receive.]—An action is maintainable by an assured part owner of a vessel, against an insurance broker, who has received from the underwriters the full amount of the sums subscribed on a total loss, although there are several other persons interested as part owners, and who had given the broker notice of their interest, where the plaintiff insured on the whole ship generally, by means of his captain, who gave the order for effecting the insurance. Roberts v. Ogilby, 9 Price, 269; 23 R. R. 761.

Where a person employed by shipowners, as their agent, effected a policy, and represented himself as the principal to the brokers, who cause such insurance to be effected:—Held, that where the brokers received the amount of the loss from the underwriters, and paid it over to the agent, they were not liable to the owners for money had and received, although part of the money was paid to the agent after they were informed of his having acted in that capacity. Bell v. Jutting, 1 Moore, C. P. 155; 19 R. R. 533.

Where a broker in whose name a policy under seal was effected, brought an action thereon, and the defendants pleaded payment to the plaintiff, according to the tenor and effect of the policy, and the proof was, that, after the loss happened, the assurers paid the amount to the broker by allowing him credit for premiums due from him to them:—Held, that, although that was no payment as between the assured and assurers, it was a good payment as between the plaintiff on the record and the defendants; and, therefore, an answer to the action. Gibson v. Winter, 5 B. & Ad. 96; 2 N. & M. 737.

—— Authority to take Payment by Bill.]—An insurance broker, who is authorised to receive payments from underwriters on behalf of his principal, has no authority to receive a three months' bill in payment of a loss. A bill given under such circumstances then and forthwith discounted by the agents and honoured at maturity, is not good payment to the principal. The Nether Holme, Hine v. Steamship Insurance Syndicate, 11 R. 777; 72 L. T. 79; 7 Asp. M. C. 558—C. A.

—— Custom.—The plaintiff, a shipbuilder, in London, employed W., an insurance broker, to effect a policy upon a ship at Lloyd's, and after the happening of a loss, gave W. the ship's papers, for the purpose of enabling him to adjust the loss with the underwriters. The policy was effected in W.'s name, and he retained possession of it. An adjustment having taken place, the loss was settled, in accordance with a usage prevailing at Lloyd's, which was found to be generally known to merchants and shipowners, but which the jury found was not known to the plaintiff, who had merely left the policy in W.'s hands for safe custody, by the underwriter setting off the amount payable by him upon the policy against the balance due to him from the broker, for premiums on other policies effected by him:—Held, that although the plaintiff was estopped from denying that the broker had authority to receive the amount due from the underwriter on the policy in money, he was not bound by the usage, and consequently that he was entitled to recover the amount of the policy against the underwriter, notwithstanding such settlement. Sweeting v. Pearce, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 534; 30 L. J., C. P. 109; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 806; 5 L. T. 79; 9 W. R. 343—Ex. Ch.

Collecting Policy Moneys.]—If a broker keeps the policy in his possession he is presumed to have promised to collect, and he is bound to use diligence in collecting the policy moneys upon the happening of a loss. Bousfield v. Cresswell, 2 Camp. 545; 11 R. R. 794.

4. Set-Off.

Bankruptcy.]—Where defendants, insurance brokers, effected policies, some in the name and on account of their own firm, others in the name of their own firm but on account of principals, and others in the name and on account of principals, for whom they acted under a del credere commission without the knowledge of the underwriters:—Held, in an action brought against them for premiums by assignees of one of the underwriters who had become bankrupt, that the defendants might set off losses and returns upon all such of the policies as were effected in the name of their own firm, but not upon the others; such losses and returns having become due before the bankrupt stopped payment, though they had never been adjusted by the bankrupt, but only by the other underwriters between the time of his stopping payment and committing the act of bankruptcy, on which adjustment the defendants had given their principals credit for the amount. Koster v. Eason, 2 M. & S. 117; 14 R. R. 603.

Where brokers effected in their own names policies on goods on account of principals, and accepted bills drawn on them on account of the goods which were consigned to them and lost before arrival:—Held, that they might set off such losses in an action brought by the assignees of the underwriter, since a bankrupt, for premiums, although they had no del credere commission, and the losses were not adjusted. Parker v. Beasley, 2 M. & S. 423; 15 R. R. 299.

Where a broker, indebted for premiums on policies subscribed by an underwriter, since bankrupt, had a del credere commission on one of the policies effected in the name of the assured, and expressed in the body thereof, whereon a loss happened before the bankruptcy, the broker being entrusted with the policy, though the broker paid the loss to the assured before the commission:—Held, that he could not set off that loss against premiums due to the assignees of the bankrupt. Peele v. Northcote, 7 Taunt. 478; 16 R. R. 655.

A commission del credere is an absolute engagement to the principal from the broker, and makes him liable in the first instance. A broker with such a commission may, under the general issue, set off a loss upon a policy happening before a bankruptcy, to an action by the assignees of the bankrupt for premiums upon various policies underwritten by him, and for which he had debited the broker; but such a loss cannot be proved under a notice of set-off. Grove v. Dubois, 1 Term Rep. 112; 16 R. R. 664, n.

A broker who is indebted to the assignees of a bankrupt for premiums due to them upon policies subscribed by the bankrupt before his bankruptcy is not entitled to set off returns of premium due upon the arrival of ships which have arrived since the bankruptcy. Goldschmidt v. Lyon, 4 Taunt. 534 ; 13 R. R. 670.

Where a bankrupt has underwritten a policy to a broker acting under a del credere commission, and a loss upon the policy happens before, but is not adjusted until after the bankruptcy, the broker may deduct the amount of the loss from his debt to the bankrupt's estate. Bize v. Dickenson, 1 Term Rep. 285.

—— Return of Premium.]—An insurance broker who is indebted to the assignees of a bankrupt cannot, without special authority, set off against that debt sums due from the underwriter for returns of premium, whether due before or after the bankruptcy. Minett v. Forrester, 4 Taunt. 541, n. ; 13 R. R. 676.

A., as agent for various persons, not under a del credere commission, effected policies with B. for his principals, upon which various losses and returns of premium were due. B. having become bankrupt :—Held, that in an action by his assignees against A. for the amount of the premiums, A. could set off the amounts of losses, or the returns of premium. Wilson v. Creighton, 3 Dougl. 132 ; cited, 1 Term Rep. 113.

Salvage Received—Losses on Other Policies.]—An underwriter at Lloyd's having become bankrupt, the assignee of the trustee in the bankruptcy sought to recover from the defendants, a firm of insurance brokers who had effected policies with the underwriter, moneys received by them as salvage in respect of losses paid in account by the underwriter before his bankruptcy. The defendants sought to set off a sum due to them from the underwriter for losses after the bankruptcy on other policies effected with him, which they had been compelled to pay to their principals, to whom they had guaranteed his solvency :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the amount of the salvage as being part of the estate of the bankrupt, and that the defendants had no right of set-off in respect of the amount of the losses paid by them. Elgood v. Harris, 66 L. J., Q. B. 53 ; [1896] 2 Q. B. 491 ; 75 L. T. 419 ; 45 W. R. 158 ; 3 Manson, 332 ; 8 Asp. M. C. 206.

Liability for Premiums on Policy Subscribed by Plaintiff.]—Defendant, an insurance broker, being sued for premiums received by him on policies subscribed by the plaintiff, was allowed to set off a loss on one of those policies effected in the name of the defendant at the request of T. on goods in which T. was interested, but on which the defendant had a lien to a greater amount than the set-off claimed. Davies v. Wilkinson, 4 Bing. 573 ; 1 M. & P. 502 ; 6 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 121 ; 29 R. R. 634.

Advances by Shipowner—Receipt of Policy Money—Passage Money—Freight.]—B., the owner of the ship in which A. was a passenger and owner of cargo, advanced 250*l.* to B. and took his receipt for the same. The ship was lost, and B. received from underwriters on A.'s cargo, 429*l.* A. sued B. for the same, and B. claimed to set off 95*l.* for A.'s passage money, 10*l.* for freight on the goods, and commission on the 250*l.* :—Held, that he could set-off the 95*l.* which had been paid by B. to the captain, unless it was proved to belong to B., but not the 10*l.* or commission. Leman v. Gordon, 8 Car. & P. 392.

5. Liability for Policy Moneys.

Liability to pay Policy Moneys—Credit in account with Underwriter.]—As soon as an insurance broker has received credit in account with an underwriter for a loss upon a policy, his principal may maintain money had and received against him to recover the amount ; and in such action if the underwriter's name is erased from the policy, the defendant can neither dispute the liability of the underwriter for the loss, nor his own receipt of the sum subscribed. Andrew v. Robinson, 3 Campb. 199 ; 13 R. R. 788.

If an insurance broker debit the underwriter with a loss, and take his acceptance for the balances of account between broker and underwriter, payable at a later date, then the loss would be payable in cash, the assured may sue the broker for money had and received, although the acceptance was dishonoured and the broker never received the money. Wilkinson v. Clay, 6 Taunt. 110 ; 4 Camp. 171 ; 10 R. R. 591.

Insurance by Mortgagee of Ship—Agent for Owners—Liability.]—A ship originally belonged to one of two partners and had been conveyed to B. for securing a debt, and B. became the sole registered owner of the ship, and afterwards as agent for both partners, insured the ship and freight, and charged them with the premiums ; and on a loss happening received the money from the underwriters :—Held, that he was accountable to the assignees of the surviving partner for the surplus, after payment of his own debt, and not to the executors of the deceased partner. Dixon v. Hamond, 2 B. & Ald. 310.

Illegal Insurance—Moneys received by Brokers.]—A broker having received the moneys payable under an illegal policy effected by him on behalf of his principal shall not be allowed to set up the illegality of the contract as a defence to an action for money had and received brought against him by his principal. Tenant v. Elliott, 1 Bos. & P. 3 ; 4 R. R. 526.

Bankruptcy—Mutual credit—Broker's lien.]—A. employed B., a broker, to effect insurances and to sell goods, and left the policies in his hands. A. being indebted to B. for premiums and having obtained an advance upon goods in B.'s hands for sale, and also upon his general credit, became bankrupt. Afterwards a loss happened and B. received the amount from the underwriter :—Held, that this was a mutual credit within 30 Geo. 2, c. 5, and that B. might retain the sum in liquidation of his advances as well as of the balance due for premiums. Olive v. Smith, 5 Taunt. 56.

6. Remuneration.

Commission—Usage.]—An insurance broker is not entitled, upon the ground of any usage of trade, to a commission of 12*l.* per cent. on the balance which he pays over to the underwriters who employ him. Such allowance, however general it has been, is a gratuity merely, and not a demand of right. Levi v. Barnes, Holt, 412.

In an action by insurance brokers to recover their commission, evidence was admitted of a custom for the broker to be allowed discount by the underwriters, and to retain it as against their employers, the insurers. Rucker v. Lunt, 3 F. & F. 959.

—— Neglect to Re-insure.]—A marine insurance company in New York appointed a firm of merchants in London their agents for settling claims in England and for effecting re-insurances. For settling the claims the agents were to receive a fixed percentage, but nothing was provided as to remuneration for re-insuring. According to the custom as between underwriters and brokers, the agents were allowed by the underwriters 5 per cent. on each re-insurance; and also at the end of the year, on the general balance between the underwriter and the broker, 12 per cent. on the profits of the year, if there were profits. The firm in London was in the habit of receiving both these percentages, but only the 5 per cent. was mentioned in their accounts sent to the insurance company. The company discovered this in 1866, but made no objection to it until 1868. In 1869 the company filed a bill against the firm in London for an account in which the 12 per cent. should be accounted for; claiming also repayment of certain sums at interest; and praying that the firm in London might in the account be held liable for neglect in not re-insuring a certain vessel:—Held, that under the circumstances the firm in London was entitled to retain the 12 per cent. received by them as remuneration; and was also entitled to the interest charged by them. Great Western Insurance Co. of New York v. Cunliffe, 43 L. J., Ch. 741; L. R. 9 Ch. 525; 30 L. T. 661.

Held, also, that the loss sustained by the alleged neglect of the firm in London could only be recovered at law, and that the bill must therefore be dismissed. Ib.

—— Del credere.]—Indebitatus assumpsit lies to recover del credere commissions for guaranteeing sums insured upon policies, such commissions being due upon entering into the contract of guarantee; and after judgment by default, the defendants cannot be allowed, on a writ of inquiry, to set off, in reduction of damages, the amount of losses not indemnified. Caruthers v. Graham, 14 East, 578.

Discount on Premiums.]—A shipowner had for several years employed merchants as his general agents at a remuneration, and they had effected insurances on his ships. In their accounts they charged him with the full insurance premiums, although they were allowed by the underwriters to retain out of the premiums 5 per cent. brokerage, and 10 per cent. discount for ready money, in accordance with the custom of the trade:—Held, that as these allowances were usually made, and as the shipowner had for years assented to them, he could not object to allow them to retain these allowances on taking the accounts in a suit with regard to a mortgage on certain ships of his. Baring v. Stanton, 3 Ch. D. 502; 35 L. T. 652; 25 W. R. 237; 3 Asp. M. C. 294—C. A.

On Bankruptcy.]—In an action by assignees of a bankrupt, the declaration stated that the defendants were indebted to the bankrupt before his bankruptcy for work and labour as an insurance broker, and for divers premiums of insurance due and payable from the defendants to the bankrupt, for and in respect of his having underwritten and subscribed, and caused and procured to be underwritten and subscribed, divers policies for the defendants, at their request. The plaintiffs, by their particulars of demand, claimed to recover for insurance. The company would have allowed the broker, when he paid the premiums, to deduct 31*l.* 1*s.* as commission:—Held, that his assignees were entitled to recover that sum under the words in the declaration, "work and labour done" by the broker, and under the word "insurance" in the particulars of demand. Power v. Butcher, 10 B. & C. 329.

Held, also, that the assignees were entitled to recover the amount of the premiums which the bankrupt had become liable to pay to the company under that part of the count which charged that the defendants were indebted to the plaintiffs for premiums due to the bankrupt for and in respect of his having caused and procured to be underwritten divers policies, but that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover such sums under the count for money paid, because the broker had not actually paid the sums, nor done any thing which was equivalent to payment. Ib.

Claim for Premiums.]—By the custom of Lloyd's, premiums of insurance are matters of account between the underwriter and the broker, and between the broker and the assured, without any privity between the assured and the underwriter. The broker has therefore a claim upon the assured for the amount of the premium, as the policy is effected whether he has paid the underwriter or not, and whether the underwriter has, by the policy, confirmed the premium to be paid, or has taken the covenant of the broker to pay it. Power v. Butcher, 5 M. & Ry. 327.

If a plaintiff agrees to effect an insurance on the goods of a defendant, with such names as may be to the defendant's satisfaction, the defendant cannot refuse to reimburse the premium, on the ground that the names of the underwriters had not been previously submitted to him for his approval. Dixon v. Horill, 1 M. & P. 656; 4 Bing. 665; 6 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 155; 29 R. R. 680.

Of Broker or Sub-Agent for Premiums.]—The lien which an insurance broker has on a policy for the amount of the premium paid by him extends to a sub-agent. Fisher v. Smith, 48 L. J., Ex. 411; 4 App. Cas. 1; 39 L. T. 430; 27 W. R. 113—H. L. (E.)

Where the course of business was to make out monthly accounts, and to settle the amounts of the following month, the broker meanwhile retaining the policy:—Held, that this course of business was not inconsistent with the retention of his lien by the sub-agent, even though the intermediary had been paid by the principal. Ib.

The plaintiff, a shipowner, who had on several occasions during three years previously employed S. & Co. as insurance brokers to effect marine insurances for him, authorised them to effect an insurance for him on a cargo by a ship of his, which they accordingly did through the sub-agency of the defendant, also an insurance broker, who paid the premiums on the policies, and who had on previous occasions, by the instructions of S. & Co., effected policies for the plaintiff and other persons. The defendant had notice throughout that S. & Co. were acting as brokers, and that the plaintiff was their principal; but the plaintiff did not know until after the policies had been effected that they had been effected through the defendant, or by any other person than S. & Co. The plaintiff, who had monthly accounts with S. & Co. in such matters, paid them in due and usual course of business between them their monthly accounts, in which, in usual course, they debited him with the amount of the premiums on the policies in question, but he neither asked for nor received the policies at that time. The defendant, who was aware of the course of dealing between the plaintiff and S. & Co., paid the premiums in usual course to the underwriters on effecting the policies, and, in accordance with the usual course of business between him and S. & Co., sent a debit note of such premiums to S. & Co., with whom he had monthly accounts for insurances effected by him under their instructions for the plaintiff and other persons; but he kept the policies in his own hands, as was his usual practice, until the premiums should be repaid him by S. & Co. He subsequently delivered his monthly account to S. & Co., which included, among other items, the premiums on the policies in question, but S. & Co. never settled such account, nor repaid him the premiums paid by him as above mentioned. A loss having occurred, the plaintiff brought an action of detinue for the policies against the defendant, who, in answer, set up a lien on the policies for the premiums paid by him upon them:—Held, that the defendant had such a lien. Ib. And see Bosanquet, Ex parte, 1 De G. 432.

If an agent employed to effect an insurance on goods represents himself as the owner of the goods to another person, whom he employs to effect the policy, the latter has not a general lien on the policy for the balance due to him from the agent. Lanyon v. Blanchard, 2 Camp. 597; 11 R. R. 808.

So where A., a merchant, at different times employed C., an insurance broker, to effect policies for him. C., without A.'s concurrence, employed B., another insurance broker, to effect these policies, informing him that they were for a correspondent in the country; B. got the policies effected in A.'s name, and delivered them all except one to C.; C. became bankrupt, without having paid B. any part of the premiums, A. being indebted to his estate beyond the amount:—Held, that B. had not a lien on the policy he detained for the general balance due to him from C. Snook v. Davidson, 2 Camp. 218; 11 R. R. 696.

Obtaining Policy again.]—Although a broker may have parted with the possession of a policy, still, if he becomes repossessed of it, he has a lien on it for the premiums which may be unpaid. Levy v. Barnard, 2 Moore, C. P. 34; 8 Taunt. 149; 19 R. R. 484.

Evidence as to Interest of Employer.]—Where an English subject, in time of war, who had received orders to effect an insurance for a neutral foreigner, opened the policy with his usual broker in his own name, but informing him at the same time that the property was neutral:—Held, to be a sufficient indication to the broker that the party acted as agent, and not on his own account; and, therefore, the broker had no lien on the policy so effected, for his general balance against such agent, as between such broker and the principal. Maanss v. Henderson, 1 East, 335.

Where the plaintiff being resident abroad, ordered B. & Co., in London, to effect an insurance on his account; who, not being in the habit of effecting their own insurances, or those of their correspondents, delivered the order to the defendant, being their broker, who accordingly effected it in their names, when he handed over the policy and debited them with the premiums: the plaintiff paid the amount of those premiums to B. & Co., without the defendant's knowledge; a loss being subsequently claimed by the plaintiff, the policy was redelivered by B. & Co. to the defendant for the purpose of his procuring an adjustment. There was an open account between the defendant and B. & Co., and in 1813 they were indebted to him in 21,000*l.* in such open account, including the premiums in question, and in 1814 they paid him 33,000*l.*, on account of losses and returns on insurances effected for them; and in the latter part of that year the defendant was a considerable creditor on such account:—Held, that under these circumstances, the defendant had not a lien on the policy, either for premiums or his general balance. Levy v. Barnard, 2 Moore, 34; 8 Taunt. 149; 19 R. R. 484.

Where no Notice of Agency.]—Insurance brokers who have effected a policy, without notice that it is not on account of the person from whom they receive the order, have a lien upon it for their general balance due from him, and have a right to apply in satisfaction of that balance money received upon the policy, as well after as before notice that it belongs to a third person. Mann v. Forrester, 4 Camp. 60; 15 R. R. 724.

A broker having effected an insurance in his own name on behalf of his principal, had the policy left in his hands for the purpose of his receiving the proceeds; and, having, upon advice of the loss, pledged the policy with another broker, obtained an advance thereon, received as on account of the loss:—Held, that the latter might retain the amount so advanced, and that the principal could not recover it from him, but must resort to his own broker for it. Callow v. Kelson, 10 W. R. 193.

The owner of six ships by a deed to which he and two trustees alone were parties, and which was duly registered, assigned them to two trustees for securing sums of money expressed to be lent to him by them (but which in fact had been lent by the plaintiffs), and covenanted to insure each vessel in 1,500*l.* at the least, and on request to assign the policies to the trustees. He did insure the ships in his own name through the agency, and in the name of a broker who had notice of the mortgage, but who had been informed by the owner that the insurances had been effected by the trustees in respect of their interest, and who trusted him in the belief that the insurances were on the owner's own account in respect of his interest as mortgagee. One of the ships insured for 1,000*l.* was lost. The owner subsequently became bankrupt. The broker was a creditor of the owner for premiums on the insurance policies and for 1,000*l.* cash advanced after the policies had been effected, and he brought an action against the underwriters for the moneys secured by the policies:—Held, that the broker was not entitled to a general lien for the whole balance due to him from the bankrupt, but only on each policy for the sums paid in respect of that policy. Ladbroke v. Lee, 4 De G. & S. 106.

B. effected an insurance for A., not knowing it was in fact for the plaintiff:—Held, that B. had a lien on the policy for a balance due to him by A. Westwood v. Bell, 4 Camp. 349; 16 R. R. 800.

As against Assignee.] — The assignee of a policy on goods, who became such by the indorsement to him of the bill of lading of the goods by the consignor, after he had directed his correspondent to make the insurance, takes it subject to the lien of the correspondent of the consignor for his general balance; and can only claim, subject to that lien, the money received on such policy by the broker in whose hands it was deposited for that purpose by the correspondent. But the broker has no sub-lien on the policy for the general balance of his own account with such correspondent, if he knew at the time that the policy was effected for another person. Mann v. Shiffner, 2 East, 523.

Policy left for Safe Custody.]—If a policy is left in the hands of an agent for safe custody only, although he advances money to the assured, without any other security than the policy, the agent acquires no general lien on the instrument for such advances; but it is otherwise if it was left with him as a security generally. Muir v. Fleming, D. & R., N. P. C. 29; 25 R. R. 775.

Pleading—Trover for a Policy of Insurance.] —Defendant, after stating the existence of mutual accounts between him and the assured, pleaded a lien for a general balance due to him as an insurance broker; the plaintiff replied, a bill of exchange taken as payment for this balance, and not due at the time of the conversion. Upon demurrer:—Held, that the defendant could not, without pleading it as a defence, rely also on the mutual credit between the parties to justify his detention of the policy. Hewison v. Guthrie, 2 Bing. (N.C.) 755; 3 Scott, 298; 5 L. J., C. P. 283.

Broker's Lien on Policies—Promise to clear Lien — Statute of Frauds.] — The plaintiff, a broker, having a lien on certain policies effected for his principal, for whom he had given his acceptances, the defendant promised that he would provide for the payment of these acceptances as they became due, if the plaintiff would give him up the policies, in order that he might collect for his principal the moneys due from the underwriters; which accordingly was done, and the money was afterwards received by the defendant:—Held, that this was not a promise for the debt or default of another within the Statute of Frauds; and that the plaintiff might recover against the defendant as well for the breach of agreement in not providing for payment of the acceptances, as also upon a count for money had and received. Castling v. Aubert, 2 East, 325.

Factors' Lien on Policy.]—A. & Co., who carried on business at Hull as merchants, factors, ship and insurance brokers, and general agents, had had various dealings as factors with B. & Co. of London. In the course of these dealings B. & Co. wrote to A. & Co. requesting them to insure the ship "E." for a voyage from the Downs to South America and the West Indies. A. & Co. did so, and B. & Co. remitted the premiums to them. The policy remained with A. & Co.:—Held, that A. & Co. were entitled to hold the policy as a lien for the general balance due to them as factors from B. & Co. Dixon v. Stansfeld, 10 C. B. 413.

An assurance made by a factor, who has a lien upon the goods of his principal, does not pass by a consignment of the goods insured to a third person by the principal. Goding v. London Assurance Co., 1 Burr. 489; 1 Ld. Ken. 254; 1 W. Bl. 103.

1. LEGALITY.

Under 6 Geo. 1, c. 18.]—The 6 Geo. 1, c. 18 (under which no company or partnership but the two thereby authorised (the Royal Exchange and the London Assurance Companies) could insure ships or lend money on bottomry) did not extend to Scotland. Pattison v. Mills, 2 Bligh (N.S.) 519; 1 Dow & Clark, 342; 31 R. R. 49.

Nor prevent partners from lending money on respondentia. Gore v. Wynne, M. & M. 393.

Where one of two partners underwrote policies upon ships, in his own name, but upon their joint account, contrary to 6 Geo. 1, c. 18, s. 12, no action could be maintained to recover the premiums upon such policies from the assured. Branton v. Tuddy, 1 Taunt. 6.

Nor, where the brokers received the premiums, could the partners in whose name the insurances were effected recover them from such brokers. Booth v. Hodgson, 6 Term Rep. 405.

A policy of insurance on a bottomry bond, made to two persons in partnership, was void, by 6 Geo. 1, c. 18, as well as the bond. Excreth v. Blackburn, 6 M. & S. 152; 2 Stark, 66.

Unregistered Company—Illegality—Companies Act, 1862, s. 4.]—A mutual marine insurance association, consisting of more than twenty members being unregistered, is illegal under the Companies Act, 1862, s. 4. An order for its winding up discharged. Padstow Total Loss and Collision Association, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 344; 20 Ch. D. 137; 45 L. T. 774; 30 W. R. 326.

Registration.]—By the rules of a mutual marine insurance association formed in 1867, the members severally and respectively agreed to insure each other's ships for a year from the day named as the commencement of the risk. The two managers were to sign the policies, and their signatures were to bind the members as if each member had signed. The premiums were to be paid in advance, losses were to be paid out of the reserve fund thus created, and if it proved insufficient, the members were to contribute the deficiency pro ratâ according to the amounts for which they were insured. The managers were authorised to issue policies to members for periods less than a year, or for special risks either in time or voyage policies at special rates of premium, to which the reserve fund should in no way apply. The association was not registered or incorporated, and persons became members by effecting a mutual policy. Its policies were signed only by the managers "per procuration of the several members of the Arthur Average Association for insuring each other's ships." The managers issued special rate policies to a large amount to persons who had not taken mutual policies. In 1870 an order was made for winding up the association. H. & Co., who were holders of special rate policies, but had not taken out any mutual policies, were found creditors to a large amount on the present special rate policies. On an application by a contributory to vary the certificate by expunging their debt:—Held, that the association came within the Companies Act, 1862, s. 4, and ought to have been registered; that it was therefore an illegal company, and that an order for winding it up ought not to have been made, but that this objection could not be entertained on the present application. Arthur Average Association, In re, Cory, Ex parte, 44 L. J., Ch. 509; L. R. 10 Ch. 542; 32 L. T. 713; 23 W. R. 939; 2 Asp. M. C. 570—C. A.

Policies Void or Valid.]—Held, secondly, that the policies of H. & Co. were void under 30 Vict. c. 23, s. 7, because they did not specify the name of the subscribers or underwriters. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that those policies were also void as being ultra vires, for that the rules only authorised the managers to issue special rate policies to persons who were already members by having taken out policies of mutual insurance. Ib.

Policy incorporating Rules.] — Where the policy incorporates the rules of an association so as to be a sufficient compliance with the Stamp Act, 1867, s. 7, see Edwards v. Aberayron Mutual Ship Insurance Society, 1 Q. B. D. 563; 34 L. T. 457; 3 Asp. M. C. 154—C. A.

Clubs or Associations.]—A company of shipowners engaged to insure each other's ships, and covenanted severally, and not jointly, to pay a certain sum in case of loss, in proportion to their respective shares, but in case of the insolvency of any one of the members all the others were to be responsible:—Held, that this contract was void by 6 Geo. 1, c. 18, s. 12 (repealed by 5 Geo. 4, c. 114). Lees v. Smith, 7 Term Rep. 338.

Since the 5 Geo. 4, c. 114, where a marine insurance is effected by an insurance company, it is necessary that the name of each member of the company should be expressed in the policy. Reid v. Allan, 4 Ex. 326; 19 L. A secret partnership between A. and B. to underwrite policies in their separate names on their joint account is not void, as against the insured, under 35 Geo. 3, c. 63, s. 11. Brett v. Beckwith, 26 L. J., Ch. 130; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 31; 5 W. R. 112.

An association formed of a number of persons for the mutual insurance of their ships against loss, and for mutual contribution in the event of such loss, is not an illegal association, within 35 Geo. 3, c. 63, s. 11, although no policies are issued by such association. Bromley v. Williams, 32 Beav. 177; 32 L. J., Ch. 716; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 240; 8 L. T. 78; 11 W. R. 392.

An association of shipowners for the mutual insurance of each other's ships, in which each member was only liable to the extent of his subscription, was not illegal under 6 Geo. 1, c. 18. Strong v. Harvey, 3 Bing. 304; 11 Moore, C. P. 72; 4 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 57.

So, if a number of shipowners subscribe a joint fund, proportioned to their property, and underwrite each other's property respectively, and are only liable to losses in their proportions of the fund, the insurance is not illegal. Harrison v. Millar, 2 Esp. 513; 7 Term Rep. 340, n.

A policy in the common form by an insurance club, where the members are not responsible for the solvency of each other, is valid, although the sums which they respectively insure are not specified on the face of the policy. Dowell v. Moon, 4 Camp. 166.

Life Insurance Company—Marine Insurance Policies—Ultra Vires.]—A company was formed to carry on life insurance business. Afterwards, at an extraordinary general meeting, resolutions were passed to enable it to carry on marine insurance business. A deed extending the purposes of the company was executed by some of the shareholders, and notices were sent to all upon winding up of the company:—Held, that there had been no such acquiescence by shareholders as would entitle holders of marine policies to prove in respect of them. Phœnix Life Assurance Co., In re, Burges and Stock's Case, 2 J. & H. 441; 31 L. J., Ch. 749; 10 W. R. 816.

A life insurance company cannot by a resolution at extraordinary general meeting enable itself to issue marine policies. Hambro' v. Hull and London Fire Assurance Co., 3 H. & N. 789; 28 L. J., Ex. 62. See also Phœnix Life Assurance Co., In re, supra.

2. Actions for Contribution.

Manager cannot maintain Action.]—An association of shipowners was formed for the mutual assurance of ships belonging to its members. The regulations, subject to which the policies were effected, provided for the creation of a general fund by payment of premiums by the several members, and when these should be found insufficient, by payment of contributions in the shape of a percentage on the sums insured, and a manager (not a member of the association) was appointed by a power of attorney which authorised him to sign policies for and in the names of the members of the association, and, "in their several and respective names," to demand and sue for all sums which should become due and payable for premiums and contributions from them:—Held, that the manager could not maintain an action against a member for premiums due from such member, or for moneys paid by the manager out of the funds of the association in respect of such member's share of losses due to other members. Gray v. Pearson, L. R. 5 C. P. 568; 23 L. T. 416.

The manager of a mutual insurance association cannot maintain an action for contributions due under the rules from any member, although those rules have been agreed to by the member and profess to give such a power. Evans v. Hooper, 45 L. J., Q. B. 206; 1 Q. B. D. 45; 33 L. T. 374; 24 W. R. 226—C. A.

Jurisdiction of Court of Chancery.]—In a mutual marine insurance company, where the members are numerous, a court of equity has jurisdiction, on a loss, to enforce contribution and payment of it, either where the amount has already been ascertained, under the rules, by arbitration, or where it has not been so ascertained. Taylor v. Dean, 22 Beav. 429.

Where the rules of a mutual insurance company provide that a member making default in payment of contributions shall forfeit all claims for losses or average under his policies, but shall remain liable for contributions, a member making default cannot in an action for contributions counterclaim for losses and averages sustained by him. Marine Mutual Insurance Co. v. Young, 43 L. T. 441 ; 4 Asp. M. C. 357.

The policy coupled with the rules and articles of the company constituted a contract between the defendants and the company, and not only with the members mentioned in the policy. Ib.

Condition Precedent.]—A policy with a mutual association contained a regulation providing that, if a ship insured in the association should be mortgaged for any debt, the owner, being a member of the association, should not have any claim by virtue of the policy, nor should any assignee of such policy have any claim for any loss, unless previously to such loss such member should have delivered to the secretary an undertaking in writing of the mortgagee or assignee to pay all sums which might thereafter become due from such member in respect of such ship. In an action upon the policy for a total loss, the defendant pleaded that the ship was mortgaged, and that the plaintiff did not, previously to the happening of the loss, deliver to the secretary an undertaking of the mortgagees to pay all moneys which might thereafter become due from the plaintiff in respect of the ship. The plaintiff replied that the defendant had notice of the mortgage, and afterwards, without requiring the undertaking, from time to time demanded and received from the mortgagees all sums which became due from the plaintiff in respect of the ship, and the contributions for which the plaintiff, as a member of the association, became liable :—Held, that the replication was no answer to the plea, the giving of the undertaking required by the regulation being a condition precedent. Hughes v. Tindall, 18 C. B. 98.

Neglect to Adjust.]—The rules of a mutual shipping assurance association provided that "in case of its becoming necessary to make any payment in respect of any loss or damage happening to any ship insured, the amount to be borne and paid by each member of the association should, upon each and every such occasion, be assessed and apportioned by the committee, upon and amongst the members of the association liable to contribute thereto." In an action for loss the declaration set out the policy and this rule, and alleged that the plaintiff had always been ready and willing that the amount to be borne and paid by each member of the association in respect of the loss should be assessed and apportioned by the committee of the association according to the regulations of the policy, and that the plaintiff had requested the defendant and the committee to assess and apportion the same, but they had neglected and refused so to do, although a reasonable time for that purpose had long since elapsed, and alleged as a breach the nonpayment by the defendant of his proportion of the sum insured :—Held, that the declaration did not shew any liability on his part. Wright v. Ward, 24 L. T. 439 ; 20 W. R. 21 ; 1 Asp. M. C. 25.

Adjustment—When a Condition Precedent to Action.]—To this declaration the defendant pleaded, first, that by the regulations annexed to the policy it was declared that a committee should be appointed, who should meet quarterly, at the discretion of the managers, to audit the accounts, settle claims, and order payment of the same by the managers' draft ; and that the managers should have full power to settle all claims on policies ; and that the claim of the plaintiff had not been settled in manner provided, nor had payment of the same by the managers' draft been ordered ; and, secondly, that by the regulations it was declared that all average claims should be adjusted by a professional average-stater, according to the usage of Lloyd's ; and that the only claim of the plaintiff was an average claim within the meaning of the regulation, and that it had never been adjusted as provided for, and the plaintiff had never been ready and willing to have the same adjusted :—Held, that the pleas were good. Ib.

Pleading—Setting out Regulations.]—Where the regulations of an association of shipowners, combined for the mutual assurance of each other's ships, were indorsed on the back, and were declared to form part of a policy, to which the shipowners were subscribers :—Held, that the declaration in an action for a loss under the policy ought to set out the regulations as well as the policy. Strong v. Rule, 3 Bing. 315 ; 11 Moore, 86 ; 4 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 73.

Member of Society by Estoppel.]—E. had an equitable interest in a ship, and afterwards received a transfer of the legal interest from the registered owner, who was a member of an insurance society. The owner insured the ship with the society in E.'s name by a policy incorporating the rules of the society, and providing among other things that every insurance effected should be valid and binding from noon on that day until noon of the 1st January then next following. By the rules persons became members only by signing the articles, and none but members could insure their ships. The rules also required certain notice upon sale of a ship or shares thereof. E. had never signed the articles nor given notice of the transfer to him of the legal interest, but had paid contributions claimed from him as owner by the society. It was also provided by the rules that the directors should decide claims and disputes of members, and that aggrieved members might appeal for reconsideration of decisions, first to the directors themselves, and then to the whole society ; and also that no member should be allowed to bring or have any action, suit, or proceeding, or other remedy against the society for any claims or demands upon or in respect of the society or the members, except as therein provided. Upon loss of the ship, E. was refused his claim upon this policy by the directors twice, but made no appeal to the whole society :—Held, that the society was estopped from disputing E.'s interest in the policy, and his right as member to claim upon it. Edwards v. Aberayron Mutual Ship Insurance Society, 1 Q. B. D. 563 ; 34 L. T. 457 ; 3 Asp. M. C. 154.

Articles of Association forming part of Policy—Amount Insured not to exceed Four-fifths of declared Value—Vessel of greater Value than declared.]—A policy issued by the respondents, a mutual marine insurance corporation, stipulated that the provisions contained in the articles of association should be deemed part of the policy. Among the provisions, purporting to be articles, indorsed on the policy was the following :—"The sum insured on any one steamer shall . . . in no case exceed four-fifths of the value of such steamer . . . and it shall be a condition of this insurance that the assured shall keep one-fifth uninsured." This was part of an article, which had been registered, but which, for want of compliance with the formalities of the Companies Act, was invalid. The respondents cancelled the policy because the appellant had insured his steamer with them and another insurance company to a greater amount than four-fifths of her value as declared in their policy. The vessel was lost. In an action on the policy : —Held, that the meaning of the policy was that the insurer should be his own insurer to the extent of one-fifth :—That the condition was binding as a contract, notwithstanding the invalidity of the article on which it was founded :—That it was not open to the appellant to show that the vessel was worth more than the value declared by the policy. Muirhead v. Forth and North Sea Steamboat Mutual Insurance Assn., [1894] A. C. 72 ; 6 R. 59—H. L. (Sc.)

Action against Association by Person not a Member.]—By a policy of marine insurance in the form of a deed-poll, the defendants, a mutual insurance association, covenanted to pay losses upon a steamship with a firm described in the deed as "a member." Under the policy members having ships entered were to make good losses on the ship, according to the provisions of the articles of association and the rules. One rule was an arbitration clause, by which the sum to be paid by the association upon any claim was to be settled by the committee ; and if the member agreed to accept the sum so settled, he was entitled to be paid in the mode of payment customary to the association ; and in case of difference the matter was to be decided by arbitrators, to be appointed by the committee and the member, the obtaining of a decision from whom was to be a condition precedent to the right of the member to maintain an action on the policy. The memorandum of association set out that the association was established for the "insurance of ships of members, and of ships which the members may be authorised to assure in their own names." It was provided by the articles of association that "every person who, on behalf of himself or any other person, insures for the protection of any ship . . . shall, as from the date of the commencement of such insurance or protection, be deemed to be a member of the association " ; and, further, that " all claims in respect of insurance or protection shall be made and enforced against the association itself, and not against any member thereof ; but the association shall not be liable to any member or other person for the amount of any loss, claim or demand except to the extent to which the association is able to recover from the members or persons liable for the same." The plaintiffs were part owners of the ship insured in question, and brought, in their own names, an action on the policy against the defendants to recover a loss on the ship :—Held, that this action could not be maintained, since, under the policy, the defendants were expressly excluded from liability to any other person than the firm therein described as a "member." Montgomerie v. United Kingdom Mutual Steamship Assurance Assn., 60 L. J., Q. B. 429 ; [1891] 1 Q. B. 370 ; 64 L. T. 323 ; 39 W. R. 351 ; 7 Asp. M. C. 19.

Liability to Member who has Sold his Ship.]—Agreement between shipowners for mutual assurance of each other's ships ; a withdrawing member to give six months' notice ; action against one for a loss. Plea, that the plaintiff had parted with his interest in the ship before the loss. Replication, that the plaintiff by agreement with the purchaser had agreed to pay him 500*l.* if the ship was lost within three months : —Held, that as the plaintiff remained contributory, the other members were liable for his loss. Reed v. Cole, 3 Burr. 1512.

Action for Contributions—Managing Owner—Principal and Agent.]—The managing and part owner of a steamship became a member of a mutual insurance association, and took out a policy on behalf of himself and his co-owners in respect of the ship. By the articles of association every person was deemed to be a member "who in his own name, or in his name as agent, insures any ship in pursuance of the regulations of the company," and they also provided that the funds required for the payment of claims should "be raised by contributions from all the members." By the policy it was agreed between the assured and the company, "that without prejudice to the rights and remedies of the company against the said person or persons effecting this insurance, as a member or members of the company, in respect of this insurance, the assured shall pay to the company, in lieu of premiums, all the sums and contributions which the company are entitled to call upon the said person or persons effecting this insurance, as a member or members of the company, to pay to the company in respect of this insurance according to the articles of association of the company, and that the provisions contained in the said articles of association shall be deemed and considered part of this policy, and shall, so far as regards this insurance, be as binding upon the assured as upon the said person or persons effecting this insurance." Certain contributions having, in accordance with the articles of association, become payable by the managing owner in respect of the ship, and the managing owner being bankrupt, the association sued the other owners to recover the contributions :—Held, that, under the terms of the policy, they were liable, although the policy was effected by the managing owner alone. Ocean Iron Steamship Insurance Association v. Leslie, 22 Q. B. D. 722 ; 57 L. T. 722 ; 6 Asp. M. C. 226.

Insurance by Managing Owner—Liability of other Owners for Contribution.]—H. and G., the managing owners of a steamship, insured her in a mutual assurance association in their own names, and the policy was expressed to be "as well in his or their own names as for and in the name or names of all and every other person or persons to whom the same doth, may, or shall appertain in part or in all subject to the provisions hereinafter contained." The consideration stated in the policy was the contributions to be paid from time to time by the assured for losses and averages on other steamships. Such contributions having become payable, the association sued the part owners other than H. and G. to recover the same :—Held, that these part owners were liable, because the policy was made on their behalf, and they were "assured" within the meaning of the policy, and were expressly bound by the consideration clause to pay these contributions. Quære, whether they became members of the association. Great Britain 100 A 1 Steamship Insurance Association v. Wyllie, 58 L. J., Q. B. 614; 22 Q. B. D. 710; 60 L. T. 916; 37 W. R. 407; 6 Asp. M. C. 398—C. A.

Claims against Association—Enforcement in Equity—No Policy.]—A. effected an insurance on a ship with an association by executing the deed of settlement in conformity with the rules, but did not obtain a policy:—Held, that his remedy against the association for the amount due upon the insurance was not by action, but by a bill in equity, to obtain a declaration of his right to specific performance of the engagement by the committee to pay. Harvey v. Beckwith, 2 H. & M. 429; 10 L. T. 632; 12 W. R. 896.

Undisclosed Principal not Member of Association.]—T., the manager and part owner of a ship, became a member of a mutual insurance association, and took out a policy with such association in respect of the ship. The articles of association gave power to the committee, in order to provide funds for the business of the association, from time to time to direct sums to be paid by the members ratably. By the policy, which was made by the association under their seal, the association agreed with T. that the members thereof should according to the articles of association pay and make good losses and damages to the ship occasioned by the risks insured against, subject to a proviso that the association should be liable only to the extent of so much of the funds as they were able to recover from the members liable for the same, and which were applicable for the purpose of paying claims under the policy. Certain contributions to the funds of the association having, in accordance with the articles, become payable by T. in respect of the ship, and T. being bankrupt, the association sued N., another part owner of the ship, for such contributions as an undisclosed principal of T.:—Held, that the effect of the articles of association and the policy being that the liability for such contributions was imposed on members only, and N. not being a member of the association, he could not be sued for such contributions as an undisclosed principal of T. United Kingdom Mutual Steamship Assurance Association v. Nevill, 56 L. 3. RULES.

Mortgages by Members.]—A rule of a mutual marine insurance association provided that in case of a mortgage or an assignment of any vessel insured in the association, the mortgagee must make himself personally liable to pay premiums:—Held, that the rule was applicable to a depositee who was assignee of the policy within the meaning of the rule. Alexander v. Campbell, 41 L. J., Ch. 478; 27 L. T. 462; 1 Asp. M. C. 447—C. A.

The rule was not set up as a defence by answer:—Held, that at the hearing a certificate of the ship's register could not be produced to shew that there was a mortgage of the ship itself. Ib.

A shipowner entered into an agreement through an agent with an association for the insurance of his ship, and by the agreement, signed by himself, he agreed to abide by the rules and regulations of the association, a copy of which rules was not sent to him. One of these rules was that no member, whose share in a ship insured in the association should be mortgaged, should have any claim to insurance, unless previously to loss such member or mortgagor should have delivered to the manager of the association a deed with a covenant as therein mentioned. The ship was lost at sea, no such delivery of a deed, as required by the stipulation, had taken place, and it was not until the shipowner sent in his claim for insurance that he had actual knowledge of the rule:—Held, that the owner must have imputed to him a knowledge of the rules of the company and the onus was therefore upon him to apply to the mortgagees for the guarantee; and as there was no time fixed for the performance of that duty, there was no waiver by the company of the rule. Turnbull v. Woolfe, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 57; 7 L. T. 483; 11 W. R. 55.

One of the rules of a mutual marine assurance society provided that "no vessel which is mortgaged shall be insured, unless the mortgagee give a written guarantee to the satisfaction of the committee for payment of all demands on the vessel":—Held, that this applied only to a ship mortgaged at the time of effecting the insurance, and that it did not render a guarantee necessary when a ship was mortgaged after having been insured. Hutchinson v. Wright, 25 Beav. 444; 27 L. J., Ch. 834; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 749; 6 W. R. 475.

Double Insurance—Mortgage on Ship, Notice of by Member—Estoppel.]—By one of the rules of a mutual marine insurance society it was provided that vessels of a certain class should not be insured for more than three-fourths of their value, and that "if any member insure or attempt to insure elsewhere any ship share or shares in any ship already insured in this society, he shall be liable to immediate expulsion and to forfeiture of any claim or demand he may have against the society." By another rule it was provided as follows: "If it comes to the notice of any member that any vessel or share of a vessel insured by the society is mortgaged, he shall immediately give notice in writing of the name and address of the mortgagee. The board of directors may then require the mortgagee to give such security as they deem necessary for the payment to them of all sums which are or may become due on account of such insurance. If such notice is not given, or if the mortgagee refuse to give such security as the society requires, the member in whose name the insurance is registered shall during the existence of such mortgage forfeit all claims upon the society in respect of such vessel or share to the extent of such mortgage thereon." P., on behalf of the owner of the ship "Bolina," insured her in the defendant society for 600*l.* P. was entered in the society's books as the policy-holder, and the policy was issued to him. The "Bolina" was at the time when the insurance was effected insured in another society for 300*l.*, of which insurance the defendants had knowledge, and the sum of 300*l.* together with the 600*l.* above-mentioned amounted to more than three-fourths. but less than the whole amount at which the directors of the defendant society valued her. During the subsistence of the policy P. became aware that the "Bolina" had been mortgaged by the owner for 300*l*., but no notice of the mortgage was ever given to the society. In an action by the representatives of the owner: —Held, that the society, after issuing the policy of insurance on the "Bolina" with the knowledge that she was insured elsewhere, was estopped from relying on the rule as to double insurance; but that as P., who was a member of the society, had not given notice of the mortgage of which he had knowledge, the amount of that mortgage must be deducted from the sum payable under the policy. Jones v. Bangor Mutual Shipping Insurance Society, 61 L. T. 727; 6 Asp. M. C. 450.

Expulsion of Member.]—A member received notice of expulsion from this society upon the ground that his conduct was suspicious without having an opportunity of meeting any charge brought against him. The committee who sent the notice, had power to expel any member whose conduct they deemed to be suspicious. The member brought an action for damages against the members of the committee, alleging that he had thereby lost the benefit of his insurance and had suffered other damages:—Held, by Kelly, C.B., Pollock and Amphlett, BB., that the declaration shewed no cause of action on the ground that the expulsion was void, if the allegations were true; by Cleasby and Pollock, BB., on the ground that the declaration did not sufficiently charge mala fides. Wood v. Woad, 43 L. J., Ex. 153; L. R. 9 Ex. 190; 30 L. T. 815; 22 W. R. 709; 2 Asp. M. C. 289.

Notice.]—By the rule of a mutual assurance society, the insured was bound to give notice to the directors of any change of the captain of his vessel, and, in case of default, the society was not to be liable for any subsequent loss. By another rule, notices to members sent by post were to be effectual, though not actually received: —Held, that the directors of the society were members within the latter rule, and that a notice of a change of captain sent to them by post was valid, though not actually received by them. Brandford v. Howard, 35 Beav. 613.

Contribution by Members.]—A mutual insurance association, by which the members were to insure each other's ships, and to bear the loss in proportion to the premiums charged against each member, and by which the manager was authorised by power of attorney to recover the premiums, to settle all losses, and to draw on members for their several proportions of such losses, issued to its members a policy, in the ordinary form of a Lloyd's policy, with the rules of the association indorsed on and incorporated with the policy. There were printed in the policy, in a line by themselves, the words "twenty pounds per centum" immediately after the acknowledgment "confessing ourselves paid the consideration due unto us for this assurance by the assured, at and after the rate of." The rules indorsed contained nothing to limit the liability of the members to 20*l*. per cent.:—Held, that notwithstanding those words in the policy, the liability of members to contribute the payment of losses was not limited to 20*l*. per cent. Gray v. Gibson, 36 L. J., C. P. 99; L. R. 2 C. P. 120; 15 W. R. 70.

A. and B. were members of a mutual insurance society, and B., with the other members of the society, was insured to A. upon his ship in a sum specified in a policy, subscribed by B. and the other members of the society. Annexed to the policy, and forming part of it, were the following rules:—The members of this association shall severally, and not jointly or in partnership, or the one for the other of them, but each only in his own name, insure each other's ships from the date of entry of each until noon of the 20th of February then next, and from that time until noon of the 20th of February in the next succeeding year, and so on from year to year, against all losses. In order more readily to provide for the payment of claims, the managers are empowered to levy contribution of one-fourth part of the fixed annual premium, which shall be drawn for in a prescribed manner. Provided always, that if the gross amount of losses and expenses during the year shall happen to exceed the amount of the premiums so realised, the deficiency shall be made good by an additional percentage which the members, during the year, shall be bound to contribute and pay to the managers; but should the premiums so realised exceed the losses, then the surplus shall be returned in proportion to the amount of premium respectively contributed by them. The managers' drafts on the members of the association for their proportion of the annual fixed premium, and for any additional percentage, shall be duly accepted, and punctually paid when due; and if any member shall neglect to accept any such drafts, or to pay his contributions, on receiving notice from the managers, his respective ship or ships shall immediately cease to be insured in this association, and he shall thenceforth forfeit all claims in respect of any loss, under his policy; but he shall still remain liable to contribute to all losses and averages which may occur during the period for which any such policy was originally granted, and the amount due from any defaulting member shall be considered as a debt due to the managers, and shall be recoverable by them at law:—Held, that, on the true construction of the rules and under the circumstances as they appeared on the record, B. was not individually liable. Redway v. Sweeting, 36 L. J., Ex. 185; L. R. 2 Ex. 400; 16 L. T. 495; 15 W. R. 908.

S. made an application in writing to become a member of a mutual assurance association in respect of an insurance for 300*l*. upon his ship; the ship was accepted and an unstamped copy of a policy returned to him. By the regulations of the association he would have to contribute to losses upon the ships of other members. No stamped policy was ever executed by him. He contributed to losses upon some ships of various members. His own ship sustained an injury, but before the amount of the loss could be estimated, the association was ordered to be wound up:—Held, that he was not a contributory, as the unstamped policy could not, under 35 Geo. 3, c. 63, be received in evidence of his agreement to become a member. London Marine Insurance Association, In re, Smith, Ex parte, 38 L. J., Ch. 681; L. R. 4 Ch. 611; 21 L. T. 97; 17 W. R. 941.

Repayment of Premiums.]—An association was not registered under the companies acts. Persons became members by effecting mutual policies; members were empowered also to effect "special rate policies." The applicants were not members, but had taken out a "special rate policy," signed per procuration by J. and S., the managers, who gave and accepted on their personal liability a bill of exchange for the amount assured. In a similar case, the amount assured had been disallowed by the appeal court as a claim made on the association. J. and S. became insolvent, and their acceptance was dishonoured. De W. & Co. claimed that the amount of the premiums should be repaid them by the members of the association:—Held, that they were not entitled to have the premiums repaid, because, first, as they well knew, J. and S. had no power, as agents, to grant such a policy to non-members; and secondly, there was no failure of consideration, as J. and S. had made themselves personally liable. Arthur Average Association, In re, De Winton's Case, 34 L. T. 942; 3 Asp. M. C. 245.

Arbitration — Proper Hearing.] — In an action for collision, it appeared that the plaintiff's vessel and the defendant's vessel were insured in a mutual insurance company, by the rules of which it was provided that, in the event of a collision occurring between two vessels insured in the company, &c., the owners of such vessels should immediately submit a statement of the whole circumstances of the collision . . . and the directors, after receiving such statement, should have power to arbitrate on the matter, and their decision should be final. The plaintiff gave notice of the collision to the secretary of the company. The secretary obtained statements as to the collision from the master of the plaintiff's vessel, and from the master of the defendant's vessel. A meeting of directors was held, at which the defendant's master was present, but no one on behalf of the plaintiff, and a resolution was passed that the defendant's vessel had not been in collision with that of the plaintiff:—Held, that there had never been a proper hearing of the case by the directors; that the resolution passed by them was therefore not an arbitration within the meaning of the rule, and that the plaintiff was not estopped by it from bringing an action for damage. Semble, that the rule must be taken to mean that it should be a condition precedent to an arbitration that both parties had agreed as to the fact of a collision having taken place. The Warwick, 15 P. D. 189; 63 L. T. 561; 6 Asp. M. C. 545.

—— Estoppel — Condition Precedent.] — A. effected in a mutual insurance company a policy of insurance on ship, one of the conditions of which was, that the sum to be paid to any insurer for loss should, in the first instance, be ascertained by the committee; but if a difference should arise between the insurer and the committee, "relative to the settling of any loss, or to a claim for average, or any other matter relating to the insurance," the difference was to be referred to arbitration, in a way pointed out in the conditions: "provided always, that no insurer who refuses to accept the amount settled by the committee shall be entitled to maintain any action at law or suit in equity on his policy," until the matter has been decided by the arbitrators, and "then only for such sum as they shall award"; and the obtaining the decision of the arbitrators was declared a condition precedent to the maintaining of an action:—Held, that these conditions were lawful, and that (even should the difference relate to other matters than those of mere amount) till award made no action was maintainable. Scott v. Avery, 5 H. L. Cas. 811; 25 L. J., Ex. 308; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 815; 4 W. R. 746. But see as to fraud on questions of law. Alexander v. Campbell, 41 L. J., Ch. 478; 27 L. T. 25; 1 Asp. M. C. 373, 447.

Limited by Guarantee—Limitation of Liability — Members having Twofold Liability.] — A mutual marine insurance association was incorporated, under the Companies Act, 1862, as an association limited by guarantee. The memorandum of association declared that every member undertook to contribute to the assets of the association, in the event of its being wound up, a sum not exceeding 5*l.* for the payment of the debts and liabilities of the association, and the costs, charges and expenses of winding it up, and for the adjustment of the rights of contributories amongst themselves. The defendant entered his ship to be insured in the association, and by the rules of the association he, by so doing, also became an insurer of the ships of other members of the association who entered their ships in the same class. While the defendant continued to be a member the association was wound up. In an action brought, pursuant to the rules of the association, to recover from the defendant a sum of 35*l.* as contribution towards losses incurred by other members insured in the same class as that in which he had entered his ship, the defendant contended that his liability was limited by the memorandum of association to a sum of 5*l.*:—Held, that the limit of 5*l.* only applied to the liabilities incurred by the defendant as a member of the association to the association, and that his liability as an insurer towards the other members of the association who entered their ships in the association was not limited to that amount. Lion Mutual Marine Insurance Association v. Tucker, 53 L. J., Q. B. 185; 12 Q. B. D. 176; 49 L. T. 764; 32 W. R. 546—C. A.

Annual Policies—Forfeiture for Nonpayment of Contribution—Set-off of Contribution against Loss.]—By the rules of a marine insurance association the members insured each other's ships from noon of February 20 in any year, or from the date of entry of a vessel until noon of February 20 in the succeeding year; and the managers were empowered to levy contributions of one-fourth part of the estimated annual premium quarterly in each year, such premiums of insurance to form a fund for the payment of claims, and if any member should refuse to pay his contributions thereto, his ship should cease to be insured, and he should thenceforth forfeit all claims in respect of any loss. On the 5th April, 1881, a loss, incurred in the year 1880-1 upon a ship belonging to the plaintiff, and insured in the association, was fixed by an average-adjuster at 180*l.* A call of 41*l.* 10*s.*, made on the plaintiff on the 5th May, 1881, for the second quarter of 1881-2, was by mutual consent set off against the loss. On the 13th May, 1881, the association paid the plaintiff 100*l.* on further account of the loss. On the 23rd June, 1881, a call was made on the plaintiff of 52*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*, and on the 5th July, 1881, another call of 31*l.* 4*s.* The plaintiff having tendered the balance due from him, the association refused to accept it, and during the pendency of an action to recover the full amount of the two calls one of the plaintiff's ships insured in the association was wholly lost:—Held, on case stated, that the plaintiff's ship did not cease to be insured, and that he had not forfeited his claim in respect of the loss. Williams v. British Marine Mutual Insurance Association, 57 L. T. 27; 6 Asp. M. C. 134. And see 1, ACTIONS FOR CONTRIBUTION, supra.

4. WINDING-UP.

Claim by Creditor—Admission in Books.]—A. insured a ship in a mutual insurance association in 1863, and the policy, which was not stamped, was annually renewed up to the year ending March, 1868. In February, 1868, the ship, with A. on board, was lost at sea. The loss of the ship was reported to the association, and from entries in the minute books the money due upon the policy was raised by order of the committee, but retained by the secretary until a personal representative to A. had been appointed. The company was ordered to be wound up in January, 1870, and A.'s widow obtained letters of administration to him in December, 1871. Upon a claim by the widow under the winding-up for the amount secured by the policy:—Held, that there was a sufficient admission of liability in the books of the company to enable the widow to recover as a creditor for the amount secured by the policy, although, from the absence of a stamp, the policy itself, upon which the claim arose, could not be given in evidence. Teignmouth and General Mutual Shipping Association, In re, Martin's Claim, 41 L. J., Ch. 679; L. R. 14 Eq. 148; 26 L. T. 684; 1 Asp. M. C. 325.

Contributories—Evidence.]—B. & Co., by letter, authorised the managers of a mutual marine insurance association to insure a ship with the association, and undertook to abide by the rules and regulations thereof. By the rules, each insurer became liable to contribute to the losses of any other insurer in certain proportions. In pursuance of the authority given by B. & Co., a duly stamped policy was issued to them, which, however, contained no reference to the rules:—Held, that the letter, although not stamped, was admissible in evidence, and that B. & Co. were contributories. Albert Average Association, In re, Blyth's Case, L. R. 13 Eq. 529; 20 W. R. 504.

Removal of Contributory.]—An unregistered mutual marine assurance association was ordered to be wound up in 1870. A rule of the association provided that any policy-holder should cease to be a member forty-eight hours after the loss of his ship. A. had ceased to be a member under this rule in 1867, but a part of the sum insured by his policy was still due at the date of the winding-up. A. proved his debt in the winding-up, was put upon the list of contributories, and paid a call. In 1875 all the policies were held to be illegal, and all the debts of the company were consequently expunged, except 42*l.* due to outside creditors. On an application by A. to have his name removed from the list of contributories:—Held, that it could not be so removed, and that he was liable to contribute to the costs of the winding-up. Queen's Average Association, In re, Lynes, Ex parte, 38 L. T. 90; 26 W. R. 432; 3 Asp. M. C. 576.

Mutual Marine Insurance Association—Rights of Creditors and Contributories inter se.]—Order made for winding up an unregistered mutual marine insurance association:—Held, that the order did not affect the contract made between the parties; that the liability of each member extended only to the payment of such proportions as the rules prescribed of the various losses that occurred during the subsistence of his policy; that payment to the secretary discharged each member to the extent of such payment; that outside creditors were creditors, not of the association or of the members collectively, but of the persons who ordered goods or services; that the costs of winding-up were to be borne by payers and receivers ratably according to the amounts paid or received by them respectively. London Marine Assurance Association, In re, Andrew's and Alexander's Case, Chatt's Case, Cook's Case, Crew's Case, L. R. 8 Eq. 176; 20 L. T. 943; 17 W. R. 784.

SLANDER OF TITLE.

Malice Necessary to maintain Action.]—There must be malice, either express or implied, to maintain an action for slander of title. Hargrave v. Le Breton, 4 Burr. 2422.

—— Statement by Lessor that Covenants of Lease Broken.]—The defendant, who was the ground landlord and remainderman of a lease of premises of which the plaintiff was assignee, stated at an auction where the lease and assignment were put up for sale, that all the covenants of the lease had been broken, that he had served a notice in ejectment, and that the premises would cost 70*l.* to repair. Some of the covenants had been broken and others not. The effect of the statement was that the lease and assignment were sold for a lower price than they otherwise would have produced. In an action for slander of title the judge directed the jury that the only question was, whether the defendant had said anything untrue about the lease, and that if he had made misrepresentations, the plaintiff was entitled to recover :—Held, that this was a misdirection, the proper question being whether that part of the defendant's statement which was false was also malicious and productive of damage to the plaintiff. Brook v. Rawl, 4 Ex. 521 ; 19 L. J., Ex. 114.

—— Claim under Bill of Sale.]—A. died possessed of furniture in a beershop. His widow, without taking out administration, continued in possession of the beershop for three or four years and then died, having whilst so in possession conveyed all the furniture by a bill of sale to her landlords by way of security for a debt she had contracted with them. After the widow's death the plaintiff took out letters of administration to her husband's estate, and informed the defendant, the landlord's agent, that the bill of sale was invalid, as the widow had no title to the furniture. Subsequently the plaintiff was about to sell the furniture by auction, when the defendant interposed to forbid the sale, and said that he claimed the goods for his principals under a bill of sale. On proof of these facts in an action for slander of title the plaintiff was nonsuited :—Held, that the mere fact of the defendant having been told before the sale that the bill of sale was invalid, was no evidence of malice to be left to the jury, and that the plaintiff was therefore properly nonsuited. Steward v. Young, 39 L. J., C. P. 85 ; L. R. 5 C. P. 122 ; 22 L. T. 168 ; 18 W. R. 492.

—— Not implied from Mistake of Law.]—In an action for slander of title, where it is necessary for the plaintiff to prove malice, the court will not infer malice from the defendant having put a wrong construction on a complicated act of parliament. Pater v. Baker, 3 C. B. 831 ; 16 L. J., C. P. 124 ; 11 Jur. 370.

Action applies in case of both Real and Personal Property.]—The action for slander of title applies not only to cases where the false and malicious assertion relates to real property, but where it relates to personal chattels. Wren v. Weild, 10 B. & S. 51 ; 38 L. J., Q. B. 327 ; L. R. 4 Q. B. 731 ; 20 L. T. 1007.

Bonâ-fide Claim of Title not Actionable—Notice of Infringement of Patent.]—When a person claims a right in himself, which he intends to enforce against a purchaser, he is entitled, and in common fairness bound, to give the intended purchaser warning of his intention, and no action lies for giving such preliminary warning, unless it can be shown, either that the threat was made malâ fide, only with the intent to injure the vendor, and without any purpose to follow it up by an action against the purchaser, or that the circumstances were such as to make the bringing an action altogether wrongful. Ib.

The plaintiffs alleged in their declaration that the defendant falsely and maliciously wrote to and told persons, who had bought certain machines of the plaintiffs, that the machines were infringements of the defendant's patents, and that the defendant claimed royalties for the use of the machines, and that if they used the machines without paying royalties, he should take legal proceedings. The plaintiffs offered to prove various specifications and machines, existing before the date of the defendant's patent, to shew that his specification claimed matters that were not new, and also that the defendant had used them. The judge ruled that, as the defendant's patent was still subsisting, and not set aside, on scire facias or otherwise, the evidence was immaterial, and directed a nonsuit :—Held, that the ruling of the judge was right. Ib.

The holder of a patent, the validity of which is not impeached, who issues notices against purchasing certain articles, alleging that they are infringements of his patent and threatening legal proceedings against those who purchase them, is not liable to an action for damages by the vendor of those articles for the injury done to the vendor's trade by his issuing them, provided they are issued bonâ fide in the belief that the articles complained of are infringements of his patent. Nor is he liable to be restrained by injunction from continuing to issue them until it is proved that they are untrue, so that his further issuing them would not be bonâ fide. Halsey v. Brotherhood, 51 L. J., Ch. 233 ; 19 Ch. D. 386 ; 45 L. T. 640 ; 30 W. R. 279—C. A.

—— Statement as to Breach of Covenant in Lease.]—A lease, in which was a proviso for re-entry if the rent was in arrear twenty-eight days, being exposed to sale by the assignee, and rent being then in arrear, the lessor announced at the sale, that the vendors could not make a title, in consequence of which, bidders who came to buy went away ; he afterwards offered 100*l.* for the lease, but subsequently recovered the premises in ejectment :—Held, that no action for slander of title lay against him. Smith v. Spooner, 3 Taunt. 246 ; 12 R. R. 645.

The defendant may give evidence under the general issue, that he spoke the words claiming title in himself. Ib.

—— By Agent of Claimant.]—An attorney of a party claiming title to premises put up to sale is not liable in an action of slander of title, if he bonâ fide, though without authority, makes such objections to the other's title as his principal would have been authorised in making. Watson v. Reynolds, M. & M. 1 ; 31 R. R. 706.

Bonâ-fide Statement by Person Interested—Imputing Insanity to Person from whom Vendor Bought.]—In an action for slander of title, conveyed in a letter to a person about to purchase an estate of the plaintiff, imputing insanity to Y., from whom the plaintiff purchased it, and that the title would therefore be disputed, per quod, the person refused to complete the purchase :—Held, that the defendant, who had married the sister of Y., who was heir-at-law to her brother, in the event of his dying without issue, was not to be considered as a mere stranger ; and that the question for the jury was not whether they were satisfied, as men of good sense and good understanding, that Y. was insane, or that the defendant entertained a persuasion that he was insane, upon such grounds as would have persuaded a man of sound sense and knowledge of business, but whether he acted bonâ fide in the communication which he made, believing it to be true, as he judged according to his own understanding, and under such impressions as his situation and character were likely to beget. Pitt v. Donovan, 1 M. & S. 639 ; 14 R. R. 535.

Statement in Excess of Occasion—Sale of Disputed Bond.]—The plaintiff having advertised for sale a bond executed to him by the defendant as a surety, the payment of which had been resisted in a long course of litigation, in which the validity of the bond had been disputed ; the defendant, pending a suit in error, published among the persons assembled to bid for the bond at an auction a statement of all the circumstances under which the bond was given, and, alluding to the plaintiff, concluded, "His object is either to extract money from the pocket of an unwary purchaser, or, what is more likely, by his threat of publication, to extort money from me" :—Held, that this exceeded the latitude allowed for privileged communications or observations on titles by a party interested, and that it was a libel, although no express malice was proved. Robertson v. M'Dougall, 4 Bing. 670 ; 1 M. & P. 692 ; 3 Car. & P. 259 ; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 171.

Advertisement for Non-existing Will—Question of Bona Fides.]—In an action for slander of title, the defendant having issued an advertisement offering a reward for the production of a will of a deceased person, whose property the plaintiff was about to sell, as administrator, after having been told by the attorney for the deceased that there was no will :—Held, that the question was whether, after this, he had an honest and reasonable belief that there was a will. Atkins v. Perrin, 3 F. & F. 179.

Shares in Mine.]—The plaintiff being possessed of shares in a silver mine, the defendant published that the "petition in a bill filed in the court of chancery against the plaintiff and certain other persons, as shareholders in the mine, for an account and injunction had been granted by the vice-chancellor, and that persons duly authorised had arrived on the workings" : —Held, that the publication was not a libel on the plaintiff or on his business, but a mere slander of his title to the shares. Malachy v. Soper, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 371 ; 3 Scott, 725 ; 2 Hodges, 217 ; 6 L. J., C. P. 32.

Copyright—Songs.]—The plaintiffs, vocalists, advertised in a theatrical newspaper as follows : —"The sisters Hartridge have great pleasure in thanking Messrs. Chappell & Co., Messrs. Metzler & Co." (music publishers) "and others, for their kind, unhesitating permission to sing any morceaux from their musical publications." The defendant, who was interested as agent for the proprietors for the stage-right of certain songs published by the firms mentioned, wrote to the proprietors of two music-halls at which the plaintiffs were engaged to sing, to the effect that the advertisement, if relied upon in every particular, was calculated to lead them to incur penalties under the Copyright Act, inasmuch as the publishers named had, in some instances, no power to give the alleged permission, and insinuating that music-hall singing was not calculated to create a demand for their musical publications :—Held, that, inasmuch as the letters were reasonably susceptible of a construction which would make them libellous, the opinion of the jury ought to have been taken upon their meaning. Hart v. Wall, 46 L. J., C. P. 227 ; 2 C. P. D. 146 ; 25 W. R. 373.

—— Wool Pattern taken from Engraving.]—D., the proprietor of a periodical, published with his Christmas number a pattern for wool-work, consisting of the figures in Millais' picture, "The Huguenot," with a different background. The pattern appeared not to have been taken from the original picture, but to have been made by means of a fine engraving published in 1857. The pattern, as usual in patterns of this kind, was a mosaic, built up of small coloured squares. B., who was the owner of the copyright in the engraving, but was not owner of the picture, issued a circular : "We give you notice that if you sell, &c., any copy of our subject, 'The Huguenot,' without the stamp or imprint of our firm, in whom the sole subsisting copyright exists, that all such unstamped copies are imitations and unlawfully made." D. therefore brought an action against B. for damages, and an injunction in respect of the alleged slander of his title ; B., by counterclaim, claimed an injunction against the sale of the pattern, and penalties in respect of the infringement of his copyright : —Held, by Bacon, V.-C., that the pattern was an infringement of B.'s copyright, and that he was entitled to the statutory penalty of 5*s.* for every copy sold by D. But held, on appeal, that a pattern of this description was not a copy of the engraving within the meaning of 7 Geo. 3, c. 38, and 17 Geo. 3, c. 57, as it did not copy or imitate anything which constituted the work of the engraver ; and that the counter-claim ought therefore to have been dismissed. Dicks v. Brooks, 49 L. J., Ch. 812 ; 15 Ch. D. 22 ; 43 L. T. 71 ; 29 W. R. 87.

Disparagement of Trade Goods.]—To publish of a tradesman falsely and without lawful occasion that the goods in which he trades are inferior in quality to similar goods in which his rivals trade, is actionable if special damage results. Western Counties Manure Co. v. Lawes Chemical Manure Co., 43 L. J., Ex. 171 ; L. R. 9 Ex. 218 ; 23 W. R. 5.

Joseph Thorley died in 1876, having for years carried on the manufacture of a condiment well known as "Thorley's Food for Cattle." His executors continued his business. In 1877 a company was formed for manufacturing the same article, and employed a brother of Joseph Thorley who was acquainted with the secret of the manufacture. The executors published in the newspapers an advertisement warning the public that any food purporting to be Thorley's food for cattle, and not signed "Joseph Thorley," was not the manufacture of the establishment carrying on business as Joseph Thorley, the proprietors of which were alone possessed of the secret for compounding the food. The executors also issued a circular to their customers warning them against the course pursued by the company "in seeking to foist upon the public an article which they pretend is the same as that manufactured by the late Joseph Thorley." The court came to the conclusion that there was no substantial difference between the food sold by the executors and that sold by the company :—

Held, that the advertisement and circular contained untrue representations calculated to injure the company in their trade, and that the issuing of them ought to be restrained by injunction. Thorley's Cattle Food Co. v. Massam, 14 Ch. D. 763; 42 L. T. 851; 28 W. R. 966—C. A.

An action will not lie for a false statement disparaging a trader's goods where no special damage is proved. The appellant sold the respondent's "infants' food," affixing to the respondent's wrappers a label stating that the appellant's "food for infants and invalids" was far more nutritious and healthful than any other. It was not proved that the statement was untrue, or that it had caused any damage to the plaintiff:—Held, that no action would lie. White v. Mellin, 64 L. J., Ch. 308; [1895] A. C. 154; 11 R. 141; 72 L. T. 334; 43 W. R. 353; 59 J. P. 628—H. L. (E.)

Restraining by Injunction.]—The court has now jurisdiction to restrain by injunction the publication of a libel injurious to trade. Thomas v. Williams, 49 L. J., Ch. 605; 44 Ch. D. 861; 43 L. T. 91; 28 W. R. 983.

Where an action will not lie for defamation an injunction will not be granted. White v. Mellin, ubi supra.

In a case of trade libel, whether the remedy sought be injunction or damages, special damages must be proved. Ib.

—— Burden of Proof of Falsity of Statement and Mala Fides on Plaintiff.]—Where a plaintiff brings an action to restrain a defendant from issuing notices to the plaintiff's customers that the plaintiff in selling goods is infringing the defendant's patent rights, it is for the plaintiff to prove that the defendant's statements are false; and if no mala fides is proved, and no damages could be obtained, the court will not grant the injunction. If in a judicial proceeding the statements are proved to be false in fact, an injunction would be granted against continuing them, as that would be acting mala fides. Burnett v. Tuk, 45 L. T. 743.

—— Interlocutory Injunction.]—To obtain an interlocutory injunction restraining the defendant from issuing circulars, &c., stating the wrongful user by the plaintiff upon his manufactured articles of labels claimed by the defendant, and from threatening the plaintiff's customers with legal proceedings for selling his articles bearing the labels in question, the plaintiff must satisfy the court that the statements in the circulars, &c., complained of are in fact untrue. The fact that the defendant, having commenced actions against the plaintiff and his customers for injunctions restraining the wrongful user of the labels in question, had not thought fit to move for interlocutory injunctions, held to be no ground by itself for granting the plaintiff the injunction sought for. Anderson v. Liebig's Extract of Meat Co., 45 L. T. 757.

SLAVERY AND SLAVE TRADE.

Status and Condition of Slaves.]—Slavery is of such a nature that it is incapable of being introduced into this country, on any reasons, moral or political, and can be no farther considered in this country than as is supported by positive law. Somerset v. Stewart, Lofft, 1.

Where negroes in a state of slavery in a colony of Spain escaped from their master's plantation, and took refuge and were received on board a British ship of war, whilst she was stationed at an island captured by his majesty's arms from the United States, in time of war; and after notice given to the officers commanding on the station, that they were runaway slaves, the officers carried them to and left them at a British colony:—Held, that an action would not lie in this country by a British subject, who claimed the slaves as his property, against the officers for harbouring and detaining such negroes; although, by the lex loci whence they escaped, slavery was permitted and tolerated. Forbes v. Cochrane, 3 D. & R. 679; 2 B. & C. 448; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 67; 26 R. R. 402.

Action by.]—No action lies by a slave, coming to this country and continuing his service, for wages on an implied contract. Alfred v. Fitzjames (Marquis), 3 Esp. 3.

Contract by.]—An infant slave in the West Indies executed an indenture, by which he covenanted to serve B. for a certain term of years as his servant, and B. covenanted to do certain things on his part; B. then came to England with the slave; in an action against A., who had seduced him from the service of B., A. was not permitted to allege that the contract was void as being made by an infant and a slave, for the court held that the effect of such a contract might be the manumission of the slave; and, consequently, that it was for his own benefit; and being for his own benefit, that it was, at most, only voidable by the infant himself. Keane v. Boycott, 2 H. Bl. 511; 3 R. R. 494.

Right of Property in.]—Slaves in Antigua could not be equitably mortgaged by a deposit of a registered title-deed, containing a schedule of slaves, if the memorandum accompanying the deposit, which is registered, do not contain a list of the slaves. Borrodaile, Ex parte, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 398. Reversing S. C., sub nom. Rucker, Ex parte, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 481; 3 Deac. & C. 704.

By the laws of Antigua, slaves were declared to be inheritance and affixed to the inheritance; and by 59 Geo. 3, c. 120, s. 9, no deed or instrument conveying any interest in slaves was valid, unless the registered names and descriptions of the slaves were set forth in the instrument or in some schedule thereof. The bankrupts deposited with R. & Co., as security for a loan of money, a deed of conveyance to the bankrupts of a plantation and slaves in Antigua, with a written memorandum accompanying the deposit. The deed contained a schedule of the registered names and descriptions of the slaves, but they were wholly omitted in the memorandum of the deposit:—Held, that this was not a good equitable mortgage of the slaves mentioned in the deed; and, secondly, that the slaves, being real property in the island of Antigua, could not be considered as within the order and disposition of the bankrupts at the time of their bankruptcy. Ib.

A testator resident in Jamaica devised the rents, issues and profits of his estate, called Islington and Cove's Pen, in that island, to A. and B.:—Held, that the estate and the slaves, mules, cattle and machinery thereon, passed under this devise. Stewart v. Garnett, 3 Sim. 398.

The compulsory manumission or sale of slaves effected by the Abolition of Slavery Act (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 73), so impressed slaves with the character of personal estate from the passing of the act, that the compensation money for slaves passed under the will of a testator, made after the passing of the act, and who died before the period of manumission had arrived, although the will was not attested so as to pass real estate. Richards v. Att.-Gen. for Jamaica, 6 Moore, P. C. 381; 13 Jur. 197.

In estimating the compensation due for the loss of sugar estates unduly held under sequestration for a number of years, and of the actual produce of which during that time there was no evidence:—Held, that the allowance of 10*l.* per annum for each negro on the estate is not a right principle to proceed upon. Semble, that the proper principle to proceed on, under such circumstances, would be to ascertain the average number of hogsheads of sugar such estates usually produced, and to award compensation for the value of that number in each year, after deducting a proper sum for the expenses of cultivation. A country reconquered from an enemy reverts to the same state that it was in before its conquest. The British inhabitants of a part of the French dominions which was conquered by the Dutch, and afterwards reconquered by the French, ought therefore to have had, after its reconquest, the same protection that they were entitled to under the treaty of commerce of 1786; and were awarded compensation in respect of losses, after the reconquest, by sequestration of their property, in contravention of that treaty by the French government. Gumbes's Case, 2 Knapp, 369.

Compensation under Slavery Abolition Act.]—The consignee of a West India estate, even though appointed by the court, is not entitled, during the continuance of his office, to be paid the balance due to him out of the compensation money awarded under the act for the abolition of slavery. Farquharson v. Balfour, 8 Sim. 210.

The consignee of a West India estate, who had, out of his own moneys, made payments on account of an annuity charged on the estate, was held entitled to be reimbursed such payments out of compensation money, which had been awarded under the act for the abolition of slavery. Shaw v. Simpson, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 732.

Quære, whether such a consignee has a lien on the corpus of the estate for moneys expended by him in its cultivation. Ib.

Lessee of slaves held entitled to a portion of the money awarded under the West India Compensation Act, notwithstanding a covenant in the lease to refer to arbitration in case of loss by abridgment of the labour of slaves, or diminution of the returns, by means of any act of parliament or regulation of the colonial legislature; the act for the total abolition of slavery not having been contemplated by the parties. Gordon v. Bruce, 2 Moore, P. C. 261.

Trading and Trafficking in.]—A foreigner who is not prohibited from carrying on the slave trade by the laws of his own country, may, in an English court of judicature, recover damages which may have been sustained by him in respect of a wrongful seizure by a British subject of a cargo of slaves on board a ship employed by him in carrying on the African slave trade. Madrazo v. Willes, 3 B. & Ald. 353; 22 R. R. 422. See Farmer v. Legg, 7 Term Rep. 186.

An American ship was fitted out in the port of Liverpool, and sent to the coast of Africa, in 1806, on a joint adventure for trafficking in slaves. An English ship was sent at the same time, by the same parties, with arms and ammunition, to be at the disposal of the supercargo of the American ship; security having been given to the admiralty that they were to be expended on trade on the coast of Africa. On the arrival of the two ships in the River Congo, the arms and ammunition were transhipped on board the American ship, which was thereupon seized by a British privateer, and ultimately condemned as contraband:—Held, that the whole transaction was illegal, and that no action for contribution or account, in regard thereto, could be maintained by any of the parties concerned against the other. Stewart v. Gibson, 7 Cl. & F. 707.

British subjects, domiciled in Great Britain, being possessed of slaves in the Brazils, where the purchase and holding of slaves are lawful, contracted with a Brazilian subject domiciled in the Brazils, to sell them to him, to be used and employed there. Some of the slaves had been purchased by the English subjects in the Brazils, after 5 Geo. 4, c. 113, but before 6 & 7 Vict. c. 98, for the purpose of being employed; and these were employed in the working of mines there, of which they were the proprietors; the rest of the slaves were the offspring of those first mentioned, and were in their possession before the passing of the last act:—Held, that the contract might be enforced here, there being nothing in the statutes to prohibit a contract by a British subject for the sale of slaves lawfully held by him in a foreign country, where the possession and sale of slaves are lawful. Santos v. Illidge, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 861; 29 L. J., C. P. 348; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1348; 3 L. T. 154; 8 W. R. 705—Ex. Ch.

A naval commander, stationed on the coast of Africa, with instructions to suppress the slave trade, was requested by the governors of Sierra Leone to obtain the liberation of two British subjects, detained as slaves at the Gallinas by the son of the king of that country, and in effecting the object to use force, if necessary. He accordingly proceeded to the Gallinas with an armed force, and having landed at Dombocorro, took military possession of a barracoon belonging to the plaintiff, who was a Spaniard, carrying on the slave trade at the Gallinas. He then communicated with the king of the country, and the two British subjects having been released, the commander concluded a treaty for the abolition of the slave trade in that country. In execution of this treaty, he fired the barracoons of the plaintiff, and carried away his slaves to Sierra Leone, where they were liberated. Some of the plaintiff's goods used in the slave trade were claimed by the king as forfeited, and delivered up to him; other goods were destroyed. These proceedings having been communicated to the lords of the admiralty, and the secretaries of state for the foreign and colonial departments, they respectively, by letter, adopted and ratified the act of the commander :—Held, first, that the plaintiff had a property in his slaves, and might maintain trespass for their seizure, the slave trade not being piratical by the law of nations, and it not appearing that Spain had passed any law abolishing the slave trade, pursuant to the treaty embodied in 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 6. Buron v. Denman, 2 Ex. 167.

Held, secondly, that the ratification of the commander's act by the ministers of state was equivalent to a prior command, and rendered it an act of state, for which the crown was alone responsible. Ib.

The provisions of the 5 Geo. 4, c. 113, are not confined to acts done by British subjects in furtherance of the slave trade in England or the British colonies, but apply to acts done by British subjects in furtherance of that trade in places not part of the British dominions. Reg. v. Zulueta, 1 Car. & K. 215.

A declaration upon a contract, dated 25th September, 1834, whereby the plaintiff, in consideration of a sum of money, sold and transferred all right, title and interest in and to the services and labour of 153 apprenticed labourers, to the defendant on behalf and to the use of his plantations, with a warranty of quiet possession of the services of such apprenticed labourers, according to law; and defendant engaged to pay to the plaintiff the money by instalments, with interest; and in case of failure in payment of any of the instalments, the plaintiff should be entitled to reclaim, and the services of the apprenticed labourers should revert to the plaintiff, the defendant remaining liable for the payment of such sums as should be due for the value or hire of the labour during such period as he should have received the services of the apprenticed labourers. Breach, nonpayment of two instalments. Plea, that while the apprenticed labourers were in the service of the defendant, under the terms of the sale and agreement, an ordinance was made by the governor of the colony, by which it was enacted, that all persons who, on the 1st August, 1838, should be holden within British Guiana as prædial apprenticed labourers, should, after that date, be discharged from the remaining term of their apprenticeship; and that during the time that their services could by law be had and received, defendant paid all instalments :—Held, that the declaration was good, and that it was not to be intended that the contract upon which it was founded was made concerning apprentices in England. Mittelholzer v. Fullarton, 6 Q. B. 989; 9 Jur. 334—Ex. Ch.

—— Desertion by Sailor—Defence that Captain threatened to sell him as a Slave.]—To an action for work as a seaman, a plea, that the work was done after the passing of the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, in respect of a voyage from San Francisco to this kingdom; and that he, before the time of doing the work, had engaged himself to serve as a seaman on board a British merchant ship, for a voyage which, during the doing of the work, was continuing, and the plaintiff whilst such seaman, deserted. Replication, that the plaintiff was a negro; that negroes are bought and sold as slaves in divers states of the United States; that whilst the plaintiff was serving on board the captain threatened to sell him as a slave to citizens of the United States; that San Francisco is situated in one of the United States, to wit, California; and that the plaintiff had just and reasonable grounds for believing, and did believe, that the captain, on the arrival of the ship at San Francisco, meant to carry his threat into execution; and, in order to prevent the captain from selling him as a slave, he deserted :—Held, bad. Edward v. Trevellick, 4 El. & Bl. 59; 24 L. J., Q. B. 9; 2 C. L. R. 1605; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 110; 2 W. R. 586.

—— Evidence as to.]—In order to convict a party who is charged with having employed and loaded a vessel for the purpose of slave trading, it is not necessary to shew that the vessel which carried out the goods was intended to be used for bringing back slaves in return; but it will be sufficient if there was a slave adventure, and the vessel was in any way engaged in the advancement of the adventure. Reg. v. Zulueta, 1 Car. & K. 215.

Where a party living in London was charged with having chartered a vessel and loaded goods on board for the purpose of slave trading :—Held, that slave trading papers found on board the vessel when she was seized in foreign parts, but not traced in any way to the knowledge of such party, were not admissible against him. Ib.

As proceedings under the laws for the suppression of the slave trade are penal, the offence charged being a criminal offence, the onus probandi is upon the seizors to establish that the law has been infringed. The Laura, 2 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 181; 6 N. R. 321; 13 L. T. 133.

Offences against the slave trade acts, may be established by circumstantial evidence; but the circumstances must be such as to satisfy a reasonable mind that the suspicion as to the character of the vessel is well founded. Ib.

Where articles of merchandise usually employed for the purpose of the slave trade, but capable of being employed for lawful commerce, are found on board a vessel seized on suspicion of being so employed, it is not sufficient to consider merely of what the cargo of the vessel accused of being implicated in the unlawful trade consists, but all the circumstances of the case and more especially the locality in which the vessel may be found, must be taken into consideration. Ib.

Condemnation of Ships for Trafficking.]—It is necessary, to justify a condemnation imposing forfeiture and penalties for a breach of the 5 Geo. 4, c. 113, that it be shewn as regards the ship, that she was employed in contravention of the object of that act, and that she was employed with the knowledge of the owner, and as to the shippers, that the goods had been shipped by them wilfully and knowingly for the purpose of being employed in the slave trade. The Newport, Swabey, 317; 11 Moore, P. C. 155; 6 W. R. 310.

An Italian merchant ship was seized by an officer (acting unofficially) in the harbour of Sierra Leone, under the impression that she was a slaver, and had violated the provisions of the 5 Geo. 4, c. 113. The master applied to the vice-admiralty court of Sierra Leone for the release of his ship, and for damages and costs for its detention :—Held, that the seizure of the vessel was quite unjustifiable, and that the master ought to recover damages and costs for its detention. The Ricardo Schmidt, 36 L. J., P. C. 3; L. R. 1 P. C. 268; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 895; 15 W. R. 236; 4 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 121.

A native of the Ionian Islands purchased an American ship, and, upon a declaration that he was a British subject, obtained from the British consul at Cuba a provisional registry of the ship as British. The ship was afterwards seized and condemned for a breach of the slave trade acts. Upon a preliminary objection taken on appeal to the jurisdiction of the court below, on the ground of the national character of the owner of the ship and cargo :—Held, first, that the registry, flag and pass of a ship carry with them the presumption that they are true and correct, and that the owner was estopped from proving that he was not a British subject, and consequently that the registry of the ship was void. The Laura, 2 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 181; 12 L. T. 685; 13 W. R. 369.

Held, secondly, that even if he could have established that the registry was void, and the ship not entitled to claim the protection of any flag or nation, yet that the ship was, by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 73, liable to be adjudicated upon by a vice-admiralty court for a violation of the slave trade acts. Ib.

Proceedings taken against a vessel seized under the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 73, are to be according to the rules and regulations established under the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 51, and not according to the forms of the civil law. Guimaraens v. Preston, 4 Moore, P. C. 167.

—— Condemnation of Seizor in Costs.]—The "O.," a Portuguese vessel, was seized on the 5th December, 1876, whilst lying at anchor in the harbour and port of F., in Sierra Leone, as liable to be forfeited for offences committed against the provisions of 5 Geo. 4, c. 113, and 36 & 37 Vict. c. 88 (the Slave Trade Act, 1873), but was subsequently released by the court on it appearing that she was not engaged in the slave trade, but was chartered and intended to carry free immigrants :—Held, on appeal, that the seizor was rightly condemned in costs and damages. Although certain articles on board (shackles, an extraordinary number of empty casks, an extraordinary quantity of rice and mats) are included among the equipments which are declared to be primâ facie evidence of a vessel being engaged in the slave trade, both by the treaty between England and Portugal, carried into effect by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 53, and by the Slave Trade Act, 1873; yet the seizor having had the means from the surrounding circumstances and from the ship's papers of informing himself of the true character of the vessel, and the true condition of the men on board who were alleged to be slaves, had no reasonable grounds for the suspicion that the vessel was engaged in or fitted out for the purpose of the slave trade. Reg. v. Casaca, 49 L. J., P. C. 41; 5 App. Cas. 548; 43 L. T. 290—P. C.

—— Obligation of Seizor to justify his Acts.]—The obligation upon a seizor to justify the seizure under the slave trade acts of a vessel plainly engaged in bonâ fide trade within a harbour is a very strict obligation. The Ricardo Schmidt, supra, approved. Ib.

—— What is Justification.]—A reasonable suspicion that the alleged slaves had been kidnapped on board with the object of carrying them as free labourers, and not of consigning them to slavery, would not have justified the seizure and detention of the vessel. Ib.

—— Treaty with Portugal, Effect of.]—According to the true construction of the Portuguese treaties, the consent on the part of Portugal that certain articles mentioned in the first schedule to the Slave Trade Act, 1873, when found on board a Portuguese vessel, shall be considered as primâ facie evidence of her being engaged in the slave trade relates only to vessels on the high seas, and does not extend to vessels in a foreign port or foreign territorial waters. The 4th section, therefore, of the act cannot be extended to a Portuguese vessel lying in British waters. Ib.

—— Kidnapping Act — Liability of Naval Officer for Seizure of Vessel.]—By the Kidnapping Act, 1872, s. 3, vessels carrying native labourers of the South Sea Islands, not being part of the crew, must have a licence; by s. 6, vessels carrying native labourers without a licence are subject to the provisions of s. 16; by s. 9, to detain or confine a native for the purpose of removing him from one place to another is declared to be felony; by s. 16, any vessel suspected upon reasonable grounds of committing an offence against the 9th section may be detained; by s. 20, no damages shall be payable and no officer shall be responsible for the detention or seizure of a vessel in pursuance of the act. Before the passing of the Kidnapping Act, 1872, the plaintiff's vessel sailed on a voyage to the South Sea Islands for the purpose of fishing; her master hired native labourers, and after the fishing was over the vessel was engaged in carrying the natives home when she was seized by a man-of-war, of which the defendant was commander. At the time of the seizure the defendant bonâ fide believed that there was reasonable ground for suspecting that an offence had been committed against the act :—Held, no action would lie against the defendant. Burns v. Nowell, 49 L. J., Q. B. 468; 5 Q. B. D. 444; 43 L. T. 342; 29 W. R. 39; 44 J. P. 828—C. A.

Bounties.]—The governor of a colony is the person to whom the general management of the colony is intrusted, and therefore is the person entitled to the bounties which are payable in respect of a seizure of slaves, even though he is absent from the colony at a time when the seizure is made. Bounties for Seizure of Slaves, In re, 32 L. J., Adm. 189; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1254.

A queen's ship, which is authorised to capture slave ships, being in sight during the chase and capture by another ship of a war vessel equipped for the slave trade, is entitled to share as joint captor in the tonnage bounties awarded under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 47, unless the animus capiendi is clearly rebutted. Anon., Br. & Lush. 370.

A. ARTICLED CLERKS.

I. PERSONS CONTRACTING.

Who may take an Articled Clerk.]—An attorney whose name is on the 1*s.* roll of one of the superior courts of Westminster pursuant to 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 16, is a practising attorney in Wales under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 3, and may take an articled clerk, and make the affidavit required by s. 8. Davies or Davis, Ex parte, D. & M. 463; 1 D. & L. 892; 5 Q. B. 564; 13 L. J., Q. B. 146; 8 Jur. 288.

—— More than One Member of Firm.]—A clerk may be articled to more than one member of a firm. Holland, In re, 41 L. J., Q. B. 141; L. R. 7 Q. B. 297; 26 L. T. 289; 20 W. R. 756.

Who may be Clerks.]—A person who holds a situation, and receives a salary from government, as surveyor of assessed taxes, is not sui juris to enter into a contract for service as an articled clerk; and where a person so situated was articled to an attorney, and nominally served him for five years, retaining his situation under government all the time, and then commenced practising as an attorney, the court ordered him to be struck off the rolls. Taylor, In re, 6 D. & R. 428; 4 B. & C. 341; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 242.

An attorney having, by mere collusion, and with intent to secure the business arising from the prisoners, taken one of the turnkeys of the king's bench prison for his articled clerk, the articles were cancelled in court. Fraser's Case, 1 Burr. 291.

Service by a barrister under articles is not available, though he never during the service practised as a barrister, and it was wholly from inadvertence that he did not apply to be disbarred before entering into the articles of clerkship. Bateman, In re, 2 D. & L. 725; 14 L. J., Q. B. 89.

Neither the humbleness of the origin of the applicant, nor his having filled the office of a process server of civil bill process, nor his having been dismissed from that office for having violated a rule of the assistant barrister's court, under the belief that it did not apply to him, nor his having on a particular occasion acted as a bailiff in the execution of a fi. fa., will disqualify him from becoming apprentice to an attorney, his character and conduct being in other respects unimpeached. M'Colgan, In re, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 207.

Liability of, on Guarantee.]—An articled clerk held liable on a guarantee given on behalf of his principal. Whitfield v. Moojen, 1 F. & F. 290.

II. SERVICE UNDER ARTICLES.

From what Date Reckoned.]—The service is reckoned as from the date of the execution, and not from the day of the date of the articles; consequently the clerk cannot be admitted till he has served five years from the day of the execution. Angel, Ex parte, 4 Jur. 656.

A clerk and M.A. was articled on the 8th of May, 1858, for three years "from the date thereof":—Held, that such service was not completed until after the 8th of May, 1861. Articled Clerk, In re, 9 W. R. 639.

Service for twenty terms (less than five years) is not sufficient; the five years must be years of service not years of learning. Mackay, In re, 18 L. T. 371.

Service must be under Written Articles.]—An articled clerk must not only be bound for five years, and serve five years, but the service itself must be under written articles. Adams, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Ch. 42; 4 Ch. D. 39; 35 L. T. 751; 25 W. R. 54.

The court will not swear in an apprentice who had been in attorney's office for five years, where for part of the time he had been upon trial, and was not articled until afterwards. Kirwan, In re, Hay. & J. 726.

Supervision of Master—What Sufficient.]—In deciding whether the service of an articled clerk has been sufficiently subject to the supervision of the master, the court will not lay down any general rule, but take into consideration the peculiar circumstances of each particular case. Duncan, In re, 5 B. & S. 341; 33 L. J., Q. B. 190; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 939; 10 L. T. 337; 12 W. R. 752.

A clerk, having been a managing clerk for several years previously to entering into articles, and also a person of mature age, renders the control and supervision of his master less necessary than in the case of a young man just entering on the profession. Ib.

A clerk, having a connection of his own, derived from a former master, articled himself to a solicitor, and managed the business introduced by him under an arrangement with the solicitor that he should draw 150*l.* a year out of the profits, and the rest be retained to form the solicitor's share of the capital of a partnership which was to be entered into between them upon the clerk's becoming admitted. On an application by the clerk to be admitted to the final examination:—Held, that he had so far complied with the requirements of the statute as to service, as to be entitled to present himself for examination. Joyce, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Ch. 295; 4 Ch. D. 596; 25 W. R. 340.

Service with Whom.]—Under 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, the clerk must have actually served the five years; and the statute was not complied with by the clerk serving part of the time with another attorney with his master's consent, and the rest of the time with his master. Hill, Ex parte, 7 Term Rep. 456; 4 R. R. 492.

Where a clerk has been articled to one of the members of a firm, and he covenanted to serve him, a service with a partner, for three months after the decease of the master, before an assignment was effected, is not service under the articles, although the partner was a party to the articles, and such months will not count. Dalton, Ex parte, 9 D. P. C. 110; 4 Jur. 1187.

Where Different Periods of Service may be Coupled.]—An articled clerk to an attorney served under the articles for two years and seven months, and afterwards, with the assent of the attorney, left the service, with the intention of serving the rest of his time under assignment to another firm. This arrangement was not carried out, and after an absence of about six years, the clerk went into fresh articles with the original attorney, and served for a period which, with the former service, amounted to more than five years:—Held, that his service under the first articles could not be coupled with his service under the second articles, and that he was not entitled to go up for examination. Austin, Ex parte, 28 L. T. 121; 21 W. R. 390.

A gentleman who had taken the degree of bachelor of arts at Cambridge articled himself to an attorney for three years, but served only two months, and abandoned the contract. After the expiration of the three years mentioned in the original articles, he was assigned to another attorney, with whom he served two years and ten months:—Held, that as the original articles had expired previously to the assignment, the service under the assignment was not a service within the terms of 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 48, s. 1. Unthank, Ex parte, 2 M. & P. 453; 30 R. R. 750.

When a clerk had served two years under his articles, and then ceased to serve any longer, and the articles expired, and he then desired to enter into fresh articles, and obtain the previous consent of the court to such two years' service being computed in the period of service under such new articles; the court refused such consent, leaving it open, however, to him to apply to have such period computed when he should have served a sufficient time under the new articles. Trenchard, Ex parte, 21 L. T. 638.

In October, 1856, a son was articled to his father, an attorney, and duly served for two years; when, becoming out of health, he was recommended by his medical attendants to follow some more active occupation, and his father obtained him a commission in the army in June, 1859. In 1870, his health being re-established, he sold out of the army, and entered into fresh articles with his father early in 1871, and duly served up to May, 1874. An application was then made that the two years under the original articles might be allowed to be reckoned as part of the five years' service under the fresh articles:—Held, that the facts amounted to a virtual cancellation by mutual consent of the first articles; and the case therefore came within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 13, and that the application might be granted. Trenchard, Ex parte, L. R. 9 Q. B. 406.

An articled clerk was at his own request assigned, during the articles, to an attorney for fifteen months, at the expiration of which time he returned to his original master, and continued to serve him up to the end of the term:—Held, that such period of fifteen months could not be reckoned as a portion of the five years required by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ss. 6, 12. Adams, Ex parte, 44 L. J., Q. B. 102; L. R. 10 Q. B. 227; 32 L. T. 454; 23 W. R. 594.

W. was articled in 1861 to R., a solicitor, for five years, but left him after two years' service, the articles with R.'s consent being considered as cancelled. In 1864, he was re-articled to R. for the remaining three years, and under these new articles he continued in his service for two years, when he left on account of ill-health and under medical advice. In 1869, he was assigned and re-articled by R. to, and served with, L. for the remaining one year. An application by him that the several periods of service under the three articles might be reckoned as constituting the full five years' service, was granted, it being held that both the first and second articles had been cancelled by mutual consent, within s. 13 of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73. Williamson, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Ch. 624 ; 4 Ch. D. 581 ; 35 L. T. 695.

An articled clerk having during his articles lost a great portion of his time by service to other attorneys not under articles, allowed after the expiration to enter into fresh articles for such period as would make up the time lost. Hayward, In re, 11 W. R. 67.

A clerk served his articles for four years six months and twenty-four days. He was then absent, either serving in the militia or holding the appointment of a supernumerary surveyor of taxes until after the expiration of his articles, when he returned to the attorney to whom he had been articled, and served for five months and six days, but not under a contract in writing :—Held, that the service for the latter period was insufficient ; but he was allowed to enter into fresh articles to complete the five years. Smith, Ex parte, 1 El. & El. 928 ; 28 L. J., Q. B. 263 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 515 ; 7 W. R. 451.

But where the time of the articles had expired, and the service under them had not been complete, the court refused an application for leave to enter into fresh articles and to serve under them to complete the service under the original articles ; overruling thus far, Smith, Ex parte, supra. Keddle, Ex parte, 4 B. & S. 993 ; 34 L. J., Q. B. 136 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 503 ; 11 L. T. 625 ; 13 W. R. 290.

Where a clerk had been articled to his father, an attorney, for three years, and was afterwards assigned to A., and served under the articles and assignment for two years one month and twenty-three days, and then went to America, where he remained for nearly four years, when he returned and resumed service with A., the court allowed him to enter into fresh articles with A. for the remainder of the term of three years, the service under the whole articles and assignment to count. Thomas, In re, 11 W. R. 341.

During more than three of the five years for which he was bound, the service of a clerk had been given to the attorney to whom he was articled, and he afterwards bound himself to another attorney and served him for two years :—Held, that his service under the first articles could not be coupled with his service under the second. Taylor, In re, 4 B. & C. 341 ; 6 D. & R. 428 ; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 242.

Service to a solicitor to whom the articled clerk believed himself to be bound cannot be made available on the mistake being discovered. Sindy's Case, 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 152.

Absence of Clerk—Consent.]—If, during the five years, an articled clerk has been absent two months, by consent of his master, at his father's house, and at the end of the five years has served two additional months, he will be entitled to admission. Hubbard, Ex parte, 1 D. P. C. 438. S. P., Frost, Ex parte, 3 D. P. C. 322 ; 1 H. & W. 111.

—— Caused by Illness.]—A clerk whose service was interrupted by illness, and who was absent for a period of two years on account of his health, was nevertheless allowed to be considered as having sufficiently served under his articles. Anon., 9 L. T. 324. S. P., Beddoe, Ex parte, 12 L. T. 711 ; 13 W. R. 871 ; Matthews, Ex parte, 1 B. & Ad. 160.

Where the time of the articles had not expired, and there had been a suspension of service under them by reason of illness, the court discharged them and allowed the clerk to enter into fresh articles with the same master for the residue of the time necessary to complete the five years' service. De Fivas, Ex parte, 4 B. & S. 992 ; 34 L. J., Q. B. 7 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 13.

A clerk having served a part of his time, was compelled by illness to relinquish service for upwards of a year, at the end of which period, having recovered, he resumed service, and moved the court that the period of his illness should be reckoned as actual service. At the time of the application, the full period of five years from the date of the articles had not expired. The court refused the application, as being premature. Rogers, Ex parte, 34 L. J., Q. B. 136 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 504.

When a clerk who had articled himself for three years was absent by reason of illness for sixteen months, and afterwards served thirteen months :—Held, that he could not be examined, and must enter into fresh articles for six months. Digby, Ex parte, 45 L. J., Ch. 692.

A clerk was articled to his father in April, 1872, for the term of five years, and attended the office regularly for that time ; but from Michaelmas, 1875, to Michaelmas, 1876, his father was absent from ill-health, and business was practically suspended, although the office remained open :—Held, that he might be allowed to go in for his final examination in 1877, but must enter into fresh articles for a year, and serve under them before he could be admitted. Fereday, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Ch. 504.

Where an articled clerk, serving with a practising barrister under 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 48, s. 2, had been unable to serve the last nine days of his time, owing to dangerous illness, but after his recovery had served more than the nine days with the same barrister, he was allowed to be examined for his admission. Vaughan, Ex parte, W. W. & D. 46 ; 1 Jur. 21.

An articled clerk who had served under articles for five years, all but five months, was then absent for five months and seventeen days on account of ill-health. On his return at the end of the five months he passed his final examination and applied for his certificate, but was required to enter into fresh articles for five months :—Held, that an order for his admission as if he had served the full period of five years could not be made, nor a prospective order for his admission after service for the remaining period without entering into fresh articles. Marshall, Ex parte, 22 W. R. 754.

An articled clerk, who has served under his articles for three of the term of five years, was then absent from illness for eleven months, but on his return served to the end of the term of his articles, and passed his final examination :—Held, that an application for his admission as though he had served the full term of five years, could not be granted, but that he might be allowed to complete his term by serving for a further period of eleven months. Moses, Ex parte, 43 L. J., Q. B. 13 ; L. R. 9 Q. B. 1 ; 29 L. T. 420 ; 22 W. R. 57.

The court will not exercise its discretion in relaxing the rule prescribed by the statute concerning the period of an attorney's apprenticeship, when the apprentice had been incapacitated by illness from serving five of the twenty terms, though it was sworn that he had attended his master's office for three years before he was bound, and his master had consented to his being now sworn. Dease, In re, 1 Longf. & T. 654.

Semble. The court will not take notice, in such cases, of the applicant's family affairs, except where a father has been an attorney, and there is danger of the business of the office being lost to the family. Ib.

Where an applicant to be admitted an attorney while under articles, by medical advice and with the consent of his master, went to sea, and after a lapse of five months, entered as a student at Harvard University, in the United States, where he diligently pursued the study of the law for seven months, and then returned to the completion of his articles, but he served only five years, including the period of his absence, the court allowed him to be examined, in order to be admitted an attorney. Cross, Ex parte, 2 D. (N.S.) 692; 12 L. J., Q. B. 138; 7 Jur. 67.

Agreement to Assign—Not Executed.]—An articled clerk, upon an agreement that an assignment should be executed, left his master's service, and went into that of his own father, who was also an attorney. The assignment was not executed for six months, but during the whole period he was employed bonâ fide as clerk by his father:—Held, that the service under the agreement for the assignment was a service within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 3, and that, having duly served the residue of the term, he was entitled to admission. Brutton, Ex parte, 23 L. J., Q. B. 290; 18 Jur. 580; 2 W. R. 456.

A clerk, duly articled, served a portion of his time with his master; it was then agreed that he should be assigned to another attorney for the residue of his term. On this understanding the clerk left his first master, and went into the service of the second master. From circumstances over which the clerk had no control, the assignment to the second master was not executed for about eight weeks after his entering the second master's service. The clerk served under the assignment for the residue of the term:—Held, that the interval between entering the second master's service and the execution of the assignment could not be reckoned as service under the articles within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 12. Harrison, Ex parte, 44 L. J., Q. B. 103; 23 W. R. 635.

Effect of Death of Master.]—An attorney, dying pending the service, the clerk continued to attend regularly at the office, and conducted the business until its transfer to a successor, to whom also the articles were assigned:—Held, that the period which intervened between the death of the first master and the assignment of the articles to the second, was not to be reckoned in the computation of the five years' service required by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 12. Wallis, Ex parte, 2 B. & S. 416; 31 L. J., Q. B. 176; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 913; 6 L. T. 242; 10 W. R. 524.

Where a clerk, on the death of his master, continued with the surviving partner for the residue of the five years, and also for nine months in addition; but an interval of nine months had elapsed between the death and the assignment of his articles by the executors, the court allowed him to be examined. Johnson, Ex parte, 1 W. W. & H. 404; 2 Jur. 966.

Where a clerk, in consequence of his master's death, had not served during a certain period of five years, but after the expiration of the five years served an additional time equal to the period of his non-service, the court allowed him to be examined. Tomkins, Ex parte, 6 D. P. C. 3; W. W. & D. 569.

The examiners of attorneys rejected a candidate, on the ground of insufficient service, it appearing that while articled, he had acted as agent to an insurance office, and that the attorney to whom he was articled was himself acting as clerk to another attorney. The latter fact was disputed. The court refused the motion by the candidate to refer the examination to a judge, that he might decide upon the qualification, the jurisdiction, on an appeal of this kind, being vested in all the judges. Carr, Ex parte, 3 Q. B. 447.

But the attorney under whom the former service took place having since died, the court ordered that the clerk should be articled to another attorney for the residue of his term of service, without assignment. Ib.

Where an apprentice to an attorney upon the death of his master entered the office of another attorney for the purpose of completing his apprenticeship, but before his indentures were assigned, a term elapsed; he was, under the circumstances, allowed credit for the term which had so elapsed before the assignment of the indentures, and having served twenty clear terms inclusive of that term, was admitted an attorney of this court. O'Brien, In re, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 480.

Graduates of Universities.] — In order to enable a graduate of the universities named in s. 7 of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, to be admitted an attorney after three years' service, he must have taken his degree before being bound by articles. Bradford, Ex parte, 1 El. & El. 417; 28 L. J., Q. B. 138; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 648; 7 W. R. 188. See S. C., 1 L. T. 61.

A clerk after four years' service went to the university, and remained until he had obtained the degree of B.A. In the meantime his articles expired, but on application to the court he was allowed to enter into fresh articles, quantum valeat. Gardner, Ex parte, 8 L. T. 315.

A member of the university of Edinburgh, who has not taken the degree of M.A., but has been enrolled on the general council by virtue of 21 & 22 Vict. c. 83, s. 6, is not entitled to be admitted an attorney after three years' service under articles. Stewart, Ex parte, 41 L. J., Ex. 76; L. R. 7 Ex. 202; 20 W. R. 493.

A clerk, having taken a B.A. degree, was articled for three years, two of which he served with his master, eight months with the London agent, and four months with a special pleader; he then passed his examination:—Held, that he might be admitted after serving four months with an attorney, and receiving a certificate of his examination, the examiners to be at liberty to sign the certificate at once, such certificate to be stayed until the service was completed. Earle, Ex parte, 1 B. C. C. 180; 17 Jur. 440.

A person who was a student of college at the time he was bound apprentice to an attorney for five years, subsequently graduated, and served for three years after he had taken his degree, but without being bound de novo:—Held, that under the 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 48, he might (with his master's consent) be admitted an attorney, although the original term of his apprenticeship had not been completed. Collum, In re, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 278.

Ten Years' Service.]—The ten years' service as a clerk need not be continuous so as to entitle the clerk to the privileges of s. 4 of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127. Milliken, In re, 18 W. R. 809.

A clerk who, having served ten years, enters into articles for three years, under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 4, is entitled to the privileges afforded by that section, notwithstanding there may have been an unemployed interval between the termination of his former service and the date of his articles; and the court directed the examination of an articled clerk, although seven years had elapsed between the two services. Vosper, Ex parte, 4 B. & S. 901; 33 L. J., Q. B. 113; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 724; 9 L. T. 719; 12 W. R. 374.

It is not necessary that a clerk applying to be admitted under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 4, should produce a certificate from his master that he has served faithfully, honestly and diligently during the ten years. If the master refuses the certificate, such service may be proved by other means. Rigby, Ex parte, 11 L. T. 671.

—— Age at Commencement.]—A clerk, before the expiration of ten years' service, entered into articles for five years, under which, after the expiration of the ten years, he served for a period of three years:—Held, that he was entitled to be examined and admitted under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 4, although he was only fifteen years of age when he entered the service of the attorney. Sherry, Ex parte, 9 B. & S. 115; 37 L. J., Q. B. 82; L. R. 3 Q. B. 164; 17 L. T. 471; 16 W. R. 340.

A solicitor's clerk, claiming the right under s. 4 of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, to go up for his intermediate examination after having served as general clerk in a solicitor's office for ten years, and as an articled clerk for a year and a half, stated, in answer to questions put to him by the examiners of the Incorporated Law Society, that he had commenced such antecedent service at the age of thirteen. The examiners decided that service at such age was not bonâ fide an active employment in the business of a solicitor's office, and refused to admit him to the examination. On an application to the high court to overrule this decision:—Held, that no appeal would lie. James, In re, 33 W. R. 654.

Vote—Absence of Articled Clerk during Service—Not Constructive Residence.]—By 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 31, which makes provision for freeholders voting for a city being a county of itself, no freeholder shall be registered in any year, "unless he shall have resided for six calendar months next previous" to a certain day in such year within such city. During part of the prescribed period of six months, a freeholder who had a bedroom kept for his exclusive use in his father's house within such a city was absent, serving under articles to a solicitor in London:—Held, that, being bound by the articles, he could not be deemed to have had either the liberty or intention to return to the room whenever he liked, and therefore had not "resided" within the city for the required time within the meaning of the act. Ford v. Drew, 49 L. J., C. P. 172; 5 C. P. D. 59; 41 L. T. 478; 28 W. R. 137; 1 Colt. 1; 44 J. P. 58.

Gaining a Settlement.]—An articled clerk to an attorney may, by being bound and inhabiting in a parish, gain a settlement therein as an apprentice under 3 Will. & M. c. 11, s. 8. Clapham v. St. Pancras, 2 El. & El. 742; 29 L. J., M. C. 141; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 700; 8 W. R. 493.

Not an "Apprentice."]—An articled clerk to an attorney and solicitor is not an apprentice within the meaning of the 49th section of the Bankrupt Act, 6 Geo. 4, c. 16. Prideaux, Ex parte, Bush, In re, 3 Myl. & C. 327; 7 L. J., Ch. 202; 2 Jur. 366.

Service without passing Preliminary or other Examination.]—A gentleman had successfully passed the middle-class examinations of Oxford and Cambridge, which, however, were not included in the regulations of the judges, and he was thereupon articled for a term of four years, which term he duly served:—Held, that the articles were invalid; and the court refused to permit him upon entering into fresh articles to have the advantage of his four years' previous service under the former articles. Jones, Ex parte, 22 L. T. 300.

Period of Pupilage to Conveyancer.]—On an application by an articled clerk to be admitted as an attorney it appeared that, upon the execution of the articles and without any service under them, he became pupil to a conveyancer and continued so for more than a year. Upon the expiration of his pupilage the articles were assigned to another attorney, and he served under that and subsequent assignments for more than four years:—Held, that a year of the pupilage was equivalent to a year's service under the articles, and that he was entitled to admission. Anon., 25 L. T. 161; 19 W. R. 780.

Clerk cannot Perform any other Work.]—An articled clerk cannot perform any office or employment whatever during the terms of service under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 10, even when such employment is in no way inconsistent with and in no respect interferes with the service under his articles, and where the services are performed at night or by deputy. Greville, Ex parte, 43 L. J., C. P. 58; L. R. 9 C. P. 13; 29 L. T. 542; 22 W. R. 160.

An articled clerk held during the term of his articles the office of vestry clerk. It was shown that the duties of the office had not interfered with the due performance of his duties under his articles or with his legal studies:—Held, nevertheless, that he had contravened the provisions of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 10, by holding an office or an employment other than that of clerk to the attorney to whom he was articled. Ib.

—— Except out of Office Hours.]—An articled clerk performing all his master's business may at leisure hours, work for wages with another attorney. Blunt, Ex parte, 2 W. Bl. 764. See Hill, Ex parte, 2 W. Bl. 957.

So where an applicant, while under articles discharged the duties of auditor of a poor-law union, which occupied him for a very inconsiderable period of time, and to which he never gave any attention until after the usual office hours of his master:—Held, that that occupation did not render the service insufficient. Llewellyn, Ex parte, 2 D. (N.S.) 701; 12 L. J., Q. B. 138; 7 Jur. 377.

—— Or under Peculiar Circumstances.]—The 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 10, prohibits an articled clerk during his term of service, from holding any office or engaging in any employment whatsoever other than the employment of clerk to the attorney with whom he is articled. P., during his articles, was appointed steward of a manor by his mother, who had a life interest in the property, which at her death would be divisible between him and his sisters. He at once appointed a deputy to discharge the duties; but on three occasions he attended, with his principal's consent, courts of the manor to admit tenants and take surrenders, with the view of becoming acquainted with the duties of steward of the manor in which he and his family were interested:—Held, that the service was, under these peculiar circumstances, sufficient. Peppercorn, Ex parte, 1 H. & R. 487; 35 L. J., C. P. 239; L. R. 1 C. P. 473; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 761; 14 L. T. 252; 14 W. R. 693.

An apprentice to an attorney who, during the period of his apprenticeship, filled the office of a salaried clerk in the office of one of the six clerks of the court of chancery:—Held, notwithstanding, to be entitled to be admitted a solicitor of the court. Lyons, In re, 1 Dr. & Wal. 327; 1 Ir. Eq. R. 267.

III. STAMPING ARTICLES.

Service under Unstamped Articles — When Computed from.]—Where articles have not been stamped within the required time, and are stamped afterwards, on payment of the penalty, the court, both for the purpose of protecting the revenue, and for ensuring the respectability of those who are to become attorneys, should, before the service under the unstamped articles is allowed to reckon, be satisfied that the circumstances are such as to account for the omission to pay the duty and inrol the articles in due time. Wilson, Ex parte, 4 B. & S. 889; 33 L. J., Q. B. 89; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 469; 9 L. T. 758; 12 W. R. 341. S. P., Belk. Ex parte, 2 H. & C. 737; 33 L. J., Ex. 73; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 348; 9 L. T. 516; 12 W. R. 316.

As a general rule, from which there will be no deviation, unless under peculiar circumstances, the court in computing the period of apprenticeship to an attorney, will not allow credit for time elapsed before the payment of the stamp duty upon the indentures. Sterne, Ex parte, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 378.

—— Where Clerk has not been Guilty of Negligence.]—When articles have not been stamped within six months from their execution, but have been subsequently stamped under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 81, s. 3, and the clerk has served under them from their execution, the court will allow a subsequent inrolment of them, to count from the date of the execution, provided there has been no negligence or default on the part of the clerk. Norton, Ex parte, 26 L. J., Q. B. 24; 5 W. R. 6. S. P., Welch, In re, 5 W. R. 505.

A clerk in 1848 entered into articles, not in the usual form, with 1*l.* stamp duty only thereon. The court allowed the articles to be inrolled, and the service to count from the date of the articles, as there did not appear to be any speculation on the part of the clerk, and the omission arose from circumstances over which he had no control. Forrest, Ex parte, 35 L. J., Q. B. 131; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 499; 14 L. T. 285; 14 W. R. 607.

A clerk had been articled to his father, and served the five years, without his knowledge that the articles were not stamped. An affidavit of the father stated, that having before the articles been subject to much pecuniary loss and pressing expenses, and a diminution of professional income, on account of the changes in the law and personal and family affliction, he was, at the time of the articles without the means to pay the stamp duty; and that he had not articled his son speculatively, but with the intention of ultimately stamping and inrolling the articles. The treasury having directed the commissioners of inland revenue to stamp the articles upon payment of the duty and penalty, and the articles having been stamped accordingly:—Held, that they might be inrolled, and the service under them computed from the date of their execution. Herbert, Ex parte, 1 B. & S. 825; 31 L. J., Q. B. 33; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 615; 5 L. T. 579; 10 W. R. 211.

—— Accident — Unforeseen Occurrence.] — Where the delay had been caused by some accidental omission, and by the closing of the office on a holiday, the court allowed the time to run from the day of execution. Appleton, In re, 11 W. R. 35.

The court will only permit articles of clerkship to be inrolled nunc pro tunc, and the service thereunder to be computed from the date of their execution (the duty and penalty under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 81, s. 3, being paid), where the omission to stamp them at the proper time has been the result of some accident or unforeseen circumstance. The mere disappointment of some vague hope or expectation of obtaining the means of paying the duty in time will not be received as an excuse for a con-compliance with the statute. Darville, Ex parte, 36 L. J., C. P. 133; L. R. 2 C. P. 244; 15 L. T. 537; 15 W. R. 352.

The court will only allow articles to be enrolled nunc pro tunc, and the service under them to be reckoned as from their date when the omission to stamp has been the result of some unforeseen and special occurrence. But the mere promise of a brother to pay the stamp duty out of a legacy is insufficient. Bryan, Ex parte, 32 L. T. 568.

The mere failure to obtain payment of a debt due to the clerk at the time of his entering into articles, so as to enable him to pay the stamp duty and inrol the articles and affidavit within the time limited by the statute, is not such a disappointment of a reasonable expectation that he would be prepared with the money in the time as will induce the court to allow the articles to be inrolled nunc pro tunc. Banyard, Ex parte, 44 L. J., C. P. 305; L. R. 10 C. P. 638; 32 L. T. 729.

The court will allow the service under articles to be computed from their date, notwithstanding the stamp duty thereon has not been paid within the proper period, provided the failure to pay it has arisen from some unforeseen circumstance over which the clerk had no control. Therefore, where the failure has arisen from the non-payment of a debt due to the clerk, which he had a reasonable expectation to obtain in time, the excuse was held sufficient. Sayer, In re, 44 L. J., C. P. 307, n.; L. R. 10 C. P. 569; 32 L. T. 728. But see S. C., 32 L. T. 560; 23 W. R. 595.

The court will not allow articles to be inrolled nunc pro tunc, and the service under them to be reckoned as from their date, where there has been an omission to cause them to be stamped within the time required by law—even though the treasury has accepted the stamp duty with a penalty, unless it is shown that the omission has been the result of some unforeseen emergency, or of the failure of some just expectation. The mere disappointment of a vague hope will not suffice. Jones, Ex parte, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 301.

The court will permit the service under un-stamped articles of clerkship to be reckoned from their date, where the omission to pay the duty at the proper time was the result of an emergency which may be justly inferred to have been unforeseen by the party. Breden, In re, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 351; 31 L. J., C. P. 321; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 176; 6 L. T. 494; contra, in Q. B., 2 B. & S. 649; 31 L. J., Q. B. 184; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 937; 6 L. T. 455.

—— Mistake in the Law.]—An articled clerk applied to stamp his articles within six months of execution, being misled by the words of the Stamp Act, 1870, s. 43, but the inland revenue board refused to affix the stamp except upon payment of a penalty. The clerk subsequently paid the penalty and the duty, but, in consequence of his mistake in the law, he was prevented from inrolling the articles within the requisite time. The court allowed the service to be reckoned from the date of the articles instead of from the day of filing the affidavit required with the inrolment. Hayward, Ex parte, 29 L. T. 422.

—— Delay of Court.]—Where the delay in stamping and inrolling articles was accounted for by the necessity of applying to the court of chancery for increased funds out of a lunatic's estate, the court allowed the service to be reckoned from the date of the articles and not from the period of inrolment. Tayleure, Ex parte, 3 L. T. 267.

—— When Delay is Intentional.]—Where the stamping had been intentionally delayed in order to ascertain whether the clerk's health will allow him to follow the profession, the court refused to interfere and allow the service to be computed from the date of the articles, although there did not appear to be any improper motive for the delay. Welch, Ex parte, 27 L. J., Q. B. 213; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1218; 6 W. R. 64.

—— Absence of Means.] — R. entered into articles on the 10th January, 1871. His father, being advised that the articles could be stamped and inrolled within six months from their execution, did not pay the stamp duty immediately. Before the end of the six months he suffered heavy losses in his business and became unable to pay the stamp duty till January, 1874, when they were stamped. The clerk had served the whole time and had no means of his own to pay the stamp. An application to allow, under these circumstances, the articles to count from the date of their execution was refused. Roth, Ex parte, 29 L. T. 885; 22 W. R. 329.

Articles, the service under which has been fully completed, but where payment of the stamp duty was not made at the date of the execution, nor at any time afterwards during the service, such nonpayment clearly to the satisfaction of the court, arising, not from a preconceived plan to wait and see how the clerk articled might turn out, but from the absence of means to defray the expense of duty, may be made valid, and the service reckoned from the date of the execution, on payment of the stamp duty and penalty. Bishop, Ex parte, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 150; 30 L. J., C. P. 48; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 243; 3 L. T. 323. See Darville, Ex parte, and other cases, supra.

—— Delay must be Accounted for.]—The court will not order articles to be inrolled and the service to count from the time of the execution, where the articles have been stamped after the six months on payment of a penalty, unless the delay in payment of the duty is satisfactorily accounted for. Edwards, Ex parte, 32 L. J., C. P. 213; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 17; 8 L. T. 360; 11 W. R. 754.

Articles Stamped for County Palatine of Lancaster.]—The court will (in the absence of special reasons to the contrary) allow service under articles stamped for the county palatine of Lancaster to count as service, if the articles are afterwards stamped for service here. Hogg, Ex parte, 11 L. T. 598; 13 W. R. 315.

Stamping a Condition precedent to applying for Inrolment nunc pro tunc.]—To entitle a clerk, whose articles, through excusable omission, have not been inrolled, to apply to the court to have them inrolled nunc pro tunc, he must have had them properly stamped and have paid the penalty (if any), and until this is done the court will not make any order upon the subject. Sewell, Ex parte, 8 L. T. 331; 11 W. R. 673. S. P., Williams, Ex parte, 26 L. J., Q. B. 167; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 160; 5 W. R. 376.

—— Notice to Incorporated Law Society.]—Before granting an application that the service of a clerk under unstamped articles may be computed from their date, and not from the time of inrolment, the court will require notice of the application to be given to the Incorporated Law Society, in order that an opportunity may be afforded of investigating the truth of the statements upon which the application is founded. Blades, Ex parte, 44 L. J., C. P. 115; 32 L. T. 33; 23 W. R. 312.

IV. INROLMENT AND REGISTRATION OF ARTICLES.

Duty of Solicitor.]—Under the Attorneys and Solicitors Act, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 8, it is the duty of an attorney to inrol the articles of his articled clerk, and where he had omitted to do so the court dismissed a claim to foreclose a mortgage, given to secure the premium. Dufaur v. Sigel, 4 De G. M. & G. 20; 22 L. J., Ch. 678.

Nunc pro tunc—No Default on Part of Applicant.]—Where, through the neglect of a clerk of an agent, explained and accounted for, no neglect for default being imputable to the applicant, the articles were not filed at the time of execution, the court allowed them to take effect from their date. Harris, In re, 11 W. R. 36.

So, where articles were, by a mere slip, not filed within six months, the court relieved the clerk from the effect of the error. Follett, In re, 30 Beav. 629.

The affidavit of the due execution of articles was filed within six months of their execution by the clerk, but not within six months of their execution by his master:—Held, that it was filed within due time. Legett, Ex parte, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1219.

A. was articled to an attorney, and served two years, when he was assigned over to his own father, an attorney. His father's memory became impaired, and he died within six months of the assignment, never having made the affidavit. The court permitted the assignment to be inrolled, upon satisfactory evidence being given of the facts which should have been contained in the affidavit. Lee, Ex parte, 8 W. R. 541.

Articles allowed to be enrolled nunc pro tunc when the delay arose from an irregularity in the affidavit for which the clerk was not responsible. Lee, Ex parte, 5 W. R. 20.

Or where the delay arose from the act of the court in not answering an application. Williams, Ex parte, 5 W. R. 559.

Or where the clerk was ignorant of the fact that the articles had not been stamped. Hand, Ex parte, 5 W. R. 687. Ib. 622. S. P., Fenton, Ex parte, 7 W. R. 160.

—— Inadvertence of Clerk.]—Where an assignment of articles had not been registered within the prescribed time, the court refused permission to register such assignment nunc pro tunc, although it was sworn that the omission had occurred through inadvertence, and that the last indemnity act omitted the provision in former acts curing such omissions. Cunningham, Ex parte, 8 Jur. 405. See 7 & 8 Vict. c. 86, ss. 1, 2.

A clerk having inadvertently omitted to inrol the assignment of his articles within the period prescribed, the court directed the service under the assignment to be computed from the date of its execution, instead of the period of its inrolment. Cunningham, Ex parte, 9 Jur. 109.

An articled clerk had neglected to file the necessary affidavit within six months; but the omission had arisen from inadvertence only:—Held, that this was not a sufficient ground for relieving him. Benson, In re, 10 Beav. 435.

Service allowed to be reckoned from the date of the articles where, by mistake as to the date of the articles, the affidavit was filed too late. Ellis, Ex parte, 3 L. T. 268. S. P., Pettit, In re, 2 W. R. 417.

Inrolment nunc pro tunc not allowed when the clerk finding after three years' service that the articles had not been stamped, was called to the bar and applied forty years after the execution of the articles. Parker, Ex parte, 8 W. R. 460.

Delay caused by Articles being sent to India to be Executed.]—Articles were sent to Bombay to be executed by the father of the clerk; the father executed the deed on the 1st of January, 1853, and put in the date. The articles were sent to England, and on the 16th of February, 1853, executed by the clerk and the attorney:—Held, that the date from which the time of making and filing the affidavit was to count was from the 16th of February, 1853. Anon., 27 L. J., Q. B. 184.

Application on Affidavit.]—Applications for service to be reckoned from the date of the articles must be on affidavit. Williams, Ex parte, 6 W. R. 254.

When Articles Lost, Stolen or Destroyed (see 2 & 3 Vict. c. 33, s. 9).]—The court will allow a copy of articles to be inrolled where the original articles are lost. Chapman, Ex parte, 3 D. P. C. 562. S. P., Bechenden, Ex parte, 1 H. & W. 193; Clarke, Ex parte, 3 B. & Ald. 610.

The court allowed a copy to be inrolled nunc pro tunc, upon an affidavit that the indenture had been stolen (with other property) from the house of the person in whose hands it was deposited. Nash, Ex parte, 6 Scott (N.R.) 695; 5 Man. & G. 696.

So, where articles had been destroyed by fire, the court allowed a verified copy to be inrolled and an affidavit of execution to be filed, although more than the time allowed had elapsed since execution. Briggs, Ex parte, 1 D. & L. 94.

A counterpart of articles was not allowed to be registered nunc pro tunc, though it appeared from an entry in the handwriting of a person who had left England that he had attended the inrolment of the articles and had paid the fee, there being no such entry of the inrolment in the books of the proper officer. Pilgrim, Ex parte, 1 B. & C. 264; 2 D. & R. 429; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 114.

Searching Books of Inrolment.]—A person has no right to search the book of affidavits, kept in pursuance of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 11, more than once in a day without fee; and for taking copies of entries therein, a fee of 6*d.* is due. Heming, Ex parte, 9 Jur. 900.

Unstamped Articles.]—See ante, col. 1389.

V. ASSIGNMENT AND DISCHARGE.

Where Master Absconds, or is Convicted of Felony.]—Where an attorney has absconded, his clerk may obtain a discharge from his articles, and further articles may be inrolled without an assignment of the original articles. Hancock, Ex parte, 2 D. (N.S.) 54; 6 Jur. 949; Cartmel, Ex parte, 6 Jur. 950.

So, where a party was articled to an attorney, who was subsequently convicted of forgery and sentenced to transportation for life, the court granted a rule absolute in the first instance to discharge the clerk from his articles. Anon., 8 Jur. 848.

Where a clerk is articled to a master who absconds and sails for America, previously making an assignment of his property, and of the articles of the applicant to another attorney, his town agent, the court, though it will grant a rule to show cause why the applicant should not be discharged from his articles, yet will not make it a part of the rule that 40*l.* paid to his first master should be paid over to the applicant by such town agent. Cartley, Ex parte, 2 D. (N.S.) 945; 12 L. J., Q. B. 98; 7 Jur. 767.

Where a solicitor becomes bankrupt, gives a power of attorney authorising the assignment of articles, and absconds, the court ordered the assignment to be made under s. 5 of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73. Ellis, Ex parte, 7 W. R. 61.

—— Or becomes Insane.]—The father of a clerk having become, from mental alienation, incapable of instructing his son, and of continuing his practice, the court directed the articles to be discharged, and allowed the applicant to be articled to another attorney. Allen, Ex parte, 8 Jur. 1169. S. P., Darbell, Ex parte, 6 D. P. C. 505; 1 W. W. & H. 174. Turner, Ex parte, 10 L. J., Q. B. 356.

—— Or Dies.]—An articled clerk was assigned to an attorney who died intestate, and no administrator had been appointed; the court granted a rule to enable the clerk to assign himself to another attorney for the residue of his term. Lewis, Ex parte, 2 D. & L. 130; 13 L. J., Q. B. 261; 8 Jur. 539.

By Mutual Consent.]—Where an articled clerk, under age, obtains a writership in India, and his father, as well as the attorney, joins with him in an application to vacate the articles, the court will grant the motion. Anon., 3 Jur. 652.

VI. PREMIUM—PAYMENT AND RETURN OF.

Refusal of Solicitor to take back Runaway Clerk.]—The court ordered an attorney, who had refused to take back an apprentice who had run away from his service, on the ground of misconduct, and with whom a premium had been given, to return to the parents of such apprentice a part of such premium. Prankerd, Ex parte, 3 B. & Ald. 257.

Death of Clerk.]—The court refused to order an attorney to repay any portion of a premium of 200 guineas received by him with an articled clerk, who died within a month after he was articled. Thompson, In re, 1 Ex. 864.

Death of Partner—Clerk Articled to Firm.]—A party was articled to one of two attorneys in partnership, and paid a premium, and acted as clerk to the two partners for two months, when the attorney to whom he had been articled died; the court ordered the surviving partner to refund a portion of the premium. Bayley, Ex parte, 9 B. & C. 691; 4 M. & Ry. 603. S. P., Haden, Ex parte, 1 W. W. & H. 321; 2 Jur. 873; Bennett, Ex parte, W. W. & D. 210.

Death of Solicitor.]—An attorney to whom a clerk had been articled died before the articles expired:—Held, that a court of equity had jurisdiction to entertain a claim for the return of a part of the premium, and that such claim constituted a debt payable out of the assets of the attorney, in an administration suit. Hirst v. Tolson, 2 Mac. & G. 134; 2 Hall & T. 359; 19 L. J., Ch. 441; 14 Jur. 559.

A., an attorney, being confined of an illness whereof he died, takes B. as his clerk, and receives with him 120*l.*, and by articles agrees with the father of B. to return 60*l.* of the money if A. died within the year; A. died within three weeks. A.'s executor decreed to pay back 100*l.* Newton v. Rowse, 1 Vern. 460.

A solicitor who had received a premium on taking an articled clerk, died during the term of the articles:—Held, that his estate was not liable for the return of any part of the premium. Ferns v. Carr, 54 L. J., Ch. 478; 28 Ch. D. 409; 52 L. T. 348; 33 W. R. 363; 49 J. P. 503.

Ward of Court desiring to change his Profession.]—A ward was articled to a solicitor under the direction of the court of chancery, and a premium of 300 guineas was paid. Subsequently the ward desired to change his profession, and proposals were accordingly, with that object, brought before the judge in chambers. The solicitor was served with notice of the proceedings, and attended. An order was made, by which the articles were ordered to be cancelled, and 100*l.*, part of the premium, directed to be returned by the solicitor. There was no allegation of misconduct on the part of the solicitor:—Held, that the court had no power to direct the return of any part of the premium. Craven v. Stubbins, 34 L. J., Ch. 126; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1189; 11 L. T. 402; 13 W. R. 208.

Promissory Note for Premium not to be Negotiated.]—Where an attorney received a promissory note from the father of a clerk articled to him, as his fee for taking him, on an undertaking that the note should not be negotiated until the expiration of a certain period, and he negotiated it contrary to his undertaking, the court compelled him to take it up. Gardner, Ex parte, 2 D. P. C. 520.

Advance to Son.]—A premium paid on the occasion of a son being articled to an attorney and solicitor is an advance to the son, within the meaning of the statute of distributions. Boyd v. Boyd, 36 L. J., Ch. 877; L. R. 4 Eq. 305; 16 L. T. 660; 15 W. R. 1071.

Mortgage to Secure.]—It is the duty of an attorney to inrol the articles of his clerk, and where he had omitted to do so the court dismissed a claim to foreclose a mortgage given to secure the premium. Dufaur v. Sigel, 4 De G. M. & G. 20; 22 L. J., Ch. 678.

VII. RESTRAINING COMPETITION WITH MASTERS.

Contract—Money Penalty.]—A., on being articled to B., covenanted not to be concerned for any of B.'s clients, and to forfeit 100*l.* for any such breach. A., after being admitted, acted in contravention of this covenant. He was restrained by injunction. Nicholls v. Stretton, 7 Beav. 42. And see S. C., 10 Q. B. 346.

A solicitor and his clerk executed a bond, conditioned that if the clerk should carry on the business of a solicitor within the prescribed distance, then, provided he paid 1,000*l.* as liquidated damages, the bond should be void. The clerk commenced business as a solicitor within the prohibited limit:—Held, that the solicitor was entitled to an injunction. Howard v. Woodward, 5 N. R. 8; 34 L. J., Ch. 47; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1123; 11 L. T. 414; 13 W. R. 132.

——Validity of.]—The defendant bound himself to a London solicitor by articles for a term, and covenanted that he would not at the expiration of the term, or at any time thereafter, either solely, or jointly with, or as agent for, any other person or persons, directly or indirectly practise the business of an attorney or solicitor within the city of London, or the counties of Middlesex or Essex, nor directly or indirectly act as such attorney or solicitor for any client or clients of the plaintiff, or any partner or partners of the plaintiff, or for any person or persons who should have been a client or clients of the plaintiff, or any partner or partners of the plaintiff, at any time during the term. At the expiration of the term the defendant having commenced business on his own account in Southwark:—Held, that the restriction was not unreasonable, and that the defendant's acting for a petitioner in the London court of bankruptcy was a breach of the covenant. May v. O'Neill, 44 L. J., Ch. 660.

P., a solicitor, having accepted the situation of clerk to E., a solicitor practising at N., entered into a bond with him, which, after reciting that P. had been appointed agent to O., was conditioned to be void if P. should abstain from practising as a solicitor at N., or within thirty miles thereof, without the consent of E., and should not act as O.'s legal adviser, except as E.'s clerk, and should not accept or undertake any other agency or appointment (except such as he then held) without E.'s consent; and, in case the engagement with him should be put an end to or determined, should not continue to act as agent to O. E. afterwards gave P. three months' notice to leave his office, and thus put an end to his engagement. At the expiration of that time P. resigned his appointment as agent to O., but he subsequently resumed it, and he obtained the office of clerk to the magistrates, and other offices. On motion on behalf of E., the court granted an injunction to restrain P. from acting as agent to O., as clerk to the magistrates, and from otherwise violating the stipulations of the bond. Edmonds v. Plews, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1091; 3 L. T. 145.

—— Construction—"Client"—Country Solicitor and London Agent.]—A country solicitor is the "client" of his London agent within the meaning of a covenant not to transact business with any person who has been a client of the London agent. Reid v. Burrows, 61 L. J., Ch. 448; [1892] 2 Ch. 413; 67 L. T. 183; 40 W. R. 620.

No Contract.]—A clerk to a solicitor, commencing practice for himself, not to be restrained from acting as solicitor for parties against whom his master was employed, upon general allegations of his having in his former service acquired information likely to be prejudicial to the clients of his master. Bricheno v. Thorp, Jac. 300; 23 R. R. 69.

A solicitor's clerk, employed at a yearly salary, and who was allowed at the same time to keep his name up at a separate house in the same town as his employer and to practise for himself, having had disputes with his employer, suddenly left him without notice, and set up entirely for himself at the house he had been in the habit of using as his office. A motion to restrain him from so practising was, under the circumstances, refused. Shepherd v. Neve, 22 W. R. 725.

Articles under which A. had served his clerkship to an attorney, contained a proviso that A. should not practise within a certain district; and also a covenant on the part of his father, that A. should, within a month after he came of age, execute a bond in a specified penalty, to secure his fulfilment of the proviso. A., who was an infant at the time of the execution of the articles, served under them for three years after he attained his full age, but was never called on to execute any bonds; and with a knowledge of the purport of the articles completed his clerkship, and afterwards began to practise as an attorney within the district from which the articles purported to exclude him. A motion for an injunction to restrain him from practising within the district was refused with costs. Capes v. Hutton, 2 Russ. 357; 26 R. R. 102.

B. ADMISSION.

Notices — Change of Name.] — A person assuming a new name after his service under articles was complete should put up notices in his former and his new name. Ridley, In re, 4 A. & E. 780; 6 N. & M. 436; 6 L. J., K. B. 258.

—— Amendment—Inaccuracy as to Name.]—Where a second christian-name of both master and clerk was omitted in the articles of clerkship, and the notice of intention to apply for admission described the parties by such second christian-name, the court allowed the admission, on having an affidavit of the identity of the parties. Crofts, Ex parte, 5 N. & M. 58; 1 Har. & W. 375; 4 L. J., K. B. 204.

So where the clerk's christian-name has been incorrectly stated, the court will allow the notice to be corrected. Dukes, Ex parte, 7 D. P. C. 605; 2 W. W. & H. 44.

Where the notice of admission was given with a view to admission in Easter term, but by mistake the name of the person with whom he resided was inserted instead of the name of the party to whom he was articled, the court, on an affidavit of the mistake, and denying any intention to evade the inquiry, allowed him to be admitted on the same notice on the last day of Trinity term. Clarke, In re, 4 N. & M. 709; 3 A. & E. 72; 1 H. & W. 141; 4 L. J., K. B. 155.

—— As to Service of Articles.]—A notice erroneously stated that the clerk had served his time with B., when in fact he had been originally articled to B.'s partner, with whom he served three years, and on whose death he was assigned to B.:—The court allowed an amendment. Collins, Ex parte, 6 D. P. C. 495; 1 W. W. & H. 173; 2 Jur. 842.

—— As to Place of Residence.]—An amendment allowed in a notice for admission of an attorney by inserting his place of residence. Jones, Ex parte, 3 A. & E. 74.

Intentional Omission of Notice.]—If an articled clerk intentionally omits to give the notice and cause the entries to be made as required by Reg. Gen. H. T. 1853, r. 5, for the proper period before the term in which he proposes to be admitted, the court will not assist him by allowing such notice to be given and entries made subsequently. Cumberland, Ex parte, 44 L. J., Q. B. 73; L. R. 10 Q. B. 138; 23 W. R. 180.

When Rule as to Notice will be Relaxed.]—Under special circumstances the court allowed an articled clerk, who had passed his examination, to give his notices at the end of the term preceeding that in which he might be admitted an attorney, instead of giving the notices three days before its commencement as required by Reg. Gen. H. T. 1853, r. 5. Taylor, Ex parte, 44 L. J., C. P. 65; 31 L. T. 883.

A party who has been prevented by illness from being admitted as an attorney on the last day of a term, pursuant to the notices, will be allowed to be admitted the next term. Thompson, Ex parte, 1 W. W. & H. 33; 2 Jur. 34.

But a person who cannot be admitted in the term for which he has given notice, on account of being obliged to leave London by the sudden death of a relative, cannot be admitted the next term, but may give fresh notices for the following term. Gwynne, Ex parte, 2 W. W. & H. 45; 3 Jur. 199.

The court allowed an attorney to be admitted without a full term's notice, where all the other requisites had been complied with, and it appeared to be essential to his interests in his profession that he should sail for India before the regular time of notice should expire. Hancock, In re, 4 A. & E. 779; 2 H. & W. 99.

Where a party had given regular notice of his intention to apply to be admitted as an attorney on the first day of Hilary term, and it appeared that, on the second day of Michaelmas term, an offer of partnership from the London agents of the firm to which he was articled had been made, provided he could get admitted by the last day of that term, the court, on motion on the fourth day of Michaelmas term, ordered that, on his giving fresh notices, referring to the former notices and the present rule, he should be examined, and, if of ability, admitted the last day of that term. Cunliffe, Ex parte, 3 D. & L. 548; 15 L. J., Q. B. 41; 9 Jur. 942.

The court allowed an attorney to be admitted without a term's notice, when it was sworn that he had, since the time at which such notice could have been given, received an advantageous offer of partnership, which he would be unable to accept, unless the application should be granted. Estcourt, In re, 8 Jur. 985.

Where it appeared that an articled clerk gave, three days before Easter term, the requisite notices for admission in Trinity term; that he was examined in Trinity term; then obtained a certificate of fitness, and immediately afterwards accepted the situation of a clerk to a firm of attorneys; and believing that he might be admitted in the ensuing Michaelmas term without fresh notices, failed to be admitted in Trinity term, the court, on a motion being made early in Michaelmas term, allowed him to give the requisite notices for admission on the last day of Michaelmas term. Udall, In re, 8 Jur. 1007.

Where an applicant had been examined in Michaelmas term, 1840, and obtained his certificate, and before the expiration of that term was entered of the Middle Temple as a law student, and with a view of being called to the bar, and immediately afterwards became the pupil of a conveyancer, with whom he remained twelve months, and subsequently of an equity draughtsman, with whom he remained eighteen months; and a proposition was then made to him to enter a London firm of attorneys as junior partner from the 1st of January, 1844; the court under the circumstances, and as there had been a continued application to legal studies, allowed the applicant, on the 20th of November, to give notice of his intention to apply for admission on the first day of Hilary term. Guteris, Ex parte, 7 Jur. 1039.

Renewal of Notice.]—An articled clerk gave the proper notices for examination and admission as an attorney in Easter term. He passed his examination in that term, but did not apply for admission, nor did he renew his notices pursuant to the rule of Hilary term, 1853:—Held, upon an application in Trinity term to be allowed to renew the notices, so that he might be admitted during that term, that the rule was positive, and that the court would not dispense with it. Hay, Ex parte, 41 L. J., Q. B. 375; L. R. 7 Q. B. 587.

A clerk, who, as his articles expired on the 23rd of August, 1863, was entitled to be examined in Trinity term, erroneously construed 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, in connection with the rules, as entitling him to be admitted during Trinity term; and, as required by the rules, three days at least before Easter term, gave and entered the notices required for that purpose. Having, during Trinity term, been examined and obtained his certificate, and discovered that he was not entitled to be admitted till Michaelmas term, as it was too late for him to give and enter fresh notices, an application by him to have the notices already given amended and treated as fresh notices, in order for his admission in Michaelmas term, was granted. Saffery, In re, 11 W. R. 779.

Certificate of Fitness.]—Where an articled clerk had been examined, and had obtained his certificate of fitness from the examiners in Trinity term, 1841, and did not take any further steps to procure his admission as an attorney, and did not, within the next term, apply for an extension of the time during which his certificate should run, the court, in Michaelmas term, 1842, held that the operation of the certificate had ceased and refused to make an order for its renewal. Bromley, Ex parte, 2 D. (N.S.) 388; 12 L. J., Q. B. 98; 6 Jur. 995.

The court has not power to extend the time during which the certificate of examination for admission to practise as an attorney should be in force; the extension must be by order of a judge. Younge, Ex parte, 13 Q. B. 663.

Where a party applied to the court for such extension after the time had expired, alleging that he had two years ago given the usual notices for admission and passed his examination, but had then gone abroad on account of ill-health; that the time had elapsed while he was abroad and detained by continued illness; that, before leaving England, he had been unacquainted with the necessity for enlarging the time, and, therefore, made no application for the purpose; and that he was negotiating for reception into a partnership, but the negotiation might be frustrated if his admission were delayed; the court, on the last day of term, allowed him to give notice and be examined for the purpose of admission during the next term. Ib.

Although a person desirous of being admitted an attorney has already passed one examination, but failed to obtain his certificate from the examiners, he must give a fresh term's notice to the examiners if he intends to apply again to be examined. Henry, Ex parte, 1 P. & D. 71; 8 A. & E. 745; 1 W. W. & H. 585; 8 L. J., Q. B. 12; 2 Jur. 920.

Deposit of Articles.] — Where the original deed of assignment of articles of clerkship had been in mistake annexed to, and filed with, the affidavit of such assignment, the court permitted the examiners to receive an office copy of the assignment, and to proceed to the examination of the applicant as if the original had been produced to them; and directed also that the certificate of the master of the court, that the original assignment was so filed, should be deemed sufficient on granting the judge's fiat for the admission of the applicant as an attorney. Buckle, Ex parte, 2 D. (N.S.) 476; 7 Jur. 558.

So where, in consequence of his master absconding, the clerk was unable to procure his articles, he was admitted without their production. Nicholls, Ex parte, 2 D. (N.S.) 423.

Where articles expired on the 1st of June, and the time at which they ought to have been deposited at the hall of the Law Society had ended on the 30th of May, and the day of examination was the 5th of June, the court, on the 2nd of June, ordered the articles to be received. Cooper, Ex parte, 5 D. P. C. 703; W. W. & D. 348.

Sending Answers to Questions.]—Where the delay on the part of a clerk, in sending in the answers, has been caused by the unexpected absence of the attorney, with whom the articles were served, the court will allow them to be sent in nunc pro tunc. Lyons, Ex parte, 6 D. P. C. 517; 1 W. W. & H. 174.

Where a clerk had omitted to send in his answers to the questions within the time limited by the examiners, in consequence of his agent omitting to transmit them in sufficient time, the court allowed him to send in the answers subsequently, the agent paying the costs of the application. Holland, Ex parte, 5 D. P. C. 681; W. W. & D. 349; 1 Jur. 432.

Where an attorney to whom an articled clerk has served part of his time has absconded, the court will allow him to be examined without producing the usual testimonials from him as to service. Carr, Ex parte, 1 D. (N.S.) 565; 6 Jur. 194.

When Clerks will be admitted for Examination.]—The court will, under special circumstances where a clerk proposes to practise abroad only, allow him to be examined before the expiration of his articles. Twynam, Ex parte, 8 D. P. C. 293; 3 Jur. 1124. S. P., Fulcher, Ex parte, 8 D. P. C. 614; 4 Jur. 435.

The examiners ought not to refuse to examine a clerk on the ground that there is a doubt as to the validity of his service under his articles. Masterman, Ex parte, 6 Scott, 782; 7 D. P. C. 156; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 70; 8 L. J., C. P. 24. S. P., Smithers, In re, 1 Arn. 423; Bebb, In re, 3 Jur. 24.

The Law Society has been in the habit of examining articled clerks in the term in which their articles expire, even though they expire on a day subsequent to that on which the examination is held. A. entered into articles of clerkship, which expired two days after the last day of term. On an application for a rule directing the examiners to admit him to be examined, on the ground that the attorney to whom he was articled was compelled by ill-health to take a partner at once, and was desirous of taking A. into partnership, the court directed him to be examined de bene esse. Thomas, Ex parte, 2 L. T. 352; 8 W. R. 522.

Admission of Infants.]—The court will not admit an infant as an attorney. Evans, Ex parte, 1 W. W. & H. 34; 2 Jur. 47. S. P., Cragg, Ex parte, 6 D. P. C. 256.

Except perhaps in very urgent circumstances. Steele, Ex parte, 33 L. J., Q. B. 326; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1254; 12 W. R. 956.

But where he has served the full period of five years, and he will become of age a few days after the term, he may be examined for the purpose of being admitted the following term. Tebbs, Ex parte, 9 D. P. C. 151; 1 W. P. C. 16; 4 Jur. 1014. S. P., Bousfield, Ex parte, 9 D. P. C. 616; 10 L. J., Q. B. 361; 5 Jur. 772.

Period of Clerkship expiring in Vacation.]—Where a clerk was articled on the 31st January, 1857, to serve "for five years next ensuing the date thereof":—Held, that he could not be admitted on the 31st January, 1862, but might be (under s. 12 of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127) by a judge on the following day. Ellis, In re, 5 L. T. 686.

Semble, that a judge has not power out of term to admit an attorney, except where such power is expressly given by statute. Steele, Ex parte, 33 L. J., Q. B. 326; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1254; 12 W. R. 956.

Oaths on Admission.]—An attorney may be admitted on taking the oath of allegiance and the oath to demean himself truly and honestly under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ss. 18, 19. Cornwodan Tyahjee, In re, 28 L. J., Q. B. 22; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1108.

But he cannot practise in England without taking the oath substituted for the oaths of allegiance, supremacy and abjuration, by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 48. s. 1. Ib.

An attorney, unable from bodily infirmity to attend to be sworn in, was allowed to be admitted in the court of review on an affidavit sworn before a master in chancery. Swain, Ex parte, 1 Deac. & C. 15.

In Inferior Courts.]—Attorneys of the superior courts are entitled, by virtue of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 27, to be admitted to inferior courts of law. London (Mayor) v. Reg., 13 Q. B. 1; 17 L. J., Q. B. 330; 13 Jur. 33—Ex. Ch.

In Counties Palatine.]—An application to admit and inrol an attorney of the courts of the county palatine of Durham, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 45, as an attorney of the superior courts at Westminster, may be made in court. Patrick, Ex parte, 1 D. & L. 696; 13 L. J., Q. B. 90; 7 Jur. 993.

Articles entered into with an attorney of the common pleas of the duchy of Lancaster, who was also an attorney of the queen's bench, and which were inadvertently stamped with the 60*l.* stamp required in order to entitle an attorney to practise in the common pleas of the duchy of Lancaster, instead of the 80*l.* stamp required to entitle him to admission to practise in the courts of Westminster Hall, were allowed to be inrolled on payment of the extra 20*l.*, on an affidavit that the omission was not made with the intention of evading the extra duty. Watson, In re, 11 W. R. 730.

A person admitted an attorney of the court of the county palatine of Durham before 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, was entitled to be admitted an attorney of the queen's bench without giving a term's notice. Watson, Ex parte, 30 L. J., Q. B. 1; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1077; 3 L. T. 267; 9 W. R. 13.

Where a clerk entered into articles for the purpose of being admitted in the common pleas of the county palatine of Lancaster, and before those articles expired resolved to be admitted an attorney of the court of queen's bench, and thereupon paid the higher duty; the court, upon being satisfied that he had acted bonâ fide, permitted his service under his original articles to be computed. Hogg, Ex parte, 11 L. T. 598; 13 W. R. 315.

Changing Name on Roll after Admission.]—Upon the application of a solicitor who had assumed the name of Chamberlain in addition to his own, the court, being satisfied with the reasons, ordered an entry of the change of name to be made upon the roll of solicitors. Matthews, Ex parte, 16 Beav. 245; 22 L. J., Ch. 22; 17 Jur. 29; 1 W. R. 44.

Where an attorney had changed his name by royal licence, the court allowed the roll to be amended by substituting the new name for the old. Benthall, Ex parte, 6 Man. & G. 722; 7 Scott (N.R.) 407; 1 D. & L. 747. Contra, Hayward, Ex parte, 5 Scott, 712.

Where an attorney made an affidavit that for family reasons, and no other, he was desirous of changing his name, the court directed the master to indorse the proposed alteration on the roll of attorneys, although no royal licence had been obtained for the purpose. Gimlet, In re, 7 L. T. 562; 11 W. R. 210.

So where an attorney has signed the roll, if he afterwards alters his name, and is desirous of being recognised by such altered name, the court, on being satisfied that the application is bonâ fide, will allow the entry of such change to be made on the roll. Daggett, Ex parte, 1 L. M. & P. 1. S. P., Moses, Ex parte, 19 L. J., Q. B. 345; 15 Jur. 153; Bryan, Ex parte, 1 W. R. 436; De Medewe, Ex parte, 3 W. R. 181.

The court permitted an attorney, admitted in the queen's bench and exchequer by the name of "Thomas James Moses," to sign the roll of the common pleas by the name of "Thomas James" on the production of his admission in the queen's bench, upon an affidavit of the circumstances under which he had changed his name, and that the queen's bench and exchequer had permitted the entry of his name in their rolls to be so altered. James, Ex parte, 9 C. B. 221; 1 L. M. & P. 4. S. C., 5 Ex. 310; 19 L. J., Ex. 272.

On an application of an attorney to be allowed to substitute the name of "J. Heaton D." on the roll in the place of "J. D.," the court refused to alter the roll, but directed the master to make a memorandum on the roll opposite his name, stating that he was known by the name of "J. Heaton D.," and that the memorandum was made by rule of court. Dearden, In re, 5 Ex. 740; 1 L. M. & P. 666; 20 L. J., Ex. 80.

An attorney who desires to change his name should apply to the court, and not to a judge at chambers. An Attorney, Ex parte, 11 W. R. 780.

C. READMISSION.

When Struck off at his own Request.]—It is a matter of course to restore to the roll an attorney who has been struck off at his own request, if no opposition is made by the Law Society after notice served on it. Walsh, In re, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 165.

An attorney, who had been struck off the roll by his own desire, was readmitted at the expiration of fifteen years, without paying any fine or arrears of duty. Calland, Ex parte, 2 B. & Ald. 315. See 51 & 52 Vict. c. 65, s. 16.

Where an attorney, struck off the roll on his own application, was afterwards called to the bar, the court refused to give him leave to be again put upon the roll. Cole, Ex parte, 1 Dougl. 114.

The same honour and the same integrity which are essential to the character and position of a barrister are also necessary to the character and position of an attorney. Pyke, In re, 6 B. & S. 703; 34 L. J., Q. B. 121; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 504.

An attorney, whose name was struck off the roll at his own request, was called to the bar, and afterwards disbarred on the charges of participating by previous agreement in the profits of an attorney, and in one particular case of having acted both as counsel and attorney. After a lapse of twenty years he applied for leave to be readmitted an attorney. The court refused, unless he could satisfy the court by the testimony of trustworthy persons (especially members of the profession) that his conduct and character had been unimpeached and unimpeachable in the meantime; but afterwards dispensed with this requirement on his showing that he could not obtain such testimony in consequence of his having lived during that period in complete retirement. Ib.

—— Practice on—Affidavits.]—Afterwards, upon renewal of the application, supported by affidavits that he had lived a secluded life with his family since he was disbarred, and was, therefore, unable to furnish the required affidavits, but furnished a list of his different abodes, and the dates of his residence at each (such affidavits being filed two months previously to the renewed application), the court ordered his readmission without examination. Pyke, In re, 34 L. J., Q. B. 220; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 860.

When Examination will be Required.]—A solicitor who did not take out a certificate for eleven years on account of ill health, but kept up his legal studies and pursuits, was allowed to renew his certificate without examination. Elton, In re, 37 L. J., Ch. 482; 17 L. T. 487; 16 W. R. 323.

Where an attorney, admitted in 1823, had ceased in 1832 to take out his certificate in consequence of his becoming a farmer and grazier, the court would not allow him to be readmitted in 1844 without an examination. Bray, Ex parte, 2 D. & L. 9; 13 L. J., Q. B. 240; 8 Jur. 875.

An attorney had been admitted thirty-nine years ago, but had not practised, and had, in the intermediate time, and till the period of the application, acted as a magistrate and commissioner. The court refused to readmit him, but allowed him to be re-examined, and to give his notices for the term next ensuing. Robinson, Ex parte, 2 D. & L. 9; 13 L. J., Q. B. 240; 8 Jur. 621.

A solicitor, who had ceased to take out his certificate in 1853, with the intention of being called to the bar, which he had abandoned, was allowed to renew his certificate without undergoing an examination in 1863. Sewell, In re, 32 Beav. 475.

An attorney who has ceased to practise for twelve years must pass his examination in the regular way before he will be permitted to renew his certificate. Anon., 16 Jur. 222.

An attorney struck off the rolls at his own request ten years before, and from that time living on his property, was not readmitted without examination. Rising, Ex parte, 4 W. R. 559.

Readmission of applicant who had been struck off the rolls two years before at his own request for the purpose of studying for the bar, but whom the benchers had refused to call on account of his holding the office of county court bailiff, granted. Anon., 3 L. T. 737.

But under similar circumstances the court refused to readmit at once when the applicant could not in the ordinary course be readmitted until the following term. Longbourne, Ex parte, 4 L. T. 210.

An attorney who had practised for twenty-seven years, but had ceased to practise for eighteen years, not readmitted without examination. Leith, Ex parte, 7 W. R. 579.

A person who has ceased to practise as a solicitor for thirty-nine years will not be re-admitted without re-examination, though for the last seventeen years he has acted as a magistrate and commissioner of taxes. Robinson, Ex parte, 2 D. & L. 9 ; 13 L. J., Q. B. 240.

The court will not readmit an attorney who has discontinued practice for thirty years. Billings, Ex parte, 5 D. P. C. 395; 2 H. & W. 327.

Where an attorney had practised seven years, and had been off the rolls twenty-seven years, during which time he had not been engaged in the law, but then became a managing clerk in the office of an attorney, who answered to his capacity as a lawyer, the court allowed him to be readmitted. Brabant, Ex parte, 7 D. P. C. 622 ; 2 W. W. & H. 46 ; 3 Jur. 1152.

The court will not readmit an attorney who has discontinued practice for forty years, even though he has been employed occasionally as writing clerk in the office of various attorneys, generally as agent and rent-collector, in the intermediate time between the period of his ceasing to practise and the application to be readmitted. Rudge, Ex parte, 2 D. (N.S.) 682 ; 12 L. J., Q. B. 186 ; 7 Jur. 581.

After being Struck off for Misconduct.]—The court has power, even when it is proved that a conviction for an offence against the criminal law has taken place, but where the atonement of a long period of good conduct has been offered, to restore a solicitor to the roll. Brandreth, In re, 60 L. J., Q. B. 501 ; 64 L. T. 739 ; 39 W. R. 687.

Although, upon an application to strike a solicitor off the rolls for an offence under s. 32 of the Solicitors Act, 1843, such as allowing an unqualified person to practise in his name, the court may have a discretionary power to inflict a punishment short of striking him off the rolls, yet, if the court does make an order striking him off, it has no power afterwards to reinstate him, the direction in the section being absolute that, as the consequence of such an order, he shall for ever thereafter be disabled from practising as a solicitor. Lamb, In re, 58 L. J., Q. B. 450 ; 23 Q. B. D. 477 ; 61 L. T. 374 ; 37 W. R. 665—C. A.

A person convicted of a conspiracy to extort money by means of a libel is not a fit person to be on the rolls of the court as an attorney ; and the court will not entertain a motion for his readmission. Hawden or Hawdone, In re, 9 D. P. C. 970 ; 5 Jur. 508.

In 1847, A. was found guilty of forgery, but judgment was respited, on the ground that the judge had received evidence which was inadmissible ; viz. admissions which A. had been compelled to make when under examination as a witness in an action ; and he in consequence received a free pardon. In 1849 he was struck off the roll for perjury made in an affidavit of increase. The court refused, in 1856, to readmit him, although he produced very strong affidavits and testimonials as to his conduct since 1849. Garbett, In re, 18 C. B. 403.

An attorney having been struck off the roll in 1859, for misappropriating to his own use money received from a client for a particular purpose, the court, in 1865, allowed his name to be restored to the roll on affidavits of numerous attorneys as to his good character and conduct during the interval. Robins, In re, 34 L. J., Q. B. 121 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 504.

When an attorney has been struck off the roll for a fraudulent misappropriation of moneys of a client intrusted to him for investment, it is a condition precedent to his being restored that he should have made full restitution, or, at least, all the restitution in his power. Poole. In re, 38 L. J., C. P. 216 ; L. R. 4 C. P. 350 ; 17 W. R. 735.

An attorney who has been struck off the roll may be readmitted. Rex v. Greenwood, 1 W. Bl. 222.

A solicitor who has been struck off the rolls for misconduct restored after a lapse of ten years, during which, amidst great privation and suffering, he had maintained an irreproachable character, the application being supported by a memorial signed by a very large number of solicitors, and not opposed by the Law Institution, though opposed by one individual solicitor only. Anon., 17 Beav. 475.

Renewal of Certificate.]—See next sub-heading.

D. CERTIFICATE.

Stamp—Attendance of Country Solicitor at a Taxation in London—"Practising."]—By 33 & 34 Vict. c. 97, the duty on the certificate, if a person "practises or carries on his business" within ten miles from the general post office of the city of London, is of a certain amount ; and if he practises or carries on his business beyond the above-mentioned limits, is of a less amount. A solicitor, with a country certificate, and whose offices were at Birmingham, came up on a retainer and attended the taxation of a bill of costs within the ten-mile radius :—Held, that he did not, by this one transaction, act or practise in London within the meaning of the statute. Horton, In re, 51 L. J., Q. B. 309 ; 8 Q. B. D. 434 ; 45 L. T. 451 ; 30 W. R. 102 ; 46 J. P. 293.

—— Country Solicitor—Practising in Dublin.]—Where an application was made on behalf of a plaintiff to stay the taxation of the defendant's costs, in an action tried in Dublin, in 1863, on the ground that M., the defendant's attorney, had taken out a certificate to enable him to practise as a country attorney, for 1863, for which he paid 6*l.*, being the amount required to be paid by a country practitioner not ordinarily carrying on his business in the city of Dublin for more than forty days in the year, and where it appeared that though M. lived altogether in the country in the year, yet that his entire business was carried on in the superior courts, and attended to by a town agent in Dublin :—Held, that an attorney living in the country, whose ordinary business was transacted in Dublin, should pay a city licence. Keegan v. Mowlds, 10 L. T. 822.

Evidence—"Law List."]—The "Law List" is primâ facie evidence that a person has taken out his certificate for the then current year ; if a solicitor's name does not appear thereon, the onus of proving that he is a solicitor lies upon him. Reg. v. Wenham, 10 Cox, C. C. 222.

Renewal.]—Where a solicitor has neglected for a whole year to renew his certificate, the master of the rolls only has power to order the registrar of certificates (the Incorporated Law Society) to grant him a certificate for the current year. The right of a solicitor who has neglected to renew his certificate to apply for a fresh one is not a "right acquired or accrued" within 40 & 41 Vict. c. 25, s. 23, Proviso (B). Chaffers, In re, Incorporated Law Society, Ex parte, 15 Q. B. D. 467.

Where an attorney, who had ceased to practise and renew his certificate for several years, gave the notices provided for by the rules, whereby he would have been at liberty to have renewed his certificate in vacation, and applied to the court to be permitted to renew his certificate at once, on the ground (explained) that it was of great importance to him to be at once so permitted: the court refused the application, as the permission sought would entirely defeat the object of the rule. Barnes, Ex parte, 2 B. C. Rep. 156; 5 D. & L. 294.

The court will, in urgent cases, dispense with the rule, provided it appears that there has been no neglect in the applicant to give as long notices as were in his power, and that the notices so given afforded a reasonable time for inquiry into his conduct since his admission. Webb, Ex parte, 4 D. & L. 641. S. P., Weymouth, Ex parte, 5 D. & L. 60; 2 B. C. Rep. 102.

The court will make an order authorising the registrar to issue a certificate to an attorney, whose London agent had omitted to take it out for the last and present year (the money and instructions having been forwarded to him for that purpose), on payment of the arrears of duty, without obliging him to give any notices. Gude, Ex parte, 1 D. & L. 675; 7 Jur. 1016. See also supra, READMISSION.

—— Where Applicant has been Guilty of Misconduct.]—But the court refused to allow an attorney to take out his certificate, where he had been found guilty on an indictment for a conspiracy, and had been sentenced to and had undergone eighteen months' imprisonment, although the motion was unopposed, and the fact appeared only on his own affidavit, and he swore he was not guilty of the offence, and it had occurred eighteen years back, since which time he had been engaged as law clerk in the offices of several attorneys. Grey or Gray, Ex parte, 5 D. & L. 275; 12 Jur. 119.

An attorney, whilst uncertificated, had placed his name upon briefs for counsel at quarter sessions, and upon his showing that he had on those occasions acted gratuitously, and from motives of kindness, was allowed to renew his certificate upon payment of three years' back duty and a fine. Taylor, In re, 16 Jur. 728. S. P., Carpenter, In re, 18 W. R. 382.

—— Non-production of, under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 21.]—A solicitor who, by a slip, neglected to produce his certificate to the registrar within a month, as required by 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 21, was relieved from the consequences, and it was ordered that the certificate should take effect from the time of stamping the same. Smith, In re, 33 Beav. 248.

G. PRIVILEGE.

I. PERSONAL TO SOLICITOR.

Acting as Advocate.]—Where, at a trial before an under-sheriff, an attorney opened the case as an advocate for the plaintiff, cross-examined the defendant's witnesses, and addressed the jury in reply, and then tendered himself and was admitted as a witness to disprove the defendant's case, a verdict so obtained for the plaintiff was set aside. Stones v. Byron, 4 D. & L. 393; 1 B. C. Rep. 248; 16 L. J., Q. B. 32; 11 Jur. 44. But see contra, Cobbett v. Hudson, 1 El. & Bl. 11; 22 L. J., Q. B. 11; 17 Jur. 488; 1 W. R. 54.

A commissioner in bankruptcy is not bound to hear a person who, although a duly admitted solicitor of the court, does not appear as the solicitor of the party for whom he appears, but only as the clerk of such solicitor. Broadhouse, Ex parte and In re, 36 L. J., Bk. 29; L. R. 2 Ch. 655; 17 L. T. 126; 15 W. R. 126.

A solicitor has no right to insist upon taking part as an advocate upon proceedings before justices under a penal statute, where it is the practice of that court not to allow persons to practise as solicitors or advocates. Collier v. Hicks, 2 B. & Ad. 663; 9 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 138.

—— In Court of Arches.]—A respondent in a cause of appeal in the arches court could not before 39 & 40 Vict. c. 66, appear by a solicitor of the supreme court of judicature who was not also a proctor of the arches, duly qualified and admitted according to the practice of that court. Crisp v. Martin, 1 P. D. 302.

—— Solicitor in Permanent and Exclusive Employment of another Solicitor — "Acting generally in the Action or Matter."]—A solicitor, whose position is merely that of clerk to another solicitor, although he is in the latter's permanent and exclusive employment, and, in the course of his duty, has had the management of the business of a client of his employer who is a party to an action or matter, and has advised him thereon, is not "a solicitor acting generally in the action or matter" so as to be entitled as of right to audience in a county court on behalf of such party. Reg. v. Snagge, 63 L. J., Q. B. 689; [1894] 2 Q. B. 440; 10 R. 381; 70 L. T. 874; 42 W. R. 603; 58 J. P. 752.

Bankruptcy—Sale of Books and Papers.]—The sale of the books of a solicitor who had been adjudicated a bankrupt is not authorised by the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, s. 137, and, therefore, where a sale by auction of the book debts and books of a firm of solicitors had been directed by the assignees:—Held, to be improper, on the ground that the affairs of the clients of the bankrupts might be made public. Roberts, Ex parte, Holden, In re, 33 L. J., Bk. 8; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 28; 9 L. T. 469; 12 W. R. 183.

Privilege from Arrest.]—An attorney's clerk is not privileged from arrest whilst going to the judges' chambers for the purpose of there conducting his master's business. Phillips v. Pound, 7 Ex. 881; 21 L. J., Ex. 277; 16 Jur. 645. See also SHERIFF.

Visiting Clients in Prison.]—Attorneys are entitled to be admitted to the interior of the K. B. prison when they have occasion to go there for the benefit of clients confined in the prison, or when they are sent for by such clients. Jones, In re, 1 N. & M. 128. S. C., nom. Matanle, Ex parte, 4 B. & Ad. 365.

Action commenced in High Court—Costs—County Courts Act, 1867, s. 5.]—Sect. 5 of the County Courts Act, 1867, which deprives plaintiffs in actions commenced in the high court of costs if less than 20*l.* in contract, or 10*l.* in tort, is recovered, applies to an action in which a solicitor is plaintiff. Blair v. Eisler, 57 L. J., Q. B. 512; 21 Q. B. D. 185; 59 L. T. 337; 36 W. R. 767.

As to Venue—When Suing.]—The privilege of an attorney suing in person, to lay and retain the venue in Middlesex is not affected by the Common Law Procedure Act of 1852, or Reg. Gen., H. T. 1852, r. 18; and consequently, the defendant cannot, under any circumstances, change the venue in such an action. Grace v. Wilmer, 6 El. & Bl. 982; 26 L. J., Q. B. 1; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 64; 5 W. R. 47.

An attorney, when plaintiff, may lay and retain the venue in Middlesex. Pye v. Leigh, 2 W. Bl. 1065.

But he has no privilege of laying and retaining the venue in London. Bradshaw v. Barton, 7 D. P. C. 329; 1 W. W. & H. 417; 2 Jur. 990.

An attorney appearing by another loses his privilege. Harrington v. Page, 2 D. P. C. 164. S. P., Dowless v. Timms, 3 D. P. C. 707.

In order to retain the venue in Middlesex, it is not necessary that he should state in the declaration that he sues as an attorney. Cutts v. Surridge, 4 D. & L. 373; 16 L. J., Q. B. 2. S. P., Williams v. Powell, 10 Jur. 966.

Where an attorney, by the mistake of his agent, laid the venue in the country, instead of Middlesex, the court refused to amend by changing it to Middlesex. Lewis v. Shelley, 2 Marsh. 426; 7 Taunt. 146.

An attorney is entitled to retain his venue in Middlesex, notwithstanding his not having entered his certificate. Partington v. Woodcock, 2 D. P. C. 550.

In the case of an issue directed by the court, it is no objection to an application to change the venue from Middlesex to Sussex, that the plaintiff is an attorney of the court. Robertson v. Hayne, 16 C. B. 560.

—— When Sued.]—When a defendant, he has no privilege with respect to the venue whatever. Yeardley v. Roe, 3 Term Rep. 573. S. P., Pope v. Redfearne, 4 Burr. 2027.

A solicitor is equally liable to be sued in an action in the mayor's court as in the superior court. Day v. Ward, 55 L. J., Q. B. 494; 17 Q. B. D. 703; 55 L. T. 518; 35 W. R. 59.

When an attorney files a bill in chancery without authority, and the plaintiff is obliged to pay the costs of the bill being dismissed he may lay the venue either in the county where the court of chancery is held, or in the county where he actually paid the money. Lyde v. Rodd, 1 Bro. P. C. 65.

In Actions of Libel and Slander.]—See DEFAMATION.

II. IN RELATION TO CLIENTS.

See DISCOVERY—EVIDENCE.

H. DUTY AND AUTHORITY OF.

I. RETAINER.

Written or Verbal.]—Though not absolutely necessary, yet in common practice, an attorney ought, before commencing an action, to take a written direction from his client for so doing. Owen v. Ord, 3 Car. & P. 349. S. P., Lord v. Kellett, 2 Myl. & K. 1.

The retainer of a solicitor need not be in writing, but if he neglects taking the precaution, and, his retainer being afterwards questioned, there is nothing but assertion against assertion, he must bear the costs of the risk he thus undertakes. Wiggins v. Peppin, 2 Beav. 403; 3 Jur. 721.

Although an authority may be given to file a bill by parol, yet the solicitor must abide by the consequence if he omit to take a written authority; and where there was assertion against assertion, an order was made to take the bill off the file, and that the solicitor should pay the costs. Martindale v. Lawson, C. P. Cooper 83.

Implies promise to pay Costs.]—A retainer implies a promise to pay all costs rightly and properly incurred upon the retainer. Bolden v. Nicholay, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 884.

Several Causes.]—Four plaintiffs instituted an original and two supplemental causes, and three of the same plaintiffs on a subsequent abatement filed a supplemental bill by a new solicitor, making the other plaintiff a defendant, who also appeared by another solicitor. On a petition in the four causes, the solicitor in the last supplemental suit, and not the solicitor on the record in the first three causes, was held entitled to appear for the plaintiffs. Ward v. Swift, 6 Hare, 309.

Knowledge that Name is used without Authority.]—If a solicitor has used the name of a party as plaintiff in a suit with his knowledge, but without his authority, and such party allows the suit to proceed without taking steps to have his name removed from the record, this will not be an adoption of the solicitor, nor equivalent to a retainer of him by the party. Hall v. Laver, 1 Hare, 571; 4 Y. & Coll. 218; 5 Jur. 241.

A party to a cause, for whose benefit, in common with others, the cause has been prosecuted, cannot avail himself of the benefit resulting from the suit discharged of the expenses of it, although he may have been made a party to it without his authority. Ib.

May be Inferred.]—The existence of the relation of solicitor and client between parties may be inferred from their acts, although the solicitor has not received any express retainer. Blyth v. Fladgate, 60 L. J., Ch. 66; [1891] 1 Ch. 337; 63 L. T. 546; 39 W. R. 422.

The matter of a mortgage to trustees was undertaken by S. as a partner in F., S. & F., at a time when there were no trustees of the settlement, in the expectation that the new trustees when appointed would adopt the security, which they did:—Held, that the relation of solicitor and client subsisted between the firm and the trustees, and that the firm were liable to the trustees for the damages sustained by them by reason of the negligence of the firm. Ib.

A. and B. sue out a commission as solicitors to the petitioning creditor, and the assignees afterwards appoint C. to act as solicitor, but it is agreed between him and A. and B., with the privity of the assignees, that all three shall jointly act as solicitors and share the profits, and the assignees afterwards recognise the acting of A. and B. as such joint solicitors:—Held, that this amounted to a retainer by the assignees of A. and B. as joint solicitors with C. Hammond, Ex parte, Wooding, In re, 3 Deac. & C. 626; 1 Mont. & Ayr, 328; 3 L. J., Bk. 62.

The solicitor appointed by the creditors' assignees is the solicitor of all the assignees in the bankruptcy; but he is not by such appointment otherwise constituted the agent of the official assignee. Hughes v. Morris, 9 Hare, 636; 21 L. J., Ch. 761; 16 Jur. 603.

As to what constitutes a relationship of attorney and client. Goddard v. Carlisle, 9 Price, 169; 23 R. R. 164.

Where the plaintiff was employed as a solicitor to carry on proceedings in chancery, after which the defendant married one of the parties to the suit, and eventually received a proportionate part of the property in dispute, in right of his wife, under an order of that court:—Held, that he was liable to pay the plaintiff his proportion of the bill of costs, after taxation, although there had been no retainer of the plaintiff by the defendant, and although the bill had not been delivered to the latter, but to a co-defendant, who had suffered judgment by default. Gray v. Wainman, 7 Moore, 467; 1 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 21.

An attorney, who was the ordinary attorney for a borrower, also acted in the matter of a particular loan for the lender, but did not make any charge against the lender for his services. The security he took was not sufficient:—Held, that he was properly charged as an attorney acting on the retainer and employment of the lender, and was in that character liable to an action for damages for the loss suffered through the insufficiency of the security. Donaldson v. Haldane, 7 Cl. & F. 762.

Contract by Company to Employ.]—In a declaration against a company a count alleged that, in consideration that the plaintiff had agreed to become the permanent attorney and solicitor of the company, and to act as such, for reward, the company promised the plaintiff to retain and employ him, as such permanent attorney; and that, in pursuance of the agreement, the company in fact retained and employed him, and the plaintiff acted, and had always been ready and willing to act, as the permanent attorney of the company; and alleged, for breach, that the company wrongfully, and without any just or reasonable cause for so doing, discharged him from being or acting as such attorney:—Held, that the count was not supported by proof of a resolution of the directors, that the plaintiff be appointed permanent solicitor to the institution; the word "permanent" denoting, in such resolution, no more than a general employment, as contradistinguished from an occasional or special employment. Elderton v. Emmens, 4 C. B. 479; 16 L. J., C. P. 209; 11 Jur. 612. See next Case.

A count that it was agreed by and between the plaintiff and a company that from a certain day the plaintiff, as the attorney and solicitor of the company, should receive a salary of 100*l.* per annum in lieu of rendering an annual bill of costs, and should for such salary advise and act for the company on all occasions in all matters connected with the company, with certain exceptions. That the said agreement being so made, in consideration that the plaintiff had, at the request of the company, promised the company to perform the same in all things on his part, the company promised to perform the same in all things on their part, and to retain and employ him as such attorney and solicitor on the terms aforesaid, and alleged, for breach, that the company, disregarding the promise and agreement, did not nor would continue to retain or employ the plaintiff as such attorney or solicitor on the terms aforesaid, but wrongfully, and without any reasonable cause, dismissed and discharged him from such employment and retainer, and thence hitherto refused to retain or employ him as such attorney or solicitor:—Held, that the count was good after verdict, for that it sufficiently alleged an agreement by the company, creating the relation of attorney and client, and a promise to continue that relation for at least a year. Emmens v. Elderton, 13 C. B. 495; 4 H. L. Cas. 624; 18 Jur. 21.

A solicitor had a retainer to act generally for a company, and also a special retainer to conduct a chancery suit on behalf of the company. Being employed by another client to go to America, he collected information on behalf of the company in furtherance of their suit, but without special instructions from the company to do so. On his return to England, he reported to the company what he had done, and they made use of the information he had obtained. He afterwards took three journeys to Paris to conduct negotiations for a compromise of the same suit without instructions from the company, but with the knowledge of some of the directors, and on two of them he was accompanied by the chairman:—Held, that, under the special circumstances of the case, the solicitor was entitled to charge the company for his professional services in America, and also for his professional services and expenses on his journeys to Paris. Snell, In re, 5 Ch. D. 815; 36 L. T. 534; 25 W. R. 736—C. A.

—— Articles of Association.]—Articles of association contained a clause in which it was stated that the plaintiff should be solicitor to the company, and should transact all the legal business of the company, including parliamentary business, for the usual and accustomed fees and charges, and should not be removed from his office, unless for misconduct. The articles were signed by seven members of the company, and were duly registered, and the company incorporated under the Companies Act, 1862. The plaintiff acted as solicitor to the company for some time, but ultimately the company ceased to employ him and employed other solicitors. The plaintiff brought an action against the company for breach of contract in not employing him as solicitor to transact their legal business on the terms of the articles:—Held, that the articles of association were a matter between the shareholders inter se, or the shareholders and the directors, and did not create any contract between the plaintiff and the company. Eley v. Positive Government Security Life Assurance Co., 45 L. J., Ex. 451; 1 Ex. D. 88; 34 L. T. 190; 24 W. R. 338—C. A.

By Corporations.]—By an act, incorporating a railway company, power was given to the directors to appoint and displace any of the officers of the company:—Held, that the appointment of an attorney to the company under this power need not be under seal. Reg. v. Cumberland JJ., 5 Railw. Cas. 332; 5 D. & L. 431; 17 L. J., Q. B. 102; 12 Jur. 1025.

The retainer or appointment of an attorney by a corporation must be by its common seal. Where, therefore, there has been such appointment, he cannot recover the amount of his bills of costs from the corporation of the business which he had transacted on behalf of that body. Arnold v. Poole Corporation, 5 Scott (N.R.) 741 ; 2 D. (N.S.) 574 ; 4 Man. & G. 860 ; 12 L. J., C. P. 97 ; 7 Jur. 653.

Business was done for a corporation by an attorney, whose appointment was not under seal. After several bills had been delivered for business done by him as such attorney, and also for costs incurred by him as town clerk, he received payments on account, which, in the absence of any specific appropriation by the corporation, he appropriated at the time to the discharge of certain bills, upon which, for the reason above stated, he could have maintained no action :—Held, that, inasmuch as his claim on those bills was a just and an equitable claim, though, from the absence of a contract under seal, they could not be made the subject of an action, the appropriation so made by him could not be called in question. Ib.

The retainer of an attorney by a corporation to conduct the opposition to a bill in parliament is an act which must be done by it under its common seal. Sutton v. Spectacle Makers Co., 10 L. T. 411 ; 12 W. R. 742.

A resolution by a corporation to retain an attorney to take steps in opposition to a rule nisi obtained against the corporation to assess compensation for the dismissal of an officer, coupled with an order that the return should be filed, is a sufficient authority to him to defend the return to the writ of mandamus. Reg. v. Lichfield Town Council, 10 Q. B. 534 ; 16 L. J., Q. B. 333 ; 11 Jur. 888.

The mayor and assessors of a borough, having refused to revise the list of burgesses of certain parishes within the borough, on the ground that they had not been published within the time prescribed by the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 15, and having rejected certain notices of claims and objections, on the ground that they had not been personally delivered to the town clerk, the parties thus disfranchised obtained writs of mandamus to compel the succeeding mayor and assessors to hold another court to revise the lists. The corporation, under their seal, retained an attorney to defend them against these proceedings, but the defences substantially failed :—Held, that he was entitled to maintain an action against the corporation for his costs incurred under the retainer ; and that, inasmuch as there was nothing to shew that the defence was unjustifiable or improper, the expenses were chargeable on the borough fund. Lewis v. Rochester Corporation, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 401 ; 30 L. J., C. P. 169 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 680 ; 3 L. T. 300 ; 9 W. R. 100.

—— Salary—Fixed Sum.]—The town council of a borough resolved :—"That 100 guineas be fixed as the salary of the town clerk for his attendance on the business of the council and committees, and that he be paid the usual charges and expenses in defending and bringing actions." Certain bills of the town clerk for business done for the corporation having been taxed :—Held, on motion to review the taxation, that the master was right in disallowing charges made for matters which, as town clerk, it was his duty to perform ; also, that the salary of 100 guineas was to be considered as remunerating him for all business he might do for the corporation, except defending and bringing actions. Thomas v. Swansea Corporation, 2 D. (N.S.) 470 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 73.

By Next Friend.]—Where a person lends his name as the next friend of an infant plaintiff, and, for the purpose of complying with the rules of the court of chancery, signs a retainer to an attorney to conduct the suit, although he does not further interfere in the matter, and the attorney receives his instructions from third parties, the next friend is liable on his retainer for the costs, unless he displaces this primâ facie liability by clear proof that the attorney acted on the credit of other persons. Hawkes v. Cottrell, 3 H. & N. 243 ; 27 L. J., Ex. 369. S. P., Flower, In re, 19 W. R. 578.

—— Right of Infant against Solicitor.]—Where an infant, suing by prochein ami, has obtained judgment for damages and costs, which have been paid to the attorney appointed by the prochein ami to conduct the suit for him, he may maintain an action against such attorney to recover the amount as money received for his use. Collins v. Brook, 5 H. & N. 700 ; 29 L. J., Ex. 255 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 999 ; 2 L. T. 774 ; 8 W. R. 474—Ex. Ch.

By Infant.]—An infant, who has no property of her own to settle, may contract with a solicitor for the preparation of a marriage settlement by her intended husband, under which proper provision is made for her benefit, as such may be considered a necessary suitable to her estate and condition. Helps v. Clayton, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 550 ; 34 L. J., C. P. 1 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1148 ; 11 L. T. 476 ; 13 W. R. 161.

Infant is bound by conduct of his solicitor in a cause. Tillotson v. Hargrave, 3 Madd. 495.

A continued employment of an attorney by an infant client, after the latter comes of age, may amount to an undertaking to pay a prior bill of costs. Guy v. Burgess, 1 Sim. 117.

A suit was instituted in the name of two infants by their next friend. One came of age, and some time afterwards the next friend obtained an order for changing the solicitors of the plaintiffs. It was discharged with costs. Brown v. Brown, 11 Beav. 562.

By Lunatic or Incapacited Person.]—A solicitor employed on part of a lunatic can have no action against him for his bill of costs. Barnesley v. Powell, Ambl. 102.

A solicitor, who had been retained to conduct proceedings under a commission of lunacy, and acted on behalf of the committees, was held entitled to stand as a simple contract creditor against the estate after the death of the lunatic, in respect of his costs, although more than six years had elapsed from the order of the chancellor directing taxation of the costs incurred in reference to the commission, the statute having no operation till after the death of the lunatic. Stedman v. Hart, 2 W. R. 462 ; 1 Kay, 607.

A solicitor who has been instructed by a defendant to defend a suit for him can properly continue to do so, although the defendant, through an attack of paralysis, has become incapable of attending to matters of business. Steel v. Cobb, 1 N. R. 302 ; 11 W. R. 298.

By Married Women.] — A married woman, having separate property, and living apart from her husband, employed the plaintiffs as her solicitors, and promised them, by letter, that she would pay their bills, but did not refer to her separate property :—Held, that that property was liable to pay the bills. Murray v. Barlee, 3

Myl. & K. 209 ; 3 L. J., Ch. 184. And see 7 Sim. 194.

A retainer by a married woman to a solicitor to act in respect to one portion of her separate estate, operates as a charge upon all property settled to her separate use, and is not confined to the particular property upon which the solicitor is called upon to act. In such a case the solicitor does not lose his lien from the circumstance of the property ceasing to be separate estate of the wife by the death of the husband. Bolden v. Nicholay, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 884.

A solicitor, before instituting proceedings for a client, especially on behalf of a wife against her husband, is bound to ascertain how the facts stand, and whether there is a reasonable expectation that the proceedings will be successful. Baylis v. Watkins, 2 De G. J. & S. 91 ; 33 L. J., Ch. 300 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 114 ; 9 L. T. 741 ; 12 W. R. 324.

An attorney had been employed by a wife (while she was for just cause living apart from her husband) to resist a habeas corpus which the husband had procured to be issued to recover from her the possession of their child, aged over seven years, and now sought to recover from the husband the costs of the proceedings, averring specially that the wife was living separately from her husband, on account of his cruelty ; that the work was done upon the retainer of the wife, and at her request, and that it was necessary for the purpose of maintaining her rights :— Held, that, upon the facts alleged, the attorney was not entitled to recover. Macredy v. Taylor, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 256—Ex. Ch. Reversing, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 336 ; 20 W. R. 252.

A wife is entitled to pledge her husband's credit for all the costs as between solicitor and client reasonably incurred by her in respect to the institution and prosecution of a divorce suit against her husband. Ottaway v. Hamilton, 47 L. J., C. P. 725 ; 3 C. P. D. 393 ; 38 L. T. 925 ; 26 W. R. 783—C. A.

By Partners.]—The managing partner of a trading partnership has authority to instruct solicitors to enter an appearance, in accordance with Ord. XLVIII.A, r. 5, for the partners individually in an action brought against the partnership in the name of their firm for a trade debt. Tomlinson v. Broadsmith, 65 L. J., Q. B. 308 ; [1896] 1 Q. B. 386 ; 74 L. T. 265 ; 44 W. R. 471—C. A.

By Surveyors of Highways.]—The retainer of a surveyor of highways, if given in an ordinary manner, maks him responsible for all attorney's business done under it, although done after the expiration of his term of office. Champ v. Stokes, 6 H. & N. 683 ; 30 L. J., Ex. 242 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 607 ; 4 L. T. 334.

In an action by A. & B., who were attorneys, against surveyors of highways of a parish, for business done in procuring an order of magistrates to divert highways in the parish, and, on an appeal against that order, it appearing that A. & B., in their bill, charged for drawing a resolution of a parish meeting held before the order was applied for, which resolution stated that the order was to be applied for at the instance and at the expense of a railway company :—Held, that A. & B. must be considered to have undertaken the business on those terms, unless there was an express employment of them by the surveyors, and on their credit, of which there ought to be direct proof. Spurrier v. Allen, 2 Car. & K. 210.

—— Vestrymen Signing Resolution.]—Vestrymen who signed a resolution ordering the parish surveyor to take steps for defending an indictment for not repairing a road, are not responsible for the payment of the attorney employed by the surveyor. Sprott v. Powell, 3 Bing. 478 ; 11 Moore, 398 ; 4 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 161 ; 28 R. R. 665.

Joint or Separate.]—To determine the liability for costs of co-plaintiffs in a suit the court will look into the transaction to see whether the contract though joint in form, was intended by the parties to be joint and several ; and such intention may be presumed from the circumstances. Furlong v. Scanlan, Ir. R. 9 Eq. 202.

Therefore where C. was employed to conduct a partition suit on the joint retainer of M. and S., co-plaintiffs with equal rights as tenants in common, there being no special contract, and it appeared that the benefit of the partition would enure to each of them severally :—Held, that the liability for costs was several as well as joint, and that C. might prove against M.'s assets for the amount. Ib.

Separate retainers were given to an attorney by the defendant and two other persons, as defendants to conduct their defence ; but a joint appearance was entered, and a joint answer put in ; one set of counsel only was employed, to whom one set of briefs was delivered, and joint affidavits were made, and joint consultations obtained, the defence throughout being conducted as a joint defence. In an action by the attorney to recover the whole costs from the defendant :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the whole of his costs from the defendant ; for, though the retainers were separate, there was evidence that they had merged into one joint liability ; and not having raised the question of separate liability at the trial, it was not open to the defendant, to raise it afterwards. Burridge v. Bellew, 32 L. T. 807.

If there are separate contracts with the attorney, each defendant is liable for his own share only of the costs, and if the contract is joint, then each is liable for the whole. Ib.

In a suit by a shareholder against the directors, secretary and the company to restrain an action for calls, to be relieved of his shares on the ground of misrepresentation in the prospectus, and to be indemnified by the directors, the defendants, having all appeared by A., the same solicitor, put in a joint and several answer, signed by one counsel, and joined in their defence, signed three separate retainers to A., all in the following terms : "You having up to the present time conducted the defence of this suit on behalf of all the defendants, and, in pursuance of their instructions in that behalf, we the undersigned do hereby confirm such instructions, and request you to continue such defence, and to take such steps as you may consider necessary in the matter" :—Held, that the retainers were separate and not joint, and that the assets of the company (in liquidation) were liable for one-ninth only of the costs. Allen, In re, Davies v. Chatwood, 48 L. J., Ch. 358 ; 11 Ch. D. 244 ; 40 L. T. 358 ; 27 W. R. 485.

Where a judge's order is made by consent to consolidate actions against several defendants who have severally employed the same attorney, upon their undertaking to be bound by the event of the trial of one, the order to consolidate operates as a joint retainer by the defendants of the attorney, and they are jointly liable to him for the costs of the action which is tried. Anderson v. Boynton, 7 D. & L. 25; 13 Q. B. 308; 19 L. J., Q. B. 42; 14 Jur. 14.

Circumstances under which the solicitor of an annuitant, selling under a power of sale, was considered also the solicitor of the grantor of the annuity. Blaye's Trusts, In re, 1 Macn. & G. 488; 2 H. & Tw. 140; 19 L. J., Ch. 89; 14 Jur. 49.

A solicitor, on the sole retainer of the debtor, prepared a creditors' deed, the first trust of which was to pay the costs of its preparation. The trustees acted, and employed the same solicitor in the trust. The solicitor is entitled to charge the costs of preparing the deed, though retained by the trustees for that purpose. Sadd, In re, 34 Beav. 650; 34 L. J., Ch. 562; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 774; 12 L. T. 816; 13 W. R. 1009.

Where, by the constitution of the committee, the acts of the majority of the managing committee of a railway company bound the whole:—Held, that a solicitor, employed by the committee in a suit, instituted against the committee by some of the shareholders for misconduct, was authorised to enter an appearance for any one of the members of the committee. Goodman v. De Beauvoir, 4 Railw. Cas. 380; 12 Jur. 989. Affirmed, 12 Jur. 1037.

—— Set off of Debt against Costs.]—Two executors in a suit gave a joint retainer to a firm of solicitors. In the course of the proceedings it was certified by the chief clerk that one executor, who had since died insolvent, was indebted to the testator's estate:—Held, that the surviving executor was entitled to be paid out of the estate all the costs for which he was liable, and that the costs incurred for the deceased executor in taking the account of his debt must be set off against the sum found due from him. Watson v. Row, 43 L. J., Ch. 664; L. R. 18 Eq. 680; 22 W. R. 793.

—— Taxation of Costs.]—See post.

—— Power of Clients to Act separately.]—Three petitioners retained the same solicitor in an application to wind up a company. The order was made, and subsequently two of the petitioners severed, and obtained an order of course at the rolls to change their solicitor:—Held, that the two had no right to act separately, and the order to change solicitors must be discharged. Norwich and Norfolk Provident Permanent Building Society, In re, 22 W. R. 854. S. P., Brown v. Brown, 11 Beav. 562.

One of several co-plaintiffs concurred in the prosecution of the suit up to a particular period, and then instructed the solicitor of the plaintiffs not to take any further proceedings in the cause. On proceedings being, nevertheless, taken, the dissentient co-plaintiff moved that the solicitor for the plaintiffs might be ordered to indemnify him in respect of subsequent costs of the suit. The motion was refused, with costs. Winthrop v. Murray, 7 Hare, 150; 18 L. J., Ch. 484; 13 Jur. 955.

By Third Person.]—A defendant was held to be bound by the act of an attorney who had been retained by his father, when it appeared that he knew, and had not disapproved, of the retainer. Cameron v. Baker, 1 Car. & P. 268; 28 R. R. 777.

Semble, there is no doubt of the unsoundness of the doctrine that A. employing B., a professional lawyer, to do any act for the benefit of C., A. having to pay B., and there being no intercourse of any sort between B. and C., if through the gross negligence or ignorance of B. in transacting the business, C. loses the benefit intended for him by A., C. may maintain an action against B., and recover damages for the loss sustained. If this were law a disappointed legatee might sue the solicitor employed by a testator to make a will in favour of a stranger, whom the solicitor never saw or before heard of, if the will were void for not being properly signed and attested. There must be privity of contract between the parties. Robertson v. Fleming, 4 Macq. H. L. 167.

—— Withdrawal — Restraining Defendant from interfering—Sufficiency of Indemnity.]—Where the defendant in an action had agreed, in consideration of an indemnity against costs, to allow a third party to defend the action in his name, and had in pursuance of that agreement given to such third party's solicitor a retainer to act in the defence of the "action and any appeals therefrom":—Held, that the indemnity appearing to be undoubtedly sufficient, the nominal defendant had no right to withdraw the retainer so as to prevent, or otherwise to interfere with, an appeal in his name to the house of lords. Injunction granted to restrain him from so doing. Whether, if the sufficiency of the indemnity had been doubtful, the result would have been the same, quære. Montforts v. Marsden, 64 L. J., Ch. 52; [1895] 1 Ch. 11; 12 R. 193; 71 L. T. 620—C. A.

Liability of Trustees on Bankruptcy of Client.]—If A., having employed an attorney to defend an action, assign his property to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, and the trustees direct the attorney to go on with the defence, they are liable to pay the attorney for what he does after they directed him to go on, but are not liable for the bygone business, unless there is an agreement in writing to make them so. Becke v. Penn, 7 Car. & P. 397.

A deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors assigned the estate and effects of the debtor to trustees, upon trust to sell the same, and out of the produce, in the first place, to pay and satisfy themselves all costs and expenses which they should be put to in having the deed prepared, and in and about executing the trusts:—Held, that a trustee, who had signed the deed and sold the property under it, was liable for the costs of preparing the deed, in an action by the attorney, though not instructed by him, and though his consent to act had not been obtained before the preparation of the deed. Campion v. King, 6 Jur. 35.

Preparation of Leases and Mortgages.]—In preparing leases and mortgages, slight evidence will prove a direct retainer of the lessor's or mortgagee's solicitor, by the lessee or mortgagor. Smith v. Clegg, 27 L. J., Ex. 300.

A proposed mortgagee's solicitor has no claim for his charge against the proposed mortgagor, where the negotiation for the mortgage goes off through the default of the latter; he must look to the person who retains him, leaving him to his remedy against the party who occasioned the fruitless expenses. Wilkinson v. Grant, 18 C. B. 319; 25 L. J., C. P. 233.

Where, in a mortgage transaction, the mortgagor is himself a solicitor, and prepares the mortgage deed, the mortgagee employing no other solicitor, the mortgagor is considered as the agent or solicitor of the mortgagee in the transaction; and it makes no difference that the mortgagor is not paid by the mortgagee. Hewitt v. Loosemore, 9 Hare, 449; 21 L. J., Ch. 69; 15 Jur. 1097.

In a transaction where a lease was assigned as a security for a loan, a solicitor, generally acting for the borrower in other cases as well as in this, acted also for the lender, but did not make to the latter any charge for his services:—Held, that he was nevertheless liable to the latter, and his representatives, for a failure of the security occasioned by want of notice to the lessor. Donaldson v. Haldane, 7 Cl. & F. 762.

If the attorney of a lessor, who is not attorney for the lessee, prepares the lease, the lessor is the person liable to pay the attorney for it, and the lessor can recover over against the lessee; and this is so whether the lessee takes up the lease or refuses to do so. Baker v. Merryweather, 2 Car. & K. 737.

A. applied to his attorney, who was an attorney of B., to prepare an assignment of a lease to B. The attorney recommended an underlease, to which A. objected, as being more expensive. The attorney said, "You won't have to pay it, for the lessee always pays for the lease." A. gave instructions for an underlease, and his attorney prepared it; but B. would not take it up or pay for it:—Held, that A. was liable to his attorney for the expenses of preparing the underlease. Ib.

A lessor and lessee, in the presence of the lessor's attorney, signed an agreement that a lease should be prepared by the lessor's attorney, and paid for by the lessee. The lease was prepared accordingly, but the lessor, who had only a life estate, dying, the lease was never executed:—Held, that the lessor's attorney was entitled to recover of the lessee the charge for drawing the lease. Webb v. Rhodes, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 732; 4 Scott, 497; 3 Hodges, 138; 6 L. J., C. P. 212.

The solicitor of a lessor who has prepared a draft lease cannot recover for his services from the intended lessee, unless there is a privity of contract between them. It is not sufficient for a lessee to have instructed his own solicitor, and that solicitor to have handed over the work to the lessor's solicitor. Ipstone Park Colliery Co., In re, Brough's Claim, 18 W. R. 285.

See Grissell v. Robinson, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 10; 3 Scott, 329; 2 Hodges, 138; 5 L. J., C. P. 313.

Preparation of Marriage Settlement.]—A., on the marriage of his daughter with B., executed a deed of appointment (under a power contained in his own marriage settlement) in favour of his daughter, appointing to his daughter 4,000*l.* This B. settled on his marriage. The marriage settlement of B., and the deed of appointment, were both prepared by C., who was originally the solicitor of A. There was no evidence to shew whether A. had agreed to give his daughter 4,000*l.* or to execute an appointment of that sum:—Held, that whether A. or his daughter was to pay C. the expenses of this deed of appointment was not a question of usage, but a question of contract; and that it was for the jury to determine upon whose credit the business was done. Hayward v. Fiott, 8 Car. & P. 59.

On the occasion of settling personal property upon a marriage, it is the professional usage for the lady's solicitor to draw the settlement, and for the husband to pay for it, although the only property settled is the husband's; and where nothing has taken place to exclude such usage, the husband is legally liable, in the event of the marriage, to pay the lady's solicitor his costs of the settlement, if the retainer was by the lady, or else to indemnify whoever on her part has properly incurred expense by retaining a solicitor to prepare such settlement. Helps v. Clayton 17 C. B. (N.S.) 553; 34 L. J., C. P. 1; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1148; 11 L. T. 476; 13 W. R. 161.

Retaining Fee at Parliamentary Election.]—An attorney who is retained as the agent of a candidate to represent a place in parliament is not entitled to recover anything for a retaining fee, unless there has been an express agreement that such fee should be paid to him. Parker v. Robinson, 7 Car. & P. 241.

Proof of.]—Upon an application by a client, a judge's order was made referring a bill of costs to be taxed without prejudice to the client's disputing the retainer, and restraining the attorneys from commencing or prosecuting any action touching their demand pending such reference. There was no undertaking on the part of the client, nor any order upon him, to pay what should be found due. At the request of both parties, the master entertained and decided the question of retainer, and he gave his allocatur for the balance due, and for the costs of the taxation:—Held, that the decision of the master upon the question of retainer was conclusive, and that the attorneys were entitled to have judgment entered up for them for the amount. Lawless, In re, 6 C. B. 123; 18 L. J., C. P. 793. See Callow v. Jenkinson, 2 L. M. & P. 403; 5 Ex. 666.

A letter written by a deceased solicitor, proposing to act as the solicitor of a particular individual, is not receivable in evidence as having been written by the authority of that individual, on proof merely that there was such a solicitor in practice at the time, that the letter was in his handwriting, and that it came from the custody of the person to whom it purported to be addressed; and in order to render the letter receivable, it must be proved aliunde that the writer had been duly authorised by the individual for whom he professed to act as solicitor. Bright v. Legerton, 2 De G. F. & J. 606; 30 L. J., Ch. 338; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 559; 3 L. T. 713; 9 W. R. 239.

Parol evidence is admissible, not to vary or add to a written agreement, but to shew the instructions and directions given to the solicitor to prepare it. Gemmill v. Macalister, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 285; 7 L. T. 841; 11 W. R. 486—H. L.

A solicitor seeking to charge a person with the costs of legal proceedings, conducted in the name of another, must support his claim by the clearest and most unequivocal evidence. Clark, In re, 1 De G. M. & G. 43; 21 L. J., Ch. 20; 15 Jur. 1047.

Issue directed under the circumstances to try whether a solicitor authorised to use relator's name, although such relator afterwards acknowledged the authority. Att.-Gen. v. Skinners' Co. C. P. Cooper, 1.

Two counsel appearing for the same party by different attorneys, petition to stand over to verify retainer of the attorney by affidavit. Butterworth v. Clapham, cited 1 Jac. & Walk. 673, n.

Determined by Final Judgment.]—The authority of an attorney is determined on final judgment being signed. Macbeath v. Cook, 1 M. & P. 513; 12 Moore, 122. S. C., nom. Macbeath v. Ellis, 4 Bing. 578.

—— Death of Client.]—The retainer of an attorney is determined by the death of his client. Whitehead v. Lord, 7 Ex. 691; 21 L. J., Ex. 239.

After considerable delay in the prosecution of a suit, the solicitor of a deceased party was served with a notice of motion:—Held, that his duty to the court rendered it proper for him to appear on the motion. Chalie v. Gwynne, 9 Beav. 319.

Death of Solicitor.] — After notice of trial given, the defendant's attorney died, and the plaintiff, not being aware of the fact, went to trial, and obtained a verdict and judgment, and sued out execution, under which the defendant was detained in custody. The court refused to set aside the proceedings, or to discharge the defendant out of custody, as it did not appear but that the defendant knew of the attorney's death at the time it occurred, and had withheld that knowledge from the plaintiff. Ashley v. Brown, 1 L. M. & P. 451; 19 L. J., Q. B. 477; 15 Jur. 399.

Solicitor must conduct Suit to Termination, unless Notice given.]—The contract of an attorney retained to conduct an action is continuing, and, as a general rule, can be determined by him only on reasonable notice. Nicholls v. Wilson, 2 D. (N.S.) 1031; 11 M. & W. 106; 12 L. J., Ex. 266. S. P., Harris v. Osbourn, 2 C. & M. 629; 4 Tyr. 445; 3 L. J., Ex. 182.

As a general rule, an attorney or solicitor retained to conduct a suit is under the obligation to carry it on to its termination, and he cannot sue for his bill of costs until that period has arrived. He may, however, give a reasonable notice to his client to supply him with adequate funds; and in case of refusal, he may sue him for his costs. Whitehead v. Lord, 7 Ex. 691; 21 L. J., Ex. 239. S. P., Van Sandau v. Browne, 9 Bing. 402; 2 M. & Scott, 543; 1 D. P. C. 715; 2 L. J., C. P. 34. Rowson v. Earle, M. & M. 538. Hoby v. Built, 3 B. & Ad. 350; 1 L. J., K. B. 121.

An attorney who has undertaken a cause is not bound to proceed without adequate advances from time to time by his client for expenses out of pocket; and, therefore, the court will not compel an attorney, even after notice of trial, to carry the cause into court, unless the client supplies him with sufficient funds to pay the expenses out of pocket thereby incurred. Wandsworth v. Marshall, 2 C. & J. 665; 1 L. J., Ex. 250. S. P., Lawrence v. Potts, 6 Car. & P. 428.

An attorney who is retained for the conduct of a chancery suit, and accepts such retainer, thereby enters into a specific contract to carry on the proceedings, and he cannot without due notice, and before the suit is terminated, rescind the contract, and sue on a quantum meruit. Coppinger v. Synnott, 3 Ir. C. L. R. 563.

A solicitor may refuse to continue in the conduct of a suit upon sufficient grounds, and, upon his giving up the suit before it is concluded, upon good grounds, he may sue his client for the costs incurred during the time of being employed. Bryan v. Twigg, 3 L. J., Ch. 114.

If a client repudiates his retainer of an attorney to conduct a suit, the latter is entitled to bring an action for his costs without waiting for the final completion of the suit. Hawkes v. Cottrell, 3 H. & N. 243; 27 L. J., Ex. 369.

The employment of a solicitor to conduct an action constitutes an entire contract; and a solicitor who withdraws from the conduct of an action before its termination cannot sue for the costs he has incurred unless his withdrawal was for good reason, and upon reasonable notice. Underwood v. Lewis, 64 L. J., Q. B. 60; [1894] 2 Q. B. 306; 9 R. 440; 70 L. T. 833; 42 W. R. 517—C. A.

The retainer and employment of a solicitor in such a matter as a bankruptcy, an administration or winding-up, do not constitute an entire contract so as to deprive the solicitor of his right to payment, except for costs out of pocket, till the whole matter is completed, and successive bills of costs in such a matter are not necessarily to be treated as one bill brought down to the date of the latest delivery. Hall and Barker, In re, 47 L. J., Ch. 621; 9 Ch. D. 538; 26 W. R. 501.

II. AUTHORITY.

a. To Conduct Proceedings.

Instituting Proceedings.]—A solicitor ought to have a special authority from his client for instituting a suit, but such authority need not be in writing. Lord v. Kellett, 2 Myl. & K. 1.

It is not sufficient for a solicitor, before he commences a suit against executors, to obtain an authority from his client to take proceedings to get an account; there must be, in substance, a clear authority to institute a suit. Atkinson v. Abbott, 3 Drew. 251. S. P., Wright v. Castle, 3 Mer. 12; 17 R. R. 3.

A. delivered papers to B., an attorney, telling him "that she was entitled to an estate, and that she would pay him if she recovered it"; B. took the papers, saying that he would do what he could for her, and without further communication commenced an action of ejectment, which he afterwards abandoned, under the conviction that A. had no title:—Held, that B. acted without due authority, both in commencing and discontinuing the ejectment, and was not entitled to recover the costs thus incurred. Tabram v. Horn, 1 M. & Ry. 228; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 24; 31 R. R. 321.

A retainer to a country solicitor does not justify an action in which his London agents are the solicitors on the record. A., an illiterate woman, being desirous of knowing whether there was any balance coming to her, as administratrix of C., her deceased husband, out of the proceeds of a sale by the mortgagee of property mortgaged by C., gave to B., a country solicitor (who had recovered judgment in an action against her, as administratrix, for a debt due to him from her deceased husband) this written retainer: "I hereby authorise you to act as my solicitor in the administration of my late husband's estate, and authorise you to investigate the accounts of the mortgagee, and take such steps as you may think proper in the matter on my behalf." A writ was subsequently issued by a London firm of solicitors in the names of A. and B., as plaintiffs, claiming an account of the proceeds of sale of the mortgaged property, and payment of the balance, the claim by A. being "as legal personal representative of C.," by B. "as a creditor of C. who had obtained judgment against A., and had obtained execution by the appointment of a receiver of the balance due from C." Upon motion by A. that her name might be struck out of the writ as having been issued without her knowledge, and without any authority on her part:—Held, that the retainer was not sufficient to justify the issue of the writ; but whether sufficient or not, it was a retainer to B., and did not authorise the London firm to issue the writ in the name of A. as her solicitors. Wray v. Kemp, 53 L. J., Ch. 1020; 26 Ch. D. 169; 50 L. T. 552; 32 W. R. 334.

—— Fresh Action.]—A solicitor received authority in 1831 to file a bill in an administration suit on behalf of a woman then unmarried. In 1836 he informed her that she and her husband would be co-plaintiffs to a bill in the same suit. In 1849 he wrote to her as a widow, for information, to which she replied, hoping that there might be immediate distribution. The solicitor afterwards filed bills of supplement, and revivor in the suit, making her a co-plaintiff:—Held, that he had sufficient authority. Bewley v. Seymour, 14 Jur. 213.

A retainer to commence a suit, which suit is afterwards abated by a plea of nonjoinder, is sufficient evidence of a retainer to commence another action against the parties named in the plea in abatement. Crook v. Wright, R. & M. 278.

Defending Action.]—A solicitor may, in the exercise of the general authority given him by his client, defend a suit. Wright v. Castle, 3 Mer. 12; 17 R. R. 3.

Entering Appearance for Defendant.]—The fact that a solicitor has acted for a client in all matters connected with a trust does not authorise him to enter an appearance for the client as defendant to an originating summons taken out against the client for an account by one of the beneficiaries under the will. Appearance set aside, with costs to be paid by the solicitor. Gray, In re, Gray v. Coles, 65 L. T. 743.

A solicitor must be taken, in the absence of proof to the contrary, to have authority from his client, though an infant, to enter an appearance for him; and, where the appearance has been entered, the court will act upon it without service; and, therefore, after appearance entered for an infant, a guardian ad litem may be appointed for him, although he has not been served with the bill. Lloyd v. Rossmore, Ir. R. 9 Eq. 488.

Consent—Funds in Court.]—Semble, no circumstances can justify a solicitor in instructing counsel to consent, on behalf of a client, to the disposing of funds in court, in which the client has an interest, without express authority from the client. Wheatley v. Bastow, 3 Eq. R. 865; 7 De G. M. & G. 261; 24 L. J., Ch. 727; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1124; 3 W. R. 540.

Order to Attend Proceedings.]—An order to attend proceedings, obtained by a solicitor without the written authority of his client, will be discharged on the application of that client. Bird v. Harris, 43 L. T. 434; 29 W. R. 45.

Client alleged to be a Lunatic.]—A solicitor is not prevented from taking legal proceedings on behalf of his client by the mere fact that, to his knowledge, a petition in lunacy for an inquiry into the state of mind of his client is pending, provided that he believes the client to be sane. The court will, however, in a proper case, when informed of the petition, stay the proceedings until the inquiry is completed. Hartley v. Gilbert (13 Sim. 596) and Beall v. Smith (43 L. J., Ch. 245; L. R. 9 Ch. 85) explained. Armstrong and Sons, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 258; [1896] 1 Ch. 536; 74 L. T. 134; 44 W. R. 281.

Putting in Fraudulent Defence.]—Where a solicitor has put in a fraudulent defence for his client without the knowledge of the client, the client is not bound by the act of the solicitor. Williams v. Preston, 51 L. J., Ch. 927; 20 Ch. D. 672; 47 L. T. 265; 30 W. R. 555—C. A.

Award—Reference to Arbitration.]—If an attorney is employed by a person to act for him, after an award has been made against him, and he is also desired to do what is needful, he is thereby warranted to carry the whole award, so far as it respects his client, into effect, though his immediate business was to do but part of it. Dawson v. Lawley, 4 Esp. 65. And see Anderson v. Watson, 3 Car. & P. 214.

An attorney authorised to appear for a party in an action has incidentally authority to refer it, without any fresh authority to that effect. Faviell v. Eastern Counties Ry., 2 Ex. 344; 6 D. & L. 54; 17 L. J., Ex. 297.

All the parties in a suit, except one who was not present, but whose solicitor consented on his behalf, agreed in court to refer the matter in dispute to the final determination of an arbitrator. On a bill of review, brought by the absent party:—Held, that solicitor's assent to interlocutories may bind; it cannot bind to a reference finally to determine. Colwel v. Child, 1 Ch. Ca. 86; 1 Ch. Rep. 195.

An attorney having appeared for a corporation in an action, to the knowledge of the directors, the corporation is bound by his acts as their attorney, though he was not authorised to appear by any authority under seal. Faviell v. Eastern Counties Ry., supra. S. P., Smith v. Troup, 7 C. B. 757; 6 D. & L. 679; 18 L. J., C. P. 209.

Acting for Several Parties.]—A joint and several answer, filed for two persons by a solicitor having authority from one only, will not be ordered to be taken off the file on the application of one party in the absence of the other. Wiggins v. Peppin, 2 Beav. 403; 3 Jur. 721.

Where a solicitor carries on suits, and was employed by the assignees, without the authority of the majority in value of the creditors, the estate of the bankrupt is not liable to his bill for such suits. Whitchurch, Ex parte, 1 Atk. 210.

In a sale under a decree, the solicitor of the plaintiffs, having the management of the sale, is to be considered (as between the vendor and the purchaser) to be the agent of all the parties to the suit. Dalby v. Pullen, 1 Russ. & M. 296; 8 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 74.

Undertakings.]—An undertaking given by his attorney to withdraw pleas is binding on the defendant, even without a formal consent by the plaintiff or his attorney. But if the undertaking is not carried out, and the plaintiff in consequence loses the benefit of a subsequent judgment, the defendant's attorney is not necessarily liable for the plaintiff's debts and costs. Burnett v. Provis, 22 L. T. 543.

Setting aside Consent Order.]—The court will not, on the application of the client, set aside an order made on a consent signed by his solicitor, on the allegation that he acted without authority, there being no case of fraud or misrepresentation. Connatty v. O'Reilly, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 333.

Payment of Counsel's Fees.]—A solicitor has no implied authority to pledge his client's credit to counsel by an express promise to pay his fees, whether they relate to litigation or not, so as to enable the counsel to sue the client for them. Mostyn v. Mostyn, 39 L. J., Ch. 780; L. R. 5 Ch. 457; 22 L. T. 461; 18 W. R. 657.

Receiving Costs from other Side.]—Where costs are ordered to be paid to a defendant, his attorney is competent to demand and receive them, without any express power of attorney. Mason v. Whitehouse, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 692; 6 Scott, 575; 6 D. P. C. 602; 7 L. J., C. P. 295.

Service of Notices on former Solicitor.]—Where a judgment has not been worked out, nor the fruits of the judgment obtained, inasmuch as it is the duty of the solicitor of the defendant to defend his client's interest in the event of execution being levied against him, his authority still continues so as to make service of a notice of appeal on him good service on his client, until such time as the client has taken the proper steps for informing his opponent that he has withdrawn his solicitor's authority. De la Pole (Lady) v. Dick, 54 L. J., Ch. 940; 29 Ch. D. 351; 52 L. T. 457; 33 W. R. 585—C. A.

A cause is at an end upon the replication confessing a plea in bar and praying for judgment for costs. And a rule calling on the defendant to shew cause why the master should not tax must be served on the defendant personally. Boyle v. Churchill, 2 L. T. 219.

Form of Application.]—Want of authority to the solicitor to file a bill cannot be raised in opposition to a motion in the cause; it must be made the subject of a substantive motion to stay proceedings or to take the bill off the file: and such a motion may be made by a defendant. Bowen v. Bowen, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 251.

A proper party to a suit whose name has been inserted in the bill as a plaintiff, without his own knowledge or concurrence, will not, while the record remains in that state, be allowed to appear by a distinct solicitor. Pyecroft v. Gregory, 2 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 122.

A plaintiff instructed his solicitor to give no further indulgence to the defendants: the solicitor's clerk, who was ignorant of that circumstance, and who was sworn to be ignorant of the practice of the court, consented in writing, in the name of his master, to alterations made in the title of the answer after it was deposited with the clerk of records and writs. On the application of the plaintiff, the court ordered the answer to be taken off the file, with liberty for the defendants to re-swear it within three weeks. Raistrick v. Elsworth, 12 Jur. 782.

Interpleader.]—A solicitor who has recovered judgment for a client under an ordinary retainer, has no authority, without special instructions, to engage in proceedings in interpleader. James v. Richnell, 57 L. J., Q. B. 113; 20 Q. B. D. 164; 58 L. T. 278; 36 W. R. 280.

Discharge of Defendant taken in Execution.]—A plaintiff's attorney on the record has not by virtue of his retainer, any implied authority to discharge out of custody a defendant in execution before he has received payment of the sum recovered in the action. He must have the special authority of the plaintiff for that purpose. Savory v. Chapman, 3 P. & D. 604; 8 D. P. C. 656; 11 A. & E. 829; 9 L. J., Q. B. 186; 4 Jur. 411.

The attorney for a plaintiff, where the defendant has been taken in execution upon a ca. sa., although as such attorney he has authority to receive the fruits of the judgment, has no authority to enter into any other arrangement with the defendant for his discharge from custody under such writ. Connop v. Challis, 2 Ex. 484; 6 D. & L. 48; 17 L. J., Ex. 319.

Sheriff—Withdrawal of.]—The attorney in an action has authority to order the sheriff to withdraw from possession under a fi. fa. Levi v. Abbott, 4 Ex. 583; 19 L. J., Ex. 62.

Although an execution creditor or his solicitor, after delivery of a writ of fi. fa. to the sheriff, may withdraw the execution, or postpone the sale of chattels seized under it, there is no such implied power in the solicitor's managing clerk, notwithstanding that he is left in charge of his employer's office and professional business during the temporary absence of such employer. Whyte v. Nutting, [1897] 2 Ir. R. 241.

Postponing Execution.]—A solicitor has authority to enter into an undertaking on behalf of his client, not to issue a writ of fieri facias against the client's debtor, in consideration of the acceleration of payment of the debt. Commonwealth Land, Building, Estate and Auction Co., In re, Hollington Ex parte, 43 L. J., Ch. 99; 29 L. T. 502; 22 W. R. 106.

An attorney retained for the conduct of an action has no implied authority, after judgment in favour of his client, to enter into an agreement, on his behalf to postpone execution. Lovegrove v. White, 40 L. J., C. P. 253; L. R. 6 C. P. 440; 24 L. T. 554; 19 W. R. 823.

Directing Seizure of Particular Goods.]—It is not within the scope of the implied authority of the solicitor of a judgment creditor issuing a fi. fa. to direct the sheriff to seize particular goods. Smith v. Keal, 9 Q. B. D. 340; 47 L. T. 142; 31 W. R. 76—C. A. Affirming 51 L. J., Q. B. 487; 46 J. P. 515.

Proceedings under Execution.]—The conduct of a cause by an attorney, in the name of A., does not make A. liable in trespass for acts done under a fi. fa. in such cause, without some evidence of a retainer. Crook v. Wright, R. & M. 278.

Where the attorney of a plaintiff, in an action in which judgment had been recovered, issued a fi. fa. thereupon, which he indorsed with a direction, by means of which the house of a wrong person was entered:—Held, that such person could maintain trespass against the plaintiff in the original action. Jarmain v. Hooper, 1 D. & L. 769; 7 Scott (N.R.) 663; 6 Man. & G. 827; 13 L. J., C. P. 63; 8 Jur. 127.

A defendant is liable in trespass for the act of her attorney in improperly causing the plaintiff to be arrested under a ca. sa. Collett v. Foster, 2 H. & N. 356; 26 L. J., Ex. 412; 5 W. R. 790.

To Compromise Client's Case—Client Acquiescing.]—Where a cause is compromised by the counsel and attorneys in court, in the presence of the client, and after conference had with him, with a view to an arrangement, and the client does not dissent, and the terms of the compromise have been embodied in an order of nisi prius, subsequently made a rule of court, the arrangement will not be disturbed upon a suggestion by the client, that though present when it was made, he did not understand what was going on. Chambers v. Mason, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 59; 28 L. J., C. P. 10; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 148.

If an attorney has express authority from his client to compromise a case only on condition of securing for him a certain sum, that (coupled with the fact that he afterwards compromised the suit on payment of a larger sum, and professed to have compromised it in pursuance of that authority) may be evidence of an agreement upon his part to accept the surplus of the money paid over the amount of the net sum his client expected to receive in satisfaction of his costs, not only as between party and party, but between attorney and client. Churchyard v. Watkins, 27 L. J., Ex. 13.

—— Without Express Permission of Client.]—Where the respective attorneys of a plaintiff and defendant signed an agreement to withdraw a record on certain terms, and that the defendant's costs should be taxed by certain persons as between attorney and client:—Held, that the defendant was not bound by such an arrangement on the part of his attorney. Iveson v. Conington, 2 D. & R. 307; 1 B. & C. 160; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 71; 25 R. R. 344. And see Burrell v. Jones, 3 B. & Ald. 47; 22 R. R. 296.

An attorney retained to defend an action is not guilty of actionable negligence if he enters into a compromise without the consent of his client, provided he acts bonâ fide and with reasonable care and skill, and the compromise is for the benefit of the client, and is not made in defiance of his express prohibition. Chown v. Parrott, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 74; 32 L. J., C. P. 197; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1290; 8 L. T. 391; 11 W. R. 608.

A solicitor or counsel has full authority to either compromise or abandon the claims of his client, provided it is in a matter within the scope of the suit. Secus, in a collateral matter. Wood, In re, Wenham, Ex parte, 21 W. R. 104.

An attorney has general authority to compromise an action on behalf of his client, provided he acts bonâ fide and reasonably, and not in defiance of the direct and positive instructions of his client. Pristwich v. Poley, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 806; 34 L. J., C. P. 189; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 583; 12 L. T. 390; 13 W. R. 753.

A. having suffered personal injuries through the negligence of the servants of H. & Co., applied to an attorney, and the attorney's clerk agreed with H. & Co. to accept a certain sum "in full satisfaction of all demands for the injuries" sustained by A., and gave a written undertaking to that effect. A. having repudiated the transaction and brought an action:—Held, that the agreement entered into by the attorney's clerk, as it took place before the issuing of any writ, was not binding upon A. Duffy v. Hanson, 16 L. T. 332.

A party is bound by the consent of his counsel given in court, though they had no instructions to consent, if they were at the time apprised of all those facts of which the knowledge was essential to the proper exercise of their discretion, but he will be relieved from an order made by such consent, if they give that consent in ignorance of material circumstances. How far a party will be affected by the remissness of his solicitor in not immediately objecting to an order, made by consent of counsel in court, when neither the party nor his solicitor was present, and instructions to consent had not been given by either. Furnival v. Bogle, 4 Russ. 142; 6 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 91; 28 R. R. 34.

An attorney has not, by virtue of his office, an implied authority to compromise an action, but a client may become bound by a compromise entered into by his attorney without his authority, by not repudiating it within a reasonable time. Swinfen v. Swinfen, 24 Beav. 549; 27 L. J., Ch. 35; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1109; 6 W. R. 10. And see S. C., at law, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 364; 26 L. J., C. P. 97; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 85.

A compromise is nothing more than a sale of the subject-matter of the suit by one party to the other; and as an attorney, acting within the scope of his authority, has no power to sell the subject-matter of the suit to a stranger, so he has no power to sell it to the other side. Ib.

At the trial of an issue, counsel agreed upon terms of compromise, and it was made a rule of the court of common law. The compromise was unauthorised by the plaintiff, and effected without the instructions of his attorney. There being no subsequent acquiescence, a bill by the defendant in the action for specific performance of the compromise was dismissed. Ib. See S. C. on appeal, slightly varying the decree, 27 L. J., Ch. 491; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 774; 6 W. R. 480.—L.JJ.

—— Against the Client's Wish.]—A plaintiff, having recovered judgment in an action for breach of promise of marriage, instructed her attorney not to accept any compromise, but at the same time permitted him to continue to act as her attorney for obtaining the fruits of the judgment. The attorney, however, did accept a compromise offered by the opposite party, who had no notice of any limitation having been put on the attorney's authority:—Held, that although the compromise was entered into without the plaintiff's authority, it was nevertheless binding upon her, and might be relied upon by the defendant in that suit if the plaintiff should attempt to enforce judgment; and that, therefore, the attorney was liable to an action for negligence for compromising against the plaintiff's instructions. Butler v. Knight, 36 L. J., Ex. 66; L. R. 2 Ex. 109; 15 L. T. 621; 15 W. R. 407.

A compromise entered into by a solicitor under his implied authority is not affected by his client's subsequent repudiation, nor by his client's previous express prohibition, unless the opposite party had notice of it. Berry v. Mullen, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 368.

A client is bound by a compromise entered into by his attorney, though in violation of express directions not to compromise, if the other party has acted bonâ fide, and without notice of such prohibition. Brady v. Curran, Ir. R. 2 C. L. 314 ; 16 W. R. 514.

An attorney retained to conduct a cause, and having express directions from the client not to enter into a compromise, has no power, under such retainer, to enter into any compromise, even though reasonable and bonâ fide, and for the benefit of the client ; and, if he does so, is liable to an action for damages, though the damage actually sustained is nominal. Fray v. Vowles, 1 El. & El. 839 ; 28 L. J., Q. B. 232 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1253 ; 7 W. R. 446.

It is no defence to such action that the compromise was entered into by the advice of counsel employed by the attorney, under his retainer, for the conduct of the cause. Ib.

—— Avoué in Canada.]—An avoué in Canada has authority to bind his client by any proceeding in the cause, but not by any transaction dehors the cause, such as an agreement to settle. King v. Pinsoneault, 44 L. J., P. C. 42 ; L. R. 6 P. C. 245 ; 32 L. T. 174 ; 23 W. R. 576.

—— Who Liable for.]—An attorney on behalf of his client, the defendant, promises to pay 500*l.* to plaintiff ; this being done by the authority of the client, attorney not liable, but only client. Otherwise, if the attorney had no authority from client to make this engagement. Johnson v. Ogilby, 3 P. Wms. 277. See Bentley, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 578 ; 2 L. J., Bk. 39.

Brokers and factors, who act or agree for their principals, not liable in their own capacities. Id. 279.

Compare Cases sub tit. BARRISTER.

Authority to Compromise — Action not Commenced.]—A solicitor retained to bring an action has no implied authority to compromise the claim before action brought. Macaulay v. Polley, 66 L. J., Q. B. 665 ; [1897] 2 Q. B. 122 ; 76 L. T. 643 ; 45 W. R. 681—C. A.

b. To Receive Money for Client.

See Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 56.

Payment of Debt.]—Where the debt has been paid to the plaintiff's clerk after writ issued, and before service thereof, and the attorney is aware of the payment, he has no right to proceed further with the action, although he will be entitled to the costs of his writ. Wyllie v. Phillips, 4 Scott, 474 ; 5 D. P. C. 644 ; 3 Bing. (N.C.) 776 ; 6 L. J., C. P. 224.

Payment of a debt to the attorney of a plaintiff amounts to payment to the plaintiff himself, and the latter is bound by the receipt of his attorney. Yates v. Freckleton, 2 Doug. 623. See Vorley v. Garrard, 2 D. P. C. 490.

Payment to the clerk of the plaintiff's solicitor though unauthorised to receive it, is no waiver of the plaintiff's right. Perry v. Turner, 1 D. P. C. 300 ; 2 C. & J. 89 ; 2 Tyr. 128 ; 1 L. J., Ex. 13.

Payment to the plaintiff's late solicitor who has been changed without the leave of the court will be good. Powell v. Little, 1 W. Bl. 8.

Money due from Mortgagor.]—The mere fact that a solicitor is in possession of a mortgage deed executed by his client does not authorise him to receive the mortgage money for the client. If the client has not received the money the mortgagee cannot maintain the validity of the mortgage by shewing that he paid the money to the solicitor, unless he can shew that the solicitor was expressly authorised by the client to receive it. Swinbanks, Ex parte, Shanks, In re, 48 L. J., Bk. 120 ; 11 Ch. D. 525 ; 40 L. T. 825 ; 27 W. R. 898—C. A.

G. and H. were mortgagees for 1,000*l.* on property of S. Their solicitors, D. & P., who had the deeds in their custody, applied to the defendant, who was also a client of theirs, saying that they believed he had 1,000*l.* to invest on mortgage, and that G. and H. wanted 1,000*l.* on a transfer of S.'s mortgage. The defendant inspected the property, and being satisfied, he, on the 12th of June, 1878, sent the 1,000*l.* to D. & P., who gave him a receipt for it. In July, D. & P. fraudulently induced G. and H. to execute a deed of transfer to the defendant with a receipt indorsed, which deed they stated to G. and H. to be a deed of reconveyance to S. on his paying off the mortgage. D. & P. shortly afterwards handed this deed with the title deeds to the defendant, and went on paying him interest as if they had received it from S., who was in fact paying his interest to the agents of G. and H. ; G. and H. made no inquiry as to the mortgage, and this went on till 1883, when D. & P. became bankrupts, and the 1,000*l.* received from the defendant, which had never been handed over to G. and H., was lost. G. and H. then brought their action against the defendant, asserting a right against the property in the nature of an unpaid vendor's lien :—Held, that as the plaintiffs by the deed of transfer and receipt which they handed to D. & P. enabled them to represent to the defendant that the 1,000*l.* which he had previously handed to D. & P. had come to the hands of the plaintiffs, they had raised a counter equity which prevented their claiming a vendor's lien, though this would not have been the case if (D. & P. having no authority to receive money for the plaintiffs) the defendant had paid the 1,000*l.* to D. & P. at the time when the deeds were delivered to him, since he would then have known that the plaintiffs had not received the money. Swinbanks, Ex parte (11 Ch. D. 525), distinguished. Gordon v. James, 30 Ch. D. 249 —C. A.

A solicitor employed both by a mortgagor and mortgagee received the interest on the mortgage debt regularly, and after a time fraudulently obtained from the mortgagor a portion of the principal. At first the mortgagee received his interest regularly from the solicitor at his office ; but ultimately allowed the interest to fall into arrear till a large sum became due to the mortgagee. During this time the mortgagee made no application to the mortgagor :—Held, that the solicitor was the agent of the mortgagee to receive the interest but not the principal ; and that in order to bind the mortgagee by the solicitor's acts in receiving the principal, it was necessary to shew either that what he did was with the intention of adopting those acts, or that the position of the mortgagor was altered. Kent v. Thomas, 1 H. & N. 473.

A. borrowed 8,000*l.* on mortgage from his solicitor, B. Of this money, 800*l.* belonged to C., a client of B.'s, who had handed it to B. for investment. No notice was ever given to A., either by B. or by C., that the 800*l.* belonged to C. Afterwards A. paid off the 8,000*l.*, and B. shortly after died insolvent. On a claim made by C. for the 800*l.* against A. :—Held, that as C., by his negligence in not giving notice of his claim to A., had enabled A. to pay back the whole of the mortgage money to B., he had no equity to compel A. to pay part of the money over again; and claim refused. Southampton's (Lord) Estate, In re, Roper's Claim, 50 L. J., Ch. 155; 43 L. T. 625; 29 W. R. 210.

—— Cheque instead of Cash.]—A solicitor, having authority from the mortgagees to accept a tender of the amount due under the mortgage, has no implied authority to accept the tender of a cheque in lieu of cash, so as to make such a tender good in law as against the mortgagees. Blumberg v. Life Interests and Reversionary Securities Corporation, 66 L. J., Ch. 127; [1897] 1 Ch. 171; 75 L. T. 627; 45 W. R. 246. Affirmed on the facts, 67 L. J., Ch. 118; [1898] 1 Ch. 27; 77 L. T. 506—C. A.

Purchase-Moneys.]—The possession by a vendor's solicitor of an executed conveyance for purchase of lands, with the signed receipt for the consideration money indorsed, is not in itself an authority to the solicitor to receive the purchase-money. Viney v. Chaplin, 2 De G. & J. 468; 27 L. J., Ch. 434; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 619; 6 W. R. 562.

It is well settled that it is not within the ordinary business of a solicitor to receive purchase-money belonging to his client, or money due to him on mortgage, nor to receive money from him for the purpose of investment generally, and one partner is not liable for the misapplication of money so received by another without his privity. Bourdillon v. Roche, 27 L. J., Ch. 681; 6 W. R. 618.

Secus, where the money is received for the purpose of being invested on a particular security. Ib.

Purchasers have a right to demand the attendance of the vendors in person to receive the purchase money, and the vendors cannot insist on its being paid to their solicitor on production of the conveyance duly executed. Bellamy and Metropolitan Board of Works, In re, 52 L. J. Ch. 870; 24 Ch. D. 387; 48 L. T. 801; 31 W. R. 900; 47 J. P. 550—C. A.

A. purchased an estate from B., and on the completion, one solicitor acted for both parties, and the purchase-money was paid into his hands. Afterwards the purchaser was defeated by C., who had a paramount mortgage. The purchaser presented a petition against the solicitor, asking payment by the solicitor out of the purchase-money of the losses occasioned, or that he might indemnify the petitioner. The petition was dismissed, the court holding that the money having come to the hands of the solicitor as agent of the vendor and not of the petitioner, it could not interfere. Tylee v. Webb, Hinton, In re, 14 Beav. 14; 15 Jur. 1023.

Possession of Receipt.]—A solicitor producing a deed containing a receipt must, in order to discharge a person paying him, be acting for the person sought to be charged, and having the deed in his office is not equivalent to production of it. Day v. Woolwich Equitable Building Society, 58 L. J., Ch. 280; 40 Ch. D. 491; 60 L. T. 752; 37 W. R. 461.

Payments from Receiver.]—The solicitor having carriage of the proceedings has not, as such, and in the absence of special authority in that behalf, power to give a valid receipt for moneys ordered to be paid by a receiver to his client. Browne's Estate, In re, 19 L. R., Ir. 183—C. A. S. P., Ind, Coope & Co. v. Kidd, 63 L. J., Q. B. 726; 10 R. 528; 71 L. T. 203.

Right to retain Moneys—Husband and Wife.]—A woman entitled to property for her separate use was desirous of raising money for the improvement of her estate, while her husband also wished to raise money to discharge a debt. They accordingly arranged through their solicitor to borrow money upon mortgage of the separate estate, and upon policies upon the lives of each of them respectively. The money was to be advanced by instalments, and when the first instalment was due the husband and wife signed a joint authority for the solicitor to receive it for them. He received the money, and claimed to retain part of it in respect of a separate debt due to him as solicitor of the husband:—Held, that in an action by husband and wife, the solicitor could not retain the money, or set off against it a debt due from the husband, as it was received upon the express understanding that it was to be held for the husband and wife jointly, so that there never was any reduction into possession on the part of the husband. Jones v. Cuthbertson, 42 L. J., Q. B. 221; L. R. 8 Q. B. 504; 28 L. T. 673; 21 W. R. 919—Ex. Ch.

Deposit on Sales.]—An attorney was employed to sell lands, which he did, partly by private contract, and partly at auction; he received a deposit on each sale, and signed receipts for them as agent for the vendor. By the conditions of the sale a deposit was to be paid to him as agent for the vendor. On being applied to by the vendor, he declined to pay over the deposits to him till the sales were completed:—Held, that he had received the deposits as the vendor's agent and not as a stakeholder, and that, therefore, the vendor could recover interest on them from the time of the demand. Edgell v. Day, 1 H. & R. 8; 35 L. J., C. P. 7; L. R. 1 C. P. 80; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 27; 13 L. T. 328; 14 W. R. 87.

In a partition action real estate was ordered to be sold out of court by the plaintiff, the purchase-moneys to be paid into court. The sale took place under conditions which disclosed that the sale was made under an order of the court. The auctioneers paid the balance of the deposit after deducting their charges to the vendor's solicitor, who did not pay it into court:—Held, that the case was within the decision of Biggs v. Bree (51 L. J., Ch. 263), and the auctioneers had discharged their liability in respect of the deposit. Brown v. Farebrother, 58 L. J., Ch. 3; 59 L. T. 822.

Semble, a custom on the part of auctioneers to pay sale-moneys to the vendor's solicitor, without an authority for that purpose, could not be supported in law. Ib.

The practice of the solicitors having the conduct of a sale to pay the deposits into court for the auctioneer is within the ordinary business of a solicitor. An auctioneer sent the deposits received on a sale to the solicitors of the plaintiff, who had the conduct of the sale, to be paid into court. This deposit was received by one of the members of the firm, and misappropriated. On the question whether the auctioneer should not have himself paid this deposit into court, and whether he was not therefore liable to pay it over again:—Held, that the receipt and payment into court of the auctioneer's deposit was within the ordinary business of the solicitors to the party having the conduct of the sale, and that the innocent members of the firm were therefore liable for the defalcation of their partner. Biggs v. Bree, 51 L. J., Ch. 263; 46 L. T. 8; 30 W. R. 278—C. A.

c. NOTICE TO, WHEN BINDING ON CLIENT—See NOTICE.

d. IN OTHER CASES.

Offer of Compensation.]—An objection to title on purchase having been waived, an offer of compensation made by a clerk of the vendor's solicitor, without express authority, is of no effect. Burnell v. Brown, 1 Jac. & Walk. 168; 21 R. R. 136.

Acceptance of Offer.]—A vendor instructed her solicitors to sell a house, subject to stipulations, for a fixed sum; and an intending purchaser agreed to give the sum. If her solicitors accept the offer unconditionally it would not bind the vendor, as being ultra vires the solicitors. Chinnock v. Ely (Marchioness), 11 Jur. (N.S.) 329; 12 L. T. 251; 13 W. R. 597.

Transfer of Bond—Relief.]—A. authorised his solicitor to borrow 700*l.* from B., to pay off a mortgage, and for that purpose executed a bond and a transfer of the mortgage. The solicitor, who had in his hands 700*l.* belonging to B., handed over to him the bond, in which it was stated that it was intended as a collateral security. The solicitor retained the transfer, which was never executed by the mortgagee, and afterwards absconded, without having paid off the mortgage. The court relieved A. from the bond. Young v. Guy, 8 Beav. 147.

Material Fact not disclosed by Party's Solicitor.]—A deed had been executed between A. and B., the negotiation for which on A.'s behalf had been carried on by C., his solicitor. B. filed a bill to set aside the deed on the ground that C. had not disclosed certain material circumstances, the knowledge of which would have prevented B. from executing the deed:—Held, that unless it could be shewn that A. was at the time aware of the circumstances, B. was not entitled to relief. Solomon v. Honywood, 3 N. R. 605; 10 L. T. 186; 12 W. R. 572.

III. DUTY AND RELATIONS AS TO CLIENTS.

a. IN CONDUCT OF ACTIONS.

To examine into Client's Case.]—Before commencing an action it is the solicitor's duty to inform himself correctly of the nature of his client's demand, and of the proof that can be adduced in support of it. Gill v. Lougher, 1 C. & J. 170; 1 Tyr. 121; 9 L. J. (O.S.) Ex. 24.

If an attorney undertakes to conduct a cause for the costs out of pocket, it being represented to him by his client that such client took a certain interest under a deed, the attorney cannot charge more than the costs out of pocket, though it should turn out that the cause was lost because his client did not take the interest under the deed which he stated that he took, it being the duty of the attorney to see the deed before so bringing the action. Thwaites v. Macherson, 3 Car. & P. 341; M. & M. 199.

A solicitor, before instituting proceedings for a client, especially on behalf of a wife against her husband, is bound to ascertain how the facts stand, and whether there is a reasonable expectation that the proceedings will be successful. Baylis v. Watkins, 33 L. J., Ch. 300; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 114; 9 L. T. 741; 12 W. R. 324.

Useless Litigation.]—Duty of solicitors to check useless litigation. Ottley v. Gilby, 8 Beav. 602; 14 L. J., Ch. 177.

Witness—Examination.]—Solicitors are justified in obtaining from a witness, prior to his examination, a statement of the facts; but it is improper to obtain a statement upon oath, unless required for the purpose of the cause. Harvey v. Mount, 8 Beav. 439; 14 L. J., Ch. 233; 9 Jur. 741. See Gill v. Laugher, supra.

To Communicate Offer of Settlement.]—If an attorney, who is conducting a cause, does not communicate to his client an offer of compromise made by the other party, but goes on with the action to put cash in his own pocket, he cannot after that charge his client with the costs incurred; but, as it is the duty of an attorney to communicate such an offer to his client, it must be presumed that he did so, till the contrary is shewn. Still v. Thomas, 8 Car. & P. 762.

Not Prosecuting Action.]—If an attorney has reasonable and probable grounds for commencing an action, and desists from prosecuting it because he afterwards discovers that the cause cannot be successfully proceeded with, he is entitled to recover his costs from his client. Lawrence v. Potts, 6 Car. & P. 428.

Following Directions of Client.]—An attorney retained to defend an action is not bound, in following the instructions of his client, to do what is merely meant for delay. Johnson v. Alston, 1 Camp. 176.

An attorney was held liable to pay the costs of sham pleas, though instructed by his client so to plead. Vincent v. Groome, 1 Chit. 182.

The court will not require an attorney to disclose the authority by which he pleads a sham plea. Merrington v. Beckett, 3 D. & R. 231; 2 B. & C. 481; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 246.

In Court at Trial.]—Where a jury retire to consider of their verdict, the attorneys of the parties ought to remain in court to hear it delivered. Dauntley v. Hyde, 6 Jur. 133.

Taking Opinion of Counsel.] — Counsel's opinion is not necessarily a justification of a solicitor for the course he adopts in the conduct of a suit. Bryan v. Twigg, 3 L. J., Ch. 114.

Quære, how far an attorney is justified, as between him and his client, by the opinion of counsel, in prosecuting an action which is unsuccessful, and which the court considers to have been groundless. Clarke, In re, 1 De G. M. & G. 43; 21 L. J., Ch. 20; 15 Jur. 1047.

Filing Affidavits.]—Under Ord. XXXVIII. rr. 10 and 15, it is the imperative duty of the solicitor of any party to cause to be filed every affidavit sworn and used in the course of such proceedings. Taylor v. Gates, 72 L. T. 436—C. A.

Disclosure of Information to Persons not Clients.]—Where a solicitor is consulted by a client and consequently obtains information from documents and otherwise affecting the character or credit of another person, semble, it is no part of his duty to convey that information or to shew those documents to the other person so affected. Saunders v. Seyd and Kelly's Credit Index Co., 75 L. T. 193—C. A.

Acting for Partnership—Duty to Individual Partners.]—It is not the ordinary duty of a solicitor instructed by the managing partner to act for a partnership in an action brought against the firm to communicate to each of the partners the result of the proceedings. A communication to the managing partner is sufficient. Tomlinson v. Broadsmith, 65 L. J., Q. B. 308; [1896] 1 Q. B. 386; 74 L. T. 265; 44 W. R. 471—C. A.

b. In Preparation and Custody of Documents.

Preparation of Wills.]—It is a failure of duty on the part of a solicitor to prepare a will under any circumstances without seeing the testator, and it is utterly inexcusable to do so for an aged testator on the instructions of a person who is named an executor, and is to receive such a benefit as a legacy of 3,000*l.*, with a percentage on the income of the property to be administered by him. The solicitor in such a case might prepare a draft, or even an engrossment, but he ought never to part with it until he had seen the testator. Clery v. Barry, 21 L. R., Ir. 152—C. A.

—— Of Voluntary Deed.]—It is the duty of a solicitor who prepares a voluntary deed on behalf of a client to distinctly call the attention of the settlor to the advisableness of inserting a clause of revocation, and to point out the results that might ensue from the omission. Horan v. Macmahon, 17 L. R., Ir. 641—C. A.

An aged lady of weak intellect made a voluntary settlement, which was set aside, as it contained no power of revocation. The solicitor who drew it admitted that he had not expressly told her of the absence of such a power:—Held, that he must pay his own costs. Henshall v. Fereday, 27 L. T. 743; 21 W. R. 240. Affirmed, 29 L. T. 46; 21 W. R. 570.

A solicitor acted for both parties in the matter of a voluntary settlement, which was set aside for undue influence. He was made a defendant to the suit for that purpose. The court, though exonerating him from culpability in the matter, made him bear his own costs, because he had not acted with proper prudence in the matter. Harvey v. Mount, 8 Beav. 439; 14 L. J., Ch. 233; 9 Jur. 741.

—— Of Mortgage—Measure of Damages.]—A solicitor advanced money to his client on a second mortgage, in which was inserted a power of sale exercisable at any time, without the usual proviso requiring that notice should be given, or some interest should be three months in arrear; and it was not shewn that he explained to the client that the power was not in the usual form. The solicitor afterwards took possession, and for several years received the rents, which, together with some payments made by the mortgagor, exceeded the interest on both mortgages. He then sold the property without notice:—Held, in an action by the mortgagor against the solicitor, that the omission from the power of sale of the usual qualifying clause was a breach of duty, and that the mortgagee was liable in damages as for an improper sale, unless it could be shewn that some interest was three months in arrear; and whether the absence of explanation did not make it improper even if there was interest in arrear, quære. Cockburn v. Edwards, 51 L. J., Ch. 46; 18 Ch. D. 449; 45 L. T. 500; 30 W. R. 446—C. A.

Held, that the difference between party and party costs and solicitor and client costs of the present action could not be given to the plaintiff by way of damages. Ib.

When Solicitor a Trustee.]—B., a solicitor, drew the will of R., his father-in-law, which bequeathed a share of residue, amounting to 45,000*l.*, to B.'s wife, and appointed B. sole executor. The will contained no direction that this sum should be for the separate use of B.'s wife. There was no evidence as to what had passed between B. and R. at the time of the execution of the will:—Held, that, in the absence of evidence, the court could not assume such a dereliction of duty on B.'s part in not informing R. of the effect of the will, as to make B. a trustee for his wife. Birchall, In re, Wilson v. Birchall, 44 L. T. 243; 29 W. R. 461.

On a contract for the sale of part of an estate, the purchaser requiring a fine to be levied of it for the purpose of removing admitted defects in the title, the vendor employed an attorney, who was his relation, and had been professionally employed by him on previous occasions, to levy the fine and complete the contract. The attorney advised the levying of a fine of the whole of the vendor's estate, without telling him the effects of it: such fine was accordingly levied, and the vendor died without declaring its uses, and without republishing his will, previously made, by which he had devised the whole estate to his wife, who survived him. After the vendor's death the attorney claimed the estate as his heir-at-law; alleging, that the will was revoked by the fine, and he brought actions of ejectment to recover possession thereof. The widow filed a bill in chancery for relief; and on an issue directed by that court, a jury found that the attorney fraudulently omitted to tell the vendor what effect the fine would have upon a devise of the property comprised in it. The court of chancery, upon that verdict, decreed the attorney to be a trustee for the devisee of the lands and hereditaments which so descended to him as heir-at-law. The house of lords, affirming that decree, further held, that the attorney's alleged ignorance of the effect of a fine on a will of the lands comprised in it, and his omission to inquire whether the conusor, his client, had made a will, were such professional ignorance and neglect as afforded a principle by which a court of equity might, independent of the ground of fraud, hold him to be a trustee for a third person, of any benefit resulting to himself from his professional ignorance or neglect, to the prejudice of that person. Bulkley v. Wilford, 2 Cl. & F. 102; 8 Bli. (N.S.) 111. See Lysaght v. McGrash, 11 L. R., Ir. 142. And see Fraud.

Drawing Deed—Estoppel.]—An attorney who draws and attests a deed, conveying land from A. to B., is not allowed afterwards to say that the property in the land and deed did not pass. Lord v. Wardle, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 680; 4 Scott, 402; 1 Jur. 382.

Handing over Documents on Change of Solicitor.]—See post, cols. 1740, 1741.

At Trial.]—It is the duty of solicitors to have the original documents at the hearing. Gallimore v. Gill, 4 W. R. 773.

To Take Care of Client's Documents.]—It is the duty of an attorney, when duly called upon by his client to deliver him the papers of which he has the charge, to deliver them in a reasonable condition. The question whether the condition in which they are delivered is reasonable is for the jury. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Sharp, 10 Ex. 451; 3 C. L. R. 52; 24 L. J., Ex. 44; 18 Jur. 964; 3 W. R. 12.

An attorney who has received his client's deed to keep for him and has lost it for want of proper care, cannot set up such loss as an answer to an action of detinue. Reeve v. Palmer, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 91; 28 L. J., C. P. 168; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 916; 7 W. R. 325—Ex. Ch.

An attorney, with whom deeds are deposited, places them, without his client's knowledge, in the hands of a party from whom he has borrowed money for his client. The attorney afterwards is unable to inform his client where the deeds are: —He is chargeable with having mislaid such deeds. Wilmot v. Elkington, 1 N. & M. 749; 2 L. J., K. B. 103.

Property in Letters.]—On payment of a solicitor's bill, the client is entitled to the possession of letters written to the solicitor by third parties, but not to copies of letters written by the solicitor to third parties, unless they are paid for by the client. Thomson, In re, 20 Beav. 545; 24 L. J., Ch. 599; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 718; 3 W. R. 474.

Semble, that a solicitor is entitled to retain the original letters written to him by his client. Ib.

Where a solicitor of a company writes a letter apparently on behalf of the company, he has no such property in it as to entitle him to prevent its publication, although he swears that it was written in his private capacity. Howard v. Gunn, 32 Beav. 462.

Letters received by a solicitor from his client, and copies of letters addressed by a solicitor to his client, are the property of the solicitor. Wheatcroft, In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 669; 6 Ch. D. 97; 26 W. R. 69.

c. Acting Against Former Client or Disclosing His Affairs.

In what Cases—Injunction.]—An attorney, or solicitor, cannot give up his client and act for the opposite party in any suits between them. Cholmondeley (Earl) v. Clinton (Lord), 19 Ves. 261; 13 R. R. 183.

Attorney is prevented from communicating his client's secrets, even by striking off the roll; not permitted to give evidence of them. Id. 268.

The jurisdiction to restrain a solicitor from acting for the antagonist of his former client is founded upon the principle that a man ought to be restrained from doing any act contrary to the duty he owes to another; and will be exercised at the instance of the former client, irrespective of the question whether the solicitor was discharged by him or had discharged himself, whenever the transaction in reference to which the injunction is sought so flows out of or is connected with that in which the solicitor was formerly retained that the same matter of dispute may probably arise. Hutchins v. Hutchins (1 Hog. 315) and Biggs v. Head (Sau. & Sc. 335) approved and adopted. On appeal, the injunction granted by the vice-chancellor was disapproved and dissolved by consent, the solicitor undertaking not to disclose his client's secrets. Little v. Kingswood Collieries Co., 52 L. J., Ch. 56; 20 Ch. D. 733; 47 L. T. 323; 31 W. R. 178. S. P., Brady v. Lawless, Sau. & Sc. 365, n.

A solicitor who has been discharged by his client, cannot be afterwards concerned against him in the same suit. Hutchins v. Hutchins, 1 Hog. 315.

The court will not permit a solicitor to disclose any communications made to him in that character, and will not speculate about their materiality. Semble, their is no substantial distinction between the cases of a discharged solicitor, and of one who refuses to act. Biggs v. Head, Sau. & Sc. 335. See also Hobhouse v. Hamilton, Id. 359, n. Keon v. Nesbitt, Id. 365, n. Waller v. Fowler, Id. 869, n.

The application to restrain a solicitor may be made by motion in the cause in respect of which such injunction is sought, and need not necessarily be made by petition. Ib.

A., a solicitor, had been employed by B. to negotiate and conclude an agreement on her behalf. Disputes then arose between them as to A.'s bill of costs, which B. procured to be taxed and reduced. A suit was subsequently commenced by C. against B., the object of which was to set aside the agreement, and in which A. and D., who had lately become his partners, were solicitors for C. The court restrained A. and D. from acting as the solicitor of C. in the suit, and restrained A. from communicating to C. any information relating to the agreement that had come to his knowledge confidentially as the solicitor of B. Davies v. Clough, 8 Sim. 262; 6 L. J., Ch. 113; 1 Jur. 5. Affirmed, 8 Sim. 269, n.

Motion to restrain a solicitor from giving evidence of confidential matters refused; the propriety of his being examined being left to the consideration of the court before which he might appear as a witness. Beer v. Ward, Jac. 77.

A solicitor who has been discharged, may, upon proof of his misconduct, be restrained from communicating information that came to him confidentially from his client, semble. Ib.

Injunction decreed to restrain a solicitor from communicating, to a party who was suing a former client, documents or matters of evidence which had come to the possession or knowledge of the solicitor in respect of his employment for such client, and to restrain the party suing from using in his action, or otherwise, any documents or matters of evidence which he had so obtained. Lewis v. Smith, 1 Macn. & G. 417.

Where an attorney has been employed in a cause, and is afterwards discharged by his client, not on the ground of misconduct, the court will not restrain him from acting for the opposite party, unless it clearly and distinctly appears that he has obtained information in his former character which it would be prejudicial to the cause of his former client to communicate. Johnson v. Marriott, 2 C. & M. 183; 2 D. P. C. 343; 4 Tyr. 78; 3 L. J., Ex. 40.

The court refused to restrain a defendant's attorneys from acting for him in the cause, on the alleged ground that they had, in the character of solicitors for the defendant and others interested (jointly with the plaintiff) in a chancery suit, in attendance upon a master, obtained a knowledge of the plaintiff's case, and of the evidence upon which it was to be supported; the defendant's attorneys deposing that they in that suit acted also for the defendants, and had not thereby obtained any further knowledge of the plaintiff's case than would be disclosed by a particular of demand. Grissell v. Peto, 2 M. & Scott, 2; 9 Bing. 1; 1 L. J., C. P. 139.

The court refused to restrain, at the instance of an administratrix, a solicitor who had acted on behalf of the administratrix in the affairs of her intestate's estate, from acting as the solicitor of some of the next of kin in a suit for the administration of the estate. Hutchinson v. Newark, 3 De G. & Sm. 727.

How far solicitor may, after being concerned for one party, be restrained from being concerned for the opposite party. Robinson v. Mullett, 4 Price, 353; 18 R. R. 723.

The court will not exercise its summary jurisdiction over an attorney simply because he has, from improper motives, given information which might be used against a former client. There must be actual misconduct quâ attorney, by the adverse use of information while the relation of attorney and client is still subsisting, or by the betrayal of secrets relating to the client's business, obtained by the attorney while acting in a confidential capacity, and acquired also in consequence of his so acting. Cutts, In re, 16 L. T. 71.

A bill was filed by the residuary legatees under a will, against the executors, of whom one was also beneficially interested as a legatee, and had undertaken the sole management of its affairs. The bill charged particular acts of mismanagement, and the appropriation by the managing executor to his own purposes of part of the trust funds. The solicitor for the plaintiffs, having been for several years the friend and solicitor of the managing executor, had become well acquainted with the circumstances of the trust: he had been engaged in recovering money from a debtor to the estate, and had been consulted by the managing executor when one of the residuary legatees, the present plaintiff, had applied for the executorship accounts, which had been delivered under the solicitor's advice. The solicitor's bill for the matters was made out against the managing executor, not as executor, but personally. The bill was taxed, and an action brought for the amount, which was paid, and the character of solicitor and client thus ceased in 1847. A motion by the managing executor, the former client, for an injunction to restrain the solicitor from acting as the solicitor for the plaintiffs in the cause against him, was dismissed. Parratt v. Parratt, 2 De G. & Sm. 258; 17 L. J., Ch. 346; 12 Jur. 740.

Notwithstanding the rule that a solicitor must not use information acquired in his professional capacity in any subsequent proceedings against his former client, a solicitor, who has acted in the formation of a company and been discharged, may act for a petitioner to wind up the same company, when all the facts upon which the petition is based might have been ascertained by any person in the position of the petitioner. Holmes, In re, Electric Power Co., In re, 25 W. R. 603.

Dissolution of Partnership.]—Solicitors in partnership cannot dissolve their partnership, as against their client, without his consent, so as to enable the retiring partner, as discharged, to act against him. Cholmondeley (Earl) v. Clinton (Lord), 19 Ves. 273; 13 R. R. 183.

Disclosing Defects in Client's Title.]—An attorney, being employed to raise money on mortgage for A., disclosed to the proposed lender certain defects in A.'s title, per quod he was subjected to divers actions at the suit of the proposed lender, was delayed in obtaining the money he wanted, and compelled to give a higher rate of interest:—Held, that this was a breach of duty for which an action lay by A. against the attorney, notwithstanding he had been the attorney of the proposed lender before his retainer by A. Taylor v. Blacklow, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 235; 3 Scott, 614; 2 Hodges, 224; 6 L. J., C. P. 14.

Clerk to Solicitor.]—A clerk to a solicitor commencing practice for himself, not to be restrained from acting as solicitor for parties against whom his master was employed, upon general allegations of his having in his former service acquired information likely to be prejudical to the clients of his master. Bricheno v. Thorp, Jac. 300; 23 R. R. 69.

Death of Client.]—The obligation to keep secret confidential communications does not cease with the death of the client. Biggs v. Head, Sau. & Sc. 335.

d. PURCHASES AND DEALINGS WITH—See FRAUD.

e. IN OTHER CASES.

Refusing to Produce Client.]—There is no obligation on an attorney or a solicitor to produce his client for the purpose of being served with process by a third person, and a security obtained by the solicitor from his client during the period of the client's concealment will not be thereby avoided in favour of such third person. Shaw v. Neale, 6 H. L. Cas. 581; 27 L. J., Ch. 444; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 695; 6 W. R. 635.

Duty to give Personal Attention.]—Where by a deed between mortgagees, mortgagors, and an attorney, the attorney was to be receiver of the rents, tithes, and other profits of an estate in the country, and he carried on business in London:—The court held, that he was not obliged to leave his business in town, but might employ an agent in the country to collect for the estate in question: and they construed the deed so as to allow the attorney to charge for the agent's expenses, before paying over the net proceeds of the estate to the various owners. Gilbert v. Dynely, 3 Scott (N.R.) 364; 3 Man. & G. 12; 5 Jur. 843.

A solicitor carrying on business in a town remote from his residence by a clerk who was paid a percentage of profits, cannot recover for business done by such clerk from a client who never saw or knew the solicitor, nor ever had the benefit of his judgment. Hopkinson v. Smith, 1 Bing. 13; 7 Moore, 237; 25 R. R. 571. S. P., Taylor v. Glassbrook, 3 Stark. 75; 23 R. R. 160.

Practice of solicitors, partners, dividing business, considering one only as agent to the other, disallowed, the client being entitled to their united exertions. Cholmondeley (Earl) v. Clinton (Lord), 19 Ves. 273; 13 R. R. 183.

Dealing with Company.]— Semble, it is a breach of duty in a solicitor, for which he may justly be blamed, if, in dealing with a public company, he places the smallest reliance on any representation of any agent of the company as to its future acts. A solicitor, dealing with a public company, ought never to be satisfied with anything but the most solemnly-executed agreement of the company. Leominster Canal Co. v. Shrewsbury and Hereford Ry., 3 Jur. (N.S.) 930; 5 W. R. 868.

Appointing Son as co-Trustee.]—On the retirement of one of two trustees of a will, the continuing trustee, who was the solicitor to the trustees, appointed his son, who was his partner in his business, to be a new trustee. The trusts of the will were being administered by the court:—Held, that, without any reference to the personal fitness of the son, by reason of his position, the appointment was one which the court ought not to approve, though it would not have been invalid if the court had not been administering the trusts. Norris, In re, Allen v. Norris, 53 L. J., Ch. 913; 27 Ch. D. 333; 51 L. T. 593; 32 W. R. 955.

When Acting for Trustees.]—It is the duty of a solicitor to inform his client, when a trustee, that if he does not tax his bill of costs, the items not properly chargeable will be disallowed in passing his account. Flower, Ex parte, 18 L. T., 457.

It is improper conduct in a solicitor acting for a trustee to attempt to protect his client against the just demands of a cestui que trust, by throwing formal difficulties in the way of the latter, which the solicitor would not otherwise have insisted on as necessary for the protection of his client. Aylmer v. Winterbottom, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 19.

Attesting Bill of Sale.]—A solicitor is an officer of the court, and is liable to serious consequences if he neglects his duty of explaining the effect of a bill of sale to the grantor. He is also liable to an action by his client, as well as to proceedings of a penal character—per James, L.J. National Mercantile Bank, Ex parte, Haynes, In re, 49 L. J., Bk. 62; 15 Ch. D. 52; 43 L. T. 36; 28 W. R. 848; 44 J. P. 780—C. A.

Title—Sale of Land.]—When lands are decreed to be sold, the solicitor of the defendant, the inheritor, is bound to give the benefit of his peculiar means of information and assistance in making out title, for which he is to be paid a reasonable compensation. Blennerhassett v. M'Namara, 1 Moll. 52.

Investigating Suspicious Transactions.]—It is to be presumed that legal advisers, in discharge of their duty to their client, investigate suspicious transactions, and satisfy themselves, before they approve them, that it is for their client's benefit to confirm them. De Montmorency v. Devereux, West, 64; 7 Cl. & F. 188; 2 Dr. & Wal. 410; 4 Jur. 403.

Giving Advice.]—An attorney is bound to give sufficient advice to his client; and if any advantage of property come to him by his ignorance, or the neglect of his duty, he shall be a trustee thereof for the benefit of the person who would be entitled thereto, if the attorney had known and done his duty. Bulkley v. Wilford, 2 Cl. & F. 177; 8 Bli. (N.S.) 111.

Acting for all Parties.]—A. purchased an estate from B., and on the completion, one solicitor acted for both parties, and the purchase-money was paid into his hands. Afterwards the purchaser was defeated by C., who had a paramount mortgage. The purchaser presented a petition against the solicitor, asking payment by the solicitor out of the purchase-money of the losses occasioned, or that he might indemnify the petitioner. The petition was dismissed with costs, the court holding, first, that it had no jurisdiction to award compensation or damages in such a case; and, secondly, that the money having come to the hands of the solicitor, as agent of the vendor, and not of the petitioner, it could not interfere. Tylee v. Webb, Hinton, In re, 14 Beav. 14; 15 Jur. 1023.

H. and B. were clients of the same solicitor M. to whom B. gave an authority in writing to sell certain property. Acting on this authority M. entered into an agreement with H. to sell the property to him:—Held (reversing 2 Jur. (N.S.) 922), that this was a transaction in which there was a necessity for the utmost openness of dealing, and the court, not being satisfied that this existed in the case before it, refused specific performance of the agreement entered into. Hesse v. Briant, 6 De G. M. & G. 623; 5 W. R. 108.

Sufficient ground for the interference of equity that a person entrusted to act as attorney for all parties, abuses the confidence placed in him. Costigan v. Hastler, 2 Sch. & Lef. 165.

I. LIABILITY OF SOLICITOR.

I. AS PRINCIPAL TO THIRD PARTIES.

Entering Appeal at Sessions.]—The solicitor, and not the client, is liable to the clerk of the peace for fees connected with the entering of an appeal at the sessions. Langridge v. Lynch, 34 L. T. 695.

Sheriff's Fees for Executing Writs.]—The solicitors of a judgment creditor, in the course of their duty as such solicitors, lodged a writ of fi. fa. at the office of the sheriff, with a request for execution, giving however no instructions as to the selection of any particular bailiff. The sheriff employed one of his officers to execute the writ, which the officer thereupon proceeded to do. On an action being brought by such sheriff's officer against the solicitors of the judgment creditor to recover his fees for executing the writ:—Held, that the solicitors were not liable to pay the fees; that the law, apart from the contract to pay them (express or implied), cast no such liability upon them; and that, from the mere fact that they in the ordinary course of their duty lodged the writ at the sheriff's office for execution, no such contract could be implied. Maybery v. Mansfield (9 Q. B. 745) followed. Brewer v. Jones (10 Ex. 655) dissented from. Royle v. Busby, 50 L. J., Q. B. 196; 6 Q. B. D. 171; 43 L. T. 717; 29 W. R. 315—C. A.

An attorney who issues a fi. fa. is not bound to pay the costs incurred by a sheriff's officer, who makes an unsuccessful levy under the writ. Merriman v. Newman, 20 W. R. 369.

An attorney of judgment creditors issued a fi. fa., and the warrant was placed in the hands of a sheriff's officer for execution; he thereunder seized goods which were claimed by other persons. An interpleader summons was taken out, and the officer was ordered to withdraw upon payment to him by the claimants of four days' possession money. The officer was in possession of the goods seized eleven days. He afterwards sued the attorney for the fee for executing the warrant, and for seven days' possession money:—Held, that as the levy under the writ had produced nothing, he was not liable. Ib.

A bailiff may recover from the attorney in the cause the costs of executing the fi. fa., although the bailiff was not specially nominated by the attorney. Brewer v. Jones, 10 Ex. 655; 3 C. L. R. 369; 24 L. J., Ex. 143; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 240; 3 W. R. 215.

Expenses of Witnesses.]—The attorney in a cause is not personally liable to a witness whom he subpœnas to give evidence in the cause for her expenses of attendance. Robins v. Bridge, 3 M. & W. 114; 6 D. P. C. 140; M. & H. 357; 7 L. J., Ex. 49.

An attorney, being in the position of an agent for his client, is not liable for the charges or expenses of a skilled witness retained by him, in pursuance of his general instructions, to make surveys, researches, calculations or experiments, with a view to examination as a witness in his client's cause. Lee v. Everest, 2 H. & N. 285; 26 L. J., Ex. 334; 5 W. R. 759.

The client, in such a case, is primâ facie liable; and although it is competent to the attorney to make himself personally liable to pay the charges, there must be evidence of an express undertaking on his part so to do; and the mere fact that the attorney has employed the witness in such a way, and that in the course and conduct of the cause he has had communications with the skilled witness, that being in the course of his business as the attorney, is no evidence of such an undertaking. Ib.

A., an attorney, caused B. to be subpœnaed as a witness in a cause in which A. was attorney; and B., before he went to the assizes, asked A. who was to pay him, and A. said he would do so. After the assizes, at which B. attended and was examined, A.'s clerk, by the direction of A., gave B. an I O U for the amount of B.'s expenses and loss of time, which amount A. received from the opposite party, after the costs in the cause had been taxed:—Held, that B. might recover the amount from A. Evans v. Philpotts, 9 Car. & P. 270.

The mere circumstance of a party being the attorney in the cause will not make him responsible for refreshments supplied by a coffee-house keeper to the witnesses while attending the trial. But the fact of his being found in communication with the witnesses at the coffee-house, is some evidence to go to the jury that the supplies were sanctioned by him. Fendall v. Nokes, 7 Scott, 647; 2 Arn. 101; 3 Jur. 726.

A solicitor who takes witnesses to an inn, is primâ facie liable to the innkeeper for the expenses incurred. Cariss v. Richardson, 1 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 11.

On Contracts on behalf of Client.]—A solicitor who attends a sale, and bids for his client, is responsible for the payment of the deposit, and will be attached if it is not paid. Hobhouse v. Hamilton, 1 Hog. 401.

In what case an agreement made by a scrivener, on behalf of his client, to compound a debt, shall bind the scrivener, though not the client. Parrot v. Wells, 2 Vern. 127.

A solicitor contracted, in his own name, to purchase a freehold; he resisted the performance of it on the ground that he had acted as the mere agent of a client, and that, it being a case of hardship, damages at law would be an adequate remedy to the vendor:—Held, that he was bound to perform the contract. Saxon v. Blake, 29 Beav. 438.

A contract having been entered into by a firm of solicitors acting on behalf of their client, to pay the plaintiff certain sums of money, the plaintiff filed a bill against the client and the solicitors, alleging that the client was bound by the contract, but that the client denied that he was so bound, on the ground that the solicitors had no authority to enter into such contract, and the bill prayed specific performance by the client or otherwise, if it should appear that the solicitors were not authorised, then that the solicitors themselves might be declared personally liable to perform the same. A demurrer to the bill by the solicitors was allowed on the ground that the plaintiff did not himself allege that the client was not bound, and, also, that alternative relief could not be prayed against one defendant in case relief could not be obtained against another defendant. Clark v. Rivers (Lord), 37 L. J., Ch. 70; L. R. 5 Eq. 91; 17 L. T. 166; 16 W. R. 123.

II. TO ACTIONS OF TORT.

False Imprisonment.] — An action for false imprisonment lies as well against an attorney as against his client, who sues out at the suit of his client an illegal writ of capias ad satisfaciendum against a defendant, and causes him to be imprisoned thereon. Barker v. Braham, 3 Wils. 368; 2 W. Bl. 866. See Rogers v. Popkin, 2 Stark. 404.

Attachment of Client—Acting without Authority.]—A bill filed without the authority of the plaintiff was dismissed with costs, and the plaintiff was taken under an attachment for non-payment of costs. The court, on motion, ordered the solicitor to indemnify A., but refused to release A. as against the claim of the defendants:—Held, also, that A. was not, on such application, to be deprived of his right against the solicitor to damages for his imprisonment. Hood v. Phillips, 6 Beav. 176.

Trespass.]—An attorney is not liable with his client in a joint action of trespass, unless it can be proved that he has gone beyond the strict line of his duty. Sedley v. Sutherland, 3 Esp. 202. S. P., Carrett v. Smallpage, 9 East, 330.

So, where an arrest is made under process, which is afterwards set aside for irregularity, the attorney in the suit is liable in trespass as well as the plaintiff; and if in an action of trespass he justifies under the process, it is a good replication that the process was irregularly sued out, and was afterwards set aside by rule of court for irregularity. Codrington v. Lloyd, 8 A. & E. 449; 3 N. & P. 442; 1 W. W. & H. 358; 7 L. J., Q. B. 196; 2 Jur. 593.

Where an attorney, at the instance of a creditor, sued out process against a debtor in the county court, and the attorney's agent, after the debt and costs had been paid, but in ignorance of that fact, signed judgment and sued out execution, and levied upon the debtor's goods, though he had never appeared:—Held, that both the creditor and his attorney were liable to the debtor in an action of trespass. Bates v. Pilling, 9 D. & R. 44; 6 B. & C. 38; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 40.

An attorney who delivers to a bailiff a precept issued out of a local court, to be executed within the jurisdiction, is not liable in trespass jointly with the bailiff for executing the precept out of the jurisdiction, unless he was aware that it was to be executed out of the jurisdiction, although his name was indorsed on the precept, with directions to levy, and he was aware that the bailiff intended to make the levy in the manner he did. Sowell v. Champion, 6 A. & E. 407; 2 N. & P. 627; W. W. & D. 667; 7 L. J., Q. B. 197.

An attorney, who deliberately directs the execution of a warrant, is liable in trespass if it proves bad. Green v. Elgie, 5 Q. B. 99; D. & M. 199; 14 L. J., Q. B. 162.

An attorney, to whom his client had assigned a debt for which judgment had been recovered, indorsed a fi. fa. in the action, "The defendant resides at W., in the county of B., and is an innkeeper." The defendant in that action resided with R., his mother-in-law, and managed the business, which she carried on at an inn at W. The levy was made upon her goods in that inn. In an action against the sheriff and the attorney: —Held, that the attorney must be taken to have directed the sheriff to levy the goods of R., and was therefore liable. Rowles v. Senior, 8 Q. B. 677; 15 L. J., Q. B. 231; 10 Jur. 354. See Childers v. Wooler, 2 El. & El. 287; 29 L. J., Q. B. 129; 2 L. T. 49; 8 W. R. 321.

An action on the case is not maintainable against an attorney, who, being retained to sue for a debt a person of the same name with the plaintiff, by mistake and without malice takes all the proceedings to judgment and execution against the plaintiff, or having obtained judgment against the right person, by mistake and without malice issues execution against the plaintiff. Davies v. Jenkins, 1 D. & L. 321; 11 M. & W. 745; 12 L. J., Ex. 386; 7 Jur. 801.

If attorneys conducting the business of a fiat in bankruptcy take out a summons to attend before a commissioner under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 33, which is disobeyed, and they afterwards obtain a warrant of the commissioner to arrest and bring before him for examination the party so summoned, which warrant proves invalid, the attorneys are not liable in trespass if they have taken no steps in the execution of the warrant, except ordering it to be prepared by an agent, who, when it was ready, gave the messenger notice to take it. Cooper v. Harding, 7 Q. B. 928; 9 Jur. 777.

Action for wrongful seizure of goods against an execution creditor and her attorney, jointly. The attorney, who had given the sheriff a fi. fa. against C., sent a man, with the sheriff, to point out his goods. He pointed out goods which the sheriff seized, and which, on an interpleader issue, were found to be the goods of D.:—Held, that the attorney, by the direction which he had given the sheriff, had made himself personally liable in trespass. Power v. Fleming, Ir. R. 4 C. L. 404.

Held, also, that, the attorney having directed the sheriff to seize the goods which the man sent should point out, the consequence was just the same as if he had himself pointed out the wrong goods and directed the sheriff to seize them. Ib.

D. obtained, as special damage, a verdict for the costs of the interpleader proceedings which he had taxed against the execution creditor, and for the payment of which by her he had an order of the court, but which he was unable to recover:—Held, that, as his action was brought against both the execution creditor and her attorney, the same damages must be recovered against both; that, as D. had an order which was equivalent to a judgment of the court against her, he could not recover the amount of them as damages against her, and, therefore, the verdict should be reduced by the amount. Ib.

Refusal to sign Defendant's Discharge unless paid on independent demand.]—Where a defendant, on being taken in execution under a ca. sa., tendered the debt and costs to the plaintiff's attorney, and required him to sign his discharge, which he refused to do until he had paid an independent collateral demand for costs:—Held, that the plaintiff and his attorney were liable to an action on the case for such refusal. Crozer v. Pilling, 6 D. & R. 129; 4 B. & C. 26; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 131; 28 R. R. 199.

Improperly suing out Writ of Attachment.]—Upon a change of solicitors in certain suits in equity, an order was made by the master of the rolls, requiring the former solicitor to hand over to the newly-appointed solicitor all papers and documents in his possession, custody or power relating to the suits. Some of the papers were in the hands of counsel and others in the hands of a law stationer, who respectively claimed liens thereon for their fees and charges; and the solicitor alleging that his client had undertaken to provide funds for fees and disbursements, but had failed to do so, was consequently unable to comply with the order as to those papers. The newly-appointed solicitor, upon an affidavit alleging the neglect to obey the order, but not mentioning the excuse set up, obtained from the clerk of records and writs a writ of attachment, under which the former solicitor (already in custody for debt) was detained. An application having been fruitlessly made to the master of the rolls to set aside the attachment, upon a statement of all the facts, the former solicitor appealed to the lords justices, who reversed the decision of the master of the rolls, with costs, and ordered the writ to be set aside and the solicitor discharged from custody:—Held, that neither the solicitor who so sued out the attachment nor the client was liable in trespass. Williams v. Smith, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 596.

Trover.]—A., the acceptor of a bill of exchange, had agreed with his creditors to pay a composition, partly in money and partly in notes. The bill having become due, the drawer was unable to take it up, but the indorsee intrusted it to the drawer to get the composition in money and notes for him. The drawer handed it to his attorney, with other bills accepted by A., to get the composition for him, and, at the same time, obtained an advance of 200*l.* from the attorney. The attorney obtained the composition in money, and repaid himself the 200*l.*, and carried the balance to the account of the drawer. For the composition in notes he took one note for the aggregate amount of the composition on the several bills handed to him:—Held, that the attorney was not liable to the indorsee, either in trover for the bill or for the money kept back by him to repay the advance to his client, the drawer. Symonds v. Atkinson, 1 H. & N. 146; 25 L. J., Ex. 313.

When Acting in Accordance with Opinion of Counsel.]—In an action against an attorney, for a malicious or fraudulent proceeding, it is not enough in order to excuse him that he acted on counsel's opinion, unless he also shows a case fairly stated, and advice obtained bonâ fide and properly pursued. Andrews v. Hawley, 26 L. J., Ex. 323.

III. TO ACCOUNT.

In what Cases.]—It is the duty of a solicitor to keep clear and distinct accounts. Clarke, In re, 13 Beav. 173. Affirmed, 1 De G. M. & G. 43; 21 L. J., Ch. 20; 15 Jur. 1047.

Where advances have been made by a solicitor to his client, by way of loan, the client being in distress, a general account will be ordered of such transactions. Hicks v. Morland, 2 L. J., Ch. 206.

Where a party gave a sum of money to his solicitors to invest:—Held, that as this was a single isolated transaction, a bill for an account as between principal and agent could not be maintained as against the solicitors. Mare v. Lewis, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 219.

A. placed moneys in the hands of her solicitor, who acted also for her as a money scrivener, undertaking to find securities for her. He placed the moneys out on insufficient securities, misrepresenting to her their character:—Held, that as against him, if living, it would have been, and as against his estate after his death it was not a matter for an action for negligence, but a matter of account between principal and agent, and the client had a right to reject the charge for disbursements on insufficient securities. Smith v. Pococke, 2 Drew. 197; 2 Eq. R. 368; 23 L. J., Ch. 545; 18 Jur. 478; 2 W. R. 285.

The summary jurisdiction by petition at the rolls does not exclude the right of a client to file a bill against his solicitor for a general account. O'Brien v. Lewis, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 321; 7 L. T. 734.

Demurrer to a bill by a solicitor for an account between himself and his client in respect of moneys received and paid and of loans made by the former for and on behalf of the latter, and of bills of costs due from the former to the latter, allowed, as not amounting to a case of mutual account. Padwick v. Hurst, 18 Beav. 575; 23 L. J., Ch. 657; 18 Jur. 763; 2 W. R. 501.

Upon demurrer, a general allegation that accounts are of a complicated nature is not sufficient, unless supported by specific allegations of facts showing their complex character. Ib.

A bill or claim for an account filed against a confidential agent cannot be resisted on the ground that the defendant has also been employed as a solicitor in the same matter. Oddy v. Secker, 2 Sm. & Gif. 193.

A bill was filed by a solicitor against a person employed as his occasional clerk, and in that character receiving and paying moneys for him, and claiming against him a sum for services, the master having paid from time to time moneys to and for the clerk. The bill prayed an injunction to restrain an action brought by the clerk for the balance of the account:—Held, that this was not such an account as to require the interference of equity, and the injunction was refused. Fluker v. Taylor, 3 Drew. 183.

Statute of Limitations.]—The ordinary relation of a solicitor to his client in questions of account is not of such a fiduciary character as to bar the Statute of Limitations, 21 Jac. 1, c. 16. Watson v. Woodman, 45 L. J., Ch. 57; L. R. 20 Eq. 721; 24 W. R. 47.

Accounts when Re-opened.] — The general expressions of Lord Redesdale, in Lewes v. Morgan (3 Y. & J. 230), are not to be construed to mean that accounts settled between parties standing in the relation of solicitor and client are to be disregarded. It would be absurd that a solicitor, however accurately his accounts were settled, and however plainly his books show primâ facie that the accounts were regular, should more than any other man be put to vouch his account over again. Hickson v. Aylward, 3 Moll. 15.

An account settled between a client and her solicitor, including arranged bills of costs, decreed to be opened and the bills referred for taxation in an action instituted nearly two years after such settlement, on the grounds of undue influence, and that the charges were improper and excessive, and that much of the business done was unnecessary and ought not to have been done. Watson v. Rodwell, 47 L. J., Ch. 418; 7 Ch. D. 625; 26 W. R. 524. See also Webb, In re, Lambert v. Still, 63 L. J., Ch. 145; [1894] 1 Ch. 73; 70 L. T. 318—C. A.

Accounts between a mortgagee solicitor and his client, the mortgagor, stated and signed more than thirty years ago, were opened on the grounds that the client had no independent advice, and signed without examination or explanation, that the accounts contained improper items, and that a third person was put forward as the mortgagee. Ward v. Sharp, 53 L. J., Ch. 313; 50 L. T. 557; 32 W. R. 584.

In impeaching settled accounts between solicitor and client, it is sufficient to allege generally that the accounts are erroneous, without specifying the particular items. Lawless v. Mansfield, 1 Dr. & War. 557; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 113.

Bonds and bills given by a client to his solicitor are not sufficient evidence of the debt; if the accounts have been opened, the consideration for them must be proved. Ib.

A firm of solicitors purchased leasehold property, and soon afterwards they formed a company (of which they were appointed the solicitors) to take over the property, which they sold to the company at a price greatly in excess of that which they had paid for it:—Held, that no fiduciary relation having existed between the parties at the time when the solicitors purchased the property, and there having been no fraud, concealment, or misrepresentation on the part of the solicitors, and all the then members of the company having been fully aware of the facts, the sale could not be opened, and the solicitors were not accountable for the profit made on the transaction. Mason's Hall Tavern Investment Co. v. Nokes, 22 L. T. 503.

Solicitor who advanced money to infant for subsistence of his family, and acted as his confidential adviser, is in nature of guardian to him, and an account settled between them within a month after infant became of age and without latter having any assistance, was opened, notwithstanding vouchers were delivered up. Revett v. Harvey, 1 Sim. & S. 502; 2 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 39; 24 R. R. 219.

As to the form in which settled accounts between attorney and client should be delivered. Johnes v. Lloyd, 10 Price, 62.

Settlement of accounts between attorney and client is not conclusive, the nature of their connection taking their accounts out of the general rule of equity. Lewes v. Morgan, 5 Price, 42; 19 R. R. 566.

For Profits.]—A solicitor was active in founding a banking company. Before its establishment he entered into a secret arrangement with a stranger, that the latter should purchase some property eligible for the banking-house on a joint speculation. After its establishment, the company purchased part of the premises for their banking-house, not knowing that their solicitor was interested in it:—Held, that he must account to the company for all the profits made by him by the whole transaction, but that the stranger was under no such liability. Tyrrell v. Bank of London, 10 H. L. Cas. 26; 31 L. J., Ch. 369; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 849; 6 L. T. 1; 10 W. R. 359.

Taking Accounts.]—In taking an account of the pecuniary transactions between an attorney and his client, the production of a bond entered into by the latter is not sufficient evidence of a debt to that amount, and actual payment must be proved. Lewes v. Morgan, 3 Y. & J. 230. S. C., nom. Morgan v. Evans, 8 Bli. (N.S.) 777; 3 Cl. & F. 159.

Where an account is decreed to be taken of the dealings and transactions between an attorney and his client, in the course of which the attorney has taken securities from the client, the attorney must not only prove the securities, but likewise the consideration for which they were given. Therefore, where a promissory note was given by the client to his attorney under circumstances of great suspicion, but the client was unable for want of witnesses to prove fraud in the attorney, the court upon decreeing an account between the parties, directed an inquiry as to whether the attorney could by any, and what affirmative evidence prove the consideration for the note. Jones v. Thomas, 2 Y. & Coll. 498.

When on a bill, against a firm of solicitors who were the trustees of a settlement, for an account, but in which there was no charge of wilful neglect or default, and no relief prayed as against it, the plaintiff succeeded in establishing his case; the court directed an inquiry as to the defendant's dealings with the trust fund, and if on taking the accounts it should appear that they had been guilty of wilful neglect or default in the discharge of their duty, they should be charged, in taking the accounts, with such wilful neglect or default. Nash v. Howell, 21 L. T. 743.

The solicitor of an administratrix receiving money belonging to the estate of the intestate is not a trustee for the estate; and if he makes payments out of it for the use of the administratrix, which are either previously directed, or subsequently adopted by her, he will be charged only with the balance actually in his hands. Watkins v. Maule, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 82.

H. by agreement with J. became solicitor on the record in certain suits, and an arrangement was made that moneys received by him as such solicitor should be applied to meet some fees to counsel due from J. The moneys were so received and applied after J.'s death. J.'s estate was insolvent, and a summons was taken out by his executor for payment of the sums:—Held, that as H. had received these moneys as solicitor on the record and by express agreement with J., he was entitled to retain them, subject only to an account. Jeyes v. Jeyes, 45 L. J., Ch. 245; 34 L. T. 167.

—— Appropriation of Payments.] — Where directors of a company carry on business unauthorised by the deed of settlement, and moneys have been paid by the company to the solicitors on account of costs generally, the solicitors have no right post litem motam to appropriate such payments to the costs incurred in respect of the unauthorised business, but, on the contrary, the court will appropriate the payments to the costs which the company was liable to pay. Phœnix Life Assurance Co., In re, Howard and Dolman, Ex parte, 1 Hem. & M. 433; 2 N. R. 548; 11 W. R. 984.

There were numerous money transactions between N., a solicitor, and D., his client. Before 1825 they settled their accounts on two or three occasions, whenever it appeared convenient. From 1824 to 1846 there was a sum of 5,000*l.* placed in D.'s hands by N., for which D. gave his bond, and there were other sums secured by D.'s promissory note. D. gave N. moneys as he asked for them in gross sums, nothing being said as to their appropriation. Upon D.'s death, a bill for an account being filed against his executors:—Held, that the account should be taken without appropriating any sum credited to either party in satisfaction of interest; that no balance should be struck before the end of the account; and that every sum credited to either party should carry interest from the date at which it was credited. Napper v. Dendy, 5 W. R. 4.

IV. WHEN ACTING WITHOUT AUTHORITY.

Generally.]—When a solicitor acts without authority, he must as a general rule pay the costs thereby occasioned. Savage, In re, 15 Ch. D. 557; 29 W. R. 348.

Where a person is made a plaintiff in an action without proper authority, and orders have been, without his knowledge, made against him, under which he is liable to pay costs to the defendant, the proper order to make is to stay all proceedings in the name of the person in question and all proceedings against him in the action since he was added as a plaintiff, and to direct his name to be struck out for the purpose of future proceedings; the solicitor who wrongly made him a party must pay all his costs, and all the costs which he has been ordered to pay, and also all the defendant's costs, the costs of the person wrongly made plaintiff as between solicitor and client, and the costs of the defendant as between party and party, and in such costs must be included the costs of the application to be relieved from the consequences of the misjoinder. The rule laid down in Reynolds v. Howell (42 L. J., Q. B. 181; L. R. 8 Q. B. 398), and adopted in Nurse v. Durnford (49 L. J., Ch. 229; 13 Ch. D. 764, and Newbiggin-by-the-Sea Gas Co. v. Armstrong (49 L. J., Ch. 231; 13 Ch. D. 310), applied. Fricker v. Van Grutten, 65 L. J., Ch. 823; [1896] 2 Ch. 649; 75 L. T. 117; 45 W. R. 53—C. A.

Solicitors who instituted an action in the name of two plaintiffs, one of whom was an infant (whose name had since been struck out on the ground of want of authority), were ordered on the defendants' application to pay to the defendants their costs of the action so far as they were attributable to the joinder of the infant as a plaintiff, notwithstanding that the solicitors were unaware of the infancy when they instituted the action. Geilinger v. Gibbs, 66 L. J., Ch. 230; [1897] 1 Ch. 479; 76 L. T. 111; 45 W. R. 315.

The principle to be deduced from Fricker v. Van Grutten (65 L. J., Ch. 823; [1896] 2 Ch. 649) and previous cases is that where a solicitor without authority puts forward a person as responsible to the defendants for the costs of the action, the solicitor is to be substituted for such person as regards the defendants. Ib.

The rule that proceedings taken by a solicitor without proper authority, will be annulled with costs, to be paid by him, does not apply unless he was aware of the circumstances which invalidated his authority; and notice from the other side is not sufficient to fix him with knowledge, if he had good reason to suppose that the facts stated in the notice were not true. Thomas v. Finlayson, 19 W. R. 255.

Liability incurred by Means of Fraud.]—An attorney having brought an action without any authority to do so from the plaintiff, was ordered to pay the defendant's costs of the action:—Held, that his liability to pay such costs was a liability incurred by means of a fraud within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 49. Jenkins v. Fereday, 41 L. J., C. P. 152; L. R. 7 C. P. 358; 27 L. T. 37; 20 W. R. 781.

Action Dismissed—Indemnity against Costs.]—Where a solicitor files a bill, the onus lies upon him to show that he had the plaintiff's authority for doing so, and if he fails to show such authority, or a subsequent acquiescence on the part of the plaintiff, the plaintiff is entitled to have his name removed from the record, with costs to be paid by the solicitor. Maries v. Maries, 2 Eq. Rep. 361; 23 L. J., Ch. 154; 2 W. R. 635.

Where a solicitor has commenced an action in the name of a plaintiff without authority, the proper course is for the plaintiff to serve notice of motion on the defendant as well as on the solicitor, that the action may be dismissed, and that the solicitor may pay the costs of the plaintiff as between solicitor and client, and the costs of the defendant as between party and party. Newbiggin-by-the-Sea Gas Co. v. Armstrong, 49 L. J., Ch. 231; 13 Ch. D. 310; 41 L. T. 637; 28 W. R. 217—C. A.

A suit was prosecuted through a solicitor, and the plaintiffs alleged without their authority; the defendant gave notice of motion to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution, which being served on the solicitor, he requested the plaintiffs to name a new solicitor, which they refused to do; the solicitor then moved that he might be dismissed as solicitor:—Held, that no such order could be made; but personal service on the plaintiffs of the notice of motion to dismiss was ordered. The plaintiffs took no step to relieve themselves from their liability:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to have the bill dismissed with costs to be paid by the plaintiffs, leaving them to obtain as against the solicitor any remedy they might have. Tarbuck v. Woodcock, 6 Beav. 581.

Order to dismiss a bill, with costs to be paid by the plaintiff's solicitor, the bill having been filed without special authority from the plaintiff. Wright v. Castle, 3 Mer. 12; 17 R. R. 3.

Where a solicitor had taken no written authority to file a bill, and the parol one, which he asserted, was denied by the plaintiff, the bill was taken off the file, and the plaintiff ordered to pay the costs of the defendant in the first instance, and the solicitor to pay the costs both of plaintiff and defendant. Martindale v. Lawson, C. P. Cooper, 83.

A solicitor, taking a proceeding in a suit in the name of a person, without his authority, is personally liable to pay the costs, charges, and expenses occasioned to the other parties thereby. Malins v. Greenway, 10 Beav. 564; 17 L. J., Ch. 26, 331; 12 Jur. 66, 319.

If a solicitor gives a relator an indemnity for costs, or uses his name without authority (though afterwards assented to), the court will order the information to be taken off the file with costs, to be paid by the relator and attorney. Att.-Gen. v. Skinners' Co., C. P. Cooper, 7.

Bill filed by solicitor from instructions of brother-in-law of plaintiff, solicitor having never received any communication from plaintiff himself, dismissed, and solicitor ordered to pay costs, plaintiff having absconded before bill was filed. Hall v. Bennett, 2 Sim. & S. 78; 25 R. R. 160. See also Betagh v. Burke, 2 Moll. 384. Wade v. Stanley, 1 Jac. & Walk. 674. Stuckey, Ex parte, 2 Cox, 283; Dundas v. Dutens, id. 236; 1 R. R. 112.

The retainer of a solicitor need not be in writing; but if he neglects taking that precaution, and, his retainer being afterwards questioned, there is nothing but assertion against assertion, he must bear the cost of the risk he thus undertakes. Wiggins v. Peppin, 2 Beav. 403; 3 Jur. 721.

A suit instituted by a solicitor without authority dismissed on motion with costs of the suit, and of the motion as between solicitor and client. Allen v. Bone, 4 Beav. 493.

Bill taken off the file at the expense of solicitor, who had taken no written authority to sue, and whose parol authority was denied. Martindale v. Lawson, C. P. Cooper, 83.

A., who was an equitable mortgagee by deposit of deeds of property belonging to the estate of B., was paid off by C. on an agreement with the executors of B. (as their solicitor stated), that proceedings should be taken in A.'s name to enforce the mortgage security, and thereby to effect a sale of the whole or part of the mortgaged property; and the solicitor of the executors filed a claim for foreclosure in the name of A. against the representatives of B. A. denied that he had given authority to file the claim in his name, and moved that it might be taken off the file:—Held, that there being only assertion against assertion, and the solicitor alone stating that instructions were given in the presence of A., the case was to be governed by Allen v. Bone (4 Beav. 493), and the claim was dismissed, with costs to be paid by the solicitor. That in such a case the court could not adjudicate between the solicitor, by whom the claim was filed, and the defendants, the representatives of B., by whom the instructions were given to file the claim in A.'s name; and the court left the solicitor to any legal remedy he might have against such parties.

Crossley v. Crowther, 9 Hare, 384; 21 L. J., Ch. 565.

A bill filed by an insolvent as assignee of a debt against trustees of a creditor's deed, but which was filed by a solicitor without the plaintiff's authority or knowlege, ordered to be taken off the file, with costs as against the solicitor; and the defendants are not necessary parties to such an application. Jerdein v. Bright, 6 L. T. 279; 10 W. R. 380.

Solicitors instituting a suit in their client's name, without authority, are liable to indemnify him from all costs, and a passive acquiescence by the client in the use of his name does not of itself amount to an adoption of the proceedings. All the partners are equally liable, notwithstanding only one of them may have conducted the suit. Manby, In re, 26 L. J., Ch. 313; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 259.

Semble, that if B. had during the course of the litigation became aware of the use of his name, his subsequently omitting to interfere actively to prevent its continuance would not, per se, have been sufficient to relieve the solicitors from liability to him for the costs. Ib.

Solicitors of the assignees of a bankrupt estate instituted a suit in the names of the assignees, but without any written retainer from the official assignee, against a mortgagee of the bankrupt's property to redeem the mortgage, which was dismissed with costs:—Held, on the petition of the official assignee, that although he was cognisant of the existence of the suit, yet as there was no sufficient evidence of his having given a retainer, the solicitors were bound to pay and indemnify the official assignee against the costs. Norton v. Cooper, 3 Sm. & G. 375.

A solicitor obtained a retainer to proceed against executors, who had, after a long lapse of time, neglected to prove the will, and had rendered no account, to compel probate of the will, and to take such other proceedings for obtaining an account as might be necessary. He instituted a suit to compel probate, and obtained in it an account which was insufficient. He took then no other steps for three years, and then, without further consulting the client, filed a bill for an account; he had no other authority than that retainer, and the client denied any parol authority to file a bill:—Held, that the retainer did not justify the solicitor, and the bill was dismissed, with costs to be paid by the solicitor, as in Allen v. Bone (4 Beav. 493). Athinson v. Abbott, 3 Drew. 251.

Where an action is brought by an attorney without the plaintiff's consent, and the defendant at the trial agrees to withdraw a juror, the court will not order the attorney acting for the plaintiff to pay the costs of the defendant. Hammond v. Thorpe, 1 C. M. & R. 64; 4 Tyr. 838; 2 D. P. C. 721; 3 L. J., Ex. 358.

A purser of a mine, assuming to be authorised to sue on behalf of the adventurers, instructed an attorney to sue in the name of twelve of them. At the trial the record was withdrawn, and the defendant obtained a rule for the costs of the day. Immediately after taxation, on the 19th September, 1854, three of the plaintiffs obtained judge's orders to strike their names from the record, on the ground that they had ceased to have any interest in the mine, and that their names had been used without their knowledge or consent. On the 5th of May, the defendant obtained a rule to rescind these orders and for the attorney to pay the costs already incurred, and to give security for the defendant's further costs:—Held, that the application was too late. Collins v. Johnson, 16 C. B. 588; 3 C. L. R. 1285; 24 L. J., C. P. 231.

—— Next Friend.]—Where an action was commenced on behalf of a married woman by a next friend acting without her authority, the court, on the application of the defendants, ordered the action to be dismissed, and that the solicitors acting for the next friend should pay all the costs. Schjott v. Schjott, 51 L. J., Ch. 368; 19 Ch. D. 94; 45 L. T. 333; 30 W. R. 329—C. A.

The mother of an infant employed a solicitor to prosecute a suit on behalf of the infant. The person first named as next friend in the cause died; the mother subsequently discharged the solicitor; and after such discharge, he amended the bill and named a new next friend without the mother's sanction. The court ordered that, on payment by the mother to the next friend of the costs incurred by him in the suit, the next friend should be removed and another appointed, and that the solicitor should pay the costs of the application and of the new appointment. Lander v. Ingersoll, 4 Hare, 596.

Acting for Non-existing Person.]—An attorney, though he need not be instructed by a plaintiff personally, but may receive instructions from any one interested in the action, is liable to the defendant for costs, if it turns out that the plaintiff is a non-existing person. Hoskins v. Phillips, 16 L. J., Q. B. 339.

Joining Person as Co-plaintiff.]—The name of a plaintiff having been inserted on the record without his knowledge, consent, or authority, on motion by the defendants to dismiss for want of prosecution, and on motion by the plaintiff to have his name struck out from the record:—Held, that the solicitors to the record who had purported to act for the said plaintiff were liable to pay his costs of the motion as between solicitor and client, and also to pay the costs of the defendants of the action and all the motions therein. The form of order in Dundas v. Dutens (1 Ves. 196; 1 R. R. 112) not followed. Nurse v. Durnford, 49 L. J., Ch. 229; 13 Ch. D. 764; 41 L. T. 611; 28 W. R. 145.

A bill being filed without the written authority of one of several co-plaintiffs, and the evidence being unsatisfactory as to the retainer; his name was struck out as co-plaintiff, with costs to be paid by the solicitor. Pinner v. Knights, 6 Beav. 174.

Where a solicitor files a bill without a written authority, the onus of proof is cast on him. If there be any doubt on the matter, the court will hold him liable. Ib.

An attorney who makes a person even a formal plaintiff without his express consent, is himself liable for the costs incurred by such plaintiff. Peed v. Cussen, Hayes, 66.

The names of persons made plaintiffs in a bill, without their authority, ordered to be struck out with costs to be paid by the solicitor, their application, after they were apprised of the fact, having been made without delay. Where persons who have been made plaintiffs without their consent, have, after the fact has come to their knowledge, acquiesced for a considerable period, their names will not, on their application, be struck out of the bill, semble. Wilson v. Wilson, 1 Jac. & Walk. 457.

Where parties moved to have their names struck out of the record on the ground that they had been used by the solicitor without their authority, and the solicitor could not produce any written authority from them, the court refused the motion, the facts and documents showing that the parties had been aware of the use of their names, and had allowed a long space of time to elapse without taking any steps. M'Nally v. Knox, 5 L. T. 186.

A bill was filed in the name of several co-plaintiffs, but, as to one of them, without his authority. His interests being found conflicting with those of the other co-plaintiffs, and not having acquiesced, he obtained an order after replication, and on motion, that his name might be struck out as one of the plaintiffs, and that his cost of suits and of the application might be paid by the solicitor who filed the bill. Tabbernor v. Tabbernor, 2 Keen, 679 ; 6 L. J., Ch. 19.

A bill had been filed by one of the directors of an incorporated company, in the name of the company, praying an injunction against the other directors of the company, to restrain them from allotting, or pretending to allot, any shares, from affixing their seal, or otherwise acting or pretending to act in the name of the directors of the company. On motion to take the bill off the file, on the ground that the solicitor had not the authority of the company, it appearing that one director alone had authorised such bill to be filed, without the consent of the other directors :—Held, that such bill should be taken off the file, and the costs of the application and of the suit should be paid by the solicitor filing such bill :—Fergus Navigation and Embankment Co. v. Kingdom, 4 L. T. 262.

A., one of five co-plaintiffs, moved to have his name struck out of a bill as having been inserted without his authority. He also asked that the solicitor might pay the costs. After the date of the motion the solicitor died. The co-plaintiffs opposed the motion, and proved that A. had assigned the subject-matter in dispute by an instrument not under seal, and had thereby authorised the assignee to use his name :—Held, that the authority in the assignment must have been intended to have some meaning, and the motion refused with costs. Rees v. Rees, 2 Eq. R. 234.

Cause at issue, one of the plaintiffs applies to have name struck out of bill, on ground that he knew not of its insertion. Defendant objected, he being only plaintiff of ability to pay costs. Objection good, and application refused ; but solicitor who inserted plaintiff's name ordered to indemnify him. Titterton v. Osborne, Dick. 350.

Discontinuance of Action.]—A company, named as a co-plaintiff in an action, served a notice of motion on the solicitors who had issued the writ for an order that the name of the company might be struck out of the writ, and that the solicitors might be ordered to pay the company's costs, on the ground that the writ had been issued without its authority. Before the motion could be heard the solicitors served a notice that the plaintiffs wholly discontinued the action :—Held, notwithstanding the discontinuance, that the court had jurisdiction to make the order asked for. Gold Reefs of Western Australia v. Dawson, 66 L. J., Ch. 147 ; [1897] 1 Ch. 115 ; 75 L. T. 575 ; 45 W. R. 285.

Staying Proceedings.]—Where an attorney brings an action in the name of a person without his authority, the court will stay the proceedings, on the motion of the defendant, and make the attorney pay the costs. Hubbard v. Phillips, 2 D. & L. 707 ; 13 M. & W. 703 ; 14 L. J., Ex. 103.

When an attorney brings an action without the authority of the plaintiff, the plaintiff is entitled to have the proceedings stayed without payment of costs. Reynolds v. Howell, 42 L. J., Q. B. 181 ; L. R. 8 Q. B. 398 ; 29 L. T. 208 ; 22 W. R. 18.

If the plaintiff's attorney wilfully in the bill describe the plaintiff as resident within the jurisdiction, when, in fact, he is resident out of the jurisdiction, he will be ordered to pay the costs of the motion to stay the proceedings, until security for costs be given. Knox v. O'Brien, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 62.

Acting after Authority Revoked.]—A solicitor, after the revocation of his authority, cannot take any further steps, and, if he does, will be answerable for the costs of them, as well as for the costs of any motion to restrain him from proceeding. Freeman v. Fairlie, 8 L. J., Ch. 44.

Entering Appearance.]—Where a defendant has been served with process to appear, and an attorney without authority appears for him, the court will proceed as if the attorney really had authority, unless the attorney is not solvent, in which case the court will relieve the defendant on equitable terms if he has a defence on the merits. Bailey v. Buckland, 5 D. & L. 115 ; 1 Ex. 1 ; 16 L. J., Ex. 204 ; 11 Jur. 564.

But if a plaintiff, without serving a defendant with process to appear, accepts an appearance entered for him by an unauthorised attorney and proceeds to judgment, the court will set aside the judgment with costs, and leave the plaintiff to recover by summary proceeding against the delinquent attorney those costs and the expenses to which he has been put by him. Ib.

By the deed of settlement of a banking company, it was provided that the funds or property of the company should be vested in trustees, and that it should be lawful for the directors to direct legal proceedings on behalf of the bank, and to direct the necessary parties to commence, prosecute, or defend the same ; that such parties should not release or discontinue such proceedings without the consent of the directors, and that they should be indemnified out of the property of the bank against all expenses and losses in consequence. Property was purchased by the bank, and was conveyed to H. and two others, who were then the trustees. On a bill being filed by persons claiming a beneficial interest against the three trustees, the solicitors of the bank entered an appearance for all three of them, and prepared an answer, without any express authority from, or knowledge on the part of H., who moved that the appearance for him might be cancelled or withdrawn :—Held, that the appearance had not been entered without his authority, having regard to the deed, and the fact that the suit was one in which he had no interest whatever, and the motion was refused with costs. Henrich v. Sutton, L. R. 6 Ch. 220 ; 24 L. T. 530 ; 19 W. R. 515.

A plaintiff and his sister had given a mortgage to M., a solicitor, and the bill was filed against M. and the sister to have accounts taken of what was due, and for redemption. The sister was alleged to be of unsound mind, though not found so by inquisition. The plaintiff's solicitor did not serve the bill on the sister, but, by the plaintiff's instructions, assumed to act for her, entered an appearance in her name, and obtained at the rolls the appointment of a guardian ad litem. The appearance and the appointment of a guardian were discharged by Wickens, V.-C., on evidence that the sister had sufficient capacity to authorise a solicitor to act for her, and that she had authorised M. so to act:—Held, on appeal, that whether the capacity of the sister was proved or not, the order of the vice-chancellor was right, for that the appearance and the appointment of a guardian founded on it were irregular. Camps v. Marshall, L. R. 8 Ch. 462.

Though the court will not in general, where a defendant is prejudiced by the act of an attorney in acting for him without authority, leave him to his remedy against the attorney, if solvent, that rule does not apply where the defendant is in custody by reason of the unauthorised act, or where the plaintiff or his attorney is party to the wrong. Hambidge v. De La Croúée, 3 C. B. 742.

A declaration that an attorney, wrongfully, and without the consent or retainer of the plaintiff, entered an appearance for him in an action by D. (a third party) against the plaintiff, and took upon himself to conduct the action, and such proceedings were thereupon had that D. recovered judgment and issued execution, and the plaintiff was obliged to pay the amount recovered and the costs of the execution:—Held, ill, after verdict, as not showing any damage resulting from any act of the attorney. Westaway v. Frost, 17 L. J., Q. B. 286; 12 Jur. 698.

—— For Infant Defendant.]—Where a writ of summons is served on an infant, and an appearance entered for him by a solicitor, without knowledge of his infancy and bonâ fide, and costs are subsequently incurred by the plaintiff in proceedings in the action, which became abortive by reason of the defendant's infancy:—Held, that although the appearance and defence will be set aside as irregular, the solicitor entering the appearance is not personally liable for the costs thereby occasioned to the plaintiff. Wade v. Keefe, 22 L. R., Ir. 154.

Substantive Motion.]—Want of authority to the solicitor to file a bill cannot be raised in opposition to a motion in the cause; it must be made the subject of a substantive motion to stay proceedings or to take the bill off the file; and such a motion may be made by the defendant. Bowen v. Bowen, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 251.

Application on Notice to Solicitor.]—A bill was filed by a married woman concerning her separate property, in the name of a next friend, who had died two years before the bill was filed. About fifteen months afterwards her solicitor substituted B. as her next friend, without his knowledge. A year later the bill was dismissed for want of prosecution, with costs. Notice of this motion to dismiss the bill was served on the plaintiff's agent, and by him sent by post to B., but not in time to enable him to appear on the motion. This was the first intimation that B. received of the existence of the suit. The solicitor of the married woman had become insolvent, and had absconded to America. B. moved, without serving the solicitor, personally, or by substitution, with notice of the motion, to vary the order dismissing the bill with costs, by ordering that the solicitor should pay the costs. This motion was refused, with costs. Bligh v. Tredgett, 5 De G. & Sm. 74; 21 L. J., Ch. 204; 15 Jur. 1101.

An order upon an attorney of one of the parties to pay costs incurred in proceedings in a cause, he not being a party applying to the court, is bad, if the attorney had no notice by the summons that he would be called upon to pay such costs. Wood, Ex parte, 9 L. T. 420; 12 W. R. 136.

V. TO REFUND COSTS PAID.

Where Appeal successful.]—Where, after service of notice of appeal from the judgment of a divisional court, the successful party levied his costs, and the judgment was afterwards reversed on appeal:—Held, that the party's solicitor was responsible for repayment of the costs in default of refunding by his client. Fitzmaurice v. Jordan, 32 L. R., Ir. 112—C. A.

Costs paid under a decree or order, which is afterwards reversed on appeal, must be repaid by the solicitor who received them to the person from whom they were received. Malone v. O'Connor, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 13.

When there was a decree with costs in this court, which was subsequently reversed by the lords, who directed that the bill below should be dismissed with costs, but before the appeal the plaintiff's solicitor had compelled the defendant to pay the costs below, upon receiving the plaintiff's receipt therefor; and the plaintiff had directed his solicitor to retain those costs in his possession for the purpose of defending the appeal:—Held, that the defendant could not, upon the decree of the lords, compel the solicitor of plaintiff to refund the costs so paid. Smith v. Clarke, 2 Con. & L. 160; 3 Dr. & War. 344; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 423.

An action being dismissed at the hearing with costs, a sum of money which had been paid into court as security for the defendant's costs was ordered to be paid out to the solicitors for the defendants in part payment of the defendant's costs. The judgment was reversed by the court of appeal, and the costs ordered to be paid by the defendants. The plaintiffs asked for an order against the defendant's solicitors for repayment by them:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction on the appeal to order the defendant's solicitors to refund the money, the solicitors not being present. Nor, semble, could such an order have been made if they had been served with notice of the application. Lydney and Wigpool Iron Ore Co. v. Bird, 33 Ch. D. 85; 55 L. T. 558; 34 W. R. 749—C. A.

Where a judgment, under which costs directed to be paid to the successful party have been paid to his solicitor on his behalf, is afterwards reversed on appeal, and the costs are ordered to be repaid by the party, the court will not, in the absence of an undertaking by the solicitor, order him personally to refund the costs. Fitzmaurice v. Jordan (32 L. R., Ir. 112) disapproved. Hood-Barrs v. Crossman, 66 L. J., Q. B. 357; [1897] A. C. 172; 76 L. T. 297; 45 W. R. 465—H. L. (E.)

Costs Unnecessarily Incurred.]—In 1825 an assignment from provisional assignee to assignee was prepared, but through neglect of solicitor never executed. The provisional assignment ordered to be vacated, and a new assignment executed by the commissioners. It seems the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 25, does not apply in such a case. The solicitor, having been paid for the assignment, ordered to refund. Bennett, Ex parte, Stephens, In re, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 306; 1 Deac. 70; 5 L. J., Bk. 5.

The court will not compel an attorney to refund to his client costs unnecessarily incurred, unless he has been guilty of gross negligence. Meggs v. Binns, 2 Bing. (N.C.) 625; 3 Scott, 52; 2 Hodges, 10; 5 L. J., C. P. 225.

A solicitor who, in order to gain some advantage for himself, induced his client to prosecute an appeal, which was dismissed with costs, and would not have benefited the client if it had succeeded, was ordered to repay to the client the respondent's costs, and declared not to be entitled to any costs against the client. Harbin v. Masterman, 65 L. J., Ch. 195; [1896] 1 Ch. 351; 73 L. T. 591; 44 W. R. 421—C. A.

Costs paid to Solicitor acting without Authority.]—If an attorney sues out a writ against A., at the suit of B., without any authority express or implied from B. for so doing, and A. pays the costs of such writ to the attorney, A. may recover back the amount of those costs, by an action for money had and received against the attorney; but if the attorney had any authority, either express or implied, from B. to sue out the writ, such action for money had and received will not lie against the attorney, even though B. had no cause of action against A. Dupen v. Keeling, 4 Car. & P. 102.

Payment Necessary.]—Where a declaration alleged that an attorney improperly conducted certain actions, whereby the plaintiff was compelled to pay a sum of money for debts and costs, and also paid and became subject to divers costs:—Held, that he could only recover sums actually paid and not those also for which he was liable; and that a sum which had been levied by an execution against his goods was an actual payment. Jones v. Lewis, 9 D. P. C. 143; 5 Jur. 194. S. P., Pritchet v. Boevey, 1 C. & M. 775; 3 Tyr. 949; 2 L. J., Ex. 251.

VI. IMPROPER PROCEEDINGS AND MISCONDUCT.

Petition—Writ.]—Costs against solicitor for improper petition. Williamson, Ex parte, Mont. & Bli. 226; 2 L. J., Bk. 48.

Where a bankrupt presented an unnecessary petition, his solicitor was ordered to pay 40*s.* costs. Parker, Ex parte, Buck. 313.

Though an attorney, by signing his name in conformity with the general order, is not to be considered as guaranteeing the success of a petition in bankruptcy, yet where it appears to have arisen out of his interested views, he will be made to pay the costs of it. Cuthbert, Ex parte, 1 Madd. 78.

The petition dismissed, and the costs directed to come out of the solicitor's pocket who took the affidavits. Hogan, In re, 3 Atk. 813.

Semble, if a bill be dismissed at the hearing, with costs, and the plaintiff be then out of the jurisdiction, and the plaintiff's suit be so frivolous and vexatious that the bill could not have been filed bonâ fide in expectation of a favourable decree, or if the solicitor of the plaintiff guarantee his client against the costs of the suit, the court, upon the petition of the defendants, will compel the solicitor of the plaintiff to pay the taxed costs. Cockle v. Whiting, 1 Russ. & M. 43.

In a writ of summons it is necessary to state truly the residence of the plaintiff; the business address of the plaintiff is not enough. Where a solicitor had given the business address of the plaintiff in Finsbury, but the plaintiff really lived and carried on business in Vienna and only came over to England occasionally, the solicitor was ordered to indemnify the defendant against the costs of the action and to pay the costs of the application. Karpeles v. Friedlander, 53 J. P. 264.

Appearance.]—Solicitor ordered to pay all the costs occasioned by his refusing to appear for defendant at the hearing, pursuant to his undertaking, and the costs of the application. Cook v. Broomhead, 16 Ves. 133.

Bad Pleas.]—False plea, put in for delay, ordered to be taken off the file, with costs to be paid by the solicitor. Aubrey v. Aspinall, Jac. 441.

Where a sham plea was calculated to raise issues requiring different modes of trial, the court suffered the plaintiff to sign judgment as for want of a plea, and made the defendant or his attorney pay the costs occasioned by the plea, and the costs of the rule for correcting the proceedings. Thomas v. Vandermoolen, 2 B. & Ald. 197; 20 R. R. 404. S. P., Bones v. Punter, 2 B. & Ald. 777; 1 Chit. 564.

Solicitor to Trustee in Bankruptcy.]—The right of the solicitor to a trustee in bankruptcy to be paid his costs out of the bankrupt's estate is only the right of his client, the trustee; he has no independent right. If either the trustee or the solicitor has been guilty of misconduct, the court can refuse to allow the solicitor's costs to be paid out of the estate, and this notwithstanding that the costs have been taxed and an allocatur has been made by the taxing-master. Harper, Ex parte, Pooley, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 810; 20 Ch. D. 685; 47 L. T. 177; 30 W. R. 650—C. A.

Omission to keep Accounts.]—A solicitor acted as receiver of rents on behalf of his client, the accounts by him in that character being settled periodically. He was also engaged on various occasions in raising money for his client by means of mortgages, and his bills of costs with respect to these transactions were generally settled by means of deductions from what he received for the client on the completion of each transaction. He was also employed in the transaction of general professional business for his client. The rent account was treated as an entirely separate matter from the account for general business, and in 1854 a settlement of the general account was come to, on which occasion the client paid the solicitor upwards of 1,000*l.* The solicitor kept no proper accounts of sums received by him on behalf of his client. Upon the solicitor's death in 1859 his executors sent in a further bill of costs against the client for general business:—Held, that the omission to keep accounts was not a reason for depriving the solicitor of his proper taxed costs for the business done. Lee, In re, L. R. 4 Ch. 43; 19 L. T. 435; 17 W. R. 108.

Action by Trustee.]—The solicitor of a party beneficially interested, using the name of a mere trustee, in litigating a question of interest to his client, is bound to put such mere trustee on his guard, as to his responsibility for damages or costs, and, by neglecting to do so, may render himself responsible in default of his principal, without giving any undertaking, or being guilty of any misconduct. Scallan, Ex parte, 1 Moll. 63.

Office Copies.]—It is the duty of solicitors not to take office copies without being authenticated; and where the copy of depositions proved to be very incorrect, but was taken and paid for before it was compared or attested, the solicitor was ordered to pay the costs of the day. Morgan v. Roe, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 21.

Carrying out Decree.]—A solicitor having exhibited gross neglect in not carrying out a decree of the court, he was ordered to pay the costs of the master's report, together with the costs of the application and order consequent thereon. Ridley v. Tiplady, 20 Beav. 44; 24 L. J., Ch. 207; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 249; 3 W. R. 276.

Order made on wrong Statement.]—When persons, even without mala fides, make or adopt a statement, the contrary of which they ought to have known by reasonable diligence to be the truth, and a wrongful order is made by the court grounded on such statement, all such persons are liable to indemnify the persons who suffer through such an order from all the consequences. The primary liability in respect of costs falls upon the solicitor, through whose agency the order was obtained, and the primary liability as to the fund lost through the order falls upon those who wrongfully received it. Spencer, In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 841; 21 L. T. 808; 18 W. R. 240.

Instructions—Delivery of Papers.]—A bill having been dismissed with costs, owing to the plaintiff's solicitor having neglected to instruct counsel or deliver papers, the cause was, on motion supported by affidavit, under the circumstances ordered to be restored upon payment of costs by the plaintiff's solicitor. Birch v. Williams, 24 W. R. 700.

If a cause, which is meant to be defended, is called on, and tried as an undefended cause, in consequence of the defendant's attorney neglecting to deliver his briefs, the court will grant a new trial, compelling the attorney to pay the costs, as between attorney and client, out of his own pocket. De Bonfigny v. Peale, 3 Taunt. 484; 12 R. R. 687.

Plaintiff's solicitor ordered personally to pay costs of the day for default in supplying documents, and the claim ordered to be struck out of the paper. Somerville v. Jamieson, 1 W. R. 123.

Upon solicitor's appearing to be guilty of a gross neglect, the court will order him to pay the costs. Fawkes v. Pratt, 1 P. Wms. 593.

Solicitor to fiat must bear any expense which his neglect would cause the estate. Bennett, Ex parte, Stephens, In re, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 308; 1 Deac. 70.

Neglect.]—The master having reported, under the provisions of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, that he was unable to proceed with an order of reference, by reason of the neglect of the parties to attend his summons, and the neglect having been occasioned by the solicitor of the plaintiff, the court directed the reference should be proceeded with in chambers: and the client undertaking not to bring an action against the solicitor in respect of the conduct of the suit, it also ordered the solicitor to pay the costs of the master's certificate, and of the subsequent proceedings. Ridley v. Tiplady, 20 Beav. 44; 24 L. J., Ch. 207; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 249; 3 W. R. 276.

Client found Lunatic.]—A solicitor who was aware that a petition in lunacy against his client was pending, obtained on her behalf an order ex parte without disclosing the fact. He believed her to be sane, but she was subsequently found to be of unsound mind. Upon the order being discharged:—Held, that he had not been guilty of such professional misconduct as to make him liable for the costs. Armstrong and Sons, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 258; [1896] 1 Ch. 536; 74 L. T. 134; 44 W. R. 281.

Unnecessary Proceedings.]—If a solicitor institutes unnecessary proceedings, the court will take care that the client shall not suffer by the course adopted. Wood v. Wood, 4 Russ. 558.

The solicitor for some of the defendants was agent for the rest; the former were entitled to move to dismiss, and they moved accordingly; but no order could be made, as the time for the other defendants to answer the amendments had not expired. Motion refused, with costs, as the solicitor must have known that the motion could not succeed. Partington v. Baillie, 5 Sim. 667; 4 L. J., Ch. 40.

Where time is applied for, to send an affidavit of justification into the country to amend a mistake in the jurat, the court will make the attorney pay the costs of the application. Shilletoe's Bail, 9 D. & R. 6.

Where an attorney, knowing that bail were insufficient, caused them to be put in, and gave notice of justification, the court compelled him to pay the costs of the opposition. Blundell v. Blundell, 1 D. & R. 142; 5 B. & Ald. 533.

Upon a taxation, a solicitor put in an insufficient examination. He was ordered, on motion, to pay the costs occasioned thereby, and of the four-day order and of the application. Bainbrigge, In re, 11 Beav. 620.

Where an amendment was refused at the trial by reason of the wilful misrepresentation of the plaintiff's attorney, the attorney was ordered to pay the costs of a rule absolute for a new trial. Williams v. Jones, 4 W. R. 99.

Correcting Error.]—Order being rendered nugatory by mistake in the title of the cause, the solicitor was ordered to pay the costs of motion to rectify the mistake. Black v. Creighton, 2 Moll. 552.

Mistake arising from the negligence of clerk or solicitor allowed to be rectified, the order on the motion to amend, providing that the costs should not be charged against the client or fund. Caledon (Lord) v. Every, 1 Moll. 224.

In drawing up a decree, the word "inquiry" was erroneously inserted for the word "sale." It became necessary for the defendant to make an application to correct the error:—Held, that the solicitor of the defendant must bear the costs. Bolton, In re, 9 Beav. 272; 10 Jur. 22.

A solicitor was ordered to pay the costs of an application rendered necessary by his own delay and mistake. White v. Hillacre, 3 Y. & Coll. 278; 8 L. J., Ex. Eq. 65.

A plaintiff's solicitor held personally liable to the costs of a reference to the master, to inquire and report whether a purchaser was entitled to any and what compensation, by reason of a misdescription in the rental, caused by his neglect in not examining the tenants' leases lodged in the master's office. Taylor v. Gorman, Fl. & K. 567; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 550.

If the solicitor upon whom the subpœna to hear judgment is served refuses to indorse on the original an admission of the service thereof, he will be ordered to pay the costs rendered necessary by such refusal. Ross v. Wood, 2 Dr. & Wal. 490.

Non-attendance in Court.]—Plaintiff's solicitor ordered to pay the costs of the day, in consequence of his non-attendance in court when the cause was called on. Courtney v. Stock, 2 Dr. & War. 251; 1 Con. & L. 366.

Where a plaintiff was nonsuited through the neglect of the attorney's clerk to attend in court, the court refused to set aside the nonsuit, except upon the terms of the attorney paying the costs occasioned by the defendant's attending to try. White v. Sandell, 3 D. P. C. 798.

A plaintiff sued a solicitor who appeared in person. The defendant took out a summons to dismiss the action for want of prosecution, but did not attend the summons personally, being represented by his clerk. The plaintiff's solicitor contended that the defendant must himself attend, but the chief clerk overruled the objection; at the request of the plaintiff's solicitor he adjourned the summons to the judge upon this point. The defendant attended before the judge, but the plaintiff's solicitor did not attend, and the judge dismissed the application with costs and ordered the plaintiff's solicitor personally to pay the costs of the defendant's attendance. On motion to vary so much of the order as directed, the solicitor to pay the costs personally:—Held, that Ord. LXV. r. 5, empowered the judge to make the order and that the order was right. Barnard v. Scoles, 37 W. R. 668.

Issuing Execution.]—When, under an order for the payment of costs in chancery, a writ of fieri facias had been issued and executed by the sheriff, the court refused to set aside the writ; but, believing it had been issued in bad faith, ordered the solicitor who had taken it out to pay all charges attending its issue and execution, and also the costs of a motion for that purpose. Commonwealth Land, Building, Estate and Auction Co., In re, Hollington, Ex parte, 43 L. J., Ch. 99; 29 L. T. 502; 22 W. R. 106.

A solicitor has authority to enter into an undertaking on behalf of his client, not to issue a writ of fieri facias against the client's debtor, in consideration of the acceleration of payment of the debt. Ib.

A breach of such an undertaking, by the issue of writs against the debtor, was held to be contrary to good faith, and the solicitor was ordered to pay the expenses of issuing such writs, and of an application to recover them. Ib.

Connection with Proceedings.]—The court of chancery will not order the costs of proceedings to be paid personally by the solicitor conducting them, on account of any misconduct unconnected with those proceedings. Gregg, In re, and Prance, In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 107; L. R. 9 Eq. 137; 23 L. T. 234; 18 W. R. 589.

Deed improperly Prepared.]—The court of chancery will, in a proper case, order a solicitor to pay the costs of litigation occasioned by deeds improperly prepared by him. Baker v. Loader, 42 L. J., Ch. 113; L. R. 16 Eq. 49; 21 W. R. 167.

A solicitor may be guilty of such negligence in respect to a deed settled in chambers as to make him liable to his client, notwithstanding that the deed professes to be a deed settled by the court. Stanford v. Roberts, 53 L. J., Ch. 338; 26 Ch. D. 155; 50 L. T. 147; 32 W. R. 404; 48 J. P. 692.

In the absence of fraud the court has no jurisdiction to order a solicitor who has made a mistake in the preparation of a document to pay the costs of a suit for its rectification. Clark v. Girdwood, 47 L. J., Ch. 116; 7 Ch. D. 9; 37 L. T. 614; 26 W. R. 90.

An order was made by the court, in 1858, for the sale by private contract of lands, and an application was made by an illiterate person to the vendor's solicitor, who had the conduct of the sale, to become the purchaser of part of the premises, and a conditional contract was entered into, whereby the vendors agreed to sell and the purchaser to buy the premises. The purchaser also agreed, at his own expense, to obtain an order of the court confirming the sale, and in default that the vendors might obtain such an order at the purchaser's expense. On the same day the purchaser gave a written retainer to the vendor's solicitor to act as his attorney. The purchaser was a marksman, and both the above instruments were witnessed by the same solicitor. Afterwards an order was obtained confirming the purchase, and ordering payment of the money into court. The purchaser, after the contract, finding that a good title could not be made, failed to pay the purchase-money, whereupon another order was obtained for payment, in default of which the purchaser was attached and committed to prison. On motion to set aside the attachment, the vendors and their solicitor opposed the application; but the court ordered the attachment to be set aside and the prisoner to be discharged, the agreement to be delivered up and cancelled, and the costs of the prisoner throughout the proceedings, and of all parties on the motion, to be paid by the solicitor. Bromage v. Davies, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 683.

An attorney saying he only followed directions in drawing deeds, under fraudulent circumstances, will not excuse him from paying costs. Bennett v. Vade, 2 Atk. 328.

A solicitor, assisting his client in obtaining a fraudulent release, is properly made a party, and liable to costs, if the principal be not solvent. Bowles v. Stewart, 1 Sch. & Lef. 227.

Scandalous Matter.] — Where unfounded charges of corruption were brought against commissioners by a petitioner, who appeared to be the tool of other parties, the court ordered the commissioners their "costs, charges, and expenses," and suspended the order until the attorney for the petitioner should show cause why he should not personally pay the costs. Williams, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 103.

Solicitor having inserted scandalous matter in an answer, and put counsel's name thereto without authority, committed, and ordered to pay costs. Bishop v. Willis, 5 Beav. 83, n.

The attorney for the defendant having been examined as their witness, and having made certain scandalous and impertinent statements in his deposition in reply to the last interrogatory, was compelled to pay the costs of expunging it. Gude v. Mumford, 2 Y. & Col. 446; 1 Jur. 577.

Where an affidavit is reported to be scandalous, the agent in London who files the affidavit is responsible for the costs as between attorney and client, notwithstanding the country attorney may have himself drawn the affidavit. Wake, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 246; Mont. & Bli. 259; 2 L. J., Bk. 38.

Unreasonable Proceedings.]—Where accounts are being taken in chambers, before the chief clerk, either party has a right to have an item which has been found against him adjourned before the judge without taking out a summons for that purpose. And where a question of principle is involved in a particular item it may be necessary to do this. But the ordinary practice is to wait till the account is completed, and then take the adjournment once for all before the judge. If a solicitor were to insist upon his right to take particular items before the judge in an unreasonable manner, the court might make him pay the costs personally. Upton v. Browne, 20 Ch. D. 731; 47 L. T. 289; 30 W. R. 817.

—— Notice of Appeal.]—A former solicitor of the plaintiff in an action, who was suing in formâ pauperis, served notice of appeal on all the defendants who had been successful in the court below. These respondents appeared by counsel on the hearing of the appeal, but no relief was then asked as against one of them. He had not been previously informed that the appeal would not be pressed against him, and had incurred expense in preparing to resist the appeal:—Held, that it was a proper case for giving leave to the respondent to serve the solicitor with a notice of motion for an order to show cause why he should not pay the costs incurred by serving notice of appeal without good cause. Martinson v. Clowes, 52 L. T. 706; 33 W. R. 555—C. A.

Improper Proceedings.] — Where a solicitor commenced interpleader proceedings which were not warranted by the facts, the solicitor was ordered to pay the costs. Cook v. Rosslyn, 3 Giff. 175; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1070; 5 L. T. 133.

An amendment was refused at the trial by reason of the wilful misrepresentation of the plaintiff's solicitor. The court held that the amendment ought to have been made, and granted a new trial, but ordered the solicitor to pay the costs of the rule. Williams v. Jones, 4 W. R. 99.

Irregular Proceedings.]—The court will not, on a summary application, order an attorney to pay the costs of setting aside proceedings for irregularity, even where he has admitted that it was owing to his error, and has promised to pay, unless there is clear evidence of the nature of the negligence, and that it was gross. Dickenson v. Jacobs, 5 L. T. 757; 10 W. R. 303.

A pauper's solicitor will be ordered to pay the costs of any irregular proceeding. Brown v. Dawson, 2 Hog. 76.

When in notice of motion on behalf of feme covert, no prochein ami is named, her solicitor will be liable for costs awarded against her. Cox v. M'Namara, 1 Hog. 78.

Where a motion is made on behalf of a married woman, without a next friend being named, the court has jurisdiction to make the solicitor who gave the instructions for the motion pay the costs of it. Pearse v. Cole, 16 Jur. 214.

If a bill is ordered to be taken off the file, on the ground that the plaintiffs assume to sue in a corporate character, to which they are not entitled, the costs will be ordered to be paid by the town agent of the plaintiffs, and not by their solicitor in the country. Ruthin Corporation v. Adams, 7 Sim. 345; 4 L. J., Ch. 168, n.

Inadvertence.]—An attorney is not to lose the amount of his bill on account of any error in the execution of his duty, which a cautious man might fall into; but if the charges contained in his bill are brought upon his client by inadvertence, he cannot recover them in action. Montriou v. Jefferys, 2 Car. & P. 113; R. & M. 317.

Before Payment by Client.]—A plaintiff who has been made liable to the costs of the day, by the negligence of his attorney, cannot compel the attorney to pay him those costs, unless he (the plaintiff) has first paid them to the defendant. Layton v. Wood, 3 Jur. 124.

Liability of Solicitor's Executor.]—A. verbally agreed with B., his solicitor, for the sale of land to B. This agreement, which was never reduced to writing, provided that B. should bear all expenses of making out the title, that possession should be at once given, and that the purchase-money should be paid at a fixed future date, with interest in the meantime. B. entered into possession, but took no further steps in the completion of the purchase, and before the purchase-money became due, died. In a suit by A. for specific performance against the executor of B.:—Held, that B. as A.'s solicitor, ought to have had an agreement in writing prepared, and that the executor was bound to complete the purchase and pay the costs of the suit. Brafield v. Scriven, 22 W. R. 202.

Liability of Partnership.]—A mortgagee of an estate, with knowledge that there were registered judgments against the mortgagor, sold the estate, and with the advice of his solicitor, after deducting the amount due on the mortgage, paid the balance to the mortgagor, who was at that time indebted to the solicitor. The judgment creditors having recovered against the mortgagee, he obtained a degree against the partners of the solicitor (who was then dead) and against the executors of the deceased partner for the amount and costs:—Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to sue in equity. Rew v. Lane, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 125; 5 W. R. 110.

Notice of Application.]—If it is intended to ask as part of an order that costs be paid by the plaintiff's attorney, on the ground of alleged misconduct on his part, it is necessary to give distinct notice in the summons of the intention to make such application; and if a judge without any such notice to the attorney, orders the attorney to pay costs, that part of the order will be set aside. Rouch v. Alberty, 33 L. J., Q. B. 127; 9 L. T. 420; 12 W. R. 136.

The application will not be granted unless the solicitor receives proper notice of the charges against him. Gregg, In re, and Prance, In re, supra.

Order to Pay—Appeal without Leave.]—An order that the costs of an application at chambers on behalf of a client shall be paid by the solicitor personally cannot be costs left to the discretion of the court within s. 49 of the Judicature Act, 1873, unless the solicitor has been guilty of misconduct or negligence, and, therefore, an appeal lies from such order without leave as to whether there has been such misconduct or negligence. Bradford, In re, 53 L. J., Q. B. 65; 15 Q. B. D. 635; 50 L. T. 170; 32 W. R. 238—C. A.

Repayment to Client of Costs payable to other Side.]—Where a legatee's solicitor, after a distinct refusal by trustees of the will to give information as to the state of the trust fund, had at once, by a very hostile summons, sought to compel them to furnish it:—Held, that undue haste in taking proceedings to enforce a right was not sufficient ground for ordering a solicitor, under Ord. LXV. r. 11, to repay to his client the costs (if any) payable by the client to the other side; but that, both parties being in the wrong, there ought, as between party and party, to be no costs of the summons or of the appeal, and as between solicitor and client the costs of the legatee's solicitor ought to be disallowed. Dartnall, In re, Sawyer v. Goddard, 64 L. J., Ch. 341; [1895] 1 Ch. 474; 12 R. 237; 72 L. T. 404; 43 W. R. 644—C. A.

VII. FOR NEGLIGENCE.

What Skill and Diligence required.]—Every person who enters into a learned profession undertakes to bring to the exercise of it a reasonable degree of care and skill; he does not, if he is an attorney, undertake at all events to gain the cause. Lamphier v. Phipos, 8 Car. & P. 475.

An attorney is only responsible in damages to his client for gross ignorance or gross negligence in the performance of his professional services. Purves v. Landell, 12 Cl. & F. 91.

In undertaking a client's business, an attorney undertakes, on his own part, for the existence and the due employment of skill and diligence; where an injury is sustained by his client, in consequence of the absence of either, he is responsible to his client for such injury. Hart v. Frame, 6 Cl. & F. 193; Macl. & R. 595; 3 Jur. 547.

The question of negligence in not complying with the practice of the courts is a question of fact for the jury under the judge's direction as to the law. Hunter v. Caldwell, 10 Q. B. 83; 12 Jur. 285—Ex. Ch. Affirming 16 L. J., Q. B. 274.

In order that a solicitor may be liable for negligence it must be shown that he has been guilty of gross and not of ordinary negligence. Elkington v. Holland, 9 M. & W. 659; 1 D. (N.S.) 643; 11 L. J., Ex. 273. See Nash v. Swinburne, 3 Man. & G. 630; 4 Scott, 326; 1 D. (N.S.) 190; 11 L. J., C. P. 56.

It is not every mistake or misapprehension of an attorney that will make him liable to an action for negligence. The question in such an action is, whether the attorney has used reasonable skill and reasonable care. Shillcock v. Passman, 7 Car. & P. 289.

An attorney is bound, under pain of being made responsible in an action, to bring a fair and reasonable amount of care and skill to the performance of his professional duty. Parker v. Rolls, 14 C. B. 691.

Although relief may be given at the suit of a client against his solicitor for loss sustained by gross negligence, yet where the loss was in respect of a matter of conduct as to which the advice of the solicitor was founded on the opinions of competent surveyors as to the value of the property, and those opinions submitted to the judgment of the client, the court dismissed the bill. Chapman v. Chapman, L. R. 9 Eq. 276; 22 L. T. 145; 18 W. R. 533.

In an action against an attorney, the declaration alleging that the plaintiff's wife filed a petition against him in the divorce court for a judicial separation, on the ground of cruelty; that he employed the defendant as his attorney in the suit, and that he had a good defence in it, but was willing to consent to a decree for a judicial separation, provided that, if he did so, no evidence upon the charges contained in the petition should be taken; and that the defendant, knowing the premises, negligently advised him not to defend the suit, and induced him to give such consent, and not to attend the hearing with any evidence in support of his defence; but that evidence was taken whereby, it being unanswered, his character had been greatly injured; the plaintiff's case being, that he was induced not to defend, on the assurance that evidence would not be taken:—Held, that he could not complain of the advice given unless it was given upon that specific ground (which it was not disputed would have involved gross ignorance on the part of the defendant). Hill v. Finney, 4 F. & F. 616.

When cause of Action arises.]—In an action on the case against an attorney for negligence, the court held that the cause of action arose at the time the negligence occurred, and not at the time negligence was discovered, or the consequential damages ensued. Smith v. Fox, 6 Hare, 386; 17 L. J., Ch. 170; 12 Jur. 130. S. P., Wood v. Jones, 61 L. T. 551.

Trust property was transferred to new trustees in July, 1875. The solicitor employed in the transaction did not give certain notices necessary to perfect the title of the new trustees; and in April, 1879, a subsequent mortgagee of the property obtained priority over the trustees by giving notice of his charge:—Held, that there was no complete cause of action against the solicitor in respect of negligence till April, 1879, from which date the Statute of Limitations therefore ran. Bean v. Wade, 1 Cab. & E. 519.

Double Retainer—Conflicting Interests.]—A. employed B. as his solicitor in an action against C. The learned judge on the trial reserved his judgment, intimating that there would certainly be a verdict for A. as regarded part of his claim, but as to the balance he would consider the matter. In the interval and before judgment actually given, D., a former client of B.'s, consulted him professionally whether he could safely leave in C.'s possession property bought by him of C., which was nearly all C.'s property, and on B.'s advice a bill of sale was executed by C. in D.'s favour. When judgment was given, C. filed a petition for liquidation of his affairs, and in consequence of the bill of sale A. only received a dividend under the liquidation proceedings on his judgment:—Held, that there was a right of action on the ground of negligence if B. acted in ignorance of his duty; or on the ground of misconduct and breach of duty if he were aware of it. Barber v. Stone, 50 L. J., Q. B. 297.

Omitting to give Notice to Trustees.]—A., an attorney employed by B. to invest money, lent it to C. on an agreement, by which C. as a security charged his interest in consols standing in the names of trustees for C. A. neglected to give notice to the trustees. A judgment creditor of C. subsequently to this loan obtained a charging order under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 14, notice of which was given to the trustees. C. obtained the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act. B. brought an action against A. for negligence; the judge directed the jury, in estimating the damages, to consider that as no notice had been given to C.'s trustees of the charge created by B., the subsequent charge created by the judge's order had priority over it:—Held, that the direction was correct, and that the judgment creditor had the same rights as a subsequent incumbrancer without notice, and was therefore to be preferred in equity to it. Watts v. Porter, 3 El. & Bl. 743; 2 C. L. R. 1553; 23 L. J., Q. B. 345: 1 Jur. (N.S.) 133.

Omitting to make Agreement by Deed.]—Semble, that an attorney who receives instructions to prepare a security for the payment of an annuity to a woman in consequence of past cohabitation, is guilty of negligence if he does it by a mere agreement only not under seal. Parker v. Rolls, 14 C. B. 691.

Effect of Will—Fine.]—A solicitor's alleged ignorance of the effect of a fine on a will of the lands comprised in it, and his omission to inquire whether the conusor, his client, had made a will, is such professional ignorance and neglect as afforded a principle by which a court of equity might independent of the ground of fraud, hold him to be a trustee for a third person, of any benefit resulting to himself, from his professional ignorance or neglect, to the prejudice of that person. Bulkley v. Wilford, 2 Cl. & F. 102; 8 Bli. (N.S.) 11.

When Acting in Accordance with Opinion of Counsel.] — An agreement was entered into between A. and B. B. died, and administration to his effects was granted to C., his daughter. D., who was a friend of C., employed the same attorney who had prepared the original agreement to prepare another between him and C., by which he was authorised to bring an action against A., on the original agreement in C.'s name, and also instructed the attorney to bring such action. The action was brought, and after argument on demurrer, the original agreement was declared void, on the ground of champerty. But it appeared that the attorney, in preparing such original agreement, had consulted a conveyancer, who gave it as his opinion that the agreement was valid:—Held, that the attorney was entitled under the circumstances, to recover from D., his employer, the costs of preparing the second agreement, and also those of bringing the action upon the first. Potts v. Sparrow, 6 Car. & P. 749.

Preparing Deeds.]—A trader having petitioned the court of bankruptcy under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 211, an order was made that his estate should be received and possessed by the official assignee, and be taken possession of by the messenger. One of the creditors employed an attorney to prepare an assignment of his effects for the benefit of the general body, informing him that all would concur therein. The assent of all the creditors not having been obtained the assignment became unavailing:—Held, that the attorney was not guilty of gross ignorance or gross negligence in preparing the assignment under such circumstances. Lewis v. Collard, 14 C. B. 208; 2 C. L. R. 1345; 23 L. J., C. P. 32; 2 W. R. 105.

Preparing a warrant of attorney from two, without inserting words to guard against the possibility of one of them dying before judgment does not constitute negligence sufficient to base an action. Kettle v. Wood, 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 173.

Where an attorney omitted to insert a defeasance in a warrant of attorney:—Held, that the attorney was guilty of a breach of the duty imposed on him by the court, and was answerable on motion. Shaw v. Evans, 14 East, 576.

Mixing Client's Money.]—If an attorney pays into his banker's hands money of his client, mixing it with his own, and the bankers fail, the attorney is liable to make good the loss. Robinson v. Ward, 2 Car. & P. 59; R. & M. 274.

Mistake upon Points of Law.]—An attorney is not liable for the consequence of a mistake in a point of law upon which a reasonable doubt may be entertained. Kemp v. Burt, 1 N. & M. 262; 4 B. & Ad. 424; 2 L. J., K. B. 69.

A mere error in judgment, or a mistake upon a point of law, or in the construction of a difficult act of parliament is not such negligence as renders an attorney liable to his client for a loss sustained in consequence of such error or mistake; in such cases regard must be had to all the circumstances of the transaction, and if they are such as show gross or culpable neglect on the part of the attorney, he will be responsible. Crosbie v. Murphy, 8 Ir. C. L. R. 301.

A solicitor was retained by a debtor to prepare a composition deed, the first trust of which was the payment of the costs of preparing the deed. The trustees accepted the trusts, and acted upon the deed. It was afterwards discovered, according to a case decided before the deed was prepared, that the deed was invalid, as not binding non-assenting creditors. The debtor was subsequently made bankrupt. The trustees refused to pay the solicitor's bill of costs on the ground of gross negligence; but the objection was overruled. Sadd, In re, 34 Beav. 650; 34 L. J., Ch. 562; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 774; 12 L. T. 816; 13 W. R. 1009.

Where an attorney, being employed by masters to take proceedings against apprentices for misconduct, did so specifically on a wrong section of a statute:—Held, such an instance of want of skill and diligence as to render him liable to repay to his clients all damages and costs occasioned by his error. Hart v. Frame, 6 Cl. & F. 193; Macl. & R. 595; 3 Jur. 547.

Instituting Proceedings in Improper Court.]—If an attorney brings an action within a court of limited jurisdiction, knowing that the circumstances which gave the right of action arose out of the jurisdiction of such court, he is guilty of negligence, and liable in damages. Williams v. Gibbs, 6 N. & M. 788; 5 A. & E. 208; 2 H. & W. 241.

An attorney, before he takes upon himself to sue out a writ in a court of peculiar constitution, is bound to ascertain that the court has machinery to carry out the object of the action. Cox v. Leech, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 617; 26 L. J., C. P. 125; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 442; 5 W. R. 199.

Though, when an attorney is employed to recover a small debt, he is liable to his client for unnecessarily and improperly suing in a superior court (unless, with a knowledge of the consequences, his client instructs him so to do), yet his liability will depend upon whether from his client's instructions he might reasonably suppose that he would recover, and desired to sue for, a sum which would carry costs, or that, from the circumstances and the nature of the question, a judge would certify for costs; and if he might reasonably so have supposed he will not be liable, even though his client, failing to recover in the superior court, became subject to the costs of suit in that court. Lee v. Dixon, 3 F. & F. 744.

The plaintiff, who was acting as solicitor for the defendants, was instructed by them to commence proceedings against the owner of certain premises to recover the amount due from him as the frontager in respect of the expenses of repairing a road upon which his premises abut'ed. The proceedings might have been instituted in the county court, but the plaintiff commenced them in the chancery court of the county palatine of Lancaster. The action was dismissed by the vice-chancellor, and the present defendants refused to pay the plaintiff's costs, upon the ground that he had been guilty of negligence in not commencing the action in the county court:—Held, that as the vice-chancellor of the county palatine had no jurisdiction to inflict any penalty as to costs upon a plaintiff for bringing in the county palatine court an action which might have been brought in the county court, the plaintiff had not been guilty of actionable negligence in not advising that the proceedings should be commenced in the county court. Barker v. Fleetwood Improvement Commissioners, 62 L. T. 831; 54 J. P. 711.

Not Attending to Conduct of Cause.]—Where a plaintiff employed the defendant (an attorney) to conduct an ejectment for the recovery of premises forfeited to him by the tenant's breach of covenant to repair, and it was referred to an arbitrator, who was to decide what repairs were necessary, but the attorney neglected to attend him, whereby the plaintiff was obliged to pay the defendant's costs incurred in the ejectment, instead of the tenant:—Held, that an action was maintainable. Swannell v. Ellis, 8 Moore, 340; 1 Bing. 347; 2 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 8.

In Procuring Evidence.]—Where a plaintiff's attorney suffered a cause to be called on for trial, without having ascertained whether a material witness, whom the plaintiff had undertaken to bring into court, had arrived, in consequence of which he was nonsuited:—Held, that in an action against such attorney for negligence, it was rightly left to the jury to determine whether he had used reasonable care in conducting the cause, and the jury having found that he had not, the court refused to disturb the verdict. Reece v. Rigby, 4 B. & Ald. 202; 23 R. R. 251.

A solicitor, who procures certain evidence to prove facts acting under counsel's advice, is not liable for negligence if such evidence is rejected at the trial. Godefroy v. Dalton, 6 Bing. 460; 4 M. & P. 149; 8 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 79; 31 R. R. 467.

A solicitor who does not serve his client's father with a subpœna, but tells the client that his father must attend the trial is not liable to an action for negligence. Price v. Bullen, 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 39; 26 R. R. 645.

An attorney employed to conduct an action in which certain measurements were material, employing a surveyor to make them, who was given to drinking, and not ascertaining before the trial that he had made the measurements, in consequence of which there was a nonsuit:—Held, that there was evidence of negligence. Mercer v. King, 1 F. & F. 490.

Not Registering a Lis pendens.]—In an action against a solicitor for negligence, the declaration stated that his client was equitably interested in four tenth parts of the lease of a colliery, that the lessee had entered into negotiations for the sale of the lease to a company, and that the client retained him, as solicitor, to file a bill in chancery against the lessee and the company for the purpose of enforcing his claim in respect of his shares, and praying that the lessee might convey and secure to him four-tenths of the purchase money, and that the company might be decreed to do all matters necessary to confirm such conveyance and security, and might be enjoined from paying his proportion of the purchase money to the lessee. Breach, that the solicitor did not register the bill as a lis pendens, according to 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, s. 7, whereby the lessee was enabled to dispose of the lease to another company, and to receive the purchase money, and the client was deprived of his share in it:—Held, that the declaration was good, as the bill in chancery, which prayed for an equitable lien against the intended purchasers of the lease was a lis pendens, which ought to have been registered under the statute, and that, having regard to the terms of the bill, it was the duty of the solicitor to have registered it, without any express request on the part of his client. Plant v. Pearman, 41 L. J., Q. B. 169; 26 L. T. 313; 20 W. R. 314.

In Filing Writs.] — A declaration that the plaintiffs employed the defendant as attorney to sue H. for the recovery of a debt; and thereupon it was his duty to use proper care in conducting the suit; yet he did not use proper care in this, that having sued out writs for the recovery of the money and for saving the Statute of Limitations, he did not, upon H. not being found so as to be served, duly file the writs with a proper officer, according to the practice of the court, whereby the action was barred by the statute:—Held, first, that although the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 39, s. 10, did not in terms require such writs to be filed, yet the word "file" in the declaration might have the sense of bringing the writs to the office, and in that sense would be included in the word "returned" in the statute, and such filing would, therefore, be a necessary part of the practice in saving the Statute of Limitations, and a part of the attorney's duty. Hunter v. Caldwell, 10 Q. B. 69; 16 L. J., Q. B. 274; 11 Jur. 770. Affirmed, 10 Q. B. 83; 12 Jur. 285—Ex. Ch.

Not Indorsing Time of Service.]—An attorney retained to bring an action, and not the person employed as process server, is liable to be sued by the client for damage caused through neglect in omitting to make the indorsement of service. Curlewis v. Broad, 1 H. & C. 322; 31 L. J., Ex. 473; 10 W. R. 797.

Omitting properly to instruct Counsel.]—An attorney in a cause is not answerable for the absence, neglect, or want of attention of the counsel engaged in it. Lowry v. Guilford, 5 Car. & P. 234.

A plaintiff's attorney having without reasonable excuse neglected to instruct counsel, or to appear at the assizes when the cause was called on, in consequence of which the plaintiff was nonsuited, the court granted a new trial only upon the terms of the attorney paying the costs of the day out of his own pocket. Townley v. Jones, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 289 ; 29 L. J., C. P. 299 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1159.

No action lies against an attorney for negligence in the conduct of a cause at nisi prius upon matters within the province of counsel, or for omitting to move for a new trial without instructions so to do. Fray v. Foster, 1 F. & F. 681.

In an action against an attorney for neglecting to instruct counsel to appear for the plaintiff in an action brought by the latter against a third party, he pleaded that he did not neglect to instruct counsel to appear. When the cause was called on for trial, the counsel for the plaintiff rose with a brief, called his attorney, who was not present, and the witnesses, who did not answer, and then withdrew the record :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed, the meaning of the issue being that counsel had not been properly instructed to appear. Hawkins v. Harwood, 4 Ex. 503 ; 7 D. & L. 181 ; 19 L. J., Ex. 33.

Where an attorney of a vendee of an estate was employed to investigate the title thereto, and, in taking the opinion of counsel thereon, omitted to state in the case certain deeds materially affecting the title ; and upon the faith of the opinion given (which would have been different, had all the deeds been stated) the vendee concluded the purchase, but was afterwards damnified by finding that the title was imperfect:—Held, that the attorney was liable to him in an action of negligence. Ireson v. Pearman, 5 D. & R. 687 ; 3 B. & C. 799 ; 3 L. J.(O.S.) K. B. 119 ; 27 R. R. 490.

Letting Judgment go by Default.]—An attorney was sued for negligence in allowing judgment to go by default, in an action which the plaintiff had retained him to defend ; the negligence being proved :—Held, it was for the attorney to defend himself by shewing, if he could, that the plaintiff had no defence in that action ; and not for the plaintiff to begin by shewing he had a good defence, and so had been damnified by the judgment by default. Godefroy v. Jay, 7 Bing. 413 ; 5 M. & P. 284.

Issuing Execution and Realising Fruits of Judgment.]—Primâ facie, it is the duty of an attorney who has recovered a verdict for a client in an action, to issue execution, and at all events, if desired to do so. And if told at the time when retained that his client has no money for costs, he cannot demand payment of costs incurred before issuing execution. But to maintain an action for negligence against him for not issuing execution, he deeming it not desirable to do so, there must be some evidence that it was desirable or for the benefit of the client to do so ; as that he did not make due inquiries that the debtor could pay. In such a case the attorney is liable for the amount, if any, which the jury think execution would have realised for his client. Harrington v. Binns, 2 F. & F. 942.

Omission to procure Investment—Liability to Person not a Client.]—An order was obtained by the solicitor for the plaintiff that the purchaser of property, sold under an order of the court in an action, should pay his purchase-money into court, and that the money when paid in should be invested in consols. The plaintiff had the conduct of the sale. The money was paid into court by the purchaser, but the plaintiff's solicitor omitted to leave with the paymaster the necessary request for its investment, and consequently the investment was not made. On the further consideration of the action it was ordered that the balance of the purchase-money, after the payment of certain costs, should be paid to the receiver in the action, in part satisfaction of a balance due to him. The carriage of the order was given to the receiver, and he then discovered that the purchase-money had not been invested. He took out a summons, asking that the plaintiff's solicitor might be ordered to pay to him the amount of interest lost by the non-investment of the purchase-money :—Held, that the solicitor, as the officer of the court having the conduct of the sale, was responsible not only to his client but to the court for the due discharge of his duty, and that he must make good to the person entitled the loss of interest, but that he was entitled to a set-off in respect of a gain which had resulted from a fall in the price of consols between the time when the investment ought to have been made and the date of the order on further consideration, and that this liability could be enforced by summons in the action. The solicitor was ordered to pay the costs of the summons, though on allowing the set-off, it appeared that the amount to be paid by the solicitor would be only 5*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* Batten v. Wedgwood Coal and Iron Co., 55 L. J., Ch. 396 ; 31 Ch. D. 346 ; 54 L. T. 245 ; 34 W. R. 228.

In Investigating Title.]—Semble, an attorney ought himself to peruse a title on the part of his client, before he sends it for counsel's opinion. Draw v. Scroope, 1 D. P. C. 69 ; 2 B. & Ad. 581 ; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 291.

A bill in equity will not lie against a solicitor for negligence in investigating a title. British Mutual Investment Co. v. Cobbold, 44 L. J., Ch. 332 ; L. R. 19 Eq. 627 ; 32 L. T. 251 ; 23 W. R. 487.

Attorney as agent, on sale of an estate, not disclosing to the buyer an incumbrance, and leading him to suppose the title would be a good one, held liable to make satisfaction in default of the vendor. Arnot v. Biscoe, 1 Ves. 95.

B., being in pecuniary difficulties, consulted her solicitor as to the best means of raising money. He suggested that leasehold property which had been settled by her upon trust for herself for life with remainder to her children, might be treated as belonging to her absolutely and be mortgaged. The trustees of the settlement declined to join in raising money, but, knowing all the circumstances of the case, retired from the trust conditionally on other trustees being appointed. This was done, and money raised by the new trustees, the existence of the settlement being concealed from the mortgagees. On a bill by the mortgagee against B., her solicitor, and the old and new trustees, nine years after the discovery of the fraud, praying for a declaration that all were liable to make good the moneys advanced by the mortgagee:—Held, that all were liable as prayed. Clark v. Hoskins, 15 W. R. 1161.

When it was sought to restrain a solicitor from proceeding in a suit to recover costs, and to declare him guilty of fraud, on the ground of not having disclosed a will affecting the title in property which his client was about to purchase, it appearing that a copy of the will having been handed to a solicitor who had previously acted for the vendee in the sale:—Held, that fraud should not be presumed against him, notwithstanding the fact that he had prepared an answer to be sworn by the plaintiff in a chancery suit, in which it was expressly stated that the plaintiff made the purchase without any notice of the will. M'Elroy v. Murphy, 22 W. R. 501.

—— Of Leasehold Property.]—A. entered into a contract for purchase of leasehold property under conditions of sale, one of which was, that the purchaser should take an underlease "according to the draft underlease already prepared, which will be produced at the time of sale, and may in the meantime be inspected at the office of Mr. H.; but no abstract of the vendor's title thereto shall be required, nor the lessor's title objected to or gone into." He afterwards employed an attorney to complete the purchase, who failed to make the requisite search, or to investigate the vendor's title, or to require the production of the original lease. It subsequently appeared that the premises had been previously mortgaged, and A. was turned out of possession by the mortgagee:—Held, that this amounted to negligence on the part of the attorney sufficient to maintain an action against his executor, and that A. was entitled to recover, in addition to the amount he had paid to obtain a good title, interest on the same during the time he held possession, as he had been obliged to pay the mortgagee mesne profits during that period. Allen v. Clark, 7 L. T. 781; 11 W. R. 304.

If attorneys employed by a vendor to settle on his part the assignment of a term, allow him to execute an unusual covenant, without explaining the liability thereby incurred, they are responsible to him for consequent loss, notwithstanding he is himself at the time of the assignment aware of the fact in respect of which he afterwards incurs liability on his covenant. Stannard v. Ullithorne, 10 Bing. 491; 4 M. & Scott. 359; 3 L. J., C. P. 307.

Restrictive Covenant.]—A solicitor was consulted by a lessee of premises with reference to the building of a wall, to the erection of which on the demised premises his lessor objected. The lease was shewn to the solicitor. The solicitor made no inquiries as to whether there was any objection to building the wall, other than what might be contained in the lease. The land was subject to a restrictive covenant against any such erection in favour of the original vendors of the freehold, and the wall after erection had to be pulled down:—Held, that the solicitor had been guilty of no negligence. Pitman v. Francis, 1 Cab. & E. 355.

Parting with Deposit.]—On a contract for purchase, a part of the purchase-money was paid as "deposit" to the vendor's solicitor, who paid it away at the desire of the vendor without the concurrence of the purchaser. This created a difficulty in completing the purchase, as a mortgagee of the estate would not join in the conveyance without payment to him of the deposits. In a suit by the purchaser for specific performance, the solicitors were declared liable to make good the money. Wiggins v. Lord, 4 Beav. 30.

Mortgage Transactions.]—A solicitor in advancing money on mortgage may be employed, (1) to invest in a particular mortgage; (2) to find securities to be approved by the client and then invest the money; (3) to find securities and invest the money, the client taking little or no part in the business. In an action for negligence against the solicitors, the statute of limitations is a good defence in the first case and also in the second case if the client has approved of the mortgage, no relation of trustee and cestui que trust then existing between them. Dooby v. Watson, 57 L. J., Ch. 865; 39 Ch. D. 178; 58 L. T. 943; 36 W. R. 764. See Hughes v. Twisden, 55 L. J., Ch. 481; 54 L. T. 570; 34 W. R. 498.

Where there is not merely an agency between the parties, but also a superadded fiduciary relation, the remedy of the principal, who is then also the cestui que trust, is not one arising merely from contract, or duty springing from such contract, where a common-law liability would alone exist, but is one to be dealt with on the equitable relation of trustee and cestui que trust. Power v. Power, 13 L. R., Ir. 281.

A party gave a sum of money to a firm of solicitors, to invest upon freehold security. They found a security, and invested the money upon it. The security turned out valueless:—Held, that the giving money to a solicitor for the purpose of general investment does not in itself create the relation of trustee and cestui que trust, so as to make the solicitor liable as trustee for a deficiency in the security. Mare v. Lewis, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 219.

Held, also, that as this was a single isolated transaction, a bill for an account, as between principal and agent, could not be maintained as against the solicitors. Ib.

The attorney for a trader in insolvent circumstances, being introduced by him to the plaintiff, a young woman entitled to a reversionary interest, with the view of obtaining from her an advance of money, and having obtained for her an advance upon the security of her reversionary interest, upon high interest, and upon improvident terms, was then a party to the loan of it to his client, the trader, without any security. The money having been lost:—Held, that if he was employed by the plaintiff only to obtain for her an advance of the money, he was not liable; but that if he was employed by her generally, to look after her interests in the entire transaction, and to advise her as to her advance of the money, he was liable for negligence in reference to his advice as to such an advance. Langdon v. Godfrey, 4 F. & F. 445.

Where money is entrusted by A. to his solicitor for investment, but without any particular investment being then in contemplation, and is allowed to remain in the hands of the solicitor, the amount becomes a debt due from the solicitor to A. If the solicitor afterwards misapplies the money, and to cover his fraud obtains from another client, B., upon a false representation, a transfer of B.'s equitable interest under a previously executed mortgage, no money of A. being then paid to B., the transfer thus obtained may, on

B. discovering the fraud, be set aside in equity, for no money of A. having been received by B. at the time the transfer was executed, no interest passed to A. by its execution. Wall v. Cockerell, 1 N. R. 486; 10 H. L. Cas. 229; 32 L. J., Ch. 276; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 447; 8 L. T. 1; 11 W. R. 442.

What circumstances may constitute acquiescence of B. in the solicitor's fraud, and deprive him of the right to relief. Ib.

One of the plaintiffs employed the defendant, a solicitor, to invest a sum of money for her, requiring that the security should be good, and the interest paid regularly. The defendant wrote, saying that he had found a security, and in his letter he misstated the amount of the prior charges and the rental, and represented that the interest of the prior charges had always been paid with the utmost regularity. The defendant, who was also solicitor for the borrowers, knew that the present loan was being obtained with a view to meet the interest on some of the prior charges then falling due, on the security turning out of insufficient value:—Held, that the defendant had received the money to invest on a safe investment, and, having constituted himself a fiduciary agent, was liable to pay the mortgagor and her trustees, who were co-plaintiffs, the sum so invested. Hamilton v. Lane, 25 L. R., Ir. 188.

A solicitor took an insufficient security for his client, and the nature of the transaction was such as in the opinion of the court to create a case of combined agency and trust:—Held (under the circumstances), that he was personally responsible for the deficiency, and for the costs of the suit. Craig v. Watson, 8 Beav. 427.

Scrivener or attorney puts out his client's money on a security, which he might on the least inquiry have found to be defective, or even where he had notice of ejectment delivered on a prior mortgage, yet could not be charged in equity to answer the money. Luke v. Bridges, Pre. Ch. 146.

—— Taking over Mortgage.]—A bill charged that a solicitor had negligently recommended the plaintiff company to accept a freehold house as security for a loan of 5,000*l.*, and had advised that the mortgagors had the absolute fee-simple in the house free from incumbrance, whereas, in fact, they had only an interest in one moiety, and that subject to incumbrances and a contract for sale. The bill prayed that the solicitor might be decreed to make good the 5,000*l.* and costs, and to take over the security from the client. A suit for the realisation of the security was pending, and the mortgagors were bankrupts, so that the actual loss, if any, was not ascertained:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to grant such relief, and that, even if such jurisdiction existed, there was a discretion to refuse to exercise it in such a case, and a demurrer was allowed. British Mutual Investment Co. v. Cobbold, 44 L. J., Ch. 332; L. R. 19 Eq. 627; 32 L. T. 251; 23 W. R. 487.

—— Redemption of Prior Mortgage.]—An attorney having been retained by two trustees about to advance trust-money upon the security of property already mortgaged, to see that the security was sufficient, and that the proper deeds were executed, one of the trustees advanced the money on the execution of the mortgage without receiving an assignment of the first mortgage. It having turned out that there was no other previous mortgage, and the security having proved insufficient:—Held, that there was not evidence of negligence on the part of the attorney, although by the agreement which he had prepared, part of the money advanced was to be applied to the redemption of the prior mortgage; it not appearing that the attorney was aware of the trustee's intention to act as he did. Brumbridge v. Massey, 28 L. J., Ex. 59.

—— Omitting to make proper Searches.]—It is the duty of an attorney for an intended mortgagee to search at the insolvent court for the purpose of learning whether the intended mortgagor has taken the benefit of the insolvent acts, if there is reason to suspect that he has been insolvent, or is or has been in embarrassed circumstances. Cooper v. Stephenson, 21 L. J., Q. B. 292; 16 Jur. 424.

The plaintiff, who held a mortgage for 4,600*l.* upon lands belonging to one F., agreed to make him a further advance of 4,000*l.* upon having an additional piece of land, which F. had subsequently acquired, added to the former security. The defendant, who acted as the plaintiff's solicitor in the transaction, omitted to ascertain (as the fact was) that a third person had an equitable charge to the extent of 46*l.* upon this additional piece of land; in consequence of which the plaintiff, upon the sale of the property, was unable to convey without paying the 46*l.*:—Held, that this was negligence for which the defendant was liable; and that in the absence of evidence to reduce the amount, the 46*l.* so paid was the proper measure of damages. Whiteman v. Hawkins, 4 C. P. D. 13; 39 L. T. 629; 27 W. R. 262.

Where an attorney acts for a client who advances money on the security of a legacy given to the borrower under a will, he is not warranted in relying upon a partial extract from the will; it is his duty to examine the will itself. Wilson v. Tucker, 3 Stark. 154; D. & R., N. P. C. 30; 25 R. R. 777.

—— Not Registering Mortgage.]—A company employed a solicitor, who was not its ordinary solicitor, in a particular matter, and at his request gave him a mortgage of part of its property to secure the payment of his costs. The mortgage was not registered, under the Companies Act, 1862, s. 43:—Held, that it was the duty of the solicitor to see that the mortgage was registered, and that as he had not done so, he could not claim the benefit of it in the winding up of the company. Patent Bread Machinery Co., In re, Valpy, Ex parte, L. R. 7 Ch. 289; 26 L. T. 228; 20 W. R. 347.

—— Not Explaining Mortgage to Client.]—B. being entitled to a sum of 2,916*l.* stock in reversion expectant on the death of an old lady aged eighty-two, obtained through the defendant E., who acted as solicitor for both parties, a loan of 1,650*l.* upon mortgage. The mortgage contained a power of sale upon three months' notice, or on interest being one month in arrear. B. alleged, and the court held truly, that he had stipulated that the stock should not be salable without six months' notice, and that E. had assured him it was not. The stock was sold under the power, the interest being in arrear, for 1,950*l.*, as subject to succession duty at 3 per cent. The tenant for life was then in a precarious state of health and died within three months. It was afterwards found that only 7*l.* was payable for succession duty. None of the purchase-money was paid except the deposit, the rest being left upon mortgage of the stock:—Held, that the sale could not be set aside, either on the ground of undervalue, as there was no fraud; nor by reason of the purchase-money being left on mortgage, nor on account of the mistake as to succession duty, that being merely a ground of compensation. Bettyes v. Maynard, 49 L. T. 389; 31 W. R. 461—C. A.

—— Non-disclosure as to Value.]—A mortgagee's solicitors noticed on the title very considerable difference in the prices previously paid for the property, and pointed this out to the valuers, who, notwithstanding, adhered to their valuation on behalf of the mortgagee. The solicitors, knowing that the mortgagee would rely on the opinion of the valuers, did not point out to the mortgagee the variation in prices:—Held, that the solicitors had not failed in their duty to the mortgagee. Scholes v. Brook, 63 L. T. 837.

—— Liability to Co-Trustee.]—In an action against trustees, the court held that the investments were improper; that the trustees had been guilty of negligence in not making inquiries as to the particulars, and in not giving proper instructions to the valuers, and in acting upon valuations which under the circumstances they ought not to have acted upon, and they were jointly and severally liable for the money lost. One of the trustees, A., was a solicitor, authorised to make professional charges for work done for the trust. The other was the widow of the testator, and the tenant for life under his will of the trust funds. A. took the more active part in making the investments, and was paid costs for his professional work, charging scale fees both for negotiating the loans, deducing the title, and preparing and completing the mortgages; and he did not, in the opinion of the court, communicate what he did to his co-trustee in such a way as to enable her to exercise her judgment upon the investments, and make them her acts as well as his own:—Held, that A. had undertaken to find proper investments, and that the widow had joined in advancing the fund on the faith that the investments were proper ones which had been looked into by A., as solicitor; that she had been misled by him, and he had been guilty of negligence in his duty as a solicitor; and that, as between A., and the widow, A. was primarily liable for the breach of trust. Partington, In re, Partington v. Allen, 57 L. T. 654.

—— Time for Proceeding.]—A solicitor, being entrusted with moneys from time to time, professed to lay them out upon ample and perfect security, only mentioning that one was reversionary. The solicitor died, and it was discovered that the mortgagors in every case were not worth suing, and two had been bankrupts, and he had himself purchased one security, but as to some railway shares he had been a loser. On claim filed alleging fraud, after six years, and a contention on the part of the general creditors that it was a case for damages for negligence and not for fraud:—Held, that in all the cases in some shape the estate of the deceased solicitor was liable; and although accounts had been rendered and might be regarded as settled, they were still open to surcharge and falsification; and where, as in this case, more than six years had elapsed, the remedy was in equity for gross negligence amounting to fraud. Smith v. Pococke, 2 Drew. 197; 2 Eq. R. 368; 23 L. J., Ch. 545; 18 Jur. 478; 2 W. R. 285 See Dooby v. Watson, supra.

—— Private Arrangement—Condonation.]—Want of fidelity in a solicitor cannot, upon a question of certificate, be visited with merely slight penalties, and public interest being concerned, in the matter, no private dealing can amount to a condonation of the offence. Selby, Ex parte, 6 De G. M. & G. 783; 25 L. J., Bk. 13; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 29.

—— Proceedings by Representative.]—An administrator may declare in assumpsit that the defendant as attorney undertook to investigate and see that a title about to be conveyed to the intestate was good, and that he had omitted to do so to the injury of the intestate's personal estate. Knights v. Quarles, 2 Br. & B. 102; 4 Moore, 532; 52 R. R. 659.

—— Proceedings against Representatives.]—The plaintiff advanced money on a mortgage of certain property, on the faith of certain representations made to him by the solicitor, who negotiated the mortgage for him, that the security offered was a good one. These representations were untrue, and were known by the solicitor, when he made them, to be so. The misrepresentation was not discovered until after the solicitor's death, and shortly after that the plaintiff commenced this action against the solicitor's executors to recover the amount lent, and the arrears of interest:—Held, that, although the plaintiff would have had a good claim against the solicitor himself if he had been alive, yet that, never having asserted it in his lifetime, he could not now, after the death of the person who was to blame for the loss, assert it against his representatives. Young v. Wallingford, 52 L. J., Ch. 590; 48 L. T. 756; 31 W. R. 838.

An executrix of an attorney is liable for his negligence in not making due inquiry into the validity of a security upon which the client proposes to advance money. Wilson v. Tucker, 3 Stark. 154; D. & R., N. P. C. 30; 25 R. R. 777.

—— Charge on Estate.]—A solicitor having received money to invest for a client upon mortgage of a particular property, represented in writing to the client that the money was all invested as arranged, and paid him interest as on the mortgage. After the solicitor's death it was discovered that the solicitor had not effected the mortgage, but had mixed the money with his own, and had invested a larger sum, purporting to be his own money, upon mortgage of the identical property. In a creditors' suit for the administration of the insolvent estate of the solicitor:—Held, under the circumstances, that the solicitor's estate was bound by the representation, and that the client's money was repayable out of the proceeds of sale of the mortgaged estate. Middleton v. Pollock, Wetherall, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Ch. 39; 4 Ch. D. 49; 35 L. T. 608; 25 W. R. 94.

C., confidential solicitor of H., borrowed money on the security of his mortgage deeds, and purchased an estate. On payment of the mortgage, C. applied the money to the payment of his debt, representing to H. that the money was re-invested:—Held, that H. was entitled to a charge on the estate to the amount of his claim. Hopper v. Conyers, L. R. 2 Eq. 549 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 328 ; 14 W. R. 628.

—— Repayment of Dividend.]—A solicitor invested the money of one of his clients without his knowledge on an improper mortgage security. The client, believing the security to be insufficient, proved against the estate of a partner of the solicitor, which was being administered in chancery, for the whole amount of the debt, and, under a compromise, received a dividend out of the estate. Afterwards it turned out that the security was sufficient to pay the client in full :—Held, that the dividend must be repaid to the solicitor's estate, and did not enure for the benefit of the subsequent incumbrancers on the mortgaged property. Sawyer v. Goodwin, 45 L. J., Ch. 289 ; 1 Ch. D. 351 ; 34 L. T. 635 ; 24 W. R. 493.

—— Authority of Partner.] — A firm of solicitors received money from R., a client, for the purpose of investment. No investment was made at the time, and the money was employed by them for their own use. After the death of one of the partners his executors commenced a partnership action, in which H., the surviving partner, was appointed one of two receivers. H., without communicating with his co-receiver or with R., put certain deeds forming part of the partnership property into a box with R.'s name outside. R. subsequently obtained possession of these deeds and claimed to retain them as security for the money owing to her by the firm. The articles of partnership contained a clause providing that, on the death of either partner, the surviving partner should, within six months of the next general annual account, pay to the representatives of the deceased partner, his share of the profits of the year, and should execute a bond for payment within two years to them of the share of the capital of the deceased partner :—Held, that H. had no power of giving R. a security upon these deeds, which formed part of the partnership property, and that R. must deliver them up to the receivers in the partnership action. Hills v. Reeves, 30 W. R. 439. Affirmed, 31 W. R. 209—C. A.

Interest on Money.]—Scrivener, &c., receiving money, and giving a note to place it out at interest, is bound to do so, and is not discharged from paying interest for it, unless his employer accepts the security and interest. Balance of an account, stated by such scrivener, &c., will carry interest. Barwell v. Parker, 2 Ves. 364.

Solicitor in a cause charged with interest on money directed to be laid out for an infant's benefit, notwithstanding a deed from his grandmother giving other moneys in trust for the infant, and directing that he should not be so chargeable. Brown v. Pring, 1 Ves. 407.

See also INTEREST ON COSTS, &C., post, col. 1734.

Purchase by Client of Farm Produce—No Inquiry as to Payment of Rent.]—An attorney employed to advise a proposed purchase of farming produce which it is desired to leave on the ground for some time, is primâ facie bound to inquire as to the payment of the past rent ; but if the client himself has made inquiries about the matter, and leads his attorney to believe that he is satisfied about it, it is not negligence in the attorney to omit to call for the receipts or take the other precautions which otherwise would be usual and necessary. Waine v. Kempster, 1 F. & F. 695.

Taking Improper Indemnities.] — Where a party sues or defends in autre droit as assignee, or under such circumstances as to render an indemnity a prudent and proper precaution to take, it is the duty of an attorney to advise it ; and in the case of a defendant, to obtain such an indemnity as will be sufficient to cover costs, and such damages as may reasonably be anticipated in the event of the defence failing. Graham v. Lawrence, 1 F. & F. 285.

Money Improperly Paid out of Court.]—If a solicitor, knowing that money in court belongs to one person, presents a petition and obtains payment to another, he is personally responsible. The principle applies, if he has merely a knowledge of circumstances, which, if duly considered, would lead to a knowledge of the facts. Ezart v. Lister, 5 Beav. 585 ; 12 L. J., Ch. 10.

A solicitor was ordered to refund money improperly paid out of court when he ought to have made inquiries which would have shewn him that a signature was forged. Slater v. Slater, 58 L. T. 149.

Trustees paid into court, under the trustees relief act, a legacy of 500*l.* bequeathed to D., an infant, to the credit of an account in the matter of the trusts of the will of the testator. Two years afterwards they transferred into court to the same account a sum of consols, representing a legacy of 7,000*l.* bequeathed to M., and after her death to her children, and on both occasions the trustees in the petitions stated that the office of N., their solicitor, was to be the place for the service of any notice in reference to the funds. A year after the transfer of the consols a petition was presented by M., by her next friend, a solicitor, and by the trustees for the purpose of dealing with the consols, and the solicitors on the record for the petitioners were the firm of whom N. was a member, and the office of N. was to be the place where any notice was to be served relating to the trust fund. The petition set forth what had been done in respect of the consols and other matters. An order was made in reference to the consols and dividends ; but in drawing it up an error occurred by including in it the whole of the fund standing to the credit of the account, and the future dividends were, as ordered, paid to M. during her life. D. had suffered loss by payments wrongly made to M. (now deceased), and she on attaining majority, presented a petition asking that the estate of M. might be made primarily liable for the loss which she had suffered, and that N. might be made liable for any deficiency : —Held, that N., as officer of the court, had been guilty of negligence in not seeing that all the facts relating to the funds were brought before the court when the order was made, and that he must, after D. had exhausted the estate of M., make good any deficiency, and pay the costs of the petition. Dangar's Trusts, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 315 ; 41 Ch. D. 178 ; 60 L. T. 491 ; 37 W. R. 651.

Money was paid into court in an action for unliquidated damages with a defence of tender, so that it ought not to have been taken out before trial, but the plaintiff's solicitor before trial bonâ fide, but inadvertently, took the sum out of court and paid it over to the plaintiff:—Held, that under the circumstances the solicitor ought not to be ordered to refund it. Davys v. Richardson, 57 L. J., Q. B. 409; 21 Q. B. D. 202; 59 L. T. 765; 36 W. R. 728—C. A.

Appointment of Receiver.]—A receiver was appointed by the court, upon the representation of the plaintiff's solicitor that the receiver had entered into the usual recognisances, which he had not, in fact, done. A loss occurred in consequence of the receiver's liability being only in the nature of a simple contract debt. The solicitor was, at the instance of a defendant, made personally liable for the loss occasioned by his neglect. Simmons v. Rose, Ward, In re, 31 Beav. 1.

If a solicitor in a cause, having assumed, improperly, the character of a receiver, neglects to collect the rent, while the parties consider him to be acting as a receiver, he makes himself responsible for any rents lost in consequence of his neglect. Wood v. Wood, 4 Russ. 558.

Ignorance or Negligence.]—An attorney shall not be heard to plead ignorance of the effect of a fine on a will; he is bound to have the knowledge and to give the information to his client, and shall not have any benefit from his ignorance. The principles of equity that are applied to trustees are also applicable to persons entrusted with the management of property, in legal proceedings respecting it, even without fraud. Bulkley v. Wilford, 2 Cl. & F. 181; 8 Bli. (N.S.) 111.

It is a principle of equity that no professional man shall take advantage of his ignorance or negligence. An attorney should know that a fine would revoke a will, and he as well as a barrister is bound to know the effect of acts which he is often employed to perform. Ib.

It is the duty of an attorney employed to levy a fine to ask his client whether he has made his will. Ib.

A solicitor employed by the relators in an information to conduct their case, causes by mistake two of the defendants to be examined in chief (as if on behalf of the relators), his intention being to cross-examine them. The information, which prayed a decree against all the defendants, was dismissed in consequence of this examination of defendants on behalf of the relators:—Held, upon a claim by the solicitor for his bill of costs against the executor of the relators, that he had shewn crassa negligentia and a want of reasonable skill; and his whole claim, the contract to conduct the suit being entire, was disallowed. Stokes v. Trumper, 2 Kay & J. 232; 3 W. R. 503. S. C., on appeal, 3 W. R. 615.

Money Lent to Partner.]—A. & B. were in partnership as solicitors. A. received from a client, H., a sum of money to be laid out on good mortgage security, and without consulting H. lent it to B.:—Held, that B. had been guilty of a breach of the obligations of a solicitor to his client. Selby, Ex parte, 6 De G. M. & G. 783; 25 L. J., Bk. 13; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 29.

Fact of Negligence—Taxation of Costs.]—The taxing master in taxing a bill of costs between a solicitor and his client has power to disallow the costs of proceedings in an action conducted by the solicitor which were occasioned by the negligence or ignorance of the solicitor. But if the negligence goes to the loss of the whole action, he ought not to disallow them, but to leave the client to bring an action for negligence against the solicitor. Massey and Carey, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 705; 26 Ch. D. 459; 51 L. T. 390; 32 W. R. 1008—C. A.

On a taxation between solicitor and client on the costs of a cause, objections were taken on behalf of the client to charges occasioned by the postponement of the trial and the amendment of the pleadings, on the ground that the postponement of the trial and the amendment of the pleadings had been rendered necessary by the negligence of the solicitor; the registrar had no jurisdiction to inquire into the question of negligence. The Papa de Rossie, 3 P. D. 160; 27 W. R. 367.

The master had no jurisdiction to disallow items on the ground that, in respect to the business to which they refer, the attorney was guilty of negligence. Matchett v. Parkes, 9 M. & W. 767; 1 D. (N.S.) 924; 11 L. J., Ex. 287.

Conviction on Criminal Charge.]—In an action against an attorney alleging that he was retained to conduct the defence of the plaintiff on a criminal charge, and that through his negligence the plaintiff was convicted:—Held, that the plaintiff, in order to recover more than nominal damages, must prove that he was convicted mainly through the attorney's negligence, and the negligence being, not taking the proofs of witnesses who were in court ready to be examined, but whom the counsel, on the plaintiff's own statement, did not wish to call, and whom the plaintiff did not insist on calling, and that the question for the jury was, whether the attorney had done anything which, under all the circumstances, was likely to be of any use. Hatch v. Lewis, 2 F. & F. 407. And see S. C., 7 H. & N. 367; 31 L. J., Ex. 26; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1085; 5 L. T. 254; 10 W. R. 58.

Relation of Client and Solicitor must Exist.]—An attorney is not liable to an action for negligence at the suit of one between whom and himself the relation of attorney and client does not exist, for giving, in answer to a casual inquiry, erroneous information as to the contents of a deed. Fish v. Kelly, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 194.

When a client employs a solicitor to do business for the benefit of a third party, the latter cannot maintain an action against the solicitor for negligence in the matter. Robertson v. Fleming, 4 Macq. H. L. 167; 1 Paterson, 1053.

Production of Books in Actions.]—The court will not, in an action against an attorney for negligence, make an order for the production of his books, upon a mere suggestion of the client's belief that they contain entries relating to the matters of which he complains. Evans v. Louis, L. R. 1 C. P. 656.

Answering Interrogatories.]—In an action against D., an attorney, and B., for not properly investing moneys entrusted to them, the plaintiff was allowed to administer interrogatories to B., although they were such that the answers might render him liable to a penalty for practising (in partnership with D.) as an attorney and a solicitor without having a proper certificate—the court holding, that the questions were put bonâ fide, to ascertain whether B. was really liable with D., and that B. might safely answer them, as they related to the business of the partner-

Sufficiency of Pleading in.]—If a declaration states that the plaintiff retained the defendant, an attorney, to see if a certain security was good, and that he accepted the retainer, and neglected his duty, and represented the security to be good ; and that the plaintiff advanced his money, and that the security was bad, by means of which the plaintiff lost the interest :—Held, sufficient. Howell v. Young, 5 B. & C. 259 ; 8 D. & R. 14 ; 2 Car. & P. 238 ; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 160 ; 29 R. R. 237. S. P., Whitehead v. Greetham, 2 Bing. 464; M'Clel. & Y. 205 ; 10 Moore, 183 ; O'Hanlon v. Murray, 12 Ir. C. L. R. 161.

A declaration, that the plaintiff, at request of defendants, retained and employed them as attorneys, for fees, to use due care in ascertaining the title of R. to lands which were to be charged as security for payment of 600*l.* by R. to the plaintiff, and to take due care that the same should be a sufficient security for the payment of the 600*l.* by R. to the plaintiff ; and in consideration thereof the defendants promised the plaintiff to use due care and diligence in and about ascertaining the title of R. to the lands, and to take due care that the same should be a sufficient security for such repayment of the 600*l.* by R. to the plaintiff :—Held, that the undertaking of the defendants, as laid, did not comprehend any inquiry into the value of the lands. Hayne v. Rhodes, 8 Q. B. 342 ; 15 L. J., Q. B. 137 ; 10 Jur. 71.

When it is sought to make a solicitor liable for negligence, that issue must be raised clearly upon the pleadings. Bettyes v. Maynard, 49 L. T. 389 ; 31 W. R. 461—C. A.

XI. IN OTHER CASES.

For Act of Clerk.]—Where a managing clerk of attorneys had, without their knowledge, received money for the purpose of investment : —Held, that the question was (in the absence of any actual authority) whether they had held him out as having authority so to receive it on their behalf. Cornelius v. Harrison, 2 F. & F. 758.

For Fraud of Clerk.]—Where an attorney's clerk had fraudulently simulated the court seal upon a writ of summons, the court set aside the writ and the proceedings thereon, and ordered the attorney (though blameless) personally to pay the costs. Dunkley v. Farris, 11 C. B. 457.

For Negligence of Clerk.]—On the trial of an action on a bill of exchange, the bill was not produced, and its non-production was accounted for by the evidence of two clerks of the plaintiff's attorney, by which it appeared that one of them laid the bill in an envelope on a desk in the attorney's office, and the other burned the envelope and, as was believed, the bill also. Secondary evidence of the bill having been received, and the plaintiff having obtained a verdict, the master, on taxation of the plaintiff's costs against the defendant, disallowed the costs of the attendance of the clerks to prove the facts :—Held, per Pollock, C.B., and Martin, B., that those costs had been rightly disallowed ; Alderson and Platt, BB., contra. Matthews v. Livesey, 11 Ex. 221 ; 3 C. L. R. 898 ; 24 L. J., Ex. 252 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 601 ; 3 W. R. 517.

To Charges of Fraud.]—When it was sought to restrain a solicitor from proceeding in a suit to recover costs, and to declare him guilty of fraud, on the ground of not having disclosed a will affecting the title in property which his client was about to purchase, it appearing that a copy of the will had been handed to a solicitor who had previously acted for the vendee in the sale :—Held, that fraud should not be presumed against him, notwithstanding the fact that he had prepared an answer to be sworn by the plaintiff in a chancery suit, in which it was expressly stated that the plaintiff made the purchase without any notice of the will. M'Elroy v. Murphy, 22 W. R. 501.

The non-production, in Ireland, of title-deeds to the solicitor instructed to prepare a mortgage upon an estate there will not of itself be deemed a proof that the solicitor has acted fraudulently, or even negligently, so as to affect the interest of his client. Agra Bank v. Barry, L. R. 7 H. L. 135.

—— When not supported—Costs.]—Although relief may be given at the suit of a client against his solicitor for loss sustained by gross negligence, yet where the loss was in respect of a matter of conduct, as to which the advice of the solicitor was founded on the opinions of competent surveyors as to the value of the property, and those opinions submitted to the judgment of the client, the court dismissed the bill ; and as fraud and improper motives were charged without evidence to support those charges, the bill was dismissed with costs. Chapman v. Chapman, L. R. 9 Eq. 276 ; 22 L. T. 145 ; 18 W. R. 533.

Deeds Abstracted — Security for Loan.]—A solicitor deposited some of his own deeds as a security for a sum of money due to two of his clients, in a box belonging to them. He retained the box, but after his death it was found that he had abstracted the deeds from the clients' other deeds :—Held, that the clients had a lien on all the solicitor's other deeds for their debt. Mason v. Morley, 34 Beav. 475.

For Breaches of Trust.]—A solicitor, acting for the sole survivor of three trustees, prepared, by his direction, a deed appointing the husband of the cestui que trust sole trustee in his place, and another solicitor, acting for the cestui que trust and her husband, perused and approved of the draft. The deed was executed, and the trust fund transferred to the husband as new trustee, and by him sold out and never replaced. There being no ground for imputing to either of the solicitors knowledge or suspicion of any improper design in the transaction :—Held, that neither of them was liable for the loss occasioned by the breach of trust. Barnes v. Addy, 43 L. J., Ch. 513; L. R. 9 Ch. 244; 30 L. T. 4; 22 W. R. 505.

For Money Received or Paid.]—A firm of solicitors, acting for two trustees and receiving trust moneys from them, and paying over a portion of such moneys to one only of the trustees, who afterwards dies insolvent, is liable to the trust estate for the whole amount of moneys received from the two trustees. Lee v. Sankey, L. R. 15 Eq. 204; 27 L. T. 809; 21 W. R. 286.

A solicitor was employed by the trustees for sale of an estate, his duty being to receive the purchase-moneys and pay them in to the trustees' banking account. He received large sums, paid them in to his private account, and died insolvent. His banking account at his death shewed a large credit, principally made up of specific sums which corresponded with receipts by him on account of sales of the trust estate:—Held, that these specific sums could be followed by the trustees, and that there could not be a set-off allowed in respect of sums alleged to have been paid by the solicitor on account of the trust estate. Birt v. Burt, 36 L. T. 943—C. A.

A solicitor having received money to invest for a client upon mortgage of a particular property, represented in writing to the client that the money was all invested as arranged, and paid him interest as on the mortgage. After the solicitor's death, it was discovered that the solicitor had not effected the mortgage, but had mixed the money with his own, and had invested a larger sum, purporting to be his own money, upon mortgage of the identical property. In a creditors' suit for the administration of the insolvent estate of the solicitor:—Held, under the circumstances, that the solicitor's estate was bound by the representation, and that the clients' money was repayable out of the proceeds of sale of the mortgaged estate. Middleton v. Pollock, Wetherall, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Ch. 39; 4 Ch. D. 49; 35 L. T. 608; 25 W. R. 94.

For Misfeasance.]—See COMPANY (WINDING-UP).

J. SUMMARY JURISDICTION.

I. GENERALLY.

In character of Officer of Court.] — The court will only exercise a summary jurisdiction over an attorney when he is acting in the character of an officer of the court, and not in an ordinary case of attorney and client. Bull, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 116; 2 L. J., Bk. 76.

A solicitor is an officer of the court, and is liable to serious consequences if he neglects his duty of explaining the effect of the bill of sale to the grantor. He is also liable to an action by his client, as well as to proceedings of a penal character. Per James, L.J. National Mercantile Bank, Ex parte, Haynes, In re, 49 L. J., Bk. 62; 15 Ch. D. 52; 43 L. T. 36; 28 W. R. 848.

A trustee, who is a solicitor, cannot be removed under the jurisdiction of the court of chancery over solicitors, that jurisdiction being exercised only in respect of acts done by a solicitor in that character, or in some relation immediately arising out of it. Blanchard, In re, and Le Doulcet, In re, 30 L. J., Ch. 516; 4 L. T. 426; 9 W. R. 647.

Where a writ is sent to be served by a firm of attorneys, only one of whom has been admitted in the court, and they neglect to do so, the court has no jurisdiction, except over the one whose name is on their roll. Cheshire v. Tyler, 7 Jur. 704.

Directing an attorney to employ a proctor to obtain probate of a will is not such employment of him in the character of an attorney as will give the court summary jurisdiction over him, as to money received by him to pay the proctor. Cowie or Cohen, Ex parte, 3 D. P. C. 600; 1 H. & W. 211.

The test for determining whether the court has or has not jurisdiction is, whether, if the attorney had been called as a witness, the court would or would not have held him justified in refusing to answer on the ground of privilege. Cutts, In re, 16 L. T. 71.

Where an attorney has not fulfilled his engagement with respect to a loan of money, independently of his character of attorney, the court will not summarily compel him to fulfil it. Chitty, In re, 2 D. P. C. 421.

After Solicitor has Ceased to Practise.]—One who has been an attorney remains liable to the summary jurisdiction of the court for his conduct whilst he was an attorney, although he may have taken his name off the roll and ceased to be an attorney. Simes v. Gibbs, 6 D. P. C. 310; 1 W. W. & H. 40; 2 Jur. 418.

Matter arising in Cause before the Court.]—The court will not entertain a motion touching the conduct of an attorney, unless it appears that he is an attorney of the court, or that the transaction arises in part at least out of a cause before the court; nor will the court exercise its summary jurisdiction over an officer, unless in a case of palpable fraud. Lord, In re, 2 Scott, 131; 1 Hodges, 195. S. P., Cole v. Grove, 1 Scott (N.R.) 30; 4 Jur. 339.

The jurisdiction of the court of chancery over solicitors, as officers of the court for misconduct, is very special, and will not be exercised on an ordinary summons for taxation of a bill of costs. Forsyth, In re, 2 De G. J. & S. 509; 12 L. T. 687; 13 W. R. 932.

The court granted a rule nisi, calling upon an attorney to answer for an alleged misconduct, in a matter where no suit was depending, but which appeared to have been intrusted to him in the capacity of an attorney. Knight, In re, 1 Bing. 91.

The court will not interfere summarily between attorney and client, unless there has been a cause in court; especially where there is any fact in dispute. Phillips, In re, 1 W. W. & H. 418; 3 Jur. 479.

The court will exercise its summary authority over an attorney only with reference to his conduct in a cause. Anon., 19 L. J., Ex. 219.

But where an attorney has been guilty of gross misconduct, the court will interfere summarily, although the misconduct does not amount to an indictable offence, and arose in a transaction in which he was not acting in that character. Blake, In re, 3 El. & El. 34; 30 L. J., Q. B. 32; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1242; 2 L. T. 429.

After great Lapse of Time.]—Where more than seven years had elapsed after the settlement of transactions between an attorney and his client, the court refused to interfere to have them reopened, in the absence of any suggestion of fraud or misconduct. Shipden, Ex parte, 6 D. & R. 338.

Non-Payment of Counsel's Fees.]—The court will not, on motion, interfere to compel an attorney to pay counsel's fees. Angell, In re, 29 L. J., C. P. 227; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1373.

Preparing Hypothetical Case for Opinion of Court.]—Where an attorney, although without any corrupt or unworthy motive, prepares a special case in order to take the opinion of the court upon the will of a testator, and suggested facts which had no foundation:—Held, that he was guilty of a contempt, and he was fined in 30*l.* for his offence. Elsam, In re, 5 D. & R. 389; 3 B. & C. 597; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 75.

Extortionate Charges.]—Excessive and extortionate charges in a bill of costs as between attorney and client form no ground for a summary application against an attorney, in the absence of evidence of wilful fraud, the suitor being sufficiently protected by the taxation of the bill. Meux v. Lloyd, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 409.

Negligence.]—The court will not interfere summarily to try the question of negligence on the part of an attorney towards his client. Brazier v. Bryant, 2 D. P. C. 600.

Solicitor Guilty of Indictable Offence.]—The court will not proceed summarily against an attorney for matters which amount to an indictable offence, where it appears that the facts are not exclusively within his own knowledge. Anon., 2 Jur. 467.

Preparing Bond with Insufficient Stamp.]—Where an attorney had wholly prepared and signed a bond to pay money to his client upon a wrong stamp, he was compelled upon motion to put a proper stamp upon it. Gwilliam v. Barnet, 2 Smith, 155.

Against Agent of Solicitor.]—If the agent of an attorney does wrong, the client cannot make a summary application against the agent. Jones, Ex parte, 2 D. P. C. 161.

Effect of Private Arrangement.]—Where serious charges of misconduct of an attorney are brought before the court, he will not be allowed to get rid of the matter by private arrangement, but the court will require a full explanation of such misconduct. Attorney, In re, 9 L. T. 299.

Action Pending.]—Application for summary remedy against a solicitor refused where the client had chosen her remedy by action. Attorney, In re, 4 W. R. 617.

Practice—Motion in Action.]—An application for the court to exercise its jurisdiction over a solicitor on account of conduct disclosed in an action may be made in the action, and therefore is a further proceeding within Rules of Supreme Court, 1875, Ord. LI. r. 1a. Cave v. Cave, Cave, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 656; 43 L. T. 158; 28 W. R. 764.

—— Chancery Division.]—The chancery division will exercise the jurisdiction over solicitors conferred on it by s. 87 of the Judicature Act, 1873, according to the practice familiar to the chancery division, and will not grant a rule nisi. Copp, In re, 32 W. R. 25.

—— Mentioning Name.]—In motions respecting misconduct against attorneys, and for the exercise of the summary jurisdiction of the court, the practice is not to mention names. Attorney, In re, 2 L. T. 432; 8 W. R. 530.

—— Application in Chambers.]—Unless there is a cause in court, an application cannot be made in chambers against an attorney. Higgs, Ex parte, 1 D. P. C. 495.

—— Plea of Statute of Limitations by Solicitor.]—The court will not, in the exercise of its summary jurisdiction, prevent an attorney, who is a defendant in an action at the suit of his client, suing as administratrix, from pleading not directly to the merits, such as a plea of the statute of limitations, even though the accrual of the statute may have been owing to his neglect in not advising his client to take out letters of administration earlier. Triston, In re, 1 L. M. & P. 74.

—— Entitling Motion.]—An order was made that a solicitor (who was also a trustee of a will) should pay into court trust money which he had by affidavit admitted that he had in his hands, upon motion made by the cestui que trust in a suit to administer the estate of the testator, the notice of motion being entitled in the suit and in the matter of the solicitor. Clerihew, In re, Howard, In re, 24 L. T. 860; 19 W. R. 939—L. JJ.

Breach of Duty—Measure of Loss.]—Where negligence, or other breach of duty, is committed by a solicitor, an officer of the court, in a matter of which the court has seisin, the court can summarily order its officer to make good the loss occasioned by his neglect or breach of duty; but the limit of liability is the measure of the loss flowing from the negligence or breach of duty. Marsh v. Joseph, 66 L. J., Ch. 128; [1897] 1 Ch. 213; 75 L. T. 558; 45 W. R. 209—C. A.

User of Name without Authority — Ratification.]—To constitute a binding ratification by a person of an act done in his name without any previous authority, there must be full knowledge on his part of the facts, and unequivocal adoption after such knowledge, or the circumstances must be such as to warrant the clear inference that the supposed principal was adopting the acts of the supposed agent, whatever they were. Consequently, where a solicitor is told by another solicitor that his name has been used as solicitor for a party in a proceeding before the court, who was merely a formal party, and that a cheque awaits him at the office of the paymaster-general for his costs, the amount of which is commensurate with the business being of a formal character, and he, without any information or inquiry as to the nature of the proceeding, but having no reason to suspect any fraud, accepts the amount of the costs, that would be at most a ratification of the use of his name for a formal party on a formal application, and would not make him liable for frauds committed by the other solicitor for his own purposes by means of the use of the name. A solicitor in such a case would not be held liable for the loss occurring merely because he did not inform the court of the user of his name without authority. Ib.

II. ON UNDERTAKINGS.

Must act as Solicitor.]—In an application for the summary interference of the court upon an attorney's undertaking, the question is, did he or did he not act in the particular transaction in the character of an attorney? If he did, the court will hold him liable. Fairthorne, In re, 3 D. & L. 548; 1 B. C. Rep. 40; 15 L. J., Q. B. 131; 10 Jur. 287. S.P., Brandon v. Smith, 1 W. R. 130.

An attorney giving an undertaking for another, in a cause in which he is not concerned as attorney, will not be forced summarily to fulfil it; but the party to whom it is given will be left to his action. Walker v. Arlett, 1 D. P. C. 61.

The undertaking of an attorney cannot be summarily enforced unless he is acting as attorney in the cause. In other cases the party to whom the undertaking is given must be left to his action. Bateman, In re, 2 D. P. C. 161.

An attorney who is a party in a cause, giving an undertaking to the sheriff in that cause, is not liable to have that undertaking summarily enforced by the court. Northfield v. Orton, 1 D. P. C. 415.

The court will not summarily compel an attorney to pay money pursuant to his undertaking to indemnify against costs, in an action where, at his instance, a party has allowed his name to be used as a plaintiff, without any interest in the matter. Clifton, Ex parte, 5 D. P. C. 218; 2 H. & W. 296.

The court will not exercise its summary jurisdiction to compel a vendor's solicitor to perform an undertaking given by him at the sale to do certain acts for clearing the title to the estate. Peart v. Bushell, 2 Sim. 38.

Where an attorney being employed to sue a defendant, gave his undertaking for the debt sought to be recovered to his own client, the court refused to enforce the fulfilment of the undertaking by attachment. Evans, Ex parte, 9 D. P. C. 106; 1 W. P. C. 2; 4 Jur. 991.

Statute of Frauds no Defence.]—The court will compel an attorney to perform his undertaking to pay a sum of money, even though in respect of the debt of another, and void under the Statute of Frauds, 29 Car. 2, c. 3, s. 4. Hilliard, In re, 2 D. & L. 919; 14 L. J., Q. B. 225; 9 Jur. 664. S. P., Senior v. Butt, 5 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 136. Evans v. Duncombe, 1 C. & J. 372; 1 Tyr. 283; 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ex. 82. Patterson, In re, 1 D. P. C. 468.

To Pay Debt and Costs.]—An attorney of a mortgagor, desirous of selling the property, having induced the attorney of the mortgagee to give up the title deeds, on his undertaking to pay him the costs of preparing the abstract of title, the court granted a rule, ordering him to pay the amount pursuant to his undertaking. Gee, In re, 2 D. & L. 997; 10 Jur. 694.

A solicitor who guarantees payment of a debt due from his client, may, on default of payment by the client, be ordered by the court in a summary way to pay the amount himself, without any necessity on the part of the creditor to bring an action against the solicitor. Pass, In re, 35 W. R. 410.

Performance of agreement to compromise a suit entered into by the solicitor for the plaintiff and the solicitor for the defendant, for payment by the latter of the former's costs, not enforced by order in a summary way. Gilbert v. Cooper, 15 Sim. 647, n.; 17 L. J., Ch. 265.

A plaintiff having issued execution on a judge's order against the defendant, his attorney sent to the plaintiff the following letter: "Sir, —Yourself v. Gordon,—In consideration of your agreeing to suspend execution upon the judgment, I hereby undertake to make an arrangement with you respecting the payment of the debt and costs prior to Mr. G. being discharged from prison under his present detainers; or in the event of your not agreeing to the terms offered by me, to inform you in sufficient time of his intended discharge, so that you may not be deprived of your power of lodging a detainer against him in this action. Your reply, approving this arrangement, will oblige," &c. The court discharged a rule obtained to compel the attorney to pay the debt and costs. Thompson v. Gordon, 4 D. & L. 49; 15 M. & W. 610; 15 L. J., Ex. 344.

The attorneys for the plaintiff and defendant in a horse cause, which was ready for trial, but had been withdrawn at the assizes, signed the following undertaking: "We, the undersigned, attorneys for the plaintiff and defendant, do hereby personally consent, undertake and agree, that the record in this cause shall be withdrawn; that the defendant shall take back the horse in the pleadings named, and shall pay 64*l.* 17*s.* to the plaintiff; that the costs of the suit on the part of the defendant shall be taxed between the parties, on the principle between plaintiff and defendant; and that such taxation shall be perfected by," &c.:—Held, that the plaintiff's attorney in the original action was personally liable upon this undertaking to pay to the defendant's attorney the costs when taxed, pursuant to the agreement. Iveson v. Conington, 2 D. & R. 307; 1 B. & C. 160; 1 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 71; 25 R. R. 354.

The solicitor for the petitioning creditor, on the commission being superseded, wrote to the bankrupt: "I am ready and hereby offer to allow and pay the costs" incurred by the bankrupt in petitioning for the supersedeas:—Held, that the solicitor was personally liable on this undertaking. Bentley, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 578; 2 L. J., Bk. 39.

So, where the solicitors of the assignee of a bankrupt tenant, on whose lands a distress had been levied by the landlord, gave an undertaking in the following terms: "We, as solicitors to the assignees, undertake to pay to the landlord his rent, provided it do not exceed the value of the effects distrained":—Held, that they were personally liable. Burrell v. Jones, 3 B. & Ald. 47; 22 R. R. 296.

A., the solicitor of the London creditors of a bankrupt in the country, wrote to B., the solicitor of the country creditors of the bankrupt, the following letter: "I am willing, on behalf of the London creditors, to bear two-thirds of the expenses of Messrs. B. & B., or such barrister as you may think fit, for resisting Mr. K.'s proof under the commission, and of investigating the accounts of the assignees at the meeting on the 18th inst. I hereby undertake to bear and pay, on behalf of these creditors, two-thirds of the expenses incident thereto accordingly." And the meeting being afterwards adjourned, A. wrote to B. another letter, in which he said: "I shall have no objection to bear as before the proportion of expense of the barrister attending the meeting stated in your letter":—Held, that A. was personally liable for the proportion of the expenses. Hall v. Ashurst, 1 C. & M. 714; 3 Tyr. 420; 2 L. J., Ex. 295.

Plaintiffs were assignees of a mortgage granted by A. and B., for 2,000*l.*, and had procured an advance from them for a client, on the same security, of 325*l.*, and were creditors of A. and B. for a further sum of 164*l.* They had commenced actions for the first two sums, and obtained a verdict in the action for the last. Under these circumstances, an attorney, but not employed as such in his business, induced the plaintiffs to stay proceedings for two months in the last action, and to allow judgment to be suffered by default in the other two, on which no execution was to issue for two months. The consideration for this stay of proceedings was that the attorney undertook that the money should be paid, whenever the necessary securities should be completed; stating at the same time the name of another party through whom the money was to be procured, and to whom the mortgages were to be transferred. Ultimately, the third party in question refused to execute:—Held, that the attorney had rendered himself personally liable in respect of all these sums. Harper v. Williams, 4 Q. B. 219; 12 L. J., Q. B. 227.

The defendant in an action in this court being in prison for contempt, his solicitors, in order to induce the plaintiff's solicitors to give their consent to his release from arrest, entered into an undertaking, in terms unconditional, to pay an agreed sum as the costs of the application for his committal. This undertaking not having been performed, the plaintiffs moved in this matter for a summary order that the defendant's solicitors should be ordered to pay to the plaintiffs or their solicitors the agreed sum, pursuant to the undertaking, and the costs of that application. There was a conflict of evidence as to whether the undertaking was intended to be unconditional, or conditional only upon its being in accordance with the practice of the court (which it was now admitted it was not) to make the order for release only on terms of payment of costs:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to entertain the application; that the application was properly made; that upon the evidence the undertaking was unconditional; and that there must, therefore, be an order in terms of the notice of motion. Woodfin and Wray, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 427; 30 W. R. 422.

—— When Binding on Firm.]—S., being desirous of assigning a lease which he had deposited with the plaintiffs to secure advances, employed the defendants, who were in partnership as attorneys, to get the lease from the plaintiffs. T., one of the defendants, accordingly arranged with the plaintiffs that they should give up the lease on receiving from him the following undertaking, signed by him in the name of the firm: "We undertake, in consideration of your handing to us the deeds and papers in your possession relating to the Rose and Crown Inn, at Hounslow, so as to enable us to complete the assignment of the lease of such property, to pay you 200*l.* on the day after the completion of the assignment of such lease, and the further sum of 250*l.* on or before the 3rd September next." The other defendant was not aware that this undertaking was given; but the whole transaction was entered in the books of the firm, and the purchase-money was paid into the partnership account:—Held, that this was not a bare guarantee for the debt of a third person, but an undertaking to appropriate money to be received by the firm in the ordinary course of the partnership business, and that it was therefore binding on the firm. Alliance Bank v. Tucker, 17 L. T. 13; 15 W. R. 992.

One partner has no authority to sign an undertaking in the name of the firm for the payment of the amount of debt and costs to the plaintiff in an action, in order to procure the defendant's discharge from custody. Hasleham v. Young, 5 Q. B. 833; D. & M. 700; 13 L. J., Q. B. 205; 8 Jur. 338.

—— Construction.]—A., an attorney, having been employed by a former client of B., in consideration of the latter handing him over the papers in the cause, wrote as follows: "Out of any moneys which I may receive on this or any other proceeding on the plaintiff's account, I will hand you such balance as may remain due of your bill of costs as settled at 9*l.*":—Held, that A. was bound to pay B. out of the first moneys A. received on account of the client, and not out of the surplus after deducting his own costs. Tharrett v. Trevor, 7 Ex. 161; 21 L. J., Ex. 59.

Where the solicitors of the promoters of an act of parliament, whereby a company is created and empowered to raise capital and carry out works, and, if they so resolve, to raise separate capital for and carry out separately certain portions of such works as a separate undertaking, agree to pay certain claims out of the first capital raised by the company and the company duly raise capital for the separate undertaking and none other, the solicitors are not liable under the agreement. Allan v. Regent's Canal, City and Docks Ry., 54 L. J., Q. B. 201. Reversed in C. A.

—— Delay in Application.]—An attorney for a defendant in a feigned issue undertook to pay a given sum of money on a given day. The money was not demanded on the day specified, but repeated applications were subsequently made for the money in vain. Between three and four years after the money became due, a summary application was made to the court to compel the attorney to pay the money pursuant to his undertaking. The court, notwithstanding the delay which had taken place, made the rule absolute, with costs. Swan, In re, 1 B. C. Rep. 99; 15 L. J., Q. B. 402; 10 Jur. 715.

To repay Costs if pending Appeal successful.]—Where a successful plaintiff's solicitor was paid his taxed costs by the defendant on his giving the usual undertaking to repay the same if a pending appeal by the defendant was successful, the court enforced such undertaking on the appeal being successful although execution was stayed. Swyny v. Harland, 63 L. J., Q. B. 415; [1894] 1 Q. B. 707; 9 R. 210; 70 L. T. 227; 42 W. R. 297—C. A.

To enter Appearance.]—Where in a collision action in rem solicitors for the defendants accept service of the writ and indorse it with the words, "We accept service on behalf of the defendants, the owners of the 'A.,' and undertake to put in bail in a sum not exceeding the value of the said barque 'A.'" and in consequence of their authority being withdrawn by the defendants they do not enter an appearance, they do not thereby commit a breach of their undertaking so as to render themselves liable to attachment, inasmuch as they have never expressly undertaken to appear. The Anna and Bertha, 64 L. T. 332; 7 Asp. M. C. 31.

To Withdraw Pleas.]—If an undertaking given by an attorney to withdraw pleas is not carried out, and the plaintiff in consequence loses the benefit of a subsequent judgment, the defendant's attorney is not necessarily liable for the plaintiff's debt and costs. Burnett v. Provis, 22 L. T. 543.

An action having been compromised, the defendant and his solicitors signed an agreement that if the defendant did not carry out its terms his solicitors would withdraw the plea:—Held, that the solicitors were personally liable for not withdrawing the plea and that they did not sign the agreement merely as agents for the defendant. Leedham v. Smith, 4 W. R. 241.

To add Parties.]—Upon an alleged misjoinder of husband and wife as petitioners, counsel, upon the instructions of the solicitor, undertook to amend by making it the petition of the wife by her next friend:—Held, that the solicitor was not personally responsible for the performance of the undertaking. Williams, In re, 12 Beav. 510; 19 L. J., Ch. 422; 14 Jur. 561.

Not to Molest Witness.]—On motion, which was opposed, to enlarge the time for closing evidence until one month after the production, as a witness, of S., an order granting the enlarged time was made, upon the undertaking of both B., the husband of S., and his solicitor, that in the event of S. being produced for examination, no attempt should be made, either directly or indirectly, to discover her place of residence, or in any way to molest her. B. and his solicitor signed the registrar's book at the foot of the undertaking. On the examination of S. before the examiner, the solicitor of B., after the terms of the undertaking had been read to him, served her with a subpœna to attend as a witness in another cause:—Held, that the service of the subpœna upon S. while before the examiner amounted to an act of molestation; and though the court would not commit the solicitor to prison, yet it ordered him to pay the costs of an application to commit him. Lawford v. Spicer, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 564; 4 W. R. 497.

To Pay Legacy Duty.]—Where an attorney was intrusted by executors with a sum of money for the purpose of paying legacy duty, and failed so to apply it, the court refused to interfere summarily to compel him to refund the money, as it did not appear that this employment was necessarily in his professional character, or that he had on other occasions ever acted as attorney for the parties. Webb, In re, 2 D. & L. 932; 14 L. J., Q. B. 244; 9 Jur. 538.

Guarantee as Surety.]—Where a party, about to borrow money to carry on a lawsuit in an ecclesiastical or in an Irish court, referred the lender to an attorney to inform him of the nature of the suit, and the latter gave a guarantee of the loan, but one on which an action would not lie:—Held, that the court would not interfere summarily to enforce the guarantee. Kearns, In re, 11 Jur. 521.

To give Security for Costs.]—A defendant obtained a judge's order in the following terms: "It is ordered that the plaintiff do forthwith give security for costs to the satisfaction of the master; no stay of proceedings in the meantime, the attorney for the plaintiff hereby undertaking to find such security":—Held, that the attorney was not bound to find security for costs unless further proceedings were taken by the plaintiff. Hill v. Fletcher, 5 Ex. 470; 1 L. M. & P. 518; 19 L. J., Ex. 320.

To obtain Client's Consent to a Reference.]—Where an attorney, in order to get possession of papers belonging to A., in the hands of A.'s former attorney, who had a lien upon them for the amount of a bill then in dispute, undertook that A. should enter into an unqualified reference not revocable:—Held, that the attorney was liable, pursuant to his undertaking, to procure A.'s signature to an agreement of reference, and to find security for the performance of an award to the satisfaction of the master. Hughes, Ex parte, 5 B. & Ald. 482.

When Acting as Agent.]—Upon a proposed sale of a bankrupt's effects, the plaintiff gave notice of a claim to part under a bill of sale, whereupon the solicitors of the assignees wrote to the plaintiff's solicitors in these terms: "In consideration of A., for whom you act, consenting to the sale, we hereby, on behalf of the assignees, consent," &c.; to which the plaintiff's attorneys answered in these terms: "In compliance with the undertaking given by you herein, we, on the part of the plaintiff, consent to the sale":—Held, that these letters shewed, upon the face of them, under the circumstances, that the solicitors of the assignees professed to contract only as agents. Lewis v. Nicholson, 18 Q. B. 503; 21 L. J., Q. B. 311; 16 Jur. 1041.

An attorney wrote the following letter to the plaintiff: "Sir,—Mr. Wright has handed me your letter of the 3rd respecting the nonpayment of the bill for 91*l.* due on Saturday. I am now making arrangements for an advance to Mr. Wright, to enable him to pay this and other claims upon him, and if you will have the goodness to hold the bill for a few days, I shall be prepared on his behalf to take it up." The plaintiff had no further communication with the attorney, and on the receipt of the letter was not aware that he was an attorney:—Held, that this letter did not render him personally liable. Allaway v. Duncan, 16 L. T. 264; 15 W. R. 711.

A solicitor contracted, in his own name, to purchase a freehold; he resisted the performance of it on the ground that he had acted as the mere agent of a client, and that, it being a case of hardship, damages at law would be an adequate remedy to the vendor:—Held, that he was bound to perform the contract. Saxon v. Blake, 29 Beav. 438.

An attorney on behalf of his client, the defendant, promises to pay 500*l.* to plaintiff; this being done by the authority of the client, attorney not liable, but only client. Otherwise, if the attorney had no authority from client to make this engagement. Johnson v. Ogilby, 3 P. Wms. 277.

When Acting for Company.]—Where an attorney of a railway company contracted as such, but managed all the concerns of the company, there being no acting committee:—Held, that the attorney was not personally liable under such contracts. Russell v. Reece, 2 Car. & K. 669.

Effect of Client's Death.]—An undertaking by a defendant's solicitor to pay debt and costs is enforceable, though the defendant dies before taxation. Hellings v. Jones, 3 Bing. 70; 10 Moore, 360; 3 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 164.

Semble, the defendant's attorney, having given a written undertaking to pay to the plaintiff whatever the deficit might be on a sale of the mortgaged premises under the decree in a foreclosure suit, will be compelled to perform it, notwithstanding the death of his client. Bailey v. Daniell, Hay. & J. 586.

When Discharged.]—Where an attorney undertook to pay the sum which should be awarded to be paid by his client in a particular reference, the arbitrator having to make his award by a particular day, did not do so, and the judge's order for enlarging the time was made by consent, the attorney acting on that occasion for his client:—The court held him discharged from his undertaking, he not having recognised it after the original time for making the award had expired. Staite v. Haddon, 9 D. P. C. 995.

So where a defendants' attorney, on their being sued by the plaintiff, undertook by letter to procure their signature to a cognovit for the payment of the debt and costs, which he failed to do; but the plaintiff afterwards said that he would proceed with the action:—Held, that this was virtually a waiver of the attorney's undertaking, and that he could not be called on by the court to perform it. Miller v. James, 8 Moore, 208.

Mode of Enforcing.]—The undertaking of an attorney can only be enforced by attachment where he has given it for his client. Watts, Ex parte, 1 D. P. C. 512.

An attorney not entering an appearance in pursuance of his undertaking was liable to an attachment, under Reg. Gen., Hil. Term, 1853. Jacob v. Magnay, 12 L. J., Q. B. 93; 7 Jur. 326. S. P., Mould v. Roberts, 4 D. & R. 719.

Although on an auditâ querelâ personal service of the original process cannot be dispensed with, yet an attorney who undertakes to accept process and appear for the defendant may be punished by attachment for not performing his undertaking. Williams v. Roberts 1 L. M. & P. 381; 19 L. J., Ex. 269; 14 Jur. 399.

Application—Service of.]—Service of a rule calling on an attorney for payment of money pursuant to his undertaking, on a clerk not in his employ, although at the place registered at the master's office as the place for serving the attorney with rules and other proceedings, is not sufficient. Bragg v. Hatchard, 28 L. J., Ex. 35.

—— By whom Made.]—On summary proceedings against a solicitor to enforce an undertaking given by him to the solicitor of the other party, such undertaking is for the benefit of the client, and the application must be made on behalf of the client and not of his solicitor. Lee, Ex parte, 10 W. R. 699.

III. ATTACHMENT.

Enforcing Undertakings.]—See supra.

Disobedience to Order of Court.]—The first step, when a solicitor neglects to obey an order of court, is to move for his attachment. Anon., 36 L. T. 113.

Where an attorney is in contempt for disobeying a rule, the proper course of proceeding against him is by moving for an attachment, and not by applying to strike him off the roll. Townley, Ex parte, 3 D. P. C. 39.

Where an attorney disobeys a rule of court requiring him to do a particular act, an application cannot in the first instance be made to strike him off the roll, but a rule nisi for an attachment may be obtained; if by the same rule he is required to pay certain costs, and a clause is also introduced into it authorising the issue of attachment in case of nonpayment, that may at once issue although a rule nisi only will be granted for disobedience to the other part of the rule. Grant, Ex parte, 3 D. P. C. 320.

Twelve months after issue joined in an action, a judge made an order that the plaintiff's attorney should declare in writing to the defendant the plaintiff's occupation, and that after five days all further proceedings should be stayed until such delivery. The order having been served and disobeyed:—Held, that the order was not within 15 & 16 Vict. c. 52, s. 7, and that an attachment would not lie against the attorney for such disobedience. Malpas v. Mudd, 3 H. & N. 246; 27 L. J., Ex. 367.

To entitle a defendant to obtain an attachment against an attorney for disobeying an order of a judge, made for not declaring the place of abode of the plaintiff, he must have made a demand in writing. Brown v. Wigens, 7 L. T. 622.

See PRACTICE (WRIT).

Default in Payment subsequent to Order Striking off Roll.]—Where a solicitor makes default in payment of a sum of money which he has been ordered to pay in the character of an officer of the court, he is not the less liable to an attachment because in the interval between the date of the order and the time fixed for payment he has been struck off the roll, and has ceased to be a solicitor. Strong, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 553; 32 Ch. D. 342; 55 L. T. 3; 34 W. R. 614; 51 J. P. 6—C. A.

Unqualified Person acting as Solicitor.]—An order had been made against an unqualified person acting as a solicitor, on the assumption that he was a solicitor, for the delivery up of documents by him and for an account. This order he disobeyed. Upon an application for attachment:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to make an order of attachment against such a person, notwithstanding that he was not in fact qualified to act as a solicitor. Hulm and Lewis, In re, 61 L. J., Q. B. 502; [1892] 2 Q. B. 261; 66 L. T. 683.

An Officer of the Court.]—A solicitor received on behalf of a client a sum of 339*l.*, which he paid into his account with his own bankers and dealt with as his own money. He afterwards forwarded to his client a sum of 100*l.*, and refused to pay the balance, on the ground that he had a claim against an agent whom his client had employed to communicate with him. Application having been made to the queen's bench division to compel the solicitor to pay the money, the matter was referred to a master, who reported that the balance was due from the solicitor to his client. An order was made by the queen's bench division, and also a subsequent order was made at chambers, that the solicitor should pay the balance claimed to his client. These orders not having been complied with, an order for the attachment of the solicitor was made by a judge at chambers:—Held, that the orders for the payment of the balance claimed were not merely in the nature of civil process, but were orders made against the solicitor as an officer of the court, and that an attachment was properly granted. Ball, In re (L. R. 8 C. P. 104) explained. Freston, In re (11 Q. B. D. 545) followed. Dudley, In re, Monet, Ex parte, 53 L. J., Q. B. 16; 12 Q. B. D. 44; 49 L. T. 737; 32 W. R. 264—C. A.

A solicitor, employed to obtain money charged on lands sold in the landed estates court of Ireland, proved the claim, and having drawn out the money by means of a power of attorney, executed by his client under his own advice, failed to pay it over to the client:—Held, that his misconduct was committed in his capacity of solicitor, and that he was accordingly liable to attachment. M., In re, 1 L. R., Ir. 188—L.JJ.

Order for Payment of Money.]—Where money has been wrongfully detained by an attorney from his client, and a rule requiring him to pay that money over has been made absolute against him, it being clearly shewn that he was aware of what the rule required him to do, the court granted a rule for an attachment absolute in the first instance, he not having complied with the rule. Burgin, Ex parte, 1 D. (N.S.) 292.

Where an attorney employed to recover a debt received the money, and a rule of court was obtained ordering him to pay it over, which he disobeyed, the court refused to grant an attachment, as the remedy for the disobedience of the rule was by proceeding under 1 & 2, Vict. c. 110, s. 18. Robinson, In re, 10 B. & S. 75.

The court will refuse to grant an attachment against an attorney for disobeying a rule of court ordering him to pay money, unless special circumstances are shewn, as the remedy for such disobedience is by execution under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 18. Ball, In re, 42 L. J., C. P. 104; L. R. 8 C. P. 104.

When a solicitor made default in the payment of a sum of money which he received on behalf of his client, and an order for payment within a certain date was obtained from the court, the client undertaking to give credit for any sum due by her, on nonpayment of the sum, within the fixed period, an order for an attachment was obtained. The solicitor not having made any affidavit of credits due from the client, was not allowed to treat them as a set-off against the sum for nonpayment of which the attachment was sought. Anon., 22 W. R. 479.

See also infra, PAYMENT OF MONEY, post, col. 1511.

For Negligence.]—Where a solicitor has been negligent in attending to a client's business, the court can grant an attachment against him; and courts of law exercise the same summary jurisdiction over attorneys. Floyd v. Nangle, 3 Atk. 568. S. C., nom. Lloyd v. Nangle, Dick. 129.

Order to deliver up Documents.]—The court will not issue an attachment against an attorney for not delivering up papers pursuant to a rule of court, unless shewn that the person making the demand was duly authorised to do so, and stated that fact to the attorney. Doe d. Hickman v. Hickman, 8 D. P. C. 833. See Dicas, In re, 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 183.

A judge's order having been made directing an attorney to deliver up deeds to a client, the court granted an attachment against him for refusing to deliver them up unless the client would pay him for a schedule thereof, to be kept by the attorney. Willand, Ex parte, 11 C. B. 544.

See also infra, DELIVERY UP OF DOCUMENTS, post, col. 1503.

Debtors Act, 1869, s. 4, sub-s. 4.]—The default by a solicitor in payment of a balance found due from him upon taxation of his bill under the common order for that purpose is in default in payment of a sum of money ordered to be paid by the solicitor in his character of an officer of the court within the meaning of the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 4, sub-s. 4, and an attachment may be issued against him. Rush, In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 159; L. R. 9 Eq. 147; 21 L. T. 692; 18 W. R. 331. S. P., W., In re, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 355; 22 W. R. 479.

A solicitor may be imprisoned for default in payment of a balance ordered to be paid on a common order to tax his bill of costs. Ib.

Default by a solicitor in payment of the balance found due from him to his client upon taxation, under the common order, is default in payment of a sum of money, when ordered to be paid by a solicitor in his character of an officer of the court (Debtors Act, 1869, s. 4), and an attachment may be issued against him. White, In re, 23 L. T. 387; 19 W. R. 39.

Default by a solicitor in payment of a bill of costs found on taxation to be due from him to another solicitor whom he had employed to act for him, is "default by a solicitor in payment of a sum of money, when ordered to pay the same in his character of an officer of the court making the order," within the fourth exception to the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 4, and an attachment may be issued against him. Barfield, In re, 24 L. T. 248; 19 W. R. 466.

A solicitor was ordered to pay the costs of an unsuccessful appeal against an order to tax his bill of costs, which had been obtained by his client:—Held, that the nonpayment of the costs of the appeal was not a default in payment of money within the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 4, sub-s. 4. Hope, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 797; L. R. 7 Ch. 523; 26 L. T. 814; 20 W. R. 694.

Of the three possible periods for ascertaining whether the person ordered to pay and making default held the character of a solicitor, and was as such within the exception of s. 4, sub-s. 4, of the Debtors Act, 1869, viz.:—(1) of the act done; (2) of the order made; or (3) of the default committed, that to be looked to is, if not the first, at the latest the second period. In cases of a trustee and person acting in a fiduciary capacity (sub-s. 3) (and per Fry, L.J., in that of a solicitor also) the period to be looked to is that of the act done. Strong, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 553; 32 Ch. D. 342; 55 L. T. 3; 34 W. R. 614; 51 J. P. 6—C. A.

—— Part Payment.]—A writ of attachment against a solicitor for nonpayment of a sum of money due from him as an officer of the court may be executed, although the client has since the issue of the writ accepted a sum of money in part payment. Harvey v. Hall (L. R. 16 Eq. 324) distinguished. Fereday, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 894; [1895] 2 Ch. 437; 13 R. 639; 73 L. T. 56.

—— Town Agent of Country Solicitor.]—A solicitor, the London agent of a country solicitor, made default in payment of a sum ordered to be paid by him in an action for an account of his agency:—Held, that the defendant was liable to imprisonment under s. 4, sub-s. 3, of the Debtors Act, 1869, as a person acting in a fiduciary capacity, but not liable under s. 4, sub-s. 4, as a solicitor ordered to pay in his capacity of officer of the court. Litchfield v. Jones, 57 L. J., Ch. 100; 36 Ch. D. 530; 58 L. T. 20; 36 W. R. 397.

—— How Discharged from Prison.]—When a solicitor has been committed to prison under the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 4, for disobeying an order to pay money into court, on the expiration of twelve months he can be discharged only after obtaining an order of the court. Thompson, In re, Nalty v. Aylett, 30 L. T. 783; 22 W. R. 857.

Not Refunding Money pursuant to Master's Allocatur.] — An attachment may be issued against an attorney for not refunding a sum of money pursuant to the master's allocatur, without a previous rule to show cause. Anon., 10 Jur. 198, n.

When Right Lost.]—A solicitor was ordered to pay money to a receiver of the court on pain of sequestration and imprisonment. His property was seized on a fi. fa. under the order, but possession was given up under an agreement:—Held, on breach of the agreement by him, that he could not be attached under the order. Harvey v. Hill, 43 L. J., Ch. 95; L. R. 16 Eq. 324; 28 L. T. 734; 21 W. R. 783. See Fereday, In re, supra.

Solicitor not Shewing Cause.]—A rule requiring an attorney to shew cause why he should not pay a sum of money, was enlarged at his request, but no cause being shewn, and the rule being made absolute, the court granted an attachment absolute in the first instance. Brightmore, Ex parte, 6 Jur. 15.

Disobedience to a Subpœna.]—An attachment will lie against a solicitor of a parish for disobedience to a subpœna duces tecum from the crown office, requiring him to produce the rate-books of the parish at petty sessions in an inquiry into a pauper's settlement. Reg. v. Carey, 2 New Sess. Cas. 103.

Order requiring Client to Pay.]—If a rule of court requires a client to pay a certain sum of money, an attachment cannot be obtained against his attorney for its nonpayment. Poole v. Watkins, 4 D. P. C. 11.

Delivering Account Ordered — Incorrect.]—Where a client obtained an order that his attorneys should deliver him an account of all moneys received on his behalf, and they accordingly delivered an account, the court refused to grant an attachment against them upon affidavits impeaching the correctness of the account. Lawrence, Ex parte, 2 D. P. C. 230.

Effect of Bankruptcy.]—A bankrupt's certificate does not remove an attorney's liability to an attachment for not duly investing his client's money. Grant, Ex parte, 3 D. P. C. 320. See Newberry, In re, 5 N. & M. 419; 1 H. & W. 375; 5 A. & E. 100; 5 L. J., K. B. 4.

An attachment against a solicitor for his default in the payment of a sum of money, which he has been ordered to pay in his character of an officer of the court, is not a merely civil process, but is in its nature punitive or disciplinary, and therefore the fact that a receiving order in bankruptcy has been made against the solicitor is not of itself a sufficient reason for refusing to issue an attachment against him in such a case; but that when such an order for the payment of money has been made against a solicitor before the making of a receiving order against him, and he has not obeyed it, the court has, under s. 10 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, a discretion whether it will order an attachment to issue by way of punishment to the solicitor, and it will decline to do so if it is satisfied that the person who asks for the order can derive no benefit from it, and that the making of it will embarrass the bankruptcy proceedings. Sect. 9, sub-s. 1, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, does not apply to proceedings pending against a debtor at the time when a receiving order is made against him. On appeal:—Held, that the court of appeal would not interfere with the discretion of the court below. Wray, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 1106; 36 Ch. D. 138; 57 L. T. 605; 36 W. R. 67—C. A.

Misdescription of Parties.] — The court set aside an attachment against an attorney for not paying over moneys received in his professional character, where the party obtaining it had described herself in her affidavit as a widow, whereas she was at that time a married woman, although it did not appear that the false name and descriptions were used for any fraudulent purpose. Reg. v. Carttar, 1 L. M. & P. 386; 19 L. J., Q. B. 422.

An attachment was ordered absolutely in the first instance against an attorney for nonpayment of money to another attorney of the party, for whom the former had been changed pursuant to an order of the court; although in that order, as well as in the order for changing the attorney, he had been called John, whereas his real name was James; but he had attended several summonses taken out as against John, and had consented to some of them without objecting to the misnomer, which cured the mistake. Stevenson v. Power, 9 Price, 384.

Not without Notice.]—Under an order to tax made in 1873, a balance was found due from a solicitor in respect of moneys received by him, and ought to have been paid within twenty-one days from the 21st of August, 1875:—Held, that the case was governed by Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. XLIV. r. 2, and that an attachment for nonpayment could not be issued without notice to the solicitor. Solicitor, In re, 1 Ch. D. 445; 24 W. R. 103.

Service of Order against Solicitor.]—An action was ordered to be stayed, and the costs of the defendants to be paid by the plaintiff's solicitor. The order was served by leaving a copy at the office of the solicitor, but was not obeyed. Upon the application of the defendants, the court made an order for an attachment to issue against the solicitor, and for payment by him of the costs, of the application and the attachment as between solicitor and client. Tilney v. Stansfield, 28 W. R. 582.

Personal service of an attachment against an attorney for not paying money pursuant to the master's allocatur cannot be dispensed with. Anon., 1 D. & R. 529.

Service of Rule Nisi.] — A notice of motion for a writ of attachment for disobedience to an order made on an original petition need not, as well as the order, be served personally on the respondent to the petition, but may be served by being left at his residence. Browning v. Sabin (5 Ch. D. 511) explained. Ryan, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 295 ; 14 Ch. D. 152 ; 42 L. T. 310 ; 28 W. R. 529.

On a motion for an attachment against an attorney for disobeying a rule, it is sufficient if it can be collected from the affidavit of service that such rule has been personally served ; it is not necessary that the words "personal service" should be used. Short v. Smith, 1 Man. & G. 211 ; 8 D. P. C. 584 ; 1 Scott (N.R.) 153.

A rule nisi was obtained against a solicitor to shew cause why an attachment should not issue against him for disobedience to an order of the court. There was no personal service of such rule nisi upon him. He had at one time instructed counsel to show cause against the making absolute of such rule, and such counsel had consented to an application for a postponement of the hearing being made to the court by the counsel for the applicant, but upon the application to make absolute the rule nisi, the counsel who had been instructed formerly did not appear, nor did anyone appear on behalf of the solicitor. The court held that personal service might, under the circumstances, be dispensed with, and made absolute the rule for an attachment. Alcock, In re, 45 L. J., C. P. 86 ; 1 C. P. D. 68 ; 33 L. T. 532 ; 24 W. R. 320.

Service of a notice of motion for a writ of attachment upon the solicitor on the record, of the party against whom the attachment is to be issued, is sufficient notice to the party, without personal service. Browning v. Sabin, 46 L. J., Ch. 728 ; 5 Ch. D. 511.

A notice of motion under Ord. XLIV. r. 2, for leave to issue a writ of attachment, is sufficiently served upon the solicitor upon the record of the party against whom the attachment is to issue. Richards v. Kitchin, 36 L. T. 730 ; 25 W. R. 602.

Service of a rule on the London agent of a country firm is good service, so as to found a motion for a contempt against a partner who allows it, but it is not sufficient as regards the other partner. Holiday, In re, 9 D. P. C. 1020 ; 5 Jur. 532.

Order for Delivery of Bill not complied with.]—See post, col. 1547.

IV. DELIVERY UP OF DOCUMENTS.

Production of Documents for the Purposes of Evidence.]—See EVIDENCE.

When Order will be made.]—The court will not summarily order a solicitor to deliver up a deed to his client unless it be clearly shown not only that his solicitor has no lien upon it, but that he is holding it for the applicant alone, and as his solicitor. Cobeldick, Ex parte, 12 Q. B. D. 149 ; 49 L. T. 741 ; 32 W. R. 239—C. A.

Death of Solicitor.]—An administrator appointed pendente lite is entitled to call upon the late attorney of the deceased to deliver up deeds and papers belonging to the deceased, which are in his possession. Du Faur, Ex parte, 3 Hodges, 135.

The court refused to grant a rule calling upon an attorney to deliver up papers, when it appeared that the documents had come into his possession as executor to his father, who had been attorney to the applicant, but where the applicant did not adopt the son as his professional agent. Nicholls, Ex parte, 2 D. (N.S.) 423 ; 12 L. J., Q. B. 103 ; 7 Jur. 374.

No Cause in Court.]—Order, without cause in court, upon general jurisdiction over solicitor, that he shall deliver his bill for purposes of getting from him title deeds deposited with him for suffering recoveries, &c. Uxbridge (Earl), Ex parte, 6 Ves. 425.

Where a solicitor has in his possession deeds and papers belonging to his client, which he refuses to part with, the court has jurisdiction to order the solicitor to deliver the deeds and papers, and also his bill of costs, the party offering to pay what the master shall find to be due to him, though there is no cause pending, and though no part of the costs has been incurred in respect of any action or suit in law or equity. Murray, In re, 1 Russ. 519.

Though there is no cause pending, the court will order a solicitor to deliver up deeds and writings in his possession, the party undertaking to pay him the costs justly due to him ; and, as incident to that jurisdiction, it will order the costs to be taxed, though no part of the costs relates to suits or actions. ——, In re, 4 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 207.

What Costs.]—Where a solicitor refuses to deliver up deeds and papers in his possession, except upon payment of his bill of costs, the court has jurisdiction to order taxation of such bill, and the delivery up of the deeds and papers, upon payment of the taxed costs, though the costs have been incurred in respect of conveyancing and other general business, and not in respect of the prosecution or defence of any suit or action. Rice, In re, 2 Keen, 181 ; 6 L. J., Ch. 291 ; 1 Jur. 351. See two preceding Cases.

A solicitor prepared and obtained the execution of a conveyance, knowing the title deeds were in the possession of an adverse party. The sale went off in consequence of absence of title deeds, and the conveyance, being a cloud on the title, was ordered to be delivered up by the solicitor without payment of his costs. Potts v. Dutton, 8 Beav. 493.

When Solicitor has a Lien upon them.]—The court will not order an attorney to deliver up papers on which he has a lien for a balance of a bill of costs, although an offer is made to pay the amount into court, subject to the verdict of a jury. Broomhead, In re, 5 D. & L. 52 ; 16 L. J., Q. B. 355. S. P., Cobeldick, Ex parte, supra.

—— Payment into Court or giving Security.]—The court has jurisdiction, upon payment into court, or giving security for a sum sufficient to answer the solicitor's demand, to order before taxation delivery up by a solicitor of the client's papers, where retention by the solicitor of the papers on which he claims a lien would embarrass the client in the prosecution or defence of pending actions. Quære (per Lindley, L.J.), whether the jurisdiction is not extended by Ord. L. r. 8. Galland, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 478 ; 31 Ch. D. 296 ; 53 L. T. 921 ; 34 W. R. 158—C. A.

Where a solicitor had been appointed clerk to a local board, with a salary, for conducting the legal as well as the ordinary business of the board :—Held, that an order for production of papers would prejudice the clerk's lien, it could not be made before the trial of the action without payment into court of a sum sufficient to meet the amount claimed by the clerk, upon which he was to have the same lien as upon the papers; and the court ordered that upon that being done the clerk should deliver up to the plaintiffs all books and papers claimed. Newington Local Board v. Eldridge, 12 Ch. D. 349—C. A.

Where a party has a pressing necessity for papers in the hands of his solicitor, the court will order them to be delivered up, upon a deposit being made, sufficient to cover the amount of the solicitor's bill and the costs of the taxation. Clutton v. Pardon, Turn. & R. 304; 24 R. R. 68.

A solicitor, who had by deposit of his client a lien on deeds for costs and other moneys, was ordered to deliver them up to his client on payment into court by the latter of a sum sufficient to cover the demand, and the usual taxation was directed. Mills v. Finlay, 1 Beav. 560.

Where the committees of a lunatic had been authorised by the court to raise money by a mortgage of his estate, but were unable to do so, in consequence of some of the title deeds being in the hands of solicitors, who claimed a lien upon them, but the items of their accounts were disputed, the court ordered that the mortgagee should be at liberty to pay to the committees a sufficient sum to discharge the lien on the title deeds, without prejudice to their right to have the accounts investigated. Davies, In re, 12 L. J., Ch. 456; 7 Jur. 584.

In a suit instituted against a solicitor, who had also acted in the capacity of steward for an account, and for delivery of title deeds, the court upon motion ordered the deeds to be delivered up to the plaintiff, upon payment into court of so much of the balance claimed by the answer, as was not covered by any security. Balch v. Symes, Turn. & R. 87; 23 R. R. 195. See Tyler v. Drayton, 2 Sim. & S. 309.

The lien of a solicitor on the papers of his client for the amount of his bill is equivalent to a contract; and, therefore, a solicitor will not be ordered to deliver up such papers until he is actually paid; and, semble, that payment into court of a sum of money is not sufficient to entitle the client to demand the papers; but semble also, that if the solicitor's withholding a document would occasion the loss of the property to which it relates, the court will make such an order as, without prejudicing the solicitor's lien, will allow of the documents being made available for the purpose of securing the property. Richards v. Platel, Cr. & Ph. 79; 10 L. J., Ch. 379; 5 Jur. 834.

It requires a strong case to induce the court to take the papers from a solicitor; still this court has authority to compel the production of the deeds upon the money being brought into court. Blunden v. Desart, 2 Con. & L. 111; 2 Dr. & War. 405; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 221.

The court will, before the completion of the taxation, order the delivery up of papers by a solicitor to his client, either upon payment into court of the amount claimed, or in case it appears from the solicitor's own account that a balance is due from him to his client. Bevan and Whitting, In re, 33 Beav. 439.

A solicitor ordered, pending a taxation of his bill, to deliver over his client's papers, on the client undertaking to produce them, and giving security for the amount claimed. Jewitt, In re, 34 Beav. 22.

Upon an application for delivery over of all documents in a discharged solicitor's possession made by clients undertaking to pay into court a sum amply sufficient to secure the solicitor in respect of all demands, the court will make the order asked for, provided that circumstances of pressing necessity are shewn. South Essex Equitable Investment and Advance Co., In re, 46 L. T. 280.

A solicitor, having a lien upon a deed for his costs, will not be ordered to deliver his bill, nor deliver up the deed without getting an express undertaking that his costs will be paid when taxed. M'Kenny v. Chambers, Jon. & C. 105.

The court will not order a solicitor to deliver up papers in his hands before his bill is taxed, on payment of money on account. Dyer v. Bowley, 2 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 41.

No Retainer—Estoppel.]—If a party successfully resists an action by an attorney for costs, on the ground of his never having been employed, he cannot afterwards summarily compel the attorney to give up documents which have come into his possession in the course of the business, for doing which the action was brought. Maxwell, Ex parte, 4 D. P. C. 87.

When Solicitor holds as Party or Trustee.]—The court will not compel an attorney to deliver up a deed where he holds it as a party or trustee. Pearson v. Sutton, 5 Taunt. 364.

But the court ordered an attorney, who held a deed as trustee, to deliver the draft of it to the cestui que trust, who had paid for the deed and draft. Holdsworth, Ex parte, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 386; 6 Scott, 170; 1 Arn. 189; 7 L. J., C. P. 225.

Where an attorney has drawn his own marriage settlement, under which he takes no interest, but is mentioned in it, and it is deposited with him for safety, the court will not compel him to give it up at the instance of a trustee under it. Moxon, Ex parte, 1 D. P. C. 7.

In Solicitor's Hands for Professional Purposes.]—The court will not compel an attorney to deliver up, on payment of his demand, a lease put into his hands for the purpose of making an assignment of it; there being no cause in court, nor any criminal conduct imputed to him in respect of it. Lowe, In re, 8 East, 237.

The court refused to order an attorney to deliver up a deed which had been given to him by one of the parties to it, to get executed by his client, who was another party. Smart, Ex parte, 1 H. & W. 526.

If an attorney receives possession of a deed from A., his client, in which B. is also interested, the court cannot compel the attorney, in an action brought against him by B., to give B. a copy of the deed. Miers v. Evans, 3 Jur. 170.

Where an attorney is employed by certain cestui que trusts, the court will not compel him to deliver up deeds to one of several trustees, one of such trustees objecting to the application. Gregory, In re, 6 Jur. 282.

A bond was taken from A., by a magistrate, on the charge of obtaining it by false pretences. A bill before the grand jury having been ignored, the bond was given to the attorney for the prosecution, who refused to deliver it up:—Held, that the court could not interfere. Morris, Ex parte, W. W. & D. 59; 1 Jur. 151.

The court will not compel an attorney to deliver up, on payment of what is due to him, deeds which have been intrusted to him for the purpose of raising money upon them. Millard, In re, 1 D. P. C. 140.

But he is bound upon inquiry by his client, to inform him where such deeds are. Wilmott v. Elkington, 1 N. & M. 749 ; 2 L. J., K. B. 103.

The court can only interfere to compel an attorney to deliver up deeds in his possession, at the instance of the party who deposited them with him. Thornton, In re, 2 D. P. C. 156. See Bunting, In re, 2 A. & E. 467.

An attorney, with whom a will has been deposited by the testator, will not be compelled to deliver it up to the sole legatee under it. Crisp, Ex parte, 2 D. P. C. 455.

Where parties settle a case, without the intervention of the attorney, that settlement is no answer to an application against the attorney to deliver up the record to the opposite party, when successful. Baber v. Harris, 7 D. P. C. 589.

After Payment by Client.]—An attorney is not entitled to retain drafts and copies of original deeds for which his client has paid ; and if he will not deliver them up, the court will compel him to do so. Horsfall, Ex parte, 7 B. & C. 528 ; 1 M. & Ry. 306 ; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 48 ; 31 R. R. 266.

If A. has employed B. as his attorney, and has paid his bill, A. has a right to have his papers delivered up to him. Anderson v. Passman, 7 Car. & P. 193.

Solicitors, instructed by a committee of an association to carry on various matters of business for and on behalf of the association, having recovered judgment against one of the committee, for the amount of their bills of costs in respect of such matters, cannot be made to deliver up, to such defendant, the judgment after it has been paid and satisfied by him, or other securities connected with the debt held by them, either in virtue of the general jurisdiction of the court over solicitors as its officers, or under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 5 ; the defendant can only proceed by action. Phillips v. Dickson, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 391 ; 29 L. J., C. P. 223 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 401 ; 2 L. T. 185 ; 8 W. R. 390.

Promissory Note obtained from Client by Duress.]—Where, during the imprisonment of a person, he employed an attorney to conduct an application for his discharge by the insolvent court, and the attorney refused to proceed until he had signed a promissory note, which he did, under protest ; and after his discharge an action was brought upon the note in the name of the clerk of the attorney, who was believed not to be interested in it, the court refused to grant a rule, calling upon the attorney to give up the note, upon the ground of its having been obtained by duress and fraud, but left the defendant to plead the facts as a defence to the action. Watts v. Blaney, 1 D. & L. 203; 7 Jur. 854.

Where Solicitor a Steward.]—The court, under special circumstances, will entertain a summary jurisdiction over an attorney, by obliging him to deliver up deeds, on satisfaction of his lien, though they came into his hands as steward of a court and receiver of rents. Hughes v. Mayre, 3 Term Rep. 275. Grubb, Ex parte, 5 Taunt. 206 ; 14 R. R. 743. See Cocks v. Harman, 6 East, 404 ; 2 Smith, 409 ; 8 R. R. 505.

In Case of Bankruptcy.]—Where a client has deposited a deed in the hands of his attorney, and the latter afterwards becomes a bankrupt, the court will not summarily interfere to compel the assignees to deliver up those deeds which have come to their hands from the bankrupt. Roy, Ex parte, 4 D. P. C. 573 ; 1 H. & W. 669.

An attorney who receives a deed from his client, and is compelled to produce it by commissioners of bankrupt, and afterwards receives it back from them, undertaking to produce it again if required, may nevertheless refuse to produce it in an action by the assignee of the bankrupt, under whose commission he was compelled to produce it. Nixon v. Mayoh, 1 M. & Rob. 76.

When Solicitor in Prison.]—A solicitor, in custody for debt, being incapacitated from practising, was ordered to deliver up his client's papers in pending suits, without payment of his costs, but to be held subject to his lien. Williams, In re, 28 Beav. 465 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 908 ; 8 W. R. 645.

Demand.]—A demand for papers must be made by one duly authorised to give a receipt for them. Dicas, In re, 9 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 183. S. P., Doe d. Hickman v. Hickman, 8 D. P. C. 833.

Of Papers of Two Persons Jointly.]—Where an attorney has a lien upon the papers of two persons jointly, the court will not try the rights of the parties by directing to whom they shall be given up upon the lien being satisfied. Duncan v. Richmond, 1 Moore, 99 ; 7 Taunt. 391.

Order—Form of.]—An order of course to tax directed that, on payment, all the papers, &c., of the client should be delivered up. The solicitor claimed a special lien on some of the papers beyond the costs. A motion to discharge the order was refused, because, if the solicitor had such special lien, he would be protected when application was made to the court, for the delivery of the papers. Teague, In re, 11 Beav. 318.

In making an order for taxation, under s. 38 of the Solicitors Act, 1843, it is discretionary with the court whether or not to add the order for the delivery up of papers. Jarman, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Ch. 485 ; 4 Ch. D. 835.

A solicitor delivered to his client a bill of costs incurred in pending suits, in which he afterwards, with his client's knowledge, incurred further costs. While the suits were still pending, the client obtained an order of course for taxation and delivery up of papers, whereupon the client delivered a bill for the further costs. On a motion to discharge the order on the ground that the solicitor had a lien on the papers for further costs :—Held, that the order should be amended so as to include both bills. Ib.

Semble, that the proper form of order in such a case would be a simple order for taxation, without ordering the papers to be delivered up. Ib.

—— Time for.]—Where, upon an application for taxation, under the Solicitors Act, 1843, it appears probable that, upon grounds not determinable under that jurisdiction, payment ought not to be made without further investigation, this court may properly abstain from ordering payment, or from ordering the delivery up of deeds, till the questions which cannot be determined under that jurisdiction have been properly investigated and determined elsewhere. Dalby, In re, 8 Beav. 469.

An administration suit was instituted against an executrix, who was also tenant for life, by parties entitled in remainder. The executrix died, during the suit, intestate. The suit was revived against the administrator de bonis non of the testator, and a common administration decree taken against him, but it was not revived against the personal representative of the executrix. The executrix had placed in the hands of her solicitor deeds and papers relating to the estate, and he claimed a lien upon them for costs incurred in relation to the suit. Upon bill filed by the administrator de bonis non for delivery of the documents to him:—Held, that it could not be decided whether any lien existed until it had been ascertained whether the executrix was a debtor to the estate, which could not be ascertained in the present suit, nor in any proceeding to which the personal representative of the executrix was not a party. Turner v. Letts, 7 De G. M. & G. 243; 3 Eq. R. 846; 24 L. J., Ch. 638; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1057; 3 W. R. 494.

Petition.]—Summary order made upon petition under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, for delivery by the assignees of a bankrupt solicitor, who had employed a London agent, of papers belonging to the petitioner before payment of the agent's costs. Such a petition should be entitled in the matter of the agent as well as of the country solicitor, but does not require to be entitled in the matter of the act. Walton, In re, 4 Kay & J. 78.

Where a court orders a solicitor to deliver up papers to be afterwards returned to him, the time for delivery is within three days, and the time for return of them ten days after the purpose is answered for which they were delivered up. Webster v. Le Hunt, 9 W. R. 827.

Where a solicitor's bill of costs or the delivery of documents in his possession is required on other grounds than those relating to taxation, the application may be made by way of petition, notwithstanding the General Order of the 17th April, 1867, Justice, In re, 16 W. R. 821.

In an administration suit instituted by an infant cestui que trust under a will against the executors, one of the executors admitted that part of certain sums advanced by him on mortgage formed part of the trust estate. An order was made in the suit for the completion of contracts for sales of the mortgaged property, which had been entered into by the executor. Under this order the purchase-moneys were paid into court to the credit of the cause. The order directed the executor to execute the conveyances and deliver the title deeds to the petitioners, but the executor's solicitors refused to give up the deeds, claiming a lien upon them for costs due from the executor and advances made for the maintenance of the plaintiff:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction, on petition, to order the solicitors to deliver up the deeds. Francis v. Francis, 2 De G. M. & G. 73. And see S. C., 3 De G. M. & G. 108.

Originating Summons not Applicable.]—The expression, "originating summons," does not include every summons by which proceedings are commenced without writ, but has reference exclusively to summonses by which such proceedings are commenced as could formerly have only been commenced by bill or writ. Consequently the procedure laid down by the rules in the case of an originating summons does not apply to a summons for the delivery up of papers by a solicitor. Holloway, In re, Pallister, Ex parte, 63 L. J., Q. B. 672; [1894] 2 Q. B. 163; 9 R. 384; 70 L. T. 615; 42 W. R. 433—C. A.

Costs of Motion.]—By an order for taxation, the solicitor was ordered, on payment, to deliver over the papers. Having made default, he was ordered to pay the costs of a motion to compel him, though he had delivered them up after the notice of motion, but before it had been heard. Minter, In re, 19 Beav. 33.

Action on Bill after Order.]—The omission by a client to file a certificate of taxation of a solicitor's bill within the four days prescribed by the order of 29th October, 1692, does not render the order a nullity, but the client's representatives, after his death, may, notwithstanding the omission, obtain an order under the summary jurisdiction, for the delivering up of the client's papers on payment of the amount of the bill as taxed; and an action by the solicitor on the bill, after such taxation, is a contempt, and will be restrained by injunction at the instance of the representatives. Campbell, In re, 3 De G. M. & G. 585; 22 L. J., Ch. 865; 17 Jur. 1171; 1 W. R. 204.

Attachment.]—Messrs. G., solicitors, having been requested by P., another solicitor, on behalf of a client for whom they had hitherto acted, to deliver up all deeds belonging to the client on the usual terms, sent the deeds to a relative of the client, who held a power of attorney from him, with the bill of costs, the amount of which they retained out of moneys in their hands belonging to the client, and they then informed P. that they had no deeds in their possession, and no bill of costs against the client. An order of course was then taken out by P., on behalf of the client, for taxation and delivery up of deeds and papers, but it was not complied with, and a writ of attachment was issued against Messrs. G.:—Held, that they were not justified in refusing to deliver up the papers or to give in their bill for taxation. Gregg, In re, and Prance, In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 107; L. R. 9 Eq. 137; 23 L. T. 234; 18 W. R. 589.

—— When in the Hands of Counsel.]—The nondelivery of documents left by an insolvent solicitor with counsel and law stationers, and retained by them for nonpayment of fees and charges, is not a breach of an order upon the solicitor to deliver up to a new solicitor all deeds and documents in his possession or power relating to the affairs of his client in the suit. Williams, In re, 3 De G. F. & J. 104; 30 L. J., Ch. 610; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 323; 4 L. T. 103; 9 W. R. 393.

—— When in the Hands of Agent.]—Where an order has been made that an attorney deliver to a client his papers, it is no answer to an attachment for disobedience of the order, that the agent of the attorney having possession of the papers claims a lien on them in respect of agency charges. Andrew, In re, 7 H. & N. 87; 30 L. J., Ex. 403.

Practice on.]—The court will not grant a rule requiring an attorney to deliver up papers, and in the alternative for an attachment in case of a nondelivery, but each branch must be made the subject of a separate motion. Roscoe v. Hardman, 5 D. P. C. 157; 2 H. & W. 118.

The court will not issue an attachment against an attorney for not delivering up papers pursuant to a rule of court, unless shewn that the person making the demand was duly authorised to do so, and stated that fact to the attorney. Doe d. Hickman v. Hickman, 8 D. P. C. 883; 1 Man. & G. 566.

—— Affidavits.]—Affidavits in support of an application against an attorney, to compel him to deliver up a document, may be intitled in the action out of which the claim arises, although judgment has been signed and execution issued. Simes v. Gibbs, 6 D. P. C. 310; 1 W. W. & H. 40.

V. FOR PAYMENT OF MONEY AND OF COSTS.

Where Relation of Solicitor and Client exists.]—A client agreed in writing to lend his solicitor a sum of money to enable him to make a purchase of land, but if the purchase was not completed, the money was to be at once repaid. The purchase was not made, and the money was not returned. The client applied for an order for repayment, under the summary jurisdiction of the court:—Held, that, there being no relation of solicitor and client, between the parties in respect of the agreement, no order could be made under the summary jurisdiction of the court. Bryant, In re, 50 L. T. 450.

A. purchased an estate from B., and, on the completion, one solicitor acted for both parties, and the purchase-money was paid into his hands. Afterwards, the purchaser was defeated by C., who had a paramount mortgage. The purchaser presented a petition against the solicitor, asking payment by the solicitor out of the purchase-money of the losses occasioned, or that he might indemnify the petitioner. The petition was dismissed with costs; the court holding, first, that it had no jurisdiction to award compensation or damages in such a case; and, secondly, that the money having come to the hands of the solicitor as agent of the vendor, and not of the petitioner, it could not interfere. Tylee v. Webb, 14 Beav. 14; 15 Jur. 1023.

As to the summary jurisdiction of the court over solicitors, where moneys are paid to them by clients in that character. Ib.

A solicitor was appointed a member of a committee of a company, with power to compromise two suits. He, with the approbation of his co-committee, compromised them and received the money. A summary application that he might pay over the money or be struck off the rolls was refused with costs. Harvey, In re, 27 Beav. 330.

The court will not, in the exercise of its summary jurisdiction over solicitors, call upon a solicitor to account for moneys received by him where they were received by him, not in the character of solicitor to the person making the application, but of solicitor to another person. Dixon v. Wilkinson, 4 De G. & J. 508; 4 Drew. 614; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1063; 7 W. R. 351, 624.

A. was solicitor to the plaintiff in a cause, and also to the receiver, and the receiver was in the habit of remitting the rents to him:—Held, that A. must be considered to have received the rents as solicitor or agent of the receiver, and that the plaintiff could not call upon him to account for them under the summary jurisdiction. Ib.

The court will not summarily compel an attorney to pay over money borrowed for his client on security, unless the security is by deed, perused by the attorney on behalf of his client. Anon., 11 Jur. 396.

On an application for a rule to an attorney to produce an account of all fees and fines received by him as steward of a manor, the affidavit must disclose improper conduct on his part quâ attorney. Attorney, In re, 3 W. R. 515.

Where a party purchased parcel of a manor for building, and paid to an attorney, who acted for him in the purchase, money in his capacity of steward of the manor, the court refused to compel the attorney to refund the money by summary proceeding. Faith, Ex parte, 9 D. P. C. 973; 5 Jur. 653.

No Certificate Taken Out.]—Where an attorney being off the roll in consequence of not taking out his certificate, employed his agent to sue out process, and costs were paid in the action to the agent, the court would not compel either the attorney or his agent to refund the costs. Nash v. Goode, 9 D. P. C. 929; 5 Jur. 653.

Clerk becoming Solicitor.] — The court will not compel an attorney to pay over or account for money received by him during his clerkship. Deane, Ex parte, 2 D. P. C. 533.

Order against Partners.]—Where money has been paid by a client to one or two attorneys, partners, and which has been applied to their own use in account with their bankers, the court will summarily compel them to refund. Ford, In re, 8 D. P. C. 684.

Where a client had corresponded, and dealt exclusively with one only out of a partnership of three solicitors, and remitted a sum of money to that one alone, although desired by him to remit the money to the firm, a motion against all three partners, under summary jurisdiction of the court to compel them to pay the money, refused as to the two partners who had thus been excluded from the fair means of the knowledge of the remittance. The summary jurisdiction of the court over its officers extends to relief only in cases of personal misconduct and neglect of duty. Lawrence, In re, 2 Sm. & G. 367; 2 Eq. R. 931; 23 L. J., Ch. 791; 18 Jur. 742; 2 W. R. 680.

A receiver having been appointed for the plaintiffs in a cause, paid certain moneys to one of a firm of solicitors of the plaintiffs, who were also his solicitors in the matter. The partner to whom the money was paid misapplied the moneys and absconded, and the plaintiffs moved that the other partners might make good the deficiency. Where the other partners disputed their liability for the acts of the defaulting partner:—Held, that no order could be made against them under the general jurisdiction of the court over solicitors. Chater v. Maclean, 3 Eq. R. 375; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 175; 3 W. R. 261.

Effect of Bankruptcy.]—The court will not compel an attorney to pay a sum of money he has received in his character of attorney, he having after the receipt of the money become bankrupt, and obtained his certificate. Culliford,

Ex parte, 8 B. & C. 220; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 229. S. P., Baron v. Martell, 9 D. & R. 390; Rex v. Edwards, 9 B. & C. 652; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 341.

Unless fraud is shewn. Bonner, In re, 1 N. & M. 555; 4 B. & Ad. 811.

Order to Account for Money.]—Where an attorney was employed by S. to collect and get in effects due to him as administrator of another person, the court compelled such attorney to render an account to the executors of S. of moneys received by him, although he had never been employed by S. or his executors to conduct any proceedings at law, or in equity, on his or their behalf. Aitkin, In re, 4 B. & Ald. 47; 22 R. R. 616.

Where bills have been deposited with an attorney, and he has advanced money on them, and he refuses to account, the court will not compel him summarily to pay over the alleged balance. Schwalbanker, Ex parte, 1 D. P. C. 182.

Where an attorney has been employed to prepare mortgage deeds, and receives the money raised by the mortgage, he may be called upon summarily to account for it. Cripwell, Ex parte, 5 D. P. C. 689; W. W. & D., 356; 1 Jur. 755.

The circumstance of an attorney holding a security for his claim is not sufficient to induce the court to interfere in a summary way to compel him to account. Cardross (Lord) In re, 7 D. P. C. 861; 5 M. & W. 545; 9 L. J., Ex. 36.

Where an attorney, for the purpose of securing a balance due to him from a client, effected a policy of insurance on the life of a client, and charged the premiums to him, and on the client's death received the amount of the policy, the court refused to interfere summarily to compel the attorney to account with the administrator of the client to deliver up the policy. Ib.

When local solicitors are retained by the treasury, to conduct prosecutions on their behalf, such local solicitors are agents for the treasury, and are therefore bound to account to the treasury for any sums of money received in respect of costs, and to pay over to the treasury the difference between the sums so received as costs and the sum allowed them on taxation. Parkinson, In re, 56 L. T. 715.

Where an attorney received money to pay over to a proctor for probate of a will, the court refused to interfere summarily to make him account for it. Cohen or Cowie, Ex parte, 3 D. P. C. 600; 1 H. & W. 211.

Repayment—Negligence.]—The court will not compel an attorney to repay his client a sum of money expended by him in consequence of the attorney's alleged negligence, unless the negligence is clearly and unequivocally established. Meggs v. Binns, 2 Bing. (N.C.) 625; 3 Scott, 52; 2 Hodges, 10; 5 L. J., C. P. 225.

Effect of Agreement.]—Or compel an attorney to pay over money, the right to which is dependent on the existence of a special agreement between the client and the attorney, which the latter disputes. Hodson v. Terrall, 2 D. P. C. 264.

Or where the payment has been the result of an agreement. Haigh v. Jones, 6 Scott (N.R.), 696; 1 D. & L. 81.

Order when made.]—If attorney (being concerned as well for mortgagor as mortgagee) has been appointed receiver of rents and profits of mortgaged estates; and on the order made for delivery of possession, there is found to be a balance remaining in his hands beyond what is sufficient to satisfy the mortgagee; he will be ordered to pay such balance into court, notwithstanding the general report has not yet been made, on which there may possibly be found to be a greater sum of money due to him than the balance in his hands. Lewes v. Morgan, 5 Price, 42; 19 R. R. 566.

A married woman, to whom a sum of money was payable for her separate use, received a cheque from the accountant-general, and handed it over to her solicitor, who accompanied her. The solicitor was, on motion, ordered to pay the balance to his client, and held, that the onus being on the solicitor to show cause for not paying it over, he could not set up a voluntary agreement to pay her husband's debt. Mawhood v. Milbanke, 15 Beav. 36.

A solicitor, professionally concerned in a transaction for A., received on his account, in the course of that transaction, a sum of money. Afterwards it was arranged between A. and B. and the solicitor, that the sum should remain in the solicitor's hands as a security for the payment of the expenses of certain proceedings taken in parliament by B. to obtain an act for a divorce. The application to parliament having failed, and the costs of it not having exhausted the fund:—Held, that under the summary jurisdiction of the court over the solicitor, it could order the repayment to A. of the balance. Wortham, Ex parte, 4 De G. & Sm. 415.

A solicitor who has received and has in his hands the money of his client will be summarily ordered to pay over the amount. Becke, In re, 18 Beav. 462.

A solicitor received moneys for his client, an administratrix:—Held, that he could not set up proceedings by the next of kin, of whose rights he had notice, as a defence for not paying the administratrix. Ib.

A solicitor received from his client a sum of money to pay off a mortgage. He did not so apply it, but claimed a lien on it for his costs. He was summarily ordered to repay the amount to his client, but without interest. Cullen, In re, 27 Beav. 51.

The court will not call upon an attorney to repay money, or to account before the master, on the grounds merely that the attorney obtained such money from his client, as if for the purposes of a suit, but that his bill is said not to account satisfactorily for the obtaining and application of such money. Marris, In re, 2 A. & E. 582.

Payment into Court.] — Where a solicitor receives money to be paid into court, and neglects to do so, the court, under its summary jurisdiction, can compel him to repay the money. Lawrence, In re, 2 Sm. & G. 367; 2 Eq. R. 931; 23 L. J., Ch. 791; 18 Jur. 742; 2 W. R. 680.

An order was made on a trustee to pay into court interest found due from him, and the balance, beyond his costs to be taxed, of capital money certified to have come to his hands. The capital money had been received by the trustee's solicitors as part of the trust estate. The order was made on statements implying that the trustee, who was totally unable to pay, was solvent. The trustee having made default in payment of the interest, the court made an order, notwithstanding the former order, that the solicitors should pay into court the capital come to their hands with interest. Staniar v. Evans, 56 L. J., Ch. 581; 34 Ch. D. 470; 56 L. T. 87; 35 W. R. 286.

Promissory Note taken for Debt.]—A party to an action who takes a promissory note from his solicitor for the debt which the solicitor has received from the opposite party deprives himself of the power to obtain summary relief for payment of the amount from his solicitor. Anon., 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 106.

Pending Action.]—Where an executor and a residuary legatee employed a solicitor in the matter of the executorship, and transferred into the joint names of client and solicitor stock to answer a legacy, and subsequently employed the same solicitor in two suits, in equity and in an action, in all of which matters costs were incurred, the court having, by an order made in both suits, ordered the payment of the legacy out of the fund, and the costs of the parties to the suits to be paid by themselves, refused a motion made on the part of the client, pending an action for the balance of bills of costs, asking that the solicitor might be ordered to join in transferring the balance of the fund, after payment of the legacy, into the client's name, on the ground that the proceedings in respect of which the costs claimed were incurred were closely connected with the purposes for which the fund was invested, and that the claim was one to be settled by a court of law. Robinson, In re, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1021.

If a person commences an action against his attorney for money owing to him, he cannot make a summary application against him to make him pay the amount, until he has discontinued the action. Anon., 5 Jur. 678.

Judgment recovered by Client.]—Where a solicitor has committed a breach of professional duty in failing to pay over money received by him for his client, the fact that the client has brought an action against him and recovered judgment for the money does not take away the disciplinary jurisdiction of the court summarily to order payment of the money to the client. Davies, In re (15 W. R. 46), not followed. Grey, In re, 61 L. J., Q. B. 795; [1892] 2 Q. B. 440; 41 W. R. 3—C. A.

The court will not grant a rule calling upon an attorney to shew cause why he should not pay over to his client moneys received by him as his attorney, where the client has sued the attorney and recovered judgment for such moneys against him. Davies, In re, 15 L. T. 161; 15 W. R. 46.

Upon whose Application Order made.]—The court will not order an attorney to pay over a sum of money received by him in his character of attorney, except upon the application of the client to whom the money is due. Fenton, In re, 5 N. & M. 239; 3 A. & E. 404; 1 H. & W. 310; 4 L. J., K. B. 204.

Where a summary order is asked for against solicitors to the plaintiff in an action for not paying over moneys received from a receiver appointed in that action, the receiver must be a party to the application. Chater v. Maclean, 3 Eq. R. 375; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 175; 3 W. R. 261.

Payment of Interest.]—The court will not grant an application requiring an attorney to pay over the interest of a sum of money which has come improperly into his hands. Fenn v. Wild, 1 D. P. C. 498.

Town Agent—Country Solicitor.]—The town agent of the solicitor of the plaintiff, in an action in which judgment had been recovered for a debt, refused to pay over to the plaintiff the amount of the debt which had been received by him from the sheriff under a writ of fi. fa., on the ground that he was entitled to retain such amount for a debt due to him from the country solicitor of equal amount. The country solicitor had no lien on such amount against his client, the plaintiff:—Held, that the court, in the exercise of its summary jurisdiction over its own officers, would order the town agent to pay over the amount of the debt to the plaintiff. In such a case the court will exercise its summary jurisdiction, although there be no fraud imputed to the town agent. Edwards, Ex parte, Johnson, In re, 51 L. J., Q. B. 108; 8 Q. B. D. 262; 45 L. T. 578—C. A.

A country solicitor receiving debt and costs on service of a writ sent to him was ordered to pay over the amount. Walker v. Pearce, 7 L. T. 285.

Retainer Denied.]—Summary process refused to compel an attorney to pay over money recovered in an action for a person who, while the action was pending, repudiated all liability and denied the retainer. Marshall, In re, 5 W. R. 200.

Money Repaid.]—Where a solicitor has fraudulently obtained and withheld his client's money, the repayment of the money is not a purgation of the offence. H., In re, 31 L. T. 730.

Practice.]—A judge has power to make an order on an attorney in a cause to pay money, and such order will be made a rule of court as of course, without a rule to shew cause. Wilson v. Northorp, 2 C. M. & R. 326; 4 D. P. C. 441; 5 Tyr. 1102.

An order upon the former solicitor to the creditors' assignee of a bankrupt's estate to pay over money forming part of the estate, and admitted by him to be in his hands, ought not to be made ex parte. Prance, Ex parte, Kemp, In re, 21 L. T. 341; 18 W. R. 55.

An order was made that a solicitor (who was also a trustee of a will) should pay into court trust money which he had by affidavit admitted that he had in his hands, upon motion made by the cestui que trust in a suit to administer the estate of the testator, the notice of motion being entitled in the suit and in the matter of the solicitor. Clerihew, In re, Howard, In re, 24 L. T. 860; 19 W. R. 939.

An application against an attorney to pay over to his client a sum of money received by him for such client, there being no imputation upon him which he is required to answer, should be made at chambers, and not to the court. Stecher v. Kralick, 17 L. T. 441.

—— Affidavits.]—Affidavits in support of a motion to compel an attorney to pay over money which he has received as attorney in a cause, may be entitled "In the matter of the attorney," and need not be entitled in the cause. Randall, Ex parte, Wood, In re, 6 D. & L. 154; 2 B. C. Rep. 294; 17 L. J., Q. B. 232; 12 Jur. 962.

—— Service of Proceedings.]—Where it is clearly shewn that an attorney keeps out of the way to avoid being served with a rule for the payment of money, the court will allow service upon his clerk to be good service. Hinton v. Deane, 4 D. P. C. 352.

The court refused to make an order that service of a petition against an attorney for an order to pay certain costs for which he had been declared liable, by leaving a copy at his chambers, should be deemed good service. Sandys, In re, 3 Deac. & C. 34.

VI. ANSWERING MATTERS IN AFFIDAVITS.

No Primâ Facie Case — Incorporated Law Society.]—Where an application is made to the committee of the council of the Incorporated Law Society, under s. 13 of the Solicitors Act, 1888, to require a solicitor to answer allegations contained in an affidavit, and the committee are of opinion that no primâ facie case of misconduct is made out upon the affidavit, the society are not bound to take any further proceedings in the matter. Reg. v. Incorporated Law Society, 65 L. J., Q. B. 326; [1896] 1 Q. B. 327; 74 L. T. 67; 44 W. R. 307—C. A.

Criminal Offence Disclosed.]—The court will not compel an attorney to answer the matters in an affidavit, where, if the facts suggested exist, they might be the foundation of an indictment. Robertson v. Mills, 1 D. (N.S.) 772; 6 Jur. 896. S. P., Short v. Pratt, 1 Bing. 102; 1 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 9.

Where an attorney has been guilty of such misconduct as may amount to a criminal offence, the court will not call on him to answer the matters of an affidavit. Stephens v. Hill, 10 M. & W. 28; 1 D. (N.S.) 669; 11 L. J., Ex. 329; 6 Jur. 585.

When an attorney charged with a criminal offence denies his guilt, the court will not try the issue on affidavits. Hill, In re, 9 B. & S. 481; 37 L. J., Q. B. 295; L. R. 3 Q. B. 543; 18 L. T. 564; 16 W. R. 1061.

The court will not grant a rule calling on an attorney to answer the matters of an affidavit charging him with an indictable offence, but they will, under such circumstances, grant a rule nisi, calling on him to shew cause why he should not be struck off the roll of the court. Anon., 12 W. R. 311.

Doubt as to Fraud.]—A rule calling on an attorney to answer the matters in an affidavit on the ground of his having acted without authority, will not be granted when there is any doubt whether he may not have done so erroneously and not fraudulently. Anon., 10 W. R. 86.

Payment of Sum Due on Taxation.]—It is no ground for calling upon an attorney to answer matters that he is unable to pay the amount found due from him to his client upon a taxation of a bill containing excessive and extortionate charges. Meux v. Lloyd, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 409.

Action Contrary to Injunction.]—The court will interfere to restrain an action at law the bringing of which is against the spirit, although not within the letter, of a former injunction. A solicitor assisting his client in bringing such an action may be called upon by the court to answer the matters of the affidavits. Brenan v. Preston, 1 W. R. 173.

After Death of Plaintiff.]—Where, after judgment obtained, a rule was obtained calling upon the plaintiff and his attorney to shew cause why he or his attorney should not refund a sum of money paid in the cause to the attorney, and the plaintiff had died since the commencement of the action:—Held, that the attorney, as an officer of the court, was bound to answer the affidavits on which the rule had been obtained. Haigh v. Jones, 1 D. & L. 81; 6 Scott (N.R.) 696; 5 Man. & G. 634.

Action Commenced.]—It is no answer to an application calling upon an attorney to answer the matters of an affidavit, that the applicant has already filed a bill in equity against the attorney for an account in reference to the transactions complained of, even though the proceedings in equity have resulted in a decree against the attorney. Wright, In re, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 705.

Sufficiency of Answer.]—Upon a rule calling upon an attorney to answer matters, the charge being that he had recovered from a defendant an excessive sum for costs, upon a false statement that judgment had been signed and execution issued, when in fact no judgment had been signed, it appearing that the attorney himself had no personal knowledge of the matter, the court discharged the rule, but ordered him to refund the overcharge and pay the costs of the application. Eyre, In re, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 151.

A rule having been obtained calling on an attorney to answer the matters contained in an affidavit, and his answer being unsatisfactory, the court made the rule absolute that he should answer peremptorily on the first day of the following term and pay the costs of the rule within a week. Fairchild, Ex parte, 23 W. R. 213.

If an attorney, required to answer the matters of an affidavit, swear in his exculpation to an incredible story, the court will grant an attachment against him, though he positively deny the malpractices imputed to him. Crossley, In re, 6 Term Rep. 701; 3 R. R. 322.

A rule having been obtained ordering an attorney to answer the matters in an affidavit, which charged him with a receipt of money of his client, which he had denied but had not accounted for, the attorney made, and after long delay filed, an affidavit, not denying the receipt of the money, nor that he had denied the receipt of it, and not satisfactorily accounting for it:—Held, that the court could not, without some further and substantive application, either attach him for not answering, or order him to pay the money. Everest, In re, 11 W. R. 114.

Not Answering.]—Upon a report by the master that the matters contained in interrogatories were not answered, the court may order the attorney to be struck off the roll. Holmes, In re, 12 Jur. 657.

An attorney not appearing pursuant to a rule to answer the matters of an affidavit, on being called three times in open court, a writ of attachment was ordered to be issued against him. Easton v. Neville, 18 C. B. 548. S. P., Wicher, In re, 5 D. P. C. 715.

If a rule is obtained against an attorney to answer matters in affidavit, and to shew cause why he should not pay a sum of money, and he does not answer the matters or shew cause why he should not pay, the court, on an affidavit of service, will make absolute the rule to pay, and grant an attachment for not answering. Bluck, In re, 31 L. J., Q. B. 262 ; 6 L. T. 506 ; 10 W. R. 668.

When an attorney does not appear to shew cause against a rule calling on him to answer the matters of an affidavit, the court will make the rule absolute to answer within a certain time, and in default, that an attachment issue against him, and also that he be struck off the roll. Worman, In re, 1 H. & C. 636 ; 32 L. J., Ex. 83; 7 L. T. 249 ; 11 W. R. 26.

Motion—By whom made.]—An application for a rule, requiring an attorney to answer the matters of an affidavit, must be made by a gentleman at the bar. Pitt, Ex parte, 5 B. & Ad. 1077 ; 2 D. P. C. 439.

—— Affidavits.]—Affidavits, on which a rule calling on an attorney to answer the matters in an affidavit has been granted, need not be intitled at all. Grantham, In re, 4 D. & L. 427 ; 11 Jur. 242.

But affidavits in answer to the rule must be intitled in the same way as the rule. Ib.

Where, however, they are not so intitled, the court enlarged the rule in order that they might be amended. Ib.

Where a rule calling on an attorney to answer the matters of an affidavit is discharged by consent, the court will not allow the affidavits in support of the rule to be taken off the file of the court. Anon., 12 W. R. 1012.

—— Reference to Master.]—Where it has been referred to the master to examine into the charges, and to report to the court, it is not competent to the counsel for the accused to go into the evidence given before the master ; the court will only look to his report. Wright, In re, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 705. See Simmons, In re, 15 Q. B. D. 348.

VII. STRIKING OFF THE ROLL.

a. For What Misconduct.

Offence not in the Character of Solicitor.]—Upon an application by the Incorporated Law Society to strike the name of a solicitor off the roll, it appeared that he had been summarily convicted of allowing houses, of which he was the landlord, to be used by the tenants as brothels :—Held, that a solicitor may be struck off the roll for an offence which has no relation to his character as a solicitor, the question being whether it is such an offence as makes a person guilty of it unfit to remain a member of the profession. Conviction for a criminal offence primâ facie makes a solicitor unfit to continue on the roll ; but the court has a discretion, and will inquire into the nature of the crime, and will not as a matter of course strike him off because he has been convicted ; and the court considered that in the present case the nature of the offence was such that the solicitor ought to be struck off the roll. Weare, In re, Incorporated Law Society, Ex parte, 62 L. J., Q. B. 596 ; [1893] 2 Q. B. 439 ; 69 L. T. 522 ; 58 J. P. 6—C. A.

Where an attorney, being applied to by B. to invest money for him, borrowed it upon his own security and the deposit of a mortgage deed, and afterwards committed a fraud upon B. in receiving the money due upon the mortgage without communicating that fact to B., and in continuing to pay interest to him, the court suspended his certificate for two years, though the transaction was not strictly between attorney and client. Blake, In re, 3 El. & El. 34 ; 30 L. J., Q. B. 32 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1242 ; 2 L. T. 429.

Semble a solicitor will be struck off only for some misconduct in his business as a solicitor, or when criminal proceedings have been taken against him. Dicas, In re, infra.

On a motion to strike off the roll, it is not necessary that the misconduct should be in connection with his character as attorney, secus as to paying money or fulfilling an undertaking. Hill, In re, 9 B. & S. 481 ; 37 L. J., Q. B. 295 ; L. R., 3 Q. B. 543 ; 18 L. T. 564 ; 16 W. R. 1061.

Verdict for Libel in Civil Proceeding.]—The court will not strike a solicitor off the roll on the ground that a verdict in a civil suit has been found against him for a libel. Dicas, In re, 2 D. P. C. 110 ; 2 L. J., Ex. 267.

Accepting Loans from Client on attaining his Majority.]—A solicitor received from a client, within a few months of the latter attaining his majority, large sums of money. The terms upon which the money was received were not reduced to writing, but the money was regarded as a loan to the solicitor at interest. The solicitor invested the money in various speculations, and a large part of it was lost :—Held, that the solicitor was guilty of professional misconduct, meriting a sentence of suspension from practice. Solicitor, In re, Incorporated Law Society, Ex parte, 63 L. J., Q. B. 313 ; [1894] 1 Q. B. 254 ; 10 R. 34 ; 70 L. T. 27 ; 42 W. R. 237.

Nonpayment of Counsel's Fees.]—A solicitor who has obtained payment of the disbursements in his bill of costs, including fees to counsel, and improperly neglects to pay those fees to counsel, is guilty of professional misconduct, although he may not have received the full amount of his bill of costs. Solicitor, In re, Incorporated Law Society, Ex parte, 63 L. J., Q. B. 397 ; 10 R. 576.

Improperly indorsing Summons.]—An attorney indorsing a summons as if it had been attended before the judge, when in fact it had not, though a consent had been given to the order by the other side, was suspended from practice. De Medina, In re, 10 W. R. 627.

Injunction—False Representation.]—Solicitor falsely representing that an injunction was granted, liable to damages, to an indictment, and to be struck off the roll. Kimpton v. Eve, 2 Ves. & B. 352 ; 13 R. R. 116.

Communicating Secrets.]—Attorney prevented from communicating his client's secrets, even by striking off the roll ; not permitted to give evidence of them. Cholmondeley (Earl) v. Clinton (Lord), 19 Ves. 268 ; 13 R. R. 183.

Conspiracy to Defraud.]—An attorney had been convicted of a conspiracy to cheat and defraud tradesmen, and among the overt acts alleged were the collusively signing of judgments and issuing writs of fi. fa. thereon. The court struck his name off the roll, though the indictment was held defective, for not setting out the names or designating the class of the persons intended to be defrauded. King, In re, 8 Q. B. 129; 15 L. J., Q. B. 2; 10 Jur. 7.

Perjury.]—The court will not strike an attorney off the roll on an affidavit alleging a distinct case of perjury, unless enough appears on his own admission to render the interposition of a jury unnecessary. Anon., 3 N. & P. 389.

A bill of costs of an attorney was reduced, on taxation from 1,100*l.* to 370*l.*, and 374*l.*, part of the bill, sworn to have been paid to witnesses, was reduced to 47*l.*; the court refused a rule to strike him off the rolls on the ground that the charge could be established by witnesses only, and was therefore proper for the consideration of a jury. Anon., 1 W. W. & H. 355.

An attorney who had made a false affidavit of increase, which had been acted upon by the master in the taxation of costs, was fined 100*l.* for contempt of court, and suspended for three years. Mant, In re, 5 L. T. 254; 10 W. R. 13.

Cheating in Gambling.]—The court refused an application to strike an attorney off the roll for alleged unfair play in gambling, after the relation of attorney and client between him and the applicant had ceased; the applicant having filed a bill in chancery respecting the promissory notes given by him in payment of the money won, which was still pending. Stratford, Ex parte, 12 L. J., Q. B. 331; 7 Jur. 412.

Nonpayment of Money.]—Mere nonpayment of money by an attorney, pursuant to an order and rule of court, is no ground for striking him off the roll. Guilford v. Sims, 13 C. B. 370.

An attorney who has been directed by the master to refund a sum of money, disobeys the direction, and keeps out of the way, will be struck off the roll. Anon., 10 Jur. 198. See also cases ante, col. 1511 et seq.

Improperly bringing qui tam Actions.]—It is no cause for striking an attorney off the roll, that he has commenced several qui tam actions for the purpose of revenge. Warren, Ex parte, 1 H. & W. 113.

Where an attorney brings several qui tam actions, and after their commencement makes an offer to the defendant to compromise them, it is no ground for striking him off the roll. Smith v. Gillett, 3 D. P. C. 364.

Acting without Authority.]—A solicitor took upon himself without authority to instruct counsel to appear for parties, one of whom was abroad at the time, and to consent to or not oppose a petition to transfer a fund in court in which the parties had important interests, upon which petition the fund was ordered to be transferred, and the fund was lost. The solicitor's explanation of his conduct not being satisfactory, he was ordered to be struck off the roll, although he was not a party, but only a witness in the cause. Collins, In re, 7 De G. M. & G. 558; 3 Eq. R. 865; 24 L. J., Ch. 732; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1125.

A solicitor, who had filed a bill for specific performance in the name of the assignee of a bankrupt, without having obtained his consent or retainer, and who had also allowed his client to make an affidavit containing a statement which he knew to be false, was sentenced to be suspended for the space of ten years from practising as an attorney or solicitor. Gray, In re, 20 L. T. 730.

Acting without authority in conducting a prosecution of a prisoner for felony is no ground for striking an attorney off the roll. Davis, In re, 1 B. C. C. 207; 2 W. R. 58.

Defect in Articles, Service, Admission, or Inrolment.]—A motion to strike an attorney off the roll on the ground of misconduct, and the want of regular service in his clerkship, comes too late when the party had been three years and a half admitted. Anon., 2 B. & Ad. 766; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 321.

An attorney who has been admitted fraudulently will be struck off the roll, and the court will grant an attachment against the master. Hill, Ex parte, 2 W. Bl. 991.

Where an attorney had been admitted on payment of a less amount of stamp duty than was by law required, by mistake of the officers of the court or the stamp office, and without any fraud or mala fides on his part, the court will make an order for striking him off the roll, unless he consents to pay the proper duty. Myers, In re, 8 Q. B. 515; 15 L. J., Q. B. 209; 10 Jur. 563.

The court will not strike a solicitor off the roll on account of an irregularity in the service of his clerkship and misconduct prior to his admission. Page, In re, 1 Bing. 160; 7 Moore, 572; 1 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 45.

Signing Fictitious Name.]—Semble, that a solicitor by signing a fictitious name to a demurrer, purporting to be a barrister's signature, renders himself liable to be struck off the roll. Smith v. Matham, 4 D. & R. 738.

Solicitor Trustee.]—Where a solicitor was a trustee, and had appropriated the trust fund, which was in court, to his own use, the court ordered him to be struck off the roll. Thorndike v. Hunt, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 879.

A solicitor who, being one of the trustees of a settlement, had been guilty of fraudulent misapplication of, and misrepresentation as to, a part of the trust fund, was ordered to be struck off the rolls upon the petition of his co-trustees. In such a case, the fact that the delinquent was not, at the time of committing the fraud in question, acting as the solicitor of the defrauded cestuis que trustent is immaterial. Hall, In re, Dolland v. Johnson, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 633; 4 W. R. 686.

A court of equity, ex mero motu, ordered a solicitor trustee who had been guilty of a breach of trust, to shew cause why he should not be struck off the roll. Thompson v. Finch, 25 L. J., Ch. 681—L.JJ.

A solicitor induced his co-trustee to join him in executing a power of attorney, by which trust stock standing in their joint names was sold, and he obtained from such co-trustee an authority to place the proceeds to his private account at his banker's. The proceeds were subsequently lost through the solicitor's insolvency; and although he was himself entitled to a reversionary interest in a portion of the trust-property, he was struck off the roll. Chandler, In re, 22 Beav. 253; 25 L. J., Ch. 396; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 366.

Compromising Criminal Charge.]—It is a high misdemeanour in an attorney to compromise a criminal charge; therefore, an attorney was fined 500*l.*, and suspended six months, for taking 200*l.* from one who was charged with forgery, to let him out of the custody of a tipstaff. Rex v. Vaughan, 1 Wils. 221.

Effect of Bankruptcy.]—The court will not strike an attorney off the roll where he has become bankrupt, having moneys of a client in his hands which ought to have been paid over, unless a clear case of fraudulent misappropriation is made out against him. Sparks, In re, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 727.

False Recitals in Deed.]—An attorney on the roll of the high court of Bengal prepared a conveyance on behalf of his brother containing a false recital as to the consideration, knowing the same to be false, and attested the execution of the deed with such false recital, and signed his name as a witness to the receipt of the consideration-money, knowing that no consideration had passed or was intended to pass. The deed was duly registered. The court ordered him to be struck off the roll:—Held, that he was properly called upon to explain the circumstances under which the deed was executed; but that, as there was no evidence that he was guilty of any fraudulent or dishonest intention, and as no dishonest use was attempted to be made of the deed, and as no person had been injured thereby, the circumstances were not sufficient to warrant the order of the court. Stewart, In re, 5 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 187; 37 L. J., P. C. 25; L. R. 2 P. C. 88; 16 W. R. 1000.

Inducing Witness to Absent Himself.]—An attorney induced a witness subpœnaed by the opposite party, to absent himself from the trial on receiving an indemnity against the consequences of disobedience to the subpœna:—Held, that his name ought to be struck off the roll. Stephens v. Hill, 10 M. & W. 28; 1 D. (N.S.) 669; 11 L. J., Ex. 329; 6 Jur. 585.

b. PRACTICE.

Where Matters complained of Amount to Indictable Offence.] — Where an attorney has been guilty of professional misconduct in the course of a cause, the court will grant a rule calling on him to shew cause why his name should not be struck off the roll, even although the matters complained of may amount to an indictable offence. Stephens v. Hill, 10 M. & W. 28; 1 D. (N.S.) 669; 11 L. J., Ex. 329; 6 Jur. 585.

The court will not grant a rule, calling on an attorney to shew cause why he should not be struck off the roll, if the affidavits in support of the rule state an offence for which he would be liable to indictment. Anon., 5 B. & Ad. 1088.

The court will not proceed summarily against a solicitor for matters which amount to an indictable offence, where it appears that the facts are not exclusively within his own knowledge. Anon., 2 Jur. 467.

Suspension — Subsequent Conviction for Felony.]—It is not an inflexible rule that a solicitor who has been convicted of felony will, as a matter of course, be struck off the roll. Where a solicitor, having been employed as clerk by a firm of solicitors and having embezzled money belonging to them—for which he was suspended by the court from practice for eighteen months—was subsequently convicted on precisely the same facts of embezzlement and sentenced to imprisonment:—Held, that as all the facts which were now before the court were before the court when the solicitor was suspended, except the fact of his subsequent conviction for the felony, it would be unfair to punish him again for the same offence by striking him off the roll. Incorporated Law Society, Ex parte, Solicitor, In re, 37 W. R. 598—C. A. Affirming 61 L. T. 842.

Compromising Misconduct.] —A warrant of attorney given to prevent proceedings on a rule for striking an attorney off the roll is void. Kirwan v. Goodman, 9 D. P. C. 330; 5 Jur. 298.

When an attorney has fraudulently obtained and withheld his client's money, the repayment of the money is not a purgation of the offence. H., In re, 31 L. T. 730.

Where serious charges of misconduct against an attorney are brought before the court of which he is a member, the court will not permit any private arrangement of it to be made between the parties, but will require that such misconduct be fully explained to the satisfaction of the court. Anon., 9 L. T. 299.

A solicitor, guilty of gross fraud towards, and abuse of confidence of, his client, struck off the roll; and in a fit case, such as this, for the exercise of the jurisdiction of the court, the circumstance of the latter having been negotiated for a compromise:— Held, not a ground for refusing the public protection. Martin, In re, 6 Beav. 337.

A solicitor having advised his client (a person in an humble station of life) to commit a breach of trust by selling out stock of which the client was a trustee, and having himself profited by the breach of trust, was ordered to be struck off the roll unless he shewed good cause to the contrary; but having, in obedience to the decree in the cause, replaced the stock and paid the costs of the suit, the court (taking into consideration his youth and other circumstances) abstained from further proceeding in the matter, upon his undertaking to pay to the other parties to the suit their costs, charges and expenses. Goodwin v. Goswell, 2 Coll. 462; 10 Jur. 422.

Application, How made.]—An application to strike a solicitor off the roll must be upon notice of motion. Anon., 36 L. T. 113.

—— By Barrister.]—The court will not receive an application to strike an attorney off the roll, except on the application of a barrister. Anon., 3 N. & M. 566.

By Person not a Client.]—A solicitor, adjudicated bankrupt, made during his public examination certain admissions. At the instance of the Board of Trade, the official receiver made an affidavit in support of an application to the committe of the Incorporated Law Society under the Solicitors Act, 1888. The charges contained in this affidavit were based entirely upon the solicitor's admissions; none of the persons alleged to have been injured by the solicitor's conduct were made parties to the application, nor were they to be called as witnessses; but it was proposed to adduce in evidence the notes of the public examination and the proceedings in bankruptcy alone. Upon the hearing before the committee, a preliminary objection was taken that the official receiver had no locus standi:— Held, that the objection was not a valid one, and that the application ought to be heard on its merits, Incorporated Law Society, Ex parte, Sankey, In re, 59 L. J., Q. B. 238; 25 Q. B. D. 17; 38 W. R. 533—C. A. Affirming 62 L. T. 567.

Rule Nisi—Form of.]—On an affidavit imputing criminal conduct to an attorney, the form of the rule in the first instance is to shew cause why he should not be struck off the roll, or be suspended from practice for so long a time as the court shall think fit. Attorney, In re, 7 L. T. 716; 11 W. R. 268.

The court will not grant a rule in the alternative, calling on an attorney to shew cause why he should not be struck off the roll or answer the matters in the affidavit, as either branch of the rule should be the subject of a distinct application. Burton v. Chesterfield (Earl), 9 Jur. 373.

Restraining Solicitor from Applying for Renewal of Certificate.]—A solicitor had not taken out his certificate for several years, and did not take any notice of an application to explain his conduct, or that he might be struck off the roll. The court, under the special circumstances of the case, did not think fit to strike him off the roll or suspend him, but made an order restraining him from applying to renew his certificate without the leave of the court. Whitehead, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 796; 28 Ch. D. 614; 52 L. T. 703; 33 W. R. 601—C. A.

Time for Application.]—An attorney was convicted of embezzlement in July, 1861:—Held, that an application to strike him off the roll was not too late, though made in Michaelmas term, 1862. Thompson, In re, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 288; 7 L. T. 327.

Unsatisfactory Answer.]—If an attorney is called upon to answer matters in an affidavit merely, however dissatisfied the court may be with his answer, the court will not order him to be struck off the roll without giving him an opportunity of being further heard. H., In re, 31 L. T. 730.

Service of Proceedings.]—Where it was sworn that an attorney had no place of residence in this country, an order nisi for his being struck off the roll was permitted to be served at his last place of residence. Mark, In re, 4 Deac. & C. 28.

The rule nisi must be served personally. Solicitor, In re, 1 C. L. R. 481; 23 L. J., Ex. 24.

Where an attorney had been convicted of felony, and was undergoing his sentence, a rule to strike him off the roll was well served upon him in prison; and though he was civiliter mortuus, the court allowed counsel, instructed by his friends, to shew cause against the rule. Thompson, In re, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 288; 7 L. T. 327.

Affidavits.]—An affidavit to ground an application to strike an attorney off the roll for misconduct in a cause may be intitled in the cause, though judgment has been obtained in it. Stephens v. Hill, 10 M. & W. 28; 1 D. (N.S.) 669; 11 L. J., Ex. 329; 6 Jur. 585.

It is no objection to affidavits in support of an application to strike an attorney off the roll, that they are intitled as if there was a cause in court. Caine, Ex parte, 4 Jur. 220.

—— Solicitor Struck off at his own Request.]—An attorney cannot be struck off the roll on his own motion, though he has never practised, without an affidavit that no proceedings are pending against him for misconduct. Anon., 1 Chit. 557.

Where he applies to be struck off the roll at his own request, he must not only swear that no proceedings are pending against him, but also that he expects none. Gray, Ex parte, 9 D. P. C. 336; 5 Jur. 25. S. P., Jones, Ex parte, 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 151; Shoobridge, Ex parte, 4 W. R. 526; Owen, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 2; Foley, Ex parte, 8 Ves. 33.

But he need not state the ground on which he applies. Burrell, Ex parte, 11 Jur. 1062. S. P., Charnock, Ex parte, 1 W. W. & H. 548; 3 Jur. 23.

An attorney was struck off the roll of the court of exchequer at his own request, on an affidavit made by another person that an application, supported by his own affidavit, had been made by the attorney himself to the court of queen's bench to be struck off the roll there, exhibiting a rule of that court for that purpose, and alleging that the reason why no affidavit was made by the attorney in the court of exchequer was that he was out of town, and would not return in time to make the necessary affidavit to enable him to be struck off during the term. Sturdy, In re, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 452.

An attorney was struck off the roll at his own request, and afterwards (in the same term) applied to be restored. His affidavit described him as "one of the attorneys of the court":—The court required it to be amended. Simpson, In re, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 554.

Rule not acted on.]—Where a rule had been granted to strike a solicitor off the roll at his own request, but it had not been acted on, and nothing was done beyond obtaining it, it was allowed to be rescinded. Attorney, Ex parte, 5 W. R. 687.

Jurisdiction of Court.]—The court of common pleas has, by virtue of its general jurisdiction, power to strike an attorney off the roll of the court of common pleas at Lancaster. A fortiori, where one of its judges is pro tempore chief justice of that court. Briggs, Ex parte, L. R. 8 C. P. 63.

A divisional court of the high court of justice may order the name of a solicitor to be struck off all the existing rolls of the former courts consolidated into the high court of justice, and may order his name to be struck off, or not to be inserted in the register of solicitors of the supreme court of judicature. Martin, In re, 24 W. R. 111.

From the evidence given by a solicitor in an action in the court of the county palatine of Lancaster, he appeared to have been guilty of gross misconduct in his character of solicitor as to one of the mortgages to which the action related. The plaintiffs in the action having appealed, the conduct of the solicitor came under the consideration of the court of appeal, who directed the official solicitor to take proceedings. The official solicitor accordingly moved in the court of appeal for an order calling on the solicitor to explain his conduct, or that he might be struck off the roll:—Held, that the court of appeal had jurisdiction to entertain the application, although not brought before them by way of appeal. Whitehead, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 796; 28 Ch. D. 614; 52 L. T. 703; 33 W. R. 601—C. A.

Inquiry before Committee of Law Society.] — The high court of justice has jurisdiction to award to a solicitor the costs of an inquiry before the committee of the Incorporated Law Society, when the committee by their report have exonerated him of professional misconduct. Lilley, In re, Roney, Ex parte, 61 L. J., Q. B. 311; [1892] 1 Q. B. 759; 66 L. T. 271; 40 W. R. 321—C. A.

An application to the committee of the Incorporated Law Society under the Solicitors Act, 1888, s. 13, was not a condition precedent to the application to strike the solicitor off the roll, the case being one where no report of a master would have been necessary before the act, and the old jurisdiction of the high court being saved by s. 19. Weare, In re, Incorporated Law Society, Ex parte, 62 L. J., Q. B. 596; [1893] 2 Q. B. 439; 69 L. T. 522; 58 J. P. 6—C. A.

—— Mandamus.] — Certain charges having been made against a solicitor, the committee of the Incorporated Law Society instituted an inquiry. The committee were of opinion that the evidence adduced by the complainant did not establish a primâ facie case against the solicitor, and at their suggestion the case was withdrawn. The court refused to grant a rule nisi for a mandamus to the committee to file a report. Whitfield and the Incorporated Law Society, Ex parte, 5 R. 114; 67 L. T. 856.

The statutory committee of the Incorporated Law Society, acting under s. 13 of the Solicitors Act, 1888, have an absolute discretion at any stage of the proceedings to determine that a primâ facie case of professional misconduct has not been made out calling for an answer. A mandamus will not issue against the committee ordering them to hear and determined the matters alleged and report to the court thereon, as the efficient and convenient remedy formerly open to an aggrieved applicant of coming direct to the court itself is reserved by ss. 13 and 19 of the Solicitors Act, 1888. Reg. v. Incorporated Law Society, Chapman, Ex parte, 64 L. J., Q. B. 797; [1895] 2 Q. B. 456; 15 R. 597; 73 L. T. 187; 43 W. R. 687.

Appeal to Court of Appeal.]—When the high court makes an order ordering a solicitor to be struck off the rolls for misconduct, it does so in exercise of a disciplinary jurisdiction over its own officers, and not of a jurisdiction in any criminal cause or matter within the meaning of s. 47 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and therefore an appeal lies from such order to the court of appeal. Hardwick, In re, 53 L. J., Q. B. 64: 12 Q. B. D. 148; 49 L. T. 584; 32 W. R. 191—C. A.

—— Security for Costs.] — A solicitor who appealed from an order striking him off the roll, and directing an account and payment of moneys due from him to clients of his who obtained the order, was directed to give security for costs, it being shewn that he was in insolvent circumstances. Whether security for costs would have been required if the solicitor had appealed only against an order striking him off the roll, quære. Strong, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 506; 31 Ch. D. 273; 54 L. T. 219; 34 W. R. 420—C. A.

Order for Payment of Costs—Enforcement by Action.]—An order made by the court, upon an application to strike a solicitor off the roll for misconduct, and that the solicitor shall pay the costs of the proceedings may, by virtue of Ord. XLII. r. 24, be enforced by an action upon the order. An unsuccessful application by the person to whom the costs are ordered to be paid to attach the solicitor for disobedience to the order, is no bar to a subsequent action upon the order. Godfrey v. George, 65 L. J., Q. B. 249; [1896] 1 Q. B. 48; 73 L. T. 599; 44 W. R. 245—C. A.

K. COSTS.

I. AGREEMENTS AS TO.

Validity of—Payment in Proportion to Amount Recovered.]—By an agreement between a solicitor and his client, it was stipulated that the former should have 5*l.* per cent. commission on the gross amount of property recovered by him for the latter in addition to his costs:—Held, that the stipulation was contrary to the policy of the law, and that the solicitor must refund the amount received by him for commission, though included in a settled account. Pince v. Beattie, 2 N. R. 546; 32 L. J., Ch. 734; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1119; 11 W. R. 979.

An agreement entered into by a client with his attorney, to pay him at a certain specified rate for business to be done, is not binding; but the charges made according to such agreement may be allowed on taxation, if the master, on inquiring into them, considers them proper. Draw v. Scroope, 2 B. & Ad. 581; 1 D. P. C. 69; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 291.

An agreement between a firm of solicitors and their clients, whereby the solicitors were to receive a percentage of 10*l.*, plus their ordinary charges, on the property to be recovered in an intended action, and in case no property should be recovered, then only costs out of pocket with interest thereon (semble) is clear champerty. Solicitor, In re, 45 L. J., Ch. 47; 1 Ch. D. 573; 24 W. R. 38.

An agreement is bad on the ground of maintenance, by which it is stipulated that an attorney, for carrying on a lawsuit pending to recover possession of an estate, shall advance the necessary moneys, and that the client shall, if he be successful, pay to the attorney, over and above the legal costs, a sum according to the benefit to the client from possession of the estate recovered. Earle v. Hopwood, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 566; 30 L. J., C. P. 217; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 775; 3 L. T. 670; 9 W. R. 272.

An agreement by a client residing in Ireland with her solicitor there that, if he would employ a solicitor in London to obtain letters of administration necessary to her obtaining a fund out of chancery, she would pay him a commission of 10 per cent. on the fund, and also reimburse him the payment to the London solicitor:—Held, to be an agreement against public policy, which the court would not enforce. Strange v. Brennan, 15 Sim. 346; 15 L. J., Ch. 389; 10 Jur. 649. Affirmed, 2 Coop. C. C. 1.

—— Payment out of Property which is the Subject of Suit.] — An agreement between a solicitor and his client, an illiterate person, for payment of his bills (taken at a given amount) solely out of the produce of some property, the subject of the suit, does not preclude taxation. Ingle, In re, 21 Beav. 275; 25 L. J., Ch. 169; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1059.

An attorney entered into an agreement with a client to recover a debt due to the client, on the terms that the attorney should be allowed to retain for his trouble half the sum recovered. The agreement was entered into in France, and by the law of that country it was not illegal; but the debt was to be recovered in England:—Held, that the agreement was bad, as amounting to champerty; and that the attorney was bound to hand over the amount recovered to his client, and was only entitled to retain his taxed costs. Grell v. Levy, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 73; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 210; 9 L. T. 721; 12 W. R. 378.

A letter from a client, wishing to change his solicitor for another solicitor, stating the amount of property in the suit and his own circumstances, and stating that the client is wholly unable to pay his solicitor's bill, and offering the conduct of the suit to the new solicitor, followed by a letter from the solicitor agreeing to act for the client in the suit, is not sufficient to constitute an agreement by the solicitor to look to the property for satisfaction of his costs, and to exonerate the client from liability. Bryan v. Twigg, 3 L. J., Ch. 114.

—— To Pay Fixed or Exorbitant Sum.]—Since the Attorney and Solicitors Act, 1870, a verbal agreement by a client to pay his solicitor a lump sum in discharge of past costs is not binding on the client. Russell, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 948; 30 Ch. D. 114; 52 L. T. 794; 33 W. R. 815.

An attorney, executor to will, refusing to prove will, unless a large stated allowance was given to him, and which was agreed to, suing for the allowance it was refused him by the court. Pomfret v. Murray, 9 Mod. 230.

A petition was presented by a member of the provisional committee to compel a solicitor, who had received a gross sum of money under an agreement, in full of all demands, from the acting committee, to deliver a bill, costs, &c., for the purpose of taxation. Order made. Bass, Ex parte, Stephen, In re, 4 Railw. Cas. 723.

If an attorney pendente lite prevail on a client to agree to an exorbitant reward, the court will either set it aside entirely, or reduce it to the standard of those fees to which he is properly entitled. Sanderson v. Glass, 2 Atk. 296.

An agreement by a solicitor to take a gross sum from his client in lieu of costs is not void, though regarded by the court with jealousy. Whitcombe, In re, 8 Beav. 140; 14 L. J., Ch. 19.

The settlement of a solicitor's bill by the client for a fixed sum is valid, and will not be disturbed by the court when it has been entered into fairly, and with proper knowledge on both sides. Stedman v. Collett, 17 Beav. 608; 18 Jur. 457.

In the absence of a plea of no signed bill, delivered, it is competent to an attorney to rely upon a contract for a specific sum for business to be done, without producing a bill and shewing charges fair and reasonable amounting to or exceeding the stipulated sum. Searth v. Rutland, L. R. 1 C. P. 642.

But an agreement beforehand between a solicitor and his client to pay a specific sum in lieu of costs is illegal. Brady, in re, 15 W. R. 632.

An agreement between client and attorney, for the latter to be paid a lump sum in case of success attending some services of a professional character which the latter was retained to perform, is void. Philby v. Hazle, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 647; 29 L. J., C. P. 370; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 125; 2 L. T. 433; 8 W. R. 611.

Agreement by a solicitor to receive a fixed sum for costs for business hereafter to be done is not binding on the client, who is, notwithstanding payment under it, entitled to an order for the delivery of a bill of costs, and its taxation. Newman, In re, 30 Beav. 196.

A preliminary agreement between a solicitor and his client on obtaining a loan on mortgage, no bill of costs having been delivered, illegal, and the delivery of the bill and taxation ordered more than twelve months after completion of the transaction and payment of the balance to the client. Cawley, In re, 18 W. R. 1125.

—— Fixed Sum or out of Property Recovered.]—In the course of a protracted litigation B. had become indebted to his solicitor in 9,377*l.* (as was alleged), of which 4,696*l.* had been paid out of pocket. The solicitor agreed to accept 3,500*l.* in full for his costs, unless the client recovered the estate, in which case the client agreed to pay the full sum of 9,377*l.* The client did not dispute the validity of the agreement until seven years after, when the litigation had been successful. The court upheld the agreement. Moss v. Bainbridge, 18 Beav. 478. Affirmed, 6 De G. M. & G. 292.

—— To Transact Legal Business at Annual Salary.]—The solicitor of the city of London entered into an agreement with the corporation to transact their legal business at a fixed annual salary, including all emoluments, he being bound to account for all his receipts and payments, and to hand over to the corporation all costs recovered by him in excess of his disbursements and salary. By the agreement, he was also precluded from transacting business for any other client:—Held, that this agreement was not opposed to the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73. s. 32, or to the policy of the law. Galloway v. London Corporation, 36 L. J., Ch. 978; L. R. 4 Eq. 90; 16 L. T. 407; 15 W. R. 1032.

—— Not to Charge Extra Costs.]—If an attorney as next friend employed to bring an action uses language to his client which leads him to believe that, in the event of his recovering, he will not have to pay extra costs, then, although such extra costs are unexpectedly heavy, he cannot recover them. Collins v. Brook, 1 F. & F. 407; 4 H. & N. 270; 28 L. J., Ex. 143.

—— To Charge only Costs out of Pocket.]—An attorney who undertakes to conduct a suit upon the terms that he is not to be paid unless it succeeds, is not entitled upon failure of the suit to recover money paid out of pocket. Turner v. Tennant, 10 Jur. 429, n.

An attorney, on being retained to conduct a cause, gave his client the following undertaking:—"Should the damages or costs not be recoverable in this action, I shall charge you costs out of purse only." The plaintiff obtained a verdict with damages and costs, but the defendant obtained his discharge under the Insolvent Debtors Act, and the plaintiff only received a dividend of about 7*s.* in the pound on the amount of his judgment:—Held, that the attorney was not limited by his undertaking to costs out of pocket only. Stretton, In re, 14 M. & W. 806; 3 D. & L. 278; 15 L. J., Ex. 16.

An attorney undertook a prosecution for perjury on the defendant's behalf, and agreed not to charge him full costs, except money out of pocket. He disbursed a large sum towards carrying on the proceedings, but, by negligence, preferred a defective indictment, and, in consequence, the prosecution failed:—Held, that he could not recover for the disbursements. Lewis v. Samuel, 8 Q. B. 685; 15 L. J., Q. B. 218; 10 Jur. 429.

An agreement to charge costs only out of pocket does not preclude taxation. Ransom, In re, 18 Beav. 220.

An attorney gave to his client, who had commenced an action, the following undertaking: "I undertake to carry on this action on having the cash provided for costs out of pocket; such costs not to exceed 15*l.*, including counsel's fees; not any witnesses' expenses":—Held, that this limited his right to costs to 15*l.* Moon v. Hall, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 760; 11 L. T. 274; 13 W. R. 83. See Jones v. Read, 5 A. & E. 529; 1 N. & P. 18; 5 D. P. C. 216; 6 L. J., K. B. 9.

A client, when he retained a solicitor, expressed himself dissatisfied with the usual mode of remunerating solicitors, but no definite arrangement was made as to any other mode of remuneration. Subsequently, the solicitor, in a letter to the client, stated that "until I have the pleasure of seeing you, and of finally making some general and well understood arrangement with you on the subject of costs, it shall be understood on my part, that, beyond costs out of pocket, I have no claim upon you personally." No arrangement was ever made, though the subject was often alluded to by the solicitor:—Held, that this did not amount to a concluded agreement by the solicitor to claim nothing as of right but costs out of pocket. Wilson v. Emmett, 19 Beav. 233.

—— Payment only in Case of Success.]—It is a good defence to an action on a solicitor's bill that he undertook to perform the business on the principle of "no cure, no pay." Tabram v. Horne, 1 M. & Ry. 228; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 24; 31 R. R. 321. S. P., Ashford v. Price, 3 Stark. 185; D. & R., N. P. C. 48; 25 R. R. 787.

—— Agency Terms.]—G., a solicitor, agreed to conduct the defence to a suit of S., a solicitor, upon terms that if the case of S. failed he would accept usual agency fees. The case of S. failed entirely from the two letters which had been subsequently, though not at the time of the agreement, communicated to G., who continued to conduct the defence without observation. G. had sent in his bill of costs, made out as between solicitor and client. Taxation ordered upon the scale of agency charges only. Gedye, In re, 23 Beav. 347.

A., a solicitor, being one of three mortgagees, arranged with another solicitor B., to "act as his agent" in the matter of the mortgage, on agency terms. B. accordingly acted, and sent in his bill prepared as between solicitor and client, which was paid by the mortgagees. B. allowed A. 100*l.* as his share of the profits. After this, on the application of the second incumbrancers, the bill was taxed:—Held, that the taxing master was right in taxing it on the principle of solicitor and agent, for the agreement between A. and B. was valid, though it inured to the benefit of the mortgagees; and that the bill was properly taxable, at the instance of the second incumbrancers, as between them and B. Taylor, In re, 18 Beav. 165; 23 L. J., Ch. 857; 18 Jur. 666; 2 W. R. 249.

—— Where Costs have been Prepaid.]—Y. retained B., a solicitor, to conduct for him a suit in chancery. He afterwards borrowed a sum of money from B. upon mortgage, paying, however, out of the sum advanced, B.'s bill of costs due in respect of the suit up to that time, upon the agreement, that if any part of those costs should be afterwards decreed to be paid in the suit, B. would repay the amount to Y. Afterwards Y. became bankrupt, and obtained his certificate; and afterwards an order in the suit was made for the taxation of the costs of all the parties, and then an order for their payment, and under that order B. received his taxed costs out of a fund in court. In an action by the assignees of Y. for this amount:—Held, that the prepayment to B. of his bill of costs was a good consideration for the agreement to repay them in the event which had occurred; that the right of action on behalf of Y. passed to the assignees; and that they were entitled to recover the amount. Morgan v. Taylor, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 653; 28 L. J., C. P. 178; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 791; 7 W. R. 285.

An attorney being consulted by a client, who was under a charge of criminally assaulting a female child of tender years, obtained from the client 200*l.* to do the best he could for him, but with an understanding that no account of the transaction should be kept or rendered. Having succeeded in procuring his discharge, he was called upon after a lapse of nearly six years to deliver a bill of costs. The court refused to order him to do so, but referred the whole matter to the master, who in the result discharged the rule, but without costs. Vann, In re, 15 C. B. 341; 3 C. L. R. 126.

—— Between Solicitor and Unqualified Person.]—An agreement by a solicitor to give to an unqualified party a share of profits arising from business in which he was employed through the intervention of the latter, is not illegal. Gordon v. Dalzell, 15 Beav. 351; 21 L. J., Ch. 206; 16 Jur. 186.

Where a father, who never was duly qualified, pursuant to the 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, after carrying on for some years the business of a proctor conjointly with his son, who was duly qualified, retired, and his son granted him an annuity, payable out of the capital or profits of the business, in consideration of his retiring, and giving up his share in the profits:—Held, that it was not illegal to grant the annuity in consideration of the father ceasing to do that which was illegal; and that the fact that the annuity was to be paid out of the profits of the business, did not make the transaction illegal, within the 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, s. 8, but that the grant was voluntary, and that the consideration was not good against the son's creditors for value. Eddison v. Rothery, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 943; 11 L. T. 134; 12 W. R. 1138.

Solicitors' Act, 1870—In Writing—Signature.]—A document containing the terms of an agreement as to the amount of costs payable by a client to his solicitor, signed by the client only, is not an agreement in writing within s. 4 of the Solicitors Act, 1870. Raven, In re, Pitt, Ex parte, 45 L. T., 742; 30 W. R. 134.

A cash account containing an item for "costs as agreed" does not, where it is admitted that there was an antecedent verbal agreement constitute an agreement in writing within s. 8 of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881. Baylis, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 612; [1896] 2 Ch. 107; 74 L. T. 506; 44 W. R. 533—C. A.

A document containing the terms of an agreement as to the amount of costs payable by a client to his solicitor, assented to by the client, but signed by the solicitor only, is not an "agreement in writing" within the Solicitors Act, 1870, s. 4, and the solicitor may be required to deliver a detailed bill of costs, to be taxed in the ordinary way. Lewis, In re, Munro, Ex parte, 45 L. J., Q. B. 816; 1 Q. B. D. 724; 35 L. T. 857; 24 W. R. 1017.

An agreement in writing between a solicitor and his client as to payment of costs is not valid by the Solicitors Act, 1870, s. 4, unless it is signed by both parties. Ib.

The solicitor for the plaintiff settled an action, in which the plaintiff had obtained judgment, but the defendants had appealed, on the terms of the payment by the defendants of 210*l.* damages and 120*l.* for his costs. He explained the terms of the settlement to the plaintiff, and paid the plaintiff 210*l.* The plaintiff then signed a document in the following terms: "Received from T." (the solicitor) "the sum of 210*l.*, being the amount of damages received on my behalf from the defendants, and, having regard to the fact that he has settled with them for a sum less than that to which he would have been entitled for costs, if they had been unsuccessful, I hereby agree to allow the sum paid by me to him on account of costs as an equivalent for the abatement he has made to the defendants." The sum thus paid amounted to 55*l.* 16*s.* The solicitor afterwards delivered to the plaintiff a cash account containing on the credit side 330*l.* and 55*l.* 16*s.*, in all 385*l.* 16*s.*, on the debit side 210*l.*, and "amount of agreed costs" 175*l.* 16*s.*, i.e. 120*l.* and 55*l.* 16*s.*, in all 385*l.* 16*s.*: —Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to an order for taxation, for the document constituted an agreement in writing between solicitor and client within the meaning of s. 4 of the Solicitors Act, 1870, and the transaction amounted to payment between solicitor and client within the meaning of s. 41 of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73. Dictum in Lewis, In re, Munro, Ex parte (1 Q. B. D. 724) disapproved. Thompson, In re, Baylis, Ex parte, 63 L. J., Q. B. 187; [1894] 1 Q. B. 462; 70 L. T. 238; 42 W. R. 462.

A solicitor delivered a bill of costs and threatened legal proceedings. On receiving no answer he wrote to a third person, who informed the client of the contents of the letter. The client then wrote to the solicitor: "I will send you a cheque for the whole amount": —Held, that this letter did not constitute an agreement between solicitor and client within s. 4 of the Solicitors Act, 1870, so as to deprive the client of his right to taxation. Pontifex v. Farnham, 62 L. J., Q. B. 344; 5 R. 149; 68 L. T. 168; 41 W. R. 238.

—— When Writing not Necessary.]—An agreement by an attorney with a client "to charge him nothing if he lost the action, and to take nothing for costs out of any money that might be awarded to him in such action," need not be in writing. Jennings v. Johnson, L. R. 8 C. P. 425.

—— Opinion of Court.]—The opinion of the court under s. 4 of the Solicitors Act, 1870, cannot be taken before money is payable under the agreement. Solicitor, In re, 45 L. J., Ch. 47; 1 Ch. D. 573; 24 W. R. 38.

—— Application to set aside—Summons.]—Since the Judicature Act, 1873, an application in the queen's bench division under s. 8 of the Solicitors Act, 1870, to set aside an agreement between a solicitor and his client as to costs may be made by a summons in chambers. Howell Thomas, In re, 62 L. J., Q. B. 474; [1893] 1 Q. B. 670; 5 R. 387; 68 L. T. 759; 41 W. R. 524.

—— Business done in Police Court and Quarter Sessions.]—Business done by a solicitor in a police court or a quarter sessions is not "done in any court" within the meaning of s. 8 of the Attorneys and Solicitors Act, 1870; and therefore the jurisdiction to enforce or set aside an agreement made under that act for the payment of a sum exceeding 50*l.* in respect of such business is vested in the high court, or a judge thereof. J. H. Jones, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 191; [1896] 1 Ch. 222; 73 L. T. 543; 44 W. R. 146; 60 J. P. 7—C. A.

—— No Action—Client Preventing Work being done.]—A declaration alleged that by an agreement in writing between the plaintiff, who was an attorney, and the defendant, it was agreed that the defendant should be prepared to sell certain gas works, and that the plaintiff should be employed to carry out the sale, and be paid a commission of 4*l.* per cent. on the purchase-money in lieu of costs. Breach, that the defendant would not permit the plaintiff to carry out the sale, and had refused to pay any commission. Plea, that the agreement was for services to be done by the plaintiff as the defendant's attorney and solicitor within the meaning of the Attorneys and Solicitors Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 28), of which s. 8 enacts that "no action shall be brought upon any such agreement": —Held, that the plea was bad, and the action maintainable, for s. 8 was intended to prevent actions to recover the remuneration agreed upon in lieu of costs when the work had been done, and did not apply to an action for refusing to allow the attorney to do the work and earn the remuneration. Rees v. Williams, 44 L. J., Ex. 116; L. R. 10 Ex. 200; 32 L. T. 462; 23 W. R. 550.

Solicitors Remuneration Act, 1881.]—A mortgagor wrote to his solicitor as follows, "I hereby request and instruct you to raise, or endeavour to raise, for me the sum of 300*l.*, at 10 per cent. per annum, on the security of all my estate and interests under the will and in the property of the late T. S., and I hereby undertake to pay your costs (which I agree at 20*l.*, exclusive of costs out of pocket) incurred, or to be incurred, in or about doing what is necessary in your opinion for the purpose of carrying out these instructions." The solicitor carried out the mortgage, in which he acted as solicitor for the mortgagor and mortgagee, and he retained out of the money advanced 20*l.* for costs, including the mortgagee's costs. The mortgagor subsequently took out a summons that the solicitor might be ordered to deliver to him a bill of costs and charges claimed by the solicitor to be due or paid or to have been deducted by him out of the mortgagee's money: —Held, first, that the letter constituted an agreement within the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, s. 8, sub-s. 1, and although the remuneration agreed to was with reference, so far as the mortgagee's costs were concerned, to matters in which the solicitor was not engaged as solicitor for the mortgagee, yet he was engaged to do business for him as solicitor, and therefore the relation of solicitor and client was created within the meaning of s. 1, sub-s. 3; secondly, that in the absence of evidence impeaching the agreement, there ought not to be a reference for taxation under s. 8, sub-s. 4. Palmer, In re, 59 L. J., Ch. 575; 45 Ch. D. 291; 62 L. T. 778; 38 W. R. 673—C. A.

Sect. 8, sub-s. 2, of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, applies to non-contentious as well as to contentious business; and under that section no valid agreement as to costs can be made unless it be in writing. West, King and Adams, In re, Clough, Ex parte, 61 L. J., Q. B. 639; [1892] 2 Q. B. 102; 67 L. T. 57; 40 W. R. 644.

—— Signature—Sufficiency of.]—An agreement for remuneration under sub-ss. 1 and 2 of s. 8 of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1884, is sufficiently signed if signed by the person who seeks to repudiate it, and need not be signed by both parties. Perrett, Ex parte, Frape In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 473; [1893] 2 Ch. 284; 2 R. 411; 68 L. T. 558; 41 W. R. 417—C. A.

"Fair and Reasonable."]—A solicitor agreed to conduct certain bankruptcy proceedings on the terms that his costs should not exceed 10*l*. In the course of the proceedings his clients left him and employed other solicitors, and he sent in a bill of costs for a larger amount than 10*l*. The county court judge sitting in bankruptcy declared the agreement to be void, because it did not contain a provision that the solicitor originally employed might conduct the bankruptcy proceedings to an end:—Held, that the order was wrong on the ground that the agreement was fair and reasonable, and that the solicitor could have gained no advantage if he had been allowed to prosecute the proceedings in bankruptcy to a conclusion, since under no circumstances could he have obtained costs beyond the amount of 10*l*. out of the estate. Payton, Ex parte, Owen, In re, 52 L. T. 628; 2 Morrell, 87.

On 13th March, a client instructed a solicitor to act on his behalf in the completion of the purchase of a tea and coffee business for 500*l*. A number of letters were written, and, according to the solicitor's statement, between twenty and thirty interviews held, and other business done. On 31st March the client and his solicitor signed a memorandum of agreement, that the bill of costs (without being made up to date) should be 42*l*. The client was a gentleman's valet and alleged that he acted in ignorance and under pressure in coming to the agreement:—Held, that under the circumstances the bargain was unfair and unreasonable, and must be set aside. Mearns v. Knapp, 37 W. R. 585.

Where an agreement as to costs is signed by the client and he adduces evidence showing that the agreement is unfair and unreasonable, it is competent to the court upon a summons for taxation by the client, although payment has been made under the agreement, to make an order for taxation, and to direct the taxing-master to certify whether or not the agreement is unfair and unreasonable. Dictum in Palmer, In re (45 Ch. D. 291), approved. Perrett, Ex parte, Frape, In re, supra.

An agreement as to the remuneration of a solicitor, to be "fair and reasonable" within the meaning of the Solicitors Act, 1870, must be "fair" in the sense of having been fairly obtained, and "reasonable" in the sense of being reasonable in its terms. Cathcart, Ex parte, Stuart, In re, 62 L. J., Q. B. 623; [1893] 2 Q. B. 201; 4 R. 506; 69 L. T. 334; 41 W. R. 614—C. A.

A solicitor made an agreement in writing with his client under which the client was to pay him 5 per cent. on all costs taxed off a certain bill of costs; the remuneration which the solicitor would receive under the agreement was five times more than what he would receive for the work done apart from the agreement:—Held, that the terms thereof were not reasonable, and the agreement must be set aside. Ib.

—— Charges covered by Scale Fee—Taxation.]—Where a taxing-master, in deciding as to the validity of an agreement for costs, found that it was fair and reasonable, and allowed, in addition to the scale fee, the costs of freeing from incumbrances property sold, the court refused to interfere with this decision. Purcell, In re (27 L. R. Ir. 375), considered. Frape, In re, Perrett, Ex parte, 63 L. J., Ch. 678; [1894] 2 Ch. 290; 8 R. 274; 71 L. T. 80; 42 W. R. 475.

Payment of Interest to Solicitor.]—A client, by letter, undertook to pay his solicitor interest on balance appearing against him from time to time, upon the principle of annual rests:—Held, that the agreement was unilateral and not binding; and that even if it had been duly signed by both parties, it was not such an agreement as could be enforced between solicitor and client, being entered into while that relation was subsisting between them. Moss v. Bainbrigge, 18 Beav. 478. But see 6 De G. M. & G. 292.

An agreement of the assignee to allow the solicitor interest on the amount of his bill of costs does not bind the bankrupt's estate; nor does the resolution of creditors, at a meeting held for this purpose, bind those who are absent. Phillips, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 368; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 526.

A contract by a client to pay interest on costs will be binding if it is made with full knowledge, sufficient advice, and necessary warning. Shannon v. Casey, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 307.

An agreement between a solicitor and a client without the intervention of any other solicitor, to allow the solicitor interest on his bill of costs, cannot be maintained independently of subsequent acquiescence, unless it appears that he informed the client that the law allowed no such charge. Lyddon v. Moss, 4 De G. & J. 104; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 637; 7 W. R. 433.

But where the relation of solicitor and client had ceased after such an agreement had been made, and the client subsequently (having in the meantime had proper advice upon the subject of the agreement) entered into a second agreement with the solicitor in part founded on the former, which she did not seek to impeach till fourteen years after its date:—Held, that there had been such delay and acquiescence as to preclude any title to relief. Ib.

Taxation of Costs.]—Where an agreement has been made for the remuneration of a solicitor and the solicitor alleges that the remuneration was for non-professional work, the persons chargeable cannot obtain the common ex parte order for the delivery and taxation of the bill of costs. The Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, s. 8, has made no difference in the practice in this respect. Inderwick, In re, 25 Ch. D. 729; 50 L. T. 221; 32 W. R. 541.

Upon a petition for taxation, the court has no jurisdiction to determine the construction of a disputed special contract as to costs. Thompson, In re, 8 Beav. 237 ; 14 L. J., Ch. 137 ; 9 Jur. 169.

An agreement between a solicitor and his client, an illiterate person, for payment of costs (taken at a given amount) does not preclude taxation. Ingle, In re, 21 Beav. 275 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 169 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1059.

—— Jurisdiction before Solicitors Act, 1870.]—The jurisdiction as to taxation given by the Solicitors Act, 1843, extends only to the ascertainment by the ordinary rules of practice of the quantum payable by one party to the other. It does not authorise the court to determine whether a special agreement exists as to the mode of taxation, or the manner in which the costs, charges, and expenses are to be settled and paid. Rhodes, In re, 8 Beav. 224 ; 14 L. J., Ch. 97.

Upon a petition for taxation, the court has no jurisdiction to determine the construction of a disputed special contract as to the costs. Thompson, In re, 8 Beav. 237; 14 L. J., Ch. 137; 9 Jur. 169.

A solicitor acted for clients under a special agreement as to costs, which was doubtful :—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to determine the construction and effect of the special agreement on petition. Beale, In re, 11 Beav. 600.

The court has no authority, upon a petition by a client against his solicitor, to give relief founded on a special agreement. Alexander v. Anderdon, 6 Beav. 405.

In proceeding under the Solicitors Act, 1843, the court is not authorised to interfere with a special agreement between solicitor and client, the legal effect of which is to alter the ordinary relation between solicitor and client, to supersede the authority or discretion of the court, by giving to either party more or less than is warranted by the rules of the court, or by providing for the settlement and payment of the bill in a special manner. Eyre, In re, 2 Ph. 367 ; 17 L. J., Ch. 277.

An agreement was signed between a solicitor and his clients by which the former was to take a sum agreed on, in full of all demands. An order of course afterwards obtained for the taxation of his bill was discharged for irregularity. Mackrill, In re, 11 Beav. 42.

Settlement of a bill of costs between a solicitor and client upon a special arrangement precludes an order being made upon petition for taxation ; the agreement must first be set aside by suit before the matter can be re-opened. Whitcombe, In re, 8 Beav. 140 ; 14 L. J., Ch. 19.

A solicitor entered into a special agreement with his client for interest on his bill, with annual rests, and for a charge on the estate recovered :—Held, that this was not a proper case for an order of course for taxation, and such an order was discharged. Moss, In re, 17 Beav. 59.

An agreement to charge only costs out of pocket does not preclude a taxation. A solicitor in 1849 agreed to charge sums out of pocket only, provided the client was unable to recover the proper costs in the business. A taxation was ordered of a bill for business in 1853 in the usual terms, and without determining any question as to the agreement. Ransom, In re, 18 Beav. 220.

Where there is an agreement by a solicitor with his client to charge only costs out of pocket, the master will, under the common order in equity for taxation, have regard to such agreement. Philp, In re, 2 Giff. 35 ; 29 L. J., Ch. 866 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1024.

Where a common order for taxation had been obtained, and an application for its discharge was made on the ground of the existence of a special agreement as to the costs, the court refused to discharge it, the solicitor having before the order improperly refused a copy of the agreement to the client, who was an illiterate person. Ingle, In re, 21 Beav. 275 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 169 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1059.

Agreement to pay Costs.]—An agreement to pay costs is an agreement to pay taxed costs ; and a third party paying a solicitor's bill of costs, in order to compromise a suit, stands in the same situation with respect to the right of claiming taxation as the solicitor's client. Vincent v. Venner, 1 Myl. & K. 212 ; 2 L. J., Ch. 49.

Costs out of Fund—Implied Condition.]—An agreement with an attorney, that he shall get his costs out of the fund in the suit, implies the condition that he is continued in the conduct of the suit until there is a fund in court available for costs. Hollings v. Booth, 2 F. & F. 220.

—— Condition.]—A company was being promoted for the building of a railway, and for the purchase, in connection therewith, of a certain canal. The promoters and a firm of solicitors came to an agreement, afterwards adopted by the company, by which the solicitors consented to give their services gratis "in the event of the application to parliament failing, or the capital not being raised," but in the event of these two conditions being fulfilled, they were to be paid the customary professional charges for work done. An act of parliament was obtained incorporating the company, and providing for the transfer to it of the canal, and authorising the construction of the railway. The capital was not to exceed eight million pounds, and the company was authorised to resolve that the canal undertaking and capital necessary for it should be a separate undertaking, with a separate capital. This course was adopted by the company, and the canal capital fixed at one and a quarter million. This amount was raised, but the rest of the capital of the company was not raised. In an action by the solicitors to recover the customary professional charges for work done by them :—Held, that the raising of the canal capital was not a raising of "the capital," and that the conditions of the contract made between the promoters and the solicitors not having been fulfilled, the solicitors were not entitled to succeed in the action. Nichols v. North Metropolitan Ry. and Canal Co., 71 L. T. 836—C. A. Affirmed 74 L. T. 744—H. L. (E.)

Enforcing — Solicitor not Party.]— In proceedings to recover an estate, A. became greatly indebted to his solicitor; an agreement was entered into between A. and his brother B., by which A. agreed to relinquish his interest in the estate to B., in consideration of B. undertaking to pay the costs already incurred, with interest :—Held, that solicitor being no party to the agreement, could derive no benefit from it. Moss v. Bainbrigge, 18 Beav. 478. See 6 De G. M. & G. 292.

Next Friend of Infant.]—A person who signs an authority for the use of his name as next friend of an infant, becomes primâ facie liable to pay the infant's solicitor's bill of costs, as well as those of the other side. Flower, In re, 19 W. R. 578.

If for any cause he disputes this liability, the solicitor may nevertheless obtain the common order for taxation against him without mentioning that fact, for the defence cannot be raised in the process of taxation, but requires independent proceedings to be taken to enforce it. Ib. S. P., Hawkes v. Cottrell, 3 H. & N. 243 ; 27 L. J., Ex. 369.

Dispute as to Agreement constituting Agency or Partnership.]—A bill in equity alleged a particular contract as to agency, but charged that the defendant pretended that the contract was one of partnership, and that upon either construction he was liable to account, and prayed for discovery of all matters of business relating to the agency ; that he might deliver his bills of costs for taxation, and for an account. Demurrer overruled. Ward v. Lawson, 42 L. J., Ch. 273 ; L. R. 8 Ch. 65 ; 21 W. R. 88.

When there is an agreement as to costs, which only goes to the extent of the charges to be paid, the master may take that into consideration, and a bill in equity is not the proper remedy ; but where the agreement goes farther, and there is, on the face of the bill, a dispute as to whether the agreement was one of agency or of partnership, a bill will be sustained. Ib.

Charge by Memorandum.]—A client wrote a letter to her solicitors authorising them to sell the property of hers of which they were legal mortgagees by transfer, and to pay off the money due thereon, and on the transfer to them, and "all expenses due to you" :—Held, that this memorandum gave the solicitors no charge in respect of their general bill of costs not relating to the mortgage. Champney v. Burland, 19 W. R. 913—L.JJ.

Guaranteeing Payment.]—Where A. guaranteed the payment to B. (an attorney) within six months of "all costs for business done for C., or which B. may thereafter do in reference to or arising out of the affairs of C.," the delivery of a bill of such costs by B. to C. before the end of the six months is not a condition precedent to B.'s bringing an action on the guarantee against A. ; and in such an action, therefore, an equitable plea alleging the non-delivery of a bill of such costs by B. to C. before the end of the six months, and want of notice to the defendant, before the same period, of the amount of such costs, is bad and no answer to the action. Reece v. Cox, 16 L. T. 327.

After Verdict by Consent.]—Where, by consent of parties, a verdict is taken for a sum named for damages, and also all costs to which the plaintiff had been put relating to the subject-matter of the cause, as between attorney and client, without being subject to taxation, that agreement is to pay such a sum for costs as would be considered fair and reasonable on taxation in a liberal way, and not by the ordinary rule. Young v. Waller, 16 M. & W. 446.

Taxation.]—See infra, TAXATION.

II. BILL OF COSTS.

a. DELIVERY OF BILL.

1. Signature.

Necessary to Maintain Action.]—A solicitor cannot recover for professional charges where a certain sum has been agreed on, without delivering a signed bill of costs pursuant to 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37. Wilkinson v. Smart, 33 L. T. 573 ; 24 W. R. 42.

Solicitor brings a bill for his fees. Plea of statute, 3 Jac., that the plaintiff had not signed his bill, good plea. Norris v. Bacon, 1 Vern. 312. S. P., Pritchard v. Draper, 1 Russ. & M. 191 ; Taml. 332.

When Unnecessary.]—An Irish attorney suing in England a person domiciled in England for business done in the Irish courts need not deliver a signed bill. Kernaghan v. Wadeson, 3 C. L. R. 764.

An attorney who is appointed clerk to commissioners under a town improvement act, at a fixed yearly salary, need not deliver a signed bill of costs for business done by him as such clerk. Bush v. Martin, 2 H. & C. 311 ; 33 L. J., Ex. 17 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 851 ; 8 L. T. 509 ; 11 W. R. 1078.

Where a solicitor has taken a mortgage from his client to secure the payment of costs, he may maintain a bill for foreclosure though no bill of costs has been delivered. Thomas v. Cross, 5 N. R. 148 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1163 ; 11 L. T. 430 ; 13 W. R. 166.

It is not necessary that an attorney should deliver a signed bill of costs a month before action, where the defendant had been admitted an attorney after the bill became due, but before commencement of the action. Windsor or Winsor v. Herbert, 7 M. & W. 375 ; 9 D. P. C. 237 ; 10 L. J., Ex. 132 ; 5 Jur. 730.

What Sufficient.]—A bill signed by one of two attorneys in partnership, thus : "For self and Robert Owen. James H. Dixon," is a sufficient signature. Owen v. Scales, 2 D. (N.S.) 304 ; 10 M. & W. 657 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 26 ; 6 Jur. 1000.

A solicitor furnished to his client a bill of costs not signed by the former ; an arrangement having taken place, the solicitor agreed to accept a smaller sum, and wrote the following memorandum at the foot of his bill of costs : "The amount of these costs are settled for A. B." :—Held, a sufficient subscription. Allen v. Murphy, 9 Ir. C. L. R. 305.

The signature of the name of a firm without the christian names of the members is sufficient to a bill of costs ; and the name of the firm may be used for recovery of the partnership debts after the dissolution of the partnership. Smith v. Brown, 1 C. & J. 542 ; 1 Tyr. 486 ; 5 Car. & P. 94 ; 9 L. J. (O.S.) Ex. 151.

A bill signed with the name of a firm is not invalidated by the fact that it contains items for work done when the firm was differently constituted, and which cannot be recovered under the particular signed bill. Pilgrim v. Hirschfeld, 9 L. T. 288 ; 12 W. R. 51.

Where a solicitor, whose right hand was paralysed, had his hand guided over his name, appended to a bill of costs, by a clerk who had written the name :—Held, to be a sufficient compliance with the provisions of s. 37 of the Attorneys and Solicitors Act, 1843. Angell v. Tratt, 1 Cab. & E. 118.

—— Letter accompanying Bill.]—A bill of costs for professional work done in part by one firm of solicitors and in part by another firm who have succeeded to the practice of the first firm, is properly signed and delivered so as to enable the new firm to sue for and recover the whole costs, if, though itself unsigned, it is delivered together with a letter signed by the new firm referring to the bill. Professional work was done by a firm, which consisted at first of R. & P., and afterwards of P. & G., practising under the name of R., P. & G., the business and debts of R. & P. having been transferred to R., P. & G. Bills for the costs of the whole work were delivered unsigned, but inclosed with a letter signed by R., P. & G. referring to the bills: —Held, that the bills were properly signed and delivered to enable R., P. & G. to sue for and recover the whole amount, as to the earlier items, as assignees of R. & P.; as to the latter items, in their own right. Penley v. Anstruther, 52 L. J., Ch. 367; 48 L. T. 664.

Delivery of a bill of costs unsigned, but accompanied by a letter signed by the solicitor, and referring to the bills, held a sufficient compliance with the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37. Bush, In re, 8 Beav. 66; 14 L. J., Ch. 6.

Third Party cannot raise Defence.]—The person entitled to raise the defence that there was no signed bill delivered one month before action, is the client of the solicitor, and a person, not being the client, who has made himself responsible under an agreement to pay costs, is not "a party to be charged therewith" within the meaning of s. 37, and is therefore not entitled to raise the defence, but such a person is entitled, under s. 38, to have the bill of costs taxed. Greening v. Reeder, 67 L. T. 28; 40 W. R. 623.

Pleading.]—Where a bill has been taxed, and the master has made his allocatur, a judge will not allow the defendant to plead that no signed bill has been delivered in addition to pleas of nunquam indebitatus and payment. Whalley v. Glover, 3 Car. & K. 13.

The defence that no proper bill duly signed has been delivered, must be specially pleaded. Lane v. Glenny, 2 N. & P. 258; 7 A. & E. 83; 1 W. W. & H. 479; 6 L. J., K. B. 218; 1 Jur. 475. Robinson v. Rowland, 6 D. P. C. 271; 1 W. W. & H. 74; 2 Jur. 136.

Or the plaintiff need not prove the delivery of the bill. More v. Dent, 1 M. & Rob. 462.

To a declaration against several contractors, for work and labour as an attorney, and for money paid, one pleaded that the action was commenced after 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, and was for the recovery of certain fees, charges and disbursements, claimed by the plaintiff to be due, in respect of business done as an attorney, as in the first count mentioned; and that the plaintiff did not, one calendar month before action, deliver unto the defendant, he being the party to be charged therewith, or send by the post to, or leave for him at his counting-house, office of business, dwelling-house or last known place of abode, a signed bill of costs:—Held, that the plea was good, and sufficiently negatived a delivery of a signed bill in compliance with the statute. Tate v. Hitchins, 7 D. & L. 123; 7 C. B. 875; 18 L. J., C. P. 256; 14 Jur. 20.

Availability of Unsigned Bills.]—A solicitor may sue out a commission upon a debt for costs, without having delivered a bill signed. Howell, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 312.

So, he may prove his bill under a commission, without delivering a signed bill. Eicke v. Nokes, M. & M. 303.

An attorney may set off a claim for costs notwithstanding no signed bill has been delivered. Brown v. Tibbits, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 855; 31 L. J., C. P. 206; 6 L. T. 385; 10 W. R. 465. S. P., Harrison v. Turner, 10 Q. B. 482; 16 L. J., Q. B. 295; 11 Jur. 817.

—— Consideration for Promissory Note.]—It is no answer to an action on a promissory note, that the note was given in respect of an attorney's bill not previously delivered pursuant to the statute. Jeffreys v. Evans, 3 D. & L. 52; 14 M. & W. 210; 14 L. J., Ex. 363.

Waiver of.]—The provisions of s. 37 of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, for the authentication by signature of a solicitor's bill of costs, are intended for the protection of the client only; and therefore where a bill has been delivered without such authentication, that circumstance is no objection to an application by the client for its taxation. Pender, In re, 2 Ph. 69; 16 L. J., Ch. 25; 10 Jur. 891.

A solicitor who delivers an unsigned bill is bound by it; but his client may either treat it as a nullity or waive the want of signature, and adopt it; though, after such waiver, the client cannot treat the bill as non-delivered. Gedye, In re, 14 Beav. 56; 20 L. J., Ch. 410; 15 Jur. 851.

Where parties on taxation agree to waive delivery of a signed bill, primâ facie they waive the operation of the statute as to payment of the costs of taxation. Gerrard v. Arnold, 6 D. P. C. 336.

In a suit instituted by a solicitor for payment of costs due to him from a client, it appeared by the answer that he had not delivered a signed bill conformably to the act of parliament. A bill duly signed was subsequently delivered, and that fact was put in issue by a supplemental bill. Semble, the defect in title of the plaintiff, as it stood at the institution of the suit, was not cured; but held, that the objection, not having been urged at the original hearing, could not be taken at the hearing on further directions. Pritchard v. Draper, 1 Russ. & M. 191; Taml. 332.

2. To Whom.

Party to be Charged.]—Whether, in an action for business done by an attorney, there has been a sufficient bill, and delivery thereof unto the party to be charged therewith, depends upon the circumstances of each case. Gridley v. Austen, 16 Q. B. 504; 18 L. J., Q. B. 337; 13 Jur. 680.

An attorney proved the delivery of his bill to the defendant, accompanied by the following letter to him: "As Mrs. H. has left your house, I beg to hand you my account, which I hope will be found satisfactory." Mrs. H. was a relation of the defendant, and the business done had reference to procuring a separation between her and her husband:—Held, not a sufficient delivery to the party to be charged. Ib.

The delivery of a a solicitor's bill of costs, on which to found a taxation of it, must be a delivery to the party chargeable with the payment of it; that is, to the client. Where, therefore, a bill of a mortgagee's solicitor was delivered to the solicitor of the mortgagor for taxation:—Held, to have been an improper delivery for the purpose. Abbatt, In re, 4 L. T. 576.

A bill, in which no name of a client as chargeable was introduced, was forwarded by post inclosed in a letter signed by the attorney and charging the defendant, and requesting a cheque for the amount:—Held, that the letter and bill must be taken in connection and read together; and that this was a sufficient delivery. Taylor v. Hodgson, 3 D. & L. 115; 14 L. J., Q. B. 310; 10 Jur. 355.

A signed bill of costs, headed in the matter of business, but not addressed to anyone, was inclosed in an envelope and sent by post to the client:—Held, a sufficient delivery to the party to be charged therewith. Lucas v. Roberts, 3 C. L. R. 987; 11 Ex. 41; 24 L. J., Ex. 227; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 527; 3 W. R. 415.

No particular form of heading being prescribed by the statute as essential to an attorney's bill, if the bill is sent with a letter, and the party to whom it is sent knows that it is intended to charge him, it is sufficient. Champ v. Stokes, 6 H. & N. 683; 30 L. J., Ex. 242; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 607; 4 L. T. 334.

A bill of costs, in order to comply with the statute, must clearly point out on the face of it, or by some writing connected with it, the party or parties to be charged. Kiernan v. Brereton, 17 Ir. C. L. R. 203.

It is not a sufficient delivery of a bill of costs for the attorney to shew it to the party charged, and then to take it away again, unless the attorney shewing it intends to leave it with the party, and merely takes it back at his request. Phipps v. Daubney, 2 L. M. & P. 180; 16 Q. B. 514; 20 L. J., Q. B. 273; 15 Jur. 797—Ex. Ch.

—— At Solicitor's Office.]—A person who had no place of business of his own directed communications to be addressed and sent to him at his attorney's office, where he occasionally called and wrote his letters. A bill of costs was addressed and left there for him more than a month before action brought thereon, yet he did not actually receive it till a fortnight before action:—Held, that there was evidence for the jury that the bill of costs was properly left there a month before action. Spier v. Bernard, 8 L. T. 396.

To Solicitor.]—In an action on a bill against a member of the provisional committee of a railway company, it appeared that G. P., the attorney of the company, employed the plaintiff, another attorney, to do work for the company. The plaintiff sent his bill, headed "Northampton, Lincoln and Hull Railway, to R. D., debtor," by the post, to G. P. The bill was afterwards shewn to the defendant, who said that he had before seen a bill like it:—Held, first, that the bill sufficiently charged the defendant. Phipps v. Daubney, 2 L. M. & P. 180; 16 Q. B. 514; 20 L. J., Q. B. 273; 15 Jur. 797—Ex. Ch.

Held, secondly, that there was evidence for the jury that the bill was delivered to the defendant. Ib.

In an action against an acting member of a provisional committee of a projected railway company, for work done for the company as a local attorney and solicitor, it was shewn that a bill of the costs and charges sued for had been sent by him to the general solicitor of the company, who, more than a month before action brought, laid it before a meeting of the provisional committee at which the defendant was present:—Held, a sufficient delivery of the bill to the party to be charged therewith. Eggington v. Cumberlege, 1 Ex. 271; 5 Railw. Cas. 113; 16 L. J., Ex. 283; 11 Jur. 932.

On a sale of mortgaged property by the mortgagors, the mortgagees' solicitors rendered services for which they were entitled to be paid by the mortgagors, and the mortgagors' solicitors, acting on behalf of their clients, undertook to pay those charges:—Held, that the mortgagors' solicitors were acting within the scope of their employment in obtaining the bill, and it could not now be withdrawn on the ground that it had been improperly delivered in being sent to the solicitors, and not to the clients. Kellock, In re, 56 L. T. 887; 35 W. R. 695.

To Servant.]—Delivery of his bill of costs by an attorney to the servants of his client at his dwelling-house is sufficient. M'Gregor v. Keiley, 2 D. & L. 635; 3 Ex. 794; 18 L. J., Ex. 391.

To Agent.]—Delivery of a bill of costs to an agent of the client, appointed for that purpose, held sufficient. Bush, In re, 8 Beav. 66; 14 L. J., Ch. 6.

Solicitors to trustees delivered to the manager of an asylum carried on by the trustees as part of the trust estate, certain bills of costs for work done for the trustees:—Held, that delivery to the manager was not in the absence of proof that he was authorised to receive bills for the trustees, delivery to the trustees. Layton, Steele & Co., In re, 38 W. R. 652.

Constructive Delivery to Third Party.]—R. and B. acted jointly in a sale of copyholds to which their respective clients were entitled, B. having the conduct of the sale. The purchaser required the property to be enfranchised, and wrote to B. asking him to arrange for the enfranchisement, and undertaking to pay his charges and the expenses. R. made out his bill of costs against his own clients, sent it to B., who sent it to the purchaser. The purchaser obtained an order for taxation of this bill on the usual petition of course by a third party. On motion by R. to stay all further proceedings under this order:—Held, that the common form allegation in a petition of course, that the solicitor "delivered to your petitioners his bill of fees and disbursements," is a material allegation which is not satisfied by a merely constructive delivery; that in the circumstances of this case there had been no delivery to the purchaser; and that the order had been irregularly obtained, and must be discharged. Practice of the taxing-masters as to service of the orders to tax stated. Delivery and constructive delivery to third parties liable to pay discussed and considered. Robertson, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 832; 42 Ch. D. 553; 62 L. T. 38; 38 W. R. 170.

In Case of Several Joint Contractors.]—It is sufficient to deliver a bill of costs to one of several joint contractors. Mant v. Smith, 4 H. & N. 324; 28 L. J., Ex. 234.

Where an attorney is retained jointly by several parties to defend a suit against each, the delivery of a bill of costs to one is sufficient to entitle him to maintain a joint action against all for his costs. Oxenham v. Lemon, 2 D. & R. 461; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 133. S. P., Finchett v. How, 2 Camp. 276; Crowder v. Shee, 1 Camp. 437; 10 R. R. 722.

In an action against two, a plea by one, that no bill had been delivered to him, or left at his dwelling-house, is bad. Kiteley v. Scofield, 6 Jur. 1059.

In an action against three, who were promoters of a company, it appeared that the attorney sent to one of them, in a letter, a bill headed, "To the promoters of the Lancashire Cotton Mill Company" :—Held, a sufficient delivery. Mant v. Smith, supra.

In an action against one of the members of a provisional committee for work done as an attorney, the defendant pleaded that no signed bill had been delivered. A signed bill had been delivered to another member of the same committee at his place of business, and the defendant was appointed a committee-man after part of the work had been done :—Held, not such a delivery as to render him liable. Edwards v. Lawless, 5 Railw. Cas. 357 ; 6 D. & L. 105 ; 6 C. B. 329 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 293.

A bill in such case should be delivered either at the office of the company, or at least to some person who can reasonably be considered to represent the committee. Ib.

—— Office of Business.]—In 1845, certain persons, one of whom was the defendant, formed themselves into a committee for establishing a railway company. They took offices in Moorgate street, where a brass plate was put up, with the name of the company engraved thereon. In November, 1845, the company was provisionally registered. In January, 1846, the scheme was abandoned, and the defendant interfered no further with it. A sub-committee was afterwards appointed (by whom it did not appear), for the purpose of ascertaining and arranging the claims upon the committee-men ; and in September, 1846, the plaintiff, a local attorney, and agent to the company, delivered a signed bill at the office in Moorgate street, addressed to "The Provisional Committee of the Company" :—Held, by Wilde, C.J., and Williams, J., that this was not a sufficient delivery at the office of business of the defendant, to charge him. Per Coltman, J., and Maule, J., that it was. Blandy v. De Burgh, 6 C. B. 623 ; 6 D. & L. 412 ; 5 Railw. Cas. 361 ; 18 L. J., C. P. 2 ; 12 Jur. 1005.

3. Practice.

Proof.]—A bill with an indorsement upon it, "March 4th, 1815, delivered a copy to C. D.," which indorsement was proved to be in the handwriting of a deceased clerk of the attorney's (whose duty it was to have delivered a copy of the bill) and proved to have existed at the time of the date, is evidence to prove the delivery of the bill. Champneys v. Peck, 1 Stark. 404.

Day of Delivery.]—The day on which a bill is delivered is not to be reckoned as one of the days of the month given to the client. Blunt v. Haslop, 2 D. P. C. 982 ; 8 A. & E. 577 ; 3 N. & P. 553 ; 7 L. J., Q. B. 216.

Order for Delivery of Bill—Jurisdiction.]—The jurisdiction to order delivery of a bill is independent of, and not ancillary to, the jurisdiction to order taxation ; nor does the absence of "special circumstances" necessarily preclude an order to deliver a bill for the purpose of seeing whether it was properly taxable or not. West, King and Adams, In re, Clough, Ex parte, 61 L. J., Q. B. 639 ; [1892] 2 Q. B. 102 ; 67 L. T. 57 ; 40 W. R. 644.

Under s. 396 of the Victorian Common Law Procedure Act, the court has power to order delivery of his bill by an attorney, whether or not it has been paid, and whether or not it is one which it would have jurisdiction to refer to taxation. [See 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ss. 37 and 41.] Duffett v. McEvoy, 54 L. J., P. C. 25 ; 10 App. Cas. 300 ; 52 L. T. 633—P. C.

The jurisdiction given by s. 37 of the Solicitors Act, 1843, to order delivery of a solicitor's bill of costs where no part of the business charged for has been transacted in any court of law or equity, was given to the Lord Chancellor and Master of the Rolls as judges of the court of chancery, and was transferred to the high court of justice by s. 16 of the Judicature Act, 1873. The judges of the queen's bench division, therefore have jurisdiction to order delivery of a bill of costs in such a case ; though the application for delivery ought to be made in the chancery division (Lord Esher, M.R., dissenting). Pollard, In re, 57 L. J., Q. B. 273 ; 20 Q. B. D. 656 ; 59 L. T. 96 ; 36 W. R. 515—C. A. Reversing 52 J. P. 85.

Delay in applying for delivery of a bill will not relieve the solicitor from the obligation to deliver a bill where he has in his possession the necessary materials. Baylis, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 612 ; [1896] 2 Ch. 107 ; 74 L. T. 506 ; 44 W. R. 533—C. A.

—— No Action Pending.]—Order, without cause in court, upon general jurisdiction over solicitor, that he shall deliver his bill for purposes of getting from him title deeds deposited with him for suffering recoveries, &c. Uxbridge (Earl), Ex parte, 6 Ves. 425.

—— When it will be made.]—The court, upon the application of the defendant, ordered the plaintiff's attorney to deliver his bill, though, upon the settlement of the action, it had been expressly agreed between the attorneys of the respective parties, that, on certain accommodation being given to the defendant, the plaintiff's attorney should receive 60*l.* as an ascertained amount of costs between attorney and client. Tanner v. Lea, 4 Man. & G. 617 ; 5 Scott (N.R.) 237.

P., under the pressure of legal proceedings taken against him by M. & Co. as attorneys for the National Bank of Scotland, entered into an agreement to pay 200*l.* to M. & Co. for their costs. It was alleged by P. that this payment, and a further payment to the National Bank, were made upon the terms that the bank should exhaust their remedies on certain acceptances given by third persons before taking proceedings against P., and that the bank was acting in violation of the agreement. P. thereupon applied that M. & Co. should be ordered to deliver to him a copy of their bill of costs in the matter of such proceedings. The court refused to grant the application. Morris, In re, Pooley, Ex parte, 27 L. T. 554 ; 21 W. R. 192.

—— Illegal Retainer—Champerty.]—A solicitor cannot set up the illegality of his retainer on the ground of maintenance and champerty against his client invoking the jurisdiction of the court to compel him to deliver a bill of costs and cash account for taxation. Thomas, In re, Jaquess v. Thomas, 63 L. J., Q. B. 572 ; [1894] 1 Q. B. 747 ; 9 R. 299 ; 70 L. T. 567—C. A.

—— Order or Petition.]—An ex parte order for the delivery of a bill of costs discharged with costs; the allegation of the professional employment being denied by the solicitor. Eldridge, In re, 12 Beav. 387.

Where a solicitor's bill of costs, or the delivery of documents in his possession is required on other grounds than those relating to taxation, the application may be made by way of petition, notwithstanding the general order of 17th April, 1867. Justice, In re, 16 W. R. 821.

A bill by a country solicitor against a London solicitor, alleging that he had made a special agreement with the plaintiff to transact certain business for him on agency terms, and charging that the defendant falsely pretended that the agreement was one not for agency but for partnership in the particular business. The bill charged that, on either construction of the agreement, the plaintiff was entitled to an account, and prayed that the defendant might deliver his bills of costs as the plaintiff's agent, and also for a general account of all dealings and transactions between them. The defendant demurred, on the ground that the proper remedy of the plaintiff was by petition under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37:—Held, that the demurrer ought to be overruled. Ward v. Lawson, 42 L. J., Ch. 273; L. R. 8 Ch. 65; 21 W. R. 88.

—— Against whom.]—Summary order upon a petition under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37, against assignees in bankruptcy of a country solicitor, who had employed a land agent to deliver their bills of costs, and against the agent to deliver his bill of costs and petitioner's papers in his possession. Walton, In re, 4 Kay & J. 78.

Such petitions should be intituled, in the matter of both solicitors; but a petition in the matter of a solicitor need not be intituled, in the matter of the act. Ib.

—— Undertaking to Deliver.]—A solicitor, on payment of his costs, undertook to deliver his bill, but he neglected. On a petition presented more than twelve months after, the court, under its general jurisdiction, ordered the delivery with costs. Foljambe, In re, 9 Beav. 402.

A solicitor of a mortgagor ordered, upon petition, to deliver to a mortgagee a copy of his bill of costs, in pursuance of his undertaking. Bailey, In re, 34 Beav. 392.

—— After Payment.]—A gross sum was paid to a solicitor in discharge of his claim, but no bill of costs was delivered:—Held, that the client was entitled to have a bill of costs delivered. Blackmore, In re, 13 Beav. 154; 15 Jur. 784.

The solicitor of trustees and executors received payment of his bill of costs out of the estate:—Held, that a residuary legatee was entitled to have a copy of the bill delivered on payment of the costs of it. Ib.

Enforcing Delivery.]—An order to deliver a bill of costs within fourteen days after notice was served on June 30th, without the indorsement as to liability to attachment. The order was again served, properly indorsed, on July 19th:—Held, that an attachment might issue for disobedience to it. Gregg, In re, and Prance, In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 107; L. R. 9 Eq. 137; 23 L. T. 234; 18 W. R. 589.

An attachment will not be granted against an attorney for disobedience to a rule of court ordering him to deliver his bill within a time named, unless a demand is first made on him for his bill by one of the persons to whom he is by the rule ordered to deliver it. Catlin, In re, 6 D. & L. 566; 7 C. B. 136. S. P., Baster, In re, 7 D. & L. 296.

On motion for an attachment for non-delivery of an attorney's bill to a party pursuant to rule of court, the affidavit should be made by the party himself; that of a third person is insufficient. Potter v. Buck, 8 D. P. C. 872.

An action does not lie against an attorney for disobedience of the order of a judge for delivery of his bill of costs. An attachment is the proper remedy. Dent v. Basham, 9 Ex. 467; 2 C. L. R. 989; 23 L. J., Ex. 161; 18 Jur. 295; 2 W. R. 201.

The proper mode of enforcing the delivery of a solicitor's bill is to serve the order with a proper indorsement, under the 23rd Consolidated Order, r. 10; and upon default, an attachment will issue as of course. Bowen, In re, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 612; 11 W. R. 607.

A party in a cause, who has obtained and served, according to the 12th Amended Order of August, 1841, an order that his solicitor shall deliver his bill of costs within a month, which is disobeyed, is entitled under the 15th Order of August, 1841, to enforce obedience by the writ of attachment. Lane v. Oliver, 2 Hare, 97; 12 L. J., Ch. 144; 6 Jur. 1080.

The proper mode of enforcing the delivery of a solicitor's bill is to serve the order with a proper indorsement, under the 12th Amended Order of the 11th April, 1842, and upon default being made, an attachment will go as of course. Belton, In re, 25 Beav. 368.

Where an attorney was arrested for not obeying a judge's order directing him to deliver his bill of costs, and also an account of all moneys received by him on account of his client, and he prayed to be discharged out of custody on the delivery of a bill and cash account, verified only by his clerk, who swore that the account gave credit for all sums received, as he was informed and believed (no affidavit verifying the account being made by the defendant himself), the court refused to discharge the defendant immediately out of custody, but directed the bill of costs and account to be referred to the master, who should report on what terms the defendant should be discharged. Reg. v. Weston, 8 Jur. 1122.

A solicitor was ordered to deliver his bill for taxation. Upon a motion to commit for the non-delivery, he swore he had no documents nor memoranda from which he could make out his bill. The court made no order on the motion. Ker, In re, 12 Beav. 390.

4. Alteration and Amendment of Bill.

After Delivery and before Taxation.] — A solicitor who has delivered his bill to the person chargeable therewith cannot afterwards avoid taxation by withdrawing it and delivering an amended bill, even though the person chargeable sent back the original bill, with suggested alterations, which were partly acquiesced in. Heather, In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 781; L. R. 5 Ch. 694; 18 W. R. 1079.

An alteration of a bill referred for taxation cannot be made after it is brought in for taxation. Davis v. Dysart (Earl), 21 Beav. 124. Affirmed, 8 De G. M. & G. 33; 25 L. J., Ch. 322; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 219; 4 W. R. 268.

Except by consent. Catlin, In re, 18 Beav. 519.

Upon an application to tax a paid bill, the solicitor will not be permitted to add to any under-charges contained therein, but the taxation must be had on the bill as delivered and paid. Wells, In re, 8 Beav. 416; 14 L. J., Ch. 215; 9 Jur. 820.

A solicitor, having delivered his bill, is bound by it, and the taxation must be on that bill; he is not entitled as of course to reduce his demand, or to reserve the power of adding to the charges. Carven, In re, 8 Beav. 436; 14 L. J., Ch. 372.

A solicitor having knowingly, in his bill of costs, fixed the rate of his charges for business, cannot afterwards, on a taxation, be allowed to increase it. Walters, In re, 9 Beav. 299.

Application of a solicitor, after an order for taxation, to withdraw a non-taxable item from his bill, refused. Blakesley and Beswick, In re, 32 Beav. 379.

After a bill has been referred for taxation erroneous overcharges inserted by mistake cannot be withdrawn. Christy, Ex parte, Barrow, In re, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 104; 2 Deac. 131; 6 L. J., Bk. 68. But see infra.

A bill of costs having been made out by a solicitor in the expectation that it would not be taxed, leave was given to present a petition to amend. Andrew, In re, 17 Beav. 510; 23 L. J., Ch. 129; 17 Jur. 1145; 2 W. R. 46.

A solicitor, after delivering his bill, may, before being served with an order for taxation, withdraw it, and substitute another bill of a reduced amount. Chambers, In re, 34 Beav. 177; 34 L. J., Ch. 292; 5 N. R. 298; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 230; 11 L. T. 726; 13 W. R. 375.

—— Unsigned Bill.]—A solicitor cannot, after delivery of a bill of costs, and objection taken to the amounts of the charges therein contained, even though the bill be unsigned, withdraw the bill from taxation, and substitute another in which the charges are reduced. Jones, In re, King, Ex parte, 54 L. T. 648.

Lump Sum in Bill Delivered.] — Solicitors having brought in, under an order for taxation, a bill of costs containing an item in a lump sum of 1,000*l.* for the costs, charges, and expenses of an action, it was held that the agreement to pay this sum was invalid, because it was not in writing:—Held, that they were entitled to bring in for taxation a bill containing the particulars of these charges, so long as the charges did not exceed 1,000*l.* Russell, In re, 55 L. T. 71—C. A. S. P., Kellock, In re, 56 L. T. 887; 35 W. R. 695.

A solicitor who has included in his bill a lump or gross sum, may, on taxation, supply a detailed statement shewing how the sum is made up, and the master may allow such of the items contained in the detailed statement as are proper, not exceeding in the aggregate the gross sum originally charged; but the master can in no case allow more than the original amount. Tilleard, In re, 32 Beav. 476; 32 L. J., Ch. 765; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1217; 8 L. T. 142; 11 W. R. 476.

Condition for Withdrawal.]—A solicitor may, when sending in his bill of costs to his client, reserve to himself the right to withdraw or alter it on condition, provided the condition is fully and clearly stated to the client; but if the solicitor has sent in his bill without any condition, or with a condition which he could not fairly impose, he cannot afterwards withdraw it or send in an amended bill. Thompson, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 138; 30 Ch. D. 441; 53 L. T. 479; 34 W. R. 112—C. A.

Omissions through Error or Mistake.]—By error and mistake, some items were omitted from, and others undercharged and overcharged in a bill referred for taxation. On petition by the executor of the solicitor, liberty was given to insert the omitted items, and increase those undercharged; but he was not allowed to decrease the overcharges. Whalley, In re, 20 Beav. 576.

Pending a taxation, leave given, upon special application, to carry in an additional bill for specified items of under-charge and omission, arising from error and mistake. Walters, In re, 9 Beav. 299. And see Id. 302, n. S. P., Marshall v. Oxford, 5 Sim. 456.

A solicitor cannot, upon objection being taken to the charges made in a bill of costs delivered by him, withdraw it and substitute another, unless the charges objected to were inserted upon misrepresentation or by mistake, or accident, and unless such circumstances can be proved, the original and not the substituted bill must stand for taxation. Heather, In re (L. R. 5 Ch. 694), followed. Chambers, In re (34 Beav. 177), explained. Holroyde and Smith, In re, 43 L. T. 722; 29 W. R. 599; 45 J. P. 437.

b. Contents of Bill.

Scandalous Matter.]—The general jurisdiction of the court to prevent proceedings before it being made the vehicle of scandal or impertinence extends to a bill of costs delivered, and, accordingly, entries in a bill of costs which contain scandalous matter will be ordered to be struck out. Miller, In re, French, In re, Love v. Hills, 54 L. J., Ch. 205; 51 L. T. 853; 33 W. R. 210.

What is Sufficient.]—A bill of costs is sufficient if it gives such information as would enable the client to obtain advice as to the taxation of the bill; and it is not necessary that an attorney, whom the client may consult as to the expediency of having the bill taxed, should be able to say, without further inquiry, whether the charges are fair and reasonable. Haigh v. Ousey, 7 El. & Bl. 578; 26 L. J., Q. B. 217; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 634; 5 W. R. 523. See Cooke v. Gillard, infra.

The 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37, in inquiring that a signed bill of costs should be delivered previously to an action by an attorney, means a bill so drawn out that all the items are charged in a taxable shape. Philby v. Hazle, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 647; 29 L. J., C. P. 370; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 125; 2 L. T. 433; 8 W. R. 611.

A bill is sufficient, if it gives sufficient materials for obtaining advice as to taxation. Keene v. Ward, 7 D. & L. 334; 13 Q. B. 515; 19 L. J., Q. B. 46; 14 Jur. 65.

A bill containing entries of various attendances, charges, and disbursements, but with a lump sum, only charged at the end of the bill, is not a sufficient signed bill, on which to found an action within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37. Wilkinson v. Smart, 33 L. T. 573; 24 W. R. 42.

Name of Court and Cause.]—A bill, delivered under 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 23, must have stated the name of the court in which the business was transacted, and also the name of the cause,

Lewis v. Primrose, 6 Q. B. 265 ; 13 L. J., Q. B. 269 ; 8 Jur. 982.

So, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, a bill must shew in what court the business was done. Englehart v. Moore, 15 M. & W. 548 ; 4 D. & L. 60 ; 15 L. J., Ex. 312.

And the name of every suit in which the business charged for was done. Ivimey v. Marks, 16 M. & W. 843 ; 4 D. & L. 109 ; 17 L. J., Ex. 165 ; 11 Jur. 355.

Such a bill is an entire thing ; and if the same bill blends charges for work done in a court of equity with charges for work apparently done in a court of common law, without pointing out which, the client cannot judge or be advised whether he should refer the whole bill for taxation ; and the charges in the same bills for equity business, though correctly stated, cannot be recovered. Ib.

A bill must shew the court and the cause in which the business referred to in it, or the greater part thereof, was done. Martindale v. Falkner, 2 D. & L. 600 ; 2 C. B. 706 ; 15 L. J., C. P. 91 ; 10 Jur. 161.

But where a bill contains items applicable to proceedings in the superior courts, but does not contain any statement from which it can be inferred in which of those courts the business was transacted, the bill is to be presumed to be a compliance with the act, unless the party charged thereby proves that any further information was practically required for the purpose of taxation, or shews that the name of the court in which business was done would have been of use to him. Cooke v. Gillard, 1 El. & Bl. 26 ; 22 L. J., Q. B. 90 ; 17 Jur. 137. Overruled by Roy v. Turner, 4 W. R. 126.

A bill is not in compliance with 7 & 8 Vict. c. 73, unless it furnishes reasonable information shewing in what cause each item charged for has been transacted. Dimes v. Wright, 8 C. B. 831 ; 7 D. & L. 292 ; 19 L. J., C. P. 137.

A bill must contain, in express terms, or by reasonable inference, a statement of the name of every cause, and of every court in which any part of the business charged has been transacted. Sargant v. Gannon, 7 C. B. 742 ; 6 D. & L. 691 ; 18 L. J., C. P. 220.

Where a bill contains items for proceedings such as would take place in the superior courts, it is not necessary that it should shew in which of these courts the business took place. Haigh v. Ousey, supra.

An attorney wrote to the plaintiff, also an attorney, instructing him to serve an inclosed writ of summons in an action of P. v. B., and to inform the defendant when he had done so, with an account of his charges. The plaintiff wrote in reply a letter headed P. v. B., informing the defendant that the writ had been served pursuant to his instructions, and that the charges were as below, enumerating the items. There was a similar correspondence respecting the service of notice of declaration in the same cause : —Held, that the plaintiff's letters, by reference to the writ, gave the necessary information as to the court in which the business had been done, and were, therefore, in accordance with the spirit of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37, within the decided cases. Cosens v. Graham, 12 C. B. 398 : 21 L. J., C. P. 206 ; 16 Jur. 952.

A bill delivered shewed that a judgment had been recovered by the London and Westminster Bank against the Yorkshire Bank ; that writs of scire facias were issued against the defendant and other shareholders of the latter bank ; that they were consolidated ; and that one of them, not naming which, was tried, and to one of the items, the technical name of the original cause in which the judgment was recovered was stated : —Held, that the proceedings were sufficiently specified. Anderson v. Boynton, 7 D. & L. 25 ; 13 Q. B. 308 ; 19 L. J., Q. B. 42 ; 14 Jur. 14.

Omission to Specify some Items.]—The omission sufficiently to specify one or more items does not disentitle an attorney from recovering that portion of the bill which is unobjectionable. Haigh v. Ousey, supra.

Where a substantial part of a bill of costs is improperly set out and described, the whole bill is not bad, but the solicitor can recover only those items that are properly described. Where, therefore, in a bill of costs for 51*l.* 16*s.* 6*d.*, a lump charge of 38*l.* 10*s.* was made for a number of items lumped together, and the remaining items, amounting to 13*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.*, were properly described, it was held that the solicitor could recover upon those items that were properly described. Dicta in Haigh v. Ousey, (7 El. & Bl. 578) followed. Blake v. Hummell, 1 Cab. & E. 345 ; 51 L. T. 430.

Where attorneys bring an action to recover the amount of their signed bill of costs, which bill contains some items which they are not entitled to recover, the action may be maintained for the residue. Pilgrim v. Hirschfeld, 9 L. T. 288 ; 12 W. R. 51.

—— Extra Costs.]—An attorney's bill, which contains, amongst other items, certain extra costs, not mentioning the taxed costs, is bad, even though, in an action on the bill, the jury find that the attorney has no claim for extra costs. Pigot v. Cadman, 1 H. & N. 837 ; 26 L. J., Ex. 134 ; 5 W. R. 353.

Propriety of Items of Charge.]—A payment for probate duty made by a solicitor on behalf of his client is a "disbursement" within the meaning of s. 37 of the Solicitors Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 73), and is properly included in his bill of costs. Lamb, In re, 58 L. J., Q. B. 455 ; 23 Q. B. D. 5 ; 37 W. R. 506.

As to what items of disbursement are properly included in a bill of costs. Legacy and probate duties, estimated at 140*l.*, were payable in order to make available certain funds in court. The solicitor, at the request of the client, engaged to pay them, and took a charge on the funds for 140*l.* and interest. The duties, amounting to 78*l.* only, were paid by the solicitor :—Held, that the sum formed a proper item in his account on the taxation of his bill of costs. Bedson, In re, 9 Beav. 5 ; 15 L. J., Ch. 153. See Haigh, In re, 12 Beav. 307 ; 19 L. J., Ch. 79 ; 14 Jur. 340.

An attorney employed to defend an action, and receiving from his client the debt and costs, for the purpose of being paid over to the plaintiff, is not entitled to make that sum an item in his bill, so as to increase the amount of it. Woollison v. Hodson, 2 D. P. C. 360.

When there are matters in a bill which have no relation to business as an attorney,—as money advanced to the client—the master, upon reference to him, should strike those items out, and proceed to tax the rest. Wardle v. Nicholson, 1 N. & M. 355 ; 4 B. & Ad. 469 ; 2 L. J., K. B. 76.

An attorney is entitled to recover money lent, without reference to his business of attorney. Mowbray v. Fleming, 11 East, 285; 10 R. R. 508.

He is not bound to insert in his bill the amount paid to a proctor employed by him for his client. Franklin v. Featherstonhaugh, 3 N. & M. 779; 1 A. & E. 475; 3 L. J., K. B. 163.

Items of the costs taxed in two actions, and paid by the attorney, and for which he had received no specific payment from his client, are properly inserted in the bill, and need not be in the cash account. Harrison v. Ward, 4 D. P. C. 39; 1 H. & W. 353.

A client was liable to a solicitor for the costs of procuring the execution of a lease by her tenant, but which the tenant was to bear. The amount not having been paid when the order to tax was made:—Held, that the charge was properly included in the bill of costs of the solicitor against his client. Cutlin, In re, 18 Beav. 513.

A charge in a solicitor's bill "for attending a great many times" is too vague, and on taxation will not be allowed. Pender, In re, 10 Beav. 390.

London Agent and Country Client.]—The charges of a London agent are properly included in the bill of costs, and not as a disbursement in the cash account, which the country solicitor delivers to his client; and such charges should be set out in detail, and not as a lump sum. Pomeroy and Tanner, In re, 66 L. J., Ch. 158; [1897] 1 Ch. 284; 75 L. T. 625; 45 W. R. 245.

c. Taxation.

1. Jurisdiction.

High Court—County Court.]—By the combined operation of the Solicitors Act, 1843, s. 37, and the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 16, as modified by the County Courts Act, 1856, s. 36, the costs as between solicitor and client in a county court action in which the claim exceeds 20*l.* may be taxed in the high court of justice; consequently, the costs as between solicitor and client in a county court administration action may be taxed in the chancery division. Worth, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 262; 18 Ch. D. 521; 44 L. T. 462; 29 W. R. 371.

In what Court.]—The court had no jurisdiction to order the taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs, for business done in a cause in the court of great sessions in Wales, where there is no detention of title deeds, nor any other matter besides costs in dispute. Partridge, Ex parte, 2 Mer. 500; 3 Swan. 398.

The court of a revising barrister is not "a court of law" within the Solicitors Act, so as to exclude the jurisdiction of this court to order the taxation of a bill containing items for business done in that court. Andrew, In re, 17 Beav. 510; 23 L. J., Ch. 129; 17 Jur. 1145; 2 W. R. 46.

District Registry.]—When an administration decree directed accounts and inquiries to be taken in the district registry, and ordered that upon the result being reported the action should be heard in London on further consideration, the court refused to allow the costs of the action to be taxed in the district registry. Irlam v. Irlam, 24 W. R. 949.

Except under very special circumstances the costs of actions commenced and carried on in a district registry ought to be taxed in London. Day v. Whittaker, 25 W. R. 767.

A company, having its registered office in Liverpool, had employed a solicitor living at Sheffield to take certain legal proceedings in London. The company obtained from the registrar of the Liverpool district registry an order on a petition of course for delivery and taxation of the solicitor's bill of costs:—Held, that the registrar had exceeded his authority, and that the order must be discharged. Porrett, In re, 60 L. J., Ch. 396; [1891] 2 Ch. 433; 64 L. T. 752; 39 W. R. 531—C. A.

2. What Costs Taxable.

Under the Statute.]—The Solicitors Act, 1843, does not authorise the taxation of every pecuniary demand or bill of solicitor for every species of employment, in which he may happen to be engaged. Allen v. Aldridge, 5 Beav. 401; 13 L. J., Ch. 155; 8 Jur. 435.

A bill may be taxed, though no part of the business was transacted in any court of law or equity; but such business must be connected with the profession of an attorney or solicitor, business in which the attorney or solicitor was employed, because he was an attorney or solicitor, or in which he would not have been employed if he had not been an attorney or solicitor, or if the relation of attorney or solicitor and client had not subsisted between him and his employer. Ib.

If a solicitor retains money received by him in his character of solicitor, for the use of his client, his bill is taxable, though it contains no charges for business done in a court of law or equity. Semble, items in a solicitor's bill for preparing and settling a bill in equity, will render the solicitor's bill taxable, though the bill in equity was never filed. Barker, In re, 6 Sim. 476.

Steward of Manor.]—The fees of the steward of a manor, who is a solicitor, but acts in the character of steward only, are not taxable under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73. Allen v. Aldridge, supra.

Fees for holding a court-leet as steward of a manor are taxable. Luxmore v. Lethbridge, 5 B. & Ald. 898; 1 D. & R. 511.

Agency.]—The court has jurisdiction to order an agent's bill of costs to be referred for taxation, on the application of the solicitor who employed him; and in a case where the amount of the bill exceeded the amount of moneys received by the agents in that character, and retained by them, by a sum of 1*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.* only, the taxation of the bill was ordered, upon payment or tender of that sum to the solicitor of the agents. Jones v. Roberts, 8 Sim. 397; 7 L. J., Ch. 156; 2 Jur. 30.

This court has authority to refer for taxation the bill of costs of a solicitor who acts as agent for another. Toghill v. Grant, 2 Beav. 261; 9 L. J., Ch. 298.

The court possessed no jurisdiction to compel the taxation of an agency bill, either at common law, or under the 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, and 12 Geo. 2, c. 13, even where a suit was pending against the client for the recovery of the amount. Cardale v. Bull, 4 Q. B. 611; 7 Jur. 847.

But since the Solicitors Act, 1843, a bill for work done by one attorney, as agent for another, is taxable. Smith v. Dimes, 7 D. & L. 78; 4 Ex. 32; 19 L. J., Ex. 60; 13 Jur. 518; contra, Simons, In re, 2 D. & L. 500 ; 14 L. J., Q. B. 41 ; 9 Jur. 227 ; and Simons, In re, 3 D. & L. 156 ; 14 L. J., Q. B. 296; but these cases are untenable.

Notwithstanding the definition of the word "client" in s. 3 of the Attorneys and Solicitors Act, 1870, that act does not apply to accounts between country solicitors and town agents. Ward v. Eyre, 49 L. J., Ch. 657; 15 Ch. D. 130; 43 L. T. 525 ; 28 W. R. 712.

Conveyancing.]—The court has jurisdiction to order taxation of solicitor's bill and delivery up of papers, upon payment of the costs so taxed, although no part of such costs has been incurred in respect of any suit, but are for conveyancing and other general business. Rice, In re, 2 Keen, 181 ; 6 L. J., Ch. 291 ; 1 Jur. 351. S. P., Smith's Trustees, In re, Fl. & K. 627.

Business not in Court.]—The bill of costs of a mortgagee's solicitor, for business done in relation to the mortgage, and the sale of the mortgaged estate, is taxable at the instance of the mortgagor, under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, though no part of the business may have been transacted in any court of law or equity. Lees, In re, 5 Beav. 410 ; 13 L. J., Ch. 151. See Allen v. Aldridge, supra.

Delivery—Correlative Right.]—The rights of a party to have a signed bill delivered and to have it referred for taxation are correlative. Curling v. Sedger, 6 Scott, 678.

Unsigned Bill.]—An attorney's bill may be referred to taxation, though not signed by him, or inclosed in a letter signed by him, and referring to it. Young v. Walker, 16 M. & W. 446. S. P., Pender, In re, 2 Ph. 69 ; 16 L. J., Ch. 25 ; 10 Jur. 891.

Election Business.]—A court for the registration of voters is not a court within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37, and therefore the jurisdiction of the court of chancery to tax a solicitor's bill of costs for electioneering business is not ousted if the bill contains an item for business done in such a court. Andrew, In re, 17 Beav. 510 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 129 ; 17 Jur. 1145 ; 2 W. R. 46.

The charges of solicitors employed as election agents are taxable. Osborne, In re, 25 Beav. 353 ; 27 L. J., Ch. 532 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 296 ; 6 W. R. 401.

Where, for a parliamentary election, a solicitor was employed as canvassing agent, other persons being employed as legal agents :—Held, that his bills were not liable to taxation. Oliver, In re, 36 L. J., Ch. 261 ; 15 W. R. 331.

A solicitor, who was appointed returning officer for the election of a school board under the Elementary Education Act, 1870, sent in a bill of his charges in the form of a solicitor's bill of costs, including both the election charges proper and attendance at the board after the election was over :—Held, that, as he had by the form of his bill of costs constituted himself solicitor to the board, the bill was liable to taxation. Jones, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 367 ; L. R. 13 Eq. 336 ; 20 W. R. 395.

Bill in Parliament.]—In a bill of 344*l.*, only 3*l.* 3*s.* 7*d.* was for business not connected with soliciting a new bill in parliament :—Held, that, notwithstanding the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 69, and 12 & 13 Vict. c. 78, a court of equity was not deprived of its jurisdiction to order taxation. Strother, In re, 3 Kay & J. 518 ; 26 L. J., Ch. 695 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 736 ; 5 W. R. 797.

A bill by solicitors employed by a committee in soliciting and opposing bills in parliament, procuring evidence, and employing surveyors, and receiving moneys only on account of their bill of costs, praying an account and payment of the balance due to him :—Held, to amount to a bill for taxation and payment, and demurrer allowed. Allison v. Herring, 9 Sim. 593.

No jurisdiction for taxing a solicitor's bill of costs for obtaining an act of parliament. Wheeler, Ex parte, 3 Ves. & B. 21.

Taxation of a solicitor's bill in the House of Lords, only through the recognisance. Id.

Looking up Old Deeds.]—When one solicitor asks another to look up some old deeds in his possession, and offers to pay his costs, the bill for these costs is taxable. Bowen, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 327 ; 20 W. R. 395.

Solicitor Employed to Transfer Stock—Distringas.]—An attorney employed to transfer stock found that a distringas had been entered at the bank to prevent the transfer. He thereupon made several inquiries respecting the transactions on behalf of his client, and prepared a notice to the solicitor of the bank to file a bill in consequence of the writ being entered :—Held, that his charges were not taxable items between him and his client, it not appearing that the distringas originated in any suit, or that the business had reference to any proceeding in a court. If the distringas had been in a suit, the steps taken by the attorney would have formed taxable items. Nicholas v. Hayter, 2 A. & E. 348.

Preparing Securities.]—A defendant, who had borrowed money of the plaintiff, was, by an agreement, to which the plaintiff's attorney was the attesting witness, to pay the expenses of that agreement, and of the various securities, including a warrant of attorney :—Held, that the plaintiff's attorney, who had prepared those securities, was compellable to deliver his bill to the defendant to be taxed. Painter v. Linsell, 6 Bing. (N.C.) 197 ; 8 D. P. C. 250 ; 9 L. J., C. P. 151.

Lands Clauses Act—Costs already Paid—No Order as of Course.]—An order for the taxation of the costs of conveyances under s. 83 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, cannot be obtained where the costs have been paid. Somerville, Ex parte, S. E. Ry., In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 438 ; 23 Ch. D. 167 ; 48 L. T. 416 ; 31 W. R. 518.

Criminal Business.]—C., an attorney in London, employed B., also an attorney in London, to defend a person indicted at Cambridge for bribery at an election there in 1841 and 1842. B. delivered to C. two bills of costs, and in 1847 he delivered copies of the bills duly signed :—Held, that the bills were taxable. Billing v. Coppock, 1 Ex. 15 ; 5 D. & L. 126 ; 16 L. J., Ex. 265.

A charge for business done at the Central Criminal Court is taxable. Curling v. Sedger, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 743 ; 6 Scott, 678; 6 D. P. C. 759 ; 8 L. J., C. P. 71.

Quarter Sessions.]—A charge for business done at the quarter sessions is taxable. Sylvester v.

Webster, 9 Bing. 388; 2 M. & Scott, 506; 1 D. P. C. 708; 2 L. J., C. P. 24. S. P., Clarke v. Donovan, 5 Term Rep. 694; 1 Esp. 137.

Retainer of Bill.]—Bills of costs assumed to be taxable in equity where the solicitor had retained them in his possession, and declined to produce them. Loughborough, In re, 23 Beav. 439.

Other Cases.]—So, for prosecuting an extent. Rex v. Collingridge, 3 Price, 280.

There was no law to tax an attorney's bill of costs for working a country commission of bankruptcy, and, therefore, he was not bound under 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 23, to deliver his bill one month before he brought an action to recover the amount of it. Harpur v. Williams, 9 D. P. C. 618; 2 Man. & G. 815; 3 Scott (N.R.) 97; 10 L. J., C. P. 189; 5 Jur. 342.

A charge for preparing a warrant of attorney renders a bill taxable. Painter v. Linsell, 8 Scott, 453; 8 D. P. C. 250.

Procuring an appearance to be entered by a proctor in the Consistory Court before 20 & 21 Vict. c. 77, s. 96, was not a taxable item. Marris, In re, 2 A. & E. 582.

A charge for serving subpœnas is not a sufficient item to enable the court to refer a bill to taxation. Presidder v. Smith, 1 W., W. & H. 51; 2 Jur. 205.

Drawing an affidavit of debt and getting it sworn is a taxable item. Winter v. Payne, 6 Term Rep. 645.

A dedimus potestatem is a sufficient item to enable the court to refer an attorney's bill for taxation. Prickett, Ex parte, 1 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 266.

Proceeding before Lord Chancellor as exercising the visitatorial power upon a royal foundation, is not within 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 23, to taxation of bill of costs. Dann, Ex parte, 9 Ves. 547.

The costs incurred by trustees in paying money into court under the Trustees Relief Act, and also the costs of their appearing on paying it out, are subject to taxation. Hue's Estate, In re, 27 Beav. 337; 28 L. J., Ch. 893; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1235; 7 W. R. 562.

Costs in a cause must be submitted to taxation. King v. King, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 972.

Costs of a sequestration as between solicitor and client will not be taxed. Shapland, In re, Hunt, Ex parte, 23 W. R. 40.

3. By whom Order obtained.

Solicitor.]—Taxation of costs not ordered on application of solicitor himself. Sayers v. Walond, 1 Sim. & S. 97.

A solicitor has no absolute statutory right to have the amount of his charges ascertained by taxation. Ditton, Ex parte, Woods, In re, 13 Ch. D. 318; 42 L. T. 161; 28 W. R. 402—C. A.

Solicitor to Guardians—Taxation by Clerk of the Peace.]—When a solicitor is employed by the guardians of the poor, the taxation of his bill of costs by the clerk of the peace under the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1844, is not final and conclusive against him, and he is entitled to an order for taxation as between solicitor and client, under the Solicitors Act, 1843. Southampton Union v. Bell, 21 Q. B. D. 297; 59 L. T. 181; 36 W. R. 924; 52 J. P. 567.

Married Woman.]—In every case where a married woman seeks to tax a solicitor's bill, for business in respect to her separate estate, she must apply by her next friend. Waugh, In re, 15 Beav. 508; 21 L. J., Ch. 567.

The next friend will be liable for the costs of the order and taxation, but not for the amount of the bill. Ib.

A married woman, having obtained an order to tax without the intervention of a next friend, was ordered to give security, and in default the order was to be discharged. Ib.

Where a married woman employs a solicitor, and makes her separate estate liable, she is, though not personally liable, a "party chargeable," within the meaning of s. 37 of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73. Waugh v. Waddell, 16 Beav. 521; 1 W. R. 206.

A husband became liable for bills of costs due from his wife dum sola, and from her former husband, to a solicitor:—Held, that, though the relation of solicitor and client did not exist between the solicitor and the second husband, yet that the latter was entitled to a taxation of the bills of costs. Waring v. Williams, 2 Beav. 1.

Separate Retainers—Proceedings on behalf of All.]—Where a solicitor is retained separately by a number of persons to take proceedings on behalf of all, each is entitled to have the whole bill of costs taxed, although each such person has only to pay a proportion of the entire amount, without serving any person except the solicitor; but the court will endeavour to secure a taxation at which all the parties interested are present in order to avoid any subsequent application to tax. Salaman, In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 664; [1894] 2 Ch. 201; 7 R. 540; 70 L. T. 772; 42 W. R. 530—C. A.

Persons Jointly Liable.]—Where any part of solicitor's bill relates to business done in this court, the whole may be taxed, although part of the business was for other persons jointly with the person applying. Margerum v. Sandiford, 3 Bro. C. C. 233.

A bill of costs having been incurred by A. and B. jointly, and an action having been brought against them for the recovery of the amount, the court refused to direct a taxation, and to stay the proceedings at law, on the undertaking of A. alone to pay what might be found due. Chilcote, In re, 1 Beav. 421.

Bill of costs incurred by two persons, ordered to be taxed on the application, and upon the undertaking of one. Lockhart v. Hardy, 4 Beav. 224.

A solicitor was employed by two persons, A. and B.; an order of course for taxation was obtained by A. alone, on the allegation that the solicitor was employed by A. It was discharged for irregularity. Perkins, In re, 8 Beav. 241; 14 L. J., Ch. 168; 9 Jur. 220.

One of three petitioning creditors may apply for taxation without the others joining in the application. Watts, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 588; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 621; 5 L. J., Bk. 31.

Where a solicitor is retained by two persons jointly, an application for taxation by one, in the absence of the other, should not be made as of course. Lewin, In re, 16 Beav. 608; 1 W. R. 269.

Upon an application by one of several persons interested for the taxation of a bill of costs of considerable amount, the court in determining his right to taxation will not regard the amount of his interest. Dawson, In re, 28 Beav. 605.

An order of course to tax a solicitor's bill incurred by three persons, obtained on application of two of them, is irregular. Ilderton, In re, 33 Beav. 201.

Taxation ordered where a solicitor was retained by more than one defendant to a suit, and the application to tax the solicitor's bill of costs was made by one of such defendants. Ford, Ex parte, Colquhoun, In re, 5 De G. M. & G. 35; 23 L. J., Ch. 515; 2 Eq. R. 304; 2 W. R. 286.

A shareholder and member of the management committee of a provisionally registered railway company:—Held, entitled to an order, on petition, for delivery and taxation, after payment of the bills of the solicitors employed by such committee. Stephen, In re, 2 Ph. 562.

A solicitor was employed by three partners. He brought an action against them for his bill of costs, and, representing one, he obtained judgment against him by default:—Held, that this did not prevent the others from obtaining an order for taxation:—Held, also, that an application for taxation by the two was regular, the third not concurring, but that he ought to be served with the petition. The taxing-masters have jurisdiction to determine questions of retainer. Hair, In re, 10 Beav. 187; 16 L. J., Ch. 163; 11 Jur. 139.

"Assignee" of Costs.]—Whether an assignee of costs due to a solicitor is such an "assignee" of the solicitor as is, under s. 37 of the act 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, entitled to obtain a taxation of the costs, quære. Ward, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 508; 28 Ch. D. 719; 33 W. R. 783.

Client—Town Agent.]—The bill of town agent of attorney cannot be ordered to be taxed on motion of client. Wildbore v. Bryan, 8 Price, 677.

Volunteer.]—A mere volunteer under no previous liability does not, by paying a solicitor's bill, acquire a right to tax it. Becke, In re, 5 Beav. 406; 13 L. J., Ch. 157; 8 Jur. 505.

Outlaw.]—An outlaw cannot, for his own benefit, move to have an attorney's bill taxed. Maunder, In re, 6 Q. B. 867. S. P., Ford, In re, 1 B. C. Rep. 88; 10 Jur. 757.

Trustee in Bankruptcy.]—When the client of a solicitor becomes bankrupt, and the solicitor does not prove for the amount of his bill in the bankruptcy, the assignee cannot obtain an order to tax without giving an undertaking to pay the whole amount of the bill. Elmslie, In re, L. R. 9 Eq. 72.

The trustee in bankruptcy of a mortgagor is entitled to an order to tax, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, the bill of costs of the solicitor of the mortgagee incurred in selling the property under a power of sale. Marsh, In re (15 Q. B. D. 340), distinguished. Allingham, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 800; 32 Ch. D. 36; 54 L. T. 905; 34 W. R. 619—C. A.

Bankrupt.]—A fiat was sued out on the 7th June, by an attorney against his debtor for the amount of his bill of costs, and the bankrupt was shortly afterwards discharged under the Insolvent Act, having inserted the amount of the attorney's bill in his schedule. The bankrupt passes his last examination, and on the 4th December petitions for an order to tax the attorney's bill, with a view of superseding the fiat, on the ground of the insufficiency of the petitioning creditor's debt:—Held, that the bankrupt could not, after lying by so long, and after his previous admission of the debt, apply for such an order. Gingell, Ex parte and In re, 2 Deac. & C. 546; 2 L. J., Bk. 22.

A bankrupt is not during the bankruptcy a party interested in the estate in the hands of the trustee in bankruptcy so as to entitle him after his discharge, and although his creditors have been paid in full, to demand delivery and taxation of a bill of costs paid by the trustee out of estate under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73 (The Solicitors Act, 1843), ss. 39, 40. Leadbitter and Harvey, In re, 48 L. J., Ch. 242; 10 Ch. D. 388; 39 L. T. 286; 27 W. R. 267.

Order for taxation obtained by an insolvent debtor of a bill of costs incurred prior to his insolvency, discharged with costs. Halsall, In re, 11 Beav. 163.

Administrator of Administrator.]—An administrator employed a solicitor to recover debts due to his intestate, and gave him a power of attorney, under which he received moneys, and acted generally; out of the moneys so received he retained sufficient to pay his costs, which had never been furnished to the administrator nor taxed, but after his death they were furnished to his executor, who approved of them:—Held, on petition, that the administrator de bonis non of the intestate was entitled to have the bill of costs referred for taxation, and would have been equally entitled had there been actual payment to, instead of retention by, the solicitor. Semble, secus, if he had refused the offer of taxation previously, where the question properly arose. Langford v. Mahony, 2 Con. & L. 317; 4 Dr. & War. 81; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 569.

Directors of Company.]—A solicitor and agent of a company retained parliamentary agents on behalf of the company; the bill of costs being delivered to the solicitor: the directors held not to be the proper persons to obtain the order for taxation. Sudlow, In re, 11 Beav. 400; 18 L. J., Ch. 182.

Person Liable to Pay (s. 38).]—A party agreeing to pay the costs of the attorney of another, as between attorney and client, is entitled to have the attorney's bill taxed. Sadler v. Palfreyman, 3 N. & M. 599; 1 A. & E. 717; 3 L. J., K. B. 179.

A person, who is the real plaintiff in a cause, but who is obliged to sue in the name of another, may apply to have his attorney's bill in the cause taxed. Masters, In re, 4 D. P. C. 18; 1 H. & W. 348.

A solicitor was employed by the tenant for life of certain trust funds to prepare a deed appointing new trustees, and on that occasion certain deeds and documents relating to the trust property were handed over to the solicitor for the tenant for life. The deed was approved of, on behalf of the trustees, by separate solicitors. The solicitor furnished the tenant for life with bills of costs, which included costs due for other services rendered to the tenant for life, as well as for preparing the said deed. He claimed a lien on the deeds and documents till all these costs were paid. The trustees presented a petition for an order to compel the solicitor to furnish them with a bill of the costs due by them as such trustees, and to have them taxed, and for an order that, when they were paid, he should deliver up to them all the deeds and documents in his possession:—Held, that the trustees were not parties chargeable with the costs within the meaning of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 53, s. 2, and that the petition was not sustainable. Cusack, In re, 21 L. R., Ir. 493.

A suit having been instituted in the county court to establish the will of M. by C., the executor, the widow and daughter of the deceased opposed, with the result that a compromise was effected, by which certain legacies were abated, and the residue of the assets, after payment of the costs of both parties, was to be divided between the widow and daughter. E., the solicitor for the executor, furnished an account to H., the solicitor for the widow, in which he claimed three bills of costs, including one for 52*l.* for untaxed miscellaneous costs. The widow objected, and, on the suggestion of H., E. moderated his bill by deducting 5*l.*, and sent a cheque to the widow for her share, after deducting the costs. She again objected, and after some correspondence, within twelve months after the delivery of the bill, moved for an order for taxation:—Held, that the widow, as "the person liable to pay," was entitled under s. 3 of the Solicitors (Ireland) Act, 1849 (which corresponds to s. 38 of the Solicitors Act, 1843), to have the costs taxed. Early, In re, [1897] 1 Ir. R. 6—C. A.

A client having withdrawn from a litigation, his solicitor agreed to take one-third of his bill in full discharge, if the suit (which was to be carried on for the benefit of another party) failed; and the client agreed to pay the remaining two-thirds, if it succeeded. The court refused eight years afterwards, when the suit had succeeded, to open the transaction by ordering a taxation of the bill. Moss, In re, 17 Beav. 340.

Where an attorney is retained by a surveyor acting under the Highway Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, the parties who contribute to a rate out of which the attorney's bill is paid are not "persons liable to pay the bill," so as to entitle them to apply for its taxation. Barber, In re, 3 D. & L. 244; 14 M. & W. 720; 15 L. J., Ex. 9; 9 Jur. 976.

A defendant in an action agreed, through his solicitor, to pay the plaintiff's solicitor a fixed sum for his costs and for his trouble in promoting a composition between the defendant and his creditors. Within twelve months of the payment of the amount the defendant took out a summons for the delivery by the plaintiff's solicitor of a bill of his costs. Semble, that the defendant was not a party "chargeable" within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, so as to be entitled to make the application. Heritage, In re, 47 L. J., Q. B. 509; 3 Q. B. D. 726; 38 L. T. 509; 26 W. R. 633.

Where one party is chargeable with a solicitor's bill, and another party, for reasons of his own, pays the bill, the party paying the bill has, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 38, the same right to taxation which the party originally chargeable would otherwise have had; and this right of taxation is not limited to any transaction which may have occurred in the premises between himself and the solicitor; but the bill which he has paid is the bill which he has a right to have taxed. Newman, In re, 36 L. J., Ch. 843; L. R. 2 Ch. 707; 17 L. T. 128; 15 W. R. 1189.

—— Between Party and Party.]—A person liable to pay costs as between party and party is not entitled to a reference for taxation under the third-party clause (s. 38) of the Attorneys Act, 1843. Cowdell, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 246; 31 W. R. 335.

—— Compromise of Proceedings.]—A creditor's petition to wind up a company having been withdrawn on payment of the debt, the solicitors for the company undertook by letter with the petitioning creditor's solicitors "to pay all proper costs and charges incident to and recoverable under such petition, such costs, in case of difference, to be taxed." The amount of the costs not being agreed upon, the company obtained, ex parte, an order to tax under the third-party clause (s. 38) of the Attorneys and Solicitors Act, and served it on the solicitors of the petitioning creditors:—Held, on motion to discharge the order, that the undertaking was a personal undertaking to pay the costs, such costs being costs as between party and party; that the 38th section of the act had reference only to the taxation of costs as between solicitor and client; that the order, therefore, was irregular, and must be discharged with costs to be paid by the company. Hartley, In re (30 Beav. 620), considered and explained. Grundy, Kershaw & Co., In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 467; 17 Ch. D. 108; 44 L. T. 541; 29 W. R. 581.

A. and B. compromised a suit, B. agreeing to pay A.'s costs, and any question on this was to be referred to an arbitrator, who was named. A.'s solicitor delivered his bill of costs to B.:—Held, that B. was entitled to a taxation by an order of course. Hartley, In re, 30 Beav. 620.

P., being sued by N. for a debt, compromised the matter on certain terms, and consented to pay N.'s attorneys, M. & Co., their costs of the action, agreed at 200*l.* No bill of costs was delivered. On appeal against a refusal of the master to order delivery of M. & Co.'s bill of costs to P. for the purpose of taxation under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73. s. 38:—Held, that the statute did not apply to such a state of circumstances, and that the master was therefore right in refusing to make the order. Morris, In re, Pooley, Ex parte, 27 L. T. 554; 21 W. R. 192.

A railway company having taken lands occupied by D.'s tenant, and the parties not agreeing to the compensation offered, steps were taken for holding an inquisition, in which one solicitor acted for D. and the tenant, but the company afterwards acceded to the valuation made for the tenant. A verdict was taken by consent for D., and the company gave a written undertaking to pay any sum to which the solicitor was entitled as solicitor for D. and his tenants, on same being ascertained by the proper officer under their act of incorporation. They took a conveyance from D., the costs of which and of making title were taxable in chancery under their act. The costs of ascertaining the compensation for the tenants should properly, under it, have been settled with their claim by justices of the peace, and the costs of an inquisition were taxable in a law-court. The solicitor, having furnished a separate bill of costs for D. and the tenants, to which the company objected, petitioned for taxation, and to enforce payment:—Held, that the costs of D. only could be taxed or enforced in this court, and that the undertaking gave no jurisdiction as to the costs of the tenants. Drogheda (Marquis) v. Great Southern and Western Ry., 12 Ir. Eq. R. 103.

A party who, by agreement, has paid the bill of costs of another party, cannot apply for a taxation. Langford v. Nott, 1 Jac. & Walk. 291.

A party liable under a bond of indemnity for the costs of another, having, on a compromise, paid what the solicitor stated to be the amount of them, is entitled afterwards to have the bill taxed. Balme v. Paver, Jac. 305 ; 23 R. R. 73.

Semble, it cannot be made one of the terms of the compromise of a suit, that the solicitor's bill should be paid without taxation. Id., Jac. 307 ; 23 R. R. 75.

An agreement to pay costs is an agreement to pay taxed costs, and a third party paying a solicitor's bill of costs, in order to compromise a suit, stands in the same situation with respect to the right of claiming taxation as the solicitor's client. Vincent v. Venner, 1 Myl. & K. 212 ; 2 L. J., Ch. 49.

—— Order of Course.]—Under ordinary circumstances, an order for taxation may be obtained as of course by third parties "liable to pay." Bracey, In re, 8 Beav. 338.

The taxation under s. 38 of the act 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, or the "third party liable clause," is by order of course. Straford, In re, 16 Beav. 27.

After payment, an ex parte order for taxation is irregular ; and the same rule applies where the payment is made by a mortgagee, and the taxation is at the instance of the mortgagor, as the party ultimately liable to pay. Carew, In re, 8 Beav. 150 ; 14 L. J., Ch. 100.

In taking a transfer of two mortgages, there was included in the amount secured on the estate a sum for costs incurred by the mortgagor and mortgagees on account of the estate :—Held, that the transferee could not have the bill for these costs taxed on an ordinary summons. Forsyth, In re, 34 Beav. 140 ; 2 De G. J. & S. 509 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 615 ; 12 L. T. 687 ; 13 W. R. 932.

Semble, that the general jurisdiction of the court over a solicitor will not be exercised on an ordinary summons for taxation. Ib.

—— Service of Petition.]—A petition for taxation, under the "third-party clause" of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, must be served upon the "party chargeable" in a case where the bill of costs is not taxable as between the party chargeable and the solicitor. Baker, In re, 32 Beav. 526 ; 2 N. R. 151 ; 8 L. T. 566 ; 11 W. R. 792.

Upon a petition by a mortgagor to tax the bill of the mortgagee's solicitor, after payment, the mortgagee must be served. Ib.

A second mortgagee presented a petition to tax the bill of costs of the first mortgagees' solicitor, which had been paid out of the produce of the sale of the mortgaged estate :—Held, that the first mortgagees must be served with the petition. Jessop, In re, 32 Beav. 406.

—— Special Circumstances.]—On a petition for taxation under the third-party clause of the Solicitors Act, where the party immediately chargeable has paid the solicitor, and the third party liable has repaid him, it is not necessary to prove pressure. Turner, In re, Burton, Ex parte, 4 W. R. 805.

A solicitor to a railway company provisionally registered brought an action against three of the managing directors for the amount of his bill of costs, and recovered judgment. An order was afterwards obtained for winding up the company under the act, and a petition was then presented by the official manager for taxing the solicitor's bill, under the stat. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, on the ground of excessive charges :—Held, that the court could not be called upon to examine the items of a bill to ascertain their correctness, and that an allegation of excessive charges was not such a special circumstance as to bring the case within s. 38 of the act. Petition dismissed. Vardy, In re, 20 L. J., Ch. 325.

Where on transfer of a mortgage the transferee has paid the amount claimed and accepted a deed which recites that a certain sum is due to the original mortgagee for costs, and contains an assignment of that sum as well as of the principal and interest, he cannot afterwards obtain an order for taxation of the mortgagee's solicitor's bill. Gold, In re, 24 L. T. 9 ; 19 W. R. 343.

When once a mortgagor has paid the bill of costs, he cannot, as between himself and the solicitor of the mortgagee, have it taxed, except under special circumstances ; but as between himself and the mortgagee, he may have it taxed, under the third-party clause in 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 38. Abbott, In re, 4 L. T. 576.

Semble, a third party who applies, under s. 38 of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, for taxation of a bill after payment, must shew such special circumstances as would support an order for taxation on the application of the person originally chargeable. Dickson, In re, 26 L. J., Ch. 89 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 29 ; 5 W. R. 108. See Massey, In re, 8 Beav. 458.

—— Taxation as between Solicitor and his Client.]—The taxation (under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73) of a solicitor's bill, at the instance of a third party "liable to pay," is regulated by the relations existing between the solicitor and his client, and not as between the solicitor and such third party. Fyson, In re, 9 Beav. 117. S. P., Vincent v. Venner, 1 Myl. & K. 212 ; 2 L. J., Ch. 49.

Under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 38, the third party stands in the position of the client ; and if the client is not entitled to a taxation against the solicitor, neither is the third party entitled to a taxation either as against the solicitor or as against the client. But he may be entitled to have a taxation as against the client in a suit. Massey, In re, 34 Beav. 463 ; 6 N. R. 195 ; 34 L. J., Ch. 492 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 594 ; 12 L. T. 519 ; 13 W. R. 797. S. P., Smith, In re, 32 W. R. 408 ; contra, Dawson, In re, 8 W. R. 554.

A mortgagor who has paid his mortgagee's solicitor's bill may yet tax it, in the same way as the mortgagee might have done. If the latter has, as between the solicitor and himself, bound himself, then the mortgagor cannot tax the bill as against the solicitor, but only in diminution of the amount due to the mortgagee, who must in that case be before the court. But if the case is one in which the bill can be taxed by the mortgagee as against the solicitor, the mortgagee need not be before the court. Baker, In re, 32 Beav. 526 ; 2 N. R. 151 ; 8 L. T. 566 ; 11 W. R. 792. And see Jessop, In re, 32 Beav. 406.

An agreement for the purchase of land, at a price to be fixed by arbitration, contained a clause that a local board should pay all the costs of the reference to arbitration. The arbitration took place, and the purchase was completed :—Held, that, by taking the usual third-party order for taxation under s. 38 of the act, the local board had precluded themselves from taking any objection to the bill of costs, which could not have been taken by the vendors; and that, though by the agreement the board were only bound to pay reasonable costs, they could not, on taxation, object to anything authorised by the vendors as unreasonable. Holliday and Godlee, In re, 58 L. T. 301.

The rule that under the third-party clause in the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 38, taxation is to be made as between the solicitor and person who is immediately liable to pay him, is to be taken with the exception that a trustee is to be personally responsible to the solicitor for the payment of items not necessary for the execution of the trust, and such items will be disallowed on taxation by a third party. Brown, In re, 36 L. J., Ch. 842; L. R. 4 Eq. 464; 16 L. T. 729; 15 W. R. 1030.

Therefore the master having, in taxing a paid bill of costs at the instance of a cestui que trust, disallowed certain items as not chargeable against the trust estate:—Held, that though such items would have been allowed as between the solicitor and his client, the trustee, the court would not in that case interfere with the discretion of the master. Ib.

Upon paying off a mortgage, the bill of the mortgagees' solicitor, though objected to, was paid in full, the solicitor undertaking "to refund" so much of "the mortgagees' law charges" as might be "found to be in excess of what they were entitled to receive":—Held, that the court would enforce the undertaking, upon petition, by ordering a taxation, and that it was to be as between the mortgagor and mortgagees. Fisher, In re, 18 Beav. 183.

A mortgagor has not a right to have the bills of the mortgagee's solicitor taxed upon different principles from those which would be applied to the taxation of the same bill upon the petition of the mortgagee. Jones, In re, 8 Beav. 479.

Where a mortgagor seeks the taxation of the bill of the mortgagee's solicitor, it must be looked at, not as between the mortgagor and the solicitor, but as between the solicitor and his client, the mortgagee. Barrow, In re, 17 Beav. 547.

W., on the 31st of May, 1865, agreed in writing to take a lease from G. and T., and to pay their costs of the agreement and of the lease and counterpart, and incidental thereto. W. paid the bill, and afterwards applied for taxation against the solicitors. An order was made to tax the bill, "upon the terms of the agreement dated the 31st May, 1865":—Held, that this reference to the agreement was erroneous, for that the order must be to tax the bill which W. had paid, without anything to limit the bill to that which would be the proper bill as between G. and T. and W. Newman, In re, 36 L. J., Ch. 843; L. R. 2 Ch. 707; 17 L. T. 128; 15 W. R. 1189.

—— Deductions.]—Where a solicitor's bill includes charges for services in respect of which the third party taxing it is not liable, a corresponding deduction must be made as between the solicitor and such third party from the amount of the scale fee chargeable upon the whole transaction. Negus, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 79; [1895] 1 Ch. 73; 13 R. 85; 71 L. T. 716; 43 W. R. 68.

Party Interested.]—A bankrupt who has obtained his discharge and who has become entitled to the surplus of his estate, all the creditors having been paid in full, is not entitled, under s. 39 of the Solicitors Act, 1843, to obtain the taxation of a bill of costs paid by the trustee in the bankruptcy. The trustee in bankruptcy does not stand in the position of a trustee for the bankrupt. Leadbitter and Harvey, In re, 48 L. J., Ch. 242; 10 Ch. D. 388; 39 L. T. 286; 27 W. R. 267—C. A.

An action will not lie by a cestui que trust against the solicitor of his trustees for taxation of a bill of costs paid by the trustees, the proper remedy being by application, under s. 39 of the Solicitors Act, 1843. Spencer, In re, Spencer v. Hart, 51 L. J., Ch. 271; 45 L. T. 645; 30 W. R. 296—C. A. See Jackson, In re, Boughton-Leigh v. Boughton-Leigh, 58 L. J., Ch. 387; 40 Ch. D. 495; 60 L. T. 589; 37 W. R. 282.

A cestui que trust cannot obtain an order for the separate taxation of a solicitor's bill, but he has the right to attend the taxation of the trustees and can raise, as between himself and the trustees, the question of retainer. Story, In re, Marwick, Ex parte, 1 L. T. 16; 8 W. R. 15.

—— Special Order.]—A. B., who claimed some property, conveyed it to trustees, upon trust for carrying on the litigation and payment of the costs, &c. The trustees employed a solicitor, and they raised a sum of money upon A. B.'s notes, drawn for the purpose, which they placed in the solicitor's hands. A. B. alone obtained an ex parte order for taxation; it was discharged for irregularity. Mobbs, Ex parte, 8 Beav. 499.

On a taxation under s. 39 of the Solicitors Act, 1843, or third party interested clause, the application is special. Straford, In re, 16 Beav. 27.

—— Parties.]—A trustee is not a proper party to a petition presented by a cestui que trust for the delivery and taxation of bills of costs paid by a trustee. Mole, In re, 22 L. J., Ch. 455.

Whether the taxation, at the instance of a cestui que trust, of a bill of costs which has been long since settled and paid by trustees out of a trust fund, ought to take place as against the solicitor, or as against the trustees for the purpose of justifying their payment, quære. Grove v. Sansom, 1 Beav. 297.

—— After Payment.]—Where a cestui que trust seeks to tax the solicitor's bill paid by his trustee, on the ground of overcharge, he must allege and prove specific items. Bennett, In re, 8 Beav. 467; 14 L. J., Ch. 403.

It is not necessary, where a cestui que trust applies for taxation of bills paid by trustees or executors, to shew that there are fraudulent overcharges. Drake, In re, 22 Beav. 438.

Where a bill of costs against executors contained charges to a considerable extent beyond what would have been allowed them in their accounts with the testator's estate:—Held, that it was a proper case of taxation at the instance of the persons beneficially interested, after payment by the executors. Dickson, Ex parte, 8 De G. M. & G. 655; 26 L. J., Ch. 89; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 29; 5 W. R. 108.

Application by residuary legatee more than twelve months after payment, for the taxation of a solicitor's bill against the executor, refused, notwithstanding there had been some agreement between the legatee and solicitor, and that payment had afterwards been made behind the back of the legatee. Rees, In re, 12 Beav. 256.

The bill of trustees was delivered on the 27th November, and on the 10th December paid, after some deductions, by the solicitor of the cestui que trust, as he alleged, under protest. A petition for taxation, presented by the cestui que trust in January following, was dismissed with costs. The general rule is, that a paid bill is not to be referred for taxation, and special circumstances and grounds are required to take a case out of this rule. Neate, In re, 10 Beav. 181.

Where a solicitor's bill has been paid by a trustee, the cestui que trust cannot, after the expiration of twelve months from payment, obtain a taxation as against the solicitor, although he had no notice of the payment until after the twelve months had expired, semble. Downes, In re, 5 Beav. 425; 13 L. J., Ch. 159.

The lapse of twelve calendar months after payment of a bill of costs precludes taxation under the Solicitors Act. This rule applies where payment is made by trustees, &c., and the application for taxation is made, under the 38th section of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, by a party "liable to pay." Massey, In re, 8 Beav. 458.

Twelve months after payment of a bill of costs by trustees to their solicitor, it cannot be taxed upon the application of their cestui que trust. Press, In re, 35 Beav. 34.

Semble, a third party who applies under s. 39 of the Solicitors Act, 1843, for taxation after payment, must shew such special circumstances as would support an order on the application of the person originally chargeable. Dickson, In re, 26 L. J., Ch. 89; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 29; 5 W. R. 108.

Quære, whether the provision in s. 41 of the Solicitors Act, 1843, as to the necessity of shewing "special circumstances" on an application for taxation of a bill of costs after payment, applies in the case of an application by a cestui que trust under s. 39 for taxation of a bill paid by trustees. Chowne, In re, 52 L. T. 75—C. A.

—— Order when made.]—The court will make an order for taxation under the third-party clause, contained in s. 39 of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, although the petitioners may be actuated by personal feelings to present the petition, and their interest in the matter is very small. Dawson, In re, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 878; 2 L. T. 286; 8 W. R. 554.

Taxation ordered, at the instance of cestuis que trustent, of a bill incurred in respect of a trust estate by trustees, both being now dead; but any balance due from the solicitor was ordered to be paid into court, to a separate account, and not to the petitioners. Hallett, In re, 21 Beav. 250.

—— Mortgagee of Client joining in Application—Client's Bankruptcy—Submission to Pay.]—The mortgagee of moneys due to a client from his former solicitors who joins in an application against the former solicitors for the delivery of bills of costs, cash account, and taxation, will not, on the bankruptcy of the client, be entitled to the order, except upon joining with the client in the submission to pay what may be found due to the solicitors upon the taxation. Battams and Hutchinson, In re, 66 L. J., Ch. 394; [1897] 1 Ch. 699; 76 L. T. 385; 45 W. R. 458.

4. Effect of Death of Parties.

Order against Solicitor's Representatives.]—In an action on an attorney's bill by his executors, the court, before the Solicitors Act, 1843, had no power to refer the bill for taxation, though it contained taxable items. Williams v. Griffith, 10 M. & W. 125; 2 D. (N.S.) 281; 11 L. J., Ex. 341.

In a suit for an account by the assignees of a bankrupt against the executor of the solicitor to the commission, bills of costs, for which the executor takes credit, as against the sum due from his testator to the bankrupt's estate, will, on motion, be referred for taxation. Stephens v. Davis, 6 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 66.

This court has no authority to order the personal representatives of a deceased solicitor to have his costs taxed, even though they are in possession of the client's deeds. Turkington v. Kiernan, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 447.

The court has no authority, under the 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, to make an order against the personal representatives of a deceased solicitor that the solicitor's bills of costs shall be taxed. Maddeford v. Austwick, 3 Myl. & C. 423; 7 L. J., Ch. 304; 3 Jur. 668.

A solicitor, who was one of the executors of a testator, paid himself out of the assets a bill for business done for the testator. Twenty-six years after the death of the testator, and ten years after the death of the solicitor, a decree was made directing the usual accounts of the testator's personal estate. The executor of the solicitor, in bringing in his accounts under the decree, inserted the bill of costs as one of his items of discharge: — Held, that although as between solicitor and client the bill was no longer subject to taxation, yet as against the executor the persons beneficially interested were entitled to question its amount as an item of discharge, but that an order referring it for taxation was not proper, the right course being to direct the taxing-master to state whether any items objected to were fair and proper to be allowed, and to what amount. Allen v. Jarvis, L. R. 4 Ch. 616; 21 L. T. 280; 17 W. R. 943.

Revivor of Order to Tax.]—A representative of a person who had obtained an order to tax a bill can revive it only on an undertaking to pay. Murphey v. Balderston, 2 Atk. 114.

Where there was a decree with costs against three persons, and during the progress of the taxation one of them died, it was held, the master was regular in proceeding with the taxation and making his certificate, notwithstanding the two survivors objected that the suit was abated. Meredyth v. Hughes, 3 Y. & J. 188.

Pending a taxation, both the solicitor and client died, the reference was revived, and the taxation continued between the representatives. Whalley, In re, 20 Beav. 576.

Pending a taxation, the solicitor died:—Held, that his executors might revive the proceeding against their client by an ex parte order. Waugh, In re, 29 Beav. 666; 30 L. J., Ch. 796; 9 W. R. 775.

A client may apply ex parte against an executrix of a solicitor deceased to revive an order for the taxation of the solicitor's bill of costs. Nicholson, In re, 29 Beav. 665; 30 L. J., Ch. 796; 9 W. R. 774.

Costs incurred after but before Notice of Client's Death.]—The costs incurred by a solicitor after his client's death were disallowed upon taxation, notwithstanding that the solicitor could not and did not know of the death of his client when the costs were incurred. Pool v. Pool, 58 L. J., P. 67; 61 L. T. 401.

Action by Solicitor's Representatives.]—After an order for the taxation of a solicitor's bill, staying proceedings at law till the report, the solicitor having died before a report, and no measures having been taken for continuing the taxation, his administratrix, proceeding at law against the client, was held not to have committed a contempt. Houlditch v. Houlditch, 1 Swan. 58; 1 Wils. Ch. 17.

5. Whether Common or Special Order Required.

Within One Year from Delivery of Bill.]—Under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, any party entitled to an order for taxation may obtain it as of course, and without special directions, within one month after delivery; and with such special directions as the court may order to be imposed, after the expiration of one month from the delivery, but not after verdict, writ of inquiry, or payment. In those cases a special order made upon special circumstances, to be proved to the satisfaction of the court, is required. Becke, In re, 5 Beav. 406; 13 L. J., Ch. 157; 8 Jur. 505.

After the expiration of a month from the delivery of a bill of costs, and before the expiration of twelve months, an order of course may be obtained for its taxation. Holland v. Gwynne, 8 Beav. 124.

Terms of taxation, after the expiration of one month from the delivery of the bill. Bromley, In re, 7 Beav. 487; 13 L. J., Ch. 320.

An application to tax a bill within a year of its delivery should be made by common order, and not by special summons, although a payment may have been made on account. Woodard, In re, 18 W. R. 37.

Trustee—Cestui que Trust.]—A. B., who claimed some property, conveyed it to trustees, upon trust for carrying on the litigation and payment of the costs, &c. The trustees employed a solicitor, and they raised a sum of money upon A. B.'s notes, drawn for the purpose, which they placed in the solicitor's hands. A. B. alone obtained an ex parte order for taxation; it was discharged for irregularity. Mobbs, Ex parte, 8 Beav. 499.

Notice.]—An order referring a solicitor's bill for taxation may be made without notice in either of the two first classes of cases provided by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37. Gaitskell, In re, 1 Ph. 576; 14 L. J., Ch. 450; 9 Jur. 909.

The decision in Gaitskell, In re (1 Ph. 576), in which it was held that applications for the taxation of bills in the second class of cases, provided for by s. 37 of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, do not require notice confirmed. Pender, In re, 2 Ph. 69; 16 L. J., Ch. 25; 10 Jur. 891.

Joint Retainer—Application by some Clients only.]—See supra, col. 1558.

Doubtful Case—Consent.]—In a doubtful case, the client should apply to the solicitor for his consent to an order of course. Taylor, In re, 15 Beav. 145.

Suppression of Material Facts.]—The rule, in these matters, that on application for orders of course all material facts must be stated, is to be strictly adhered to. Winterbottom, In re, 15 Beav. 80. See Abel, In re, 15 W. R. 730; Inderwick, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 72; 25 Ch. D. 279; 50 L. T. 221; 32 W. R. 541—C. A.

Where a client has obtained ex parte the common order to tax a solicitor's bill of costs, but has allowed the order to die out, he cannot under s. 37 of the Solicitors Act of 1843, obtain ex parte a second common order to tax in precisely the same terms, suppressing the fact that he had obtained the former order. Webster, In re, 60 L. J. Ch. 338; [1891] 2 Ch. 102; 64 L. T. 250; 39 W. R. 535. S. P., Taylor, Sons and Tarbuck, In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 290; [1894] 1 Ch. 503; 8 R. 170; 70 L. T. 161; 42 W. R. 329.

A. agreed to take a lease and to pay the expenses. The lease was prepared by the lessor's solicitor, who delivered his bill, made out as against the lessee. The lessee obtained an order to tax the bill on an allegation that he, the lessee, had employed the solicitor, which, being contrary to the fact, the order was discharged, but without costs, the matter in difference being very small. Gabriel, In re, 10 Beav. 45.

An ex parte order for the delivery of a bill of costs discharged with costs; the allegation of the professional employment being denied by the solicitor. Eldridge, In re, 12 Beav. 387.

Order of course for taxation discharged, on the ground of the case being misstated upon the petition for the order. Carven, In re, 8 Beav. 436; 14 L. J., Ch. 372.

An order of course for costs, suppressing the fact that a bill of discovery was a cross-bill, was discharged for irregularity. Watts v. Penny, 11 Beav. 435; 18 L. J., Ch. 150; 13 Jur. 578.

A client agreed to pay his solicitor three guineas a day, in addition to the usual charges of a solicitor, for his travelling and other expenses. The court, being of opinion that, under the common order of taxation, the master would take the agreement into consideration:—Held, that its suppression, in obtaining an ex parte order, was not irregular. Eyre, In re, 10 Beav. 569; 2 Ph. 367; 17 L. J., Ch. 277.

Order of course for taxation discharged on the ground of the suppression of an alleged previous reference to arbitration, though the fact was disputed. De Feuchères v. Dawes, 11 Beav. 46.

Order for taxation, made upon affidavit of service, discharged with costs; the petition having misrepresented the case, and the real facts being found not to warrant the order. Rees, In re, 12 Beav. 256.

A. B. employed a solicitor in the matter of a mortgage, and there was a dispute between them whether he was not also liable for the costs of legal proceedings taken in the name of a third party. A. B. obtained ex parte at the rolls an order for taxation. He stated, however, the mortgage transaction alone, and suppressed the other matters. It was discharged on the ground of the suppression. Walker, In re, 14 Beav. 227.

An order of course for taxation discharged on the ground of the suppression of the fact that there had been a previous order of the queen's bench for taxation, upon terms which had not been complied with, and a subsequent application to the exchequer for taxation, which had been refused. Gedye, In re, 15 Beav. 254; 21 L. J., Ch. 430.

Upon an arbitration between A. and B., A.'s costs were directed to be paid by B., and were moderated by the arbitrator, and paid. A. afterwards obtained an order of course to tax his solicitor's bills of costs, suppressing these facts. The order was discharged. Winterbottom, In re, 15 Beav. 80.

An order of course was obtained for the taxation of two bills of costs. One had been paid, and the fact had been suppressed. The court discharged the order altogether. Hinton, In re, 15 Beav. 192.

In December an account was signed by a client, one item of which was the amount of a bill of costs previously delivered. The balance was paid over a month after. Four months afterwards the client, suppressing settlement, obtained an order of course to tax. It was discharged. Holland, In re, 19 Beav. 315 ; 2 W. R. 514.

A client applying for the common order to tax a bill of costs ought to disclose the existence of an agreement respecting its payment, although the contents may not be known. Ingle, In re, 21 Beav. 275 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 169 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1059.

A client obtained an order of course for the taxation of his solicitor's bill. A special agreement existed between them, which ought to have been mentioned on the application ; but this was in the possession of the solicitor, who refused to furnish a copy. The court declined to discharge the order, though irregular. Ib.

In an action by a client against his solicitor, the latter pleaded his bill by way of set off. The client obtained an order for the delivery of the bill, and suffered himself to be nonprossed :—Held, that it was not necessary to state these circumstances in an ex parte application in chancery for taxation. David, In re, 30 Beav. 278.

After Payment.]—Where a bill of costs has been paid, the client ought not to obtain an order of taxation as of course. Howell v. Edmunds, 6 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 29 ; 4 Russ. 67.

But where a bill had been paid pending the suit, and under some degree of pressure practised by the solicitor towards the client, the court refused to discharge an order for taxation, obtained subsequently as of course. Ib.

An order of course, obtained by a client for the taxation of his solicitor's bill of costs after payment thereof, discharged. Sayer v. Wagstaff, 12 L. J., Ch. 496.

After payment of a bill, an order for taxation is not to be obtained as of course, even by a party liable to pay the same. Becke, In re, 5 Beav. 406 ; 13 L. J., Ch. 157 ; 8 Jur. 505.

A solicitor's bill having been partly taxed and paid, an order, obtained as of course, referring the bill generally for taxation, was discharged with costs. The conduct of the solicitor cannot be adduced in support of such an order ; and the costs of affidavits upon that subject were ordered to be paid as between solicitor and client. Clutton v. Pardon, Turn. & R. 301 ; 24 R. R. 68. And see Gretton v. Leyburne, Turn. & R. 407.

After payment, an ex parte order for taxation is irregular. And the same rule applies where the payment is made by a mortgagee, and the taxation is at the instance of the mortgagor, as the party ultimately liable to pay. Carew, In re, 8 Beav. 150 ; 14 L. J., Ch. 100.

After payment an order of course for taxation is irregular. Winterbottom, In re, 15 Beav. 80. And see Cattlin, In re, 8 Beav. 121.

A summons taken out to tax a bill paid eight years ago is not the proper course ; a person wishing to tax such a bill must shew a special case and proceed by petition. Woodard, In re, 17 W. R. 1006.

An order for the taxation of the costs of conveyances under s. 83 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, cannot be obtained where the costs have been paid. Such an order for taxation cannot be sustained as an order of course under the Attorneys Act. Somerville, Ex parte, S. E. Ry., In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 438 ; 23 Ch. D. 167 ; 48 L. T. 416 ; 31 W. R. 518.

Order for taxation of a solicitor's bill under the circumstances, after a settlement, upon the common petition, without stating the objectionable items. Jones v. Powys, 10 L. J., Ex. Eq. 49.

—— Retainer of Amount.]—Application for taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs, on the ground that the solicitor has improperly retained in account a sum of money in satisfaction of his bill, must be made by summons in chambers. May, In re, 34 Beav. 132 ; 5 N. R. 297 ; 34 L. J., Ch. 236 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 149 ; 11 L. T. 658 ; 13 W. R. 777.

The solicitor to the fiat having delivered his bill of costs, and retained the amount of it before the end of 1850, was discharged in July, 1851. No application for taxation was made before October, 1852 :—Held, that it was not consistent with safety or propriety to direct taxation in a summary way, even if the court had jurisdiction to do so. But semble per Lord Cranworth, that the court had no such jurisdiction. Pemberton, Ex parte, 2 De G. M. & G. 960 ; 22 L. J., Bk. 76.

A solicitor, acting on behalf of mortgagees, sold the mortgaged premises, and on the 27th June, 1850, he retained the amount of his bill of costs out of the proceeds of the sale. On the 29th June, 1850, he sent a copy of the bill to the solicitor of the mortgagor, and on the 27th June, 1851, the mortgagor applied for an order for taxation :—Held, that the taxation might have been had upon the common order ; but that he must pay the costs beyond the costs of the common order. Steele, In re, 20 L. J., Ch. 562.

The amount of a bill of costs was included in a settled account between a solicitor and client, and retained by the solicitor out of moneys in his hands :—Held, that the court had not jurisdiction upon petition under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, to open the account and order taxation, and that it could not be done by bill. Barwell v. Brooks, 8 Beav. 121.

A mortgagee's solicitor retained the amount of his bill of costs out of the produce of the sale of the mortgaged estate, and he charged the amount in an account delivered to the mortgagor :—Held, that an order for taxation within twelve months might be obtained as of course ; and a special petition having been presented for that object, the order was made, but the petitioner was ordered to pay the costs. Bignold, In re, 9 Beav. 269.

After Order to change Solicitor.]—An order for the taxation and payment of a bill (after a previous order to change the attorney), cannot be made upon an ex parte application. Gillow v. Rider, 15 C. B. 729 ; 3 C. L. R. 263.

Third Party liable to Pay—Sect. 38.]—See supra, col. 1560.

Third Party Interested—Sect. 39.]—See supra, col. 1566.

Settlement of Action—Costs agreed.]—Where an action was settled on terms, one of which was that the defendant should pay the plaintiff's costs, which were agreed at 45*l.*, the defendant is not entitled to the common order for taxation. Hulbert and Crowe, In re, 13 R. 442; 71 L. T. 748.

After Order in Action.]—A., the next friend of infants in a suit, employed B. as solicitor therein and in other matters. An order was made, in the suit, for the taxation and payment to B. of his costs of suit. Before this had been done, A. obtained, ex parte, an order to tax B.'s bill in all the matters in which he had been employed for A.:—Held, that the order was regular. Fluker, In re, 20 Beav. 143.

After Action on Bill.]—A solicitor delivered a bill of costs with a cash account at the foot, which shewed a balance due to him larger than the amount of the bill, and then brought an action for the whole amount:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the common order to tax was improper, and that a special application must be made. Yetts, In re, 3 N. R. 598; 33 Beav. 412.

Useless Proceedings.]—Where a defendant obtains an order to tax on the usual undertaking he will not be allowed to dispute his liability on the ground that the work done was useless. Walker v. Rogers, 5 L. J., Ex. 249.

Reckless Proceedings.]—A client presented a special petition for the taxation of his solicitor's bill, complaining that he had taken reckless proceedings, and praying that the costs of them might be wholly disallowed on taxation. A special petition was held to be unnecessary, and the petitioner was ordered to pay the costs of it. Atkinson, In re, 26 Beav. 151.

Payment of Balance.]—Special applications for delivery and taxation of a bill, and for payment over to the applicant of the balance of the cash account, must be made by summons, and not by petition. Edmonds, In re, 25 L. T. 152; 19 W. R. 1048.

Special Agreement—Non-professional Work.]—Where an agreement has been made for the remuneration of a solicitor, and the solicitor alleges that the remuneration was for non-professional work, the person chargeable cannot obtain the ex parte order for the delivery and taxation of the bill of costs. The Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, s. 8, has made no difference in the practice in this respect. Inderwick, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 72; 25 Ch. D. 279; 50 L. T. 221; 32 W. R. 541—C. A.

—— Agency Charges.]—The taxation of the bill of costs of the agent of a solicitor, upon the footing of a special agreement requiring the master to depart from the ordinary rules of taxation, cannot be obtained upon petition. Smith, In re, 4 Beav. 309.

Messrs. S., solicitors, promised, by letter, to conduct the professional business in which F. might be concerned, "personally or otherwise," upon the terms of receiving agency charges. F. was a solicitor, but he had omitted to take out his certificate. At that time he was interested in a suit which he had procured to be instituted against himself, for the purpose of administering the estate of a testatrix, whose executor he was, and in whose estate he was beneficially interested. Upon the completion of this business, Messrs. S. obtained the whole of the money belonging to F. out of court; they repudiated the letter, and insisted upon their right to costs as between solicitor and client; they also refused all accounts, and never delivered any bill of costs. Upon a bill by F.:—Held, that the letter was a valid agreement; that Messrs. S. were not entitled to higher charges because F. was uncertificated; that his being uncertificated was immaterial, as such an agreement was legal if made with any client; that the transaction was such that it could not be taxed under the common order; and that it was necessary to file a bill and abandon the common order which had been obtained for taxation: and a reference was directed to the taxing-master to tax the bill of costs as between principal and agent. Foley v. Smith, 20 L. J., Ch. 621.

A bill was filed by a country solicitor against his town agents for an account of cash transactions between them.—Held, that as the account might have been obtained under the common order for taxation, the bill must be dismissed. Harvey v. Mayhew, 2 W. R. 128.

In general, a solicitor cannot obtain the taxation of his agent's costs without bringing the amount into court; but, under special circumstances, that condition will be dispensed with or the amount limited. Smith, In re, 4 Beav. 309.

An order for the taxation of an agent's bill cannot be obtained as of course by a solicitor, nor can the rule for bringing the amount of the agent's bill into court upon such application be dispensed with, except under special circumstances. Lees v. Nuttall, 2 Myl. & K. 284; 4 L. J., Ch. 124.

A solicitor cannot obtain the taxation of his agent's bill without bringing the amount into court. Ostle v. Christian, Turn. & R. 324.

Prior Bill withdrawn.] — Where solicitors delivered a first bill which was afterwards withdrawn, the clients should, instead of obtaining the common order to tax, obtain a special order on petition raising the question as to the right of the solicitors to withdraw their bill. Thompson, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 138; 30 Ch. D. 441; 53 L. T. 479; 34 W. R. 112—C. A.

Waiver of Irregularity.]—Order for taxing a bill of costs, entitled in the cause, if obtained by the party to the cause, regular under the general jurisdiction. But a person not a party in the cause, must apply ex parte under the statute 2 Geo. 2, c. 25, s. 22. Such an irregularity would be waived by proceeding under the order. Bignol v. Bignol, 11 Ves. 328.

Held, distinguishing Byrch, In re (8 Beav. 124), Law and Gould, In re (21 Beav. 481), Warell, In re (22 Beav. 634), and Yetts, In re (33 Beav. 412), that under the circumstances, there being nothing more to come to the solicitor, and the only question between the parties being whether he had been exactly paid or overpaid, there was no irregularity in obtaining the common order to tax:—Held, by the court of appeal, that, after the letter of the clients disclaiming any intention to dispute the other bills, no valid objection could be taken to the common order to tax the one bill only. Ward, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 595; [1896] 2 Ch. 31; 74 L. T. 567; 44 W. R. 484—C. A.

An irregular order for taxation may be waived, but it must be done in some clear and unequivocal manner. Mackrill, In re, 11 Beav. 42.

A client, on a special petition, obtained an order for taxation. The taxation having been completed, the client presented a petition for the consequential directions. The solicitor then objected, that the common order would have been sufficient, and he asked the costs beyond those of a common order:—Held, that the objection came too late. Hair, In re, 11 Beav. 96.

On petition to confirm the master's report, after reference to tax a bill of costs, it is too late to object that the petition to tax ought not to have been a special one. Cox, Ex parte, 17 L. J., Ch. 247.

Application to Discharge for Irregularity.]—Where the common order for the taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs has been obtained ex parte, and the solicitor applies to discharge it. on the ground that the order ought to have been obtained on special application, the court will not enter into the merits, further than to decide on the regularity of the order, and will not, even if the facts warrant it, then make a special order for taxation; such order must be the subject of another application by the client. Gregg v. Taylor, 1 Beav. 123; 8 L. J., Ch. 98.

An order of course for taxation cannot be supported on merits as a special order, upon the occasion of a motion to discharge it. Grove v. Sansom, 1 Beav. 297.

Where Retainer Disputed.]—C., with others, guaranteed payment to the extent of their respective subscriptions of the expenses of an application for an act of parliament. T., who acted as the solicitor in the matter, brought an action against C. for the amount of his bill of costs. C. paid into court the amount subscribed by him, and pleaded to the action. Subsequently C. presented a petition. and obtained an order of course for taxation. The petition did not contain a submission to pay, nor the order any direction to the taxing-master to state the amount due from C. to T. On a motion to discharge this order with costs:—Held, that an order on a petition presented under such circumstances was not of course; that where taxation was asked and the retainer disputed, a special application and order were necessary. Thargood, In re, 2 Eq. R. 1152; 19 Beav. 541; 23 L. J., Ch. 952; 18 Jur. 821; 2 W. R. 682.

In equity, the client, in prosecuting the common order for taxation, may object, on the ground of want of retainer, to any items of the bill except those as to which he has admitted the retainer by his petition. The practice is different at law. Bracey, In re, 8 Beav. 266; 14 L. J., Ch. 299; 9 Jur. 417.

The question of retainer can be raised on a common order to tax as to particular items or heads; but not as to the whole of a bill of costs. A bill of costs was divided into general costs and costs relating to a particular matter. On a common order to tax:—Held, that the whole of the latter, except two small items, having been incurred without authority, were properly taxed off. Herbert, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 719; 34 Ch. D. 504; 56 L. T. 522; 35 W. R. 606.

Where a client obtains the common ex parte order for the taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs, he cannot dispute his retainer to the extent of the whole of the bill, though he may do so in respect of particular items in the bill, the practice being to require the client on his application for the order to make an admission of the retainer; but where a solicitor obtains the common ex parte order the client is not bound by the allegation of retainer contained in the petition, and consequently may object to every item in the bill on the ground of there having been no retainer. Consequently it is no objection to the common order when obtained by a solicitor that he knew that the clients disputed his retainer as to the whole bill. Jones, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 720; 36 Ch. D. 105; 57 L. T. 26; 35 W. R. 649.

An isolated transaction is the proper subject of a separate bill of costs, and, on the taxation of such a bill together with others, the client cannot dispute the retainer unless the order for taxation has reserved the question. Frape, In re, Perrett, Ex parte, 63 L. J., Ch. 678; [1894] 2 Ch. 290; 8 R. 274; 71 L. T. 80; 42 W. R. 475.

A person who signs an authority for the use of his name as next friend to an infant, becomes primâ facie liable to pay the infant's solicitor's bill of costs, as well as those of the other side. If for any cause he disputes this liability, the solicitor may nevertheless obtain the common order for taxation against him without mentioning that fact, for the defence cannot be raised in the process of taxation, but requires independent proceedings to be taken to enforce it. Flower, In re, 19 W. R. 578.

Where a judge at chambers, in the exercise of his discretion in referring an attorney's bill for taxation, reserves to the client liberty to question the retainer and restraining the attorney from bringing an action upon the bill pending the reference, the court will not interfere without strong ground for so doing. Pyne, in re, 5 C. B. 407.

6. Practice.

Order—Form of.]—The order of course for taxation is to refer to business in which the solicitor "has been employed," not to fees, &c., which "he claims to be due." Smith, In re, 19 Beav. 329.

Upon a petition for taxation, the solicitor offered to repay the matters of overcharge therein specified. The offer was not accepted. Taxation ordered treating the specified items of overcharge (upon their repayment by the solicitor), as omitted from the bill. Cattlin, In re, 23 Beav. 412.

In ordering the taxation of a bill claimed against two, the court gave both liberty to question the retainer, and directed the master to distinguish by and to whom each sum found due was to be paid. Kitton, In re, 35 Beav. 369.

In making an order for taxation under the Solicitors Act (6 & 7 Vict. c. 73), s. 38, it is discretionary with the court whether or not to add the order for the delivery up of papers. Jarman, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Ch. 485; 4 Ch. D. 835.

—— When Varied or Discharged.]—A solicitor delivered to his client a bill of costs incurred in pending suits, in which he afterwards, with his client's knowledge, incurred further costs. While the suits were still pending, the client obtained an order of course for taxation and delivery up of papers, whereupon the client delivered a bill for the further costs. On a motion to discharge the order, on the ground that the solicitor had a lien on the papers for further costs:—Held, that the order should be amended so as to include both bills. Jarman, Ex parte, supra.

Semble, that the proper form of order in such a case would be a simple order for taxation, without ordering the papers to be delivered up. Ib.

Where it appears that an attorney has been overpaid by his client, but the usual clause, requiring the attorney to refund any sum found to have been overpaid, is omitted in the order for taxation, the court will not afterwards supply the omission. Peace v. Jones, 8 D. P. C. 14.

An order of course was obtained for the taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs, and the taxation was commenced and virtually completed:—Held, that an application to vary such order, on the ground of an alleged mistake appearing on the face of it, ought to have been made directly the mistake was discovered, and not delayed until after the virtual completion of the taxation. Tibbitts, In re, 30 W. R. 177.

In October, 1839, a client obtained an order to tax his solicitor's bill. He commenced the taxation in January, 1840, and proceeded therein to a very considerable extent. A year and a half after, and before the report, the client applied to vary the order:—Held, that after his acquiescence, he came too late to alter the order, and too early to correct any erroneous principle, acted on by the master. Tarbuck v. Tarbuck, 4 Beav. 149.

By a decree made in a suit by a client against his solicitor, it was referred to the taxing-master to tax the defendant's bills of costs, and to the master in ordinary to take an account of all dealings and transactions between the plaintiff and the defendant. The plaintiff afterwards applied, on motion, to have the whole account taken by the taxing-master:—Held, that this was such an alteration of the decree as could not, without consent, be ordered on motion. King v. Savery, 25 L. J., Ch. 564; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 431; 4 W. R. 471.

A motion on behalf of a person who had obtained an order for the taxation of his solicitor's bill of costs, to discharge that order, and to have it declared that his solicitor was incapable of acting as such under the 39 Geo. 3, c. 90, and consequently not entitled to claim his bill of costs, was held to be open to objection (if properly taken) for irregularity; the court considering that such an application ought to have been made by petition. Chambers, Ex parte, Wilton, In re, 2 Keen, 497; 9 L. J., Ch. 200; 2 Jur. 489.

In a plaint in a county court, the defendant pleaded a set-off for work done as an attorney. Before the day of hearing the plaintiff obtained a judge's order to tax the bill. The judge of the county court, on the hearing, allowed the set-off. The court refused to rescind the order for taxation. Cooper, Ex parte, 14 C. B. 663.

—— Effect of — Other Relief.]—An order obtained on petition by the client against the solicitor for a taxation of his costs as between solicitor and client, upon an undertaking to pay the balance:—Held, under the circumstances, not to be a bar to the more extended relief the client was entitled to. Gomley v. Wood, 3 Jo. & Lat. 678; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 418.

Security for Costs.]—A petitioner, in a matter under the Solicitors Act (12 & 13 Vict. c. 53), resident out of the jurisdiction, was ordered to give security for the costs in the matter, and a balance claimed to be due to the respondent. Cornwall, In re, 15 L. R., Ir. 144.

Taxation of a bill was directed on the terms of paying a sum of money into court. The fund accumulated:—Held, that the solicitor was not entitled to the stock and the benefit of the accumulations, but that the whole must be sold, and the produce applied in part discharge of the bill. Smith, In re, 9 Beav. 342.

Service of Proceedings.]—Personal service on a solicitor of proceedings under a taxation dispensed with, and service by placing under his door substituted. Templeman, In re, 20 Beav. 574.

A summons to tax a bill of costs, not being a writ of summons within the meaning of Ord. XI. r. 1, leave to serve it out of the jurisdiction will not be granted. Brandon, Ex parte, Bowron, In re, 54 L. T. 128; 34 W. R. 352.

Solicitor taking Partner.]—C. acted as solicitor for X., and before his bill was paid he took P. into partnership. X. then paid the bill by cheque to the order of C. and P. and received an acknowledgment in their joint names, but in P.'s handwriting. He then took out an order to tax the bill as against C. and P. They then wrote to him informing him that C. alone was interested in the bill, and requested him to get the order altered so as to be against C. alone, but this he declined to do:—Held, that the order must be discharged, C. consenting to an order against himself alone. Curnot, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 608.

Petition—Form of.]—London solicitors, acting for country solicitors, duly authorised, obtained an order for taxation of costs. The names of the London solicitors were indorsed on the petition for taxation as principals. The order for taxation was discharged, on the motion of the client, without costs. Scholes, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 626; 32 Ch. D. 245; 54 L. T. 466; 34 W. R. 515.

It is no objection to a petition to tax the solicitor's bill, that it contains allegations reflecting on the conduct of the solicitor; for if such allegations are improper, they may be referred for scandal. Wells, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 69.

A petition for the taxation of a bill of costs, which sufficiently sets forth special circumstances for taxation, need not mention the specific items which are objected to. Andrews, Ex parte, 13 L. J., Ch. 222; 8 Jur. 327.

In a petition to tax, it is not necessary to specify all the items objected to. Dawson, In re, 28 Beav. 605.

Petition or Summons.]—The application by mortgagors to tax the bill of the mortgagees' solicitors ought to be made by summons, and not by petition, but it can be dealt with under Ord. LXX. r. 1, on the terms that the petitioners should pay the difference between the costs of a petition and those of an adjourned summons. Kellock, In re, 56 L. T. 887; 35 W. R. 695.

Special applications for delivery and taxation of a bill, and for payment over to the applicant of the balance of the cash account, must be made by summons, and not by petition. Edmonds, In re, 25 L. T. 152; 19 W. R. 1048.

An application to tax an attorney's bill ought to be made at chambers. Bassett v. Giblett, 2 D. P. C. 650.

Bills of costs will be ordered to be taxed upon petition, and a bill is not necessary, unless it be to set aside securities obtained from the client. Hamilton v. Brewster, 2 Moll. 407.

Order to Stay pending Taxation.]—A railway company was ordered to be wound up. A claim was made before the master, but not prosecuted. One contributory agreed to pay all debts proved before the master, and thereupon an order was made to stay all proceedings under the winding-up order. In the same matter two solicitors obtained an order for the taxation and payment of their bills of costs. The taxation was commenced, and had not concluded when the order to stay proceedings was made:—Held, that the solicitors were entitled to proceed with the taxation of their bills of costs. Clifton, Ex parte, Dover, Deal, and Cinque Ports Ry., In re, 24 L. J., Ch. 83; 3 W. R. 8.

Jurisdiction of Master.]—The master has no power to inquire into the fact whether the business charged for was agreed to be done for costs out of pocket. Evans v. Taylor, 2 D. P. C. 349.

—— When Costs Unnecessary.]—A solicitor inserted an inaccurate statement in the particulars of a sale, which he attempted to cover by a condition. An intending purchaser refused to complete on discovering the inaccuracy, but counsel advised the vendor's solicitor that the condition in question bound the purchaser, and advised a summons under the Vendor and Purchaser Act, which was accordingly taken out; the chief clerk and court of first instance agreed with counsel, but the court of appeal reversed their decision, and held that the said condition could not get rid of the positive statements in the particulars, so that the purchaser could not be compelled to complete. In the taxation of the vendor's costs as between him and the solicitor, the taxing-master disallowed the solicitor his costs in connection with the abortive attempt at a sale and with the summons, and the court affirmed his disallowance. X., In re, 54 L. T. 634.

A solicitor employed in the sale of an estate knew that the title deeds were in the possession of an adverse party; he, however, proceeded to prepare and obtain the execution of the conveyance and memorial. The sale went off in consequence of the absence of the title deeds. He was disallowed the costs of the proceeding, and, the deed being a cloud on the title, he was also ordered to deliver it without being paid the costs thereof. Potts v. Dutton, 8 Beav. 493.

An order was made for the division and transfer of a fund in court, but before it could be completed the fund became altered, and the solicitor presented a petition for a similar object:—Held, that it could not be considered as unnecessary, it appearing that the solicitor using his best exertions was unable to act on the first order, by reason of a difficulty as to the legacy duty; the solicitor was therefore allowed the costs upon taxation. Bedson, In re, 9 Beav. 187; 15 L. J., Ch. 189; 10 Jur. 213.

Costs of proceedings in a cause, after the object of it had, with the knowledge of the solicitor, been otherwise obtained, not to be allowed on a taxation between solicitor and client, except under special circumstances. Langford v. Mahony, 3 Jo. & Lat. 97.

The taxing-master has, under the Solicitors Act, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, a discretion to disallow costs he may think unduly claimed. The disallowance of the whole costs of an action of replevin, where replevin was clearly the wrong remedy, is a proper exercise of that discretion. Clark, In re, 1 De G. M. & G. 43; 21 L. J., Ch. 20; 15 Jur. 1047.

Although the master has no jurisdiction to determine whether acts done by the attorney were useful, he may determine what were necessary. Heald v. Hall, 2 D. P. C. 163. S. P., Williams v. Nicholas, 1 D. (N.S.) 841.

—— To Disallow Items caused by Negligence.]—The taxing-master in taxing a bill of costs between a solicitor and his client has power to disallow the costs of proceedings in an action conducted by the solicitor which were occasioned by the negligence or ignorance of the solicitor. But if the negligence goes to the loss of the whole action, he ought not to disallow them, but to leave the client to bring an action for negligence against the solicitor. Massey and Carey, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 705; 26 Ch. D. 459; 51 L. T. 390; 32 W. R. 1008—C. A.

Where there appears to be negligence or ignorance of the law on the part of an attorney, which creates unnecessary costs, the court will order the costs to be disallowed on taxation, without prejudicing his right to bring an action for them. Cliff v. Prosser, 2 D. P. C. 21.

But the master had no jurisdiction to disallow items on the ground that, in respect of the business to which they refer, the attorney was guilty of negligence. Matchett v. Parkes, 9 M. & W. 767; 1 D. (N.S.) 924; 11 L. J., Ex. 287. S. P., The Papa de Rossie, 3 P. D. 160; 27 W. R. 367.

—— Compromise.]—On a reference for taxation the taxing-master has no jurisdiction to judge of the propriety of a compromise entered into on behalf of the client, which the client has taken no proceedings to impeach. Catlin, In re, 18 Beav. 511.

—— General Account.]—Under the common order for taxing a solicitor's bill, the master is bound to take a general account of receipts and payments by the solicitor, as agent to the client. Russel v. Buchanan, 9 Sim. 167; 7 L. J., Ch. 210; 2 Jur. 610.

The direction in the common order to tax a solicitor's bill that he should give credit for all sums of money by him received of or on account of the client must be read as included and confined to all moneys which the solicitor in his character of solicitor or agent of the client has received for or on account of, or is legally or equitably liable to pay over to such client, and against which, if sued for by the client, the solicitor could set off his costs when taxed. Le Brasseur and Oakley, In re, Terrell, Ex parte, 65 L. J., Ch. 763; [1896] 2 Ch. 487; 74 L. T. 717; 45 W. R. 87—C. A.

If the client should be a barrister, and fees be owing to him in respect of a matter upon which he has been retained by the solicitor, the solicitor would not, under the direction in question, have to give credit for any moneys which he might have received from his client in the matter upon which the barrister was retained, and not allocated by such client to the purpose of paying the barrister's fees, such fees not being recoverable in an action by the barrister either from the solicitor or the lay client. Ib.

Under the common order for taxing a solicitor's bill, the master ought to take an account of sums received by the solicitor for his client, in the character of solicitor, and which are connected with the items of the bill. But the master ought not to take under that order a general account between the parties; and consequently the decision to the contrary in Russel v. Buchanan (9 Sim. 167, 175) was erroneous. Cooper v. Ewart, 15 Sim. 564; 2 Ph. 362; 16 L. J., Ch. 417.

An account of all the dealings and pecuniary transactions of a solicitor not connected with the bills of costs, cannot be obtained upon a petition for the taxation of costs, the account directed on petition being limited to moneys paid or duly appropriated towards satisfaction of the bills. Smith, In re, 4 Beav. 309.

Where the taxing-master has received no special directions from the court in regard to payments made by a client to his solicitor, it is his duty to confine himself to simple payments plainly proved to have been made on account of the bill of costs. Smith, In re, 9 Beav. 182; 15 L. J., Ch. 238.

Under the common order for the taxation of costs, the master is not authorised to take an account of pecuniary matters between the parties which are foreign to the bill of costs; but secus, where moneys are paid by the client on account of the bill of costs, or where, by agreement between the solicitor and client, the moneys which come to the hands of the solicitor are to be applicable to the payment of the bill of costs. Jones v. James, 1 Beav. 307; 3 Jur. 310.

The court has no jurisdiction, in directing the taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs, to order any account of dealings between the parties, in which the solicitor did not act as such, even though the latter has given credit for such items in the bill of costs. Sneyd v. Conroy, 8 Ir. Eq. R. 469.

A bill of costs, nearly the whole of which had been paid, contained items unconnected with professional employment, as for a horse, &c.:—Held, that the solicitor ought, in taxation, to have credit for such items (if due), although they had not become due to him in the character of solicitor. Waring v. Williams, 2 Beav. 1.

Under an order to tax, the master may take an account of the receipts of the solicitor on account of interest received by him; but he cannot charge him with the profits made from moneys of his clients in his hands. Savery, In re, 13 Beav. 424.

—— Special Contract.]—Upon a petition for taxation, the court has no jurisdiction to determine the construction of a disputed special contract as to costs. Thompson, In re, 8 Beav. 237; 14 L. J., Ch. 137; 9 Jur. 169.

Affidavits.]—Upon a motion to tax a bill, the court will not take notice of its contents, unless verified by affidavit, or the rule has been drawn up on reading the bill. Wilton, In re, 13 L. J., Q. B. 17; 7 Jur. 1133.

In a proceeding by summons for taxation, it is not necessary to specify palpable overcharges by affidavit. Brady, In re, 15 W. R. 632.

If, in the judgment of the taxing-master, there be ground to suspect that an arrangement has been made between solicitors in the cause, by which a portion of the profits of the bill of costs is to be paid to another, it is in the discretion of the taxing-master to require affidavits from the solicitors as evidence of the facts; and, if such an arrangement should appear, the bills of costs ought to be taxed as in case of agency. Deere v. Robinson, 7 Hare, 283; 19 L. J., Ch. 405.

The usual order for taxation empowers the master to examine the solicitor as to what money he had received only; but, upon proper affidavits, the court will order him to be examined as to his disbursements. Anon., Mos. 331.

Special direction given on an order for taxation, that if the solicitor should be unable to establish any of the charges by reason of the death of his clerk, or the absence of the books and papers delivered to the client, the taxing-master should report specially thereon. Watts, In re, 7 Beav. 491.

Cross-examination.]—A solicitor may be cross-examined on an affidavit made by him in support of a bill of costs under an order for taxation, and it is the duty of the examiners to take such examination. Flux, Argles and Rawlins, In re, 44 L. J., Ch. 375.

On a taxation between solicitor and client, the master, after perusing an affidavit of the solicitor and an affidavit of the client denying the facts, refused to allow the solicitor to submit an affidavit in reply, or to cross-examine the client:—Held, that under such circumstances, the master should allow further evidence, and should take viva voce evidence under the powers given him by Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-r. 26. Brown, Ex parte, Evans, In re, 35 W. R. 546.

Irregularity—Waiver.]—An order for taxation was to be void, unless the master made his report in a fortnight, or certified that further time was necessary. The time elapsed without such certificate, and the parties afterwards attended several times before the master without objecting:—Held, that the irregularity had been waived, and an order was made for the master to proceed in the taxation. Field, In re, 16 Beav. 593.

On the 21st July the master proceeded ex parte in a taxation in the absence of the client, who had not been served with a warrant to proceed on that day. A warrant was afterwards served for the 31st July, subscribed "to complete the taxation." The client did not attend; but the master, being informed of the former irregularity, re-taxed so much of the bills as had been taxed on the 21st:—Held, that the client, not having attended the warrant of the 31st, could not set up the irregularity of the 21st. Mourilyan, In re, 11 Beav. 48.

Non-appearance—Effect of.]—Where an order is made at the instance of a solicitor for taxation of his bill, the client not appearing to oppose the summons, the latter cannot subsequently object that the items in the bill are not taxable. Johnson, In re, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1140; 4 W. R. 89.

A party does not attend a taxation by writing letters to the taxing-master. Upperton, In re, 30 W. R. 840.

Party in Contempt.]—A party to whom costs are awarded may proceed in the taxation, notwithstanding he may be in contempt. Newton v. Ricketts, 11 Beav. 67.

Omitting to Tax.]—Action on an attorney's bill. Verdict for the plaintiff, subject to taxation of the bill within the first five days of the ensuing term. The defendant having omitted to tax the bill within that time:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to sign judgment, and tax his costs.

Tucker v. Nech, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 113; 6 D. P. C. 23; 5 Scott, 393; 3 Hodges, 242.

Where an attorney has been seven years without getting his bills taxed, after an order so to do, and they are lost in the meantime in the master's office, the court will not allow it to go again to the master. Yea v. Yea, 2 Anstr. 494.

Agency Charges.]—A solicitor agreed to undertake the defence of another solicitor upon agency charges. On special petition, a taxation of his bill was ordered "having regard to the agreement." Gedye, In re, 23 Beav. 347.

A solicitor agreed to conduct the defence of another solicitor upon agency terms, in case of the defence being unsuccessful. On entering into the agreement, the latter suppressed from the former the existence of a material correspondence, which was a principal ground of a decree being made against him. But the solicitor, after the discovery, still continued the defence without objection:—Held, that he was not released from the contract. Ib.

A., a solicitor, being one of three mortgagees, arranged with another solicitor, B., to "act as his agent" in the matter of the mortgage, on agency terms. B. accordingly acted, and sent in his bill prepared as between solicitor and client, which was paid by the mortgagees. B. allowed A. 100*l.* as his share of the profits. After this, on the application of second incumbrancers, the bill was taxed:—Held, that the taxing master was right in taxing it on the principle of solicitor and agent, for the agreement between A. and B. was valid, though it inured to the benefit of the mortgagees; and that the bill was properly taxable, at the instance of the second incumbrancers, as between them and B. Taylor, In re, 18 Beav. 165; 23 L. J., Ch. 857; 18 Jur. 666; 2 W. R. 249.

The solicitor of a defendant in the cause, and who is himself a defendant in the same cause, and appears by a second solicitor, cannot be allowed more than one bill of costs, if it appears that the second solicitor has, either before or after his retainer, agreed to allow his client, the first solicitor, a portion of the profits of his costs in the cause. Deere v. Robinson, 7 Hare, 283; 19 L. J., Ch. 405.

Agency charges for work done by a London firm of solicitors as agents for a country firm—two partners out of three in each firm being the same—were disallowed on taxation:—Held, that it having been the practice of the chancery taxing-masters for forty or fifty years not to treat cases of two firms having certain partners in common as agency cases at all, the court could not overrule the practice, and the charges were properly disallowed. Borough Commercial and Building Society, In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 365; [1894] 1 Ch. 289; 7 R. 75; 70 L. T. 51; 42 W. R. 161—C. A.

A. employed B., a writer to the signet, as his law agent in Scotland; and on the recommendation of B., he employed C. as his solicitor in England. By a private agreement between B. and C., the latter arranged to allow the former half the profits of the business transacted by him for A. Upon a taxation of C.'s bill, A. presented a petition, claiming the benefit of the agreement between B. and C., but it was dismissed with costs. Gordon v. Dalzell, 15 Beav. 351; 21 L. J., Ch. 206; 16 Jur. 186.

A bill in equity alleged a particular contract as to agency, but charged that the defendant pretended that the contract was one of partnership, and that upon either construction he was liable to account, and prayed for discovery of all matters of business relating to the agency; that he might deliver his bills of costs for taxation, and for an account. Demurrer overruled. Ward v. Lawson, 42 L. J., Ch. 273; L. R. 8 Ch. 65; 21 W. R. 88.

When there is an agreement as to costs, which only goes to the extent of the charges to be paid, the master may take that into consideration, and a bill in equity is not the proper remedy; but where the agreement goes further, and there is, on the face of the bill, a dispute as to whether the agreement was one of agency or of partnership, a bill will be sustained. Ib.

Same Solicitor employed for several Parties.]—It is the settled practice in the office of the taxing-master in chancery, where in a suit two or more parties have employed the same solicitor in taxing his bill of costs, to allow against each of his clients only such client's proportion of the general costs of the suit, notwithstanding that each client may be liable at law for all the costs upon the joint retainer. Ford, Ex parte, Colquhoun, In re, 5 De G. M. & G. 35; 23 L. J., Ch. 515; 2 Eq. R. 304; 2 W. R. 286.

A solicitor was separately retained by more than one defendant to a suit, and upon the application of one of such defendants his bill of costs was ordered to be taxed; the taxing officer allowed, as against the defendant on whose application the taxation was ordered, only a proportionate part of the charges of proceedings which were common to all those defendants, although those charges were not increased by the proceedings having been taken on behalf of all such defendants:—The certificate of the taxing-master was affirmed. Ib.

Where several Bills.]—A solicitor was employed by a testator in his lifetime, and by his executors and trustees after his death; the latter having applied for a taxation of the bills subsequent to the death:—Held, that the solicitor was, on this application, entitled to have a taxation of all the bills. Dalby, In re, 8 Beav. 469.

An order for the taxation of a solicitor's bill, on the undertaking of A. to pay the same, does not extend to a bill of costs, for which A. is liable jointly with B. Collins v. Price, 4 L. J., Ch. 94.

A. was individually indebted to a solicitor for costs in a cause, and A. and B. were jointly indebted to the same solicitor for costs relating to other business. A. obtained an order for the taxation of the solicitor's bill of costs in the cause, and all other suits, causes, and matters wherein he had been employed by A.; and it was ordered that all proceedings against A. should be stayed. The solicitor afterwards arrested A. and B. for their joint account:—Held, that such proceeding was not a breach of the order. Ib.

A., B. and C. were defendants in the cause, against whom the bill was dismissed with costs. B. and C. acted as the solicitors of A., and appointed D. to act as their own solicitor in the same cause. After the retainer, an agreement was entered into between B. and D., whereby D. agreed to allow B. and C. a portion of the profits of his bill of costs:—Held, that the agreement constituted D., in substance, an agent for B. and C., and that the separate bills of costs of B. and of C. and D. were properly taxed as a joint bill, and that all such costs as would not have been allowed in a case of agency were properly disallowed. Deere v. Robinson, 7 Hare, 283; 19 L. J., Ch. 405.

Where a solicitor has been retained for and undertaken a particular business, his bill of costs for carrying that business through to its conclusion is but one bill. Stokes v. Trumper, 2 Kay & J. 232; 3 W. R. 503, 615.

An assignee of costs cannot obtain an order of course to tax one bill of costs out of several, even if that bill only has been assigned to him. An order to tax one bill out of several alone can only be obtained by means of a special application. Ward, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 508; 28 Ch. D. 719; 33 W. R. 783.

A solicitor delivered on the same day a cash account accompanied by seven bills of costs, amounting in all to 260*l.*, in respect of which he received 210*l.* on account, leaving a balance of 50*l.* due to him. The solicitor afterwards wrote stating that he did not intend to claim payment of this balance. The clients then obtained an order of course to tax one of the bills delivered. Their solicitor subsequently wrote to the solicitor saying that the other bills were agreed to, and there was not any dispute with regard to them:—Held, that the seven bills were separate bills, and not one bill for the purposes of taxation, and the client had a right to tax any one of them. Ward, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 595; [1896] 2 Ch. 31; 74 L. T. 567; 44 W. R. 484—C. A.

A client, who had employed a solicitor in several matters, obtained an order of course for the taxation of the costs of one matter only, with the direction that, on payment, the solicitor should deliver all the papers belonging to the client. It was discharged with costs for irregularity. Holland v. Gwynne, 8 Beav. 124.

Solicitor employed in a suit, and a prosecution arising thereout, delivered two bills. The surviving plaintiffs obtained an order for the taxation of the bills, submitting to pay what was due. On the taxation of their said bills before the taxing-master, they disputed their retainer in the prosecution. The master having completed the taxation, they presented a petition praying that they might be ordered to pay the first bill only, and that, if necessary, the master's certificate, and the order for taxation, might be varied. The petition was dismissed with costs. Springall, In re, 8 Beav. 63; 14 L. J., Ch. 12.

A solicitor delivered four bills, the last of which and the cash account shewed upon the whole a large balance due to him. He brought an action to recover the balance, whereupon the client obtained an order of course to tax the last bill and to stay the action in the meantime. The order was held irregular, and was discharged with costs. Yetts, In re, 33 Beav. 412; 3 N. R. 598.

A solicitor claimed five bills of costs against his client. The client obtained an order of course to tax two only. It was discharged with costs. Law, In re, 21 Beav. 481.

An order for taxation of two out of four bills of costs, and the delivery up of the papers, discharged, but without costs, the solicitor having attended the master without having objected, and not having applied to discharge the order until six weeks after notice of it. Wavell, In re, 22 Beav. 634.

Part of Bill.]—Under the Solicitors Act, 1843, the court has no power to direct that one item or one branch of a bill of costs delivered shall be taken and remitted to the taxing-master for examination. But, apart from the terms of the statute, the court has jurisdiction to direct that part of a bill should be taxed, where the circumstances make it right that such jurisdiction should be exercised, upon such terms as would prevent any injustice being done. Storer v. Johnson and Weatherall, 60 L. J., Ch. 31; 15 App. Cas. 203; 62 L. T. 710; 38 W. R. 756—H. L. (E.)

Where an action was brought to recover an attorney's bill for several distinct businesses, as to some part of which the client disputed his liability on account of the negligence of the attorney, but the other part was not disputed; the court refused to order the master to tax the disputed part of the bill separately from the rest, a judge's order to tax having been before obtained on the usual terms. Jones v. Roberts, 2 D. P. C. 656; 4 Tyr. 310.

Items barred by Statute of Limitations.]—The plaintiff being dissatisfied with his solicitor (the defendant), instructed other solicitors, and signed in 1888 a document by which he authorised and requested the new solicitors to obtain and receive from the defendant all deeds and other documents belonging to the plaintiff in the possession, custody, or power of the defendant as the plaintiff's solicitor, and also to obtain and receive from the defendant an account of his dealings and transactions with the plaintiff's land, &c., "since he was appointed my solicitor many years ago, or for such other period as you may think fit." And the plaintiff thereby authorised and requested the defendant to deliver up to the new solicitors all such deeds, &c., and such account as aforesaid. The new solicitors wrote to the defendant, sending him a duplicate of this document, and requesting him to comply with it. On the 4th of July the plaintiff issued an originating summons against the defendant, asking for the delivery and taxation of the defendant's bill of costs and the delivery up of deeds, &c., and not containing any submission by the plaintiff to pay what should be found due on the taxation. On the 31st of July an order was made for the delivery to the plaintiff by the defendant of "a bill of his fees and disbursements in all suits, causes, or other matters of business in which he has been employed as the attorney or solicitor for the applicant," for a reference to the taxing-master to tax "the said bill," and for payment of the sum certified to be due from the plaintiff to the defendant, or the defendant to the plaintiff. Liberty was given to the plaintiff to pay into court 350*l.*, and upon doing so his documents were to be given up to him by the defendant, and the defendant's lien was to attach to the sum paid in. On the taxation of the bill delivered under this order the taxing-master struck out certain items (without considering their propriety) on the ground that, having regard to their dates, they were barred by the Statute of Limitations. On a summons to review the taxation:—Held, that the object of the order of the 31st of July was to ascertain the amount of the costs for which the defendant had a lien, and that it was the duty of the taxing-master to tax all the items of the bill, without regard to the Statute of Limitations. Curwen v. Milburn, 42 Ch. D. 424; 62 L. T. 278; 38 W. R. 49—C. A.

Where a client has obtained the common order for taxation of the bill of costs of a solicitor which contains a submission to pay what should appear to be due on the taxation, the taxing-master is right in taxing statute-barred items, and the client is bound under his submission to pay such items when taxed. A client desiring to raise the question of the Statute of Limitations in respect of any items in a bill of costs should obtain a special order. Margetts, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 479; [1896] 2 Ch. 263; 74 L. T. 309; 44 W. R. 462.

Costs.]—The court, though it refuses the petition for taxation does not always give the costs. Thompson, In re, 8 Beav. 237; 14 L. J., Ch. 137; 9 Jur. 169.

A special petition was presented for the taxation of two bills; it succeeded only as to one, as to which the order might have been obtained as of course. The petitioner was ordered to pay all the costs. Barwell v. Brooks, 8 Beav. 121.

Where an order for taxation had been obtained as of course, for which a special application ought to have been made, the Lord Chancellor discharged the order with costs. Harris v. Start, 4 Myl. & C. 261.

A client presented a special petition for the taxation of his solicitor's bill, complaining that he had taken reckless proceedings, and praying that the costs of them might be wholly disallowed on taxation. A special petition was held to be unnecessary, and the petitioner was ordered to pay the costs of it. Atkinson, In re, 26 Beav. 151.

A solicitor ordered to pay the costs of a special petition rendered necessary by his refusal to consent to the common order for delivery of his bill and for its taxation. Adamson, In re, 18 Beav. 460. And see Cattlin, In re, 8 Beav. 121.

Where a special petition for the taxation of a bill of costs was occasioned by breach of arrangement on the solicitor's part, he was ordered to pay the costs of the petition. Bailey, Ex parte, Cattlin, In re, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 33.

A mortgagee's solicitor retained the amount of his bill of costs out of the produce of the sale of the mortgaged estate, and he charged the amount in an account delivered to the mortgagor:—Held, that an order for taxation within twelve months might be obtained as of course; and a special petition having been presented for that object, the order was made, but the petitioner was ordered to pay the costs. Bignold, In re, 9 Beav. 269.

A party applying for a special order for taxation in a case in which he might have obtained the common order, must pay the costs. Bracey, In re, 8 Beav. 266; 14 L. J., Ch. 299; 9 Jur. 417.

Summons for Payment.]—Where an order for taxation of a bill of costs has been made on the solicitor's own petition, he cannot obtain payment of the amount certified to be due to him by summary proceedings, but must bring an action. Debenham and Walker, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 859; [1895] 2 Ch. 430; 13 R. 631; 73 L. T. 115; 43 W. R. 699.

Course of proceeding to compel payment of a balance found due, on taxation, from a client to his solicitor. Stocken v. Dawson, 7 Sim. 547.

Where a balance is found on taxation due from the client, payment must be first demanded before applying for the four-day order, which when served and payment refused, the order for commitment is granted without notice, but on affidavit of the service of the order, and demand and refusal. Ib.

The order on a solicitor for payment to his client of a sum found due on taxation, requires personal service; but it appearing that the solicitor absented himself to avoid service, an order for substituted service was made. Lloyd, In re, 10 Beav. 451.

On ordering taxation of a bill of costs in respect of a trust estate, the court will not direct any money found due from the solicitor to be paid to the cestuis que trustent, for the solicitor would have no indemnity against a breach of trust. Hallett, In re, 21 Beav. 250.

An order was made for taxation, nominally, on the petition and undertaking of A. and others. The certificate was made ten years after, and an order was then made on A. to pay. A. applied to discharge the order for payment, shewing that the order had been obtained without his authority, and during his absence from England:—Held, that while the order for taxation stood, the order for payment was regular. Thompson, In re, 25 Beav. 246.

—— Execution — Service of Order and Certificate.]— A. obtained a common order for taxation of the costs of his former solicitor, B., the order directing payment by A. to B. of the amount of the taxed costs within twenty-one days after the service of the order and of the certificate of taxation. The order and certificate were served, not on A. personally, but on the solicitor then acting for him in the taxation. A. failed to pay the amount within twenty-one days after service of the order and certificate on the solicitor, and B. applied for the issue of a writ of fi. fa. against A. for the amount, but the officer of the court refused to issue the writ, on the ground that A. had not been personally served with the order and certificate:—Held, that B. might have the writ at his own risk, without service of the order and certificate on A. personally. Solicitor, In re, 33 W. R. 131.

—— Sequestration.] — The effect of Ord. XLIII. r. 7, is to alter the old chancery common practice under which payment of costs, where no time was fixed, was enforced by subpœna, upon proof of service of which and of non-payment a writ of sequestration might issue as of course, and to substitute for the subpœna the leave of the court or a judge to issue a writ of sequestration, no four-day order being necessary. Lumley, In re, Cuthcart, Ex parte, 63 L. J., Ch. 435; [1894] 2 Ch. 271; 7 R. 179; 70 L. T. 780; 42 W. R. 401—C. A.

—— Attachment of Solicitor.]—A solicitor may be imprisoned for default in payment of a balance ordered to be paid on a common order to tax his bill of costs. Rush, In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 159; L. R. 9 Eq. 147; 18 W. R. 331.

Default by a solicitor in payment of the balance found due from him to his client upon taxation, under the common order in chancery, is default in payment of a sum of money, when ordered to be paid by a solicitor in his character of an officer of the court, and an attachment may be issued against him. White, In re, 23 L. T. 387; 19 W. R. 39.

Under an order to tax made in 1873, a balance was found due from a solicitor in respect of moneys received by him, and ought to have been paid within twenty-one days from the 21st August, 1875 :—Held, that the case was governed by Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. XLIV. r. 2, and that an attachment for nonpayment could not be issued without notice to the solicitor. Anon., 1 Ch. D. 445.

Default by a solicitor in payment of a bill of costs found on taxation to be due by him to another solicitor whom he had employed to act for him, is "default by a solicitor in payment of a sum of money, when ordered to pay the same in his character of an officer of the court making the order," within the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 4, sub-s. 4, and an attachment may be issued against him. Barfield, In re, 24 L. T. 248 ; 19 W. R. 466.

—— Costs.]—A solicitor, from whom a sum was found due, ordered to pay all the costs of proceedings to compel payment. Whether it is necessary, in demanding payment by attorney, to leave a copy of the power of attorney, semble not. Dufaur and Blakeney, In re, 16 Beav. 113.

7. More than Twelve Months after Delivery.

a. How Reckoned.

For the purposes of an application for taxation, a bill of costs, of which a substantial item is a lump sum for London agent's charges, is not a complete bill, and the twelve months allowed do not begin to run till details of the charges are given. Pomeroy and Tanner, In re, 66 L. J., Ch. 158 ; [1897] 1 Ch. 284 ; 75 L. T. 625 ; 45 W. R. 245.

b. What are Special Circumstances.

Charges Apparently Excessive.]—The "special circumstances" which, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37, allow a solicitor's bill of costs to be referred for taxation, although twelve months have elapsed since it was delivered to the client, are not merely pressure and overcharge, or overcharge amounting to fraud. A judge has a discretion in ordering the bill of costs to be taxed, if it contains items unreasonably large, or charges requiring explanation, or gross blunders. Boycott, In re (29 Ch. D. 571), commented on. Norman, In re, Bradwell, Ex parte, 55 L. J., Q. B. 202 ; 16 Q. B. D. 673 ; 54 L. T. 143 ; 34 W. R. 313—C. A.

Charges in a bill apparently excessive, and alleged to be overcharges :—Held, special circumstances sufficient to authorise the court, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37, to direct the bills to be taxed more than twelve months after delivery, although one item complained of was sworn to be a mistake. Hook, In re, 3 Giff. 372 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 875; 5 L. T. 502 ; 10 W. R. 116.

Charges in the bill, which primâ facie appear excessive, are a sufficient special circumstance. Robinson, In re, 37 L. J., Ex. 11 ; L. R. 3 Ex. 4 ; 17 L. T. 179 ; 16 W. R. 110.

Where neither a case of pressure is proved against a solicitor, nor improper items of charge shewn by a third party applying for an order to tax the bill, the application will be refused. Evans, In re, 15 L. J., Ch. 115.

Overcharge amounting to Fraud.]—The charge by a mortgagor's solicitor to his client of a scale fee for "negotiating loan" in addition to the procuration fee according to the scale paid to mortgagee's solicitor, is an overcharge amounting to fraud so as to entitle the client to an order to tax on application more than a year after delivery of the bill ; especially when coupled with the fact that the solicitor by whom the overcharge was made had not complied with his client's instructions to get the bill taxed. Pybus, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 921 ; 35 Ch. D. 568 ; 57 L. T. 362 ; 35 W. R. 770.

The court will not after a lapse of twelve months go into questions of excessive charge, unless it can be proved that there are items of gross overcharge amounting to fraud. Elmslie, In re, Tower Subway Co., Ex parte, 42 L. J., Ch. 570 ; L. R. 16 Eq. 326 ; 28 L. T. 731 ; 22 W. R. 54.

To entitle a client to an order for taxation of his solicitor's bill of costs after the expiration of twelve months from its delivery, he must shew either pressure or gross overcharge, amounting to what a court of equity designates as fraud. But it is not necessary to shew both. Strother, In re, 3 K. & J. 518 ; 26 L. J., Ch. 695 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 736 ; 5 W. R. 797.

An application for taxation of a bill made fourteen months after its delivery and before payment refused, there being no sufficient "special circumstances." Harper, In re, 10 Beav. 284.

A country solicitor, with an office in town, conducting personally the business which would originally be transacted by a London agent, is not entitled to charge for letters passing between the two offices, but such charges are not "overcharges amounting to fraud," so as to induce the court to refer the bill more than twelve months after delivery. Harle, In re, 19 L. T. 305 ; 17 W. R. 21.

The London agents had charged the country solicitor with fees to counsel which had not yet been paid, but the country solicitor had not supplied them with sufficient funds to pay the fees :—Held, that the charge was not a circumstance sufficient to justify a taxation. Nelson, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 998 ; 30 Ch. D. 1 ; 53 L. T. 415 ; 33 W. R. 645.

Possession of Papers.]—The possession of the papers in a cause is not a sufficient special circumstance to warrant the taxation of a bill delivered more than twelve months. Gedye, In re, 14 Beav. 56 ; 20 L. J., Ch. 410 ; 15 Jur. 851.

Completeness of Bill disputed.]—J. S. was the sole solicitor employed by a railway company to obtain an act of parliament, and he was to employ, on his own responsibility, a local agent. J. S. employed A. B., another solicitor, as his agent for collecting evidence. In November, 1846, J. S. delivered his bill of costs to the company, but it did not include A. B.'s costs, and the company declined to consider the bill until those costs were included. In December, 1847, J. S. brought an action for his costs, and the company, in January, 1848, presented a petition for the taxation of his bill :—The court held, that, under the circumstances, the petitioners, notwithstanding that twelve months had elapsed since the delivery of the bill, were entitled to have the bill taxed. Bagshawe, In re, 2 De G. & Sm. 205 ; 12 Jur. 510.

Continuance of Relation.]—Taxation ordered upon an application made after the expiration of twelve months after delivery of a bill of costs, on the ground of the continuance of the relation of solicitor and client subsequently to the delivery of the bill. Anon., 16 W. R. 749.

A petition was presented for taxation of forty-six bills of costs delivered by a solicitor to his client at intervals between 1833 and 1857, and comprising items of unsettled accounts between them. The petition contained allegations of improper charges, and was presented more than twelve months after the delivery of the last bill: —Held, that the improper charges being proved, the delay in presenting the petition was no bar to an order for taxation, especially when the relationship of solicitor and client existed up to a period within twelve months preceding the presentation of the petition. Nicholson, In re, Johnson, Ex parte, 3 De G. F. & J. 93; 30 L. J., Ch. 585; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 434; 4 L. T. 167; 9 W. R. 441.

The continuation of the relationship of solicitor and client is not of itself such a special circumstance that the court will on account of it order the taxation of a bill of costs twelve months after it has been delivered. Elmslie, In re, Tower Subway Co., Ex parte, 42 L. J., Ch. 570; L. R. 16 Eq. 326; 28 L. T. 731; 22 W. R. 54.

Disbursements—Complete Bill — Particulars of Agency Charges.]—Upon an application to tax a bill of costs after the expiration of twelve months from the date of the delivery of the bill, on the ground that certain items for agency charges are treated as disbursements, and no particulars of them are given, it must appear on the face of the bill that the applicant has not been furnished with such detailed information as will enable him to form a fair opinion as to whether he ought to proceed upon a taxation or not. When such items taken together do not represent a substantial part of the whole bill, the court will hesitate to order a taxation on the ground that the bill is incomplete; but when such items bear a substantial proportion to the amount due under a separate heading in a particular matter which forms a part of the whole bill, the court will not limit an order for taxation to the particular matter, but will regard the whole bill as incomplete and taxable. Pomeroy and Tanner, In re, 76 L. T. 149.

Facts known to Client—Time.]—The special circumstances under which a judge may, by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37, refer an attorney's bill for taxation after verdict, must, in general, be circumstances newly come to the knowledge of the party, and, upon learning which, he must apply promptly to the court. Whicher, In re, 13 M. & W. 549; 3 D. & L. 407; 14 L. J., Ex. 78.

The special circumstances requisite to warrant referring an attorney's bill to taxation after twelve months, need not be circumstances brought to the knowledge of the client after the expiration of the twelve months, so as to account for the delay. Robinson, In re, 37 L. J., Ex. 11; L. R. 3 Ex. 4; 17 L. T. 179; 16 W. R. 110.

Taxation of a solicitor's bill for parliamentary business ordered under the 37th section of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, upon a petition presented more than twelve months from the delivery of the bill, on the ground of gross overcharges, amounting to what the court designates as fraud, coupled with misrepresentation by him in accounting for one of the items overcharged, notwithstanding the client knew of the circumstances, and had another legal adviser within a month of the delivery of the bill, and might reasonably have availed himself of these circumstances to present his petition within the twelve months. Strother, In re, 3 Kay & J. 518; 26 L. J., Ch. 695; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 736; 5 W. R. 797.

Where special circumstances are relied upon as a ground for taxation after the prescribed time they must be such as the client could not have reasonably availed himself of sooner. Semble, that mere overcharge is not a special circumstance within the meaning of the Solicitors Act. Barnard, In re, 2 De G. M. & G. 359; 17 Jur. 53.

Action Pending.]—The mere fact that an action is pending upon an attorney's bill does not give a judge or the court jurisdiction to refer the bill for taxation after the lapse of a year, without special circumstances. Cowdell v. Neale, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 332; 26 L. J., C. P. 37; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1248.

Where a party does not apply for the taxation of a bill of costs within a month after the bill is delivered, but waits till an action is brought against him, and then makes terms and obtains time from the attorney, these are such special circumstances as will induce the court not to refer a bill for taxation. Wilton, In re, 13 L. J., Q. B. 17; 7 Jur. 1133.

Late Delivery of Bill.]—Taxation ordered of an unpaid bill of costs, eighteen months after its delivery, the "special circumstances" being that it was delivered long after application for it, on the eve of the client going abroad, and contained substantial overcharges not acquiesced in. Williams, In re, 15 Beav. 417.

Offer to take Smaller Amount.]—Where an action has been brought by an attorney for 68*l.*, balance of untaxed costs, more than twelve months after the delivery of the bill thereof, and it appeared that before action the attorney had offered to take 40*l.* in full:—Held, that it was a proper case for a reference for taxation, and the special circumstances were sufficient. Hughes v. Murray, 9 L. T. 93.

Application by Trustee or Executor.]—A petition for taxation (presented more than twelve months after the bill of costs was furnished) by one of two trustees behind the back of his co-trustee was refused, although the solicitor had commenced an action against the petitioner alone. M'Cay, In re, 15 L. T. 101.

In an action by an executor to administer the estate of his testator, a firm of solicitors carried in a claim for the sum of 22*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.* as the balance due to them upon certain bills of costs delivered by them to the testator more than twelve months before his death, to which bills the testator had made no objection in his lifetime, and in respect of which he had paid 200*l.* on account. The executor alleged that some of the charges were unreasonable. The chief clerk after looking at the bills determined to refer them to the taxing-master, and the claimants objecting to this, the case was adjourned into court:—Held, that although, as no special circumstances were alleged, a taxation under the Solicitors Act could not be ordered, and the retaining the bill for twelve months without objection was primâ facie evidence of its being reasonable, the executor was not estopped from disputing any of the items, and that it ought to be referred to the taxing-master to inquire and state whether any and which of the particular items to which the executor objected were fair and proper to be allowed, and to what amount respectively. Anderson v. May (2 Bos. & P. 237) observed upon. Form of order in Allen v. Jarvis, (L. R. 4 Ch. 616) adopted. Park, In re, Cole v. Park, 58 L. J., Ch. 547; 41 Ch. D. 326; 61 L. T. 173; 37 W. R. 542—C. A.

After Winding-up Order.] — Three months after the solicitor to a company had delivered his bill the company was ordered to be wound up. Subsequently he delivered a further bill to the official liquidator. More than twelve months elapsed, and the solicitor carried in a claim for payment of both bills:—Held, that both bills must be referred for taxation before they could get paid. Marseilles Extension Ry. and Land Co., In re, Evans, Ex parte, 40 L. J., Ch. 197; L. R. 11 Eq. 151; 23 L. T. 647; 19 W. R. 379.

Fund paid into Court—Lien on.]—If a fund on which a solicitor has a lien for costs is paid into court within a year after his bill has been delivered, on payment of the fund out of court the owner of the fund has a right to have the bill taxed, although more than a year may have elapsed since it was delivered. De Bay v. Griffin, L. R. 10 Ch. 291; 23 W. R. 737.

B. acted as attorney for G. in an action which resulted in G.'s recovering a large sum. A bill was filed by persons claiming through G. to establish their equitable title to that sum, and in February, 1871, the defendant in the action paid the sum recovered into court to the credit of the cause in which B. was a defendant in respect of his lien. In March, 1871, B. delivered his bill of costs in the action to G. In December, 1873, the suit was compromised and the fund distributed, except a sum kept in court to answer B.'s claims:—Held, that B. was not entitled to have his bill of costs paid out of the fund without taxation, however the case might have stood, if his bill had been delivered at such a time that G.'s right to tax it would have been lost before the fund was paid into court. Ib.

c. Series of Bills.

Successive Bills in same Matter—Natural Break in the Proceedings.]—Where a solicitor is retained by one of the parties to a litigation of a complicated nature, which may last a considerable time, the retainer does not necessarily constitute one entire contract, so as to prevent the solicitor from sending in a bill of costs and demanding payment thereof until the litigation is concluded; but in such a case there may be such breaks in the proceedings as will entitle the solicitor to send in his bills of costs up to that date and to demand payment, and the right of the client to apply for an order to tax that bill will run from the date when the bill is sent in, and not from the date when the final bill is delivered. Snell, Ex parte, Romer and Haslam, In re, 62 L. J., Q. B. 610; [1893] 2 Q. B. 286; 4 R. 486; 69 L. T. 547; 42 W. R. 51—C. A.

But where a solicitor who was retained in an arbitration sent in to his client successive bills of costs, without reference to any break in the proceedings, each bill being accompanied by a cash account carrying down a balance from the previous account, it was held that each bill was not a separate bill of costs, but only parts of one entire bill, and that the right to tax the whole ran from the date when the final part was delivered. Ib.

A solicitor having delivered successive bills of costs relating to the same suit and on the same retainer, and having received from his client payments on account, though not in discharge of any one bill, sent a signed letter to the client, stating that he should increase some of his former charges, and containing a list of additions to certain items in his previous bills:—Held, that, under the circumstances of the case, the letter, being a correction of the earlier bills, must be treated as bringing them down as one entire bill to that date, and that taxation of the whole must be directed, though most of them had been delivered more than twelve months before the application. Cartwright, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 735; L. R. 16 Eq. 469; 28 L. T. 891; 21 W. R. 891.

The retainer and employment of a solicitor in such a matter as a bankruptcy, an administration, or a winding-up, do not constitute an entire contract so as to deprive the solicitor of his right to payment, except for costs out of pocket, till the whole matter is completed, and successive bills of costs in such a matter are not necessarily to be treated as one bill brought down to the date of the latest delivery. Hall and Barker, In re, 47 L. J., Ch. 621; 9 Ch. D. 538; 26 W. R. 501.

Therefore, where solicitors had been retained to act for a trustee in bankruptcy, and also to protect the interests of a creditor, who subsequently by arrangement with the other creditors took over the bankrupt's estate, and they delivered a bill of costs up to a certain date, with an intimation that there were then and would still be some further items, and delivered a second bill of costs incurred after the date to which the first bill came down; on an application by the creditors to tax both bills, more than twelve months after the delivery of the first:—Held, that they must be treated as separate bills, and that the second bill only could be taxed. Ib.

A solicitor delivered to the directors of an abortive railway company his bill of costs, No. 1. It was perused by an experienced solicitor, named by the solicitor retained, at the request of the directors, and items were taxed off, leaving 275*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.* as the amount due. The directors paid 200*l.* on account, leaving a balance of 75*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.* due. An order to wind up the company under the Winding-up Acts was obtained, and the solicitor claimed a lien on the papers for his costs. He delivered a bill of costs, No. 2, commencing with the balance of 75*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.*, amounting to 233*l.* 9*s.* 10*d.* On the petition of the official manager, seeking the taxation of the solicitor's bills of costs, No. 1 and No. 2, it appeared that the bill of costs No. 1 had been duly delivered more than twelve months before the date of the petition to tax:—Held, that bill No. 1 could not be taxed, except under special circumstances, which did not exist in this case; and the court ordered bill No. 2 to be taxed, directing the master not to investigate the accuracy of the balance of bill No. 1, with which bill No. 2 commenced, further than to ascertain that that balance had not in fact been paid. Quilter, Ex parte, 4 De G. & Sm. 183.

Country Solicitor and London Agent.] — London solicitors acted as agents in London for a country solicitor during the years 1877 to 1884 inclusive. The agency was terminated in 1884. During the period of the agency the London agents delivered to the country solicitor, generally once a year but sometimes oftener, detailed bills of the charges which they claimed against him in each of the actions or other matters in which they had acted for him. They also delivered to him a cash account for each year, in which he was credited with all payments made by him to them, and all moneys received by them on his behalf, and was debited with all payments made by them to him or on his behalf, and with the gross amounts of the several bills of charges which had been delivered. The balance appearing to be due from him on each account but the last was carried on to the next account. Some of the actions continued during several years, and one of them (Rhodes v. Jenkins) continued during the whole period of the agency, and was not then concluded. After the close of the agency the country solicitor claimed a taxation of the whole of the bills:—Held, by Pearson, J., that only those bills which had been delivered within twelve months could be taxed, and that the earlier bills must be treated as having been settled in account and thus paid. Held, by the court of appeal, that the bills of costs in Rhodes v. Jenkins (to which the appeal was limited), notwithstanding the fact that all the costs in it had not yet been taxed, being in fact separate bills could not be treated as one continuous bill at the option of the country solicitor. Nelson, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 998; 30 Ch. D. 1; 53 L. T. 415; 33 W. R. 645—C. A.

8. Within Twelve Months after Payment.

a. What is Payment.

Bill of Exchange or Promissory Note.]—By the word "payment," in 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, is meant a payment in money, and the section is not complied with by the delivery of a bill of exchange or a promissory note. Harries, In re, 1 D. & L. 1018; 13 M. & W. 3; 13 L. J., Ex. 259; 8 Jur. 453. S. P., Peach, In re, 2 D. & L. 33; 13 L. J., Q. B. 249.

A client gave to his solicitor bills of exchange for the amount due in respect of a bill of costs, and the solicitor gave a receipt "in settlement." Some of the bills were dishonoured at maturity:—Held, that, in the absence of proof by the solicitor (on whom the onus lies) that the parties intended that the bills should be taken as payment in any event, this did not amount to payment so as to deprive the client of his right to have the bill of costs taxed. Snell, Ex parte, Romer and Haslam, In re, 62 L. J., Q. B. 610; [1893] 2 Q. B. 286; 4 R. 486; 69 L. T. 547; 42 W. R. 51—C. A.

A client gave his solicitor a promissory note, and signed a memorandum of settlement; the court was strongly inclined to think that under the circumstances it ought to be deemed to amount to payment. Harper, In re, 10 Beav. 284.

And see PAYMENT.

Sum retained for Costs.]—A retainer of a sum of money by a solicitor out of moneys received for his client, is not a payment of his bill by the client. Brady, In re, 15 W. R. 632.

A solicitor retained the amount of his bill out of moneys in his hands belonging to the client, and the client, on receiving the balance of the moneys, but before the bill had been delivered, signed an account in which the total amount of the costs was an item, and gave a receipt for the balance:—Held, that there had been no payment of the bill within the meaning of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 41; and that the client was entitled to have the bill taxed more than a year after the retainer of the costs and the signature of the account. Street, In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 495; L. R. 10 Eq. 165; 22 L. T. 429. S. P., West, King and Adams, In re, Clough, Ex parte, 61 L. J., Q. B. 639; [1892] 2 Q. B. 102; 67 L. T. 57; 40 W. R. 644.

A solicitor, acting on behalf of mortgagees, sold the mortgaged premises, and on the 27th June, 1850, he retained the amount of his bill of costs out of the proceeds of the sale. On the 29th June, 1850, he sent a copy of the bill to the solicitor of the mortgagor, and, on the 27th June, 1851, the mortgagor applied for an order for taxation:—Held, that the taxation might have been had upon the common order; that the petition was presented in time; that it could scarcely be considered a payment of the bill of costs until the petitioner had the means of knowing the amount of the surplus, and that he was entitled to taxation, but that he must pay the costs beyond the costs of the common order. Steele, In re, 20 L. J., Ch. 562.

A settlement of account between a client and his solicitor and a retention of some of the client's moneys in the solicitor's hands is payment of a bill of costs. Falls, In re, 29 L. R., Ir. 1.

The retention and appropriation of money under an agreement to look for payment only to the property in litigation is not such a payment of the bill of costs as, under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, will supersede the taxation, especially when the client is illiterate and without professional assistance. Ingle, In re, 21 Beav. 275; 25 L. J., Ch. 169; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1059.

From February, 1874, to August, 1879, S. had acted as the solicitor and man of business of B., a married woman, and during this period had wound up her former husband's estate, collected her rents, and managed her estates, lent her money, and negotiated mortgages for her. In the course of these transactions the various items of receipts and payments on her behalf, including costs and professional charges, were entered in a book of accounts kept by S. Copies of these accounts were sent to B. from time to time, and one of the mortgages by B. to S. contained a recital that they had been gone through and settled. In August, 1879, when a mortgage was negotiated from a third person of sufficient amount to pay off B.'s debt to S., the accounts were gone through and explained to B., when S. retained the amount due to him for advances, and for his costs and professional charges, out of the mortgage money, and carried the balance to her credit in the book of accounts. B. thereupon signed the account. S. continued to act for B. as before down to the end of 1885. B. had no independent advice when she signed the account in August, 1879. On an application of B. and her husband for the delivery and consequent taxation of bills of costs from February, 1874, to August, 1879:—Held, following Street, In re (L. R. 10 Eq. 165), that there had been no payment within the meaning of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 41, and that B. was entitled to an order for delivery of proper bills of costs for the period required, and a consequent taxation, notwithstanding the lapse of time and the signature by B. of the accounts. Stogdon, In re, Baker, Ex

A solicitor delivered to his client a bill of costs together with a cash account, shewing in favour of the client a balance of 1*l.* 18*s.* 1*d.* The client, upon applying for such balance, was by inadvertence paid 1*l.* 16*s.* only:—Held, that there had been no payment of the bill, and that the client was entitled to the common order for taxation. Angore, In re, 46 L. T. 280. Reversed in C. A., 26 S. J. 417.

Security Given.]—Where a bill has been delivered and security given for the amount, that is equivalent to payment, for the purpose of precluding taxation without special circumstances. Turner, Ex parte, Boyle, In re, 5 De G., Mac. & G. 540; 24 L. J., Ch. 71; 2 W. R. 617.

Before Bill delivered.]—When a client has paid his solicitor's bill under pressure before the delivery of the bill he is entitled to have it taxed at any time before the expiration of a year. Fielder, In re, Bailey, Ex parte, 40 L. J., Ch. 615; 25 L. T. 56.

To constitute payment of a bill of costs such as will preclude taxation after 12 months under s. 41 of the Solicitors Act, 1843, a proper bill with items must be delivered; a cash account debiting the client with a lump sum for costs is insufficient. Baylis, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 612; [1896] 2 Ch. 107; 74 L. T. 506; 44 W. R. 533—C. A.

A solicitor who pays himself by retention of moneys of his client, and does not deliver a bill of costs, cannot treat that retention as payment; and such retention will not be referred to a bill subsequently delivered under an order of the court. Hitchcock v. Stretton (61 L. J., Ch. 529; [1892] 2 Ch. 343) disapproved of. Ib.

A firm of solicitors retained, out of money in their hands belonging to their client, the amount of their costs for professional work. They kept a running account with the client, crediting him with money received, and debiting him from time to time with the amount of the costs. The accounts were from time to time balanced, and signed by the client as having been "settled and approved" by him, but no bills of costs were then delivered. Four years after the last settlement of accounts the client brought an action for an account. The solicitors then delivered their bills of costs. At the trial the plaintiff abandoned his claim for an account, but contended that he was entitled to have the bills taxed:—Held, that the payment made was referable to the bills subsequently delivered, that the case came within s. 41 of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, and, there being no special circumstances, the court would not direct taxation. Stogdon, In re (56 L. J., Ch. 420), discussed and explained. Hitchcock v. Stretton, 61 L. J., Ch. 529; [1892] 2 Ch. 343; 66 L. T. 707; 40 W. R. 555.

Time of.]—When the bill was delivered on the 14th October, 1842, for which the client gave his note on the 3rd November, and which was paid on the 17th in the same year, and, on the 15th November, in the following year, a petition for taxation was presented, which was answered on the 16th and served on the 21st; the day of hearing was the 24th:—Held, that the bill was to be considered as paid on the 17th November, 1842, and the application for taxation as made at the latest on the 16th November, 1843, and therefore made within the twelve months, according to s. 41 of the statute. Sayer v. Wagstaff, 5 Beav. 415; 13 L. J., Ch. 161. Affirmed 14 L. J., Ch. 116; 8 Jur. 1083.

Under Protest.]—A protest upon payment of a bill of costs has no effect. Browne, In re, 15 Beav. 61. Affirmed 1 De G. M. & G. 322; 21 L. J., Ch. 442. See Harrison, In re, 10 Beav. 57; 16 L. J., Ch. 170; 11 Jur. 197.

b. Special Circumstances.

Not to be Extended.]—The cases of taxation after payment are not to be extended. Browne, In re, 16 Beav. 61. Affirmed 1 De G. M. & G. 322; 21 L. J., Ch. 442. S. P., Mash, In re, 15 Beav. 83; Barrow, In re, 17 Beav. 547; 18 Jur. 181; 2 W. R. 109.

Onus of Proof.]—Payment of a bill of costs is primâ facie an admission of its correctness, and the client is bound to prove "special circumstances" to authorise its taxation. Harding, In re, 10 Beav. 250; 16 L. J., Ch. 288.

Discretion of Court.]—The court, on an application under s. 39, has a discretion as to ordering taxation, even where special circumstances are shown. Chowne, In re, 52 L. T. 75—C. A.

It is a matter in each case for the discretion of the court or a judge; and where there are special circumstances the court of appeal will not readily overrule the decision of the court below as to their sufficiency. Cheesman, In re, infra.

No Rigid Rule.] — There is no rigid rule defining the special circumstances in which an order will be made to tax a solicitor's bill of costs after payment. Cheesman, In re, 60 L. J., Ch. 714; [1891] 2 Ch. 289; 64 L. T. 602; 39 W. R. 497—C. A.

But semble that the court has a discretion to order taxation where a bill contains items unreasonably large or charges requiring explanation, or gross blunders. Norman, In re, Bradwell, Ex parte, 55 L. J., Q. B. 202; 16 Q. B. D. 673; 54 L. T. 143; 34 W. R. 313—C. A.

Conditional Payment.]—A client who pays his solicitor's bill of costs, expressly subject to his "right to tax," which payment, by cheque, is accepted and retained by the solicitor without reference to such condition, may tax the bill after such payment, as such a condition constitutes "special circumstances" under s. 41 of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73. Love, Ex parte, Williams, In re, 65 L. T. 68.

Needless Overcharges.]—Where a considerable portion of a bill of costs is for business which, in the exercise of an honest and fair discretion, ought never to have been transacted, the court, although there be no serious amount of pressure, will order a taxation after payment. Barrow, In re, 17 Beav. 547; 18 Jur. 181; 2 W. R. 109.

Verbal Agreement for Costs between Solicitor and Client.]—E., a client, instructed his solicitors to effect an arrangement with his creditors, and handed over to them 100*l.* for that purpose. By verbal agreement the costs of these proceedings were taken at 63*l.* odd, and the balance retained in the solicitors' hands. The arrangement failed, and E. filed a petition in bankruptcy. The trustees in bankruptcy thereupon demanded the above balance to be paid over to them, which E.'s solicitors did; but they also asked for the bill of the costs in the previous proceedings to be delivered, which the solicitors declined to do:—Held, that, under the provisions of s. 41 of the Solicitors Act, 1843, there was jurisdiction to make an order for the delivery of a bill for purposes of taxation, on the ground that there had been no valid agreement in writing for the amount of the costs as required by s. 8, sub-s. 2 of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, which applied to non-contentious as well as contentious business. West, King and Adams, In re, Clough, Ex parte, 61 L. J., Q. B. 639; [1892] 2 Q. B. 102; 67 L. T. 57; 40 W. R. 644.

No Fraud or Undue Pressure.]—A defendant in an action agreed, through his solicitor, to pay the plaintiff's solicitor a fixed sum for his costs and for his trouble in promoting a composition between the defendant and his creditors. Within twelve months of the payment of the amount the defendant took out a summons for the delivery by the plaintiff's solicitor of a bill of his costs:—Held, that no fraud or undue pressure upon the defendant having been established, there were no special circumstances within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ss. 37, 38, 40, 41, to warrant the application. Heritage, In re, 47 L. J., Q. B. 509; 3 Q. B. D. 726; 38 L. T. 509; 26 W. R. 633.

Refusal to produce Bill.]—Order made for taxation of bills of costs after payment, where the solicitor had produced them, on the execution of a mortgage, out of the produce of which they had been paid, but had taken them back immediately, and afterwards refused to produce them. Loughborough, In re, 23 Beav. 439.

It is not necessary to specify items of overcharge upon a petition for taxation after payment, in a case in which the solicitor, by retaining the bill of costs, and refusing to produce them, prevents the client pointing out the overcharges. Ib.

Refusal to accept Legal Charges.]—A solicitor delivered his bill of costs to his client, made out in double columns, one being the amount allowed on taxation, which he refused to accept when tendered. The client then paid the larger sum to obtain his papers:—Held, notwithstanding the payment, that he was entitled to an order to tax the bill, as he had been constrained to pay the larger sum by the refusal of the solicitor to accept what he himself had stated that he was legally entitled to. Tosland, Ex parte, Lett, In re, 1 N. R. 8; 31 Beav. 488; 32 L. J., Ch. 100; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1119; 7 L. T. 303; 11 W. R. 15.

Opportunity for Examination of Bill.]—Where a client intends to pay a bill of costs at the meeting to complete a matter, the mere fact of the bill being then delivered, and of his paying it, without having had an opportunity of examining it, will not alone be sufficient to entitle the client to a taxation, but such a circumstance forms a material consideration. Abbott, In re, 18 Beav. 393; 23 L. J., Ch. 955; 2 W. R. 379.

Where a solicitor pressed for the amount of his bill, but offered an opportunity of taxation, and apprised his client that it would be difficult to have the bill taxed after payment, and the client chose to pay without taxation, and afterwards applied to have the bill taxed without shewing overcharges amounting to fraud:—Held, that the application ought to have been dismissed with costs. Turner, Ex parte, Boyle, In re, 5 De G. M. & G. 540; 24 L. J., Ch. 71; 2 W. R. 617.

Pendency of Indictment.]—Where a charge of felony is pending against the managing clerk of a solicitor, on the trial of which the bonâ fides and legality of the charges in a professional bill of costs delivered by the solicitor to his client, the prosecutor, at a period anterior to the charge of felony, may directly affect the question of the accused's guilt or innocence, the court will, on the application of the solicitor, order such bill to be referred to taxation, notwithstanding that it had been settled in account between the parties some months before. Fisher, In re, 42 L. T. 261.

Solicitor not giving Information.]—Solicitors to trustees delivered to their clients bills of costs for work done for them as trustees, which were paid without taxation, the solicitors not having informed their clients that if administration proceedings were subsequently brought and the bills were moderated in those proceedings, the trustees would have to pay out of their own pockets the amounts by which the bills were reduced on moderation. It was admitted that the amounts charged were honest and not excessive:—Held, that the fact of the solicitors not having given such information to their clients was not a special circumstance justifying taxation after payment. Layton, Steele & Co., In re, 38 W. R. 652.

Payment by Retainer of Costs.]—Where a solicitor of trustees received payment out of the estate, the court, notwithstanding there was not such pressure or such allegations and proof of overcharges as have been usually relied on in such cases, ordered the taxation of a solicitor's bill after payment. Blackmore, In re, 13 Beav. 154; 15 Jur. 784.

Next of Kin — Administrator — Adoption of Services by Client.]—A solicitor undertook, without retainer, certain investigations as to who were the next of kin of an intestate. These investigations were adopted and paid for by the administrator for whom the solicitor subsequently acted. A summons was taken out by another of the next of kin for taxation of the solicitor's bill of costs, to which the solicitor consented. The taxing-master was to be at liberty to state special circumstances. The taxing-master disallowed the costs of these preliminary investigations. On an application by the solicitor to be allowed such costs, the court directed that, subject to the amount overpaid being paid into court, there should be an inquiry as to what costs, if any, ought to be allowed the solicitor for the investigations (the majority of the next of kin being willing that they should be allowed), such order to be served on the next of kin. The court was, however, of opinion that, under s. 41 of the Attorneys and Solicitors Act, 1843, it had jurisdiction, even in the absence of such willingness on the part of the next of kin, to make the above order, inasmuch as on the finding of the taxing-master there were "special circumstances" within the meaning of that enactment:—But held, on appeal, that the judgment must be varied by striking out the direction for immediate payment into court, the solicitors undertaking to repay any sum which might be disallowed as the result of the inquiry. Hill, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 871; 55 L. T. 456—C. A.

Solicitor, Son of One Executor.]—Executors retained the son of one of them to act as their solicitor in the administration of the estate, and the solicitor's bills, or some of them, were paid by credit being given to the son in accounts between him and his father:—Held, that this fact was not such a special circumstance as would warrant an order for the delivery and taxation of the son's bills of costs, upon a petition presented under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ten years after the payment, even if that interval did not exclude the jurisdiction to make such an order. Shackell, Ex parte, 2 De G. M. & G. 842; 17 Jur. 793.

Legatee—Executor.]—Taxation ordered at the instance of a legatee, of a bill of the executor's solicitor, for the amount of which a mortgage had been given by them. Drake, In re, 22 Beav. 438.

Compromise of Claim for Costs.]—A compromise of a solicitor's claim for costs, if effected under circumstances of pressure upon the client, does not oust the jurisdiction of the court to tax the bills upon petition. Stephen, In re, 2 Ph. 562.

"Pressure"—Power of Sale.]—W. employed F. as his solicitor from 1855 to 1859, and became indebted to him for costs and cash advances. In 1858 W. gave to F. a security upon his furniture, farming stock, &c., to secure all moneys due or to become due, with an immediate power of sale. In January, 1859, F. sent in to W. an unsigned bill of costs and cash account, and in March pressed for payment, and threatened to enforce his security. W. then employed another solicitor, and a correspondence went on till May. F., on 17th May, gave notice that if the money were not paid on that day he should take possession under his security, and he accordingly did so. W. then paid the amount under protest. The bill of costs contained items to a considerable amount subsequently in date to the security, and overcharges were shewn. Many of the vouchers for the items in the cash account, though applied for, had not been produced till the day of payment:—Held, that W. was entitled to an order for taxation. Foster, In re, Walker, Ex parte, 2 De G. F. & J. 105; 29 L. J., Ch. 625; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 687; 2 L. T. 553; 8 W. R. 620.

—— To obtain Deed.]—Taxation ordered after payment under protest, the payment being insisted on, as a condition for parting with a deed necessary to complete a purchase. Tryon, In re, 7 Beav. 496.

Special circumstances are usually pressure, as where an immediate payment is required at a time when it would be very inconvenient to the party paying that any delay should occur in the completion of the business; and, secondly, error or overcharge in the bill; if the overcharges evidence fraud, very slight, if any, circumstances are necessary to induce the court to order a taxation. Harding, In re, 10 Beav. 250; 16 L. J., Ch. 288.

Where a bill is paid in order to obtain possession of deeds, and an intention is at the same time expressed to have the bill taxed, an order will be made to refer the bill for taxation. Dearden, In re, 9 Ex. 210; 2 C. L. R. 308; 23 L. J., Ex. 14; 17 Jur. 993; 2 W. R. 18.

—— Refusal to complete.]—On the day fixed for the completion, at a solicitor's office, of the sale of a mortgaged property belonging to a former client, the solicitor delivered to the former client, who was in somewhat embarrassed circumstances, his bill of costs. The client and his new solicitor attended, and in order to prevent the postponement of the completion, allowed the solicitor to retain the amount of his bill, but under protest. The bill contained overcharges to a considerable amount:—Held, that the bill was paid under circumstances of pressure, and that it must be taxed. Pugh, Ex parte, Briscoe, In re, 1 De G. J. & S. 673; 8 L. T. 586; 11 W. R. 762.

It is a "special circumstance" within the meaning of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, where a solicitor produces his bill at the time appointed for the settlement of a transaction, and refuses to complete except on payment thereof. Bennett, In re, 8 Beav. 467; 14 L. J., Ch. 403.

It is a "special circumstance" within the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, where, on paying off a mortgage, a solicitor produces his bill and insists on payment as a condition for immediate completion, though items are objected to, and a taxation will be directed after payment, if there are apparent overcharges. Wells, In re, 8 Beav. 416; 14 L. J., Ch. 215; 9 Jur. 820.

If a solicitor has refused to allow certain deeds to be executed until his bill of costs is paid, and the bill is paid under protest, and the deeds executed, this may constitute such a "special circumstance" as to induce the court to tax the bill under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73. Andrews, Ex parte, Clement, In re, 13 L. J., Ch. 222; 8 Jur. 327.

Where the alleged pressure consisted in the refusal to allow the execution of a reconveyance, which was required without delay to make a good title to a purchaser, except on payment of the bill of the mortgagee's solicitor—taxation after payment refused. Dolman, In re, 2 W. R. 447.

—— Action Pending.]—A foreclosure action having been commenced, and judgment for foreclosure having been obtained but not made absolute, the mortgagee, on the 19th June, 1882, paid the mortgagee's solicitor 263*l.*, which was alleged to be due for principal, interest, and costs. There was no taxation or delivery of the bill of costs. In February, 1883, the mortgagee took out a summons for delivery and taxation of the bill of costs:—Held, that, even if there had been payment to the solicitor within the meaning of the Solicitors Act, 1843, the mere pendency of the foreclosure action did not amount to pressure so as to entitle the mortgagee to taxation. Griffith Jones & Co., In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 303; 50 L. T. 434; 32 W. R. 350—C. A.

—— No pressing Need.]—Mortgagees for 2,000*l.* were proceeding to sell the mortgaged estates. On the 1st of September, S., the mortgagor's solicitor, wrote to B., the mortgagee's solicitor, informing him that he had found a transferee, and proposing to complete the transfer on the 3rd. B. wrote back proposing the 10th for completion, and afterwards postponed the appointment to the 13th. His bill of costs, which amounted with surveyor's charges to more than 450*l.*, was received by S. on the 9th. On that day S. wrote to B., saying that the bill of costs appeared excessive, and would require to be carefully gone into, but did not propose to postpone the completion. On the 12th S. took with him a written protest against the bill, and had two interviews with B., at which arrangements were made for completion. S. did not mention the subject of costs at either interview, but deposed that he had intended to do so at a third appointment on the same day, which B. did not keep. On the 13th the parties met, the transfer was completed, and the bill of costs paid, B. refusing to part with the deeds unless it was paid. S. delivered his written protest, and it appeared that B. expressed willingness to reconsider his bill if any item were shewn to be erroneous, but said nothing to the effect that it was to be treated as open to taxation. The mortgagor applied for taxation, alleging pressure and overcharge, but not referring to any particular items of overcharge:—Held (dissentiente, Bowen, L.J.), that the order for taxation should not be made, for that as the shortness of the interval between the delivery of the bill and the time fixed for completion did not arise from any act of the mortgagee's solicitor, but was owing only to the desire of the mortgagor for speedy completion, there was no pressure such as to justify taxation, though the case would have been otherwise if the mortgagee had been pressing for an early settlement. Boycott, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 835; 29 Ch. D. 571; 52 L. T. 482; 34 W. R. 26—C. A.

On the day appointed for "paying off" a mortgage the solicitor of the mortgagee refused to part with the title deeds until payment of his bill of 18*l.*, which had been delivered two days previously. It was paid under protest. The court refused a taxation, no pressing necessity for the title deeds appearing, and no items of overcharge being distinctly shewn. Finch, In re, 16 Beav. 585; 1 Eq. R. 109.

—— Obtaining Payment by Cheque.]—The solicitor of a mortgagee, at a meeting to execute the mortgage deeds, by directing the solicitor of the mortgagor to draw cheques on account of the money to be advanced for the payment of divers bills of costs owing to him, across which he required the mortgagee to sign her name at the back, at once withdraws his protection, and subjects the client and mortgagee to constraint and undue influence amounting to pressure, which, notwithstanding payment, will render the bills liable to taxation. Abbott, In re, 18 Beav. 393; 23 L. J., Ch. 955; 2 W. R. 379.

—— No Facilities for Taxation.]—To constitute a case for taxation of costs after payment, on the ground of undue pressure, the pressure must have been of such a kind as to have rendered it impossible or difficult to have the costs taxed before payment, in the ordinary course. Browne, In re, Jefferies, Ex parte, 1 De G. M. & G. 322; 21 L. J., Ch. 442.

To support such a petition on the ground of extravagant and improper charges, the allegations directed to that point must be specific, and must be such as to amount to evidence of fraud. Ib.

There is no general rule as to how much pressure will entitle a party to have a solicitor's bill taxed after payment. But if reasonable facilities for taxation have been refused at the last moment, when it has become imperative to the party to obtain immediately the papers to which the solicitor's lien applied, and the party has consequently paid the bill, that is a special circumstance which, coupled with items of apparent overcharge, will justify the court in directing taxation after payment. Newman, In re, 36 L. J., Ch. 843; L. R. 2 Ch. 707; 17 L. T. 128; 15 W. R. 1189.

It is no argument against taxation in such a case that the effect produced upon the party by the pressure arises out of his own conduct or private affairs. Ib.

A cestui que trust agreed that her trustee, if he acted as solicitor in a suit, should receive full costs. A bill was delivered on the 18th February, and on the 8th March the solicitor ceased to act. After discussion as to the amount, and having received other professional advice, the client paid the bill on the 22nd May, a deduction being made therein. On an application being made within twelve months, the court refused to order a taxation. Wyche, In re, 11 Beav. 209.

A mortgagor presented a petition, praying that certain bills of costs, which had been paid under certain special circumstances, might be taxed. The petition stated that a meeting was appointed for the completion of a transfer of mortgages and payment of the money, and that the solicitor of the mortgagees presented four bills of costs, two of which were agreed upon, and the others, which related to matters between the mortgagees and their solicitor, not; but as a postponement of the settlement might be serious to the mortgagor, it was agreed that they should be paid by him. The bills contained improper and exorbitant charges, and the petition specified items of overcharge:—Held, that as the statements and evidence shewed a case of great and unnecessary pressure, and as the bills, which were between the solicitor and other parties, contained items which could not be duly examined at the time, there was sufficient reason on either ground to induce the court to make the order. Kinneir, In re, Price, Ex parte, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 423; 7 W. R. 175.

If payment be made under pressure, the circumstance of pressure alone is enough to induce the court to order a taxation. Ib.

Payment of a solicitor's bill, delivered at the last moment of settling a mortgage, being insisted on without any opportunity of examination being afforded, is a "special circumstance" within the meaning of the Solicitors Act. Jones, In re, 8 Beav. 479.

A bill of costs was delivered on the day appointed to complete the transfer of a mortgage. It was objected to, but the solicitor of the mortgagee refused to complete until payment. The mortgagor paid it, but it was afterwards ordered to be taxed. Phillpotts, In re, 18 Beav. 84; 2 W. R. 3.

The single fact that, upon a transfer of a mortgage, a mere draft bill of costs of the mortgagee's solicitor is, for the first time, produced and then paid, is not of itself, without proof of pressure or fraud, a sufficient "special circumstance" to authorise taxation after payment; nor is that fact sufficient, coupled with overcharges which are not so gross as to evidence fraud. Fyson, In re, 9 Beav. 117.

A meeting was appointed to settle important matters on the 23rd August, and the costs were to be paid by A. B. The bill of costs was delivered the evening before, and payment was then insisted on, though the bill was objected to. Upon evidence of overcharge, taxation was ordered after payment. Elmslie, In re, 12 Beav. 538.

A bill of costs, settled and paid after examination, discussion and abatement made by the solicitor, referred for taxation under the circumstances, but on the terms of the client admitting the cash payments contained in the settled account. Nokes v. Warton, 5 Beav. 448.

A., the mortgagee's solicitor, sent a reconveyance to B., the mortgagor's solicitor, for execution, unstamped. On the 23rd August B. delivered his bill of costs, which was objected to; and on the 10th September A. applied to B. for the loan of the deed to get it stamped, on his undertaking to return it, which was refused; and on the 18th September the mortgage and bill were paid. The mortgagee afterwards applied for a taxation, and the pressure relied on was, that he had been compelled to pay the bill, in order to get the reconveyance stamped, and avoid the penalties. He also alleged overcharges, which were not clearly made out. The application was refused, with costs. Hubbard, In re, 15 Beav. 251.

A mortgagee's solicitor would not part with the deeds until payment of his bill of costs, which had been delivered to the mortgagor's solicitor a month previously:—Held, that this was not a sufficient case of pressure to induce the court to order a taxation. Jones, In re, 8 Beav. 479.

A tenant having an option of purchase of the fee at a given price on the terms of his paying all the vendor's costs, gave notice in December, 1882, of his exercise of the option, and stated that he should not require an abstract of title. The time for completion was the 25th of March, 1883, but it was arranged for the tenant's convenience that the completion should be six weeks earlier, and that the property should be conveyed in two lots. He sent his draft conveyances for perusal before the end of December. On the 2nd of February, 1883, the vendor's solicitors sent in their bill of costs, in which they charged 30*s.* per cent on the purchase-money of each lot. The purchaser's solicitors objected to these charges, but the vendor's solicitors refused to allow completion unless they were paid, and on the 14th of February the purchaser paid them under protest, and completed the purchase. After this he applied for taxation of the bill:—Held, that, having regard to the dates, there was no pressure, and that there was no overcharge amounting to fraud, and that there were, therefore, no special circumstances to authorise taxation after payment. Lacey and Son, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 287; 25 Ch. D. 301; 49 L. T. 755; 32 W. R. 233—C. A.

A mortgagee's solicitor delivered his bill to the mortgagor nearly three weeks before the day of settlement. At the meeting the bill was objected to, but the solicitor refused to complete without full payment, and the mortgagor paid it under protest:—Held, that this was not sufficient to authorise a taxation, although there might be some overcharges. Harrison, In re, 10 Beav. 57; 16 L. J., Ch. 170; 11 Jur. 197.

Petition to tax a bill of costs, paid without pressure nine days after its delivery, dismissed with costs. Drew, In re, 10 Beav. 368.

In March, 1847, a railway company agreed to purchase some property, and to pay the vendor's costs. In May, 1847, possession was delivered. The bill of costs of the vendor's solicitor was delivered on the 13th June, 1848, and a meeting, to complete the purchase, took place between the solicitors on the 20th June, when objections were then made to the bill. It was then paid, under protest, and with an intimation that it would be taxed, and a petition for taxation was presented a few days after:—Held, that there was not sufficient evidence of pressure to open the matter by ordering a taxation. Welchman, In re, 11 Beav. 319.

Where a mortgagee had instituted a suit for foreclosure, and an arrangement had been made for a transfer, and the bill of costs was not delivered until the day appointed for completion, but was not paid until fourteen days after, the court refused to order a taxation, no overcharges being satisfactorily proved. The court considered that the mortgagee ought to have obtained an order to stay the suit, on payment of the mortgage and the deposit of the amount claimed for costs. Towle, In re, 30 Beav. 170; 3 L. T. 283.

Taxation of a bill paid under protest, on the ground of overcharges, and that the solicitor had refused to part with the title deeds until payment, refused with costs, it not appearing how long the bill had been delivered before payment. Mash, In re, 15 Beav. 83.

Pressure and Overcharges.]—The rule of the court is, that to obtain a taxation after payment there must either be both overcharge and pressure, or overcharge so gross as to amount to fraud. Hubbard, In re, 15 Beav. 251. And see Browne, In re, Jefferies, Ex parte, 1 De G. M. & G. 322; 21 L. J., Ch. 442.

A solicitor is not bound to do that on the undertaking of the opposite solicitor, which the latter is not entitled to as of right. Ib.

After a solicitor's bill had been paid, an order for the taxation of it will not be made, unless special circumstances—as overcharges such as amount to fraud, or which are accompanied by pressure—can be shewn, which, in the opinion of the judge, appear to make it proper that the bill should be taxed. Munns and Longden, In re, 50 L. T. 356.

To obtain the taxation of a bill of costs after payment, the petitioner must allege and prove specific items of overcharge, even if the payment has been made under protest and upon pressure. Thompson, In re, 8 Beav. 237; 14 L. J., Ch. 137; 9 Jur. 169. Contra Dearden, In re, 9 Ex. 210; 2 C. L. R. 308; 23 L. J., Ex. 14; 17 Jur. 993; 2 W. R. 18.

Petition by mortgagor for taxation of the mortgagee's solicitor's bill, presented five months after it had been discharged by retainer, dismissed with costs, on the ground that it neither alleged any circumstances of pressure nor any specific item of overcharge. Dunt v. Dunt, 9 Beav. 146.

Taxation ordered of a paid bill of a mortgagee's solicitor in a mixed case of pressure and of improper items. Rance, In re, 22 Beav. 177.

A mortgagee took legal proceedings against the mortgagor whereby expenses were being incurred. The mortgagee's solicitor delivered his bill on the 25th December, and the parties met to complete a transfer on the 29th December. The bill contained a charge for an abstract, which was more than double what it ought to have been, but the solicitor refused to reduce it, and the bill was paid. It did not appear that any proposal had been made to settle the matter, and postpone the question of costs. The court, considering that there had been both pressure and overcharge, ordered a taxation. Ib.

It requires a very special case to induce the court to order taxation after payment, the court being reluctant to open a matter deliberately settled. The rule is, that there must be both pressure and overcharges or items in the bill itself of such a nature as to amount to what is vaguely called fraud. Definition of the term "fraudulent items." Barrow, In re, 17 Beav. 547; 18 Jur. 181; 2 W. R. 109. S. P., Abbott, In re, 18 Beav. 393; 23 L. J., Ch. 955; 2 W. R. 379.

Taxation after payment ordered, on proof of pressure, and on shewing grounds for thinking that the bill would be considerably reduced on taxation. Sladden, In re, 10 Beav. 488.

Where payment of a bill of costs has been obtained by undue pressure, a taxation may be directed on proof of overcharge, without shewing that such overcharges are so gross as to amount to fraud. Wells, In re, 8 Beav. 416; 14 L. J., Ch. 215; 9 Jur. 820.

Proof of overcharge alone is insufficient to obtain the taxation of a paid bill; but it is a necessary ingredient. Stirke, In re, 11 Beav. 304.

When a bill of costs is paid, the onus of proving overcharges is thrown on the client. Towle, In re, 30 Beav. 170; 3 L. T. 283.

Where an account, comprising bills of costs, is settled and paid as between a solicitor and client, and no surprise or fraud is practised, the court will not direct a taxation of the bill, though it appears to contain items which would be disallowed or reduced on taxation, unless it appears that the overcharges are in themselves so extravagant and improper, as under the circumstances to be considered fraudulent. Massie v. Drake, 4 Beav. 433.

Upon the settlement of an account between a solicitor and his client, a sum of 75*l.* was retained by the solicitor, by consent, to answer particular costs not then ascertained. The court limited the taxation to such particular costs. Ib.

To obtain an order for taxation of a bill of costs which has been paid, it must be shewn that there has been undue pressure and overcharge, or overcharge amounting to fraud. Foster, In re, Walker, Ex parte, 2 De G. F. & J. 105; 29 L. J., Ch. 625; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 687; 2 L. T. 553; 8 W. R. 620. S. P., Harding, In re, 10 Beav. 250; 16 L. J., Ch. 288.

Overcharge amounting to Fraud.]—Unless overcharge amount to fraud the court will not refer bills of costs for taxation after payment. Turner, Ex parte, 5 De G. M. & G. 540; 24 L. J., Ch. 71; 2 W. R. 617.

Even without pressure, items of overcharge are enough to render the circumstances special, under s. 41 of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73. Kinnear, In re, Price, Ex parte, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 423; 7 W. R. 157.

It is not sufficient, in order to exclude taxation, to shew that no objection was made at the time to the payment either of particular items or of the whole bill. Ib.

On application by a residuary legatee to tax a bill of costs of the solicitors of the executors after payment, no case of pressure or actual fraud was made out, nor of very gross overcharge, but various items were of a considerably greater amount than would have been allowed to the executors in a suit to administer the estate:—Held, that taxation had been rightly ordered, for that overcharges of this nature were overcharges amounting to fraud, within the technical meaning of the term. Dickson, In re, 26 L. J., Ch. 89; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 29; 5 W. R. 108.

An overcharge not warranted by the scale under the general order of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, will be sufficient to constitute "special circumstances" justifying taxation after payment under s. 41 of the Solicitors Act, 1843. Eley, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 905; 37 Ch. D. 40; 57 L. T. 253; 36 W. R. 96.

Where the client being desirous of raising a sum, his solicitors agreed to obtain it, if the amount of their bills might be included and settled, which the client consented to on condition of their taking his acceptance for the bills, on being furnished with all of them, and which had not been delivered, and the acceptance was sworn to have been received in lieu of payment:—Held, that in the absence of any circumvention or oppression, the acceptance of payment under such circumstances was not such a special circumstance as to entitle the client to taxation after payment. The overcharges complained of and explained not being proved to such an extent as to amount to fraud, it was not sufficient that there were some overcharges which might have been disallowed on taxation. Currie, In re, 9 Beav. 602; 10 Jur. 976.

Taxation of a solicitor's bill refused after a security given, payment and acquiescence; some charges, though improper, not being so gross as to amount to fraud. Plenderleath v. Fraser, 3 Ves. & B. 174.

An attorney's bill of costs settled and paid, or after judgment in action, not to be referred for taxation of course; as it may be upon a special case of fraud or improper charges, notwithstanding payment, a release, judgment, or other security. Langstaffe v. Taylor, 14 Ves. 262.

Common Mistake.]—Where a fee was paid under a common mistake of the solicitor and client that the scale under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act applied, the court refused to accede to an application for an order for taxation. Glaseodine and Carlyle, In re, 52 L. T. 781—C. A.

Unnecessary Charges.]—On the occasion of the payment of a mortgage debt by the mortgagor, the mortgagee's solicitor delivered his bill of costs, which was paid by the mortgagor. The bill contained items to the amount of 10*l.* for the preparation of a bill of foreclosure against the mortgagor, which was never filed:—Held, that the preparation of the bill of foreclosure being, under the circumstances, unnecessary and improper, the charges were of such a nature as to induce the court to allow taxation after payment, although there had been no pressure or surprise. Barrow, In re, 17 Beav. 547; 18 Jur. 181; 2 W. R. 109.

Trifling Overcharges.]—Though the court will open a solicitor's bill, and order taxation, after several years and a security given, or even payment upon gross errors, fraud, or undue pressure, yet where nothing appeared but a trifling inaccuracy, and under other favourable circumstances, the court would not restrain proceedings upon a security obtained while business was depending. Cooke v. Setree, 1 Ves. & B. 126.

Petition to tax a bill of costs after payment, on the ground of trifling overcharges, dismissed with costs. Drake, In re, 8 Beav. 123.

Where overcharges of only 2*l.* or 3*l.* were shewn, and no pressure or fraud was proved, taxation was refused. Chowne, In re, 52 L. T. 75—C. A. S. P., Walsh, In re, 12 Beav. 490.

A mortgagor, without giving six months' notice, requested the mortgagee to accept payment and to transfer the mortgage. The transfer being executed, the mortgagee's solicitors refused to deliver it or the title deeds to the mortgagor without payment of their bill of costs. The mortgagor's solicitor objected to items amounting to less than 9*l.* in all, but paid the full amount in order to obtain the deeds: — Held, that the above were not such special circumstances as to subject the bill to taxation after payment. Barton, Ex parte, 4 De G. M. & G. 108; 22 L. J., Ch. 670.

Semble, that one of the special circumstances required is overcharge, and that an item objected to, not because the business was not done, or because the charge was excessive, but because the liability to pay it is disputed, is not such an overcharge as to be sufficient ground for taxing a paid bill. Ib.

Charges for attendances to the extent of eight on one day, are not sufficient to open a paid bill. Towle, In re, 30 Beav. 170; 3 L. T. 283.

Time of Application.]—A petition being presented for the taxation of a solicitor's bill:—Held, that the application was to be considered as to be made at the latest at the time of answering the petition, and not at the time of service of the petition, or the day appointed for hearing. In case of accidental delay in the office, the period may be carried further back. Sayer v. Wagstaff, 5 Beav. 415; 13 L. J., Ch. 161. Affirmed, 14 L. J., Ch. 116; 8 Jur. 1083.

A solicitor delivered his bill of costs on the 14th October, 1842, for which his client, on the 3rd November, 1842, gave his promissory note, which was paid on the 17th November, 1842. On the 15th November, 1843, the client presented a petition for the taxation of the bill, which was answered on the 16th, and was served on the 21st. The day appointed for hearing was the 24th:—Held, first, that the bill must be considered as paid on the 17th November, 1842; and, secondly, that the application for taxation must be considered as made at the latest on the 16th November, 1843; and consequently, that the application for taxation had been made within twelve months, according to s. 41 of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73. Ib.

Application for taxation after payment should be made speedily. Barrow, In re, supra.

Where a bill of costs was delivered on the completion of a purchase, to which the solicitor was a party, and he refused to complete the purchase without payment: — Held, that the circumstances were evidence of pressure, and justified taxation after payment, notwithstanding five months had elapsed before the presentation of the petition. Pugh, In re, Briscoe, Ex parte, 1 De G. J. & S. 673; 8 L. T. 586; 11 W. R. 762.

An unexplained delay of nine months after payment in the presentation of a petition for taxation on such grounds:—Held, fatal to the application. Jeffries, Ex parte. Browne, In re, 1 De G. M. & G. 322; 21 L. J., Ch. 442.

A mortgagee's solicitor's bill was delivered at the completion of the mortgage transaction, and the amount retained, after objection. A petition presented eleven months afterwards, for taxation, was refused, although the bill contained an objectionable item of 20*l.* for procuration money. Bayley, In re, 18 Beav. 415; 2 W. R. 404.

Affidavit.]—After a bill of costs paid, and a receipt in full taken, the client is not entitled to an order to tax the costs, merely swearing they never had been taxed; he must shew specific error. Mahon v. Scanlan, 2 Moll. 388.

A petition for the taxation of a bill of costs set forth special circumstances sufficient in themselves to obtain an order for taxation, but the affidavits in support of it mentioned some of the items which were objected to, all of which were explained by the solicitors to the satisfaction of the court. The petition was dismissed. Andrews, Ex parte, Clement, In re, 13 L. J., Ch. 222; 8 Jur. 327.

Order — What Bills.] — A solicitor's bill of costs paid under pressure, and protested against, referred for taxation. Protest, combined with other circumstances, may be a ground of reference of a bill of costs for taxation. Where there is evidence of pressure, the court will, if necessary, direct a general reference for taxation, although in the petition for taxation some only of the items of the bill of costs may be objected to. Wilkinson, Ex parte, Alcock, In re, 2 Colly. 92; 9 Jur. 720.

A bill of costs was delivered by the solicitor in 1809, and shortly afterwards paid by the client; between that time and March, 1817, four other bills were delivered, and various payments were made on account. In November, 1817, a sixth bill was delivered, when the client paid the general balance due on the bills of costs, at the same time stating that he would insist on having the bills taxed. An application for taxation to a judge at law in 1818, and an application to the court of king's bench in 1819, failed, from circumstances not involving the merits of the question. Some attempts at a compromise were made from time to time, and the client was obliged, on three or four occasions, to leave England, in order to attend to urgent business in foreign countries; but at length, in 1824, a motion was made to have the bills referred for taxation, supported by evidence that some of the items of charge were improper. The court ordered that the bill last delivered should be taxed generally, and that the five antecedent bills should be referred to the master, with a direction that the client should deliver to the solicitor a schedule of the items complained of, and that the master should exercise as large a discretion as he might think fit, with respect to the evidence on which he should proceed in forming his judgment concerning these items. Scougall v. Campbell, 3 Russ. 545.

Several bills were delivered in, settled, and paid, in the course of a long cause, and a receipt in full given; at the end of the cause the client moved to refer them all for taxation. The order was discharged. Pistor v. Dunbar, 1 Anstr. 186; 3 R. R. 561.

A bill of costs was settled by retainer; a second and subsequent bill was also settled in the same way:—Held, on an application to tax the second bill only, that the solicitor could not insist on having both taxed. Gregg, In re, 30 Beav. 259; 31 L. J., Ch. 632; 10 W. R. 127.

A petition was presented for taxation of a paid bill of costs, alleging specific items of overcharge. The solicitor thereupon offered to repay the amount of such items and the costs. The petitioner did not accede to this, but brought the petition to a hearing. The court ordered the taxation of the bill, treating these items as omitted. Catlin, In re, 23 Beav. 412.

9. More than Twelve months after Payment.

Jurisdiction.]—The lapse of twelve months between the payment of a bill of costs and the presentation of a petition for its taxation precludes taxation under the act. Harper, In re, 10 Beav. 284.

Quære, whether a bill can be ordered to be taxed above a year after payment unless fraud can be shewn. Pemberton v. Tyther, 1 W. R. 86.

The court has no power to refer a bill of costs for taxation, when such bill has been paid more than twelve calendar months before the application has been made to the court to refer. Binns v. Hey, 1 D. & L. 661 ; 13 L. J., Q. B. 28 ; 7 Jur. 1154.

An application to tax must be within twelve calendar months after payment. Wilton, In re, 13 L. J., Q. B. 17 ; 7 Jur. 1133.

Where twelve calendar months have elapsed since payment of a solicitor's bill of costs by his client, such bill, although not signed by the solicitor, is prohibited by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 41, from being referred to taxation. Sutton and Elliott, In re, 52 L. J., Q. B. 752 ; 11 Q. B. D. 377 ; 49 L. T. 436—C. A.

An account settled between a client and her solicitor, including arranged bills of costs, decreed to be opened and the bills referred for taxation in an action instituted nearly two years after such settlement, on the grounds of undue influence, and that the charges were improper and excessive, and that much of the business done was unnecessary, and ought not to have been done. Watson v. Rodwell, 48 L. J., Ch. 209 ; 11 Ch. D. 150 ; 39 L. T. 614 ; 27 W. R. 265—C. A.

A preliminary agreement between a solicitor and his client on obtaining a loan on mortgage, no bill of costs having been delivered, is illegal, and the delivery of the bill and taxation were ordered more than twelve months after completion of the transaction and payment of the balance to the client. Cawley, In re, 18 W. R. 1125.

A solicitor lent his client 200*l.* on a promissory note. The note was made out for 210*l.*, the addition being alleged to be for costs on the transaction :—Held, that the client was not precluded from requiring a bill of costs, shewing how the sum of 10*l.* was made up, by the lapse of nearly three years and subsequent money transactions between the parties. Ib.

Within twelve months after payment of a bill of costs a client presented a petition for its taxation ; but the petition having specified no items of overcharge, no order could be made. The twelve months having then expired, the court refused to allow the petition to stand over for the purpose of amendment, by specifying the items. Barwell v. Brooks, 7 Beav. 345.

Bills of costs examined after a long period, and even after payments made. Newman v. Payne, 2 Ves. J. 202 ; 4 Bro. C. C. 350.

Taxation of solicitor's bill, after payment and lapse of several years, refused. Waters v. Smith, 1 Jur. 375.

A solicitor delivered a general estimate of costs due to him, without specifying the particulars. The client signed a memorandum agreeing to the statement, and requesting A. (to whom he had given his acceptance) to pay the amount. A bill filed by the client more than three years afterwards, to obtain a delivery and taxation of the bill of costs, was dismissed with costs. Turner v. Hand, 27 Beav. 561.

A solicitor's bill of costs had been delivered, after the death of the client, to the solicitors employed by his representatives, and paid by them after investigation ; and some, but not all, of the papers of the deceased client were delivered up. An application, made three years after, for the taxation of the bill, without referring to any specific errors, but alleging generally that the bill contained exorbitant charges, was refused. Horlock v. Smith, 2 Myl. & C. 495 ; 6 L. J., Ch. 236 ; 1 Jur. 302.

Where a client has paid his solicitor's bill without pressure, and with full means of examining it before payment, and afterwards seeks to open the bill and refer it for taxation, he must state, in his petition, and prove to the satisfaction of the court, specific errors of such a character as amount to evidence of fraud. A general allegation of improper charges will not be sufficient. Ib.

A mere primâ facie error in such a bill will not authorise the court to refer it for taxation. Ib.

The circumstance, that a solicitor has omitted to give his client credit for certain items with which he ought to have been credited, will be a ground for a distinct inquiry what sums the solicitor has received which ought to be set off against the amount of the bill ; but will not, of itself, be a ground for referring the whole bill for taxation. Ib.

Principles of the court with respect to the taxation of a solicitor's bill after payment. Ib.

—— Unsigned Bill.]—A bill of costs, though unsigned, is within s. 6 of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 53 (similar to 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 41), and cannot be referred for taxation more than twelve months after payment. Falls, In re, 29 L. R., Ir. 1.

Application by Third Parties.]—The administratrix, with the will annexed, of a testatrix, who was also tenant for life under the will, employed a solicitor in relation to the administration of the estate, and, as was alleged, paid his bill of costs out of moneys forming part of the capital of the estate. More than twelve months after the payment of the bill some of the beneficiaries, as plaintiffs, took out an originating summons against the administratrix, as defendant. The summons was intituled in the matter of the estate of the testatrix, and also in the matter of the solicitor, and it was served on him, but he was not named as a defendant. The summons asked for a reference of the bill to taxation, and that in taxing the costs the master might certify what amount was properly chargeable against the capital of the trust estate, and what amount was properly payable by the defendant personally, as tenant for life ; and that, if it should appear that the bill was overpaid, the solicitor might be ordered to repay the amount certified to be overpaid to the defendant. It was suggested that the bill contained items which were not properly chargeable against the capital of the trust estate, and that the solicitor knew that he was being paid out of the capital of the trust estate, and had notice of the breach of trust at the time when he received payment :—Held, that the lapse of more than twelve months since payment was a bar to its taxation :—Held, also, on the authority of Spencer, In re (51 L. J., Ch. 271), that, even if the solicitor had been made a defendant to the summons, the relief asked against him could not have been obtained. Whether any relief could have been obtained against him, quære. Jackson, In re, Boughton-Leigh v. Boughton-Leigh. 58 L. J., Ch. 387; 40 Ch. D. 495; 60 L. T. 589; 37 W. R. 282.

10. After Action Brought.

After Action.]—A bill of costs having been incurred by A. and B. jointly, and an action having been brought against them for the recovery of the amount, the court refused to direct a taxation and to stay the proceedings at law, on the undertaking of A. alone, to pay what might be found due. Chilcote, In re, 1 Beav. 421.

A client obtained an order of course to tax after action brought, but before notice of it, and the order did not provide for the costs of the action:—Held, that this was not irregular, and a motion to discharge it was refused with costs. Farington, In re, 33 Beav. 346.

A solicitor brought an action at law for the recovery of his bill of costs. The client contested the retainer, and while the action was pending, obtained an order of course to tax the bill of costs; but the order contained no submission to pay what, upon taxation, should be found due. Upon motion to discharge the order as irregular:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to make such an order; but that in such a case the facts ought to be brought specially before the court, which would make a special order, according to the circumstances of the case. The court made a special order; and in case the respondent should refuse to take it, directed the order of course to be discharged, but without costs. Thurgood, In re, 19 Beav. 821; 23 L. J., Ch. 952; 18 Jur. 821; 2 W. R. 682.

Where a defendant after action brought applies for taxation, he cannot deny liability unless the order expressly provides therefor. Baker v. Merryweather, 2 Car. & K. 737.

After Verdict.]—Solicitor may proceed to tax his costs after a verdict at law, with a view to commence an action in his own name for the amount, after a final settlement between the parties by arbitration without his concurrence, notwithstanding an injunction to stay execution. Brooks v. Bourne, 1 Price, 72.

After Judgment.]—A solicitor to a railway company, provisionally registered, brought an action against three of the managing directors for the amount of his bill of costs, and recovered judgment. An order was afterwards obtained for winding up the company under the act, and a petition was then presented by the official manager for taxing the solicitor's bill, under the statute 6 & 7 Vict., c. 73, on the ground of excessive charges:—Held, that the court could not be called upon to examine the items of a bill to ascertain their correctness, and that an allegation of excessive charges was not such a special circumstance as to bring the case within the 38th section of the act. Petition dismissed with costs. Vardy, In re, 20 L. J., Ch. 325.

A solicitor was employed by three partners. He brought an action against them for his bill of costs, and, representing one, he obtained judgment against them by default:—Held, that this did not prevent the others from obtaining an order for taxation: Held, also, that an application for taxation by the two was regular, the third not concurring, but that he ought to be served with the petition. The taxing-masters have jurisdiction to determine questions of retainer. Hair, In re, 10 Beav. 187; 16 L. J., Ch. 163; 11 Jur. 139.

A judgment at law which is not final does not preclude an order of course for taxation. Gedye, In re, 15 Beav. 254; 21 L. J., Ch. 430.

After final judgment, signed by an attorney and solicitor, in an action upon his bills of costs, there can be no reference for taxation under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, except under special circumstances, although there has been no verdict nor writ of inquiry executed in the action. Barnard, In re, 2 De G. M. & G. 359; 17 Jur. 53.

Semble, that after the question of taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs has been adjudicated upon in an action, a special petition to this court to tax the costs, under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37, cannot be entertained. Ib.

Semble, that after judgment in an action for costs the special jurisdiction to direct taxation given by the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, is gone. Ib.

Costs after judgment in an action for them, not referred for taxation. Otherwise, on a special case of fraud or improper charges. Langstaffe v. Taylor, 14 Ves. 262.

11. After Security given or Settlement.

Security.]—Bill may be taxed after bond and mortgage given as security for same. Aubrey v. Popkin, Dick. 403.

Court will order attorney's bill to be taxed, though he has a mortgage to secure payment. Walmesley v. Booth, 2 Atk. 29. S. P., Plenderleath v. Fraser, 3 Ves. & B. 175.

A solicitor being indebted to A., and having a demand against B., a client, prevailed on B. to give A. a bond for 3,000*l*., as part satisfaction of the costs due from B. A. knew that the sum claimed from B. was due for costs, but had no notice the costs had not been taxed. Taxation decreed. Harrison v. Wiltshire, 9 Sim. 255; 2 Jur. 679.

Refusal to order the taxation of a solicitor's bills of costs, the amount of which had been secured by a deed in the year 1819, although the suit was then pending; the client's affairs having since the year 1822 (when that solicitor died), been in the hands of another solicitor, and there being no proof of such dealings between the solicitor and client, or of such errors or improper charges in the bill, as could amount to evidence of fraud. Waters v. Taylor, 2 Myl. & C. 526; 6 L. J., Ch. 245; 1 Jur. 375.

Where an attorney had taken a mortgage from his client for his bill of costs in preparing that and another mortgage, and the client, before the attorney's mortgage was executed, assented to the bill, but afterwards, on coming to redeem, questioned its accuracy; the court directed the master to examine the bill, with a view to ascertain the reasonableness of the charges, without entering into evidence as to whether the business charged for had been actually done. Wragg v. Denham, 2 Y. & Coll. 117; 6 L. J., Ex. Eq. 38.

Costs ordered to be taxed fourteen years after security given for the payment of them, it appearing that the costs had not been paid, although payments had been made on account of them; that the security had been given pendente lite, and while the relation of attorney and client existed between the parties; no account having been settled between them, the client being then in embarrassed circumstances, some oppression having been used towards him by the attorney; but the vouchers having been given up to the client, it was ordered that the bills of costs should be primâ facie evidence of the business done, and the reasonableness of the charge, with liberty to the client to surcharge and falsify. Fowler v. Moore, 2 Jones, 415.

Solicitor having taken a judgment of his client for 400*l.* whilst cause was depending, also several extraordinary charges appearing in his bill, bill though adjusted and allowed seventeen years ago, referred to be taxed, and judgment and other securities to be delivered up. Drapers' Co. v. Davis, 2 Atk. 295.

Where a bond and warrant of attorney, on which judgment was entered, were given twenty-seven years ago for costs due to a solicitor, the court, upon an allegation that these costs had never been taxed or settled, refused to refer them for taxation at the instance of the surety of the client, and against the executor of the executor of the solicitor, who had died twenty years before. Maxwell v. O'Dell, Sau. & Sc. 194.

A client executed a mortgage to his solicitor for a specified sum, being the amount at which past costs in a suit had been estimated, without the bills having been delivered, the solicitor undertaking to deliver the bills by a certain time, which he did. Four years afterwards the client changed his solicitor, and obtained an order for taxation of subsequent costs, but declined the offer of the solicitor to have the costs secured by the mortgage included in the taxation, and obtained the order without prejudice to any question as to those costs. Two years afterwards, the client filed a bill against the solicitor, to have the latter costs investigated and the account between the parties re-opened, but did not allege any specific overcharge or error:—Held, that the application was precluded by length of time and acquiescence. Blagrave v. Routh, 8 De G. M. & G. 620; 26 L. J., Ch. 86; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 399; 5 W. R. 95.

Though the court will open a solicitor's bill, and order taxation after several years, and a security given, or even payment, upon gross errors, fraud or undue pressure, where nothing appeared but a trifling inaccuracy and under other favourable circumstances, the court would not restrain proceedings upon a security obtained while business was depending. Cook v. Setree, 1 Ves. & B. 126.

Settlement.]—A settlement of a bill of costs during the continuance of the suit, while the client has no professional adviser, except the solicitor himself, is not a bar to its taxation. Crossley v. Parker, 1 Jac. & Walk. 460.

An account settled between a client and her solicitor, including arranged bills of costs, decreed to be opened and the bills referred for taxation in an action instituted nearly two years after such settlement, on the grounds of undue influence, and that the charges were improper and excessive, and that much of the business done was unnecessary, and ought not to have been done. Watson v. Rodwell, 48 L. J., Ch. 209; 11 Ch. D. 150; 39 L. T. 614; 27 W. R. 265—C. A.

Admission of Balance.]—Where the client was in the power of his solicitor, and without the means or proper assistance, for obtaining any effective examination of the bills, which consisted of general items, and were otherwise not sufficiently explanatory, and the solicitor appeared to be driving the client into a bargain on unequal terms, the relation of the attorney and client still continuing, the court held that the latter was not precluded from an order for reference for taxation by the circumstances of an admission of the balance and payment of the settled account. Nokes v. Warton, 5 Beav. 448.

Agreement.]—Agreement between a solicitor and his client, an illiterate person, for payment of his bills (taken at a given amount) solely out of the produce of some property, the subject of the suit:—Held, not to preclude taxation. Ingle, In re, 21 Beav. 275; 25 L. J., Ch. 169; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1059.

12. Scale of Taxation.

Parliamentary or Chancery.]—Under the common order to tax a solicitor's bill, the taxing-masters would tax a bill for parliamentary business upon the scale of parliamentary allowances. Sudlow, In re, 11 Beav. 400; 18 L. J., Ch. 182.

The promoters of a tramway company obtained a provisional order from the board of trade authorising the construction of the tramway under the Tramways Act, 1870. Their solicitors sent in their bill of costs:—Held, that the bill must be taxed according to the chancery and not the parliamentary scale. Morley, In re, L. R. 20 Eq. 17; 32 L. T. 524; 23 W. R. 532.

Higher or Lower.]—An action for the recovery of large estates, the statement of claim in which set up a case of concealed fraud to avoid the operation of the Statute of Limitations, was dismissed without costs. The taxing-master in taxing the costs of the plaintiff as between the solicitor and a person who had guaranteed their payment, taxed them on the lower scale as coming within Ord. VI. r. 1:—Held, that the fact of the issue of fraud being raised was not a sufficient reason for directing the costs to be taxed on the higher scale, but that, to take the case out of the general rule that the costs of an action for the recovery of land are to be taxed on the lower scale, the solicitor must shew that the case was one requiring extra skill or labour. Terrell, In re, 22 Ch. D. 473; 47 L. T. 588; 31 W. R. 208—C. A.

—— Appeal.]—An appeal will lie from a decision by a judge under Rules of the Supreme Court (Costs), August, 1875, Ord. VI. r. 3, as to the taxation of costs on the higher or lower scale; but where he has exercised his discretion, the court of appeal will not interfere unless he has proceeded on a wrong principle or made a manifest slip. Ib.

County Courts Act.]—Sect. 36 of the County Court Act, 1856, which fixes a limit to costs, as between solicitor and client, in actions where not more than 20*l.* is claimed, applies to county court actions only. Copp, In re, Drew, Ex parte, 50 L. J., Q. B. 233; 6 Q. B. D. 607; 44 L. T. 48; 29 W. R. 390—C. A.

The scale of costs and charges in actions in the county court under 20*l.* framed in pursuance of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 50, s. 8, does not prevent a solicitor from recovering charges other than those specified in the scale for work done out of court before and after the commencement of an action, although there has been no agreement in writing for further costs under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 36. Druiff v.

Joel, Emanuel, In re, 51 L. J., Q. B. 490; 9 Q. B. D. 408; 30 W. R. 735.

The appendix to the county court rules, 1886, contains a scale of costs as between solicitor and client where the amount recovered exceeds 2*l*., and does not exceed 10*l*., and provides that no other costs are to be allowed where the amount claimed does not exceed 10*l*., unless the judge certifies under s. 5 of the County Courts (Costs and Salaries) Act, 1882. The plaintiff having commenced an action in a county court for 10*l*., consulted solicitors with reference to it, who, after taking various steps to investigate the claim, recommended a settlement, which the plaintiff refused to accept. The solicitors then returned the papers to the plaintiff, who proceeded with the action in person:—Held, that upon the taxation of the solicitors' bill for the services rendered by them, it was a question for the master whether the solicitors had, in fact, acted in the conduct of the action, and that if they appeared to have so acted, they could recover no other costs than those specified in the appendix. Emanuel, In re (9 Q. B. D. 408) considered. Dod, Longstaffe and Co., In re, Lamond, Ex parte, 57 L. J., Q. B. 503; 21 Q. B. D. 242; 59 L. T. 467.

—— Higher or Lower Scale.]—On taxation as between solicitor and client of the costs of a county court action in which the amount claimed exceeded, but that recovered was less than 10*l*., the master has a discretion to allow costs on the higher scale. Langlois and Biden, In re, 60 L. J., Q. B. 123; [1891] 1 Q. B. 349; 63 L. T. 816; 39 W. R. 181—C. A. Reversing 55 J. P. 183.

A solicitor commenced an action in the high court for a client, and conducted it through certain stages. Ultimately, upon his client's instructions, he obtained an order under s. 65 of the County Courts Act, 1888, by which the action was remitted for trial to a county court. He then ceased to act for his client. The action was conducted in the county court by another solicitor, and verdict and judgment were obtained for the full amount claimed:—Held, that the solicitor's bill of costs up to the date of the order remitting the action to the county court did not fall within the provisions of s. 118 of the County Courts Act of 1888 as to taxation. Boydell v. Millar, 60 L. J., Q. B. 251; 64 L. T. 299; 39 W. R. 335.

The provisions of s. 118 of the County Courts Act, 1888, as to taxation, do not apply to costs incurred in the high court up to the date of an order remitting to the county court an action commenced in the high court. Boydell v. Millar (60 L. J., Q. B. 251) approved. Cubison v. Mayo, 65 L. J., Q. B. 267; [1896] 1 Q. B. 246; 74 L. T. 65; 44 W. R. 473; 60 J. P. 212—C. A.

13. What Sums Allowed.

a. Solicitors' Remuneration Act.

i. Election as to Scale.

Time for—"Before undertaking any Business."]—The solicitors of the assigns of a lease of copyhold land wrote to P., the copyholder, asking for renewed leases to their clients under a covenant in the original lease. On the 25th of July, P.'s solicitors wrote to the solicitors of the applicants stating that P. had called on them with the letter, and that the matter therein referred to should have their attention, and asking for evidence of the title of the applicants. The evidence required was furnished. Some delay took place in consequence of the necessity of P. being admitted, and obtaining a licence to demise. On the 16th of October, P.'s solicitors were informed by the steward of the manor that P. could be admitted, and that licence to demise would be given. On the 19th of October, P.'s solicitors gave him written notice of their election to be remunerated according to the old system as modified by Schedule II. to the rules under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act. In the books of the solicitors was an entry under that date "instructions for drawing new leases," but there was no evidence as to the circumstances under which it was made. On the 21st of October P.'s solicitors sent to the applicant draft leases. The leases were granted, and the lessees, who were bound to pay the costs of the lessor's solicitors, insisted that the remuneration must be according to the scale in Schedule I.:—Held, that the election on the 19th of October was too late, for that the business had been undertaken on the 25th of July, and that the taxation must be according to the scale. Allen, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 487; 34 Ch. D. 433; 56 L. T. 6; 35 W. R. 218—C. A.

The notice of election under r. 6 of the General Order to the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, must be given by the solicitor before he undertakes any business at all in the particular matter for his client. After having done any work in the matter for which he could charge his client if the scale under the order did not apply, it is too late for him to elect. Allen, In re (supra) followed. Hester v. Hester, 56 L. J., Ch. 247; 34 Ch. D. 607; 55 L. T. 862; 35 W. R. 233; 51 J. P. 438—C. A.

A solicitor who acted for a mortgagee in relation to the mortgaged property received from the solicitors of the persons entitled to the equity of redemption a request that the mortgagee would sell under his power of sale, and in pursuance of this he, without any express authority from his client, did work in relation to the contract for sale for which if authorised he would apart from the rules, under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, have been entitled to be paid, and which would be covered by the scale fee. The sale was completed:—Held, that a notice of election to be remunerated according to the old system, which was given by the solicitor after work of the above description had been done, was too late, although given before the contract was signed, for that as the client had ratified his proceedings he stood in the same position as if he had received previous authority, and must be treated as having undertaken the business as soon as he did any work of the above description. Ib.

Where money is paid into court under statutes incorporating s. 80 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, the solicitor for the vendor may entitle himself to detailed charges, provided that he signifies his election "before undertaking the business." Bridewell Hospital and Metropolitan Board of Works, In re, 57 L. T. 155.

The notice of election under r. 6 of the General Order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, as to remuneration for conveyancing business arising in an action, must be given by the solicitor before he undertakes such conveyancing business. After having done any work in the matter which would properly be covered by the scale charge, e.g. discussed with the client the mode of scale and questions relating to the title, it is too late for him to elect. Allen, In re (34 Ch. D. 433), and Hester v. Hester (34 Ch. D. 607) followed. Metcalfe, In re, Metcalfe v. Blencowe, 57 L. J., Ch. 82; 57 L. T. 925; 36 W. R. 137.

The expression "undertaking any business" in r. 6 of the Order, means not merely accepting the retainer, but rather entering upon the work, that is, doing something for which the solicitor is entitled to make a charge, whether such charge is or is not covered by the scale fee under the Order. Stewart, In re, 41 Ch. D. 494; 60 L. T. 737; 37 W. R. 484.

What is.]—Sending in a bill of costs in the old form cannot be treated as an election by the solicitors to charge according to Schedule II. of the Order. Fleming v. Hardcastle, 52 L. T. 851; 33 W. R. 776.

Notice of Election — To whom given.]—Semble, where a solicitor is acting for several trustees, notice of election must be given to them all. Hester v. Hester, supra.

Where notice of election under the rule has been properly given by a solicitor to his client, a first mortgagee, it is binding on a subsequent incumbrancer and also on the mortgagor. Ib.

Where, under a lease containing a power of renewal, the assigns are liable to pay the costs of a new lease, the only person to whom any notice of election under r. 6 need be given by the lessor's solicitor is the lessor himself; the assigns not being "clients" of the solicitor within s. 1, sub-s. 3, of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, so as to make any notice to them necessary. Allen, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 6; 34 Ch. D. 423; 55 L. T. 630; 35 W. R. 100; 51 J. P. 325.

Pending Business — Right to Elect.] — The right of a solicitor under r. 6 of the general order, in pursuance of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, to elect that his remuneration shall be according to the old system as altered by Schedule II., may be exercised as to business pending at the time when the order came into operation, and in such case the election may be made after the time when the order came into operation, but must be made before any further work is done by the solicitor to which the scale charges under the order would apply. Love, In re, Hill v. Spurgeon, 58 L. J., Ch. 272; 40 Ch. D. 637; 60 L. T. 254; 37 W. R. 475. S. P., Stewart, In re, supra.

The judgment in an administration action contained no general direction for the sale of the testator's real estate, but under various separate orders made in the action, and before the order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act came into operation, sales and leases of parts of such estates were directed or sanctioned. After the order came into operation, the plaintiff's solicitor gave him notice that in all matters relating to the estate he proposed to charge according to the old system as altered by Schedule II. In determining the sufficiency of this notice, it was held that the separate transactions ought in the taxation of the costs to be treated and dealt with as separate matters, and that the business ought not to be deemed to be "undertaken" until the time arose at which the solicitor had done some work after the order came into operation, which would be covered by the scales under the general order. Ib.

Winding-up — Duty of Liquidator.] — On receiving notice from the solicitor, whom he has employed to act for him in the winding-up, that he elects to be paid for his work under Schedule II., and not according to the scale charge under the general order made in pursuance of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, it is the duty of the official liquidator, in order to discharge his duty of protecting the assets of the company, to obtain the direction of the judge in chambers as to whether he ought to continue to employ a solicitor who requires payment on the more expensive footing. United Kingdom Land and Building Association, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 132; 40 Ch. D. 471; 60 L. T. 694; 37 W. R. 486.

ii. In what Cases Applicable.

a. Generally.

"Conveyancing Business" — "Other Business."]—Solicitors who transact conveyancing business in an action will, under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, and the general order of August, 1882, be allowed taxed costs and charges for such business according to the scales set forth in the schedules to the general order. The proper construction of the language of s. 2 of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, is that it refers to conveyancing matters which take place in an action as well as to those out of court, and that the exception is only from "other business" not being conveyancing business, and accordingly where the taxing-master had disallowed certain charges made for conveyancing business in an action, and under the scales of charges contained in the schedules to the general order of August, 1882, he was directed to review his taxation. Stanford v. Roberts, 53 L. J., Ch. 338; 26 Ch. D. 155; 50 L. T. 147; 32 W. R. 404; 48 J. P. 692.

The words of s. 2, "not being business in any action or transaction in any court or in the chambers of any judge or master," apply only to the "other business" mentioned immediately before, i.e. to business not being conveyancing business, and do not exclude from the scale conveyancing business done under the direction of the court. Merchant Taylors' Co., In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 867; 30 Ch. D. 28; 52 L. T. 775; 33 W. R. 693—C. A.

Whole of Business must be done.]—A tenant having an option of purchase of the fee at a given price on the terms of his paying all the vendor's costs, gave notice of the exercise of the option, and stated that he should not require an abstract of title, and sent in his draft conveyances for perusal. The vendor's solicitors sent in their bill of costs, in which they charged 30*s.* per cent. on the purchase-money of each lot, considering that this was the proper charge under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, which provides that amount of remuneration to a vendor's solicitor "for deducing title to freehold, copyhold or leasehold property, and perusing and completing conveyance (including preparation of contract or conditions of sale if any)":—Held, that the case was governed by the new rules, but that the bill was framed on an erroneous footing, for that the ad valorem remuneration authorised by Schedule I. was chargeable only where the whole of the business in respect of which it was imposed, viz. the deducing title and perusing and completing conveyance was done; that here, as there was no deducing of title, but only perusal and completion of the conveyance, Schedule I. did not apply, but that under the general order, Schedule II. r. 2 (c), the solicitor's remuneration was to be regulated by the old system as modified by Schedule II. Lacey & Sons, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 287; 25 Ch. D. 301; 49 L. T. 755; 32 W. R. 233—C. A.

Under a provision contained in a will the testator's sons took the real estate at a valuation, and took over the assets and liabilities of his business, the sons giving a mortgage to the trustees to secure the purchase-money. The same solicitors acted for all parties in preparing the necessary deeds, and charged full vendors' and purchasers' costs, and also mortgagors' and mortgagees' costs under the scale:—Held, that they were only entitled to remuneration under Schedule II., for, as they had not "investigated and deduced title," the scale charge did not apply. Keeping and Gloag, In re, 58 L. T. 679.

In July, 1881, W. instructed his solicitors to prepare a building agreement with form of lease to be granted on completion set out in the schedule. In June, 1883, the premises having been completed, W. gave further instructions for a lease, which, as prepared, was, except as to parties, a verbatim copy of that contained in the schedule. In November, 1883, the solicitors delivered their bill of costs, in which under date July, 1881, were various items amounting to 17*l.* in relation to preparing the agreement; and under date June, 1883, "to costs of preparing, engrossing, executing, and completing lease and counterpart, as per Schedule I. of Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 59*l.* 10*s.*" On taxation this item was objected to, on the ground that the act did not apply, as the substantial part of the work done was previous to the 1st of January, 1883, and had been already charged for in the costs of preparing the agreement. The taxing-master disallowed the objection, but deducted 20*l.* from the 59*l.* 10*s.*, and directed a detailed bill of costs in relation to the preparation of the lease to be brought in. This bill was delivered, but was not taxed. On summons to review taxation:—Held, that the taxing-master ought to have taxed the detailed bill for the actual preparation of the lease, and not have allowed the ad valorem scale even to the extent he did; that the ad valorem scale applied only where the solicitor had substantially done the work specified in Schedule I.; that as the scale charges did not apply, the taxing-master ought to have taxed their charges in accordance with r. 2, sub-s. (c), and Schedule II. Hickley, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 608; 52 L. T. 89; 33 W. R. 320. See also Wilson, In re, and Wood v. Calvert, post, cols. 1628, 1629.

Part of Work done before Act.]—Negotiations for a lease were carried on through the lessor's solicitor for two years before the rules under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, came into operation. After they came into operation terms were come to, and a lease executed. The solicitor in his bill charged for the negotiations, and also charged the amount fixed by Schedule I. Part II. to the rules, as remuneration "for preparing, settling, and completing lease and counterpart." The taxing-master disallowed all the items for negotiations. The solicitor appealed:—Held, that though the business had been commenced before the rules came into operation, the taxation must be conducted according to the rules, the solicitor not having declared his election to the contrary. Field, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 661; 29 Ch. D. 608; 52 L. T. 480; 33 W. R. 553; 49 J. P. 613—C. A. And see preceding case.

In June, 1882, D. contracted to sell a piece of land for 375*l.* upon the terms of the purchaser paying to the vendor "all reasonable and proper costs" of making and verifying his title and executing the conveyance. In January, 1883, the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, came into operation. That order provides that the costs of the vendor's solicitor, with respect to such a sale, shall be according to an ad valorem scale of 30*s.* per cent. (see Schedule I. Part I). In April, 1883, D. (who had previously employed a country solicitor) transferred the business to a London solicitor. In March, 1884, the London solicitor sent in his bill of costs to the purchaser's solicitor made out on the old system. The purchaser's solicitor objected that the bill ought to be made out according to the scale prescribed by the general order. On a summons by the purchaser for a declaration to this effect:—Held, that the costs payable by the purchaser were regulated by that order. Denne and Secretary of State for War, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 45; 51 L. T. 657; 33 W. R. 120. See also Fleming v. Hardcastle, post, col. 1626.

Business Completed before Order.] — The general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, is by virtue of s. 7 of the act, applicable to business completed before the order came into operation. Stewart, In re, 41 Ch. D. 494; 60 L. T. 737; 37 W. R. 484.

Act not Applying.]—In taxation between solicitor and client, cases for counsel to advise trustees whether they should require a release from their cestui que trusts on their discharge, statements for the information of the client as to the investment of the trust funds, and the prudence of changing it, or directions to the trustees signed by the client, consenting to the change of investment, and directing a new investment, are not included in Schedule II. of the general order to the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, but are taxable under the scale of fees prior to that act. O'Hagan, Ex parte, 19 L. R., Ir. 99.

A solicitor who was employed by a Board of Guardians to prepare a scheme for the erection of cottages under the Labourers (Ireland) Act, 1883, furnished his bill of costs, in which he charged fees of five guineas each for attendances and journeys in connection with the business. The taxing officer having reduced these charges to the amount that would have been allowed prior to the passing of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881:—Held, that even assuming such business to come within the act (which semble it does not) the scale of taxation applicable was that which existed at the time of the passing of the act, and not any higher one prescribed by the General Order of 1884. Strange, Ex parte, 21 L. R., Ir. 529.

Solicitors to Town Commissioners prepared sanitary regulations, collectors' and contractors' bonds, and warrants of attorney for their clients:—Held, by O'Brien, J., that such items were not within Schedule II. r. 2, Gen. Ord. 16th April, 1884, made in pursuance of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, s. 2, but should be taxed under the scale of fees prior to that act:

—Held, by Johnson, J., that such items were properly taxable under the scale settled by Schedule II., above referred to. Atkinson, In re, 24 L. R., Ir. 182.

Conveyancing—"Other Documents."]—The words "other documents" in the heading to Schedule II. to the General Order, made under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, mean other documents ejusdem generis with deeds and wills. An agreement for the execution of sewage works, made between a contractor and a board of town commissioners, though not a deed, is "conveyancing business" within the meaning of s. 2 of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, and is taxable under the scale settled by Schedule II. of the above-mentioned General Order. Caruth, Ex parte, 25 L. R., Ir. 478.

In the taxation of costs under Schedule II. of the general order of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, headed "Instructions for drawing, &c., deeds, wills, and other documents," cases for the opinion of counsel are included in the words "other documents." Mahon and Sayer, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 65; [1893] 1 Ch. 507; 2 R. 337, n.; 68 L. T. 189; 41 W. R. 37.

Extraordinary Cases—Discretion of Taxing-Master.]—Under Schedule II. of the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, prescribing a charge of 10*s.* for an "ordinary" attendance, and giving the taxing-master power in "extraordinary cases" to increase or diminish that charge "if for any special reasons he shall think fit," it is a question for the discretion of the taxing-master whether or not a case is "extraordinary," as being more simple or more difficult than a normal fair average case. In extraordinary cases, where the taxing-master increases or diminishes the "ordinary" charge, he must have special reasons for so doing, but he is not bound to state his special reasons till he formally answers the objections to his taxation. Mahon and Sayer, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 448; [1893] 1 Ch. 507; 2 R. 337; 68 L. T. 189; 41 W. R. 257—C. A.

In an administration action, to which mortgagees of leaseholds were not parties, the plaintiffs obtained an order to sell the leaseholds, and that the money should be paid into court. The order was made without the knowledge of the mortgagees. The plaintiffs wrote to the mortgagees sending draft particulars and conditions of sale as settled by the conveyancing counsel to the court "for your perusal." The mortgagees undertook to concur in the sale on condition that their mortgage debt and costs and expenses were provided for out of the proceeds of sale in court, and they returned the conditions approved. The taxing-master disallowed the fees charged at the rate of 1*s.* a folio for perusing the conditions of sale, but allowed a fee of one guinea for reading them. One of the grounds of disallowance was that conditions of sale were not such documents as were intended by the word "documents" in Schedule II. of the general order made in pursuance of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881. On summons to vary the taxing-master's certificate:—Held, that (while not deciding that conditions of sale did not come within the word "documents") this was an extraordinary case where the taxing-master had a discretion. Rees, In re, Rees v. Rees, 58 L. T. 68.

Taxation by Third Party—Deduction from Scale Fee.]—Where a solicitor's bill includes charges for services in respect of which the third party taxing it is not liable, a corresponding deduction must be made as between the solicitor and such third party from the amount of the scale fee chargeable upon the whole transaction. Negus, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 79; [1895] 1 Ch. 73; 13 R. 85; 71 L. T. 716; 43 W. R. 68.

β. Sale of Land, &c.

Land out of the Jurisdiction.]—The general order made in pursuance of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, does not apply to a sale of land situate outside the jurisdiction. Therefore, on such a sale, the costs of the vendor's solicitor are not chargeable according to the scale in Schedule I., Part I., but are regulated by the old system as altered by Schedule II. Greville's Settlement, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 256; 40 Ch. D. 441; 60 L. T. 43; 37 W. R. 150.

"Conveyances of Property"—Grant of Easement.]—Grants by way of sale of rights and easements of laying and maintaining pipes in land are not "conveyances of property" within Schedule I., Part I., and consequently the scale is not applicable to solicitor's charges in respect of such grants. Stewart, In re, 41 Ch. D. 494; 60 L. T. 737; 37 W. R. 484.

—— Sale of an Advowson in Gross.]—The scale fee applies upon the sale of an advowson in gross, such property being freehold, and as such, within the meaning of Schedule I., Part I. to the general order made in pursuance of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881. Stewart, In re (41 Ch. D. 494), distinguished. Earnshaw-Wall, In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 836; [1894] 3 Ch. 156; 8 R. 558; 71 L. T. 173; 42 W. R. 567.

A deed creating an easement for the first time is not a sale and conveyance of property within the meaning of Schedule I., Part I., of the general order made in pursuance of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, and consequently the scale charge does not apply to such a transaction. Stewart, In re (41 Ch. D. 494), and Earnshaw-Wall, In re (63 L. J., Ch. 836; [1894] 3 Ch. 154), explained and approved. Sanders's Settlement, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 426; [1896] 1 Ch. 480; 74 L. T. 261; 44 W. R. 385—C. A.

Negotiating Sale—Conditional Contract.]—Rule 11 of Part I. of Schedule I. to the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, provides that "the scale for negotiating shall apply in cases where the solicitor of a vendor or purchaser arranges the sale or purchase, and the price and terms and conditions thereof, and no commission is paid by the client to an auctioneer, estate, or other agent":—Held, in a case where the contract for sale required the sanction of the court, and the sale was effected in accordance with the proposals submitted to the court, that the vendor's solicitor, who had brought the negotiations to the point at which his principal was free to give his consent, had arranged the sale. Macgowan, In re, Macgowan v. Murray, 60 L. J., Ch. 118; [1891] 1 Ch. 105; 63 L. T. 793; 39 W. R. 227—C. A. See Fleming v. Hardcastle, infra.

"Investigating Title."]—The corporation of London resolved to purchase the old bankruptcy court, which, under s. 68 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, was vested in the public works commissioners, the purchase-money, 93,500*l.*, being payable out of funds in court under various acts, including the Lands Clauses Act, and representing lands of the corporation taken by certain public bodies. On applying to the commissioners the corporation were informed that the property was vested in the commissioners under the above section, and that they "did not agree to furnish any evidence of title," but would apply to the Lord Chancellor, under the section, for his authority to sell; and they subsequently wrote that the Lord Chancellor had authorised the sale by his secretary. The city solicitor, however, having regard to the terms of the section, required a written authority signed by the Lord Chancellor himself, which was duly obtained. The solicitor, having thus satisfied himself as to the commissioners' title, obtained, on summons in chambers, an order sanctioning the purchase, the chief clerk, upon the production of the Lord Chancellor's authority, and at the request of the solicitor, dispensing with the usual reference as to title. The purchase having been completed, the corporation carried in their solicitor's bill for taxation, containing a charge for 278*l.* 15*s.*, according to the scale in Schedule I. Part I., of the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, for "investigating title and preparing and completing conveyance." The taxing-master disallowed the charge on the ground that there had been no investigation of title, and that therefore the scale charge did not apply. On a summons by the corporation to review the taxation:—Held, that there had been an "investigation of title" within the terms of the general order, and that therefore the scale charge applied. London Corporation, Ex parte, 56 L. J., Ch. 308; 34 Ch. D. 452; 56 L. T. 13; 35 W. R. 210.

A lessee, with an option of purchasing the freehold of the land leased, gave notice of his desire to exercise the option. E. said he thought one of the lessors had money to lend, and communicated the lessee's desire to him. The lessee and lessor met and arranged between them that 800*l.* should be advanced upon mortgage of the property about to be purchased. E. acted as solicitor in reference to the mortgage and purchase. He did not ask for or inspect any abstract of title on behalf of the mortgagee, as the only title was that of the lessors, a copy of which had been given to the lessee. The purchase and mortgage were completed, and E. delivered a bill of costs, by which he charged the fees allowed by Schedule I. Part I., of the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, for investigating title and preparing mortgage. The bill was paid, and a summons was taken out after payment for taxation:—Held, that E. was not entitled to the scale fee for investigating title, as there had been no investigation. Eley, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 905; 37 Ch. D. 40; 57 L. T. 253; 36 W. R. 96.

—— Preparation of Contract—Negotiation—Completion.]—Under the usual order of taxation of costs, charges, and expenses in an administration action, the solicitors sent in a bill of costs for conveyancing work done for the estate made out in the old way. It related to purchases by the trustees, the negotiations and most of the work for which was done before, but which was completed after, the act came into operation. The taxing-master allowed only costs according to the first schedule of the general order. One of the purchases was a purchase back by the trustees of surplus lands taken from them by a railway company, and the title was therefore taken without investigation, except as to a very small piece which had belonged to another owner; the solicitors, though acting for the purchasers, had prepared the contract for sale:—Held, that the scale applied, although part of the work was done before the act; that the title had substantially been investigated as far as was necessary, and therefore Lacey, In re (25 Ch. D. 301) did not apply, but that they were entitled to charge for preparation of the contract in addition to the scale charge, because the scale assumes the contract to be prepared by the vendor's solicitor, and they were entitled to 1 per cent. for negotiating the purchase as well as to the 1½ per cent. for completion. Fleming v. Hardcastle, 52 L. T. 851; 33 W. R. 776.

—— Part of Money on Mortgage.]—When part of the purchase-money is allowed to remain on mortgage of the property sold, the solicitor of the vendor mortgagee cannot charge the scale fees under Schedule I. Part I. of the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, for investigating the mortgagor's title. Glascodine and Carlyle, In re, 52 L. T. 781—C. A.

Deducing Title—Perusing and Completing Conveyance.]—See Harris, In re, post, col. 1629.

—— Searches.]—To entitle a solicitor to the percentage charges under Schedule I. Parts I. and II., of the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, he must have deduced title to the premises, and of such deduction of title, furnishing searches is an essential part. Buckley, In re, Ferguson, Ex parte, 21 L. R., Ir. 392.

Perusing Abstracts.]—Upon the construction of Schedule II. of the general order made in pursuance of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, abstracts of title are not included in the words "deeds, wills, and other documents," the charge for perusing which is therein fixed at 1*s.* per folio; but the old scale of 6*s.* 8*d.* for perusal of every three brief sheets of eight folios each remains unaltered. Parker, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 959; 29 Ch. D. 199; 52 L. T. 686; 33 W. R. 541.

Perusing Conveyance—Partition Action.]—In a partition action an order was made for the sale of the estate and payment of the costs of all parties out of the proceeds. The plaintiff, who was the owner of one-fourth of the estate, had the conduct of the sale, and his solicitor was paid his costs in accordance with r. 2, sub-s. (a), of the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881:—Held, that the solicitors of the defendants, who were the owners of the other three-fourths of the estate, were entitled to be paid the costs of perusing the conveyance, and obtaining its execution by their clients, under r. 2, sub-s. (c). Humphreys v. Jones, 55 L. J., Ch. 1; 31 Ch. D. 30; 53 L. T. 482; 34 W. R. 1—C. A.

Vendor's Solicitor—Costs of Release of Incumbrance.]—The costs of obtaining the release of an outstanding incumbrance on property sold are not covered by the scale charge allowed to the solicitor for a vendor by Schedule I. Part I.

of the general order made under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881. Emanuel, In re, (33 Ch. D. 40), considered. Purcell, In re, 27 L. R., Ir. 375.

Subject to Incumbrances—Scale Charge, how ascertained.]—The property of a company in liquidation was sold by the solicitors of the official liquidator for 24,000*l.* (subject to a mortgage for 900*l.*), and after the satisfaction of the claims of former successive owners a sum of 1,750*l.* remainded for the official liquidator. The sale was confirmed by an order made in the liquidation, and the parties to the conveyance were the company, the official liquidator, the original owners, and certain intermediate purchasers who had claims for unpaid purchase-money. The solicitors on taxation included in their bill of costs scale charges as upon a sale for 24,900*l.* as follows: Negotiating, 102*l.* 5*s.*; deducing title, and completing, including contract, 107*l.* 5*s.* The taxing-master disallowed the negotiating fee, and only allowed the scale charge upon the 1,750*l.* On summons to review taxation:—Held, that the court could look not only at the contract, but at the substance of the transaction, and that, having regard to the whole of the matters with reference to the provisional contract coupled with the order, the liquidator's name was only used for the purpose of convenience, and that the taxing-master's decision was right. Grey's Brewery Co., In re, 56 L. T. 298.

Upon the sale by a trustee in bankruptcy of property belonging to the bankrupt subject to incumbrances, the solicitor of the trustee is entitled to be paid a percentage on the total amount of the purchase-money, and not simply on the value of the equity of redemption. Harris, Ex parte, Gallard, In re, 57 L. J., Q. B. 528; 21 Q. B. D. 38; 59 L. T. 147; 36 W. R. 592; 5 Morrell, 123.

Where property is sold by a second mortgagee to third persons subject to the prior incumbrance, the solicitor acting for the second mortgagee is—under r. 9 of Schedule I. to the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881—entitled in calculating the scale charge for negotiating the sale and deducing title to add the amount of the prior incumbrance to the amount realised from the equity of redemption. Fortescue v. Mercantile Bank of London, 66 L. J., Q. B. 591; [1897] 2 Q. B. 236; 76 L. T. 645; 45 W. R. 529—C. A.

Under Lands Clauses Act.]—Money arising from the sale of land belonging to a corporation, and taken by a railway company under their statutory powers, was reinvested in land under the direction of the court. The solicitor of the corporation charged the ad valorem scale fee prescribed by the rules under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, Schedule I. Part I, "for investigating title and preparing and completing conveyance":—Held, that the exception in Schedule I. Part I. r. 11, which provides that the scale shall not apply in cases of sales under the Lands Clauses Act, or any other private or public act under which the vendor's charges are paid by the purchaser, was not applicable to the case. Merchant Taylors' Co., In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 867; 30 Ch. D. 28; 52 L. T. 775; 33 W. R. 693—C. A.

Held, also, that as the purchaser's solicitor had had to do all the things which he would have had to do in a purchase not under the direction of the court, the case was not taken out of the scale by the fact that, in a purchase under the direction of the court, he did not incur as much responsibility as in a private purchase, and therefore, that the scale fee was properly chargeable. Ib.

The exception contained in r. 2 of Schedule I. Part I., of the general order, whereby in the case of sales under the Lands Clauses Act the scale is rendered inapplicable, extends only to vendors' costs and not to the costs of the purchasers. Stewart, In re, 41 Ch. D. 494; 60 L. T. 737; 37 W. R. 484.

—— Perusal of Deeds.]—Under an order to tax the costs awarded to the owner of lands compulsorily taken by a company, his solicitor is not entitled to 1*s.* per folio for perusing deeds referred to in the abstract of title furnished. The general order made in pursuance of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, Schedule II., does not apply to such taxation. Bann Navigation Act, In re, Olpherts, Ex parte, 17 L. R., Ir. 168.

—— Public Health Act, 1875.]—The exception at the end of r. 11 of the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, excluding the application of the scale of costs "in case of sales under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, or any other private or public act under which the vendor's charges are paid by the purchaser," applies to the case of a sale by agreement by a tenant in fee to a local board for the purposes of the Public Health Act, 1875, although the agreement provides for the payment of costs over and above those covered by s. 82 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845. Burdekin, Benson and Burdekin, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 561; [1895] 2 Ch. 136; 12 R. 243; 72 L. T. 639; 43 W. R. 534—C. A.

—— Election as to Scale.]—See Bridewell Hospital and Metropolitan Board of Works, In re, ante, col. 1618.

Sale by Auction—Some Work done by Surveyor.]—A trust estate in Yorkshire was ordered to be sold by the court, and the costs to be taxed. The appointment of an auctioneer was sanctioned in chambers, and also the appointment of a certain firm of surveyors. The property was sold. The taxing-master allowed a fee to the auctioneer for putting the property up for sale and knocking it down, which, according to the custom of the country, was the manner in which an auctioneer was paid there. He also allowed charges to the surveyors for dividing the property into lots, valuing it, preparing plans, and settling the reserves. The solicitors to the trustees claimed to be entitled to the scale charges allowed by the schedule to the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, for conducting the sale, and also to be allowed the fees which they had paid to the surveyors; the auctioneer's fee they proposed to pay themselves. The taxing-master disallowed the scale charges. The trustees took out a summons to review the taxation:—Held, that the solicitors were not entitled to the scale charges, inasmuch as some of the work which they ought to have done had been done by the surveyors, and their fees paid by the clients. Wood v. Calvert, 55 L. T. 53; 34 W. R. 732.

Property of a lunatic in Lancashire was put up for sale by auction under an order in lunacy, but was not sold. The solicitor charged 16*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* remuneration according to the scale in the order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, on 8,300*l.*, the amount of the reserved prices. He also paid the auctioneer 5*l.* 5*s.*, which was allowed against the estate, and the surveyor's bill of 40*l.* 3*s.* was allowed at 31*l.* 10*s.* against the estate, but the taxing-master disallowed the 16*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*, and only allowed 2*l.* 2*s.* for instructing the auctioneer and surveyor, and 3*l.* 3*s.* for particulars, &c. His reasons were, first, that the solicitor had not in fact conducted the sale, the auctioneer and surveyor having done most of the work and been paid by the client; and secondly, that the scale did not apply, for that a commission had been paid to the auctioneer by the client within the meaning of r. 11 to Part I. of Schedule I. to the general order:—Held, that as the bill of the surveyor contained charges for various things which it was the duty of the person conducting the sale to do, the solicitor had not done the whole of the work for which the ad valorem remuneration was provided, and the scale did not apply. Wilson, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 627; 29 Ch. D. 790; 53 L. T. 406—C. A.

—— Payment to Auctioneer by Purchaser.]—If the purchaser, in pursuance of a condition of sale, pays a fee to the auctioneer, the solicitor is not entitled to the scale fee for conducting a sale by auction. If the solicitor himself pays the auctioneer, the solicitor is entitled to the scale fee. Cholditch v. Jones, 65 L. J., Ch. 83; [1896] 1 Ch. 42; 73 L. T. 528; 44 W. R. 124; 59 J. P. 793.

—— Conducting Sale—No Commission paid by Client to Auctioneer.]—An agreement for sale of certain leasehold property was entered into whereby the purchasers, who were a public body, agreed to pay the vendor's solicitors' preliminary costs, and also the costs of title and conveyance, and the fees of the vendor's surveyor. A surveyor was employed, who, according to the vendor's solicitors' statement, merely valued the property, though it was alleged by the purchasers that he also negotiated the price. The purchasers, who had become owners of the reversion, did not require any abstract or copy of the vendor's lease to be furnished to them on being informed by the vendor's solicitors that the title consisted of the lease only. The purchase was completed, and the purchasers paid the fee of the vendor's surveyor. The vendor's solicitors sent in a bill of costs to the purchasers consisting of two items only, the first being the charge allowed by the scale in Schedule I. Part I. of the general order to the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, for negotiating a sale by private contract, and the second being the charge allowed by the same schedule for deducing title to leasehold property and perusing and completing conveyance. Upon taxation the taxing-master held that the vendor's solicitors were not entitled to costs calculated upon the scale in Schedule I. Part I., but to costs calculated under Schedule II. only:—Held, upon summons to review taxation, that the solicitors were not entitled to the scale charge for negotiating a sale by private contract, as the surveyor's fee was a commission to "an auctioneer or estate or other agent" within Schedule I. Part I. r. 11, of the general order, and that they were not entitled to the scale charge for deducing title and perusing and completing conveyance, as no title was deduced. Harris, In re, 56 L. T. 477.

Property was put up for sale by public auction, and sold in two lots. The auctioneer's commission was paid by the vendor. The solicitor employed by the vendor in connection with the sale, charged the scale fee provided by Part I. of Schedule I. to the general order of August, 1882, under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, for "deducing title," &c.; and he also made various charges for work done by him previous to the sale, for which he claimed to be entitled under clause 2 (c) of the order. The taxing-master allowed the scale fee, but disallowed the other items, considering himself bound by Emanuel, In re (33 Ch. D. 40):—Held, that the solicitor was entitled under clause 2 (c) (in addition to the scale fee for deducing title), to charge in respect of work properly done by him in connection with the sale for which the auctioneer had not been paid. Faulkner, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 1011; 36 Ch. D. 566; 57 L. T. 342; 36 W. R. 59.

On a sale by auction of property in Yorkshire, under an order made in an administration action, the chief clerk, previously to sale, settled a sum for auctioneer's fees. In accordance with the mode of business in Yorkshire the auctioneer merely offered the property for sale, and the solicitor having the conduct of the sale paid all other expenses of the auction, including those of preparing and distributing the particulars and conditions of sale, advertisements, printer's bills, and the costs of lithographed plans:—Held, that under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, general order, Schedule I. Part I. r. 11, the solicitor was not entitled to scale fees for conducting the sale by auction. Sykes, In re, Sykes v. Sykes, 56 L. J., Ch. 238; 56 L. T. 425; 36 W. R. 234.

A solicitor employed in a sale of property by auction, where the auctioneer's commission was paid by the client, delivered a bill, in which he charged the scale fee for conducting the sale, and deducing the title, and mentioned items of solicitor's work not included in the scale fee for deducing the title. The taxing-master disallowed the fee for conducting the sale because of the auctioneer's charges being paid by the client, and did not allow any fee for items mentioned in the bill of solicitor's work not included in the scale fee for deducing the title, on the ground that the bill was made up on a wrong footing, and could not be altered by adding charges:—Held, that the taxing-master was right in disallowing the scale fee for conducting the sale, but that he ought to have allowed the solicitor a quantum meruit for solicitor's work done by him, and mentioned in his bill, and which was not covered by the scale fee for deducing title. Peace and Ellis, In re, 57 L. T. 753; 36 W. R. 61.

Part I. of Schedule I. to the general order of 1882, made in pursuance of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 44), prescribes an ad valorem scale fee for conducting the sale of property by public auction, and r. 11 provides that "the scale for conducting a sale by auction shall apply only in cases where no commission is paid by the client to an auctioneer." Where the auctioneer's commission is paid by the client:—Held, that r. 11 does not deprive the solicitor of all remuneration for work done in respect of the conduct of the sale, but that under the general order, s. 2, sub-s. (c) he is entitled to a quantum meruit for such work, the remuneration to be regulated according to the old system as altered by Schedule II. Faulkner, In re (36 Ch. D. 566) approved. Parker v. Blenkhorn, 58 L. J., Q. B. 209; 14 App. Cas. 1; 59 L. T. 906; 37 W. R. 401—H. L. (E.)

—— "Commission"—Lump Sum.]—"Commission" in r. 11 of Schedule I. Part I. to the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, which provides that the scale for conducting a sale by auction shall apply only in cases where no commission is paid by the client to an auctioneer, includes a lump sum paid as remuneration to the auctioneer. Wilson, In re (29 Ch. D. 790), discussed. Burd v. Burd, 58 L. J., Ch. 170; 40 Ch. D. 628; 60 L. T. 228; 37 W. R. 428.

Where, in accordance with the usual practice in the North of England, a solicitor does all the work in connection with a sale by auction except taking the bids, and the auctioneer is paid a fixed sum for each lot sold, and a fixed sum for each lot unsold, such payments to the auctioneer constitute a "commission" within Part I. r. 11 of Schedule I. of the general order of 1882, and disentitle the solicitor to charge the scale fee allowed by that schedule "for conducting a sale of property by public auction." Drielsma v. Manifold, 63 L. J., Ch. 653; [1894] 3 Ch. 100; 7 R. 368; 71 L. T. 62; 42 W. R. 578—C. A.

—— Payment of Commission.]—Two small fees paid to valuers for reporting as to the sufficiency of the price were not within the provision as to commission. The provision as to commission applies to a sum for which the client is legally liable, although not actually paid, but it only applies to sums paid or payable as part of the negotiation. Macgowan, In re, Macgowan v. Murray, 60 L. J., Ch. 118; [1891] 1 Ch. 105; 63 L. T. 793; 39 W. R. 227—C. A.

S. employed H. as general agent with a view to developing an estate as a building property, on the terms of his having a commission of 2½ per cent. on the purchase-money of all lands sold during his agency, and on the capitalised value of the rents of all leases granted during the same period. An offer was made for purchase at a time when H. was too ill to attend at his office, and the negotiation was conducted by W., the solicitor of S., but H. was consulted repeatedly and gave advice as to the sale, which was ultimately completed. On completion H. was paid 2½ per cent. on the purchase-money. W., in his bill of costs, claimed the scale fee for negotiating the sale, which claim was resisted on the ground that the vendor had paid a commission to an estate agent:—Held, that if H. had not been called in at all in this transaction, the payment of the commission, which would in that case have been a payment entirely in respect of other work, would not have been a payment of commission within the rule, but that as H. had assisted in the negotiation, he was paid for his assistance by the commission, although the commission also covered other work; that a commission, therefore, had been paid within the meaning of the rule, and that the scale fee for negotiation ought not to be allowed. Withall, In re, 61 L. J., Ch. 14; [1891] 3 Ch. 8; 64 L. T. 704; 39 W. R. 529—C. A.

—— Special Condition of Sale—Auctioneer's Fee to be paid by the Purchaser.]—At a sale by auction, one of the conditions of sale provided that the respective purchasers should pay the auctioneer's fee (naming it):—Held, that, as the auctioneer's fee was indirectly "paid by the client" within the meaning of r. 11 of Schedule I. Part I. of the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, the vendor's solicitor was not entitled to charge the scale fee for "conducting" the sale, but only for a quantum meruit. Cholditch v. Jones, 65 L. J., Ch. 83; [1896] 1 Ch. 42; 73 L. T. 528; 44 W. R. 124; 59 J. P. 793.

—— Attempted Sale—Subsequent Sale.]—Where after an attempted sale by auction the sale is indefinitely postponed, the costs in respect of the attempted sale must be taxed under r. 2 (c) of the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881. If the same solicitors afterwards were employed to effect a sale they would be paid on a quantum meruit, or otherwise the costs allowed would be deducted from scale costs. Schedule I. part I. r. 2 of the same order does not apply to such a case. Smith, Pinsent & Co., In re, 59 L. J., Ch. 590; 44 Ch. D. 303; 38 W. R. 685.

Schedule I. Part I. r. 2 of the general order to the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, applies only to cases where the attempted ineffectual sale and the subsequent effectual sale therein mentioned are conducted by the same solicitors. If there is a change of solicitors after an attempted ineffectual sale, the taxation of the costs of such sale must be made under general order, r. 2 (c). Dean, In re, Ward v. Holmes, 55 L. J., Ch. 420; 32 Ch. D. 209; 54 L. T. 266.

—— Scale of Charges—Property sold in Lots.]—Where property sold by auction is divided into different lots, the scale of charges to be paid to the vendor's solicitor, under the general order made under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, Schedule I. Part I. is to be calculated upon the aggregate sum realised by the whole of the property, and not upon the value of each different lot, although the lots be held by the vendor under different titles and be sold to different persons. Watson, Ex parte, Onward Building Society, In re, 62 L. J., Q. B. 80; [1893] 1 Q. B. 16; 5 R. 19; 68 L. T. 443; 41 W. R. 107; 57 J. P. 439.

Re-sale of Part prior to Completion.]—Where a purchaser of land re-sells a part before completion, the purchaser's solicitor is entitled to charge the scale fee on the whole of the original purchase-money, if the purchase and re-sale are, in substance, separate and distinct transactions. Read, In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 831; [1894] 3 Ch. 238; 8 R. 489; 71 L. T. 189; 42 W. R. 601.

Under the like circumstances, the mere fact that the abstract delivered to the sub-purchaser is only a copy of the abstract delivered to the original purchaser, with the addition of the contract for the original sale and purchase, does not per se disentitle the solicitor to the original purchaser to charge the scale fee allowed to a vendor's solicitor, on the ground that there has been no deducing of title. Ib.

"Law Stationer's Charge."]—The cost of a plan, copied by a law stationer on a conveyance, is a "law stationer's charge" within the meaning of clause 4 of the general order made under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881. Ib.

Purchase of Plots of Land—Different Vendors—Mortgage.]—A solicitor acted for the purchaser of several small lots of land, all purchased at the same time, though not from the same vendor, at prices varying from 100*l.* to 10*l.* The lots were comprised in one mortgage, but each had a separate and distinct title, a separate abstract for each being delivered :—Held, that the solicitor was entitled, under r. 8 in Schedule I., Part I. of the rules under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, to the minimum charge of 5*l.* or 3*l.* for each lot, and was not restricted to one charge for the business as a whole. Margetts, In re, [1896] 2 Ch. 263 ; 74 L. T. 309 ; 44 W. R. 462.

γ. Leases.

Prior Agreement for—Scale Fee.]—The scale fee prescribed by Part II. of Schedule I. to the general order of August, 1882, under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, to be paid to a lessor's solicitor "for preparing, settling, and completing lease and counterpart," includes the solicitor's remuneration for the preparation of a prior agreement for the lease, and the solicitor cannot charge for the preparation of the agreement in addition to the scale fee. Emanuel, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 710 ; 33 Ch. D. 40 ; 55 L. T. 79 ; 34 W. R. 613 ; 51 J. P. 22—C. A.

Negotiations — "Business connected with Lease."]—An agreement for a lease provided that the lessor should at his own expense do certain repairs to the property and deliver possession to the lessee as soon as they were done, which was to be not later than a certain day, time to be of the essence of the contract, and that, on the lessor complying with these conditions, the lessor should grant, and the lessee accept, a lease in the form thereto annexed :—Held, that these stipulations did not relate to collateral matters, so as to make the agreement something more than a step towards the granting of the lease, but related only to the terms on which the lease was to be granted, and that the preparation of the agreement was "business connected with" the lease within the meaning of r. 2 of the general order, and could not be separately charged for. Ib.

The scale fee fixed by the orders made under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, "for preparing, settling, and completing lease and counterpart," does not allow any additional fee to be charged in respect of the negotiations which lead up to, or for the preparation and completion of, the agreement which precedes the lease. Field, In re (29 Ch. D. 608), and Emanuel, In re (33 Ch. D. 40), approved. Savery v. Enfield Local Board, 62 L. J., Ch. 674 ; [1893] A. C. 218 ; 1 R. 160 ; 68 L. T. 722 ; 42 W. R. 33 ; 57 J. P. 581—H. L. (E.)

Having regard to r. 2, the amount fixed by Schedule I., Part II., includes the charges for negotiations prior to granting a lease. Field, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 661 ; 29 Ch. D. 608 ; 52 L. T. 480 ; 33 W. R. 553 ; 49 J. P. 613—C. A.

The remuneration of a lessor's solicitor prescribed in the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, Schedule I., Part II., does not cover negotiations carried on by the solicitor as to the letting of the property with persons other than the person to whom the lease is ultimately granted. The solicitor is entitled to remuneration for such negotiations as business "which is not in fact completed" under r. 2 (c) of the same general order. Field, In re (29 Ch. D. 608), and Emanuel, In re (33 Ch. D. 40), distinguished. Marten, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 478 ; 41 Ch. D. 381 ; 60 L. T. 555 ; 37 W. R. 497—C. A.

Lease or Agreement for Lease.]—"Agreements for leases" in Schedule I., Part II., means agreements for leases intended to be relied on as regulating the tenancy without any formal lease, and the scale fee is payable in respect of them. Emanuel, In re, supra.

An agreement in writing for a tenancy of less than three years' duration is either a lease or an agreement for a lease within the meaning of Schedule I., Part II., to the general order made in pursuance of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881. Negus, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 79 ; [1895] 1 Ch. 73 ; 13 R. 85 ; 71 L. T. 716 ; 43 W. R. 68.

Building Lease—What is.]—Lease to a race committee of 135 acres, with a cottage thereon, for 99 years, at the yearly rent of 237*l.*, with a covenant by the lessees to expend upon the premises within twelve months 1,000*l.* at least, in good and sufficient improvements of a substantial and permanent character :—Held, not to be a building lease within the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881. Hogan's Estate, In re, [1894] 1 Ir. R. 503.

Lease of a large dwelling-house, offices, and garden of about an acre in extent, for 99 years, at the yearly rent of 40*l.*, with covenants by the lessee to expend 300*l.* at least in good and sufficient improvements of a substantial and permanent character, and to keep the demised premises in good and substantial repair, with all buildings or fixtures thereon, and all gates, walls and improvements then being or thereafter to be executed during the term. The walls of the house were sound, but the roof, floors and ceilings were in bad condition, and would require at least the amount covenanted to be expended, and which the lessee proposed to expend thereon, to put the house in sound habitable repair :—Held, that such lease was a building lease within the general order. Ib.

In determining whether a lease is or is not a building lease within the general order, regard must be had to the circumstances of the contract, the subject-matter of the demise, and the nature and extent of the expenditure to be made. Ib.

—— "Substantial performance" of Work.]—Where a building agreement was entered into, and the general form of the lease settled, prior to the coming into operation of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, the lessor's solicitor is not entitled to charge the scale fee for leases executed after the coming into operation of the act, although the form of lease, as settled, does not contain the names of the parties, the parcels, the plan, and the terms of a restrictive covenant. Hickley, In re (54 L. J., Ch. 608), applied. Welby v. Still, 64 L. J., Ch. 495 ; [1895] 1 Ch. 524 ; 13 R. 165 ; 72 L. T. 108.

Sale by way of Underlease.]—A sale of leasehold property, which is effected by means of an underlease for the residue of a long term less the last three days, is not a "conveyance or lease" within the meaning of r. 5 of the rules applicable to Part II. of Schedule I. of the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881 (so as to entitle the solicitor having the conduct of the business both to a remuneration in respect of the rent, and also to a remuneration in respect of the money payment or premium). Webb, In re, Still v. Webb, 66 L. J., Ch. 163 ; [1897] 1 Ch. 144 ; 75 L. T. 478 ; 45 W. R. 170.

If such a sale is within the provisions entitling the solicitor to charge according to scale at all, it is within Part I. of Schedule I., relating to sales, purchases and mortgages; but whether it is not "business the remuneration for which is not hereinbefore, or in Schedule I. hereto, prescribed" within clause 2 (c) of the general order (so that the remuneration is according to the old system as altered by Schedule II.), quære. Ib.

In Consideration of Rent and Premium—Negotiation Fee.]—In the case of a lease granted partly in consideration of a premium and partly of a rent, the lessor's solicitor is not entitled under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, general order, Schedule I., Part II., r. 5, to charge, in addition to the scale fee on the rent and the fee for deducing title in respect of the premium, a further fee for negotiation. Horn and Francis, In re, 66 L. J., Ch. 15; [1896] 2 Ch. 797; 75 L. T. 370; 45 W. R. 72.

—— Value of Shares.]—A firm of solicitors were employed by a lessor to prepare for him a lease of certain property for twenty-one years to a company, the consideration for the lease being a rent of 80*l.*, and the issue of 400 shares of the nominal value of 10*l.* None of the company's shares had been sold, so that no market value had been placed upon them; and 200 of the 400 shares had not been issued. The solicitors charged the scale fee on the rent of 80*l.*, and also the scale fee for deducing title, perusing and completing the deed as upon a premium of 4,000*l.*, the amount of the nominal value of the 400 shares:—Held, that they were not entitled to make the latter charge, as the value of the shares could not be estimated, and r. 5, Part II., Schedule I., of the Remuneration Order, 1882, did not apply to such a case. Hasties and Crawfurd, In re, 36 W. R. 572.

—— Minimum Fee.]—Under the joint operation of Part I., r. 8, and Part II., r. 5 of Schedule I. to the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, the lessor's solicitor is entitled in the case of a lease at a premium, to the scale remuneration, carrying a minimum fee of 5*l.* or 3*l.*, as the case may be, in respect of the premium, in addition to the scale remuneration in respect of the rent. Hellard and Bewes, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 550; [1896] 2 Ch. 229; 74 L. T. 457; 44 W. R. 475.

A lease was granted for a term of ninety years from September, 1883, in consideration of a rent of 50*l.* and a premium of 4,400*l.* No title was deduced. The lessor's solicitor, in his bill of costs, charged a scale fee of 14*l.* in respect of the rent, and a scale fee of 42*l.* in respect of the premium. The taxing-master disallowed the 42*l.* On a summons to review taxation:—Held, that the direction in r. 5 that (in addition to the scale fee for the rent) "there shall be paid a further sum equal to the remuneration on a purchase at a price equal to" the premium, was not meant to narrow the application of the rule only to a case in which, if the transaction had been a purchase at the price of the premium, the solicitor could have claimed the scale fee; and consequently, that the 42*l.* must be allowed. Robson, In re, 59 L. J., Ch. 627; 45 Ch. D. 71; 63 L. T. 372; 38 W. R. 556.

Lease at Rack Rent—Percentage.]—The 2*l.* 10*s.* scale fee in respect of each 100*l.* of rent exceeding 100*l.* and not exceeding 500*l.* allowed to the lessor's solicitor in respect of leases at a rack rent by the first scale in Part II. of Schedule I. of the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, is not a percentage fee, and is only payable in respect of each full 100*l.* of rent. The proper fee under this scale in respect of a rental of 350*l.* is therefore 12*l.* 10*s.*, and not 13*l.* 15*s.*, as no charge can be made in respect of the odd 50*l.* McGarel, In re, 66 L. J., Ch. 185; [1897] 1 Ch. 400; 76 L. T. 70; 45 W. R. 321—C. A.

δ. Mortgages.

Negotiating Fee.]—A solicitor mentioned to a borrower the name of a client of his as likely to lend. A mortgage was arranged without further action on the part of the solicitor, who then acted for both parties in the matter of the mortgage:—Held, that the solicitor was not entitled to a negotiating fee. Eley, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 905; 37 Ch. D. 40; 57 L. T. 253; 36 W. R. 96.

"Perusing" Title Deeds.]—A solicitor making advances to a client upon the security of real property and perusing for that purpose the title-deeds of such property is not entitled to charge at the rate of 1*s.* per folio "for perusing" under Schedule II. of the general order of August, 1882, made in pursuance of the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881. Robertson, In re, 19 Q. B. D. 1; 56 L. T. 859; 35 W. R. 833.

Investigating Title—Further Charges.]—The late Earl of A. mortgaged his life interest in the family estates to the E. Company for 192,000*l.* The trustees of the family estates, in exercise of a power conferred upon them by special act of parliament, mortgaged the fee-simple to the E. Company for 232,000*l.* for the purpose of paying off the debts of the late earl, and the previous mortgage was paid off out of this sum, the balance of 40,000*l.* only being actually advanced to the trustees. The same solicitor acted for the mortgagees on both occasions:—Held, that the statutory mortgage was not a further charge within r. 10 of Part I. of Schedule I. to the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, and that the solicitor was entitled to the scale fee for investigating the title in respect of the full amount of the mortgage. Aylesford (Earl) v. Poulett (Earl), 60 L. J., Ch. 204; [1891] 1 Ch. 248; 64 L. T. 336; 39 W. R. 241—C. A.

"Deducing Title"—Leaseholds—Abstract of Title only setting out Leases.]—On a mortgage of leasehold property, the mortgagor's solicitor, by delivering an abstract of title which consists only of a statement of the leases under which the mortgagor holds, does not "deduce" title within the meaning of Schedule I., Part I. of the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, so as to entitle him to the scale fee provided by that order. Wellby v. Still, 63 L. J., Ch. 931: [1894] 3 Ch. 641; 8 R. 658; 71 L. T. 426; 43 W. R. 73.

"Mortgage Completed."]—Per Kekewich, J.: A deed whereby a company conveys its property to trustees to secure to the holders of a proposed issue of debentures the amount of their advances, though no debentures are issued, nor is any money raised thereon, is a mortgage. Per the Court of Appeal: Whether such a deed is or is not a mortgage—which, semble, it is not—it is not a "completed mortgage" within the meaning of clause 2 (a) of the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, but is a "transaction not, in fact, completed" under sub-clause (c); and, consequently, the solicitor, who has on behalf of the trustees deduced title and prepared the deed, is not entitled, as mortgagee's solicitor, to the scale fee under Schedule I., Part I. of the Order, but only to costs in respect of the work actually done under Schedule II. Bircham & Co., In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 768; [1895] 2 Ch. 786; 12 R. 443; 73 L. T. 129; 43 W. R. 673—C. A.

Scale Fee — Charges Connected with Loan—Past Advance.]—The word "loan" in Schedule I., Part I. of the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, means "mortgage," and does not imply that there must necessarily be a fresh advance on the occasion of a mortgage. Accordingly, where a mortgage is effected by a solicitor to secure a past debt, the scale fee applies. Aylesford v. Poulett ([1891] 1 Ch. 248) applied. D'Arcy to White, 31 L. R. Ir. 142.

b. In other Cases.

Journeys and Attendances — Country Solicitor.]—Upon a summons by a solicitor for an order directing the taxing-master to review his taxation of a bill of costs:—Held, that the journeys of a country solicitor to town to attend counsel and otherwise to conduct the proceedings in an action ought to be allowed, where the solicitor had authority from his client to make these charges, but that such journeys to town ought not to be allowed simply on the principle that the country solicitor would probably be better acquainted with the subject-matter than his London agent. Foster, In re (8 Ch. D. 598), dissented from. Storer, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 872; 26 Ch. D. 189; 50 L. T. 583; 32 W. R. 767.

Upon a summons by a solicitor for an order directing the taxing-master to review his taxation of a bill of costs as between solicitor and client:—Held, that the special fees and expenses of a country solicitor should be allowed in respect of attendances for consultation with counsel, and otherwise for the purpose of conducting proceedings in Dublin, when the solicitor having local knowledge in connection with the matter had been requested by his clients (a board of guardians) to attend personally in Dublin. Cramsie & Greer, In re, [1894] 1 Ir. R. 135.

Semble, that a country solicitor may contract with his client for special remuneration for his personal attendance in Dublin on the trial of an action or on a law argument. Such contract must be clearly shown to have been entered into by the client with full knowledge of its effect, and to be in itself just and reasonable. New Ross Union to Colfer, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 118.

Where it is the usage of the profession that certain business should be intrusted to an agent in London, a country solicitor will not be allowed to charge for his attendance in London, to perform that business, although his client has requested his attendance, unless the solicitor has first explained to his client, that, by the usage of the profession, such attendance is considered to be unnecessary. The comparison of an abstract of title with the title-deeds is business within this rule, and a country solicitor will not be allowed to charge for his personal attendance in London, in respect of such business. Alsop v. Oxford (Lord), 1 Myl. & K. 564; 2 L. J., Ch. 174.

Generally, country solicitors are not allowed the costs of a journey to London to examine abstracts there, unless there be some specialty. Tryon, In re, 7 Beav. 496.

A considerable portion of a charge for attendance of a solicitor in town at the request of his client disallowed, on the ground that the solicitor had failed to prove that the whole time was required for the business. Pender, In re, 10 Beav. 390.

A country solicitor personally attending an appeal instead of employing his London agent, will be allowed the additional charges and expenses thereby occasioned. Foster, In re, Dickens, Ex parte, 8 Ch. D. 598; 26 W. R. 915.

Charges by a country solicitor, for attending the cause in London, to be allowed in some cases; but the circumstance of their being undertaken by the direction of the client, is not alone a sufficient ground for allowing them, as the solicitor himself is better able to judge of their necessity. Crossley v. Parker, 1 Jac. & Walk. 460.

A solicitor attending on a record for trial at assizes in a county where he does not usually practise is entitled upon taxation between solicitor and client, to 2*l.* 2*s.* for each day necessarily occupied, irrespectively of the number of days the cases may be actually at hearing, or of its being settled without a trial. The allowances Nos. 100 and 101 in the schedule to the general rules of 1854 as between solicitor and client, are not altered by the orders as to costs under the Judicature Act. M'Namara v. Malone, 18 L. R. Ir. 269.

—— When Solicitor is Party to the Action.]—An attorney who is party to a suit is not entitled to charge a guinea for attending the trial, though he acts as his own attorney, unless it appears that it was necessary that he should attend in person. Leaver v. Whalley, 2 D. P. C. 80.

—— At Client's Residence.]—A solicitor must produce a special authority for any attendance by him upon a client at the residence of the latter where correspondence would have sufficed. A general authority so to visit is insufficient. Mortimer, In re, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 96; 18 W. R. 367.

—— Into Country.]—A solicitor acting for a third mortgagee, negotiated for a transfer of the first mortgage, and had proceeded so far as to send the drafts. He took a journey into the country to complete the matter, which proved fruitless; and having previously received an intimation that the second mortgagee had already obtained a transfer of the first mortgage, the costs of the journey were, on taxation, disallowed, on the ground that, after that intimation, he ought to have obtained his client's sanction before incurring the expense. Price, In re, 9 Beav. 234.

—— Abroad.]—Costs of a journey to Paris to obtain the execution of a deed disallowed, beyond the expense of doing it through an agent. Bevan, In re, 20 Beav. 146.

A solicitor had a retainer to act generally for a company, and also a special retainer to conduct a chancery suit on behalf of the company. Being employed by another client to go to America, he collected information on behalf of the company in furtherance of their suit, but without special instructions from the company to do so. On his return to England, he reported to the company what he had done, and they made use of the information he had obtained. He afterwards took three journeys to Paris to conduct negotiations for a compromise of the same suit, without instructions from the company, but with the knowledge of some of the directors, and on two of them he was accompanied by the chairman :—Held, that, under the special circumstances of the case, the solicitor was entitled to charge the company for his professional services in America, and also for his professional services and expenses on his journeys to Paris. Snell, In re, 5 Ch. D. 815 ; 36 L. T. 534 ; 25 W. R. 736—C. A.

—— When allowed between Party and Party.]—Where the taxing-officer has on party and party taxation allowed a sum in respect of an attendance, he is not justified in allowing a further charge in respect of the same attendance against the client. Barnhill's Estate, In re, 29 L. R., Ir. 396.

—— Evidence of.]—On taxation, as between solicitor and client, it is not necessary that the solicitor should prove attendances on his client by contemporaneous entries in his books, provided that he give other satisfactory evidence thereof. Bray Electric Tramway, In re, 23 L. R., Ir. 116.

—— Form of Item.]—A charge in a solicitor's bill "for attending a great many times" is too vague, and on taxation the charge will be disallowed. Pender, In re, 10 Beav. 390.

Counsel—Number of.]—Upon the taxation of costs, even as between solicitor and client, the rule is to allow only two counsel, or under special circumstances three. Downing College Case, 3 Myl. & C. 474.

Under a reference to the master to tax costs as between solicitor and client, he disallowed the fees to two out of five counsel, who appeared at the hearing :—Held, that the master was right. Att.-Gen. v. Vigors, 7 L. J., Ch. 214 ; 2 Jur. 508.

In the taxation of costs as between solicitor and client, the taxing-master had disallowed the costs of two counsel in several applications to the court. The master having used his discretion, and not proceeded on any general principles, a petition to review the taxation was dismissed with costs. Friend v. Solly, 10 Beav. 329 ; 11 Jur. 958.

The solicitor for the plaintiffs employed three counsel (two of whom were queen's counsel) to appear for his clients at the hearing of a cause ; and the master, in taxing the solicitor's bill as between solicitor and client, under an order obtained by one of the plaintiffs, disallowed the fees of the second counsel. The court referred it back to the master to review the report, there being nothing to show that it was unnecessary to employ more than two counsel. Wastell v. Leslie, 14 Sim. 84 ; 13 L. J., Ch. 368 ; 8 Jur. 1001.

In the absence of special circumstances, counsel allowed in a divisional court will be allowed in the court of appeal. Barnhill's Estate, In re, 29 L. R., Ir. 396.

—— Solicitor not informing Client of Unusual Expense.]—The rule laid down in Blyth and Fanshawe, In re (10 Q. B. D. 207), applies to the costs of employing a third counsel on the hearing of an appeal, the expense being an unusual one. Therefore, even if a solicitor has obtained his client's sanction to the employment of a third counsel on an appeal, the costs will not be allowed on taxation between solicitor and client, unless the solicitor has also explained to the client that the costs will probably not be allowed as between party and party, and that, even if he succeeds on his appeal, he may have to pay the costs of the third counsel himself. Broad, In re, 54 L. J., Q. B. 573 ; 15 Q. B. D. 420 ; 52 L. T. 888—C. A. Affirming 33 W. R. 749.

A brief to a fourth counsel at the trial of an action will be allowed against the client where special instructions have been given by the client to employ such fourth counsel, but not otherwise. Lynch v. Chance, 30 L. R., Ir. 278—C. A.

—— Disallowed between Party and Party.]—Primâ facie the costs of counsel disallowed between party and party should not be allowed as between solicitor and client. Barnhill's Estate, In re, 29 L. R., Ir. 396.

—— Fees paid to.]—An attorney is not entitled to charge his client with fees paid to counsel retained by the desire of his client on the trial of a cause before the under-sheriff, unless he expressly informed him that such fees would not be allowed on the taxation of costs against the opposite party. Fox v. Cooper, 2 Q. B. 937 ; 6 Jur. 128.

The special allowances and scale of fees mentioned in Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-s. 48, are applicable to all taxations, whether in an action in the supreme court, or under the common order, or under a special order obtained by a client against his solicitor under the jurisdiction given by the Solicitors Act, 1843. But Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-s. 48, does not prevent the client from giving the solicitor authority, which may be expressed or implied, to employ a particular leader, and to give him such special fees by way of refresher or otherwise, though of far larger amount than the maximum fixed by sub-s. 48, as may be necessary to secure his services. And such authority having been shown by the evidence to have been clearly and distinctly given by the clients (a board of directors) to their solicitor :—Held, that the taxing-master was not precluded from allowing more than the maximum scale fee fixed by sub-s. 48, and that he must exercise his discretion as to the quantum, having regard to the authority given by the clients to their solicitor. Harrison, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 768 ; 33 Ch. D. 52 ; 55 L. T. 72 ; 34 W. R. 645 ; 50 J. P. 372—C. A.

Unpaid counsel's fees cannot be recovered by a solicitor against his client. Holmes v. Penny, 9 Ex. 584 ; 2 C. L. R. 1004 ; 23 L. J., Ex. 132 ; 2 W. R. 256.

—— Fees for Consultations.]—Although the case was one of very great magnitude and complication, and occupied twenty-nine days, the court declined to interfere with the discretion of the taxing-master in disallowing extra fees paid by the solicitor to his counsel for consulations. Harrison, In re, supra.

Costs of a consultation between a new junior and the former junior, who had been promoted, allowed in a taxation as between solicitor and client. Lucas v. Peacock, 8 Beav. 1.

The expression "costs of the suit as between solicitor and client" means such costs as the client would have to pay to his solicitor under the technical "costs of the suit." Where, therefore, a junior counsel requests and obtains a consultation with his leader in it, in order to settle the frame of the bill, the costs of that consultation must be allowed as between solicitor and client without reference to the result of the suit, or the fact whether or not the advice of the queen's counsel was acted upon. Foster v. Davies, 32 Beav. 624; 2 N. R. 350; 33 L. J., Ch. 185; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 741; 8 L. T. 626; 11 W. R. 813.

—— Refresher Fees.]—There is no recognised rule that where special fees have been paid to the leader the fees paid to his juniors must be according to the same rate; and, accordingly, in the absence of proof that the clients had authorised payment of special refresher fees to the junior counsel proportionate to those paid to the leader, the disallowance by the taxing-master of special refresher fees to the junior counsel was upheld. Harrison, In re, supra.

A refresher fee paid by a solicitor to counsel on an interlocutory motion will not be allowed against the client on solicitor and client taxation. Lynch v. Chance, 30 L. R. Ir. 278—C. A.

—— Case for Opinion.]—A fee to counsel for advising as to whether an ejectment will lie, and who are the necessary parties to be made plaintiffs, may in a proper case be allowed as between solicitor and client. McNamara v. Malone, 18 L. R., Ir. 269.

—— Settling Affidavit.]—Fee of counsel for settling a special affidavit for leave to amend disallowed in a taxation between solicitor and client. Pender, In re, 10 Beav. 390.

—— Counsel at Chambers.]—The Supreme Court Special Allowances, r. 14, that "as to counsel attending at judges' chambers, no costs thereof shall in any case be allowed unless the judge certifies it to be a proper case for counsel to attend," applies to taxation of costs between solicitor and client as well as between party and party. Chapman, In re, 52 L. J., Q. B. 75; 10 Q. B. D. 54; 47 L. T. 426—C. A. Affirming 31 W. R. 266.

The rule in question is made for the protection of clients, and the fact that the client has himself expressly authorised the attendance of counsel ought not of itself to induce the judge to certify that the case is a proper one for counsel to attend. Ib. See also Holmes v. Penny, 9 Ex. 584; 2 C. L. R. 1004; 23 L. J., Ex. 132; 2 W. R. 256.

Letters and Posting.]—Letters written by a solicitor to his client which are not properly required for the interests of the client in the business for which the solicitor is engaged will not be allowed on taxation. Brady, In re, 15 W. R. 632.

A country solicitor, with an office in town, conducting personally the business which would ordinarily be transacted by a London agent, is not entitled to charge for letters passing between the two offices. Harle, In re, 19 L. T. 305; 17 W. R. 21.

A solicitor is not entitled to charge a profit upon the addressing and posting of documents for his client. Ditton, Ex parte, Woods, In re, 13 Ch. D. 318; 42 L. T. 161; 28 W. R. 402—C. A.

Case for Opinion.]—On taxation between solicitor and client, the costs of a case laid before counsel for an opinion on a point decided by the decree disallowed, on the ground that the solicitor was not justified in endeavouring to reopen the question. Newby v. Drew, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 24.

Costs of a case laid before counsel as to a supplemental bill allowed as between solicitor and client. Lucas v. Peacock, 8 Beav. 1.

Affidavit.]—A solicitor is entitled to charge for the costs of the affidavit made by him on delivering up the papers under an order for taxation. Catlin, In re, 18 Beav. 514; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 669; 9 W. R. 756.

Abstract of Title.]—According to the practice under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 56, in cases of sale by the court, an abstract of title is submitted to counsel to prepare the conditions of sale. Counsel having made certain queries upon four sheets of the abstract, the vendor's solicitor charged 1*l.* 1*s.* for perusing the same, and 4*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* for a second fair copy of the abstract for the purchaser's solicitor. The taxing-master disallowed the first item, and reduced the second to 13*s.* 4*d.*, which he allowed for recopying the four spoiled sheets of the abstract, to render it fit to be sent to the purchaser's solicitor. On a petition to review:—Held, that the taxing-master was right, and that they were matters entirely within the discretion of the taxing-master. Rumsey, Ex parte, 21 Beav. 40.

A second fair copy of abstract is not allowed, except under special circumstances, as where the notes of counsel render the copy laid before him wholly unfit to go to the purchaser. Ib.

The solicitor usually charges for drawing the conditions of sale, though they are really drawn by counsel, and he is thereby remunerated for the trouble of answering counsel's queries. Ib.

The costs of an abstract of a deed prepared to accompany a case submitted to counsel disallowed under the circumstances. Pender, In re, 10 Beav. 390.

The proper charges in respect of an abstract of title are 6*s.* 8*d.* per sheet for drawing and 3*s.* 4*d.* for copying. Broadhurst v. Darlington, 2 D. P. C. 38.

Where a vendor's attorney disclosed outstanding terms upon an abstract, although a marketable title might have been shown by taking it up at a subsequent date:—Held, that upon taxation of the attorney's costs he was entitled to be paid his charges incurred in getting in the outstanding terms. Quicke, Ex parte, 2 Scott, 184; 1 Hodges, 202.

Copies.]—Copy of a correspondence between the parties furnished to counsel as instructions for a bill, and partially inserted therein, disallowed on a taxation as between solicitor and client. Stephens v. Newborough (Lord), 11 Beav. 403; 17 L. J., Ch. 332; 12 Jur. 319.

In instructing counsel to prepare pleadings, &c., a solicitor is bound to send only copies of deeds, and not the original deeds, which act would be a violation of his duty to his client. The costs of such copies will be allowed on taxation. Beamish, In re, 19 W. R. 740.

An attorney was not allowed his charges for attested copies of a will, which, by the conditions of sale, were to be given at the vendor's expense, such a condition not being unusual. Quicke, Ex parte, supra.

A solicitor, in carrying in a state of facts to obtain the master's approval of a contract to purchase, appended a long schedule thereto of the parcels proposed to be purchased. The taxing-master disallowed the charge for drawing, and only allowed for copying such schedule:—Held, that such disallowance was proper, although the master in ordinary had allowed attendances upon a number of warrants proportioned to the length of the state of facts, including the schedule:—Held, also, that the allowances in respect of these attendances were properly considered by the taxing-master as a compensation for other business actually transacted, and in respect of which he disallowed the charges. Jones v. Lewis, 1 De G. & Sm. 245; 11 Jur. 511.

Briefs.]—A petition was presented to compromise a suit which it was supposed would be unopposed, but, after the delivery of the briefs, an opposition was threatened. Further briefs being thereupon delivered, the costs thereof were allowed on taxation as between solicitor and client. Stephens v. Newborough (Lord), 11 Beav. 403; 17 L. J., Ch. 332; 12 Jur. 319.

The master having disallowed half the costs of preparing briefs, on the ground that the plaintiff's attorney had prepared them with unnecessary haste, the court declined to interfere. Bucknall v. Boybell, 7 Scott, 171.

Perusals.]—Taxation of costs between solicitor and client; solicitor's fee for perusing and signing approbation of a draft deed submitted for approbation of his client, who was to be an executing party. Westby v. Greene, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 449.

Under an order for taxation, 2*l.* 2*s.* was allowed to the solicitor then acting for the client for perusing the bill of his predecessor, it having led to a compromise. Catlin, In re, 18 Beav. 510.

Mortgagee's solicitor, at the time of the loan, perused the title-deeds, and was paid the costs therefor by the mortgagor. After the decree for sale in the mortgage cause, the same solicitor prepared the abstract of title under the 138th General Order, which, though deducing the title to the time of sale, did not contain any new deeds. The master having refused to allow the costs of perusing the deeds, the court refused to send back his taxation. Scott v. King, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 483.

Biddings were opened upon an advanced price on payment by the applicant of the costs properly incurred of the purchaser:—Held, that the costs of perusing the abstract and of the examination of the title, prior to the first purchase being confirmed, ought not to be allowed on taxation. Raymond v. Lakeman, 34 Beav. 584.

Unusual Costs—Shorthand Notes—Communication to Client.]—Where a solicitor proposes to incur unusual expense in the course of an action, such as taking shorthand notes of the evidence or procuring the attendance of experts and scientific witnesses, it is his duty to point out to his client that such expense might not be allowed on taxation as between party and party, and might therefore have to be borne by the client whatever might be the result of the trial. Therefore, where the solicitor had omitted such duty, he was not allowed on taxation as between solicitor and client the costs of shorthand notes of the evidence, although the client authorised him to employ a shorthand writer to take such notes and used and otherwise availed himself of them after they had been so taken. Blyth and Fanshawe, In re, Wells, Ex parte, 52 L. J., Q. B. 186; 10 Q. B. D. 207; 47 L. T. 610; 31 W. R. 283—C. A.

Money out of Pocket.]—Under the usual taxation order, a solicitor is entitled, in the absence of negligence or improper conduct, to be allowed all moneys paid out of pocket. Page, In re, 32 Beav. 487; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1116; 8 L. T. 231; 11 W. R. 584.

Where, upon the sale of some property, an auctioneer employed by the solicitor deducted the amount of his commission, which was at the usual rate:—Held, that, in the absence of improper conduct, the solicitor was entitled to be allowed the amount in account, although the rate of commission was higher than that allowed in chambers. Ib.

Where a party sues in formâ pauperis, his solicitor is entitled to charge disbursements for paper and parchment, but not for law stationers' charges for copying. Holmes v. Penny, 9 Ex. 584; 2 C. L. R. 1004; 23 L. J., Ex. 132; 2 W. R. 256.

Where a solicitor makes against his client any charge not authorised in the usual and regular mode of proceeding, the burden of the proof is upon the solicitor; and in a case where for the interest of a client the solicitor had advanced money to put in the answer of a co-defendant, it was disallowed on the ground that it was not clearly made out that the client authorised or acquiesced in it. Pender, In re, 10 Beav. 390.

Expedition money, paid by a solicitor to a stationer or writing clerk employed in the registrar's office, disallowed upon taxation. A gratuity paid to the clerks of the accountant-general's office was disallowed to the solicitor on taxation, as was also a fee paid upon bespeaking an order for transfer which could not be made available. Bedson, In re, 9 Beav. 187; 15 L. J., Ch. 189; 10 Jur. 213.

Costs of registry searches, although directed by counsel, refused, under the circumstances, to be allowed the solicitor on a taxation between solicitor and client. Langford v. Mahony, 3 Jo. & Lat. 97.

Costs of obtaining Act of Parliament.]—An act of a railway company provided that the company should pay the costs of obtaining the act and preparatory thereto:—Held, that the solicitor's costs as to parts of the original scheme, which were abandoned before the passing of the act, were properly included. Tillcard, In re, 32 L. J., Ch. 765; 8 L. T. 587; 11 W. R. 764—L.J.

14. Costs of Taxation.

Deductions of One-sixth.]—On taxation of costs, the court cannot make the attorney pay the costs of the taxation, unless for improper items in the bill, amounting to a sixth. Yea v. Yea, 2 Anstr. 494.

Where bill reduced one-sixth part, solicitor pays costs of taxation. Hatherway, Ex parte, 2 Madd. 329.

In a suit for the administration of the estate of a testator, a solicitor carried in a claim for his bills of costs, which, on taxation, were reduced by more than one-sixth:—Held, that the solicitor ought to pay the costs of the taxation. Silvertop v. Ramsay, 1 Beav. 434.

Where in a matter relating to an infant, upon a reference to the master to ascertain what lien the solicitor of the father of the infant had upon the several documents, &c., in his possession, for costs incurred in the lifetime of the father, the costs claimed were reduced upon taxation by more than one-half:—Held, that the solicitor should pay his own costs of the taxation, as well as those incurred by the guardian of the infant in reducing the amount of the costs claimed. Lawler, In re, Fl. & K. 73; 3 Ir. Eq. R. 102.

Where under an order referring it to the master to tax bills of costs furnished by the solicitor in pursuance of the statute, and staying an action which had been brought by him at law for recovery of the same, the client undertaking to pay whatever balance should be found due, the master reported that more than one-sixth had been struck off from each upon taxation:—Held, that the solicitor should pay his own costs of the taxation, as well as those incurred by the client. Bower v. Nagle, Fl. & K. 78; 3 Ir. Eq. R. 105.

Where a writ was indorsed, pursuant to the rule of court in that behalf, with a certain amount of debt and costs, and that amount, together with 5*s.* more, was paid within the four days prescribed by the rule, and more than one-sixth of the costs, including the 5*s.*, was disallowed on taxation:—Held, not within the rule, and therefore the defendant was not entitled to the costs of taxation under it. Ward v. Gregg, 5 D. P. C. 729; W. W. & D. 351.

Less than One-sixth Disallowed.]—If a less sum than one-sixth is taken off on taxation, the plaintiff's attorney will not be entitled to the costs of taxation if he has wilfully inserted any item which he must know ought not to have been charged. Holderness v. Barkworth, 3 M. & W. 341; 6 D. P. C. 392; 1 H. & H. 21; 7 L. J., Ex. 107; 2 Jur. 490.

The court disallowed an attorney his costs of taxation where his bill had been reduced by nearly one-sixth (20*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* being taken off a bill of 160*l.* 18*s.* 2*d.*), though the charges were made bonâ fide. Hodge v. Bird, 6 Man. & G. 1020; 7 Scott (N.R.) 993; 1 D. & L. 956; 13 L. J., C. P. 87; 8 Jur. 317. S. P., Mortimer, In re, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 96; 18 W. R. 367.

Though not a sixth deducted from bill, circumstances having given sufficient ground of suspicion for necessity of taxation, costs of taxation were refused to solicitor. Webb v. Stone, 1 Anstr. 260.

Where the solicitor was guilty of great delay in bringing in his bills, the court will not give him his costs of the taxation, although less than one-sixth part is taken off. Yea v. Yea, 2 Anstr. 589.

Nonpayment by Client.]—An attorney must pay the costs of taxation, if more than one-sixth is taxed off, although the client has not paid the amount of the taxed costs. Neale v. Postlethwaite, 8 D. P. C. 100.

Rule not applying to Bankruptcy.]—There is no practice in bankruptcy by which a creditor reducing the bill of the trustee's solicitor by more than one-sixth is entitled to the costs of the taxation, and the Solicitors Act, 1843, ss. 37 and 39, does not apply. Marsh, Ex parte, Marsh, In re, 54 L. J., Q. B. 557; 15 Q. B. D. 340; 53 L. T. 418; 34 W. R. 620; 2 Morrell, 232—C. A.

Rule of taxation is adopted in bankruptcy: if more than one-sixth is deducted, solicitor pays costs of taxation. Westall, Ex parte, 3 Ves. & B. 141.

Form of Order.]—Where an unsigned bill, delivered by an attorney, was, with his consent, referred to taxation, at which he attended, when more than a sixth was struck off, the court, under its general jurisdiction, ordered him to pay the costs of taxation, although the order contained no undertaking on the part of the client to pay the amount found to be due. Peters v. Sheehan, 1 D. (N.S.) 943; 10 M. & W. 213; 12 L. J., Ex. 177; 6 Jur. 739.

A judge's order referring an attorney's bill to taxation reserved to the client the right of disputing his liability to the whole or any part of it on certain grounds. The order did not contain any direction to the master to tax the costs of the reference. The master taxed off less than a sixth of the whole bill, and taxed the attorney the costs of the reference:—Held, that the client was liable to pay the costs of the taxation, whatever might be the event of the questions referred. Shaw, In re, 2 L. M. & P. 214; 20 L. J., Q. B. 280.

When an order has been made for the taxation of the solicitor's bill of costs, semble, that a subsequent petition for the costs of the taxation cannot be heard until the master has made his certificate, nor unless the original petition is also set down in the paper. Elsee, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 332.

Waiver of Delivery of Signed Bill—Effect of.]—Where, on reference of an attorney's bill to taxation, the parties agree to waive the delivery of a signed bill, primâ facie they waive the operation of the statute as to payment of the costs of taxation. Gerrard v. Arnold, 6 D. P. C. 336.

Arrangement between Parties.]—Where an attorney's bill is referred for taxation, and, after a discussion before the master, the parties come to an arrangement as to the amount, and the master thereupon makes his allocatur for more than five-sixths of the original amount of the bill, the attorney is not entitled to the costs of taxation. Laurie v. Bartlett, 1 D. & L. 730; 13 L. J., Q. B. 145; 8 Jur. 474.

Order to Pay.]—Upon an application that the solicitor may be directed to pay the costs of taxation, more than a sixth part having been taken off his bill, the court will not enter into the particulars of the bill. Millington, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 114.

A writ of attachment may be issued against a solicitor for non-compliance with an order to pay the costs of a taxation. A. B. (a Solicitor), In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 467; [1895] 2 Ch. 66; 13 R. 434; 72 L. T. 679; 43 W. R. 490.

A judge's order directed an attorney's bill to be taxed upon an undertaking being given, signed by the then churchwardens. The undertaking was signed by some only of the previous churchwardens; but the attorney having made no objection, the costs were taxed, and more than a sixth deducted. An order for the attorney to pay the costs of the taxation having been obtained:—

Held, that the attorney could not apply to set it aside, on the ground that the undertaking was not signed in compliance with the judge's order. Doe d. Goodland v. Frankland, 2 D. (N.S.) 975; 12 L. J., Q. B. 249; 7 Jur. 671.

After Action brought.]—Where an attorney's bill is referred for taxation after action brought upon it, he is liable to pay the costs of taxation, if more than one-sixth is struck off. Wollett, In re, 12 M. & W. 504; 1 D. & L. 593; 13 L. J., Ex. 121; 8 Jur. 130.

Notwithstanding an action is commenced by the solicitor before an application for taxation is made, still, if more than a sixth is taken off the bill, the solicitor pays the costs of taxation. Watts, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 588; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 621; 5 L. J., Bk. 31.

Where taxation is directed after action brought, this court does not give the client the costs of taxation, though more than one-sixth be taxed off. Toghill v. Grant, Boord, In re, 6 Beav. 348; 12 L. J., Ch. 481; 7 Jur. 589.

Where taxation is ordered after action brought, the general rule is, that if anything is found due, the client must pay the costs of the action. Hair, In re, 11 Beav. 96.

—— Costs in the Cause.]—Where an attorney's bill, on which an action is commenced, is referred to taxation, and the defendant succeeds in the action in consequence, a sum, though less than one-sixth, being taxed off, so as to reduce the amount of the charges below advances made, the costs of that taxation shall not be allowed to the defendant in taxing the costs of the cause. Wilson v. Knapp, 4 Jur. 220.

An attorney having brought an action on his bill, the defendant obtained an order to tax it, and after taxation paid money into court. The plaintiff took the money out of court, and taxed his costs of the cause:—Held, that the master was right in treating the costs of taxing the bill as costs in the cause. Thomas v. Swansea Corporation, 11 M. & W. 83; 2 D. (N.S.) 1003; 12 L. J., Ex. 281.

Taxing-master's Certificate — Offer to reduce Amount — Special Circumstances.]— Solicitors sent in a bill of costs for 44*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.*, and there was added at the foot, "By allowance, 7*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.*" The taxing-master disallowed 10*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.* from the bill, but stated in his certificate that he treated the bill as one for 37*l.*, as he considered the 7*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.* allowance to be unconditional; and he certified under s. 37 of the Solicitors Act, 1843, that in his opinion the solicitors were entitled to the costs of taxation:—Held, that the bill was properly taxable on 44*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.*, and further that the facts were sufficient to justify the discretion exercised by the court below in allowing the solicitors the costs of the taxation. Carthew, In re, and Paull, In re (27 Ch. D. 485), followed. Short, Ex parte, Mackenzie, In re, 2 R. 478; 69 L. T. 751; 41 W. R. 530—C. A.

C., a solicitor, sent in to executors a bill of costs for 83*l.*, writing at the foot, "say 78*l.*," and the 78*l.* was paid. The residuary legatee obtained an order to tax the bill, which was taxed at 66*l.*, being more than five-sixths of 78*l.*, but less than five-sixths of 83*l.* The residuary legatee objected to certain items as excessive, and the taxing-master considered that they were excessive; but held that, as the executors had authorised them, and admitted their liability to pay them, the residuary legatee could not have them reduced:—Held, that the taxing-master was right in allowing these items; that the bill must be treated as a bill for 78*l.*, from which less than one-sixth had been taxed off, and that the solicitor was entitled to the costs of the reference; but held, on appeal, that the bill delivered, within the meaning of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37, was a bill for 83*l.*, and that, as more than one-sixth had been taxed off, the solicitor must, according to that section, pay the costs of the reference, the case not coming within the proviso giving the court a discretion where special circumstances are certified. Carthew, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 134; 27 Ch. D. 485; 51 L. T. 435; 32 W. R. 940—C. A.

P., a solicitor, delivered a bill for 362*l.*, but stared that he would only claim 320*l.*, and the 320*l.* only was entered in the cash account which he delivered to his clients. The clients obtained an order for taxation. The taxing-master taxed the bill at 280*l.*, being more than five-sixths of 320*l.*, but less than five-sixths of 362*l.*, and certified that he had allowed the solicitor the costs of the reference, as he considered that, since he had never claimed more than 320*l.*, the difference of 42*l.* between this sum and the amount of the whole bill ought to be deducted from the sums taxed off, thus reducing them to 40*l.*, which was less than a sixth of the sum he had claimed:—Held, that the solicitor must pay the costs of the reference; held, on appeal, that special circumstances were certified so as to give the court a discretion as to the costs of the reference, but that the special circumstances were not such as to induce the court to depart from the general rule that the costs of the reference should follow the event of the taxation, and that in this case also, more than one-sixth having been taxed off the 362*l.*, the solicitor must pay the costs of the reference. Paull, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 134; 27 Ch. D. 485; 51 L. T. 435; 32 W. R. 940—C. A.

—— Payment of Less Sum in Discharge.]—This was a summons on behalf of a client for review of taxation, and that the costs of taxation might be allowed to the client and disallowed to the solicitors. The solicitors had paid themselves 20*l.* out of money of their client in their hands in full discharge of their bill of costs. After this the client changed his solicitors and required a bill of costs, and obtained a common order to tax the costs of his former solicitors. The bill was delivered to him, and soon after the solicitors moved the court to cancel the order, but the motion was refused. The bill delivered amounted to 26*l.* 8*s.* 3*d.*, and was reduced, on taxation, to 20*l.* 16*s.* 7*d.*, more than one-sixth being taxed off. The taxing-master certified that the solicitors were entitled to all the costs of the taxation, on the ground that the sum allowed on taxation was greater than the sum accepted by the solicitors in full discharge:—Held, that, one-sixth having been taxed off the bill, the solicitors are not entitled to the costs of the taxation. Elwes and Turner, In re, 58 L. T. 580.

Bill for Lump Sum—Items Supplied.]—Lessor's solicitors wrote a letter to lessee's solicitors stating the expenses of the lease at a lump sum of 7*l.* 11*s.* On application for items, they furnished a document which they called "our bill," containing items amounting to 10*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.*, but wrote at the foot of it "say 7*l.* 11*s.*" The costs were taxed at 7*l.* 11*s.*:—Held, that the letter stating the lump sum was the bill to be taxed, the so-called "bill" of items being only explanatory, and that consequently the solicitors were entitled to the costs of the reference. Tilleard, In re (32 Beav. 476; 32 L. J., Ch. 765), and Russell, Son and Scott, In re (55 L. T. 71), followed. Hellard and Bewes, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 550; [1896] 2 Ch. 229; 74 L. T. 457; 44 W. R. 475.

Mode of Calculating the One-sixth.]—The costs of taxation depend on whether one-sixth is taken off the bill of costs; and, to determine this, a distinction is to be made between strictly professional charges and disbursements, and independent cash payments. Those payments only which are made in pursuance of the professional duty undertaken by the solicitor, and which he is bound to perform, or which are sanctioned as professional payments, by the general and established custom and practice of the profession, ought to be entered and allowed as professional disbursements in the bill of costs; other disbursements ought to be included in a separate cash account. Remnant, In re, 11 Beav. 613; 18 L. J., Ch. 374.

Where the master disallows some and adds other items, in order to apply the rule as to the one-sixth, the bill delivered is to be increased by the sum added, and then reduced by the sum disallowed. Reg. v. Eastwood, 6 El. & Bl. 285; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 448; 4 W. R. 483.

Moneys specifically paid by a client to his solicitor for counsel's fees and stamps, as they were required, are properly included in his bill, in calculating the sixth on a taxation. Metcalfe, In re, 30 Beav. 406.

A solicitor must pay the costs of the taxation of his bill of costs, reduced by the taxation more than one-sixth of the amount, which reduction arose from the master disallowing fees, paid to the commissioners for travelling expenses. Inman, Ex parte, Buck, 129.

—— Want of Authority.]—Sums deducted in respect of business done for a third person, at the alleged retainer of the client, but the authority not proved, are always computed as deductions in the question of costs of taxation. Rigby v. Edwards, 5 Madd. 20. This is said to be overruled.

Semble, on taxation charges disallowed for want of authority, and charges reduced by limiting to one of several defendants, his aliquot part of a joint charge ought not to be computed in determining on whom the costs of taxation should fall. Att.-Gen. v. Nethercoat, 3 Beav. 297.

—— Another Person Chargeable.]—Since the Solicitors Act, items struck out of a solicitor's bill on taxation as chargeable against another person, must be taken into account in determining the costs of the taxation. Clark, In re, 13 Beav. 173. Affirmed, 1 De G. M. & G. 43; 21 L. J., Ch. 20; 15 Jur. 1047.

—— Items inserted by Mistake.]—After bill has been referred for taxation, erroneous overcharges inserted by mistake cannot be withdrawn so as to be excluded from the calculation of the one-sixth as between the solicitor and the estate. Christy, Ex parte, Barrow, In re, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 104; 2 Deac. 131, 132; 6 L. J., Bk. 68.

The plaintiff had obtained an order for taxation of his solicitor's bills, amounting to 399*l.* The solicitor, with the master's permission, struck out certain items as having been inserted by mistake. The bills were then taxed, and less than a sixth was taken off; but if the items struck out were included, then more than a sixth would have been taken off:—Held, that as less than a sixth had been taken off, the plaintiff must pay the costs of taxation. Marshall v. Oxford, 5 Sim. 456.

—— Retainer by Several.]—A solicitor was retained by A. B. and four other defendants. A. B. having withdrawn his retainer, the solicitor delivered his bill against A. B., amounting to 19*l.* 19*s.*, which was referred for taxation; the master, considering that A. B. was liable to one-fifth part only of several charges, struck off four-fifths thereof, and certified that he had taxed the bill at 4*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.* The client then obtained an order of course for payment by the solicitor of the costs of the taxation; a motion being made, on behalf of the solicitor, to discharge the latter order for irregularity, on the ground that more than one-sixth had not been struck off within the rule, but no application being made to be relieved from the certificate which warranted the second order, the motion was on that ground refused with costs. Muskett v. Hill, 3 Beav. 301.

—— Several Bills.]—An order was made for the taxation of four several bills of a solicitor for various business done for the same assignee under which more than a sixth part was taken off the gross amount of the four bills, but not off the amount of every one of the bills:—Held, that as all the bills were incurred by the same person in the same right, there was no need for a separate order of taxation for each bill, and that, as more than a sixth was taken off from the whole amount, the solicitor must pay the costs of taxation. Barrett, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 731; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 447.

Less than one-sixth was taken off a bill of costs on taxation, but more than one-sixth was taken off in the suit (which was one for a general account between the solicitor and client) on other grounds, into which the master could not enter. The costs of taxation were allowed to the solicitor. May v. Biggenden, 24 Beav. 207.

—— Legacy Duty paid by Solicitor.]—A payment for legacy duty made by a solicitor for his client, ought, for taxation, to be included in his cash account and not in his bill of costs, and therefore such a payment is not to enter into the computation, in considering whether a sixth is taxed off. Haigh, In re, 12 Beav. 307; 19 L. J., Ch. 79; 14 Jur. 340.

By whom Payable.]—An action had been brought by an attorney to recover the amount of bills of costs, including costs incurred on an appeal to the house of lords. The usual order having been obtained on the part of the defendant for taxation, that portion of the bills which related to business done in the house of lords was referred to the proper taxing officer of the house:—Held, that, as between the parties, the plaintiff was in the first instance bound to pay the fees necessary for obtaining the certificate of that officer. Beche v. Cattell, 4 Scott (N.R.) 246; 3 Man. & G. 480; 11 L. J., C. P. 49.

—— Party Chargeable not Attending.]—A solicitor proceeding under the common order for taxation (which is in accordance with s. 37 of the Solicitors Act, 1843) must pay the costs of reference if the party chargeable does not attend the taxation. A person does not attend by writing letters to the taxing-master. Upperton, In re, 30 W. R. 840.

—— Where Solicitor Dead.]—Representatives of a deceased solicitor will not be ordered to pay costs of taxation of his bill, more than a sixth being taken off; nor, where they have brought an action for the amount, to the costs of which the assignees are liable, can they set off such costs against each other. Hammond, Ex parte. Jackson, In re, Mont. & C. 136; 4 Deac. 48; 8 L. J., Bk. 26.

The executors of a bankrupt solicitor are not, under statute, liable to pay the costs of taxation, if more than one-sixth of the bill of costs of the solicitor is deducted on taxation. Willasey v. Mashiter, 3 Myl. & K. 293.

If a bill of costs is taxed after solicitor's death, his representative will not be ordered to pay costs of taxation, although more than a sixth is deducted. Cole, In re, 2 Sim. & S. 462. S. C., nom. Miller v. ——, 4 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 71.

Court has no jurisdiction to order executor of deceased solicitor to pay costs of taxing solicitor's bill, nor to order executor to refund balance found due from deceased solicitor, if executor does not admit assets, and even if he admit assets. Sed quære. Spackman, Ex parte, Phillips, In re, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 135.

—— Where Solicitor Bankrupt.]—The costs of taxing the bills of costs of a solicitor who has become bankrupt do not fall upon his assignees, on the ground that more than a sixth part is deducted on taxation, although the assignees may have attended the taxation by their solicitor. Alsop v. Oxford (Lord), 1 Myl. & C. 26.

The assignees of a bankrupt solicitor are not under the statute liable to pay the costs of taxation, if more than one-sixth of the bill of costs of the solicitor is deducted on taxation. Willasey v. Mashiter, 3 Myl. & K. 293.

Upon taxation, under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37, assignees of a bankrupt solicitor are personally liable for the costs of taxation of a bill of costs delivered by them, where more than one-sixth is taken off. Peers, In re, 21 Beav. 520.

Assignees in insolvency of solicitors ordered to pay the costs of taxation, more than one-sixth having been taxed off a bill of costs delivered by them. Peile, In re, 25 Beav. 561.

Pending the taxation of an attorney's bill, he petitioned for and obtained his discharge under the Insolvent Debtors Act. More than a sixth was taxed off. The attorney was personally liable for the costs of the taxation, notwithstanding his discharge. Whalley v. Williamson, 6 Man. & G. 269; 6 Scott (N.R.) 948.

—— Executrix of Client.]—After the death of a plaintiff in an action, his executrix obtained an order for referring the bill of the plaintiff's attorney to taxation, less than a sixth having been taxed off:—Held, that the executrix was liable to the costs of the taxation. Jefferson v. Warrington, 7 M. & W. 137; 8 D. P. C. 880; 10 L. J., Ex. 79.

—— Married Woman.]—A married woman having separate property employed a solicitor, and undertook to pay him out of her separate estate. By the decree in a suit instituted by the solicitor, his bills were ordered to be paid out of the separate property, and it was referred to the master to tax them. Semble, that the solicitor is entitled to the costs of taxation, though more than one-sixth was taken off. Murray v. Barlee, 7 Sim. 194.

15. Reviewing Taxation.

Objections taken before Taxing-master.]—To enable the court to entertain a summons to review a taxing-master's certificate, where the ground of objection is to the whole of the finding generally, it is not necessary that the objections raised by the summons to his finding should have been carried in before the signing of the certificate: Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-rr. 39 and 41, being applicable only where particular items are objected to. Sparrow v. Hill (7 Q. B. D. 362; 8 Q. B. D. 479) followed. Castle, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 753; 36 Ch. D. 194; 57 L. T. 76; 35 W. R. 621.

Where under an order for taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs and cash account, the taxing-master found that, in consequence of all accounts between the parties having been settled, there was nothing to tax, and certified accordingly, but no objections to the finding were carried in before the certificate was signed:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to entertain a summons to review the certificate. Ib.

Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-r. 42, of the Rules of Court, 1883, precludes appellants to the court of appeal from taking at that stage of the proceedings any objection to the taxation or adducing any evidence other than that which had been carried in and brought before the taxing officer. Hester v. Hester, 56 L. J., Ch. 247; 34 Ch. D. 607; 55 L. T. 862; 35 W. R. 233; 51 J. P. 438—C. A.

Objections to Taxation—Procedure.]—Where, on the taxation of a bill of costs, a party objects to the course which the taxing-master proposes to adopt in the taxation, it is not in accordance with the practice that he should at once bring the matter before the court on motion. He should allow the taxing-master to make his certificate, and then carry in his objections to it, and allow the master to answer them, and upon that apply to the court to vary the certificate. Le Brasseur and Oakley, In re, Terrell, Ex parte, 65 L. J., Ch. 763; [1896] 2 Ch. 487; 74 L. T. 717; 45 W. R. 87—C. A.

Party to take out Summons.]—Where solicitors to trustees claimed to be entitled to certain charges that were disallowed by the taxing-master, the trustees took out a summons to review the taxation:—Held, that the matter had been wrongly brought before the court, as the summons ought to have been taken out by the solicitors, and not the trustees, whose duty it was to protect the estate against increased charges, and the costs of the application must be paid by the trustees personally. Wood v. Calvert, 55 L. T. 53; 34 W. R. 732.

Notice to consider Objections—Length of.]—Upon a party objecting to the allowance of certain costs, his solicitors received at 4.30 p.m. from the taxing-master a notice that at 1 p.m. the following day he would proceed to consider the objections. On a summons to review taxation on the ground that by analogy to r. 16 of Ord. LXV. of the Rules of Court, 1883, the taxing-master ought to have given a clear day's notice of his intention to proceed, notice of the 4th of December, 1885, was sufficient. Hill, In re, 33 Ch. D. 266 ; 55 L. T. 104—C. A.

Amount in Dispute.]—A review of taxation will not be ordered when the items alleged to be overcharged do not amount to 40*s*. Newton v. Boodle, 4 C. B. 359.

Where an attorney's bill has after payment been referred to the master for taxation by a judge's order, the court will not review the matter in a case where the amount of the bill is not stated, inasmuch as the matter in dispute may not be worth the expense of the proceedings. Dearden, In re, 9 Ex. 210 ; 2 C. L. R. 308 ; 23 L. J., Ex. 14 ; 17 Jur. 993 ; 2 W. R. 18.

On what Grounds.]—Where, in a bill of costs, several charges of a discretionary nature were entered, some too low and some too high, the latter of which the master reduced to their proper amount, but refused to raise the former, the court refused to review the taxation. Eyre v. Shelley, 8 M. & W. 154 ; 10 L. J., Ex. 295 ; 5 Jur. 439.

If an action is brought to recover the amount of an attorney's bill, and it is referred to taxation by the usual order obtained at the instance of the client, the master has power to determine whether certain items were necessary, and the court will not review his taxation on the ground that such disallowance is an excess of jurisdiction. Williams v. Nicholas, 1 D. (N.S.) 841.

A bill of costs had been referred for taxation, and the parties agreed in the office upon the sum at which they were to be reported ; subsequently the client, having discovered certain entries in his own handwriting of advances made to the solicitor, and for which he had received no credit, applied that the costs should be sent back to the master for taxation. The application was refused with costs. Austin v. Chambers, 3 Dr. & War. 178.

Principles upon which the court acts in permitting a review of the master's certificate on taxation. Congreve, In re, 4 Beav. 87.

The master, on evidence before him, allowed a few items on the taxation of a solicitor's bill for business, as to which there was a conflict, whether the solicitor had authority to perform it : — Held, that this was not a sufficient reason for permitting a review of the taxation. Ib.

A petition of a solicitor to review the master's decision, as to specified items of charges for conferences, some of which had been reduced and others wholly disallowed, was dismissed with costs, the court declining to enter into the merits of such matters. Hubbard, In re, 23 Beav. 481.

The court refused to entertain the question whether the master had properly disallowed costs of separate answers. Beattie v. Ebury, 43 L. J., Ch. 80 ; 29 L. T. 419 ; 22 W. R. 68.

The court will only determine questions on items in a bill of costs which involve some principle, and those not relating to quantum only. Catlin, In re, 18 Beav. 508.

The court will not review a taxation when no principle of taxation has been violated. Moss, In re, 3 W. R. 19. S. P., Mortimer, In re, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 96 ; 18 W. R. 367.

When Barred.] — The acceptance of money under an allocatur prevents a solicitor from applying for a review of taxation. Marshall, Ex parte, 5 W. R. 652.

On what Terms.]—An application that the officer of the court may be directed to review his certificate as to the taxation of costs, may be made by motion. It is not an objection to such application that the amount of the taxed costs has not been paid into court, though it may be proper to make such payment one of the terms of the order for re-taxation. Richardson, Ex parte, Consett, In re, 3 Deac. & C. 735 ; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 377.

III. MODES OF RECOVERING.

a. CHARGING ORDERS.

1. Property Recovered or Preserved.

Money Paid into Court.]—An action having been brought to recover a sum of 727*l*., C., one of the defendants, counterclaimed against the plaintiff for the sum of 700*l*. C. presented also a petition in bankruptcy against the plaintiff, who was ordered to bring into court a sum of 300*l*. The action and the proceedings in bankruptcy ultimately were referred to an arbitrator, who, by his award, found that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment in the action for 157*l*., that no debt was due from the plaintiff to C., and that the sum of 300*l*. must be paid to the plaintiff out of the court of bankruptcy. The plaintiff's solicitors having applied to the queen's bench division for a charging order on the sum of 300*l*. for their costs in the action :—Held, that they were not entitled to an order. Pierson v. Knutsford Estates Co., 53 L. J., Q. B. 181 ; 13 Q. B. D. 666 ; 32 W. R. 451—C. A.

Money paid into court as security for the costs of a party to an action is not, in case by the success of the party it becomes payable to him, property "preserved" in the action within the meaning of the act. Wadsworth, In re, Rhodes v. Sugden, 54 L. J., Ch. 638 ; 29 Ch. D. 517 ; 52 L. T. 613 ; 33 W. R. 558.

A charging order for solicitors' costs may be made upon money paid into court under Ord. XIV., to abide the event, as being property "recovered or preserved," within s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860. Moxon v. Sheppard, 59 L. J., Q. B. 286 ; 24 Q. B. D. 627 ; 62 L. T. 726 ; 38 W. R. 704.

Money paid into court by a defendant, although accompanied by a defence denying legal liability, may be taken out of court by the plaintiff, and is therefore property "recovered or preserved" within s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860. Berdan v. Greenwood (3 Ex. D. 251) followed. Emden v. Carte, 51 L. J., Ch. 371 ; 19 Ch. D. 311 ; 45 L. T. 328 ; 30 W. R. 17—C. A.

A., as administrator of his deceased mother, sued B. and C. (his brother and sister) in the common pleas at Lancaster in detinue for goods belonging to the estate of the intestate, and recovered a verdict and judgment against them, but was unable to levy. Afterwards B. and C. sued out a plaint in a county court for administration of the estate, and brought into court the proceeds of the goods of the intestate, which they had hitherto concealed :—Held, that the solicitor who acted for A. in the action of detinue was entitled to a charge or lien upon the fund in the hands of the registrar of the county court, under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, as "property recovered or preserved through his instrumentality," in respect of his costs incurred by him, to be taxed as between attorney and client. Catlow v. Catlow, 2 C. P. D. 362; 25 W. R. 866.

Appointment of Receiver.]—When a suit is instituted for the preservation of property, and a receiver is appointed, there is a preservation of property within s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, and the solicitors are entitled to a charge upon their client's interest in the property. Twynam v. Porter, 40 L. J., Ch. 30; L. R. 11 Eq. 181; 23 L. T. 551; 19 W. R. 151.

Amount Awarded by Arbitrator.]—A reference to arbitration having been made in an action, the arbitrator awarded that a certain sum should be paid by the plaintiff to the defendant, and the award was confirmed by the court. An order was made, on the application of the defendant's solicitor, under s. 3 of 39 & 40 Vict. c. 44 (similar to s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860), declaring him entitled to a lien for the costs of the defendant in the action upon the amount awarded, as property recovered or preserved for the defendant through the instrumentality of the solicitor, and directing the plaintiff to pay thereout to the solicitor the amount of such costs when taxed. M'Aleavey v. M'Aleavey, 9 L. R., Ir. 165.

Wife's permanent Maintenance.] — A sum secured to the wife on a dissolution of marriage under s. 32 of the Divorce Act, 1867, is not alimony, and is property in respect of which the court has jurisdiction to grant the wife's solicitor a charging order for costs under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860. Harrison v. Harrison, 58 L. J., P. 28; 13 P. D. 180; 60 L. T. 39; 36 W. R. 748—C. A.

Compromise of Action—Notice.]—A collision action having been settled on the terms of the defendants paying to the plaintiff fifty per cent. of his damages, the plaintiff, before the damages were assessed, assigned the amount to which he would become entitled in respect thereof to the defendants' solicitors and to certain clients of the defendants' solicitors, to whom he was indebted. The damages were subsequently assessed by an arbitrator, and the amount awarded was paid by the defendants to their solicitors, who paid themselves and their clients in accordance with the terms of the assignment. No express notice of the plaintiff's solicitors' lien was given, though the defendants' solicitors were aware that the money so assigned and paid away was the fruits of the action in which the plaintiffs' solicitors had acted:—Held, that the plaintiffs' solicitors were entitled to a charging order on the money so assigned and paid away. The Paris, 65 L. J., P. 42; [1896] P. 77; 73 L. T. 736; 8 Asp. M. C. 126.

Partnership Action—Compromise.]—An action was brought for the dissolution of a partnership and the winding-up of the partnership business. The defendant delivered a defence, and a counterclaim claiming certain remedies against his copartners. At the trial the parties agreed to compromise the action, including the counterclaim, and an order was made directing the taxation of the costs of all parties, and staying all proceedings, except for the purpose of enforcing the agreement and that order. The agreement, which was set out in the schedule to the order, provided for the dissolution of the partnership, the sale of the partnership property, and that all costs of the parties should be paid out of the estate. Subsequently the parties made an agreement that a sale of a certain part of the partnership property should be rescinded, that all litigation should be put an end to, and the business carried on as before the action. The defendant's solicitor applied for an order charging his costs on the shares, both of the plaintiffs and defendant, in the partnership property, or, in the alternative, on the defendant's share. The defendant was willing that the order should be made as regards his share of the property:—Held, that the solicitor could not have a charging order on the plaintiffs' shares, as they had been in no way recovered or preserved through his instrumentality. Also, that the persons to apply to enforce the order carrying out the agreement were the parties to it, and the solicitor could not apply under it to obtain payment of his costs. Rowlands v. Williams, 53 L. T. 135. Reversed in C. A.

—— Transfer to Bankruptcy Court.]—If a solicitor has bonâ fide commenced a partnership action, and obtained the appointment of a receiver, who has got in assets, he is entitled to a charge on the assets recovered for his costs, unless, being aware that the partnership was insolvent, he commenced his action not bonâ fide, but merely to obtain costs where proceedings might have been taken in bankruptcy. Lovett, Ex parte, Nicholas, In re, 61 L. T. 87; 37 W. R. 715; 6 Morrell, 173.

Administration Suit.]—A solicitor instituted an administration suit on behalf of a cestui que trust against a sole trustee, obtained a common decree with a direction for the appointment of a new trustee, and procured an account to be brought into chambers by the defendant. The plaintiff then abandoned the suit. On a petition by the solicitor that his costs might be made a charge on the plaintiff's interest in the trust estate, under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860:—Held, that no property had been preserved or recovered on which the costs could be made a charge. Pinkerton v. Easton, Pinkerton, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 878; L. R. 16 Eq. 490; 29 L. T. 364; 21 W. R. 943.

A solicitor for a party in an administration suit who cannot otherwise obtain payment of his bill may apply by petition to have his costs taxed, and for a charge for them on dividends payable to his client under an order made in the suit, although there may have been no real question at issue between the parties to the suit, or although, so far as there has been any such question, the decision in the suit may have been given wholly or in part in favour of the opposite party. Smith v. Winter, Hartley, Ex parte, 18 W. R. 447.

On Real Estate.]—A suit was instituted in equity by a next friend on behalf of an infant to recover real estate and a fund in court. The costs were directed to be paid by the defendant, but in consequence of his insolvency they could not be recovered from him. A court of equity directed that the fund in court should be applied in payment of the costs pro tanto, the proceedings taken by the next friend being for the benefit of the infant, but refused to make an order declaring that the residue of the costs were a charge on the real estate recovered, as that act applied only to suits instituted by persons sui juris. Bonser v. Bradshaw, 30 L. J., Ch. 159; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 231; 3 L. T. 545; 9 W. R. 229.

Where a solicitor was employed by the next friend in establishing an infant's title to land, the infant having attained his majority, a court of equity declared so much of the costs as remained unpaid a charge on the land recovered. Bonser v. Bradshaw, 4 Giff. 260; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1048; 9 L. T. 195.

Action as to Easement.]—A suit which only relates to an easement is not a suit in which it can be said that property is recovered or preserved, even though a mandatory injunction for pulling down buildings is refused. Foxon v. Gascoigne, 43 L. J., Ch. 729; L. R. 9 Ch. 654; 31 L. T. 289; 22 W. R. 939.

Building Society—Fraudulent Transfer.]—An action was brought by a husband against his wife and another person for a sum of money invested in a building society, which the husband alleged to have been fraudulently transferred by his wife to the other person. The building society were also made defendants to the action and appeared. Judgment was given for the defendants. Upon petition presented under the Solicitors Act, 1860, by the solicitor to the defendants other than the building society:—Held, that he was entitled to a charge upon the whole sum invested, as being the amount "recovered or preserved" to them. Porter v. West, 50 L. J., Ch. 231; 43 L. T. 569; 29 W. R. 236.

Lien Diminished.]—Where through the exertions of solicitors the lien of a railway company on waggons belonging to a coal company was diminished and the value of the waggons to the coal company proportionately enhanced, the solicitors were held entitled to a charging order on the waggons. The services of solicitors in such a case are in the nature of salvage, and do not depend upon contract. Pellsall Coal and Iron Co. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 8 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 146.

Bankruptcy Proceedings.]—The bankrupt left this country for Australia, where he was arrested on a charge of forgery. A receiving order having been made against him, the solicitors to the trustee obtained from the police in Australia a sum of money which had been found in his possession. The solicitors claimed to have a charging order on this amount under the Solicitors Act, 1860, s. 28, not only for their costs in the bankruptcy proceedings, but also for their costs in the prosecution:—Held, that the money had not been recovered or preserved by the solicitors in or by the bankruptcy proceedings. Humphreys, In re, Roberts, Ex parte, 77 L. T. 501; 4 Manson, 239.

A suit was commenced in January, 1887, to establish a will and codicil. The plaintiff was the surviving executor appointed by the will, and the defendant was a daughter of the deceased, who contested the validity of the codicil only. A son of the deceased, who was the principal legatee under the codicil, obtained leave, on the 8th March, 1887, to intervene in the suit, and propounded the codicil. On the 3rd May, 1887, the trustees appointed under the bankruptcy of the said legatee also obtained leave to intervene, and they, too, propounded the codicil. On the 9th November, 1887, the court, by consent, pronounced for the will and codicil, and reserved all questions of costs of the trustees and of other interveners. On the 6th December, 1887, upon summons for directions as to these costs, it was ordered that the costs of the bankrupt be paid "out of the residue of the estate, if any." It was stated that there would be no residue. On the 30th April, 1889, an order was made giving the bankrupt's solicitor a charge in respect of his costs in these proceedings upon the interest of his client under the codicil. This order was served upon the trustee in bankruptcy, and upon the surviving executor. The trustees thereupon issued a summons to set aside the order:—Held, that the trustees in bankruptcy having intervened and propounded the codicil, and having obtained judgment thereon, the solicitor for the bankrupt was only entitled to a charge upon any residue which might be found due to the bankrupt after his creditors had been satisfied. Keeson v. Luxmore, 61 L. T. 199.

Mortgages — Validity Established.]—In an action to establish the validity of two mortgages, and to raise the amount due thereon, the plaintiff obtained the usual judgment declaring the mortgages well charged, referring to chambers to take accounts, directing the appointment of a receiver and declaring the plaintiff entitled to the costs of the action. The solicitor for the plaintiff applied under the 39 & 40 Vict. c. 44, s. 3 (similar to s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860), to have his costs as between solicitor and client, when taxed, declared a charge upon the plaintiff's interest in the mortgaged lands, and on all amounts which might be found to be due from the defendant to the plaintiff:—Held, that the solicitor was entitled to the order sought. Keenan v. Armstrong, 28 L. R., Ir. 371.

A defendant in a foreclosure suit established his right to a second mortgage on certain property:—Held, that it was property recovered or preserved by the instrumentality of a solicitor to which the solicitor was entitled to a declaration of charge under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860. Scholefield v. Lockwood, 38 L. J., Ch. 232; L. R. 7 Eq. 83; 17 W. R. 184.

A solicitor is entitled to a charge for his costs on property, the subject of a successful suit conducted by him against an incumbrancer, although the incumbrance is entirely valueless, provided it formed a cloud upon the title. Jones v. Frost, Fiddey, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 47; L. R. 7 Ch. 773; 27 L. T. 465; 20 W. R. 1025.

Declaration of Title — Partition.]—The costs of proceedings under the Declaration of Titles Act (25 & 26 Vict. c. 67), on behalf of an infant, together with the costs of a partition suit and of suit to obtain a declaration of lien, are costs for which the solicitor has a lien on the fund recovered. Pritchard v. Roberts, 43 L. J., Ch. 129; L. R. 17 Eq. 222; 29 L. T. 883; 22 W. R. 259.

Costs Ordered to be Refunded.]—Costs paid under order of the court below and ordered by the court of appeal to be refunded are property recovered within the meaning of s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860. Guy v. Churchill, 56 L. J., Ch. 670; 35 Ch. D. 489; 57 L. T. 510; 35 W. R. 706—C. A.

An action was dismissed with costs, which were taxed at 298*l.* and paid. On appeal this judgment was reversed, leave was given to amend the pleadings, and the action was ordered to proceed on the amended pleadings, and the defendants were ordered to repay to the plaintiffs the costs they had received, and to pay to the plaintiffs their costs of the appeal, which were taxed at 165*l.* After this the plaintiffs became bankrupt:—Held, on the application of the solicitors who had acted for the plaintiffs in the appeal, that they were entitled to receive from the defendants the 165*l.*, and also to receive from the defendants out of the 298*l.* the difference between the 165*l.* and the plaintiffs' costs of the appeal taxed as between solicitor and client, and that the balance only of the 298*l.*, after paying the above difference and the costs of the solicitors and the defendants of the application, was to be paid to the trustee in the bankruptcy. Ib.

2. Practice.

On Change of Solicitor.]—In a suit for the administration of a testator's estate, an order was made for the taxation of the costs and payment to the plaintiff's solicitor personally of the plaintiff's costs out of a fund set apart for that purpose. The plaintiff sold his life interest in the estate with the knowledge of his solicitor, who did not then raise any claim upon it for his costs. The plaintiff subsequently, and before any of the costs were taxed, changed his solicitor. The solicitor then took out a summons for a charging order, under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, upon the plaintiff's interest in the funds in court. It was not the practice for the masters to give a warrant for taxation to any solicitor not acting for a party to the cause:—Held, that the solicitor was entitled to a charging order, with liberty to apply to the judge as to enforcing it by sale or otherwise. Pilcher v. Arden, Brook, In re, 47 L. J., Ch. 479; 7 Ch. D. 318; 38 L. T. 111; 26 W. R. 273—C. A.

Solicitor ceasing to be such at Time of Order.]—An order is valid, though the plaintiff's solicitor had ceased to be such when it was made. Though he has discharged himself from the position of plaintiff's solicitor, yet, if he has not done so wrongfully or improperly, the order is right. Clover v. Adams, 6 Q. B. D. 622.

Solicitor Discharged before Trial.]—A solicitor, through whose instrumentality property has been recovered or preserved in an action, is entitled, under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, to a declaration of charge upon such property, although his client may have discharged him before the trial of the action. In such a case his charge will be subject to the lien for costs of the client's solicitor for the time being. Wadsworth, In re, Rhodes v. Swyden, 54 L. J., Ch. 638; 29 Ch. D. 517; 52 L. T. 613; 33 W. R. 558.

London Agents of Country Solicitor.]—London agents of a country solicitor have no right to a charge for costs, as they are not the solicitors employed by the client. Macfarlane v. Lister, 57 L. J., Ch. 92; 37 Ch. D. 88; 58 L. T. 201—C. A.

A town agent is entitled to a charge on all property recovered in three suits for an unascertained balance due to him by the country solicitor. Tardrew v. Howell, 3 Giff. 381; 31 L. J., Ch. 57; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1120; 5 L. T. 276; 10 W. R. 32.

Where, in a suit by a master against an owner for wages and disbursements, a sum of money was found to be due to him as master by the owner; but a counter-claim being set up, the registrar took all the accounts between the parties, and reported that there was a balance due by the master for unpaid purchase-money for shares in the vessel; but the transfer of the shares had not been registered:—Held, that the solicitors who acted in the suit had preserved property of the master under the act, and were entitled to their costs out of the master's shares, subject to the claim of the owner for the balance found to be due. Ib.

Employment by Infant—Ratification.]—A bill was filed by the maternal grandmother of an infant tenant in tail, as his next friend, praying the appointment of a guardian to him and his brothers and sisters, directions for his maintenance and education, having regard to the circumstances of the family, accounts, and a receiver. The solicitor employed by the next friend died pending the suit, and within six years from the presentation of the petition. A petition was presented by the personal representative of the solicitor for a declaration as to, and a charge for, his costs:—Held, that the solicitor was employed for the infant; that the property was preserved for the infant through the instrumentality of the solicitor; that the infant had, as a matter of fact, adopted the suit after attaining his majority; that the Statute of Limitations was not a bar to the petition; that it was well presented by the legal personal representative; and that the petitioner was entitled to the relief for which she prayed. Baile v. Baile, 41 L. J., Ch. 300; L. R. 13 Eq. 497; 26 L. T. 283; 20 W. R. 534.

Assignee Entitled to Apply for.]—The assignee from a solicitor of the costs of litigation, wherein property has been recovered or preserved through the instrumentality of the solicitor, is entitled to apply to the court under the Solicitors Act, 1860, s. 28, for an order charging the property with the costs assigned to him. Baile v. Baile (L. R. 13 Eq. 497) discussed and followed. Briscoe v. Briscoe, 61 L. J., Ch. 665; [1892] 3 Ch. 543; 67 L. T. 116; 40 W. R. 621.

Parties to Action cannot obtain Order.]—Sect. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, is intended for the benefit and protection of solicitors only, and the court will not sanction the use of it for the purpose of enabling parties to an action to charge the property recovered or preserved in the action with the payment of costs for which they themselves are liable, and which they are able to pay. Harrison v. Cornwall Minerals Ry., 53 L. J., Ch. 596; 50 L. T. 452; 32 W. R. 748; 48 J. P. 724.

Petition—Service.]—An application by a solicitor, under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act of 1860, for an order charging his costs upon the interest of a party to an action in a fund in court, is notwithstanding s. 39 of the Judicature Act, 1873, properly made by a petition in the action. But the other parties to the action ought not to be served with the petition. Brown v. Tratman, 48 L. J., Ch. 862 ; 12 Ch. D. 88 ; 28 W. R. 164.

—— How Intituled.]—An order giving a solicitor a charge under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, for his costs as between solicitor and client, on property recovered by him for his client in an action, is sufficient if intituled in the action ; it may be obtained either on summons or petition, and need not be intituled either in the matter of the act or of the solicitor. Hamer v. Giles, 48 L. J., Ch. 508 ; 11 Ch. D. 942 ; 27 W. R. 834.

A declaration giving a solicitor a charge for his costs upon property recovered or preserved in a suit may be made upon a petition presented in the suit. Jones v. Frost, Fiddey, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 47 ; L. R. 7 Ch. 773 ; 27 L. T. 465 ; 20 W. R. 1025.

And a petition for the purpose of obtaining a declaration under the statute must be intituled in the suit, notwithstanding that the bill has been dismissed, and that the parties to the suit, whom it will become necessary to serve, are numerous. Keane, In re, 19 W. R. 429. See next case.

Application, to what Court.]—When a solicitor applies to the court of chancery to have it declared that he is entitled to a charge upon property which has been recovered or preserved by him for his client in a suit in which he has been employed, he must make the application to the judge to whose court the suit is attached, and it must be intituled in that suit as well as in the matter of the solicitor. Heinrich v. Sutton, Fiddey, In re, L. R. 6 Ch. 865 ; 25 L. T. 643 ; 19 W. R. 1075. Reversing 40 L. J., Ch. 518.

An order declaring a solicitor entitled to a charge for his costs under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, on a judgment recovered in an action which he was employed to prosecute, must not be made by any other judge than the judge who tried the action. Higgs v. Schrader, 47 L. J., Q. B. 426 ; 3 Q. B. D. 252 ; 26 W. R. 831.

Upon a petition by a solicitor for a charging order under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, upon property preserved in an action instituted in the chancery division in the Liverpool district registry, and attached to the court of the Vice-Chancellor Hall, but which had been tried by a judge and jury at Liverpool :—Held, that the judge before whom the action had been tried, and who had dealt with the substantial question in the case, was the judge to whom the application ought to be made. Owen v. Henshaw, 47 L. J., Ch. 267 ; 7 Ch. D. 385 ; 26 W. R. 188.

A., as administrator of his deceased mother, sued B. and C. (his brother and sister) in the common pleas at Lancaster, in detinue for goods belonging to the estate of the intestate, and recovered a verdict and judgment against them, but was unable to levy. Afterwards B. and C. sued out a plaint in a county court for administration of the estate, and brought into court the proceeds of the goods of the intestate, which they had hitherto concealed :—Held, that the common pleas division of the high court was the proper court in which to make the application. Catlow v. Catlow, 2 C. P. D. 362 ; 25 W. R. 866.

Jurisdiction — Cause Transferred.] — Under Rules of Supreme Court, 1875, Ord. LL., r. 1a, a judge, to whom an action has been transferred for trial, has authority to hear a petition by a solicitor under the Solicitors Act, 1860, for costs incurred in recovering property in the action. Porter v. West, 50 L. J., Ch. 231 ; 43 L. T. 569 ; 29 W. R. 236.

—— Judge at Chambers.] — The defendant having paid money into court in the action, the plaintiff's solicitor declined to proceed with the action except on terms to which the plaintiff would not assent. Thereupon, the plaintiff retained fresh solicitors, and obtained an order for a change of solicitors. After the order was made, the late solicitor obtained a judge's order at chambers, charging the money in court with his costs in the action :—Held, that when an action is pending, a judge at chambers has jurisdiction to make such an order. Clover v. Adams, 6 Q. B. D. 622.

—— Judge in Bankruptcy—Registrar.]—The judge in bankruptcy, in the exercise of his bankruptcy jurisdiction, has no power to make a charging order under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860. He has, however, power to do so by virtue of his jurisdiction as a judge of the high court. The power of making a charging order being one which it is convenient should be exercised in chambers, the judge may direct its exercise by the registrar. Wood, In re, Fanshawe, Ex parte, 66 L. J., Q. B. 69 ; [1897] 1 Q. B. 314 ; 75 L. T. 387 ; 3 Manson, 299.

Substituted Service of Summons.]—A sum of money having been paid into court for the benefit of the defendant, M., his solicitor, obtained a charging order for costs upon it under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860. The costs had been taxed ex parte. M. then took out a summons to show cause why the sum of money paid into court should not be paid out to him in part satisfaction of his taxed costs. This summons could not be served upon the defendant, who appeared to be wilfully evading service of it. L. had acted for the defendant after M. had ceased to do so, and H. had introduced the defendant to M. :—Held, that substituted service of the summons should be allowed ; that a notice calling upon the defendant to appear in one month should be put up at the master's office, and served upon L. and H., and advertised in the "Times" newspaper, and thereupon, if the defendant did not appear, an order might be made on the summons. Hunt v. Austin, Mason, Ex parte, 51 L. J., Q. B. 455 ; 9 Q. B. D. 598 ; 47 L. T. 300—C. A.

Inability to obtain Payment otherwise.]—The court will not grant an order under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, unless the solicitor make out a primâ facie case of inability to obtain payment in any other way. Harrison v. Harrison, 58 L. J., P. 28 ; 13 P. D. 180 ; 60 L. T. 39 ; 36 W. R. 748—C. A.

C. having recovered judgment for debt and costs against M., the executors of C.'s solicitor, G., to whom costs of the action were admittedly due, issued execution for the costs, the amount of which M. paid to the sheriff in whose hands it was seized under a fi. fa. at suit of S., who had obtained judgment for a larger amount against C. G.'s executors applied to the court for a declaration that the money in the sheriff's hands was subject to their lien, but it was not shown that there were not other means of recovering the costs:—Held, in accordance with the principle of Harrison v. Harrison (13 P. D. 180), that the application was one to the discretion of the court, and in the absence of special grounds calling for equitable interference ought not to be granted. Croghan v. Maffett, 28 L. R. Ir. 97.

Must be in an Action.]—A company had given notice to take property compulsorily, the price to be paid was ascertained by arbitration:—Held, that the solicitors who acted for the vendor in the matter were not entitled to a charging order, as the proceedings were not in a court of justice. Macfarlane v. Lister, 57 L. J., Ch. 92; 37 Ch. D. 88; 58 L. T. 201—C. A.

Previous Assignment to Secure Costs.]—Where a plaintiff has by deed assigned the proceeds of the action to a trustee on trust to secure in the first place the costs of his solicitor in the action, and then the debts of other creditors, the solicitor is not entitled under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, to a charging order for his costs upon such proceeds. Groom v. Cheesewright, 64 L. J., Ch. 406; [1895] 1 Ch. 730; 13 R. 386; 72 L. T. 555; 43 W. R. 475.

To what Costs Applying.]—Costs were incurred for proceedings in a foreclosure suit, and for proceedings in actions of ejectment; and on indictments in reference to the mortgaged property: a court of equity refused to make a charging order for more costs than those incurred in the proceedings for foreclosure. Wilson v. Round, 4 Giff. 416; 3 N. R. 288; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 34; 9 L. T. 675; 12 W. R. 402.

An attorney was declared entitled to a charge upon the land recovered by him in ejectment, his client having died since the action, the lands being in the course of administration by his executors, the judge before whom the ejectment was tried not having been applied to, and a court of equity, before whom the case had been brought in another form, having declined to make an order for the common-law costs. Seaman, Ex parte and In re, 3 H. & C. 148; 33 L. J., Ex. 204; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 592; 10 L. T. 345; 12 W. R. 748.

A charging order must be confined to costs of proceedings in the court where it is made. It does not extend to miscellaneous costs or costs of proceedings in another court, or of a proceeding (e.g., to remit an action to an inferior court) which has been abandoned. Sheolin v. M'Grane, 17 L. R., Ir. 271.

An attorney can only have a charge upon property recovered or preserved by him for his client in respect of the costs in the particular suit, matter or proceeding in which they were incurred, and not for general costs. Thompson, Ex parte, 3 L. T. 317.

Action no longer Pending—Property Sold.]—It is no objection to an application for a charging order that it is made in a suit which is no longer pending, and which was never brought to a hearing, nor that the property had been sold before the application of the solicitor. Jones v. Frost, Fiddey, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 47; L. R. 7 Ch. 773; 27 L. T. 465; 20 W. R. 1025.

In Friendly Suit.]—It is not merely when there is an adverse claim to property recovered or preserved in a suit through the instrumentality of the solicitor for his client, that the solicitor is entitled to a charge on the property for his costs, under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860; but he may also obtain such a declaration, where the suit is a friendly one, and instituted on behalf of an infant. Baile v. Baile, 41 L. J., Ch. 300; L. R. 13 Eq. 497; 26 L. T. 283; 20 W. R. 534.

No Real Question at Issue in Suit.]—A solicitor for a party in an administration suit, who cannot otherwise obtain payment of his bill, may apply by petition to have his costs taxed, and for a charge for them on dividends payable to his client under an order made in the suit, although there may have been no real question at issue between the parties to the suit, or although, so far as there has been any such question, the decision in the suit may have been given wholly or in part in favour of the opposite party. Smith v. Winter, Hartley, Ex parte, 18 W. R. 447.

Suit by Persons sui juris.]—A suit was instituted in equity by a next friend on behalf of an infant to recover real estate and a fund in court. The costs were directed to be paid by the defendant, but in consequence of his insolvency they could not be recovered from him. The court, on petition for that purpose, directed that the fund in court should be applied in payment of the costs pro tanto, the proceedings taken by the next friend being for the benefit of the infant, but refused to make an order declaring that the residue of the costs were, under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, a charge on the real estate recovered, as that act applied only to suits instituted by persons sui juris. Bonser v. Bradshaw, 30 L. J., Ch. 159; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 231; 3 L. T. 545; 9 W. R. 229.

Client not being Beneficial Owner is Immaterial.]—A plaintiff in a suit instituted to set aside a conveyance of real estate sold his interest in the property, and the suit was compromised, and a conveyance of the property made to the purchaser, who obtained an order dismissing the bill:—Held, that the plaintiff's solicitor was entitled to a charge for his costs upon the property as against the purchaser. Jones v. Frost, Fiddey, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 47; L. R. 7 Ch. 773; 27 L. T. 465; 20 W. R. 1025.

The principle of s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, is analogous to the principles of salvage, and gives a charge on the property preserved, irrespectively of any question as to who is the owner of it; and the fact that the client by whom the solicitor was retained is not the beneficial owner of the whole property is immaterial. Bulley v. Bulley, 47 L. J., Ch. 841; 8 Ch. D. 479; 38 L. T. 401; 26 W. R. 638—C. A.

Therefore, when a solicitor has been retained by a person interested in an estate, as to two-fifths in his own right, and as to three-fifths as a trustee for others, and the whole estate has been preserved, the court will make an order as against the cestui que trust charging the whole property preserved; and this charge will not be incumbered or affected with any equities that may exist between such trustee and his cestui que trust, even though the trustee were a defaulting trustee or bankrupt. Ib.

A solicitor is entitled to a charge upon property recovered or preserved, for his costs of the litigation by which it is recovered or preserved, irrespective of his client's interest in the property, and although it turns out that the latter has not and never had any interest therein. Bailey v. Birchall, 2 H. & M. 371; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 57; 5 N. R. 237.

A solicitor is entitled, under 39 & 40 Vict. c. 44, s. 3 (equivalent to 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 28), to a charge for costs incurred in recovering or preserving property, not only against his own client, but against all persons entitled to the property. Sheolin v. McGrane, 17 L. R., Ir. 271.

The charge for costs to which a solicitor is entitled under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, extends to the property of his own client only, and not to that of other persons. Berrie v. Howitt, 39 L. J., Ch. 119; L. R. 9 Eq. 1; 21 L. T. 414.

Under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, the court can declare a solicitor entitled to a charge for costs on the whole of the property recovered or preserved through his instrumentality, and not merely on his client's interest in that property. Berrie v. Howitt (L. R. 9 Eq. 1) not followed. Charlton v. Charlton, 52 L. J., Ch. 971; 49 L. T. 267; 32 W. R. 90.

A firm of solicitors were employed throughout the proceedings in an action for partition and sale of certain hereditaments of which the defendants were in possession, and for an account of the rents and profits of one-third part thereof for six years prior to the issue of the writ. By the decree the plaintiffs were declared entitled to one-third part of the hereditaments, and to an account and payment by the defendants of one-third of the said rents and profits, and the premises were ordered to be sold, and the plaintiffs' costs up to and including the hearing were ordered to be costs in the action. The account was not completed and the property was not sold when the plaintiffs threatened to change their solicitors and to compromise the action. The share of the plaintiffs in the property and rents was insufficient to pay the plaintiffs' costs. On a petition by the plaintiffs' solicitors asking for a declaration that they were entitled to a charge on the whole property in respect of the plaintiffs' costs, as such costs had been made costs in the action:—Held, that no order having been made for payment of the costs of the action out of the proceeds of sale, the court could not anticipate such order, and that the solicitors could only be treated as having a lien on the plaintiffs' share recovered by them in the action. An injunction was granted to prevent the plaintiffs from receiving any money in the action, or by way of compromise, without notice to the solicitors. Lloyd v. Jones, 40 L. T. 514; 27 W. R. 655.

The charge declared in pursuance of s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, on the property recovered or preserved in favour of the solicitor employed is in the nature of salvage, and may be made on the interest of persons who did not employ the solicitor and were not parties to the suit, if they adopt the benefit obtained in the suit. Greer v. Young, 52 L. J., Ch. 915; 24 Ch. D. 545; 49 L. T. 224; 31 W. R. 930.

Client indebted to Estate.]—A solicitor was allowed a lien on the proceeds of the estate of a deceased person, realised by him under an order of the court, notwithstanding that a balance was due to the estate by his client as executrix, which she was unable to bring into court. White, In re, 17 L. R., Ir. 223.

Order as to Payment of Costs.]—An order had been made for the payment of the costs, charges, and expenses of all parties to a petition to appoint new trustees in the room of others who had disclaimed, such costs to be paid out of the trust estate to the London agent of the petitioner's solicitor. On an application that the amount of these costs (which had been taxed but not paid in consequence of the trust estate not having been realised) should be declared to be a charge on the trust property:—Held, that the petitioner having already obtained an order for these costs, the court could not, under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, declare the amount to be a charge on the estate. Viney, In re, 18 L. T. 851.

Nothing due to Client.]—The lien of a solicitor, upon property preserved in a suit, is not affected by the fact that when the accounts are taken, it appears that nothing is due to his client. Bailey v. Birchall, 5 N. R. 237; 2 Hem. & M. 371; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 57.

Fund in Court to Answer Claim—Extent of Charge.]—In an action for work done and materials supplied to a ship, the defendants (to release their ship) paid 742*l.* into court with a denial of liability, and appropriated 500*l.* of it to any claim the plaintiff could establish. They also counter-claimed for damages. In the result, upon the report of a referee, the plaintiff recovered 465*l.* on his claim, and the defendants 210*l.* on their counter-claim. Pending the delivery of the referee's report the plaintiff's solicitor obtained a charging order upon the 742*l.* in court:—Held, that this order was too large in its terms, and that his right to attach the fund in court was limited to the net result of the action; further, that when claim and counter-claim arose out of the same contract, they were to be taken to be one and not two actions. Thus, in the present instance, the defendants might set off the amount recovered by them on their counter-claim against the amount found due to the plaintiff on his claim. Accordingly, the charging order, to which the plaintiff's solicitor was entitled, was limited to the sum of 255*l.*, the net result of the action in the plaintiff's favour. Westacott v. Bevan, 60 L. J., Q. B. 536; [1891] 1 Q. B. 774; 65 L. T. 263; 39 W. R. 363.

Action by Bankrupt—Intervention of Trustee.]—An undischarged bankrupt commenced an action for the purpose of recovering moneys alleged to be due to him for remuneration for his personal services as an architect, rendered since the bankruptcy, and for damages for wrongful dismissal since that date, and also for further relief of a personal character which it was possible, but not probable, that he might obtain. The defendant denied the whole claim, but paid money into court. The plaintiff took out a summons to withdraw the money so paid in. The trustee in his bankruptcy took out another summons to withdraw the money, and also, before this case came on for hearing, a further summons, upon which being heard, the trustee was added as a co-plaintiff, and given the conduct of the action on the ground that the bulk, if not the whole, of the money which might be recovered in the action, would, if recovered, pass to the trustee for the benefit of the creditors. The solicitor, acting for the bankrupt, took out a summons under the Solicitors Act, 1860, s. 28, by which he asked for an order charging upon the fund in court his costs of or in reference to the action :—Held, that the fund paid into court had been "recovered or preserved" through the instrumentality of the solicitor, within the meaning of s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, and that such solicitor was entitled to a charging order on the money in respect of his costs down to the time when the trustee intervened, but not as to his costs incurred in opposing the trustee's claim to intervene. Emden v. Carte, 51 L. J., Ch. 371 ; 19 Ch. D. 311 ; 45 L. T. 328 ; 30 W. R. 17.

Client's Estate being Administered.]—A charging order may be made although the client's estate is being administered in chancery. Wilson v. Hood, 33 L. J., Ex. 204 ; 10 L. T. 345. S. P., Sleeman, Ex parte, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 593 ; 12 W. R. 748.

Infants interested.]—It makes no difference that the persons whose interests are charged are infants, but the court will not make the order until the infants have an opportunity of being heard on it. Greer v. Young, 52 L. J., Ch. 915 ; 24 Ch. D. 545 ; 49 L. T. 224 ; 31 W. R. 930.

The court will not hear an application by a solicitor for an order to charge the real estate of an infant with the costs of a suit instituted for its recovery, unless the application is substantially opposed on behalf of the infant. Bonser v. Bradshaw, 10 W. R. 481.

Creditors interested.]—In a partnership action the court will not make a charging order in the absence of the creditors. But where one of the creditors was present, and the case was argued on his behalf, the court appointed him to represent all the creditors. Jackson v. Smith, Digby, Ex parte, 53 L. J., Ch. 972 ; 51 L. T. 72.

Length of Time—Alteration of Rights of Parties—Discretion.]—A charging order on property recovered or preserved under s. 3 of 39 & 40 Vict. c. 44 (similar to 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 28), is a matter for the discretion of the court, and will be refused if applied for after a considerable lapse of time from the date of the work done, especially in cases where events have happened affecting the rights and interests of the parties entitled to the said property. Roche v. Roche, 29 L. R., Ir. 339—C. A.

—— In Matters of Lunacy.]—A lunatic died in June, 1853. In February, 1854, an order in lunacy was made, by which it was declared that the costs incurred in prosecuting the commission had been incurred for the benefit of the lunatic, and the bill was directed to be taxed. The taxation was completed in February, 1855, and after this the solicitor who had been employed in prosecuting the commission delivered for the first time a signed bill of costs. In October, 1860, the solicitor presented a petition to have his costs raised out of property of which the lunatic, who left issue, had been tenant in tail :—Held, that under the proviso contained in 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 29, the application was too late. Cumming, In re, 2 De G. F. & J. 376 ; 30 L. J., Ch. 29 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1129 ; 3 L. T. 391 ; 9 W. R. 213.

Costs — Further Consideration.] — Solicitors who had obtained a charging order for costs due to them were not allowed the costs of appearing by counsel at the hearing on further consideration. Mildmay v. Quiche, 46 L. J., Ch. 667 ; 6 Ch. D. 553 ; 25 W. R. 788.

—— Of Obtaining Order.]—H. and H., solicitors, acting for an administrator, were authorised by him to retain, in respect of their costs, certain moneys forming part of the estate of the deceased. An order to tax the bill of costs of H. and H. was obtained by J., one of the next of kin of the deceased, acting by R., her solicitor. The taxation shewed that H. and H. had been overpaid to the extent of 354*l*. H. and H. then acted for J., and on her behalf disputed the validity of R.'s retainer by J. It was, however, decided by Kay, J., that the retainer was valid. An order was then obtained by R. giving him a charge on the 354*l*. in respect of his costs properly incurred in the recovery of that sum ; and such costs were thereby directed to be taxed. The Court of Appeal affirmed the order, upholding R.'s retainer. In taxing the costs of R. under the charging order, the taxing-master allowed him the costs of the opposition to the proceedings to set aside the retainer, and also the costs connected with the appeal. H. and H. having objected to such allowance, they received, at 4.30 p.m. on the 4th December, 1885, from the taxing-master, a notice that, at 1 p.m. on the following day, he would proceed to consider their objections. H. and H. requested the taxing-master to adjourn to a later day, but he refused to do so, and proceeded in their absence. On a summons being taken out by the administrator, that the taxation should be reviewed on the grounds : (1) That the costs in reference to the dispute as to the retainer ought not to have been included in the taxation, inasmuch as they were merely the costs of a private dispute between J. and R. ; (2) that the costs of the appeal ought not to have been included, inasmuch as they were incurred after the date of the charging order :—Held, (1) that the costs of the opposition to the proceedings to set aside the retainer were costs of "recovering" 354*l*., and that such costs were properly included in the taxation ; (2) that the appeal having been brought in consequence of the proceedings in the court below, the costs thereof were properly included. Hill, In re, 33 Ch. D. 266 ; 55 L. T. 104—C. A.

Raising Costs—Direction in Order.]—In the absence of evidence that the plaintiff was himself unable to pay the costs, the order ought not to direct the costs to be raised out of the fund, but should merely give liberty to the solicitors to apply as to raising them. Jackson v. Smith, Digby, Ex parte, supra.

—— Time for —Action not Finished.] — A decree for administration of a testator's estate was made at the suit of an infant who was entitled to a contingent reversionary share in the estate. R. was solicitor for the plaintiff and for J. and A., two of the persons entitled to the other shares. After decree he ceased to be solicitor for these parties, and obtained an order directing taxation of his costs as their solicitor in the action, including the costs of the application, and charging their shares in the estate with the payment of such costs, with liberty to apply to have them raised. Before the cause had been heard, on further consideration, he applied to have the costs raised by a sale of the shares charged :—Held, that the application was premature, and that no order ought to be made for raising the costs until the cause was heard on further consideration. Green, In re, Green v. Green, 54 L. J., Ch. 54 ; 26 Ch. D. 16 ; 50 L. T. 513 ; 32 W. R. 373—C. A.

Application to Enforce Charge by Sale—Substituted Service on Persons interested.]—An action was commenced for the execution of the trusts of a settlement. The plaintiffs were one of the trustees of the settlement, the tenant for life, and three of the four beneficiaries interested in remainder. The other trustee was the sole defendant. The fourth beneficiary was not a party to the action. In February, 1883, judgment was given for the execution of the trusts of the settlement. In March, 1883, the solicitor for the plaintiffs obtained a charging order under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 28, on the real estate comprised in the settlement for his taxed costs, and liberty was given to him to apply for a sale of the property to raise such costs. The fourth beneficiary was not a party to this order. The solicitor took out a summons for a sale of the property under the liberty to apply. The summons was not served on the fourth beneficiary, as her address was not known:—Held, that no order for a sale could be made without notice to the fourth beneficiary; but that substituted service on her might be allowed by means of advertisements; that a notice calling upon her to appear within a certain time should be advertised, and thereupon, if she did not appear, an order might be made on the summons. Rowley v. Southwell, 61 L. T. 805.

3. Priority of.

Compromise between Parties.]—In a suit by a cestui que trust against a trustee of landed estate, praying for an account and a reconveyance, a receiver was ordered to be, and afterwards was, appointed, adversely to the defendant. Notice of motion for decree was served, but before the time for closing evidence had arrived, the plaintiff, without consulting her solicitor, and without his knowledge, entered into an agreement with the defendant for a compromise of the suit on the terms, first, that a sum of cash should be paid to the plaintiff, then that the mortgages on the property should be paid off, and then that the costs of all parties estimated at a fixed sum should be paid. Upon hearing of the compromise, the plaintiff's solicitor applied to the plaintiff and to the defendant's solicitor for the terms of it, but was refused all information:—Held, that the solicitor was entitled to a first charge for the amount of his taxed costs, as between solicitor and client, upon the property of the plaintiff, as having been recovered and preserved through his instrumentality. Twynam v. Porter, 40 L. J., Ch. 30; L. R. 11 Eq. 181; 23 L. T. 551; 19 W. R. 151.

Winding-up.]—In winding up a company the costs of the petition are the first charge on the estate, and next to them are the costs of the winding-up, including the bill of costs of the solicitor employed, which bill must be paid before any payment is made by way of remuneration to the official liquidator. Freehold Land and Brickmaking Co., In re, Massey, Ex parte, 39 L. J., Ch. 492; L. R. 9 Eq. 367; 22 L. T. 195; 18 W. R. 444.

Garnishee Proceedings.]—A judgment creditor of the defendant in a partnership action obtained a garnishee order nisi to attach all moneys in the hands of the receiver in the action appearing to be due to the defendant on taking the accounts. On the following day, and before service of the order nisi, the defendant's solicitors obtained, on a summons served on the receiver, a charging order intituled in the action, declaring that they were entitled to a charge for their costs upon all moneys coming to the defendant under the action. On the next day the garnishee order nisi was served on the receiver, and was subsequently made absolute:—Held, that the solicitors were entitled to their costs in priority to the claim of the creditor under the garnishee order both under the act and independently of it. Hamer v. Giles, 48 L. J., Ch. 508; 11 Ch. D. 942; 27 W. R. 834.

The plaintiffs were the solicitors for W. in an action in which he recovered a sum of money. The defendant was a judgment creditor of W., and obtained, ex parte, on the day that judgment was signed in the above action, a garnishee order attaching all debts due to W. On the taxation of costs on the same day the plaintiffs for the first time learned of the defendant's claim, and then gave notice to the defendant in the action in which W. was plaintiff of their claim of lien, and within five days applied for an order declaring that they were entitled to a charge on the money recovered by W.:—Held, that the plaintiffs had a lien for their costs on the sum recovered by W., that they were entitled to the order sought for, and that the garnishee order obtained by the defendant did not take priority over that lien. Shippey v. Grey, 49 L. J., C. P. 524; 42 L. T. 673; 28 W. R. 877—C. A.

A proctor's lien on a fund in court is not affected by a garnishee order, and he is entitled to be paid his costs in priority to the claim of the garnishee. The Jeff Davis, L. R. 2 Adm. 1; 17 L. T. 151.

The defendant having recovered a sum of money in an action brought by him against M., B., the defendant's attorney in that action, had taken out a summons for an order charging his costs in such action upon the sum recovered. The plaintiff afterwards, having recovered judgment in his action against the defendant, obtained an ex parte garnishee order attaching the sum recovered by the defendant against M. in execution. Under these circumstances the parties came before a judge at chambers, B. claiming to have a charging order on the judgment debt as property recovered within s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, and the plaintiff claiming an order on M. to pay the sum attached to him. The judge made an order in favour of B.:—Held, that he was right in so doing; that the sum recovered was property within the section, and that the attorney was entitled to priority. Birchall v. Pugin, 44 L. J., C. P. 278; L. R. 10 C. P. 397; 32 L. T. 495; 23 W. R. 923.

The proceeds of a fi. fa., issued on behalf of the successful plaintiff in an action, were attached in the hands of the sheriff by a garnishee summons from a county court to answer a judgment obtained against the plaintiff in that court. The plaintiff's solicitor in the action, who had received notice of the service of the garnishee summons, subsequently obtained an order under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, charging the fund recovered with costs of the action remaining due to him:—Held, that such order was rightly made, and the solicitor's claim was entitled to priority over the claim of the judgment creditor of the plaintiff under the garnishee summons. Dallow v. Garrold, 54 L. J., Q. B. 76; 14 Q. B. D. 543; 52 L. T. 240; 33 W. R. 219—C. A.

Mortgage of Client's Interest.]—The plaintiffs in a suit mortgaged their interests in the estate, the subject of the suit, to two of the defendants. This mortgage was sent to the solicitor of the plaintiffs for his perusal and approval on their behalf, and he sanctioned their executing it. Nothing was said by either party about any claim by the plaintiffs' solicitor for the costs of suit. The solicitor afterwards obtained a charging order for them under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, on the interests of the plaintiffs:—Held, that as the mortgagees had notice of the suit, they must be presumed to have known the rights of the solicitor of the plaintiffs, and that his charge ought not to be postponed to the mortgage, he not having been guilty of any misrepresentation or concealment. Faithfull v. Ewen, 47 L. J., Ch. 457; 7 Ch. D. 495; 37 L. T. 805; 26 W. R. 270—C. A.

The solicitors of a successful plaintiff in an action for specific performance of a contract for the sale of leasehold premises are entitled to a charging order on the property recovered, which has priority over a mortgage granted by the plaintiff before the commencement of the action, where the mortgagee, though not a party to the proceedings, adopts the benefit obtained thereby. Scholey v. Peck, 62 L. J., Ch. 658; [1893] 1 Ch. 709; 3 R. 245; 68 L. T. 118; 41 W. R. 508.

Solicitors who have acted for the plaintiff in a still pending suit, under which the plaintiff had recovered certain lands, were held entitled to a charging order for their costs, when taxed, under s. 3 of 39 & 40 Vict. c. 44 (similar to s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860), on the interest of the plaintiff in the lands, and their right of lien in respect of costs incurred in the suit ought not to be postponed to an equitable mortgage, inasmuch as there had been no fraud, misrepresentation, or concealment on their part. Dennis v. Addy, [1894] 1 Ir. R. 511.

—— Direction of Client as to Money.]—While a suit for redemption of a mortgaged estate was pending the plaintiff mortgaged his interest in the estate to D. The plaintiff's solicitor in the suit acted for both parties in this mortgage. A company had given notice to take the property compulsorily, but the price had not been ascertained. On the day of the execution of the mortgage to D., the plaintiff wrote to his solicitors and their London agents a letter directing them to pay D.'s mortgage debt out of the first money that should come to their hands from the company, and the solicitors handed this letter to D. with the mortgage debt. After this the price of the land was ascertained by arbitration, in which arbitration the London agents acted as the plaintiff's solicitors, and the price was carried over to the credit of the redemption suit, and left a balance after paying off the original mortgage debt. After this the solicitors and their London agents applied for an order charging the fund with their costs in the action and in the arbitration. The court made an order giving them a charge, and decided that they were entitled to priority over D.'s mortgage:—Held, on appeal, that the mere fact that the solicitors acted for D., as well as for the plaintiff, in the matter of the mortgage, did not disentitle them to priority. Snell, In re (6 Ch. D. 105), distinguished. But held, that the plaintiff's letter was a direction to the solicitors that moneys to come to their hands from the property were to be applied in the first place to paying D., and that they having forwarded this letter to D. were bound by the direction, and could not set up a claim of their own in opposition to it, and were in no better position as to moneys in court than as to moneys which actually came to their hands, and that their charge must be postponed to D.'s mortgage. Macfarlane v. Lister, 57 L. J., Ch. 92; 37 Ch. D. 88; 58 L. T. 201—C. A.

Assignment of Judgment Debt or Fund.]—On the assignment of a judgment debt, notice that the subject-matter of the assignment is the subject-matter of a suit amounts to notice to the assignee of the existence of the solicitor's right to a lien, and prevents the assignee from being a "purchaser for value without notice" so as to defeat the solicitor's claim to a charging order under the Solicitors Act, 1860. Faithfull v. Ewen (7 Ch. D. 495) followed. Cole v. Eley, 63 L. J., Q. B. 682; [1894] 2 Q. B. 350; 9 R. 552; 70 L. T. 892; 42 W. R. 561—C. A.

The lien of a solicitor for his costs on a fund recovered by his exertions cannot be affected by an assignment of the fund by the client, nor by a stop-order obtained by the assignee. Haymes v. Cooper, 33 Beav. 431; 33 L. J., Ch. 488; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 303; 10 L. T. 87; 12 W. R. 539.

Restraint on Anticipation.]—A solicitor was retained by a wife in the successful defence of a suit instituted by her husband to set aside a settlement, whereby he covenanted to pay her an annuity for her separate use without power of anticipation, and assigned property to trustees to secure the annuity. Upon a petition by the solicitor to charge, under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, the annuity with his costs incurred on her behalf:—Held, that the married woman was competent to employ a solicitor for the purpose of defending such a suit, and that the right of the solicitor under the act to a charge upon the property preserved by his exertions was paramount to the restraint upon anticipation. Keane, In re, Lumley v. Desborough, 40 L. J., Ch. 617; L. R. 12 Eq. 115; 24 L. T. 780; 19 W. R. 1025.

Held, also, that the charge was limited to the annuity and did not extend to the trust fund upon which it was secured. Ib.

Lien for Necessaries or Wages.]—When a solicitor in the Court of Admiralty has acquired, by order of the court under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, or otherwise, a lien for his costs upon a ship, as for property recovered or preserved by his exertions, or upon its proceeds in court, his lien takes precedence of liens for necessaries supplied after the institution against the ship of the cause in respect of which he is entitled to costs, but not of liens for necessaries supplied before the institution. The Heinrich, 41 L. J., P. 68; L. R. 3 Adm. 505; 26 L. T. 372; 20 W. R. 759.

His lien takes precedence of the lien of the master of the ship for wages, where the master is also part owner, and has instructed him to defend the cause. Ib.

Claim by Foreign Consul for Payment of Expense of sending Crew Home.]—Salvage actions were brought against an Italian vessel, and she was sold by order of the court. After the salvors had been remunerated, the balance of the fund in court was insufficient to satisfy the costs of the solicitors who had appeared in the above actions for the parties interested in the ship, and who sought to enforce their claim for such costs by virtue of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127. s. 28, as well as the claim of the Italian consul in respect of the expenses of sending the crew back to Italy. It was proved that by the law of Italy such expenses and the keep of the master and crew ranked next to the salvage payments :—Held, that the claim of the Italian consul had priority to that of the solicitors. The Livietta, 52 L. J., P. 81 ; 8 P. D. 209 ; 49 L. T. 411 ; 5 Asp. M. C. 151.

Rights of Creditors.]—Where in a partnership action a receiver, who was appointed at the instance of the plaintiff, realised the assets and paid into court a fund representing the proceeds of such realisation :—Held, that the solicitors of the plaintiff were entitled to a lien on the fund for their costs in priority to the creditors of the partnership. Hamer v. Giles (11 Ch. D. 942) explained. Jackson v. Smith, Digby, Ex parte, 53 L. J., Ch. 972 ; 51 L. T. 72.

Where a solicitor had obtained a right to charge his costs under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, upon certain real property :—Held, that his right was paramount to that of the creditors of the client (who was dead), under a decree for sale made in a suit to administer his real and personal estate. Wilson v. Round, 3 N. R. 288 ; 4 Giff. 416 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 34 ; 9 L. T. 675 ; 12 W. R. 402.

Change of Solicitor before Trial.]—The solicitor who had acted for the plaintiff in the institution and conduct of an action to establish his right to a sum of money was discharged by the client shortly before the trial. The action was continued by new solicitors on behalf of the plaintiff, and judgment was delivered in favour of the plaintiff ordering the defendant to pay him the money. After the trial the former solicitor obtained, under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, a declaration of charge upon the sum recovered "subject to the lien of the present solicitors of the plaintiff upon the said sum" :—Held, that the solicitor who was solicitor at the time the fund was recovered was entitled to a first charge thereon for all his taxed costs of the action, and subject thereto that the discharged solicitor was entitled to such lien as he obtained under his charging order. Cormack v. Beisley (3 De G. & J. 157) followed. Wadsworth, In re, Rhodes v. Sugden, 56 L. J., Ch. 127 ; 34 Ch. D. 155 ; 55 L. T. 596 ; 35 W. R. 75. See cases, post, cols. 1742, 1743.

Where successive solicitors are employed in an action, and the fund in court is insufficient for payment of all the costs, the solicitor who conducts the cause to its conclusion is entitled to be paid first, and the solicitor who was next previously employed is entitled to be paid next, and so on throughout, the latest in order of employment being entitled to priority ; and it is immaterial that the previously employed solicitors may have obtained charging orders for their costs. Wadsworth, In re (34 Ch. D. 155), followed. Knight, In re, Knight v. Gardner, 61 L. J., Ch. 399 ; [1892] 2 Ch. 368 ; 66 L. T. 646 ; 40 W. R. 460.

Landlord's Claim for Rent.]—A solicitor who has obtained an order, under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, charging property preserved with payment of his taxed costs, takes priority over a landlord who, before the charging order, might have, but had not, distrained for rent upon the same property. Suffield and Watts, In re, Brown, Ex parte, 20 Q. B. D. 693 ; 58 L. T. 911 ; 36 W. R. 584 ; 5 Morrell, 83—C. A.

Arrestment ad fundandam jurisdictionem.]—The appellant, a domiciled Englishman, being defendant in an action in the Queen's Bench Division, obtained on 25th April, 1887, judgment for costs against W., the plaintiff, who was a domiciled Scotchman. On 26th May, the respondent executed in Scotland an arrestment ad fundandam jurisdictionem against W. of the amount due under the judgment, and his summons was served on the appellant on the following day. On 13th June, the appellant's solicitors in the action in the Queen's Bench Division obtained a charging order upon the costs recovered in the action :—Held, that even assuming that the charging order was retrospective in its operation, the arrestment was effectual for the purpose of founding jurisdiction, as such arrestment could in no way affect the operation of the charging order. North v. Stewart, 15 App. Cas. 452 ; 63 L. T. 718—H. L. (Sc.)

b. Lien.

1. What Costs or Debts.

Due to Solicitor in that Character.]—Lien is confined to what is due to the solicitor in that character, and does not extend to general debts. Accordingly the lien of the solicitor of a railway company for his costs does not include costs incurred in relation to the promotion of the company before incorporation, such costs by the usual clause in the act having been made a statutory debt to be paid by the company. Galland, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 478 ; 31 Ch. D. 296 ; 53 L. T. 921 ; 34 W. R. 158—C. A.

The lien of a solicitor does not extend to debts that are not due to him in his professional character. Worrall v. Johnson, 2 Jac. & W. 214 ; 22 R. R. 106.

A testator assigned policies of assurance on his own life to his solicitor as trustee to secure to mortgagees the repayment of a loan. On a claim against the testator's estate of a lien on the policy moneys (a) in respect of solicitor's costs, (b) in respect of premiums paid by the solicitor on the policies, and (c) in respect of work done as a land agent :—Held, that the solicitor was entitled to be repaid the premiums and to a lien in respect of his solicitor's costs, but that land agency charges were not the subject of a lien. Walker, In re, Meredith v. Walker, 3 R. 455 ; 68 L. T. 517.

Costs relating to a habeas corpus (not being taxable costs, charges, and expenses incurred as solicitors for the client) cannot be included in the lien. Hanbury, Whitting, and Nicholson, In re, 75 L. T. 449.

A solicitor's lien extends to all taxable costs, charges, and expenses incurred by him as solicitor for his client, in which category are included all such advances as are not necessarily allowed by the taxing-master on being vouched, but may be disallowed or moderated if improper or excessive. It does not extend to ordinary advances. Payne-Collier, Ex parte, Taylor, In re, 60 L. J., Ch. 525 ; [1891] 1 Ch. 590 ; 64 L. T. 605 ; 39 W. R. 417—C. A.

The solicitor of the executrix and devisee paying a sum of money in exoneration of an adverse claim on part of the testator's estate, does not, as against creditors of the testator, necessarily, and by force of the transaction alone, acquire a lien upon the estate or on the title deeds for the sum which he so paid. Christian

v. Field, 2 Hare, 177; 11 L. J., Ch. 97; 5 Jur. 1130.

Acting without Authority.]—A solicitor who used the names of the parties as plaintiffs in a suit without their consent was held to have no lien for his general bill of costs on the fund in court. Hall v. Lacer, 4 Y. & Coll. 216; 1 Hare, 571; 5 Jur. 241.

Where the directors of a company carry on a business not authorised by the deed of settlement, and costs are thereby increased, the solicitors of the company have no lien for their costs on the papers of the company. Phœnix Life Assurance Co., In re, Howard and Dollman, Ex parte, 2 N. R. 548; 1 Hem. & M. 433; 8 L. T. 728; 11 W. R. 984.

Trover — Application for Deeds.] — Trover against an attorney for deeds; cause referred; award, a nonsuit, and each party to pay his own costs:—Held, that the attorney had no lien on the deeds for the costs. Sharpe, In re, 1 D. P. C. 432.

Held, also, that the attorney had no lien on the deeds for expenses incurred by him in consequence of applications made to him for the deeds. Ib.

Debt Barred by Statute.]—A lien is not barred by the fact that the debt in respect of which the lien is claimed is barred, and may be enforced for the purpose of obstructing an administration action, if the debtor declines to waive his rights under the statute. Carter, In re, Carter v. Carter, 55 L. J., Ch. 230; 53 L. T. 630; 34 W. R. 57.

The lien of an attorney remains although the claim is barred by the Statute of Limitations. Broomhead, In re, 5 D. & L. 52; 16 L. J., Q. B. 355.

Express Contract.]—A client wrote a letter to her solicitors authorising them to sell the property of hers of which they were legal mortgagees by transfer, and to pay off the money due thereon and on the transfer to them, and "all expenses due to you":—Held, that this memorandum gave the solicitors no charge in respect of their general bill of costs not relating to the mortgage. Champney v. Burland, 19 W. R. 913.

The character of an incumbrance, the result of contract, does not belong to the solicitor's lien. Blunden v. Desart, 2 Dr. & War. 405; 2 Con. & L. 111; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 221.

On a lease being granted, the lessee deposited it with the lessor's solicitor (who acted for the lessor and lessee), together with a bill of exchange as a security for the costs of preparing the lease, which the lessee was to pay. The lessee afterwards mortgaged the term, and the defendants (who were his solicitors on that occasion), in order to obtain the lease, paid the bill of costs of the lessor's solicitors, and received from them, without any authority from the lessee, the lease and the bill of exchange:—Held, first, that without express contract the defendants acquired no lien on the bill of exchange beyond the amount which they had paid to the lessor's solicitors; secondly, that evidence of an express contract would not support such a lien without proof that the defendants had explained to their client, the lessee, his rights, independently of express contract. Gibson v. May, 4 De G. M. & G. 512.

On Deeds—General Lien.]—Attorney's lien generally on papers in his possession not limited to the occasion on which they were delivered, without special agreement. Sterling, Ex parte, 16 Ves. 258; 10 R. R. 177.

A solicitor is entitled to a general lien for costs on papers deposited with him by his client for a particular purpose only, unless that general lien is excluded by a special agreement. Colmer v. Ede, 40 L. J., Ch. 185; 23 L. T. 884; 19 W. R. 318.

An attorney has a lien for his general balance on papers of his client which come to his hands in the course of his professional employment. Stevenson v. Blakelock, 1 M. & S. 535; 14 R. R. 525. S. P., Bozon v. Bolland, 4 Myl. & C. 354; 9 L. J., Ch. 123; 3 Jur. 884; 4 Jur. 763; Blunden v. Desart, 2 Dr. & War. 405; 2 Con. & L. 111; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 221.

He has a lien on the papers in a particular suit, not only for his costs in that suit, but for his general costs. Broomhead, In re, 5 D. & L. 52; 16 L. J., Q. B. 355. S. P., Faithfull, In re, L. R. 6 Eq. 325; 18 L. T. 502.

A solicitor has a lien on papers delivered to him in that character for all professional business, but no lien as a solicitor on papers delivered to him as steward. Champernown v. Scott, 6 Madd. 93; 22 R. R. 248.

Deeds deposited with a solicitor for a particular purpose, and after that has failed permitted to remain with him, are subject to the general lien. Pemberton, Ex parte, 18 Ves. 282.

—— On Fund—Difference between.]—A difference exists between the lien of a solicitor on a fund recovered for his client in an action and on deeds coming into his possession, inasmuch as in the former case he has no lien for all costs due to him from his client, but only for the costs of recovering that particular fund; and even where the solicitor actually gets the fund into his possession he obtains no greater lien than if it had remained in court. Mackenzie v. Mackintosh, 64 L. T. 706; 7 Asp. M. C. 53—C. A.

Solicitor has no lien on fund decreed to be paid to his client beyond the costs in that suit. Lann v. Church, 4 Madd. 391.

Whether a solicitor's lien for his costs on a fund in court is general, or is confined to costs of the particular suit, quære. Solicitor having in his possession the instrument on which his client's right to the fund rests, he has a general lien on the fund. Worrall v. Johnson, 2 Jac. & Walk. 214; 22 R. R. 106.

When a pauper obtains a decree for debt and costs, his solicitor has a lien on the sum recovered for divers costs, though the sum is deficient for payment of plaintiff's demands. Quin v. Bodkin, 2 Hog. 240.

A solicitor's lien upon the fund is not a general lien; it extends only to costs in the cause, and costs immediately connected with costs in the cause; as, for instance, the costs of successfully protecting a solicitor's right to the costs in a cause. Lucas v. Peacock, 9 Beav. 177.

The lien of a solicitor upon a fund recovered in a suit which he has conducted is confined to the costs of that particular suit, and therefore, semble, a solicitor who, in relation to the same estate in which the same parties are interested, has brought an ejectment and a suit in equity, has no lien upon the fund recovered in the suit for his costs of the ejectment. Hall v. Laver, 1 Hare, 571 ; 4 Y. & Coll. 218 ; 5 Jur. 241.

A solicitor has a lien for his costs on a fund in court produced by his exertions ; and, therefore, where on a bill for discovery in aid of a defence at law an injunction was granted on terms, one of which was the payment of money into court, and an answer was afterwards filed, and the action at law being subsequently tried, a verdict was found for the defendant, it was :—Held, that the solicitor for the defendant in equity had a lien on the fund for the costs of the discovery. But where the solicitor putting in the answer was removed, and his demand paid, and another solicitor employed, it was considered that the fund was exonerated to that extent, and the latter solicitor had not any lien for the cost of the former solicitor, though paid by him. Irving v. Viana, 2 Y. & J. 70 ; 31 R. R. 552.

On Fund—Production of Document.]—Where a security is realised in a suit by means of the production of a document, upon which a solicitor, then acting as such, has a lien, his lien upon the fund realised is confined to the costs of that suit. It is the same too when the document is voluntarily produced by a solicitor not at the time acting as a solicitor to the party ; but in such a case he might if he chose have made his own terms with his former client before producing the deed. Bozon v. Bolland, 4 Myl. & C. 354 ; 9 L. J., Ch. 123 ; 3 Jur. 884 ; 4 Jur. 763.

—— Form of Order.]—The lien of a solicitor on the fund is not impeded by the fact that the order of the court directs the fund to be paid to the client without reserving the right of the solicitor. Lloyd v. Mason, 4 Hare, 132 ; 14 L. J., Ch. 257 ; 9 Jur. 772.

—— Defaulting Receiver.] —Although the solicitor of a defaulting receiver cannot have the cost of his proceedings until the sum found to be due from the receiver, with interest, shall have been paid in, yet, when at his own proper costs, and under the orders of the court, the solicitor of the receiver brought certain actions at law against defaulting tenants and their sureties, &c. :—Held, that the solicitor was entitled to be paid the costs of such proceedings out of the funds in court. M'Bride v. Clarke, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 203.

On Client's Moneys.]—A solicitor has no lien on his client's money in his hands, beyond the amount in which the latter is indebted to him. Miller v. Alter, 3 Ex. 799 ; 13 Jur. 431.

The attorney's right to lien extends to costs taxed as between attorney and client. Watson v. Maskall, 1 Scott, 658 ; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 366 ; 3 D. P. C. 638 ; 1 Hodges, 73 ; 4 L. J., C. P. 266.

Tenant for Life and Remainderman—Lunatic—Committee.]—A lunatic was tenant for life of certain lands, with remainder to two remaindermen as tenants in common in tail. A firm of solicitors acted for the committee in the lunacy, and in that capacity obtained custody of the title deeds. One of the remaindermen was subsequently appointed committee, and he employed the same solicitors. To pay off a mortgage on the life estate the two remaindermen, being desirous of creating a charge on the fee, presented a petition in the lunacy matter asking that the committee should be authorised to join in barring the entail. The same solicitors acted in this matter, in the raising of the loan, and in the disentailment of the estate :—Held, after the death of the lunatic, that the solicitors were entitled to a lien on the deeds for these costs against the remaindermen, but not in respect of costs incurred as solicitors for the committee. Stannard's Estate, In re, [1897] 1 Ir. R. 415.

2. What Persons Entitled to.

Clerk to Local Board.]—A solicitor appointed clerk to a local board at a fixed salary for conducting the legal as well as the ordinary business of the board has a lien on documents for costs due for professional services. Newington Local Board v. Eldridge, 12 Ch. D. 349—C. A.

Town Clerk.]—A town clerk, who is solicitor to a corporation, has the same lien on corporation papers for professional business that he would have if he were not also town clerk. Rex v. Sankey, 6 N. & M. 839 ; 5 A. & E. 423 ; 5 L. J., K. B. 255. S. P., Rex v. Williams, 2 H. & W. 275.

Town Agent for Country Solicitor.]—See post, col. 1750.

Plaintiff's or Defendant's Solicitor.]—The solicitor's lien on a fund recovered applies in equity to the defendant's solicitor as well as the plaintiff's. Townsend v. Reade, 4 L. J., Ch. 233.

Where Solicitor is also a Mortgagee.]—Lands were ordered to be sold on the petition of C., an incumbrancer. C., who had previously been solicitor for the owner, lodged in court, under an order and subject to his lien for costs due to him by the owner, several deeds and documents relating to the lands, including proposals and counterparts of leases under which the tenants held. These deeds and documents (as the court held) had come into the hands of C. as solicitor for the owner. C. was also transferee of a mortgage of the lands, which had been executed to one H., and C. had acted as solicitor for H. and the owner on the occasion of the mortgage. The owner made a private offer for purchase of the lands, which was accepted, and took a conveyance. The owner having objected to the claim of lien, on the grounds that the documents were not such as a purchaser would require, and further, that C. had held them not as solicitor but as mortgagee :—Held, that these grounds of objection were unsustainable, and that C. was entitled to his lien on the deeds and documents lodged under the order. Semble, C. would not have lost the lien by taking a mortgage from the owner for money due other than the costs secured by the lien. Harvey's Estate, In re, 17 L. R., Ir. 65.

Undischarged Bankrupt—Title of Trustee.]—An undischarged bankrupt took out letters patent for an invention, and granted a licence to a company to work the patented invention at a royalty of 10*l.* per week. Subsequent royalties became due, and the trustee applied to the Bankruptcy Court for a declaration that they vested in him as after-acquired property of the bankrupt :—Held, that the solicitor of the bankrupt had as against the trustee a first charge for his costs of creating the fund—i.e., his costs properly incurred in taking out and maintaining the letters patent and carrying through the arrangements with the company. Graydon, In re, Official Receiver, Ex parte, 65 L. J., Q. B. 328; [1896] 1 Q. B. 417; 44 W. R. 495.

3. Extent of Client's Interest.

Binds Solicitor's Right of Lien.]—A solicitor cannot, by his lien, have a better right to the client's title deeds than the client himself had at the time of the costs being incurred. Smith v. Chichester, 2 Dr. & War. 393; 1 Con. & L. 486; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 580.

By settlement a sum of 2,500*l.* was charged on an estate for lives renewable for ever for the issue of the marriage, subject to appointment, part of which was appointed to one of the children on her marriage, and then settled; the residue was never appointed. After the death of the first settlor, A., the solicitor of B., the other child of the marriage, acting under a power of attorney, obtained a renewal, and instituted a suit in his name to raise his portion of the unappointed charge, but did not prosecute it. On the death of B., A. obtained limited administration to him, and, with the parties entitled to the daughter's share of the charge, filed a bill to raise the charge, when a receiver was appointed and funds got in. The lands being sold in a creditors' suit, and the settlements lodged in the office by order, without prejudice to A.'s lien:—Held, that A. had no lien for costs on the deeds, as B., through whom he got them, had no exclusive right to them, and that there could not be any lien transferred to the funds. Molesworth v. Robbins, 8 Ir. Eq. R. 1; 2 Jo. & Lat. 358. Affirmed 8 Ir. Eq. R. 223.

A solicitor, without notice of an incumbrance, either legal or equitable, prior to his possession of the title deeds of the property affected by it, has no right of lien on the deeds as against the incumbrancer, for a solicitor can have no lien of a higher nature on deeds in his possession belonging to his client than the interest which the client himself has. Pelly v. Wathen, 1 De G. M. & G. 16; 21 L. J., Ch. 105; 16 Jur. 47.

The lien which an attorney has on the papers in his hands is only commensurate with the right which the party delivering the papers to him has therein. Hollis v. Claridge, 4 Taunt. 807.

The lien of an attorney is only co-extensive with the rights of his client, and therefore, as between the plaintiff and defendant, the lien of the plaintiff's attorney cannot affect the right of the defendant. Symons v. Blake, 2 C. M. & R. 416; 4 D. P. C. 263; 1 Gale, 182.

In an administration action against an executrix, unless the estate of the executrix is indebted to that of the testator, her estate is entitled to a lien on the deeds for her costs, and her solicitor has a lien to that extent. Turner v. Letts, 7 De G. M. & G. 243; 3 Eq. R. 846; 24 L. J., Ch. 638; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1057; 3 W. R. 494.

A solicitor may detain title deeds as against client till payment of his bill, but not against persons who have antecedent rights. Marsh v. Bathoe, Ridgw. P. C. 256.

Solicitor has no lien against remainderman on deeds put into his hands by tenant for life. Nesbitt, Ex parte, 2 Sch. & Lef. 279.

Where a trustee, at the request of the tenant for life, lends the trust deed to the solicitor of such tenant for life, he not being the trustee's solicitor, such loan gives no lien to the solicitor for his costs due from his client. Mayhew, In re, 7 W. R. 351.

Committee of a lunatic has a lien on the lunatic's estate: the solicitor employed by the committee declared to stand in his place. Barnesley v. Powell, Ambl. 102.

Solicitor has a lien on funds of a lunatic. Price, Ex parte, 2 Ves. 407.

A solicitor's lien is not a general lien on a fund in court, though brought in by his exertions, but only on what may, on the issue of the suit, be belonging to his client. Downes, In re, Verity v. Wild, 4 Drew. 427; 28 L. J., Ch. 561.

Therefore, where, by the exertions of a plaintiff's solicitor, a fund was ordered to be brought into court on which the defendant had a primary claim, and afterwards the plaintiff changed his solicitor, and the parties were proceeding without bringing the fund into court to divide it under compromise, without paying the plaintiff's original solicitor:—Held, that he had no lien on the fund; but it was ordered that no order should be made by compromise or otherwise for payment of any money to the plaintiff without notice to the plaintiff's original solicitor. Ib.

Solicitors have no right to look for their costs to a fund in court not belonging to their clients. Chick v. Nicholls, 26 W. R. 231.

Where, therefore, in an administration suit the estate in court was exhausted by creditors, so that nothing was left for the testator's representative, and she became insolvent, a motion that her costs of suit might be retained out of the fund in court, so that her solicitors might be paid, was refused. Ib.

—— Husband's Petition—Money in Court.]—A husband having obtained a decree nisi against his wife, the wife moved for a new trial, and her motion was dismissed with costs. The husband claimed to apply a sum which he paid into court to provide for the costs of the wife's defence to the action, and which still remained in court, in payment of his costs on the motion for the new trial:—Held that the court ought not to deprive the wife's solicitor of his costs out of the fund provided for that purpose, in the absence of misconduct on his part, and the application was refused. Hall v. Hall, 60 L. J., P. 73; [1891] P. 302; 65 L. T. 206—C. A.

—— In Cases of Partnership.]—An attorney with whom title deeds, the property of a member of a firm, have been deposited by that member, in the course of professional business done on his private account, has no lien on them for a debt due from the partnership. Turner v. Deane, 6 D. & L. 669; 3 Ex. 836; 18 L. J., Ex. 343.

—— Client indebted to Trust Estate.]—Where a person, at the time of an order being made for the payment of his costs by trustees on a petition in the matter of a trust, is indebted to the trust estate, although the amount is not then ascertained, he cannot get any of such costs until he has paid the amount due from him to the trust, and the trustees, therefore, can set off the costs payable by them against the amount due from him. His solicitor cannot be in a better position than he is himself, and has no lien on such costs. Harrald, In re, Wilde v. Walford, 53 L. J., Ch. 505; 51 L. T. 441—C. A. Reversing 31 W. R. 318.

Secus, as to the costs of the trustees incurred in recovering such amount. Ib.

Employment by Liquidator.]—The general principle that an official liquidator can retain no part of the company's estate without an order of the court applies equally to the lien of his solicitor for costs on the company's moneys recovered by his exertions. Such moneys must in the first instance be paid into court. Union Cement and Brick Co., In re, 26 L. T. 240; 20 W. R. 361.

An official liquidator cannot, by contract or otherwise, give to his solicitor any lien for costs in the winding-up upon any of the documents relating to the winding-up which are included in r. 58 of the general order under the Companies Act, 1862. Pulbrook, Ex parte, Union Brick and Cement Co., In re, L. R. 4 Ch. 627; 21 L. T. 46; 17 W. R. 946.

Employment by Company.]—Directors have no power to create any lien on the share register and minute book of a company which could interfere with their being used for the purposes of the company. Capital Fire Insurance Association, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 71; 24 Ch. D. 408; 49 L. T. 697; 32 W. R. 260—C. A.

—— Acting for Trustees of Debenture Holders.]—Solicitors of a company, who, upon the occasion of the directors conveying all the property of the company to two of their body upon trusts to secure the repayment of moneys borrowed upon debentures, prepare a mortgage deed and act for the company and the trustees, have no right of lien for the payment of their costs. Mason and Taylor, In re, 48 L. J., Ch. 193; 10 Ch. D. 729; 27 W. R. 311.

Vendor and Purchaser.]—The vendee's solicitor sent the conveyance to the vendor to be executed; he returned it executed to the defendant, his own solicitor. On the contract being rescinded, the vendee is entitled to the deed without being subject to the lien of the vendor's solicitor. Esdaile v. Oxenham, 3 B. & C. 225; 5 D. & R. 49; 27 R. R. 331.

A. is employed for some time by Messrs. B. as their attorney, and in the course of such employment, a considerable debt becomes due to him. Messrs. B. contract to sell an estate to C., who pays to them a part of the purchase-money, and A. is employed in preparing the contract, and making out the title. The solicitor of C. prepares the draft of the conveyance, which is sent to A. and approved by him on behalf of Messrs. B., and the engrossment is afterwards executed by Messrs. B., and delivered by them to A., for the purpose of being handed over to C., on payment of the remainder of the purchase-money; before this is done, Messrs. B. become bankrupts, and the contract is rescinded:—Held, that A. has no lien on the deeds for the debt due to him from Messrs. B., but that C. is entitled to have the deeds delivered to him. The rules with respect to lien are the same in equity as at law. Oxenham v. Esdaile, 2 Y. & J. 493.

Acting in Trust Matters.]—The employment of a solicitor in business relating to the trust estate by the authority of the trustee, or of some of several cestuis que trustent, gives the solicitor no lien or charge upon the trust estate, or upon the shares of the other cestuis que trustent, for costs incurred in relation to the trust. Hall v. Laver, 1 Hare, 571; 4 Y. & Coll. 218; 5 Jur. 241.

A testator devised his estates to trustees to receive the rents and profits, and pay and apply two-thirds of them to the plaintiff, and one-third to his widow during her life, and after her decease he devised the estates to the plaintiff in fee. The trustees deposited the deeds with an attorney for purposes connected with the trust, who claimed to detain the deeds as a lien for his charges incurred in respect thereof:—Held, that he was not entitled to detain them from the plaintiff on the death of the widow, as the debt incurred was the personal debt of the trustees. Lightfoot v. Keane, 1 M. & W. 745; 2 Gale, 138; 5 L. J., Ex. 257.

A trustee under a will committed a breach of trust by lending trust moneys to his co-trustee upon a mortgage for a term of years. An administration suit was instituted, and he was ordered to pay the money into court. He sold part of the mortgaged property under a power of sale in the mortgage, and on the application of two of the cestuis que trustent the proceeds were paid into court, subject to an order that they were not to be paid out without the consent of the purchaser. The trustees' solicitors refused to give up the mortgage deeds unless upon payment of their bill of costs:—Held, that the circumstances of the realisation of the trust fund by the trustees' solicitors, and of the cestuis que trustent availing themselves of that realisation, did not entitle the trustees' solicitors to a lien on the deeds or on the fund in court, as against the cestuis que trustent, but that they could have no higher claim against the deeds or the fund than that of their client, the trustee. Francis v. Francis, 3 De G. M. & G. 108. And see S. C., 2 De G. M. & G. 73.

Mortgagor and Mortgagee.]—The attorney of the mortgagor, to whom, pending a suit to foreclose the mortgage, the title deeds of the mortgaged premises have been delivered by the mortgagor, for the purpose of procuring a loan of money, has no lien upon them for his costs in that transaction as against the mortgagee. Hutchinson v. Joyce, 2 Jones, 122.

The owner of lands, subject to a mortgage of the year 1777, and to judgments confessed in and subsequently to the year 1820, deposited, in March 1819, the title deeds with his solicitor. In a suit instituted by the judgment creditors, it was decreed that those lands should be sold to pay off the mortgage, and that the title deeds should be lodged in the office without prejudice to any lien which the solicitor might have thereon for costs, which was done accordingly. The lands were sold and the deeds handed to the purchaser:—Held, that the solicitor had no lien on the deeds, having no right to retain them as against the mortgagee. Taylor v. Gorman, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 300. Affirmed 7 Ir. Eq. R. 259.

Held, also, that his lien on the deeds was not transferred to the surplus funds of the sale, remaining after payment of the mortgage. Ib.

A mortgagor, who had borrowed the title deeds from an equitable mortgagee to enable him to sell the property, handed them to his solicitor in order to complete. The mortgagee acquiesced in the sale:—Held, that the solicitor had a lien on the deeds for his costs of the transaction only, but not for his other claims for costs against the mortgagor. Young v. English, 7 Beav. 10; 13 L. J., Ch. 76.

A solicitor, who was employed by an administrator as well in the affairs of the administration as on his private account, having in the course of that employment obtained possession of several documents relating to the intestate's leasehold estate, and having, by the direction of his client, deposited certain deeds relating to a portion of such property with the executor of a deceased party, who was entitled to a distributive share of the intestate's estate (for the purpose of securing the payment of certain legacies given by her will), claimed for his bill of costs, due from the administrator, a lien on other documents in his possession, relating to the same property as that to which the deeds related which were so deposited :—Held, that the security having been effected through the agency of the solicitor, without any reservation on his part in favour of his lien, he had no right to derogate from that security by withholding any document necessary to give effect to it, and that therefore he had no lien on the documents in his possession as against the party entitled to the benefit of the security. Hicks v. Keate, 3 Jur. 1024.

A., being seised in quasi fee of an estate pur autre vie, granted a mortgage thereof in 1814. In 1824 A. obtained a renewal from the head landlord, and deposited the indenture of renewal with his solicitor, who, in a foreclosure suit by a mortgagee, insisted upon retaining the indenture by virtue of a lien thereupon for costs incurred since 1814 :—Held, that he was not entitled to that lien as against the right of the mortgagee. Smith v. Chichester, 2 Dr. & War. 393 ; 1 Con. & L. 486 ; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 580.

A mortgagee's attorney having possession of the title deeds has a lien upon such deeds for costs due to him from the mortgagee. Ogle v. Storey, 1 N. & M. 474 ; 4 B. & Ad. 735 ; 2 L. J., K. B. 110.

A., the attorney of B., an intended mortgagee, has no lien as against C., the intended mortgagor, for the costs of preparing the mortgage upon deeds delivered by C. to B., and by the latter handed over to A. for the purpose of investigating C.'s title. Pratt v. Vizard, 2 N. & M. 455 ; 5 B. & Ad. 808 ; 3 L. J., K. B. 7.

A mortgagee of lands handed over the deeds to his attorney. The mortgagor paid the principal and interest, and the lands were re-conveyed to him :—Held, that the attorney could not retain the deeds against him, as a security for the expenses of the transaction due from the mortgagee to the attorney. Wakefield v. Newbon, 6 Q. B. 276 ; 13 L. J., Q. B. 258 ; 8 Jur. 735.

A solicitor who, whilst a mortgage was subsisting, had done work for the mortgagee relating to the mortgaged property claimed to have a lien on the title deeds for the costs so incurred as against the mortgagor, who had paid the mortgagee all moneys owing under the mortgage, and had obtained from him a release. It was not suggested that this was done in order to defeat the solicitor's lien :—Held, that the lien could not be sustained, for the right of the mortgagor to have back from the mortgagee his deeds, on payment of principal, interest, and costs, prevailed against the solicitor's lien claimed in right of the mortgagee. Llewellin, In re, 60 L. J., Ch. 732 ; [1891] 3 Ch. 145 ; 65 L. T. 249 ; 39 W. R. 713.

A solicitor acting for a mortgagee must deliver up the title deeds of the mortgagor which he holds for the mortgagee on payment of the mortgage debt and mortgagee's costs, and cannot claim a general lien on such deeds for costs due to him from the mortgagor, in respect of business previously done by him as solicitor for the mortgagor. Moseley, In re, 15 W. R. 975.

—— Mortgage by Client to his Solicitor.]—A client mortgaged property, which was at the time subject to a first mortgage, to his solicitors, who prepared the mortgage deed. Afterwards the mortgagor made a third mortgage to another person :—Held, in an action by the solicitors against the first and third mortgagees and the mortgagor, that they were entitled only to their ordinary costs as mortgagees, and that they had no lien on the mortgage deed for the costs of its preparation or other costs due to them from the mortgagor. Sheffield v. Eden, 10 Ch. D. 291 ; 40 L. T. 283 ; 27 W. R. 477—C. A.

A solicitor obtained from his client, who had no other professional assistance, a mortgage deed, under circumstances which, as the client alleged, amounted to pressure and surprise. The deed was prepared by the solicitor at the expense of his client :—Held, that, under the circumstances, he could not be permitted to stand upon his rights as mortgagee for the purpose of resisting production of the instrument in question. Davis v. Parry, 27 L. J., Ch. 294 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 431 ; 6 W. R. 174.

—— Solicitor of Mortgagees Acting for Mortgagor.]—A mortgage deed and the title deeds to the mortgaged property were deposited by the mortgagees with their solicitors for safe custody. Afterwards the mortgagor instructed the same solicitors to sell the property, and they employed an auctioneer for the purpose, and made use of the deeds in preparing particulars and conditions of sale. The property was put up for sale, but was not sold. The mortgagor then filed a liquidation petition, and the trustee contracted to sell the mortgaged property :—Held, that the solicitors had no lien on the deeds as against the trustee in respect of their costs of the abortive sale. Fuller, Ex parte, Long, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 448; 16 Ch. D. 617; 44 L. T. 63; 29 W. R. 448.

A solicitor acting for the mortgagee as well as mortgagor in the preparation of a mortgage thereby loses his lien on the title deeds in his possession for costs due to him from the mortgagor, unless such lien is expressly reserved, even though the mortgagee may have known that the solicitor had such lien as against the mortgagor. Snell, In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 627 ; 6 Ch. D. 105 ; 37 L. T. 350 ; 25 W. R. 823.

A solicitor acting for mortgagee as well as mortgagor in the preparation of a mortgage thereby loses his lien on the title deeds in his possession for costs due to him from the mortgagor, even though the costs were incurred prior to the mortgage and the title deeds never left the solicitor's office. Quinn, Ex parte, Nicholson, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 302 ; 49 L. T. 811 ; 32 W. R. 296.

A solicitor was instructed to prepare a mortgage, and the title deeds of the property were deposited with him for this purpose by the mortgagor. He was also acting as solicitor for the mortgagee, and when the mortgage was executed he continued to hold the deeds on behalf of the mortgagee. The mortgagor filed a liquidation petition, and the solicitor was employed on behalf of the trustee. The trustee sold the equity of redemption, and the solicitor received the purchase-money :—Held, that the solicitor had a lien on the deeds against the mortgagor, and was entitled to retain out of the purchase-money the amount of costs due to him from the mortgagor. Messenger, In re, Calvert, Ex parte, 45 L. J., Bk. 134 ; 3 Ch. D. 317.

4. On What Documents, Funds, &c.

What Documents.]—Solicitor has lien on papers delivered to him as such, but not on those delivered to him as steward. Champernown v. Scott, 6 Madd. 93.

A solicitor has a lien for his costs on all papers that come into his hands for the purpose of business, though not papers in the cause in which he makes the demand. Nesbitt, Ex parte, 2 Sch. & Lef. 279.

On a lease being granted, the lessee deposited it with the lessor's solicitor (who acted for the lessor and lessee), together with a bill of exchange as a security for the costs of preparing the lease, which the lessee was to pay. The lessee afterwards mortgaged the term, and the defendants (who were his solicitors on that occasion), in order to obtain the lease, paid the bill of costs of the lessor's solicitors, and received from them, without any authority from the lessee, the lease and the bill of exchange:—Held, first, that without express contract the defendants acquired no lien on the bill of exchange beyond the amount which they had paid to the lessor's solicitors; secondly, that evidence of an express contract would not support such a lien without proof that the defendants had explained to their client, the lessee, his rights, independently of express contract. Gibson v. May, 4 De G. M. & G. 512.

Where a trustee at the request of the tenant for life, lends the trust deed to the solicitor of such tenant for life, he not being the trustee's solicitor, such loan gives no lien to the solicitor for his costs due from his client. Mayhew, In re, 7 W. R. 351.

—— Marriage Settlement.]—Solicitors employed to prepare a marriage settlement and accompanying documents have no lien thereon for their costs. Snell, In re (6 Ch. D. 105), and Mason and Taylor, In re (10 Ch. D. 729), followed; Gregson, In re (26 Beav. 87), disapproved. Lawrance, In re, Bowker v. Austin, 63 L. J., Ch. 205; [1894] 1 Ch. 556; 8 R. 102; 70 L. T. 91; 42 W. R. 265.

—— Mortgages.]—A mortgagor instructed his solicitors, to whom he was indebted in a bill of costs, to prepare a conveyance of the mortgaged property. They did so, and sent the engrossment to the mortgagee's solicitors, with an intimation that they had a lien on it, and a request that the mortgagee's solicitors would hold it on account of the mortgagor's solicitors. The engrossment was executed by the mortgagees. The mortgage money was not paid, but the mortgagor sold the property to purchasers who agreed to pay it:—Held, that the mortgagor's solicitors had a lien on the engrossment, and that such lien was not prejudiced by their having parted with the engrossment under the above circumstances, nor by the execution of it as a deed, nor by a promissory note delivered to the solicitors not covering their whole demand, and that the purchaser had been properly restrained by injunction from proceeding to recover the deed. Watson v. Lyon, 7 De G. M. & G. 288; 24 L. J., Ch. 754; 3 W. R. 543.

A solicitor who acts for both parties to a mortgage cannot, after the execution of the mortgage, claim a lien on the title deeds of the property for any costs due from the mortgagor. Snell, In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 627; 6 Ch. D. 105; 37 L. T. 350; 25 W. R. 823.

—— Will.]—A solicitor has no lien upon the will of his client, and cannot refuse to produce a deed executed by the client in his favour, containing a reservation of a life interest, and a power of revocation. Balch v. Symes, Turn. & R. 87. And see Tyler v. Drayton, 2 Sim. & S. 309.

Whether an attorney lien upon papers extends to the original will of his client, quære. Ordered to produce it before the examiner, and for the hearing of the cause, without prejudice. Georges v. Georges, 18 Ves. 294.

—— Orders or Decrees.]—A clerk in court and solicitor refusing to continue the conduct of a cause until his fees are paid, ordered to produce an office copy of the bill to be marked by the six clerk, so that an answer might be called for. Mayne v. Hawkey, 3 Swan. 93.

The solicitor in a cause will be ordered to produce an original order of the court, for the purpose of correcting an accidental error, notwithstanding that he claims a lien on the papers in the cause. Bird v. Heath, 6 Hare, 236; 12 Jur. 861.

An order was made for the payment out of court of a sum of money to a married woman for her separate use. The solicitor who had the charge and carriage of the order refused to produce it to the registrar, to enable him to countersign the cheque of the accountant-general, except upon condition of his being paid thereout a sum of money which, he alleged, he had advanced to the lady, or become security for, upon the faith of his being repaid out of the money. Upon motion, he was directed to produce the order, and to pay the costs of the motion. Benyon v. Amphlett, Sidney, In re, 8 Jur. (N.S.) 759.

A plaintiff in a suit became bankrupt, and the suit was revived by his assignee, who employed a different solicitor. A decree was afterwards made:—Held, that the solicitor of the original plaintiff must produce the documents in his possession which were necessary for drawing up the decree, notwithstanding his lien on them for costs, even though the documents were not strictly in evidence in the cause. Simmonds v. G. E. Ry., 38 L. J., Ch. 87; L. R. 3 Ch. 797; 19 L. T. 235; 16 W. R. 1100.

A clerk in court has a lien upon the fund in court, and also upon the decree and other documents in the cause in respect of his fees and disbursements. Potter v. Hyatt, 5 Y. & Coll. 112; 6 L. J., Ex. Eq. 36.

A solicitor for a plaintiff in a cause obtained an order, which he passed; he was then discharged by the plaintiff, and a new solicitor appointed in his stead. The discharged solicitor refused to produce the order to be entered, on the ground that he had a lien for his costs in the same suit, and other costs. Upon motion by plaintiff for production, that the order might be entered:—Held, that lien cannot be allowed to intercept the completion of an order of the court which has been passed, and the discharged solicitor was directed to produce the order for entry, upon payment of 20*s.* costs. Clifford v. Turrill, 2 De G. & Sm. 1; 12 Jur. 428.

—— Letters of Administration.]—M. and her sister S. had employed F. as their solicitor and as their land agent over a joint property; and M. was indebted to him in the amount of certain costs in 1881, when S. instituted a suit against him in the chancery division for an account of her land agent. In September, 1881, F. filed an account in that suit, shewing that there was a considerable balance due to him in respect of the rents. He died insolvent in August, 1882, and no step was taken to revive the suit against his personal representatives. The costs due to F. had been incurred by his obtaining for M., in 1869, a grant of administration de bonis non of her late father, limited to receive the dividends on a sum of stock standing in the name of the latter as executor of a will under which the dividends were payable to a tenant for life, upon whose death M., having become beneficially interested in the principal, obtained in November, 1882, an order from the judge of the Probate Division authorising her to apply for a general grant, so as to obtain a transfer of the stock into her own name. M. thereupon required T., the solicitor for F.'s personal representative, to bring in the limited grant for cancellation, which he declined to do, claiming a lien upon it for the costs due by M. :—Held, that T. was entitled to the lien claimed. Martin, In goods of, 13 L. R., Ir. 312—C. A.

—— Company—Winding-up.]—The solicitor of a company cannot acquire a lien for costs upon such books of the company as under the articles of the company or the provisions of the Companies Acts ought to be kept at the registered office of the company. Anglo-Maltese Hydraulic Dock Co., In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 730 ; 52 L. T. 841 ; 33 W. R. 652.

Directors have no power to create any lien on the share register and minute book of a company which could interfere with their being used for the purposes of the company. Capital Fire Insurance Association, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 71 ; 24 Ch. D. 408 ; 49 L. T. 697 ; 32 W. R. 260—C. A.

A solicitor cannot assert against documents which came to his hands pending the winding-up any such lien as will interfere with the prosecution of the winding-up. Ib.

A winding-up order cannot defeat any valid lien existing at the time when the winding-up petition was presented. Belaney v. Effrench (L. R. 8 Ch. 918) and Boughton v. Boughton, (23 Ch. D. 169) distinguished. Ib.

Chattels.]—A solicitor's lien for costs is not confined to deeds and papers, but extends to other articles delivered to him for the purpose of being exhibited to witnesses on the trial of an action. Friswell v. King, 15 Sim. 191.

Chattels personal, not under the control of the Court of Chancery nor in possession of the plaintiff's solicitor, are not subject to a lien for his costs in the suit in which they are recovered. Savage v. James, Ir. R. 9 Eq. 357.

On Inheritance.]—In a suit in the nature of a partition suit, it having been decided that each party must bear his own costs, a solicitor employed by a party entitled as tenant in tail who had not barred the entail has not a lien for costs on the inheritance of his client's share. Berrie v. Howitt, 39 L. J., Ch. 119 ; L. R. 9 Eq. 1 ; 21 L. T. 414.

On Real Estate.]—An attorney has no lien on an estate recovered for a client in respect of the costs and expenses incurred in recovering it. He has a lien only on the papers in his hands. Shaw v. Neale, 6 H. L. Cas. 581 ; 27 L. J., Ch. 444 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 695 ; 6 W. R. 635. See now CHARGING ORDERS, supra, cols. 1656, 1657.

Solicitor prosecuting to a decree has a lien on the estate recovered, in the hands of the person recovering, for his bill ; but not in the hands of the heir. But if the suit be revived, the lien revives. Barnesley v. Powell, Ambl. 102.

Balance Due—Equities between the Parties.]—The solicitor's lien for costs is subordinate, and to be postponed to the equities between the parties. Gwynn v. Kraus, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 274.

In equity the costs are arranged according to the equities of the parties, and the solicitor's lien is only upon the balance, under that arrangement. Taylor v. Popham, 15 Ves. 72.

The lien of solicitors cannot interfere with the equities between the parties. Bawtree v. Watson, 2 Keen, 713 ; 7 L. J., Ch. 183.

A sum was found due from the plaintiff to the defendant, and on the other hand the defendant was ordered to pay the costs of suit :—Held, that the lien of the defendant's solicitor for his costs extended only to the ultimate balance due from the plaintiff, after deducting the costs payable to him by the defendant. Ib.

A solicitor's lien upon costs, or upon a fund recovered through him by a party in an action, is subject to the rights of the parties inter se, including the right of set-off or deduction of costs as between successful and unsuccessful defendants. M'Cormack v. Ross, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 545.

Lien only extends to the balance of damages and costs recovered in the particular action. The general costs of the cause were taxed for the plaintiff, and after deducting the costs of the defence the plaintiff was entitled to 50*l.* He had paid his solicitor 19*l.*, and therefore the lien of the latter only attached to 31*l.* Cain v. Adams, 5 L. J., K. B. 252.

The liquidators of a company brought an action against S., in which he obtained judgment with costs. S. was indebted to the company in a larger amount on a bill of exchange. The costs of S.'s solicitor in the action being unpaid, they proceeded in his name to levy execution. The execution was stayed under an interim order in the winding-up, a sum being retained by the liquidators sufficient to meet the costs for which the judgment had been signed :—Held, that, apart from the Companies Act, 1862, s. 163, there was at common law no right to set off the debt on the bill of exchange against the judgment ; that the solicitors had a lien on what could be recovered by the execution, and that they had the same right against the sum set apart which represented the proceeds of the execution. Bank of Hindustan, China, and Japan, In re, Mackrill Smith, Ex parte, 37 L. J., Ch. 185 ; L. R. 3 Ch. 125 ; 17 L. T. 339 ; 16 W. R. 170.

Held, also, that if the Companies Act, 1862, s. 163, applied to such a case and made the execution void, the court would put the defendant and his solicitors in the same position as if the execution was not so restrained ; and, therefore, that the solicitors must be paid their costs out of the sum set apart. Ib.

Sum Due under Award.]—An attorney has a lien upon a sum awarded in favour of his client, as well as if he recovered by judgment ; and if, after notice to the defendant, the latter pays it over to the plaintiff, the plaintiff's attorney may compel a repayment of it to himself. Ormerod

v. Tate, 1 East, 464. S. P., Cowell v. Betteley, 4 M. & Scott, 265; 10 Bing. 432; 2 D. P. C. 780; 3 L. J., C. P. 148.

A builder, and an uncertificated bankrupt, sued for a balance due to him for repairs, and was nonsuited; the cause was referred, and the arbitrator found a sum due to the plaintiff:—Held, that the attorney had a claim, as against the assignees, to the amount of his lien on the award, for the costs of the action and of the award. Jones v. Turnbull, 5 D. P. C. 591; 2 M. & W. 601; M. & H. 106; 6 L. J., Ex. 166; 1 Jur. 638.

On reference of an action (the costs to abide the event), the arbitrator ordered the defendant to pay the plaintiff a certain sum. The plaintiff afterwards became insolvent. His attorney, whose bill of costs exceeded the amount awarded, and the costs taxed under the award, claimed a lien in respect of his bill on such an amount and taxed costs, and called upon the defendant to pay them to him for his own use, and in satisfaction of his lien:—Held, that the plaintiff's attorney was not entitled to a rule, calling upon the defendant to pay him the money. Lloyd v. Mansell, 1 B. C. C. 130; 22 L. J., Q. B. 110.

On Verdict.]—Where a defendant is entitled against a plaintiff to be released from a verdict obtained against him, the court will not abstain from interfering, on the ground of the lien of the plaintiff's attorney upon the verdict for his costs. Symons v. Blake, 2 C. M. & R. 416; 4 D. P. C. 263; 1 Gale, 182.

Cause cannot be shewn on behalf of a solicitor who claims a lien on the verdict for his costs. Sloman v. Allen, 1 Man. & G. 96, n. S. P., Wiedemann v. Walpole, 56 J. P. 4—C. A.

Money Received without Authority.] — A solicitor who receives rents in a cause, without the authority of the court, will be ordered to pay them over to the receiver, and cannot retain them on the ground of lien, or set them off against costs alleged to be due to him from the plaintiff. Wickens v. Townshend, 1 Russ. & M. 361.

—— Conflict of Interest and Duty.]—In a creditor's administration action, brought against the administrator of an intestate (the defendant being a solicitor, and a member of the firm of solicitors who were acting for the plaintiff), after judgment for administration had been pronounced, an order was made on the application of the plaintiff by his solicitors for the appointment of a specified person, "upon his giving security," to receive the rents of the intestate's real estate, and to collect and get in his outstanding personal estate. On the application for this order the defendant made an affidavit stating his approval of the person proposed. Before the receiver had perfected his security some money arising from the sale of furniture belonging to the intestate was received by the defendant's firm, and appropriated by him, and he claimed to retain out of it a debt due to him by the intestate:—Held, that, by reason of the relation in which the defendant stood to the plaintiff as a member of the firm of solicitors who were acting for him, the defendant stood in no better position than he would have stood after the receiver had perfected his security, and that the defendant could not under the circumstances exercise his right of retainer. Wickens v. Townshend (1 Russ. & M. 361) applied. Birt, In re, Birt v. Burt, 52 L. J., Ch. 397; 22 Ch. D. 604; 48 L. T. 67; 31 W. R. 334.

Costs ordered to be paid to Client.] — A solicitor has a lien upon costs ordered to be paid to his client upon a petition in bankruptcy, although there be no fund in court; nor can the client release the benefit of the order to the prejudice of the solicitor. Bryant, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 237; 1 Madd. 49.

Where costs are ordered to be paid to the client, solicitors need not wait the result of process to compel the payment of such costs, but may insist upon the immediate benefit of the lien. Pounset v. Humphreys, C. P. Cooper, 142.

A solicitor's lien for his costs upon costs ordered to be paid to his client by the opposite party in the suit remains notwithstanding he has ceased to be the client's solicitor in the suit, and notwithstanding that he has taken the client's body in execution under a judgment against him for the amount of the solicitor's costs. O'Brien v. Lewis, 2 N. R. 536; 3 De G. J. & S. 606; 32 L. J., Ch. 665; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 764; 8 L. T. 683; 11 W. R. 973.

Interlocutory Costs.]—An attorney has a lien on interlocutory costs under an order of a judge. Aspinall v. Stamp, 4 D. & R. 716; 3 B. & C. 108.

Funds in Court.]—Solicitors have no right to look for their costs to a fund in court not belonging to their clients. Where, therefore, in an administration suit the estate in court was exhausted by creditors so that nothing was left for the testator's representative, and she became insolvent, a motion that her costs of suit might be retained out of the fund in court, so that her solicitors might be paid, was refused. Chick v. Nicholls, 26 W. R. 231.

Fund Recovered.]—The costs of proceedings under the Declaration of Titles Act (25 & 26 Vict. c. 67), on behalf of an infant, together with the costs of a partition suit and of a suit to obtain a declaration of lien, are costs for which the solicitor has a lien on the fund recovered. Pritchard v. Roberts, 43 L. J., Ch. 129; L. R. 17 Eq. 222; 29 L. T. 883; 22 W. R. 259.

Money held by Solicitor as Trustee.]—The creditors of a debtor having agreed to accept a composition secured by sureties, the debtor and one of the sureties placed funds in the hands of the debtor's solicitor, for the purpose of paying the composition. The solicitor sent round a circular to the creditors informing them they could be paid at his office on a certain day. Before that day the debtor absconded, leaving the solicitor's bill of costs unpaid:—Held, that the solicitor held the funds as trustee for the creditors, and that he was not entitled to any lien on them for his costs. Clark, In re, Newland, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 515; 35 L. T. 916; 25 W. R. 275.

Money Payable in Futuro.]—A firm of solicitors were employed throughout the proceedings in an action for partition and sale of certain hereditaments of which the defendants were in possession, and for an account of the rents and profits of one-third part thereof for six years prior to the issue of the writ. By the decree the plaintiffs were declared entitled to one-third part of the hereditaments, and to an account and payment by the defendants of one-third of the said rents and profits, and the premises were ordered to be sold, and the plaintiffs' costs up to and including the hearing were ordered to be costs in the action

The account was not completed and the property was not sold when the plaintiffs threatened to change their solicitors and to compromise the action. The share of the plaintiffs in the property and rents was insufficient to pay the plaintiffs' costs. On a petition by the plaintiffs' solicitors asking for a declaration that they were entitled to a charge on the whole property in respect of the plaintiffs' costs, as such costs had been made costs in the action:—Held, that no order having been made for payment of the costs of the action out of the proceeds of sale, the court could not anticipate such order, and that the solicitors could only be treated as having a lien on the plaintiffs' share recovered by them in the action. An injunction was granted to prevent the plaintiffs from receiving any money in the action, or by way of compromise, without notice to the solicitors. Lloyd v. Jones, 40 L. T. 514; 27 W. R. 655.

Policy of Assurance—Notice.]—A solicitor's lien on a policy of insurance is not lost by want of notice to the assurance company against assignees who give notice. West of England Bank v. Batchelor, 51 L. J., Ch. 199; 46 L. T. 132; 30 W. R. 364.

Alimony Pendente Lite.]—A solicitor's lien does not extend to alimony pendente lite paid over to him as such, i.e., for the purpose of the wife's maintenance, unless he holds her direct written authority to him to receive it as her agent under r. 94 of the Divorce Rules. Bremner v. Bremner (L. R. 1 P. & M. 254) distinguished. Leete v. Leete (48 L. J., P. 61) followed. Cross v. Cross, 43 L. T. 533—C. A.

An attorney who has acted in a suit on the part of a wife, and has a claim for costs therein incurred beyond those which have been taxed against the husband, has a lien upon the alimony paid into his hands on her behalf for such extra costs. Bremner v. Bremner and Brett, 36 L. J., Mat. 11; L. R 1 P. & M. 254; 15 L. T. 297; 15 W. R. 75.

An order was made for the change of solicitors in a wife's suit for dissolution of marriage. At the date of the order the former solicitor had in his hands a sum of money, being the balance of an amount received by him on account of alimony due to the petitioner:—Held, that the solicitor had no lien for his costs upon the balance of alimony in his hands. Leete v. Leete, 48 L. J., Mat. 61; 40 L. T. 788; 27 W. R. 921.

Judgments.]—The fact that an attorney has obtained a judgment for a client, and that costs are due to the attorney, does not raise the relation of trustee and cestui que trust between the client and the attorney with respect to the proceeds of such judgment; and the lien of the attorney is merely a claim to the protection of the court as to his costs when the equitable interference of the court is invoked for the purpose of setting off one judgment against another. Mercer v. Graves, 41 L. J., Q. B. 212; L. R. 7 Q. B. 499; 26 L. T. 551; 20 W. R. 605.

An attorney has a lien for his costs on a judgment recovered by his client, and the court will lay hold of the fund where it exists, and when it does not thereby set aside any arrangement of the parties. Slater v. Sunderland Corporation, 33 L. J., Q. B. 37; 9 L. T. 422.

The lien which an attorney has on a judgment obtained by his client is merely a claim to the equitable interference of the court to have that judgment held as a security for his debt. Hough v. Edwards, 1 H. & N. 171; 26 L. J., Ex. 54; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 814.

Voluntary Payment.]—Where a juror is withdrawn and the defendants voluntarily give the plaintiff a sum of money, semble that the court will not give effect to the plaintiff's attorney's claim for lien. Stretton v. L. & N. W. Ry., 16 C. B. 40.

Fund Recovered without Solicitor's Assistance.]—The general lien of a solicitor for costs due by his client does not extend to a fund which the client can reach without the assistance of the solicitor, or the use of the papers in his possession. Hodgens v. Kelly, 1 Hog. 388.

Compromise—Money Received.]—A solicitor has no lien on a fund received by his client, for compromising a suit, where it is clear that the result of the suit, if successfully prosecuted, would not have been to realise a fund on which such lien might attach. Townsend v. Reade, 4 L. J., Ch. 233.

The solicitor of the plaintiff in a foreclosure suit, in which a decree for sale before the master was made by consent, prosecuted the suit to the settlement of the particulars and conditions, and appointment of the day of sale, when the plaintiff and the defendant (by his solicitor), having notice of the claim of the plaintiff's solicitor for the costs of the suit, compromised the suit on the terms of paying the plaintiff a certain sum in discharge of the debt and costs, part of which sum was immediately paid to the plaintiff. Upon the petition of the plaintiff's solicitor, the court ordered the costs of the plaintiff's solicitor in the suit to be taxed, and paid by the plaintiff and defendant, or one of them. White v. Pearce, 7 Hare, 276; 18 L. J., Ch. 462; 13 Jur. 999.

The lien attaches upon money received by way of compromise, though the verdict and judgment are against his client. Davies v. Lowndes, 3 C. B. 823.

The lien of the solicitor of a plaintiff for the costs of an action attaches to money received by the plaintiff by way of compromise where such money is in substance the fruit of the action. Ross v. Buxton, 58 L. J., Ch. 442; 42 Ch. D. 190; 60 L. T. 630; 38 W. R. 71; 54 J. P. 85.

—— Payment after Notice.]—Where a valid compromise of an action has been entered into under which a sum of money, the fruit of the action, is coming to the plaintiff, the defendant or his solicitor is not at liberty after express notice by the plaintiff's solicitor of his claim to a lien for his costs to pay that sum over to the plaintiff in disregard of such matter. Ib.

On Person of Defendant.]—A plaintiff having charged the defendant in execution, died; the defendant's wife took out administration to the plaintiff; the court ordered the defendant to be discharged out of custody, saying, that the plaintiff's attorney had no lien on the judgment for his costs. Pyne v. Erle, 8 Term Rep. 407.

A defendant was in custody under a judgment recovered by the plaintiff. The plaintiff had died previously in insolvent circumstances, leaving two infant children. As soon as the defendant heard of the death he applied to be discharged. The plaintiff's attorneys resisted the application, alleging that they had advanced sums of money to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff had agreed that they might retain these sums, together with their costs, out of the amount to be recovered by the judgment; and they expressed an intention of taking out administration to the plaintiff's estate. The court refused to discharge the defendant. Cox v. Pritchard, 20 L. J., Q. B. 353.

A defendant was taken upon a ca. sa. at the suit of the plaintiff, in June, 1841; in August the plaintiff left England, and was shortly afterwards seen at St. Petersburg, but had never been heard of since. Upon an affidavit of these facts, and shewing reasonable ground to induce them to believe that the plaintiff was dead, and that proper search had been made, and no trace of a will or grant of administration found, the court (in 1849) ordered the defendant to be discharged from custody, without any regard to any supposed lien of the attorney for costs. Camp v. Pote, 8 C. B. 375; 7 D. & L. 289.

It is competent to a plaintiff to discharge the defendant from custody under a ca. sa., notwithstanding the claim of his attorney for the costs of the action is unsatisfied, and, by reason of the plaintiff being an infant, is likely to remain so. Langley v. Headland, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 42; 34 L. J., C. P. 183; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 431; 12 L.T. 385; 13 W. R. 752.

Where a plaintiff, after judgment recovered, settled the action with the defendant, and employed a new attorney to enter up satisfaction on the record:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to be discharged out of custody, although the lien of the plaintiff's attorney on the costs had not been satisfied. Marr v. Smith, 4 B. & Ald. 466.

Money Levied.]—An attorney has a lien for his bill of costs on money levied by the sheriff under an execution on a judgment recovered by his client, and is entitled to have it paid over to him, notwithstanding the sheriff has had notice from the party against whom the execution issued to retain the money in his hands. Griffin v. Eyles, 1 H. Bl. 122.

5. Effect of Bankruptcy and Winding-up.

Bankruptcy.]—If a solicitor refuses to deliver the proceedings to the assignee, the order is of course with costs. Crowe, In re, Wharton, In re, Mont. & Bli. 90.

Solicitor is bound to produce papers of his client for him, or in bankruptcy for his assignees, though not employed by them in the cause, for the purposes of which he received them: but not bound to deliver them up, or produce them in any other business, without payment. Ross v. Laughton, 1 Ves. & B. 349; 12 R. R. 232.

The court has jurisdiction in bankruptcy to order the papers deposited by the bankrupt with his attorney, in actions commenced before the bankruptcy, to be delivered up to the assignees, provided they are necessary to the administration of the estate. But where assignees wanted such papers for the purpose of instituting criminal proceedings against the bankrupt, the court refused to make the order, and dismissed the petition with costs. Innes, Ex parte, Buck, 337.

The right of assignees to inspect or take a copy of a title deed of the bankrupt's property in the hands of his solicitor is no higher than the right of the bankrupt himself: and therefore, where the assignees petitioned that the solicitor might produce or give an attested copy of such document, on being paid only the portion of his costs relating thereto, and the costs of the production or copy, the petition was dismissed with costs. Underwood, Ex parte, Hemsworth, In re, 1 De G. 190; 9 Jur. 632.

Traders, before their bankruptcy, deposited their books with a solicitor, with a view to his effecting for them a compromise with their creditors. Terms were arranged, but the bankrupts were unable to comply with them, and the solicitor refused to act further in the matter. Adjudication followed:—Held, that the solicitor was entitled to the lien on the books. Jabet, Ex parte, Leak, In re, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 387; 2 L. T. 72—L.JJ.

An attorney holding deeds of a bankrupt in his custody at the date of the adjudication has a general lien thereon for professional services. May, In re, 1 Fonb. N. R. 243.

A solicitor, claiming to have a lien on a deed of the bankrupt for professional business done for him, was summoned to attend before the commissioner acting in the prosecution of the fiat, to be examined touching the estate of the bankrupt, and to produce the deed. The solicitor obeyed the summons, and produced the deed when the commissioner, being of opinion that he had no lien, ordered him to deliver up the deed to the solicitor of the fiat, and, on his declining to do so, unless his lien was first discharged, directed an officer of the court to seize the deed:—Held, that the commissioner, in making such order, exceeded his jurisdiction. Llewellin, Ex parte, Wright, In re, 8 Jur. 816.

Where the claim of a solicitor to a lien on a deed of the bankrupt is disputed, the remedy of the assignees for recovering the deed is by an action of trover. Ib.

A bankrupt, upon consulting his solicitor before his bankruptcy, but after an act of bankruptcy committed, of which the solicitor had no notice, as to the state of his affairs, told him that his cash-book contained all his receipts and payments, and that anything else he wanted would be found in the office. He afterwards sent by post the key of a drawer in the office to his solicitor, who subsequently removed the papers and documents in the drawer, and also a tin box containing papers, &c., from the bankrupt's office to his own. The bankruptcy occurred a few days after the removal, whereupon the solicitor claimed a lien upon the papers and documents for his bill of costs:—Held, that he was entitled to such lien for his taxed costs down to the date of the filing of the petition. Markby, In re, 11 L. T. 250.

A solicitor is not, on the ground of his lien on documents of a bankrupt in respect of professional services before the bankruptcy, entitled to refuse to produce such documents for examination by the trustee. Toleman and England, In re, Bramble, Ex parte, 13 Ch. D. 885; 42 L. T. 413; 28 W. R. 676.

A trustee was removed from his office, and a new trustee appointed. The old trustee's solicitor, on being applied to, gave up all the account books of the estate, but refused to deliver up certain documents and papers on which he had expended labour as solicitor, and upon which he claimed a lien for costs. Thereupon the new trustee applied to the court for an order upon the old trustee and his solicitor to deliver up all documents relating to his office as trustee:—Held, that the solicitor was entitled to a lien on the documents which he had retained, and that the old trustee was not bound to discharge that lien by paying the costs out of his own pocket. Valden, Ex parte, Austin, In re, 46 L. J., Bk. 59; 4 Ch. D. 129; 35 L. T. 720; 25 W. R. 134.

S. and M., solicitors, obtained possession in the course of business of certain deeds and documents, the property of W., whose solicitors they were, and retained possession of same, subject to a lien for costs due by W. to them. W. was subsequently adjudicated a bankrupt, and his assignees applied for an order that S. and M. should deliver up to them the deeds and documents so in their possession. The court refused the application. Watters, In re, 7 L. R., Ir. 531. S. P., Lambert v. Buckmaster, 2 B. & C. 616; 4 D. & R. 125; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 93.

A. was a partner in a mercantile firm, and was also a partner in a firm of solicitors. The mercantile firm alone was made bankrupt:—Held, that the assignees were not entitled to the delivery to them, by the firm of solicitors, of the papers of the mercantile firm, until their lien on them had been satisfied. Moss, In re, 35 Beav. 526; 35 L. J., Ch. 554; L. R. 2 Eq. 345; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 557; 14 L. T. 536; 14 W. R. 814.

An attorney has a lien on all the papers of a bankrupt client received by him before the bankruptcy; and he may prove the debt, though he holds the papers. Bush, Ex parte, 7 Vin. Abr. 74, pl. 8.

The fund in court being decreed to the assignees of a party who, in the course of the cause, had become bankrupt, the solicitors employed by him during part of the proceedings have a lien for their costs. Pounsett v. Humphreys, C. P. Cooper, 142.

A solicitor was instructed to prepare a mortgage, and the title deeds of the property were deposited with him for this purpose by the mortgagor. He was also acting as solicitor for the mortgagee, and when the mortgage was executed he continued to hold the deeds on behalf of the mortgagee. The mortgagor filed a liquidation petition, and the solicitor was employed on behalf of the trustee. The trustee sold the equity of redemption, and the solicitor received the purchase-money:—Held, that the solicitor had a lien on the deeds against the mortgagor, and was entitled to retain out of the purchase-money the amount of costs due to him from the mortgagor. Messenger, In re, Calvert, Ex parte, 45 L. J., Bk. 134; 3 Ch. D. 317; 34 L. T. 920.

Winding-up.]—A company having issued a debenture loan, a deed was prepared by their solicitor mortgaging their property to two of the directors as trustees for the debenture holders, the same solicitor acting also for the trustees. The mortgage contained a power of sale and the usual covenant against incumbrances. The company afterwards passed a resolution for a voluntary winding-up, whereupon the trustees, acting under their power of sale, contracted to sell the mortgaged property to a purchaser and applied to the solicitor for the company's title deeds, which were in his possession. He, however, refused to give them up, claiming a lien upon them for costs incurred by the company prior to the mortgage. Upon a petition by the trustees and a debenture holder praying that the solicitor might be ordered to deliver up the title deeds to them:—Held, that the solicitor was not entitled to a lien on the deeds, and that they must be delivered up to them. Snell, In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 627; 6 Ch. D. 105; 37 L. T. 350; 25 W. R. 823.

Directors have no power to create any lien on the share register and minute book of a company which would interfere with their being used for the purposes of the company. Capital Fire Insurance Association, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 71; 24 Ch. D. 408; 49 L. T. 697; 32 W. R. 260.

A solicitor cannot assert against documents which came to his hands pending the winding-up any such lien as will interfere with the prosecution of the winding-up. Ib.

A winding-up order cannot defeat any valid lien existing at the time when the winding-up petition was presented. Belany v. Efrench (L. R. 8 Ch. 918) and Boughton v. Boughton (23 Ch. D. 169) distinguished. Ib.

6. Death of Client or Solicitor.

Of Client.]—The solicitor, after the death of his client, retains his lien on the fund which he has recovered, and is not left merely to his rights as a general creditor on the estate of his client. Lloyd v. Mason, 4 Hare, 132; 14 L. J., Ch. 257; 9 Jur. 772.

There is a privity of estate between an administrator or executor who has partly administered and a subsequent administrator de bonis non, and the latter receives the estate with all the liabilities to which it was subject in the hands of the previous administrator or executor. The solicitor of a testator who has afterwards acted for his legal personal representatives during a partial administration of the estate, and has unpaid bills of costs against both the testator and his representatives, is entitled as against a subsequent administrator de bonis non to a lien upon documents in his hands belonging to the estate for all the costs so owing to him. Watson, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 305; 50 L. T. 205; 32 W. R. 477.

A solicitor's lien on deeds and papers is binding on the representatives of the client. Blunden v. Desart, 2 Dr. & War. 405; 2 Con. & L. 111; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 221.

Of Solicitor.]—The attorney for the plaintiff died during the progress of the suit, and a new attorney was thereupon appointed. More than six years afterwards, funds were brought into court by the receiver in the cause:—Held, that the personal representative of the deceased attorney had a lien on the funds for the costs of the suit due to the attorney at the time of his decease. Kellet v. Kelly, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 34.

By the direction of A., a bill was filed for the administration of a testator's assets, in which A. and his infant brother and sister, by A. as their next friend, were plaintiffs; D., their elder brother, who had an interest adverse to theirs, and was one of the defendants, acted as solicitor in the country for the plaintiffs, and the suit was conducted by his town agents. After the sister had attained her full age, D. died, having appointed her his executrix. A. gave notice to the persons who had been the town agents of D. not to take any proceedings in his name, and the sister appointed them to act as solicitors for her :—Held, that A. was not entitled to have the papers connected with the cause delivered over to him, though he offered to satisfy any lien which might be claimed against them. Livesey v. Livesey, 1 Russ. & M. 10.

—— Order for Delivery of Deeds on Executors.]—The court has not jurisdiction to order the personal representatives of a deceased solicitor to deliver up title-deeds on which they claim a lien. Allen v. Jervoise, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 583.

The court will not order the personal representative of a deceased solicitor to deliver the papers in the cause to another solicitor without payment or security for payment of the solicitor's bill. It seems that the summary jurisdiction of the court extends to the representatives of a solicitor. Redfearn v. Sowerby, 1 Swan. 84 ; 1 Wils. 96 ; 18 R. R. 31.

A client cannot compel the executor of his attorney to produce his papers, &c., in court, though only for the purpose of using them there, unless the testator's bill of costs be paid or secured. Magrath v. Muskerry, 1 Ridgw. P. C. 477 ; Vern. & Scriv. 171.

Except against the personal representative of the solicitor, the court has no summary jurisdiction to take the client's deeds, lodged with the solicitor, out of his hands, upon an offer to pay all his costs due, as such an order can be only made upon a person with whom the court can settle. If any other person has the deeds, the client must file a bill against him. Ashley v. Busteed, 2 Moll. 489.

7. On Change or Discharge of Solicitor.

a. On Discharge of Solicitor by Client.

What is.]—If a client, by his conduct, makes it impossible for his solicitor to continue any longer connected with him, and the solicitor in consequence refuses to continue the connection, he will be considered as if discharged by his client, and will not be ordered to give up the client's deeds and papers until his costs are paid, but he must produce them to be used at the hearing, and for inspection. Steele v. Scott, 2 Hog. 141.

M., one of the partners in a trading firm, also carried on business as a solicitor in co-partnership with L. The solicitor's firm was employed by the trading firm. The trading partners became bankrupt, but the business of the solicitor's firm was continued by L. alone. The assignees of the bankrupts employed fresh solicitors. Before the bankruptcy, one of the partners in the trading firm retired :—Held, first, that the bankruptcy of the trading firm was a discharge of the solicitors by their clients, and that the solicitors were entitled to their lien. Moss, In re, 35 Beav. 526 ; 35 L. J., Ch. 554 ; L. R. 2 Eq. 345 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 557 ; 14 L. T. 536 ; 14 W. R. 814.

—— Dissolution of Firm.]—See post, col. 1704.

Rights of Solicitor.]—A party changing his solicitor, the former solicitor has a lien for his costs upon papers in his hands, but cannot otherwise stop the progress of the cause till he is paid. Merrewether v. Mellish, 13 Ves. 161.

Party may discharge his solicitor ; but he has a lien for his costs upon papers in his possession, but cannot, except by retaining them, prevent the progress of the cause until he is paid. Twort v. Dayrell, 13 Ves. 195.

Solicitor in a suit, who had been discharged by the client, but had not delivered his bill of costs within the proper time, ordered, under the circumstances of the case, to deliver the papers and documents in his possession, relating to the suit (without prejudice to his lien), to the new solicitor. Cooper v. Hewson, 2 Y. & Coll. C. C. 515 ; 12 L. J., Ch. 446 ; 7 Jur. 760.

A solicitor, discharged by his client or his representatives, is not bound to produce the papers in his possession for the purposes of the cause, his bill of costs not being paid. Lord v. Wormleighton, Jac. 580 ; 23 R. R. 146.

When the majority of several parties who have employed the same solicitor substitute another solicitor, they are entitled to the custody of the papers. Janson v. Davison, 1 Jur. 352.

The solicitors for the trustees of an estate which is under the administration of the court have not, after their discharge, such a lien for costs and for money advanced in the suit as will enable them to refuse the production of documents which are required by the receiver for the management of the estate. Belaney v. French, 43 L. J., Ch. 312 ; L. R. 8 Ch. 918 ; 29 L. T. 706 ; 22 W. R. 177.

The solicitor for the parties to an administration action will not, on a change of solicitor, be allowed to assert his lien for costs on papers in his possession in such a way as to embarrass the proceedings in the action. On the contrary, he must produce the papers when they are required for the carrying on of the proceedings. Boughton, In re, Boughton v. Boughton, 23 Ch. D. 169 ; 48 L. T. 413 ; 31 W. R. 517.

After decree in a partition action (the plaintiff and defendant being entitled in moieties to the property) an inquiry as to incumbrances having been directed, the plaintiff changed her solicitors. The discharged solicitors claimed a lien for costs :—Held, that they were bound to deliver up to the new solicitors, subject to their lien, such documents as had come to their hands since the commencement of or for the purposes of the action. Boden v. Hensby, 61 L. J., Ch. 174 ; [1892] 1 Ch. 101 ; 65 L. T. 744 ; 40 W. R. 205.

A solicitor for the parties to an administration action will not, on a change of solicitor, be allowed to assert his lien for costs on papers in his possession in such a way as to embarrass the proceedings in the action, but must produce such papers subject to his lien as and when they are required for the carrying on of the proceedings. Boughton v. Boughton (23 Ch. D. 169) followed. Gerty v. Mann, 29 L. R., Ir. 7.

An action was brought for the administration of the estate of H. by his infant grandchildren. The action was brought with the approval of the infant's father, and the next friend was nominated and approved by him. The father having died pending the action, the mother of the infants, who was also their testamentary guardian, applied to be appointed next friend in the place of the existing next friend, and an order was made appointing her. She changed the plaintiff's solicitors, and the new solicitors applied to the old solicitors for delivery of the papers in the action. The original solicitors refused to deliver them till their costs were paid :—Held, upon a summons, that the old solicitors must deliver them over to the new solicitors without prejudice to their lien for costs. The action being a very heavy one, and the taxation of costs not likely to come on for some years, the costs of the original solicitors were under the special circumstances ordered to be taxed at once. Hutchinson, In re, Hutchinson v. Norwood, 54 L. T. 842 ; 34 W. R. 637.

Although a solicitor who discharges himself cannot set up a lien for costs as a reason for not delivering up papers necessary to enable his client to proceed with pending matters in litigation to which they relate, yet a solicitor who has been discharged by the client may set up such lien, and will not be ordered to produce or to deliver up to the client the papers on which he claims the lien, although his not doing so will embarrass the client in prosecuting or defending his claim. Faithfull, In re, L. R. 6 Eq. 325 ; 18 L. T. 502.

—— Bankruptcy.]—After a suit was instituted the plaintiff became bankrupt. His assignees continued the suit, employing a different solicitor. A decree was taken by consent. On drawing up the decree the registrar required production of certain documents which were referred to in the decree, and which, being in the hands of the solicitor to the original plaintiff, had not been produced at the hearing. The solicitor refused to produce them, claiming a lien for costs :—Held, that he was bound to produce them. Simmonds v. G. E. Ry., 38 L. J., Ch. 87 ; L. R. 3 Ch. 797 ; 19 L. T. 235 ; 16 W. R. 1100.

The trustee of a bankrupt's estate appointed a solicitor, whose appointment was duly confirmed, and who transacted considerable professional business for the trustee as such. After several years the trustee was removed by the creditors, and a new trustee appointed, who called upon the solicitor to hand over all documents relating to the estate to himself or to his solicitor. The solicitor of the old trustee opposed this application on the ground that he had a lien on them for his costs :—Held, that he had a lien upon all documents the fruits of his own labour or expense. Yalden, Ex parte, Austin, In re, 46 L. J., Bk. 59 ; 4 Ch. D. 129 ; 35 L. T. 720 ; 25 W. R. 134—C. A.

—— On Costs.]—A solicitor's lien for his costs upon costs ordered to be paid to his client by the opposite party in a suit remains notwithstanding he has ceased to be the client's solicitor in the suit. O'Brien v. Lewis, 3 De G. J. & S. 606 ; 2 N. R. 536 ; 32 L. J., Ch. 665 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 764 ; 8 L. T. 683 ; 11 W. R. 973.

—— On Balance of Alimony.]—An order was made for the change of solicitors in a wife's suit for dissolution of marriage. At the date of the order the former solicitor had in his hands a sum of money being the balance of an amount received by him on account of alimony due to the petitioner :—Held, that the solicitor had no lien for his costs upon the balance of alimony in his hands. Leete v. Leete, 48 L. J., P. 61 ; 40 L. T. 788 ; 27 W. R. 921.

—— New Trial—Solicitor not Entitled to be Heard.]—Solicitors acting for a plaintiff in an action were discharged, but retained her papers in respect of their lien for costs incurred in the action. The plaintiff in order to obtain these papers charged any verdict she might get with the sum due to them for costs. At the trial a verdict for the plaintiff was found ; the defendant moved for a new trial :—Held, that the solicitors could not be heard to oppose the motion for a new trial on the ground that the plaintiff would consent to such a motion and so defeat their charge. Wiedemann v. Walpole, 56 J. P. 5—C. A.

—— Production of Deed—Fund Recovered.]—If a solicitor, whom his client had ceased to employ, by the production of a deed in his hands belonging to the client, and upon which he claims a lien as solicitor, enables the client to recover a fund in a suit, his lien over the fund so realised is confined to the costs of that suit, but is a lien which he is entitled actively to enforce. Bozon v. Bolland, 4 Myl. & C. 354 ; 9 L. J., Ch. 123 ; 3 Jur. 884 ; 4 Jur. 763.

Where a solicitor, whom his client has ceased to employ, produces a deed of the client, upon which the solicitor claims a lien for antecedent costs, and thereby enables the client to recover a fund in a suit in which the solicitor has acted, his lien upon that fund is confined to the costs due to him in the suit in which the fund was so recovered. Bayly, In re, Humphrey, Ex parte, 12 Ir. Ch. R. 315.

Order for Delivery up of Documents.]—Messrs. G., solicitors, having been requested by P., another solicitor, on behalf of a client for whom they had hitherto acted, to deliver up all deeds belonging to the client on the usual terms, sent the deeds to a relative of the client who held a power of attorney from him, with the bill of costs, the amount of which they retained out of moneys in their hands belonging to the client, and they then informed P. that they had no deeds in their possession, and no bill of costs against the client. An order of course was then taken out by P., on behalf of the client, for taxation and delivery up of deeds and papers, but it was not complied with, and a writ of attachment was issued against Messrs. G. :—Held, that they were not justified in refusing to deliver up the papers, or to give in their bill for taxation. Gregg, In re, and Prance, In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 107 ; L. R. 9 Eq. 137 ; 23 L. T. 234 ; 18 W. R. 589.

Upon an application for delivery over of all documents in a discharged solicitor's possession made by clients undertaking to pay into court a sum amply sufficient to secure the solicitor in respect of all demands, the court will make the order asked for provided that circumstances of pressing necessity are shewn. South Essex Equitable Investment and Advance Co., In re, 46 L. T. 280.

Priorities.]—See post, col. 1712.

b. On Solicitor Discharging Himself or becoming Incapacitated.

Rights of Solicitor.]—A solicitor declining to be further concerned in a cause is not entitled to compel payment of his costs by refusing to permit such inspection of the papers in his hands or such production of them before the court or the master as may be necessary in the conduct of the cause. Commerell v. Poynton, 1 Swan. 1.

If a solicitor withdraws from the conduct of a suit he cannot claim to retain the papers necessary for the prosecution of it till his costs are paid, but will be ordered to deliver them up, without prejudice to his lien, to the new solicitor of the party. Colegrave v. Manley, Turn. & R. 400 : 2 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 39 : 24 R. R. 83.

A solicitor who has declined to proceed with a cause will be ordered, though his bill of costs is not paid, to deliver up the papers to the present solicitor of the party, the latter undertaking to hold them, subject to the former solicitor's lien, for what shall be found due to him on the taxation of the bills. An offer on the part of the former solicitor, after the motion made, to proceed with the cause will not prevent the court from ordering him to deliver up the papers on the terms mentioned above. Ib.

If a solicitor discharging a client has a lien on the papers relating to a matter in progress, such papers must nevertheless be given up to his successor, the lien reviving on the completion of the business. Rawlinson v. Moss, 30 L. J., Ch. 797 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1053 ; 4 L. T. 619 ; 9 W. R. 733.

After demurrer allowed, the plaintiff's solicitor refused to proceed until the payment of his bill : —Held, that he was bound to deliver over the papers to the new solicitor of the plaintiff on the usual undertaking as to lien and redelivery, but that the party ought, under the circumstances, to undertake to prosecute the case with due diligence. Cane v. Martin, 2 Beav. 584 ; 4 Jur. 500.

Solicitor refusing to act longer in cause ordered to permit client to inspect papers in his possession at all reasonable times, without any undertaking on his part to proceed to taxation of bill. Moir v. Mudie, 1 Sim. & S. 282 ; 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 218.

A solicitor, having declined to act for his client, has no lien for his costs upon a fund in court. Cresswell v. Byron, 14 Ves. 271 ; 9 R. R. 275.

An attorney who refused either to proceed with a case, unless furnished by the plaintiff with the necessary funds for that purpose, or to hand over the papers to another attorney, unless repaid the costs out of the pocket, ordered, upon the petition of the plaintiff (his former client), to hand over to the new attorney such papers and documents connected with the cause, as, upon inspection, the latter might deem necessary to enable him effectually to prosecute the suit, the petitioner consenting that the respondent should have a lien upon any funds that might be thereby realised, and the new attorney undertaking to proceed without delay to bring the cause to a termination, unless counsel should otherwise advise, and in such case undertaking to hand back to the respondent all deeds and papers, immediately on receiving such advice. Strangways v. Harman, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 467.

Order made on a solicitor, who withdrew from the conduct of the plaintiff's cause, that he should deliver up to the plaintiff's new solicitor the briefs, the pleadings, counsel's opinions thereon, office copies of the several answers, and all such other papers and documents, connected with the cause, as, upon inspection, such new solicitor might deem necessary for the hearing, without prejudice to any right of lien for costs, and upon an undertaking to return them undefaced within ten days after the hearing. Heslop v. Metcalfe, 3 Myl. & C. 183 ; 7 L. J., Ch. 49 ; 1 Jur. 816.

Traders, before their bankruptcy, deposited their books with a solicitor, with a view to his effecting for them a compromise with their creditors. Terms were arranged, but the bankrupts were unable to comply with them, and the solicitor refused to act further in the matter. Adjudication in the bankruptcy followed :—Held, that the solicitor was entitled to the lien on the books. Leah, In re, Jabet, Ex parte, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 387 : 2 L. T. 72—L.JJ.

Where a solicitor has discharged himself of his retainer from acting further for his client, he will be compelled, if the client has resolved to further conduct his own case in person, to deposit the papers and documents in the cause which he has in his possession in the custody of the officer of court for a certain period in order that the client may have access to them, although the solicitor has still a lien upon such papers and documents for his unpaid bill of costs. Wontner, In re, Scheyer, Ex parte, 52 J. P. 183. Affirmed in C. A., W. N., 1888, p. 136.

When a solicitor applied to his client for funds to carry on a suit, and upon the client not furnishing any, declined to continue to conduct the litigation, and the client appointed fresh solicitors :—Held, that this was a discharge by the solicitor, and that he might be called upon to deliver to the new solicitors the papers relating to the matters in the suit on their undertaking to hold them without prejudice to his lien, and to return them undefaced within twelve days after the conclusion of the suit, and to allow the former solicitor access to them for the purpose of carrying on an action for his costs. Robins v. Goldingham, 41 L. J., Ch. 813 ; L. R. 13 Eq. 440 ; 25 L. T. 900 ; 20 W. R. 277. S. P., Black v. Lovering, 35 W. R. 232.

Agent of a solicitor held by the irregularity of his conduct to have discharged himself, and ordered, before taxation on payment of his bills, to deliver up all papers, &c., on an undertaking of the principal to redeliver them as the court should order. Smith, In re, 4 Beav. 309.

A solicitor who withdraws from the conduct of a suit, because his client will not furnish him with the funds necessary for carrying it on, has no such lien for costs already incurred, as will entitle him to withhold from his client and his new solicitor such of the client's papers as are necessary for the effectual prosecution of the cause. Heslop v. Metcalfe (3 Myl. & C. 183) considered, and similar order made. Rutledge v. Rutledge, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 290.

A dispute having arisen as to the mode and extent of a solicitor's remuneration, he refused to proceed in the cause until it had been settled. The solicitor was ordered to deliver up the papers in the cause to the new solicitor upon his undertaking to proceed with due diligence, and to hold them subject to existing lien thereon. Wilson v. Emmett, 19 Beav. 233.

A solicitor having discharged himself must give up the papers to the new solicitor without his lien thereon being discharged by payment, and only without prejudice to it, and according to the terms of the order in Heslop v. Metcalfe (3 Myl. & Cr. 183). Ib.

Where a solicitor discharged himself from acting as solicitor to a party to a cause, and retained the papers for the purpose of having his bill of costs taxed, and his former client refused to pay the bill of costs, the common order for delivery was made subject to lien, and on the undertaking to return them ; but the order was made without costs on account of the former client's refusal to pay the bill of costs. Walker v. Beanlands, 15 W. R. 168.

Where a solicitor agrees with his client to carry on a suit in chancery without requiring to be supplied with funds up to the hearing, that means the original hearing ; and subsequently to that period he has a right to refuse to proceed without funds; but he has no right to withhold the papers from another solicitor to conduct an appeal. Webster v. Le Hunt, 9 W. R. 804.

When Incapacitated from Practising.] — A solicitor, who had been the solicitor of the plaintiff in the cause, being detained in prison for debt, ordered to deliver up to another solicitor appointed by the plaintiff the proceedings in the cause, notwithstanding he had become a mortgagee of three-fourths of the fund in question in the suit. Scott v. Fenning, 15 L. J., Ch. 88; 9 Jur. 1085.

A solicitor, in custody for debt, being by the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 31, incapacitated from practising, was ordered to deliver up his client's papers in pending suits without payment of his costs, but to be held subject to his lien. Williams, In re, 28 Beav. 465; 30 L. J., Ch. 610; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 908; 8 W. R. 645.

A solicitor allowed himself to be arrested for debt and detained in prison. A client, for whom he was acting in a suit, presented a petition for delivery up of her papers, upon which he claimed to have a lien for costs:—Held, that he was not entitled to any such lien, although he alleged, and there was reason to believe, that his imprisonment had arisen from the default of the client to pay expenses out of pocket, which she had agreed to do. Ib.

Where a solicitor fairly carries on a suit, and there is no proof of misconduct or refusal on his part to proceed, although he becomes embarrassed and is changed, before final decree, that does not disentitle him to his lien for costs. Smith, In re, 4 L. T. 43; 9 W. R. 396.

c. On Change of Solicitor by Order of Court.

A solicitor, from whom the conduct of a cause has been taken by the court, must give the new solicitor an opportunity of making himself acquainted with the documents common to the cause, and the free use of such as are required for its prosecution. Bennet v. Baxter, 9 L. J., Ch. 137; 4 Jur. 50.

Order made on a solicitor, who had been by an order of the court discharged from acting as the plaintiff's solicitor in the suit, to deliver up to the plaintiff's new solicitor all abbreviated and office copies of pleadings, and all other papers and documents and copies of papers and documents, and also all letters and copies of letters relating to or concerning the suit, or which may or might have been used in relation thereto, &c., without prejudice to any question of lien for costs, and upon an undertaking by the plaintiff and his new solicitor not to part with any of them without the consent of the discharged solicitor or the order of the court and to abide by such order as the court might make in respect thereto. Nainby v. Solomons, 7 Jur. 527.

An assigned solicitor of a pauper, in consequence of delay in the prosecution of proceedings in the suit, was ordered to be discharged and to deliver up to the new solicitors all the papers, subject to his lien for what might be found due to him for costs upon taxation. Hannaford v. Hannaford, 24 L. T. 86; 19 W. R. 429.

d. On Change in Partnership or of Client.

Taking Fresh Partner.]—A solicitor's right of lien will not be affected by the circumstance of his taking a partner. Pelly v. Wathen, 7 Hare, 351; 18 L. J., Ch. 281; 14 Jur. 9.

After A. had employed Messrs. B. & C. as his solicitors, they took D. into partnership with them, and A. employed the new firm; in the course of that employment papers belonging to him came into their possession:—Held, that B. and C. had no lien on the papers for costs which A. owed them before they took D. into partnership. Forshaw, In re, 16 Sim. 121; 17 L. J., Ch. 61.

Partner becoming Bankrupt.] — One of two solicitors who were partners became bankrupt; the assignees excluded the other from interfering with the affairs of the partnership; the court, nevertheless, refused to order the assignees to deliver to him the papers belonging to the clients of the firm without consent of his clients. Davidson v. Napier, 1 Sim. 297; 27 R. R. 189.

Dissolution.]—A. was appointed solicitor of a company. B. entered into partnership with him, and they acted as joint solicitors for the company until it was wound up, when they acted for the liquidators. After the dissolution of their partnership, B. acted separately for the liquidators:—Held, that B. had no lien for costs on the documents of the company in his possession. County Life Assurance Co., In re, 38 L. J., Ch. 231.

A. and B., solicitors in partnership, had a bill of costs against C. On their dissolution of partnership, those costs were transferred to A. Afterwards A., at the request of the client, paid a debt for which she had deposited title deeds, and took possession of and afterwards retained the title deeds. He afterwards continued to act as her solicitor, and costs were incurred:—Held, that as to the joint bill of costs there could be no lien in favour of A., if otherwise, there would have been lien; and as to his separate bill of costs, he had taken the deeds as mortgagee, and not as solicitor, and therefore had no lien for costs. Vaughan v. Vanderstegen, Annesley's Case, 2 Drew. 409; 2 W. R. 642.

—— Deed held in another Capacity—Ostensible Partnership.]—Where property is conveyed to one of two solicitors, carrying on business ostensibly as partners, and the deed remains in his possession as a trustee, he acquires no lien upon it for costs due to his firm; and it is immaterial that as between the solicitors themselves there was no partnership. Vaughan v. Vanderstegen, Annesley's Case (2 Drew. 409), followed. Gough, In re, Lloyd v. Gough, 8 R. 290; 70 L. T. 725.

—— Discharge of Client.]—A dissolution of a firm of solicitors amounts to a discharge of the client. Rawlinson v. Moss, 30 L. J., Ch. 797; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1053; 4 L. T. 619; 9 W. R. 733.

Where a party has employed as his solicitors in a cause a firm of two solicitors in partnership, the retirement from the business of one of such partners, under an arrangement with the other, operates as a discharge of the client by the solicitors, and the client is thereupon entitled to require that the papers in the cause, necessary for its prosecution, shall be delivered up to his new solicitor, upon the usual undertaking for saving the lien of the discharged solicitors. Griffiths v. Griffiths, 2 Hare, 587; 12 L. J., Ch. 397; 7 Jur. 573.

—— Deposit in Court.]—A firm of solicitors having declined to act for their client during the continuance of a suit, and refused to give up the deeds, &c., in their possession, alleging that they had a lien for costs incurred to them, and also to their predecessors in the firm before the commencement of the suit, these costs having been previously taxed, an order was made upon motion for the deposit of the deeds in the master's office. Gregory v. Cresswell, 14 L. J., Ch. 300.

Change of Client — Cheques.] — H. having employed a solicitor to take proceedings in respect of certain shares of which H. was holder, deposited with him the certificates of such shares as security for the costs. H. afterwards transferred to a company his interest in the shares, with notice of the lien of the solicitor, and the solicitor accepted the retainer of the company to continue the proceedings, and the solicitor obtained certain cheques in exchange for the shares which the complainants claimed to have delivered to them :—Held, that the solicitor was entitled to retain those cheques as security for his costs due from H., notwithstanding that he had accepted a retainer from the company. General Share and Trust Co. v. Chapman, 46 L. J., C. P. 79 ; 1 C. P. D. 771 ; 36 L. T. 179.

8. Collusion to Deprive.

When Compromise Collusive.]—The compromise is collusive where the object of it is that the plaintiff should get more than he would in the ordinary course, while his attorney would get less. Sullivan v. Pearson, infra.

An action for unliquidated damages was compromised by the parties after the plaintiff, who was a labourer, had obtained a verdict for 25*l*., and a rule nisi for a new trial had been granted on the ground that the verdict was against the evidence :—Held, that the attorney had no ground for claiming the equitable interference of the court to enforce his right of lien. Ib.

In an admiralty action for wages the plaintiffs and defendants compromised the action by payment to each of the plaintiffs of a certain sum in discharge of the claim and costs. The plaintiffs left the country without paying their solicitors' costs :—Held, that as there was no evidence that the parties had made the settlement, with the intention of depriving the plaintiffs' solicitors of their lien for their costs, the defendants ought not to be ordered to pay the plaintiffs' taxed costs. Brunsdon v. Allard (2 El. & El. 19), Sullivan v. Pearson (L. R. 4 Q. B. 153), approved. The Hope, 52 L. J., P. 63 ; 8 P. D. 144 ; 49 L. T. 148 ; 32 W. R. 269 ; 5 Asp. M. C. 126—C. A.

If after verdict, and pending a rule to enter a nonsuit, the parties themselves settle the action, without the intervention of their attorneys, after which the rule is made absolute, the plaintiff's attorney is bound to give up the record. Baber v. Harris, 2 W. W. & H. 53.

Where there are cross actions, and the plaintiff in each has obtained judgment, it is competent for the parties to come to a bonâ fide settlement of the matter between themselves, although the consequence of such settlement may be, that the attorney for one party will lose his lien for his costs. But if such settlement is come to by collusion and fraud, for the purpose of depriving the attorney of his costs, he has a right to call for the interference of the court. Brunsdon v. Allard, 2 El. & El. 19 ; 28 L. J., Q. B. 306 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 596 ; 7 W. R. 581.

A plaintiff may, without consulting his attorney, compromise an action with a defendant, and take upon himself the payment of the costs to the attorney, if there is no fraudulent conspiracy to cheat the attorney of his costs. Chapman v. Haw, 1 Taunt. 341 ; 9 R. R. 786.

The attorney of a defendant has no such interest in the suit as to prevent the parties from compromising it without his consent. Quested v. Callis, 10 M. & W. 18 ; 1 D. (N.S.) 888 ; 11 L. J., Ex. 345 ; 6 Jur. 512.

Where the amount of damages sought to be recovered in an action is unliquidated, the parties may compromise, without regard to the plaintiff's attorney's claim to costs. Hart, Ex parte, 1 D. P. C. 324 ; 1 B. & Ad. 660.

An attorney is not justified in proceeding with an action after it has been settled between the parties themselves, though it is known that costs have been incurred, and that the plaintiff himself is not in a condition to pay them ; it must be shewn affirmatively, that the settlement was come to for the purpose of cheating the attorney. Jordan v. Hunt, 3 D. P. C. 666 ; 1 Gale, 159. S. P., Nelson v. Wilson, 4 M. & P. 385 ; 6 Bing. 568 ; 8 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 226 ; Anon., 9 L. J. (O.S.) Ex. 6 ; Hubert v. Steiner, 4 L. J., C. P. 233.

An attorney's lien on a judgment being merely a claim to the equitable interference of the court to have the judgment held as a security for his costs, he has no authority over the execution of a ca. sa. so as to carry it into effect against the order of the plaintiff, even though the plaintiff and defendant should collude to deprive him of his lien. Barker v. St. Quintin, 12 M. & W. 441 ; 1 D. & L. 542 ; 13 L. J., Ex. 144.

Enforcement of Lien by Court.] — When a judgment or a verdict which is not disturbed has been obtained, and, semble, where a debt is ascertained through the exertions of the attorney, and the parties make a collusive compromise, the court will enforce the attorney's right of lien for his costs. Sullivan v. Pearson, 9 B. & S. 960 ; 38 L. J., Q. B. 65 ; L. R. 4 Q. B. 153 ; 19 L. T. 430.

Where an arrangement is entered into for the compromise of an action by the plaintiff and defendant, without the knowledge of the plaintiff's solicitor, by the payment of a certain sum to the plaintiff in discharge of the claim and costs, the court has jurisdiction to give the plaintiff's solicitor liberty to continue the action for the recovery of his costs, on being satisfied that the purpose of the arrangement made by the parties included the purpose of depriving the plaintiff's solicitor of his costs. Dunthorne v. Bunbury, 24 L. R., Ir. 6—C. A.

A satisfaction piece collusively signed by the defendant at the instance of the plaintiff, whereby the defendant's attorney was deprived of costs, which were payable by the plaintiff, was set aside at the instance of the attorney. Sharpley v. Carwood, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 38.

If a plaintiff compromises the debt and costs with a defendant before the plaintiff's attorney has been paid, the court will not oblige the defendant to pay him, unless he gave notice to the defendant not to settle with the plaintiff till his bill should be paid. Welsh v. Hole, 1 Dougl. 238. See Downes, In re, Verity v. Wild, 4 Drew. 427 ; 28 L. J., Ch. 561.

Where a plaintiff and defendant collude in the settlement of an action, in order to deprive the plaintiff's attorney of his costs, and a bill for debt and costs is given by the defendant in furtherance of that collusion, the court will compel the delivery up of that bill. Gould v. Davies, 1 D. P. C. 288; 1 C. & J. 415; 1 Tyr. 380; 9 L. J. (O.S.) Ex. 111

A plaintiff and defendant having settled an action, after verdict for the plaintiff, without the knowledge of his attorney, the defendant gave notice of the compromise to the attorney, who afterwards signed final judgment. The court, upon affidavits denying any conspiracy to deprive the attorney of his costs, made a rule absolute to set aside the judgment. Clark v. Smith, 1 D. & L. 960; 7 Scott (N.R.) 946; 6 Man. & G. 1051; 13 L. J., C. P. 97; 8 Jur. 406.

A plaintiff who had obtained judgment for his costs, in collusion with the defendant, and in order to defeat the lien of the plaintiff's attorney, gave him and the sheriff notice not to execute any process on pain of being treated as trespassers:—Held, that a judge had power, in the exercise of the equitable interference of the court, to order that the plaintiff "or the defendant" pay the attorney the costs. Games, Ex parte, 3 H. & C. 294; 33 L. J., Ex. 317.

A plaintiff sued in formâ pauperis, and after action executed a release to the defendants; the release having been pleaded puis darrein continuance, the court set it aside on the application of the plaintiff's attorney. Wright v. Burroughes, 4 D. & L. 226; 15 L. J., C. P. 277; 10 Jur. 860.

Where a plaintiff was nonsuited, and a rule nisi was afterwards granted to set aside the nonsuit on payment of costs, and then the parties entered into an arrangement, without the intervention of the defendant's attorney, to settle the action, by the defendant's giving a bill of sale and warrant of attorney to the plaintiff for his debt and costs, but without providing for the costs due by the defendant to his attorney, and the attorney thereupon got the rule discharged for setting aside the nonsuit:—Held, that he was justified in so doing. Young v. Redhead, 2 D. P. C. 119.

Where a client, who is the applicant in taxation proceedings, has with the knowledge of his solicitor, come to an arrangement with the respondent that the proceedings shall be dropped, and the court is of opinion that such arrangement was made collusively, and with the intention of depriving the solicitor of his costs, the solicitor will be entitled to an order against the respondent for the payment of his taxed costs of the proceedings. Price v. Crouch (60 L. J., Q. B. 767) followed. Margetson and Jones, In re, 66 L. J., Ch. 619; [1897] 2 Ch. 314; 76 L. T. 805; 45 W. R. 645.

Where a plaintiff and defendant compromise an action with the knowledge that they are so acting as to deprive the plaintiff's solicitor of his costs, such solicitor is entitled to an order for the payment of his taxed costs of the action by the defendant, or for continuance of the action for the recovery of such costs. Price v. Crouch, 60 L. J., Q. B. 767.

Where plaintiff's solicitor, with notice, suffers defendant to satisfy plaintiff's demand, without taking effectual security for payment of his costs, the court will not suffer him to proceed in suit against defendant for recovery of them. Morse v. Cook, M'Clel. 211; 13 Price, 437.

By the decree in the cause, certain of the defendant's estates were directed to be sold to meet the plaintiff's claim. Pending the preliminaries for a sale, the plaintiff's solicitors gave notice to the defendant that they claimed a lien against the plaintiff in respect of their costs. The suit was afterwards compromised, the defendant paying a certain sum to the plaintiff:—Held, upon petition of the plaintiff's solicitors, that they were entitled to be paid their taxed costs of suit, and of the petition, by the plaintiff and defendant, or one of them, not exceeding in the whole the sum paid by the defendant upon the compromise. White v. Pearce, 7 Hare, 276; 18 L. J., Ch. 462; 13 Jur. 999.

—— Acting without Authority.]—Where an attorney, without a regular authority from the plaintiff, commenced an action, and the plaintiff, with a knowledge of the proceedings, suffered the cause to be carried down to trial, but afterwards concerting with the defendant entered up satisfaction on the record without securing to the attorney his costs, the court refused to vacate the entry of satisfaction. Abbott v. Rice, 3 Bing. 132; 10 Moore, 489; 3 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 202.

—— Where Plaintiff Sues in Formâ Pauperis.]—Where a pauper plaintiff settles the action behind the back of his attorney, it is entirely a question for the discretion of the court, under the particular circumstances of the transaction, whether they will interfere and set aside the proceedings. Jones v. Bonner, 2 Ex. 230; 5 D. & L. 718; 17 L. J., Ex. 343.

The court will not interfere, even in the case of a plaintiff suing in formâ pauperis, to prevent effect being given to a settlement between the parties, although it be evident that the attorney will lose his costs, unless the settlement is clearly collusive or fraudulent. Francis v. Webb, 7 C. B. 731. S. P., Moore v. Angell, 11 Jur. 455.

—— Payment to Plaintiff by Defendant's Solicitor.]—If a defendant's attorney pays to the plaintiff the debt and costs recovered, after notice from the plaintiff's attorney not to do so till his bill has been first satisfied, the former is liable to pay over again to the latter the amount of his lien on such debt. Read v. Duppa, 6 Term Rep. 361; 3 R. R. 200.

By Release.]—A release of all demands from the plaintiff to the defendant will not deprive the plaintiff's attorney of his lien upon the costs of an action awarded in favour of the plaintiff. Gifford v. Gifford, Forrest, 109. S. P., Ormerod v. Tate, 1 East, 464; 6 R. R. 327.

9. When Lost.

Loss of Possession.]—Where moneys have been recovered by a company in any action, although the solicitors would have a lien for their costs on such moneys while in their hands, yet after they have paid over such moneys to the company, and allowed them to be incorporated with the general assets, they have no lien on those assets in respect of costs. Phœnix Life Assurance Co., In re, Howard and Dollman, Ex parte, 1 H. & M. 433; 2 N. R. 548; 8 L. T. 728; 11 W. R. 984.

A firm of solicitors had a lien for costs upon certain documents in their possession. The partnership was dissolved, and the firm was reconstituted. Shortly after dissolution, the documents in question were removed from the office of the firm by a former partner without their consent or permission :—Held, that the lien was not destroyed. Carter, In re, Carter v. Carter, 55 L. J., Ch. 230 ; 53 L. T. 630 ; 34 W. R. 57.

A mortgagor instructed his solicitor, to whom he was indebted in a bill of costs, to prepare a conveyance of the mortgaged property. They did so, and sent the engrossment to the mortgagee's solicitors, with an intimation that they had a lien on it, and a request that the mortgagee's solicitors would hold it on account of the mortgagor's solicitors. The engrossment was executed by the mortgagee. The mortgage money was not paid, but the mortgagor sold the property to purchasers, who agreed to pay it :—Held, that the mortgagor's solicitors had a lien on the engrossment, and that such lien was not prejudiced by their having parted with the engrossment under the above circumstances, nor by the execution of it as a deed, nor by a promissory note delivered to the solicitors not covering their whole demand, and that the purchaser had been properly restrained by injunction from proceeding at law to recover the deed. Watson v. Lyon, 7 De G. M. & G. 288 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 754 ; 3 W. R. 543.

—— Undertaking to Pay.]—Where solicitors of a company, after an order to wind up, delivered up documents to the official manager, on his undertaking that they should be paid out of the first moneys in their hands, and allowed nine years to elapse before delivering their bill (the official manager having until then had no funds in his hands :—Held, that the claim was not barred by the Statute of Limitations. Gloucester, Aberystwith and Central Wales Ry., In re, 2 Giff. 47 ; 29 L. J., Ch. 383 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 116 ; 1 L. T. 320 ; 8 W. R. 175.

Title Paramount.]—When a party claiming by title paramount to the client, enforces the production of the paper, semble, the benefit, thereby incidentally accruing to parties deriving under the client, cannot be taken from them, and the solicitor's lien is lost. Blunden v. Desart, 2 Dr. & War. 405 ; 2 Con. & L. 111 ; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 221.

Assignment of Judgment.]—A solicitor to whom a judgment has been assigned in trust for his client, afterwards assigning to a trustee of a settlement upon the marriage of his client's grandson, parts with his lien upon all documents relating to the title to the judgment of those claiming under the settlement. Fitzgerald v. Bermingham, 1 Con. & L. 405.

On Payment.]—On payment of his costs, a solicitor's lien on documents of his client in his possession ceases ; he is then bound to deliver them up on his client's demand, and cannot refuse delivery because third persons claim an interest in them. Emma Silver Mining Co., In re, Turner, In re, 24 W. R. 54.

No reservation of Lien.]—A solicitor employed by an administrator in the affairs of the administration, and also on his own account, having in the course of that employment obtained possession of documents relating to the intestate's leasehold estate, and having, by his client's directions, deposited deeds relating to part of that property with the executor of a deceased party, who was entitled to a distributive share of the intestate's estate, claimed, for his bill of costs due from the administrator, a lien on other documents in his possession relating to the same property as that to which the deeds related which were so deposited :—Held, that the security having been effected by the agency of the solicitor, without any reservation on his part in favour of his lien, he had no lien against the party entitled to the benefit of the security. Hicks v. Keate, 3 Jur. 1024.

Costs ordered to be paid to Client.]—Though order be made on petition in bankruptcy directing costs to be paid to the petitioner personally, solicitor does not lose his lien for his costs. Bryant, Ex parte, 1 Madd. 49 ; 2 Rose, 227.

Change of Solicitor.]—The plaintiff and his solicitors at the date of the decree can waive taxation and accept a gross sum in satisfaction of all costs without consulting the former solicitors ; in such a case the lien of the former solicitors upon a fund in court is gone, and their only remedy is by an action for money had and received against the solicitors who received the money. Mornington v. Wellesley, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 6.

Bankruptcy.]—Lien of solicitor upon fund in court, which is the result of the proceedings, cannot be defeated by the subsequent insolvency of the client. Moule, Ex parte, 6 Madd. 462.

Notice when requisite.]—Semble, that where a solicitor has a lien for costs on a fund in the hands of a third party, a notice of such lien is not alone sufficient to make the third party responsible for paying over the fund, without providing for the costs, if the solicitor has had an opportunity of taking other proceedings to secure the fund, and has neglected to do so. Townsend v. Reade, 4 L. J., Ch. 233.

A solicitor's lien on a policy of insurance is not lost by want of notice to the assurance company against assignees who give notice. West of England Bank v. Batchelor, 51 L. J., Ch. 199 ; 46 L. T. 132 ; 30 W. R. 364.

Release.]—Voluntary release by a party to his adversary, not to defeat the clerk in court for his lien for costs. If the suit had ended on a bonâ fide compromise for a reasonable consideration paid, it would have been otherwise. Anon., 2 Ves. 25.

Taking Security—Waiver.]—Where a solicitor takes from his client a security for his costs, the primâ facie inference in default of evidence to the contrary is that he waives his lien. Payne-Collier, Ex parte, Taylor, In re, 60 L. J., Ch. 525 ; [1891] 1 Ch. 590 ; 64 L. T. 605 ; 39 W. R. 417—C. A.

Solicitor's lien is superseded by taking a security. Balch v. Symes, Turn. & R. 92 ; 23 R. R. 195. See Tyler v. Drayton, 2 Sim. & S. 309.

Solicitor's lien on papers superseded by taking security. Cowell v. Simpson, 16 Ves. 275 ; 10 R. R. 181.

If a solicitor takes a promissory note for his costs payable on demand, he loses his lien. Roberts v. Jefferys, 8 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 137.

A solicitor, having a lien for costs on title deeds, took from the client a bond conditioned for the amount of the costs, with interest at 5 per cent., and regularly received the interest for several years afterwards, but still retained the deeds. In a general creditors' suit subsequently instituted, it appeared that the entire estate of the client would be insufficient for creditors whose securities were prior to the bond, but should have been postponed to the lien. The solicitor stated on oath that he accepted the bond only as a collateral security, and never intended to give up his lien:—Held, that having taken a security for the amount of the costs, with interest, the lien was gone. Quære, whether the mere taking a security for the amount of costs, without more, extinguishes the lien. Brownlow v. Keatinge, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 243.

A firm of solicitors prepared and engrossed a reconveyance from a mortgagee to their client, the mortgagor in consideration, stated in the deed, of 398*l*. This deed was sent by the firm to the mortgagee's solicitors, with a letter desiring that it might be held by them on the account of the senders, who had a lien upon it for costs. The 398*l*. was not paid, and the mortgagee's solicitors retained the deed. The firm of solicitors received a promissory note, upon which part of the costs were paid. The land was sold, subject to the mortgage. The firm of solicitors filed a bill against the mortgagee and the purchaser for the delivery up of the deed:—Held, that they were entitled to hold the deed against the mortgagor; and that the taking of the promissory note for part of the debt due to them did not affect their lien for the money not covered by it. Watson v. Lyon, 7 De G. M. & G. 288; 24 L. J., Ch. 754; 3 W. R. 543.

A cheque is deposited, in pursuance of an agreement with a solicitor, to be applied in payment of the amount to be recovered by his client A. in an action against B., the party depositing the cheque. The action is proceeded with and judgment entered up for the amount subsequently ascertained by arbitration to be due to A. B. has a cross claim against A. which he is unable to plead in defence to the action brought against him. In proceedings taken under the bankruptcy of A., which happens subsequently to the award, B. is allowed to prove his debt against A.'s estate as a set-off:—Held, that the solicitor with whom the cheque had been deposited did not thereby lose his lien for costs, and a bill to recover from him the whole amount of the cheque was dismissed. Hanson v. Reece, 27 L. J., Ch. 118; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1204; 6 W. R. 46.

Where C. gave his attorney a specific sum for the purpose of satisfying a debt, for which an execution had issued against his goods at the suit of B., and the attorney paid the money to B., who thereupon delivered to him a lease which had been deposited by C. with B. as a security for the debt:—Held, that the attorney had a lien on it for his general balance due from C.; and that such lien was not extinguished by his having taken acceptances from C. for the amount of that balance before the lease came to his hands, some of those acceptances, when the lease did come to his hands, having been dishonoured, and one of them taken up by the attorney. Stevenson v. Blakelock, 1 M. & S. 535; 14 R. R. 525.

By Attachment.]—A solicitor does not lose his lien on costs ordered to be paid to his client, by taking the client in execution under a ca. sa. for nonpayment of costs. O'Brien v. Lewis, 3 De G. J. & S. 606; 2 N. R. 536; 32 L. J., Ch. 665; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 764; 8 L. T. 683; 11 W. R. 973.

The statute 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, ss. 16, 18, does not deprive a solicitor, who has attached his client for nonpayment of costs, of his lien upon the fund which the solicitor has recovered. An attachment of the client for the nonpayment of costs is not a waiver of the lien of the solicitor on the fund which he has recovered in the suit in which the costs were incurred. Lloyd v. Mason, 4 Hare, 132; 14 L. J., Ch. 257; 9 Jur. 772.

The execution of a writ of attachment for costs does not deprive the party issuing it of any lien or right of set-off he may possess for the payment of such costs. Bawtree v. Watson, 2 Keen, 713; 7 L. J., Ch. 183.

The solicitor is not deprived of his lien on the funds in court, for his costs in the cause, by having issued an attachment against his client, and committed him to gaol for nonpayment of his bill; but the costs which he may receive in the cause are to be taken in discharge of the attachment, pro tanto. Davies v. Bush, Younge, 353.

Judgment for Costs.]—A solicitor does not lose his retaining lien by suing his client and obtaining judgment for his costs. Aikin's Estate, In re, [1894] 1 Ir. R. 225.

10. Priorities.

Successive Solicitors—Insufficient Fund.]—Where successive solicitors are employed in an action, and the fund in court is insufficient for payment of all the costs, the solicitor who conducts the cause to its conclusion is entitled to be paid first, and the solicitor who was next previously employed is entitled to be paid next, and so on throughout, the latest in order of employment being entitled to priority; and it is immaterial that the previously employed solicitors may have obtained charging orders for their costs. Wadsworth, In re (34 Ch. D. 155) followed. Knight, In re, Knight v. Gardner, 61 L. J., Ch. 399; [1892] 2 Ch. 368; 66 L. T. 646; 40 W. R. 460.

In 1875 A. commenced an action against a colliery company on behalf of himself and all other debenture-holders. Shortly afterwards the company was ordered to be wound up, and the official liquidator was appointed receiver and manager in the action. In 1881 the plaintiff A. became bankrupt, and in 1882 B., another debenture-holder, was substituted as plaintiff in the action. An order was made directing A.'s solicitor to hand over the papers in the action to B.'s solicitor, without prejudice to his lien, if any. The colliery was carried on by the receiver and manager until 1883, when it was sold under an order obtained in the action by an auctioneer thereby appointed. The purchase-money, which was paid into court, was insufficient to pay the balance found due to the receiver, and the costs of all parties. The solicitors of A., the first plaintiff, claimed that, having given up the papers without prejudice to their lien, they were entitled to be paid their costs in priority to all parties to the action:—Held, that the solicitors of a plaintiff in a representative action, for whom another plaintiff was substituted, are not entitled to be paid their costs out of a fund recovered in the action in priority to the new plaintiff or other parties, by reason of any lien they might have upon the papers handed over by them in the action. Batten v. Wedgwood Coal and Iron Co., 54 L. J., Ch. 686; 28 Ch. D. 317; 52 L. T. 212; 33 W. R. 303.

Over Garnishee Order.]—The plaintiffs were the solicitors for W. in an action in which he recovered a sum of money. The defendant was a judgment creditor of W., and obtained, ex parte, on the day that judgment was signed in the above action, a garnishee order attaching all debts due to W. On the taxation of costs on the same day, the plaintiffs for the first time learned of the defendant's claim, and then gave notice to the defendant in the action in which W. was plaintiff, of their claim of lien :—Held, that the plaintiffs had a lien for their costs on the sum recovered by W. Shippey v. Grey, 49 L. J., C. P. 524; 42 L. T. 673; 28 W. R. 877—C. A. S. P., Hamer v. Giles, 48 L. J., Ch. 508; 11 Ch. D. 942; 27 W. R. 834.

A proctor's lien on a fund in court is not affected by a garnishee order, and he is entitled to be paid his costs in priority to the claim of the garnishee. The Jeff Davis, L. R. 2 Adm. 1; 17 L. T. 151.

An order obtained under the 61st section of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, attaching a fund in the hands of a garnishee to answer a judgment debt, will not displace the prior lien for costs of a solicitor who has given notice to the garnishee. Sympson v. Prothero, 26 L. J., Ch. 671; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 711; 5 W. R. 814.

The attachment of a judgment debt overrides an attorney's lien on or control over the judgment in respect of general costs due to him from the garnishee. Hough v. Edwards, 1 H. & N. 171; 26 L. J., Ex. 54; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 814.

Costs awarded upon an interlocutory application are subject to the lien of the solicitor for the party to whom they are given, and cannot be attached by a judgment creditor of the party to the prejudice of the lien. Cormick v. Ronayne, 22 L. R., Ir. 140.

Acting for Company and Debenture-holders.]—The solicitor of a company who acts in the issue of debentures is not therefore debarred from setting up a retaining lien for costs due to him as solicitor of the company, against the debenture-holders in respect of documents which, if two solicitors had been employed, would not have been handed over to the solicitor acting for the debenture-holders. Snell, In re (6 Ch. D. 105), distinguished. Brunton v. Electrical Engineering Corporation, 61 L. J., Ch. 256; [1892] 1 Ch. 434; 65 L. T. 745.

Transfer of Fund with Notice.]—P. was entitled under a will to a life interest in 10,000*l*. He retained a solicitor to institute a suit for administration of the testator's estate. Orders had been made in the suit directing the costs of all parties to be taxed and paid out of funds in court, amounting together to about 100,000*l*., but this had not been done. P.'s life interest in the 10,000*l*. was transferred to a society, with notice that P.'s costs due to the solicitor had not been paid. More than two years had elapsed since the first order to tax and pay costs, but the solicitor's bill had not been delivered :—Held, that the solicitor was entitled to a charging order under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 28, upon the life interest in the 10,000*l*., and also to retain the papers in the suit until he was paid. Pilcher v. Arden, Brook, Ex parte, 47 L. J., Ch. 479; 7 Ch. D. 318; 38 L. T. 111; 26 W. R. 163.

Creditors.]—A solicitor who had acquired the possession of deeds, &c., relating to the estate of a party deceased, for general purposes, was held, on the petition of the plaintiff in a creditors' suit, to have a general lien (beyond costs in the suit) on the documents prior to any general creditor of the estate; and the court cannot, on petition in the suit by the plaintiff or receiver, order any taxation of the solicitors' costs. Warburton v Edge, 9 Sim. 508; 8 L. J., Ch. 111; 3 Jur. 166.

A solicitor, who is in disburse for his client, has a right to be paid out of a duty decreed to an administrator, and has a lien upon it before the bond creditors of the deceased: nor can the administrator controvert this rule, by insisting on applying the assets in a course of administration. Turwin v. Gibson, 3 Atk. 720, 727.

R. S. devised his real estate, subject to his debts and legacies, to his only son, J. S., in tail, and died in 1773. In 1802 J. S. deposited the title deeds with his solicitor, and prior to the year 1813, incurred costs to a large amount, in suffering a recovery, and in the causes of A., B., and C. (the testator's younger children), instituted to raise charges to which they were entitled under the will, &c. In 1813 M., a specialty creditor of the testator on whose debt J. S. paid interest until 1811, filed his bill against J. S. and A., B. and C., &c., praying for the execution of the trust for payment of debts, and that his demand might be deemed charged on the testator's real estate. J. S. suffered the bill to be taken pro confesso against him, and died insolvent before the final decree. Some time before, the solicitor of J. S. became concerned in this cause for the representatives of B., and now refused to bring in the deeds for a sale under the decree, until J. S.'s costs incurred between the years 1802 and 1813 should be first paid. A., B. and C. were reported in priority to M., for whose demand the residue of the fund would be insufficient :—Held, that the costs now demanded, if rendered necessary by the will, should have been claimed upon the hearing of the cause, and provided for by the decree: and that, therefore, the claim could not now be entertained :—Held, also that as it did not appear that any of the costs had been incurred before the title deeds came into the solicitor's possession, and as he had full notice of the will when the costs were incurred, he was bound by the trust, and had not any lien upon the deeds as against M., the specialty creditor of the testator, who had proceeded bonâ fide and with due diligence. Morgan v. Scott, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 128.

When a judgment was obtained against a client subsequently to the deposit of his title deeds with his solicitor, and costs had become due for professional services rendered to the client both before and after the date of the entry of the judgment :—Held, that the solicitor's lien could not prevail against the judgment creditor for any portion of the costs incurred after the date of the judgment. Blunden v. Desart, 2 Dr. & War. 405; 2 Con. & L. 111; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 221.

11. How Enforced.

By what Method.]—If a solicitor, whom his client has ceased to employ, by the production of a deed in his hands belonging to the client, and upon which he claims a lien as solicitor, enables the client to recover a fund in a suit, his lien over the fund so realised is confined to the costs of that suit, but is a lien which he is entitled actively to enforce. Secus, as to his general lien upon his client's papers, which applies to all his bills of costs, but is merely a right to retain the papers, and cannot be actively enforced. Bozon v. Bolland, 4 Myl. & C. 354; 9 L. J., Ch. 123; 3 Jur. 884; 4 Jur. 763.

When all Matters in Dispute have been referred.]—The lien of an attorney cannot be affected by reference of the cause and all matters in dispute between the parties. Cowell v. Bettley, 4 M. & Scott, 265 ; 10 Bing. 432 ; 2 D. P. C. 780 ; 3 L. J., C. P. 148.

Trover for Documents.]—If an attorney having a lien on papers delivers them to an arbitrator for the purposes of the arbitration, he may maintain trover for them against the arbitrator though he has not expressly reserved his lien. Whalley v. Halley, 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 6.

Award—Payment to Solicitor.]—Where the terms of an award were "to pay to the plaintiff or his attorney" and, the plaintiff having become insolvent, the attorney claimed a lien on the award for his costs, an order for the defendant to pay the amount awarded and costs to the plaintiff's attorney was refused. Anon., 1 W. R. 150.

Costs.]—Where costs are ordered to be paid to the client, solicitors need not wait the result of process to compel the payment of such costs, but may insist upon the immediate benefit of their lien. Pounset v. Humphreys, C. P. Cooper, 142.

Out of Fund.] — Practice as to attorneys applying to be paid their costs out of the funds decreed to their clients. Anon., 5 Ir. Eq. R. 38.

Lien of a solicitor upon a fund in court for his costs of suit protected by a stop order. Hobson v. Shearwood, 8 Beav. 486.

A solicitor who has established in a suit a claim by his clients to a sum of money may apply ex parte for an interim order to restrain the payment to the clients by the accountant-general of a dividend in the suit until he can apply for a charging order. Gerrard v. Dawes, 21 L. T. 322 ; 18 W. R. 32.

Where an attorney applies to be paid his costs out of a fund allocated to his client, he ought to state, in his affidavit, that he distinctly informed his client of his intention so to apply. Redmond v. Gormley, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 698.

An attorney has a lien for his costs on a judgment recovered by his client, and the court will lay hold of the fund where it exists, and when it does not thereby set aside any arrangement of the parties. Slater v. Sunderland Corporation, 33 L. J., Q. B. 37 ; 9 L. T. 422.

By the decree, the plaintiff's costs (319*l.*) had been ordered to be paid to her solicitors, out of a fund in court, in which she was interested ; but the plaintiff having in the course of the proceedings given to one of the firm of solicitors a bill for 300*l.*, which they had passed away, the order for the payment of the 319*l.* was stayed. Moon v. Smith, 14 Beav. 393.

Judgment.]—Interpleader on an attorney's claim of lien upon a sum awarded as damages under a judgment obtained by the client against the plaintiff. —— v. Bolton, 18 Ves. 292.

In whose Name.]—Where an administrator has recovered a chattel interest in lands, by a decree in equity declaring his costs to be duly charged on the estate, his solicitor cannot file a petition in his own name to realise his own portion of those costs. M'Allister, In re, 16 Ir. Ch. R. 134.

Application.]—Where papers had come into the hands of a solicitor prior to the institution of the suit (which was for an administration of a testator's estate), and he claimed a lien on them for other business relating to the administration, besides that done in the suit, a motion by a creditor for a reference, as to whether the solicitor had a lien on the papers, and that he might deliver them up to the receiver, or deposit them in court was dismissed. Warburton v. Edge, 9 Sim. 508 ; 8 L. J., Ch. 111 ; 3 Jur. 166.

—— Time for.]—An infant tenant in tail filed a bill by his next friend against his trustee, who was in possession of the title deeds of the estate. The defendant deposited the deeds in court for the inspection of the plaintiff. No decree was made, and when the infant came of age he repudiated the suit. The defendant then moved to have the deeds delivered up to him :—Held, that the defendant was entitled to the order, notwithstanding the opposition of the next friend. In the same case the defendant, having obtained possession of the deeds, gave them up to the plaintiff, who immediately mortgaged them. After they had been delivered to the mortgagee, the plaintiff's solicitor on the record presented a petition claiming a lien on the deeds for the costs incurred in the suit on behalf of the plaintiff : — Held, that he had no such lien. Dunn v. Dunn, 3 Drew. 17 ; 3 Eq. R. 129 ; 18 Jur. 1068. Affirmed, 7 De G. M. & G. 635 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 581 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 122 ; 3 W. R. 199.

By Bill.]—The court will entertain a bill by a solicitor, seeking to enforce a lien against certain title deeds in respect of his bills of costs, a decree for an account having been made in a suit instituted by the client against the solicitor, but under which decree the master was not at liberty to take into the general account what was due to the solicitor in respect of his bills of costs. Hector v. Jolliffe, 6 Jur. 120.

On a bill filed by a solicitor, seeking to establish a lien for costs upon a policy of assurance which a client had placed in his hands professionally, and upon which the court had, in another cause, directed an action to be brought, a special injunction was obtained, restraining all proceedings upon the policy ; but this injunction was dissolved, upon appeal, the Lord Chancellor holding that the plaintiff's proper course was to make an application in the other cause. Whether such a lien could be enforced by suit, and if so, to what extent, quære. Steadman v. Webb, 4 Myl. & C. 346 ; 8 L. J., Ch. 193 ; 3 Jur. 213.

Pending a reference for the taxation of a solicitor's bill against a married woman, the solicitor cannot maintain a suit to enforce a lien for his bill of costs on her separate estate. Waugh v. Waddell, 16 Beav. 521 ; 1 W. R. 206.

Non-production.]—An attorney having a lien on a deed for the costs of drawing it is not bound to produce it on a subpœna duces tecum for the client. Kemp v. King, 2 M. & Rob. 437 ; Car. & M. 396.

12. Production of Documents.

Solicitor—Subpœna.]—A solicitor claiming a lien on a deed cannot be compelled to produce it at the hearing of a cause, without a subpœna duces tecum. Bush v. Lewis, 6 Madd. 29.

—— For Benefit of Stranger.]—Whenever a client is bound to produce a deed for the benefit of a third person, so also is his solicitor, though the latter may have a lien on it for costs against his clients. Furlong v. Howard, 2 Sch. & Lef. 115.

Claim of lien by solicitor for professional charges held to be no ground of objection to an order upon him to produce deeds in possession before the examiner, with a view to their being used as evidence between third parties. Hope v. Liddell, 7 De G. M. & G. 331; 3 Eq. R. 790; 24 L. J., Ch. 691; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 665; 3 W. R. 581.

A solicitor a defendant in a suit cannot refuse to produce documents belonging to his client, on the ground that he has a lien upon them, and that the party seeking inspection claims under his client. Lockett v. Cary, 3 N. R. 405; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 144.

A witness is bound to produce a document in order that it may be given in evidence, notwithstanding he may have a lien on it. Cameron's Coalbrook Ry., In re, 25 Beav. 1.

Distinction between the production of documents at the instance of the party who created the lien, and of a stranger, and between production and parting with the possession. Ib.

A solicitor cannot set up a lien acquired in a cause as against the right of other parties in the cause to production. Vale v. Oppert, 44 L. J., Ch. 579; L. R. 10 Ch. 340; 33 L. T. 41; 23 W. R. 780.

A solicitor who obtained possession of a lease from a client which was claimed by a third party, cannot refuse to answer a bill, filed against him upon an allegation that the information respecting the matters inquired into was obtained either in the character of solicitor, or as a creditor of his client, neither will his claim to be a purchaser for value without notice, in respect of a lien claimed upon the lease for a debt incurred by his client, prevent his being required to answer the bill. Thomas v. Rawlings, 28 L. J., Ch. 829; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 667.

—— Effect of Order.]—Where a party, claiming by title paramount to client, enforces the production of the papers, semble, the benefit thereby incidentally accruing to parties deriving under the client cannot be taken from them, and the solicitor's lien is lost. Blunden v. Desart, 2 Dr. & War. 405; 2 Con. & L. 111; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 251.

—— Deed Impeached.]—Where a deed is sought to be impeached, the plaintiff is entitled to have it produced, and the defendant cannot resist the production upon the ground of lien. Balch v. Symes, Turn. & R. 87; 23 R. R. 195.

—— Marriage Settlement.]—Solicitors employed by the husband to prepare a marriage settlement:—Held, not bound to produce it to the trustees until their bill had been paid. Gregson, In re, 26 Beav. 87.

In an action by a married woman against her husband and the trustees of her marriage settlement, the solicitor who prepared the settlement was called as a witness for the plaintiff, and required to produce the settlement under a subpœna duces tecum. The solicitor objected to produce it on the ground that it had not been paid for, and asserted a general lien on it. The settlement was prepared on the instructions of the wife in contemplation of her marriage in 1873; i.e. between the dates of the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, and the Amendment Act, 1874:—Held, that the solicitor was bound to produce. Fowler v. Fowler, 50 L. J., Ch. 686; 44 L. T. 799; 29 W. R. 800.

To Trustees in Bankruptcy.]—See ante, col. 1693.

On change of Solicitor.]—The solicitors for the trustees of an estate which is under the administration of the court have not, after their discharge, such a lien for costs and for money advanced in the suit as will enable them to refuse the production of documents which are required by the receiver for the management of the estate. Belaney v. French, 43 L. J., Ch. 312; L. R. 8 Ch. 918; 29 L. T. 706; 22 W. R. 177.

A defendant, shortly after filing an affidavit as to documents, entered into liquidation of his affairs by arrangement. Some time afterwards he changed his solicitors. The plaintiff applied for production of the documents, which the defendant resisted on the ground that they were in the possession of his former solicitors, who claimed a lien on them:—Held, that an order for production must be made, with liberty to apply in case the defendant found it impossible to produce the documents, the plaintiff not to attach the defendant without leave of the court. Vale v. Oppert, 44 L. J., Ch. 579; L. R. 10 Ch. 340; 33 L. T. 41; 23 W. R. 780.

Documents in the possession of a former solicitor of a plaintiff who claimed a lien for costs upon them will not be ordered to be produced for the defendant's inspection. Kettlewell v. Barstow, 20 W. R. 621.

Order on Client.]—A party ordered to produce papers which are in the hands of his solicitor, must pay his bill of costs if he cannot otherwise procure them. Shaw, Ex parte, Jac. 272.

A defendant before answer became bankrupt. He put in his answer stating that certain books and letters were in the possession of his solicitor, who claimed a lien on them, and that he could not obtain possession thereof. The court ordered the defendant to produce them, with liberty to apply in case of need. Rodick v. Gandell, 10 Beav. 270.

Where an order for discovery has been made, it is no answer to a summons for production of documents that the documents are in the possession of former solicitors who claim a lien on them for costs, and that the person resisting production is unwilling to discharge the lien because he believes he has a good claim for negligence against such solicitors. The court, however, in making the order for production will give liberty to apply so as to provide for the contingency of the party called upon to produce documents finding a difficulty in obtaining them. Lewis v. Powell, 66 L. J., Ch. 463; [1897] 1 Ch. 678; 76 L. T. 282; 45 W. R. 438.

A defendant by his answer stated that a certain deed was in the possession of the personal representative of a solicitor who claimed a lien on it. The court ordered him to produce it, with liberty to apply, if production or inspection of the deed was refused by the party who had it. Monsel v. Lindsay, 13 Ir. Eq. R. 144.

Two defendants, one of whom was a solicitor, admitted by their answer that documents were in their power; their solicitor, with his partner, claimed a lien upon them for costs; and on a motion that the defendants should pay the costs in order to facilitate the production of the documents, the court declined to make the order. Wroughton v. Barclay, 11 Jur. 274.

Where documents belonging to a trust are in the hands of the solicitor to the trust, who claims a lien upon them, a trustee defendant cannot by answer refuse to disclose the deeds on the ground that the solicitor claims his lien, and will not produce them. The course is for the trustee to obtain an extension of time to put in his answer, which extension of time will be from time to time prolonged, until the trustee can pay off or procure a waiver of the lien. Goodchap v. Weaving, 16 Jur. 586.

Order not Obeyed.]—A defendant was committed for the non-production of documents admitted by him to be in his possession or power. It afterwards appearing that prior to the suit they had been deposited with a third party, who claimed a lien thereon which the defendant was unable to satisfy, he was discharged from custody without producing them. North v. Huber, 29 Beav. 437.

The non-delivery of documents left by an insolvent solicitor with counsel and law stationers, and retained by them for nonpayment of fees and charges :—Held, not a breach of an order upon the solicitor to deliver up to a new solicitor all deeds and documents in his possession or power, relating to the affairs of his client in the suit. Williams, In re, 3 De G. F. & J. 104 ; 30 L. J., Ch. 610 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 323 ; 4 L. T. 103 ; 9 W. R. 393.

Costs of Motion.]—A defendant was decreed to deliver up certain deeds to the plaintiff ; the deeds were in the possession of the defendant's solicitor, who claimed a lien on them for costs ; but the court, on motion, ordered him to deliver them up, and to pay the costs of the motion. Bell v. Taylor, 8 Sim. 216.

Solicitor refusing to allow deed in his possession to be proved on behalf of plaintiff, because he had lien on it for costs due from defendant : ordered to produce deed at his own expense, and pay all costs consequential on his refusal. Brassington v. Brassington, 1 Sim. & S. 455.

Payment under Protest.]—Where a bill of costs is paid under protest in order to obtain some document upon which a lien is claimed, the objectionable items in the bill should be specified before payment. Darie, In re, White, Ex parte, 8 W. R. 15.

13. Deposit of Deeds in Court.

In what Cases.]—A solicitor will not be ordered to bring into court the deeds of his client. M'Cann v. Beere, 1 Hog. 129.

Where a solicitor receives in his professional character muniments of title from his client, the court has jurisdiction, under a decree binding the client, to order his solicitor to bring in the deeds of his client in his possession, although he never appeared in the cause, and it is uncertain what time the deeds came into his possession. Hargrave v. Holland, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 137.

The plaintiff was trustee for sale of real estates. The decree directed the estates to be sold, and the title deeds (which were in the possession of the plaintiff's solicitor for the purpose of the suit) to be deposited. The solicitor refused to produce them, and claimed a lien on them for his costs of the suit ; but the court ordered him to deposit them. Baker v. Henderson, 4 Sim. 27.

After a decree for a sale, the solicitor of one of the defendants, a mortgagee, who had been paid off, but had not reconveyed, having the mortgage deed in his possession, being made a party by supplemental bill, and having admitted by his answer that he held the deed, having a lien thereon for costs incurred by the mortgagee, his client : on motion against the solicitor by plaintiff, ordered, that he should bring in the deed without prejudice to any claim he might have against his own client. Plumtre v. O'Dell, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 113.

An attorney who claims a lien for his costs upon the title deeds of a freehold estate decreed to be sold, which lien was acquired by him prior to the institution of the suit, will be ordered to deposit them in court, without prejudice to his lien, or to his making it available against the purchase-money of the lands ; and having established his claim, he is entitled to be paid it out of the purchase-money of the estate. Little v. Little, 2 Jones, 270.

On a petition, that certain bills of costs of a solicitor might be taxed after the amount had been paid and the papers had been delivered up : —Held, that the papers (which had been delivered up on the faith of a settlement), being necessary for the purpose of enabling the solicitor to support the bill of costs, must be placed in the master's office for a limited time for inspection, and be subject to the solicitor's right of lien ; but that the bill of costs be then taxed. Downes, In re, 5 Jur. 984.

A firm of solicitors having declined to act for their client during the continuance of a suit and refused to give up the deeds, alleging that they had a lien for costs incurred to them, and also to their predecessors in the firm before the commencement of the suit, these costs having been previously taxed, an order was made for the deposit of the deeds in the master's office. Gregory v. Cresswell, 14 L. J., Ch. 300.

c. RECOVERY AND PAYMENT.

When Retainer Determined.]—See ante, col. 1421.

When Solicitor Uncertificated.]—See post, col. 1757.

Agreement between Solicitor and Unqualified Person.]—An agreement by a solicitor to give to an unqualified person a share of profits on business introduced by the latter, gives no right to the client to deduct from the solicitor's bill the amount allowed by him to such unqualified person. Gordon v. Dalzell, 15 Beav. 351 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 206 ; 16 Jur. 186.

When Solicitor has discontinued Action.]—An attorney is not entitled to recover his bill of costs for conducting an action which he has not terminated, but which has been discontinued, unless he shews satisfactory reasons for not proceeding with it, and gives his client reasonable notice thereof. Nicholls v. Wilson, 11 M. & W. 106 ; 2 D. (N.S.) 1031 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 266. See also ante, col. 1421.

Solicitors to Company acting Ultra Vires.]—Solicitors to a company cannot recover costs in respect of business undertaken with full knowledge that it is beyond the powers of the company, nor can they appropriate money, belonging to the company, and received by them on a general account, to the payment of such costs. Phœnix Life Assurance Co., In re, Howard and Dolman, Ex parte, 1 H. & M. 433; 2 N. R. 548; 8 L. T. 728; 11 W. R. 984. S. P., Cleverton v. St. Germains Union, 56 L. J., Q. B. 83.

Costs Payable on Contingency.]—A declaration stated that the plaintiff was the attorney of a railway company; that it was intended to apply for an act for its incorporation; and that, in consideration that the managing committee of the railway would, by the permission and at the instance of the plaintiff, retain the defendant as attorney about performing certain business for the company, in preparing books of reference, serving notices on the landowners, and doing the conveyancing business consequent upon the act of parliament being obtained, if such act should be so obtained, he, the defendant, promised to allow the plaintiff one-third part of the profits of the business. And that the managing committee did, with the permission and at the instance of the plaintiff, retain the defendant as attorney in and about performing certain work and business for the company, in preparing books of reference, serving notices on landowners, and was ready and willing to retain the defendant in and about the conveyancing business consequent upon the intended act being obtained. Breach, nonpayment of the third part of the profits:—Held, that the declaration was bad, the meaning of the contract being, that the work to be done, and not the retainer, was to be contingent upon the passing of the act of parliament. Sewell v. Allen, 17 L. J., Ex. 246.

By a private act of parliament, the expenses attending its passing were directed to be paid out of the tolls raised or levied, or to be raised under it. The attorney who prepared and solicited the act sued the commissioners named in it for the amount of his bill:—Held, that he was bound to shew that there were sufficient funds in the hands of the commissioners, which had been raised or levied by tolls or otherwise, to satisfy his demand. Andrews v. Dally, 1 M. & P. 490; 4 Bing. 566; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 117. See Nichols v. North Metropolitan Ry., 71 L. T. 836—C. A. Affirmed 74 L. T. 744—H. L. (E.)

Solicitor to Trustees—Rights of.]—A solicitor employed in trust business is the solicitor of the trustees personally, and has no direct claim on the trust estate for costs. Staniar v. Evans, 56 L. J., Ch. 581; 34 Ch. D. 470; 56 L. T. 87; 35 W. R. 286.

An executor or trustee who properly employs a solicitor or other agent to assist him in the execution of the trust enters into a contract in which he is personally liable, but he is entitled to be indemnified out of the trust estate, not merely against payments actually made, but against his liability, so that he has a right to resort to the trust estate in the first instance for making the necessary payments to the persons whom he employs, though he may commit acts which will deprive him of such right. Blundell, In re, Blundell v. Blundell, 57 L. J., Ch. 730; 40 Ch. D. 370; 58 L. T. 933; 36 W. R. 779. See also TRUST.

Solicitor a Party.]—Where a solicitor sues or defends an action in person, and obtains judgment with costs, he is entitled to recover from his adversary the same costs as would have been allowed if he were not a party to the action, but were acting as solicitor for another person, subject to this, that the costs to be allowed must not include any items which the union of the two characters renders impossible or unnecessary; and where any items are attributable to the fact that the solicitor is acting in the two characters, such items should be treated on taxation as attributable to his character as party to the action, and not to his character as solicitor. London Scottish Permanent Benefit Society v. Chorley, 53 L. J., Q. B. 551; 13 Q. B. D. 872; 51 L. T. 100; 32 W. R. 781—C. A.

Where one of a body of mortgagees is a solicitor, and acts as such in enforcing the mortgage security, he is entitled to charge profit costs against the mortgagor, whether the mortgagees are trustees or not. If in such a case the mortgagor, in applying to tax the bill of the solicitor-mortgagee, desires to raise the objection to profit costs, he should state his objection in his petition for taxation. Donaldson, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 151; 27 Ch. D. 544; 51 L. T. 622.

Taxation, whether Condition Precedent.]—It is not a condition precedent of a solicitor's right to sue a guarantor of costs to be incurred, that the costs should have been taxed. Moore v. Walton, 1 Cab. & E. 279.

Right of Assignee to Sign and Sue.]—A solicitor assigned his bill of costs and the right to recover on it, and the assignee gave notice of the assignment, and delivered the bill to the party to be charged, inclosed in a letter signed by himself. After the expiration of a month he brought an action in his own name on the bill of costs:—Held, that the plaintiff was an assignee within s. 37 of the Solicitors Act, 1843, and was entitled to maintain the action. Ingle v. M'Cutchan, 53 L. J., Q. B. 311; 12 Q. B. D. 518.

Partner not a Solicitor.]—An attorney carried on business under the firm of A. & Son; the son was not, in fact, a partner, but acted as clerk to his father, and received a salary:—Held, that A. might maintain an action in his own name to recover from a client the amount of a bill for business done. Kell v. Nainby, 10 B. & C. 20; 5 M. & Ry. 76; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 99.

Partners in Particular Matter.] — Where two solicitors, who are not in partnership, are employed in the same matter for a client, as in the defence of an action, the primâ facie inference of law is, that they are partners as to that particular matter, and entitled to an equal share of the joint profits, irrespective of the quantity of work performed by each. Robinson v. Anderson, 20 Beav. 98. Affirmed, 7 De G. M. & G. 239.

Nominal Partner—Set-off—Joint and Separate Debt.]—Spurr, an attorney, practised under the firm of Spurr & Chambers. Chambers, although an attorney, was not, in fact, a partner of Spurr, but only a clerk. Cass was a client of the nominal firm, and owed a bill of costs; and Spurr was personally liable to Cass on a bill of exchange of less amount than the bill of costs. Spurr, without joining Chambers, sued Cass for the amount of the bill of costs; and Cass pleaded never indebted, and set off the sum due on the bill of exchange. Cass brought a cross-action on the bill of exchange, and Spurr set off the amount of the bill of costs. The two ctions being tried together, it was found by the jury that Chambers had authorised Spurr to contract on behalf of himself and Chambers with Cass, and that Spurr had so contracted:—Held, that Spurr, being the real principal, might take the benefit of the contract with Cass, and sue alone, and set off the bill of costs in the action against him. Spurr v. Cass, 39 L. J., Q. B. 249; L. R. 5 Q. B. 656; 23 L. T. 409.

Compromise — Laches.] — Where plaintiff's solicitor, with notice, suffers the defendant to satisfy the demands of his client, without making effectual provision for payment of his costs; the court will not suffer him to proceed in suit against defendant for recovery of them. Morse v. Cooke, M'Clel. 211; 13 Price, 473.

Statute of Limitations — From what Time running.] — Two attorneys in partnership having been retained to defend an action, it was decided in favour of the defendant, upon which the plaintiffs appealed. While the appeal was pending the partnership was dissolved, and the proceedings were continued by one of the partners separately:—Held, that the partners were not entitled to sue for their costs till the appeal was decided, so that the Statute of Limitations did not until then begin to run as against their claim. Harris v. Quine, 10 B. & S. 644; 38 L. J., Q. B. 331; L. R. 4 Q. B. 653; 20 L. T. 947; 17 W. R. 967.

The cause of action in respect of work done by a solicitor arises upon the completion of the work, and not at the expiration of one month from the delivery of a bill of costs, and therefore the Statute of Limitations runs from the completion of the work. Coburn v. Colledge, 66 L. J., Q. B. 462; [1897] 1 Q. B. 702; 76 L. T. 608; 45 W. R. 488—C. A.

The contract between a solicitor and his client is to carry on the action to its termination, unless the solicitor gives reasonable notice to determine his employment, and therefore the solicitor can recover all items of charge in respect of an action, though part of the bill relates to matters charged for more than six years before the commencement of the action by the solicitor. Harris v. Osbourn, 2 C. & M. 629; 4 Tyr. 445; 3 L. J., Ex. 182.

Effect of Negligence.]—Negligence in the conduct of a cause cannot be set up as a defence to an action on the attorney's bill. Templer v. M'Lachlan, 2 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 136.

A parliamentary agent, entrusted with the passing of a local bill through parliament, who puts a construction on an order of the House of Lords which is doubtful in its terms—such construction being different from that which is adopted by the Standing Orders Committee, and by the House, whereby it becomes necessary to abandon the bill—is not guilty of such gross negligence as to disentitle him to recover a remuneration for his labour in passing the bill through the House of Commons. Bulmer v. Gilman, 4 Man. & G. 108; 4 Scott (N.R.) 781; 11 L. J., C. P. 174.

An action having been brought against an attorney for negligence, in which action the jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff, finding also that he had been guilty of gross negligence, and then he brought an action for his bill of costs, the court refused to stay proceedings in the latter action. Smith v. Rolt, 2 D. P. C. 62.

An attorney employed to prosecute an appeal against an order for the removal of a pauper permitted the next sessions to pass without causing the appeal to be entered and respited; and failed to comply with the directions of the statute, as to the notice and statement of the grounds of appeal. The justices, at a subsequent sessions, having refused to entertain the appeal:—Held, that the attorney could not maintain an action for his costs in respect of his services. Huntley v. Bulwer, 8 Scott, 325; 6 Bing. (N.C.) 111; 3 Jur. 1105. See also NEGLIGENCE, ante, col. 1467.

—— Service wholly Useless or Abortive.]—Where a solicitor has been retained for the prosecution of a suit, and he has by crassa negligentia in the conduct of the suit caused the suit to be lost, he cannot recover any portion of his bill. Stokes v. Trumper, 2 Kay & J. 232; 3 W. R. 503.

An attorney being instructed to take proceedings against an acceptor of a foreign bill of exchange, brought an action against him in the name of his client, without first ascertaining whether his client's title was complete by special indorsement, as required by the law of the foreign country, and it being afterwards ascertained that there was no such indorsement, the action was discontinued:—Held, that he was guilty of such negligence as disentitled him from recovering the costs of the abortive proceedings. Long v. Orsi, 18 C. B. 610; 26 L. J., C. P. 127.

In an action upon a money bond, the defendant, after the writ issued, wrote a letter, stating that he had paid part, and was ready to pay the residue. The attorney for the plaintiff then delivered a declaration. When the cause was ready for trial an order was taken by consent for a reference to the master, who made his allocatur in favour of the plaintiff. In the meantime the defendant had become bankrupt. In an action by the attorney for his bill of costs, the judge directed the jury that it was his duty, on receiving the letter, to make an application for an order of reference as in a matter of account, and the jury found a verdict for the defendant:—Held, that the omission of the attorney to apply for an order was not evidence of negligence to disentitle him from recovering his bill of costs. Chapman v. Van Toll, 8 El. & Bl. 396; 27 L. J., Q. B. 1; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1126; 6 W. R. 17.

A solicitor who, in order to gain some advantage for himself, induced his client to prosecute an appeal, which was dismissed with costs, and would not have benefited the client if it had succeeded, was ordered to repay to the client the respondent's costs, and declared not to be entitled to any costs against the client. Harbin v. Masterman, 65 L. J., Ch. 195; [1896] 1 Ch. 351; 73 L. T. 591; 44 W. R. 421—C. A.

In an action by an attorney for the costs of an action to recover a chattel, the subject of a specific bequest, but claimed by the possessor as a gift from the testator, the defence being that the action, which had failed, was only brought under the advice of the attorney, and that it was wholly useless, the proper course being to take out an administration summons in chancery :—Held, that it was nevertheless for the jury to say, on the whole case, not whether the course was proper, but whether it was so wholly useless as that the client had derived no benefit from it. Fletcher v. Winter, 3 F. & F. 138.

In an action by attorneys for the costs of a defence, which failed, they having been absent on the day of trial, and some of the witnesses consequently not being in court :—Held, that they were entitled to recover, notwithstanding the verdict had passed against their clients, unless the jury thought that the absence of the witnesses had caused the loss of the verdict, and so made the services wholly valueless. Dunn v. Hallen, 2 F. & F. 642.

If an attorney conducting a suit commits an act of negligence, by which all the previous steps become useless in the result, he cannot recover for any part of the business done. Bracey v. Carter, 12 Ad. & E. 373.

Whether or not in such a case the work became wholly useless by his fault, is a question for the jury. Ib.

It is no defence that the defendant has derived no benefit from the suit, where the failure does not result wholly from the attorney's negligence, but partly from accident. Daæ v. Ward, 1 Stark. 409.

An attorney cannot charge for work which is useless towards accomplishing the object his client has in view, although performed through inadvertence or inexperience, and not with the design of imposing on his client. Hill v. Featherstonhaugh, 7 Bing. 569 ; 5 M. & P. 541.

The jury may discard an item for work entirely useless ; though, upon an item partly useless, or in respect of which there has been any negligence, the client's remedy is only by a cross-action. Shaw v. Arden, 9 Bing. 287 ; 2 M. & Scott, 341 ; 1 D. P. C. 705 ; 2 L. J., C. P. 1.

Action after Taxation — Contempt.]— The omission by a client to file a certificate of taxation of a solicitor's bill within the four days prescribed by the order of 29th October, 1692, does not render the order a nullity, but the client's representatives, after his death, may, notwithstanding the omission, obtain an order under the summary jurisdiction for the delivering up of the client's papers on payment of the amount of the bill as taxed, and an action by the solicitor on the bill, after such taxation, is a contempt, and will be restrained by injunction at the instance of the representatives. Campbell, In re, 3 De G. M. & G. 585 ; 22 L. J., Ch. 865 ; 17 Jur. 1171 ; 1 W. R. 204.

Order XIV.—Taxation—Form of Order.]— Where an action is brought on a solicitor's bill of costs, and the defendant admits his liability but desires that the bills should be taxed, the proper order to be made on an application for liberty to sign judgment under Ord. XIV. r. 1, is as follows :—"It is ordered that the bill of costs on which the action is brought be referred to the taxing-master, pursuant to the statute 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, and that the plaintiff give credit at the time of taxation for all sums of money received by him from or on account of the defendant, and let the plaintiff be at liberty to sign judgment for the amount of the master's allocatur in the said taxation, and costs to be taxed." Smith v. Edwardes, 58 L. J., Q. B. 227 ; 22 Q. B. D. 10 ; 60 L. T. 10 ; 37 W. R. 112—C. A.

In an action by solicitors on an untaxed bill of costs, the court, on motion by the plaintiffs under Ord XIII. r. 2, referred the costs for taxation, subject to credits, and ordered judgment to be entered for the amount to be certified. Larkin v. M'Inerney, 16 L. R., Ir. 246.

Default of Defence.]—In an action on a solicitor's untaxed bill of costs, on default in delivering a defence, the plaintiff is entitled to enter judgment for the full amount claimed without a reference to tax such bill. Gilsenan v. M'Govern, 30 L. R., Ir. 300.

Non-appearance of Client at Trial.]—Solicitors brought an action against their client for the amount of their bill of costs delivered shortly before the commencement of the action. The defendant denied the retainer, alleged negligence, and counter-claimed for damages on the ground of negligence. At the trial the defendant did not appear and the plaintiffs proved their case, but the judge declined to make any other order than an order referring the bill for taxation under the statute 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, reserving the costs of the action and adjourning the further hearing :—Held, on appeal, that the plaintiffs were entitled to have the counter-claim dismissed with costs, and to have judgment for the amount to be certified on the taxation, with costs of the action up to and including the hearing. Lumley v. Brookes, 58 L. J., Ch. 494 ; 41 Ch. D. 323 ; 61 L. T. 172 ; 37 W. R. 454—C. A.

Particulars.]—In an action on an attorney's bill, an order for better particulars was obtained on payment of costs :—Held, that a charge for drawing the bill, as part of the costs, was properly disallowed. Jones v. Roberts, 2 D. P. C. 374 ; 4 Tyr. 310.

Consolidation of Actions.]—Where an attorney did different kinds of professional work for a client, and after all the business was transacted, sent in a bill for one part of the business, and subsequently sent in a bill for the other part, and commenced an action for the first part of the business before the expiration of the month in respect of the delivery of the second bill, and after the expiration of that month commenced an action for the other part, the court made an order for the consolidation of the two actions. Beardsall v. Cheetham, El. Bl. & El. 243 ; 27 L. J., Q. B. 367 ; 6 W. R. 504.

Pleadings—Declaration.]—It is no ground of demurrer to a declaration in an action by an attorney, that he seeks to recover for "materials" supplied by him to his client. Fisher v. Snow, 3 D. P. C. 27.

Taxation by Jury.]—After an attorney's bill has been delivered a month, and no application has been made to have it taxed, the client will not be permitted to question the reasonableness of the items before a jury. Williams v. Frith, 1 Dougl. 198. S. P., Hooper v. Till, 1 Dougl. 198 ; Anderson v. May, 2 Bos. & P. 237 ; 3 Esp. 167.

In an action on an attorney's bill, when there is evidence of a general retainer, the judge will not allow the bill to be taxed in detail by the jury, although particular heads or items of charge not necessarily arising out of the retainer may be disallowed in toto, as not having been authorised by the client. Dunn v. Hales, 1 F. & F. 174.

Denial of Liability—Taxation after Action.]—If an action is brought on an attorney's bill, and after action it is taxed on the application of the defendant, without anything being inserted in the order to tax, as to the question of liability:—Semble, that the defendant could not afterwards deny his liability; but if in the order power was reserved to the defendant to amend his pleas after the taxation, he might still deny his liability, by so pleading as to raise that question. Baker v. Meryweather, 2 Car. & K. 737.

After Paying Money into Court.]—A defendant may, after a payment into court, shew that the work was to be done for costs out of pocket, and not for an attorney's accustomed fees and charges. Jones v. Reade, 5 D. P. C. 216; 5 A. & E. 529; 1 N. & P. 18; 2 H. & W. 382; 6 L. J., K. B. 9.

Evidence.]—An examined copy of a bill of costs, the original of which has been delivered to the client, may be admitted without proof of notice to produce the original; and is conclusive as to the reasonableness of the items. Anderson v. May, 2 Bos. & P. 237; 3 Esp. 167. S. P., Colling v. Treweek, 9 D. & R. 456; 6 B. & C. 394; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 132; 30 R. R. 366.

To a declaration for an attorney's costs, the defendant pleaded that he was always ready and willing to pay a just and reasonable sum in satisfaction of the demand, and that before action he offered to pay such just and reasonable sum. It was proved that he had offered to pay the costs when the bill was taxed:—Held, that such evidence did not support the plea. Filmer v. Burnby, 2 Scott (N.R.) 689; 9 D. P. C. 466; 2 Man. & G. 529.

After action an attorney's bill was, by a judge's order, referred to the master to be taxed, "without prejudice to any defence the defendant may have to this action." The master taxed the bill, and made his allocatur. The defendant pleaded nunquam indebitatus and payment:—Held, that, at the trial, the allowance of items in the bill by the master on the taxation was primâ facie evidence that those items so allowed for had been done by the plaintiff. Whalley v. Glover, 3 Car. & K. 13.

In an action on an attorney's bill, under never indebted, it is competent to the plaintiff to shew that a greater amount is due to him than the master allowed on taxation, pursuant to an order for changing the attorney in the course of the cause in which the costs were incurred. Beck v. Cleaver, 9 D. P. C. 111.

—— Joint Retainer.]—In an action on an attorney's bill, against two, it is not sufficient to prove a joint employment, and a joint promise to pay, after the delivery of the bill; but it must be shewn that the business was done for the joint benefit. Hellings v. Gregory, 10 Moore, 337; 1 Car. & P. 627.

Appropriation of Payments on Account.]—An attorney, who has several demands against his client, some of which are barred by the Statute of Limitations, has no right to appropriate, in payment of the demands so barred, a sum received by him on account of his client, for damages recovered in an action. Waller v. Lacy, 1 Man. & G. 54; 1 Scott (N.R.) 186; 8 D. P. C. 653; 9 L. J., C. P. 217; 4 Jur. 435.

Where directors of a company carry on business unauthorised by the deed of settlement, and moneys have been paid by the company to the solicitors on account of costs generally, the solicitors have no right post litem motam to appropriate such payments to the costs incurred in respect of the unauthorised business, but, on the contrary, the court will appropriate the payments to the costs which the company was liable to pay. Phœnix Life Assurance Co., In re, Howard and Dolman, Ex parte, 1 H. & M. 433; 2 N. R. 548; 8 L. T. 728; 11 W. R. 984.

A solicitor who has made disbursements for his client, and who has received from the client sums paid generally on account, but sufficient to cover those disbursements, is not entitled to appropriate the sums so received to costs for which he has not delivered a bill, in order that he may, under s. 17 of the Solicitors Act, 1870, claim interest on the disbursements. Harrison, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 768; 33 Ch. D. 52; 55 L. T. 72; 34 W. R. 645; 50 J. P. 372.

To Solicitor of Trustees.]—A solicitor dealing with a trustee and having no notice of any breach of trust on his part, is entitled to deal with him on the footing that he is executing the trust and doing nothing which is wrong, and is not bound, before he accepts payment out of the trust estate, to call upon the trustee to produce his accounts, and satisfy himself that he has acted properly. To preclude a solicitor from accepting payment out of the trust estate, there must be brought home to him knowledge that at the time when he accepted it the trustee had been guilty of such a breach of trust as to prevent him altogether from resorting to the trust estate for payment of those costs, and that, in fact, such a payment was a breach of trust. Blundell, In re, Blundell v. Blundell, 57 L. J., Ch. 730; 40 Ch. D. 370; 58 L. T. 933; 36 W. R. 779.

Recovery by Client of Sum Overpaid.]—A plaintiff having paid to an attorney the amount of his bill, cannot, after the reduction of the bill by taxation, recover the difference by action. Gower v. Popkin, 2 Stark. 85; 19 R. R. 683.

IV. SECURITY FOR COSTS.

Past Costs—Amount.]—Bond obtained from infant's grandmother for the amount of bill of fees and disbursements, directed to stand as a security for money justly due on account, and the bill ordered to be taxed. Brown v. Pring, 1 Ves. 407.

Where a solicitor made an absolute conveyance to himself of 1,000*l.* from the plaintiff's wife, whilst she was parted from her husband, the consideration expressed in the deed being for service done, and favours shewn; on bill brought to set aside the deed as obtained by fraud, decreed, on all the circumstances of the case, that the deed should stand only as a security for such sum as was justly due to defendant. Sanderson v. Glass, 2 Atk. 296.

Mortgage by client to attorney, for costs due, and to become due:—Held, valid security for the costs then due only. Williams v. Piggott, Jac. 598. S. P., Jones v. Tripp, Jac. 322.

Attorney cannot take mortgage from client for amount of future bill; but, secus, for disbursement, and money to be advanced. Pitcher v. Rigby, 9 Price, 79.

—— Untaxed.]—Semble, it is no objection to an equitable mortgage given for costs due, that they were not ascertained or delivered. Boville, Ex parte, (2 Mont. & Ayr. 382, n.), observed on. Bristow v. Warner, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 246.

Bonds in penalties payable with interest taken by an attorney from his client, pendente lite, for untaxed costs, shall only stand as securities for such sum of money as shall, upon taxation, appear to be due, without interest thereon. Fowler v. Moore, 2 Jones, 415.

—— Enforcing Security.]—Where a solicitor has taken a mortgage from his client to secure the payment of costs, he is entitled to maintain a bill for foreclosure, though an order for taxation has been obtained against him. Thomas v. Cross, 5 N. R. 148; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1163; 11 L. T. 430: 13 W. R. 166.

A. contracts to sell to B. estates for 17,000*l*., B. agreeing therewith to pay certain specified debts of A., and among the rest his solicitor's bill, before a certain day, or to hand over to A. the purchase-money. B. executes a bond for the payment of the solicitor's bill after the day has elapsed, and a bill is filed by A.'s executrix against B. for the payment of his purchase-money into court, and the money is paid in. The solicitor commences an action against B. upon his bond:—Held, that B. cannot have the amount of the bond paid out of court, but the executrix of A. ordered to lend her name to tax. Williams v. Williams, 1 Jur. 839.

A company employed a solicitor who was not its ordinary solicitor, in a particular matter, and at his request gave him a mortgage of part of its property to secure the payment of his costs. The mortgage was not registered under the Companies Act, 1862, s. 43:—Held, that it was the duty of the solicitor to see that the mortgage was registered, and that as he had not done so, he could not claim the benefit of it in the winding-up of the company. Patent Bread Machinery Co., In re, Valpy, Ex parte, L. R. 7 Ch. 289; 20 W. R. 347.

—— Validity.]—A security which has been given to an attorney by his client for a debt really due, or as a reward for services already rendered, will not be set aside in equity. Cheslyn v. Dalby, 2 Y. & Coll. 170.

A. having paid off a debt secured by mortgage upon real estates, in the equity of redemption, of which his wife was, at the date of their marriage, entitled to a life interest to her separate use; afterwards, without her priority, assigned the mortgage to the solicitor of himself and wife, as security for a debt due to such solicitor for costs principally incurred in a suit in which he acted; first, for the wife before her marriage, and afterwards for both the husband and wife:—Held, that such assignment was a valid security as against the wife's life interest in the hereditaments assigned. Nelson v. Booth, 27 L. J., Ch. 110; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 951; 5 W. R. 722.

The solicitor, having subsequently purchased from the original mortgagee for 40*l*. a debt, for costs, of 175*l*., which the latter would have been entitled to have added to his mortgage debt, was held entitled as against the wife to the benefit of such purchase, but to the extent only of securing himself in respect of the debt due to him from the husband. Ib.

An account settled and a security taken by a solicitor from his client, though to be viewed with jealousy, is not to be treated as a nullity. Jones v. Roberts, 9 Beav. 419.

Principles on which the court acts in sustaining securities given by a client to his solicitor for bills of costs and moneys advanced. Hiles v. Moore, 17 L. J., Ch. 385.

Where the trust deed did not authorise the solicitor to charge costs against his cestui que trust, securities obtained by him from his cestui que trust, for untaxed costs and advances, were set aside, and ordered to stand as securities for the sum really due, notwithstanding letters from the cestui que trust recognising the right of the solicitor to charge such costs; the solicitor not having informed his client that he was entitled to any remuneration for his services in the trust, and the letters having been written under his influence. But the rule being a hard one, and the conduct of a cestui que trust exceptional, the relief was given without costs. Gomley v. Wood, 3 Jo. & Lat. 678; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 418.

Securities taken by an attorney from his client during the time of their connection as such for a present, the balance of accounts settled, for money lent and laid out, costs, and business done, and the price of a horse sold, void as to the present; and the plaintiff submitting to pay what should be actually due, the accounts were opened as to the whole; the horse being sold, soon after he was purchased from the attorney, for a price much less than was then stipulated, inquiry into his value directed. Newman v. Payne, 2 Ves. J. 199; 4 Bro. C. C. 350.

The plaintiff was solicitor for D., and at the time of his death D. was indebted to him for costs. On D.'s death he became solicitor for his executor, the defendant, who, being indebted to the plaintiff for costs of his testator, and further costs as executor, handed over to him the title deeds of certain leasehold premises of the testator, which had been left on special trusts, together with a letter making an equitable mortgage; there were funds applicable to the costs, which were misapplied:—Held, that the executor having committed a breach of trust in mortgaging, the solicitor dealing with him was affected by it, and could not recover without an inquiry as to the state of the assets, and, semble, was in no better condition than the executor himself would be. Purcell v. Ruckley, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 55.

Bill to set aside a security for a sum therein expressed to be due, but which was in fact the estimated amount of past costs in a suit, executed by a client in favour of his then solicitor pending the suit, and without the intervention of another legal adviser, dismissed with costs; there being no evidence of pressure or improper conduct on the part of the solicitor, and no evidence or averment of any specific error in the bill of costs; and it appearing that the defendant had delivered the bill of costs at the time agreed on between him and the plaintiff, and five years and a half before bill filed, and that the plaintiff had had ample opportunity for discovering errors, if any. Blagrave v. Routh, 2 Kay & J. 509. Affirmed 26 L. J., Ch. 86; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 399; 5 W. R. 95.

After a long and unsuccessful litigation to recover an estate, a younger brother of the unsuccessful party, and the next to him in an entail claimed in the estate, entered into an agreement with him to pay what should be due in respect of the solicitor's bills of costs, with interest, on the principal of annual rents, and to commence a new litigation at his own risk in the name of the elder brother, who agreed on these terms to relinquish the estate to the younger brother. Shortly afterwards an agreement was entered into between the solicitor, who was also to conduct the new litigation, and the elder brother, that the solicitor should be paid in respect of the old costs a specified sum, being less than the costs out of pocket, unless the brothers, or one of them, came into possession of the estate, in which event the elder brother agreed that he or the younger brother would pay in respect of the old costs another specified sum, being the full amount of the bills, with interest calculated on the principal of annual rests. The bills had not been taxed, but had been examined, though not minutely, by a friend of the client, who had been a solicitor. The new litigation was conducted by the solicitor with his own capital. It succeeded, and the brothers came into possession of the estate. Seven years after the agreement with the solicitor had been entered into, they sought to set it aside, on the ground of undue influence and insufficient advice :—Held, that the agreement ought to be upheld. Moss v. Bainbrigge, 6 De G. M. & G. 292.

The court will not set aside a charge given by a client to his solicitor, without the intervention of any other legal adviser, to secure payment of costs in a suit expressed to be due to the solicitor who was acting for him in suits then pending, there being no evidence of any pressure upon the client, nor any averment of fraud or error in the charges, while the client has not filed his bill till six years after executing the charge, and five years and a half after he has had the bills of costs in his possession. Hooper v. Cooke, 25 L. J., Ch. 467 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 527.

Decree to set aside a mortgage taken by a solicitor from his client to secure a sum consisting partly of a gross sum agreed to be paid for professional services, and as to the rest of the balance recited to be due, or a settlement of accounts, where it appeared that the client, from his situation as to ill health, was unable to take an active part in managing his own affairs, and where there was no evidence of any improper statement or examination of the accounts. The mortgage was declared to stand as a security only for what should be found justly due on taxation of the bills of costs, and on an account of all dealings and transactions. Morgan v. Higgins, 1 Giff. 270 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 236 ; 7 W. R. 273.

—— Assignment of Subject-Matter of Action.]—After verdict and before judgment a plaintiff in ejectment assigned the subject-matter of the suit to his attorney, as a security for money advanced by him for carrying on the suit and other purposes and for the amount due to him for his professional services :—Held, that the assignment was not void as against public policy, or by reason of champerty and maintenance, being only a security and not an absolute purchase. Anderson v. Radcliffe, El. Bl. & El. 806 ; 29 L. J., Q. B. 128 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 578 ; 1 L. T. 487 ; 8 W. R. 283—Ex. Ch.

Future Costs.]—By 33 & 34 Vict. c. 28. s. 16, an attorney or solicitor may take security from his client for his future fees, charges and disbursements to be ascertained by taxation or otherwise.

Before this statute an attorney could not take a mortgage from client for the amount of a future bill. Pitcher v. Rigby, 9 Price, 79.

Deposit of Deeds—Merger in Mortgage.]—A solicitor took a deposit of a policy of assurance from a client to secure costs, but without a memorandum to that effect. Subsequently a mortgage was executed, assigning the policy as a security for sums already advanced and thereafter to be advanced, but it made no mention of the costs :—Held, that the deposit for costs merged in the subsequent mortgage, and that after the payment of the sums advanced by way of loan the solicitor had no further lien on the proceeds of the policy. Vaughan v. Vanderstegen, Annesley, In re, 2 Eq. R. 1257 ; 2 Drew. 289 ; 2 W. R. 293.

Where a client gave to his solicitor a mortgage to secure costs then incurred, and thereafter to be incurred, with interest thereon from the time of taxation ; and there were subsequent costs to a large amount, and afterwards the solicitor died ; on motion by the client that the personal representative of the late solicitor should be ordered to hand over the title deeds, &c., to the new solicitor, the client offering to confirm the mortgage as to the subsequent costs :—Held, that a security for costs to be incurred is void, as being against public policy, and therefore incapable of confirmation after the subsequent costs have been incurred, although a valid security for such costs may then be given ; and consequently that in this case, the lien was not avoided ; and the papers should not be taken by the client from the personal representative of his late solicitor (who preferred the lien to a new security), until the costs for which no valid security had been taken were paid. Willens v. Tandy, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 1.

A solicitor could not receive a deposit of title-deeds as security for future bills. Laing, Ex parte, Dudderidge, In re, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 381.

A mortgage was executed by N. to R., at that time N.'s attorney, to secure what was then due to R., and also future advances. This deed was made a first charge on N.'s property, and S., who had previously been N.'s attorney, obtained against N. a rule absolute for payment of costs found due on the master's allocatur ; he registered this rule, and thus became a second incumbrancer. R. then became largely N.'s creditor for costs subsequently incurred :—Held, on an order allowing S. to redeem R., that these subsequent costs could not be taken into the account. Shaw v. Neale, 6 H. L. Cas. 581 ; 27 L. J., Ch. 444 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 695 ; 6 W. R. 635.

An attorney or solicitor could not take a bond of his client for unliquidated costs. Newman v. Payne, 4 Bro. P. C. 350.

Nor could he take a security by mortgage for future bills of costs or business to be done. Pitcher v. Rigby, 9 Price, 83. S. P., Jones v. Tripp, Jac. 322.

A mortgage by a client to an attorney for costs due and to become due was a valid security for the costs then due only. Williams v. Piggott, Jac. 598.

It was a well-established rule that a solicitor could not take a mortgage from his client as a security for costs to be incurred. Booth v. Creswicke, 13 L. J., Ch. 217 ; 8 Jur. 323. S. P., Uppington v. Bullen, 2 Dr. & War. 184 ; 1 Con. & L. 291.

Nor apply a security already taken to the payment of costs, which may be subsequently incurred. Foster, In re, Walker, Ex parte, 29 L. J., Ch. 625 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 687 ; 2 L. T. 553 ; 8 W. R. 620—L.JJ.

So, a warrant of attorney given by a client to his attorney to secure future costs was illegal. Jones v. Hunter, 1 D. P. C. 462.

But a warrant of attorney given to secure the payment of future costs, and also of costs and money already due and advanced, though void as to the client's future liability, was valid as to his actual liability. Holdsworth v. Wakeman, 1 D. P. C. 532.

—— Promissory Note.]—An attorney who has received a promissory note on account of costs may bring an action on the note, although the note includes future costs. Jeffreys v. Evans, 3 D. & L. 52; 14 M. & W. 210; 14 L. J., Ex. 363.

V. INDEMNITY FOR COSTS.

When Solicitor acting without Authority.]—If a solicitor gives a relator an indemnity for costs, or uses his name without authority (although afterwards assented to), the court will order the information to be taken off the file with costs, to be paid by the relator and attorney. Att.-Gen v. Skinners' Co., C. P. Cooper, 7. See also, ante, col. 1451.

Enforcement by Bankrupt.]—The solicitor for the petitioning creditor, on the commission being superseded, writes to the bankrupt, "I am ready, and hereby offer, to allow and pay the costs" incurred by the bankrupt in petitioning for the supersedeas:—Held, that the solicitor was personally liable on this undertaking, and that the bankrupt might petition for an order on the solicitor to pay these costs, notwithstanding a subsequent commission had issued against him, under which he had not obtained his certificate, his assignees disclaiming all interest in the matter. Bentley, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 578; 2 L. J., Bk. 39. See Johnson v. Ogilby, 3 P. Wms. 277.

Payment of.]—R. and C., at H. and T.'s request, paid to H. and T.'s country solicitors 350*l.* in part discharge of costs incurred by H. and T. in certain administration suits. Thereupon the country solicitors by indenture assigned to R. and C. certain documents on which they had a lien, and covenanted that they would hold any charging order they might obtain from the Court of Chancery for payment of their costs, in trust to indemnify R. and C. By a subsequent order of the court the costs were to be taxed and paid out of funds in court to the town agents of the country solicitors:—Held, that the costs must be paid to R. and C. in satisfaction of their claims under the indenture. Cockayne v. Harrison, 42 L. J., Ch. 660; L. R. 15 Eq. 298; 21 W. R. 520.

Validity of.]—Before the 33 & 34 Vict. c. 28, s. 16, it was improper for a solicitor to give his client a guarantee against the costs of a suit, either previously to its institution or during its continuance. Fielden v. Northern Ry. of Buenos Ayres, 22 L. T. 511; 18 W. R. 729.

But circumstances might be such as to allow of his doing so in the latter case without rendering himself personally liable to the other side. Ib.

Liability to pay Costs of other Side.]—A solicitor, who, in order to induce a plaintiff to go on with a suit, agrees to indemnify him against the costs; thereby makes the suit his own, and becomes liable to pay the costs of the defendant; and this, notwithstanding that by the abatement of the suit by the death of the plaintiff before the hearing and the non-revivor by his executor, the remedy against the plaintiff's estate may be gone. Fielden v. Northern Ry. of Buenos Ayres, Jones, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 113; L. R. 6 Ch. 497; 23 L. T. 655; 19 W. R. 361.

Proceedings without Authority.]—A bill filed without the plaintiff's authority was dismissed, and the plaintiff was taken under an attachment for nonpayment of the costs. The court, on motion, ordered the solicitor to indemnify the plaintiff. Hood v. Phillips, 6 Beav. 176.

VI. INTEREST ON COSTS, &c.

Costs payable out of Fund.]—Where in an administration action, costs have been directed to be taxed, and when taxed to be paid by the trustees out of testator's estate, with a direction for division of the balance of the fund after such payment amongst the persons beneficially entitled, interest is not, in the absence of special directions, payable on the costs. Marsden's Estate, In re, Withington v. Neumann, 58 L. J., Ch. 260; 40 Ch. D. 475; 60 L. T. 696; 37 W. R. 525.

The court will give interest on costs payable out of a fund which cannot be immediately realised. Campbell's Trusts, In re, 19 W. R. 427.

Security for.]—A security taken for untaxed costs gives a solicitor no right to interest on them. Shannon v. Casey, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 307.

Who can Claim.]—The 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, only applies to solicitors, and a party to a suit cannot claim under it interest on his costs. Jenner v. Morris, 11 W. R. 943.

From what Date.]—Interest on a bill of costs while under taxation not allowed. Smith, In re, 9 Beav. 342.

Where the payment of taxed costs was unavoidably delayed:—Held, that under s. 27 of the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, interest was payable on such costs from the date of the taxing-master's certificate, to the day of the payment thereof. Fox v. Charlton, 6 N. R. 352.

Where security is given for the payment of untaxed costs, interest is to be computed only from the date of the certificate of taxation. Bloomfield, In re, 3 L. R., Ir. 82.

When an order has been made for payment of costs after taxation, a court of equity will order the payment of interest on the amount found due by the master's certificate, under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 27, from the date thereof to the date of the application where the payment has been unadvoidably delayed. Carter v. Carter, 2 N. R. 512; 8 L. T. 692.

Rate of.]—By orders of the court of chancery, made in 1862 and 1863, costs to which a petitioner was entitled were directed to be added to the moneys secured to him by a deed, and it was ordered that they should stand as a charge upon the property comprised in the deed. The deed referred to was a grant, in consideration of 400*l.*, of an annuity of 40*l.* a year for lives to the petitioner, secured by the covenant of the grantor, and by a charge of the annuity upon specified real and personal estate. The order mentioned nothing about interest:—Held, independently of the Attorneys Act, 1860, that inasmuch as the costs were an equitable charge, they bore interest at 4*l.* per cent. Lippard v. Ricketts, 41 L. J., Ch. 595; L. R. 14 Eq. 291; 20 W. R. 898.

An agreement, pending a litigation, that a solicitor shall be entitled to compound interest on his demand, cannot be supported. In 1851 A. and B. agreed to charge their real estates, with the amount of costs due to their solicitor, with annual rests. The solicitor instituted a suit to enforce the lien, and the client presented a petition for taxation. The court made the usual order for taxation, with a direction to the master to ascertain the amount due in 1851, but held itself incompetent, on this occasion, to deal with the question of lien. Moss, In re, 17 Beav. 346.

Agreements for between Solicitor and Client.] —See ante, col. 1536.

On Disbursements.] — The Attorneys and Solicitors Act, 1870, is not retrospective, and, therefore, interest cannot be allowed under s. 17 on disbursements made prior to the passing of the act. Ward v. Eyre, 49 L. J., Ch. 657; 15 Ch. D. 130; 43 L. T. 525; 28 W. R. 712—C. A.

A solicitor took up his client's bills of exchange:—Held, that these payments could only be treated in the same light as any other ordinary cash advances made by the solicitor for the benefit of his client, and that the solicitor was not entitled to charge interest thereon. May v. Biggenden, 24 Beav. 207.

The provisions of the 33 & 34 Vict. c. 28, s. 17, as to the allowance upon taxation of interest on moneys disbursed or advanced by a solicitor for his client do not entitle a client whose costs, charges and expenses are ordered to be paid out of a fund in court belonging to other parties, to include in such costs, charges and expenses the interest on moneys disbursed for him by his solicitor. Hartland v. Murrell, 43 L. J., Ch. 94; L. R. 16 Eq. 285; 28 L. T. 725; 21 W. R. 781.

—— Demand from Client.]—By General Ord. VII. under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, s. 5, the interest which a solicitor is entitled to recover under the order on the amount due on business transacted by him is not to commence till the amount due is ascertained, either by agreement or taxation; and it is provided that a solicitor may charge interest at 4 per cent. per annum on his disbursements and costs, whether by scale or otherwise, from the expiration of one month from demand from the client. A solicitor delivered his bill to a client without claiming interest. The bill was taxed, and the client paid the amount allowed on taxation. On such amount being paid the solicitor claimed interest thereon at 4 per cent. from one month from the date of the delivery of the bill:—Held, that the solicitor was entitled to such interest. Blair v. Cordner, 56 L. J., Q. B. 642; 19 Q. B. D. 516; 36 W. R. 109.

In an action on an attorney's bill, the plaintiff gave notice, that he should claim interest from the date of the notice. After the writ was issued, the bill was referred for taxation at the instance of the defendant, no terms being made as to the allowance of interest:—Held, that the plaintiff could not afterwards have an assessment of damages for the purpose of recovering the interest. Berrington v. Phillips, 1 M. & W. 48; 1 Tyr. & G. 322; 4 D. P. C. 758; 5 L. J., Ex. 127.

—— "Demand"—"Person liable."] — The executor of a deceased testator is, within the meaning of r. 7 of the general order under the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, the "person liable" to pay a bill of costs due from the testator to his solicitor. Where, therefore, in the administration by the court of a testator's estate, the solicitor, by direction of the chief clerk, delivered his bill of costs to the creditor having the conduct of the action, and not to the executrix:—Held, that as there had been no "demand" for payment on the "person liable," the solicitor was not entitled to interest. McMurdo, In re, Penfield v. McMurdo, 66 L. J., Ch. 67; [1897] 1 Ch. 119; 75 L. T. 576; 45 W. R. 244.

On Balance in Solicitor's hands.] — A client mortgaged his interest in an administration suit to Messrs. S., to secure a sum of 150*l.*, which they were to pay for him, but though they omitted to make the payment, and retained that with other money in their hands, the court treated it as an ordinary sum of money in hand, and declined to direct the taxing-master to allow the plaintiff interest upon those sums, though the mortgage which was to include them was bearing interest. Foley v. Smith, 20 L. J., Ch. 621.

Where a solicitor, engaged in various suits, obtained payment out of court of a sum of money standing in trust in the cause, and retained it towards his costs, and upon a subsequent taxation of his bill it appeared that at the time he obtained payment of the money he had in fact been already overpaid:—The court refused, upon a motion for that purpose, to charge him with interest, the parties having made considerable delay before they taxed the costs, and there being no fraud or laches imputable to the solicitor. Wright v. Southwood, 1 Y. & J. 527.

Under the common order, the master is not authorised to allow interest on the balance of the moneys of the client from time to time in the hands of the solicitor, though such appears to have been the agreement between the parties. Jones v. James, 1 Beav. 307; 3 Jur. 310.

On taxation a solicitor cannot be charged with interest on balances in hand; but, a solicitor having debited himself with interest in his cash account rendered:—Held, that the master ought to have charged him. Savery, In re, 15 Beav. 58.

VII. ASSIGNMENT OF COSTS.

Effect on Lien.] — A solicitor's lien is a dormant security, in which it differs from a mortgage; but a solicitor may assign a debt due to him for costs, with the benefit of any lien he may have upon any document for such costs. The claim is equally valid whether the deeds are in the actual possession of the solicitor or of his assignee; and such lien may pass to the solicitor's assignee, if the deeds were handed over in the solicitor's presence, and at his request, to his assignee, without his actually touching them. Bull v. Faulkner, 2 De G. & Sm. 772; 13 Jur. 93.

"Order and Disposition."]—A solicitor assigns his claim for costs to W., and becomes bankrupt, and W. gives notice to the London agents of the solicitor of their claim, and the assignees in bankruptcy petition for payment to them, subject to the London agents' claim:—Held, that the notice to the London agents, as far as costs became payable to them, took those costs out of the order and disposition of the bankrupt, the costs being ordered out of the fund in court. Petition refused. Sharples v. Marsh, 2 W. R. 400.

In June, 1854, T., a solicitor, assigned to A., for value, the costs payable to him in an administration suit in which he acted as solicitor for the plaintiff; and gave notice of such assignment to all proper parties. By the order on further directions made in the suit in August, 1854, a fund was directed to be paid into court, out of which the plaintiff's costs were thereby also directed to be paid to T. In October, 1854, T. became bankrupt, but the fund was not paid into court until January, 1855:—Held, that the fund was not in the order and disposition of T. at the time of his bankruptcy, with the consent of the true owner, and that A. was entitled thereto. Day v. Day, 1 De G. & J. 144; 26 L. J., Ch. 585; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 782; 5 W. R. 701.

Until the court has made an order for the payment of costs out of a fund in court, the solicitor has no lien on such fund for such costs: therefore, when the solicitor to a party in a suit assigned the costs due and to become due to him in the suit, and subsequently became insolvent, and an order was afterwards made for the payment of the costs out of a fund in court, and the official assignee in insolvency of the solicitor claimed the costs as against the person to whom they had been assigned, as being under the order and disposition clause, on the ground that (though notice had been given to the solicitors for the plaintiff in the suit) no stop order had been obtained on the fund in court:—Held, that it was not necessary to get a stop order on the fund in court, and therefore, that the person taking under the assignment was entitled to the costs. Lord v. Colvin, 2 Dr. & Sm. 82; 6 L. T. 211; 10 W. R. 420.

After Taxation and Payment.]—Where after an order of taxation and payment the solicitor has assigned his bill to a purchaser and absconded, the court was inclined to think that the purchaser could not stand in place of the solicitor until he had procured him to be examined under the order. Wilson v. Williams, Barnard. 263.

Taxation after Assignment.] — After the delivery by a solicitor of his bill, he executed a deed, assigning all his property for the benefit of his creditors, which became binding on all the creditors. The clients afterwards claimed the common order for taxation against the solicitor himself, notwithstanding the deed. He thereupon gave them notice of the deed, but went in before the taxing-master and opposed the taxation. There was a balance due from him. The court allowed the clients to complete the taxation, on their undertaking not to proceed personally against the solicitor. Bartrum, In re, 10 L. T. 313; 12 W. R. 699.

Whether an assignee of costs due to a solicitor is such an "assignee" of the solicitor as is, under s. 37 of the Solicitors Act, 1843, entitled to obtain a taxation of the costs, quære. Ward, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 508; 28 Ch. D. 719; 33 W. R. 783.

Charging Order.] — An assignee of costs due to a solicitor can apply for a charging order under the Solicitors Act, 1860, s. 28. Briscoe v. Briscoe, 61 L. J., Ch. 665; [1892] 3 Ch. 543; 67 L. T. 116; 40 W. R. 621.

Right of Assignee to sign and sue.] — A solicitor assigned his bill of costs and the right to recover on it, and the assignee gave notice of the assignment, and delivered the bill to the party to be charged, inclosed in a letter signed by himself. After the expiration of a month he brought an action in his own name on the bill of costs:—Held, that the plaintiff was an assignee within s. 37 of the Solicitors Act, 1843, and was entitled to maintain the action. Ingle v. M'Cutchan, 53 L. J., Q. B. 311; 12 Q. B. D. 518.

L. CHANGE OF SOLICITORS.

[Order VII. r. 3.]

Necessity of obtaining Order for.]—It was an irregularity for a defendant to take a declaration out of the office by one attorney, and plead by another, without an order for changing the attorney. If no such order had been obtained and served, the court would set aside the plea. King v. Archer, 1 B. C. Rep. 219.

Where a defendant appeared and pleaded to an action by one attorney, he could not make any application to the court by another in the same cause, unless he obtained an order for changing his attorney. Ginders v. Moore, 1 B. & C. 654.

A party called upon to shew cause might oppose the rule in person, or by a new attorney, without notice to the other party of the order to change his attorney. Lovegrove v. Dymond, 4 Taunt. 669.

A plaintiff might sue out execution by a different attorney, without an order to change. Tipping v. Johnson, 2 Bos. & P. 357.

So a defendant could bring error without such an order. Batchelor v. Ellis, 7 Term Rep. 337.

Drawing up Order.] — When an order has been made for the change of the attorney in a suit, the order must be drawn up and filed in the registry before any step can be taken by the new attorney. Grice v. Grice and Penfold, 32 L. J., Mat. 134.

Made without Order—Effect of.]—A suit was instituted against a vessel, and an appearance entered by a firm of solicitors on behalf of the owner. A sum of money was paid into court in lieu of bail, and the solicitors thereupon procured the release of the vessel, and incurred costs in defending the suit on behalf of the owner. Whilst the suit was pending, and before any sum had been paid to the firm of solicitors on account of such costs, another firm of solicitors entered a second appearance in the same suit on behalf of the same defendant. On an application on behalf of the firm of solicitors by whom the first appearance had been entered, the court made an order setting aside the second appearance, and condemned the defendant in the costs of the motion. The Oneiza, L. R. 4 Adm. 36; 27 L. T. 632; 21 W. R. 232.

An inoperative plea having been pleaded without authority, for a new attorney for a defendant, without an order to change the attorney, the judgment which had been signed as for want of a plea was set aside. Perry v. Fisher, 6 East, 549.

Payment made to the plaintiff's late solicitor, who has been changed without the leave of the court, is good. Powell v. Little, 1 W. Bl. 8.

It is no ground for treating a rule nisi for a new trial as a nullity, that it has been obtained by a different attorney from the one on the record, without an order to change the attorney. Doe d. Bloomer v. Bransom, 6 D. P. C. 490; 2 Jur. 700; 1 W. W. & H. 314. See Lett v. Watkins, 27 L. J., Ex. 319.

Failure to file Notice — Party and Party Costs.]—A party to an action changed his solicitor before the trial, but by a slip no notice of such change was filed under Ord. VII. r. 3:—Held, that this did not prevent such party from recovering from the other side the costs incurred after such change. Norris v. Bailey, 62 L. J., Q. B. 338; 5 R. 313.

After Cause set down—Duty of Solicitor.]—Where a change of solicitors has taken place, after a cause has been set down for trial, it is the duty of the new solicitor to inform the associate of the change, in order that the name of the solicitor responsible for the conduct of the cause may appear on the record. Hunt v. Fineburg, 58 L. J., Q. B. 167; 22 Q. B. D. 259; 60 L. T. 855; 37 W. R. 314—C. A.

Waiver of Irregularity.]—Taking a plea out of the office, and keeping it, waived the irregularity of its having been pleaded by a new attorney without an order. Margerem v. Makilwaine, 2 B. & P. (N.R.) 509.

If the attorney on the record is changed, without an order for that purpose, and the opposite party treats the new attorney as the attorney in the cause, he could not afterwards object that no order was obtained. Farley v. Hebbs, 3 D. P. C. 538; 1 H. & W. 203.

Application for Order.]—Upon an application to change the attorney, where the client is unacquainted with the English language, the affidavits must clearly shew that the purport and object of the motion are known to and sanctioned by the client. Davies v. Lowndes, 3 C. B. 808.

It is no objection to such an application that it is made after final judgment. Ib.

When a plaintiff in a creditor's suit sells his debt after decree, the purchaser has no right to an order of course to change solicitors. Topping v. Searson, 2 Hem. & M. 205.

The proper course, in such a case, is for the purchaser to bring all the facts before the court on a motion to obtain the conduct of the cause. Ib.

Semble, that the court would not entertain such a motion where the debt was insignificant, if it was opposed by the principal creditors. Ib.

An order of course had been obtained at the Rolls to change the solicitor of two of the defendants. The solicitor was a mortgagee of certain sums of money to which these defendants were entitled in the cause, and by the mortgage deed there were special powers given to him to conduct the suit on their behalf. On motion, the order of the Rolls discharged, with costs, as it ought to have been made the subject of a special application. Jenkins v. Bryant, 3 Drew. 70; 3 Eq. R. 61; 18 Jur. 992; 3 W. R. 30.

A country solicitor agreed to employ a town agent for fifteen years. Before the expiration of the term, he obtained an order of course, in a suit, to change the agent, suppressing the existence of the special contract. The order was discharged for irregularity, with costs. Richards v. Scarborough Market Co., 17 Beav. 83; 22 L. J., Ch. 759; 17 Jur. 294; 1 W. R. 250.

—— By Husband to change Wife's Solicitor.]—Where a wife was beneficially interested in an annuity, and became a defendant in replevin to try her right, and her husband joined with her to sign the distress warrant on which the proceedings arose, the court would not entertain a rule moved for on behalf of the husband, to change the attorney selected by the wife, and who had conducted the suit through several stages; especially as it appeared that the husband was colluding with the plaintiff to prevent his wife from trying her right to the rent-charge as against the plaintiff. Wynne v. Wynne, 2 Scott (N.R.) 615; 9 D. P. C. 396; 5 Jur. 220.

—— On what Condition made.]—The rule as well at law as in equity, since the Judicature Acts, 1873 and 1875, is, that an order for changing a solicitor shall be made without any provision as to the payment of his costs. Grant v. Holland, 47 L. J., C. P. 518; 3 C. P. D. 180; 26 W. R. 742.

It was the invariable practice of the court not to allow the attorney on the record to be changed unless the costs of the first attorney had been paid, and the fact that such attorney had other sufficient security for his costs was no reason for departing from that rule. Witt v. Ames, 8 L. T. 425; 11 W. R. 751.

Where plaintiff changes his solicitor, the former solicitor has no right to stop him from proceeding till his costs are paid. O'Dea v. O'Dea, 1 Sch. & Lef. 315.

—— By some Petitioners.]—Three petitioners retained the same solicitor in an application to wind up a company. The order was made, and subsequently two of the petitioners served, and obtained an order of course at the Rolls to change their solicitor:—Held, that the two had no right to act separately, and the order to change solicitors must be discharged. Norwich and Norfolk Provident Permanent Building Society, In re, 22 W. R. 854. S. P., Brown v. Brown, 11 Beav. 562.

—— Service of.]—The order for changing an attorney must have been served on the opposite party. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 2 D. P. C. 147.

Discharge and Delivery up of Papers.]—An assigned solicitor of a pauper, in consequence of delay in the prosecution of proceedings in the suit, was ordered to be discharged and to deliver up to the new solicitors all the papers, subject to his lien for what might be found due to him for costs upon taxation. Hannaford v. Hannaford, 24 L. T. 86; 19 W. R. 429.

Where an order for changing an attorney on payment of costs is made, and the attorney gives up the client's papers without the costs being paid, the court will not grant an attachment for their nonpayment. Handy v. Collett, 7 D. P. C. 599; 2 W. W. & H. 63; 3 Jur. 870.

Where there is an order for changing upon payment of the first attorney's bill upon taxation, and delivery up of papers, the first attorney is entitled to the possession of it to enforce payment of his bill. Alger v. Hefford, 1 Taunt. 38.

Where a solicitor discharges himself from a suit he must deliver to the new solicitor all papers, on an undertaking to return them at the end of the suit. Huntley v. Anglo-Californian Gold Mining Co., 1 F. & F. 211.

An action was brought for the administration of the estate of H. by his infant grandchildren. The action was brought with the approval of the infants' father, and the next friend was nominated and approved by him. The father having died pending the action, the mother of the infants, who was also their testamentary guardian, applied to be appointed next friend, in the place of the existing next friend, and an order was made appointing her. She changed the plaintiff's solicitors, and the new solicitors applied to the old solicitors for delivery of the papers in the action. The original solicitors refused to deliver them till their costs were paid:—Held, upon a summons, that the old solicitors must deliver them over to the new solicitors without prejudice to their lien for costs. The action being a very heavy one, and the taxation of costs not likely to come on for some years, the costs of the original solicitors were, under the special circumstances, ordered to be taxed at once. Hutchinson, In re, Hutchinson v. Norwood, 54 L. T. 842; 34 W. R. 637.

Affidavit — Costs not paid.]—A bankrupt having employed A., a solicitor, to procure signatures of creditors to his certificate, and then ceased to employ him, cannot oblige his, A.'s, clerk to make affidavit of witnessing the signatures without first paying A. his costs for such business. Shore, Ex parte, Lucas, In re, 1 Deac. & C. 509; Mont. & B. 268; 1 L. J., Bk. 115.

Taxation — Attempted ineffectual Sale.]—Schedule I. Part I., r. 2, of the general order to the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, applies only to cases where the attempted ineffectual sale and the subsequent effectual sale therein mentioned are conducted by the same solicitors. If there is a change of solicitors after an attempted ineffectual sale, the taxation of the costs of such sale must be made under general order, r. 2 (c). Dean, In re, Ward v. Holmes, 55 L. J., Ch. 420; 32 Ch. D. 209; 54 L. T. 266.

Rights of First Solicitor as to Costs.]—Upon a change of attorneys under a rule of court, the new attorney undertook to hold the record and papers in the cause, subject to the lien of the former attorney:—Held, that, the cause having been brought to a successful termination, the former attorney was entitled to call upon his successor to proceed with the taxation, issue execution, and pay him the amount of his lien, out of the first proceeds, subject only to the costs necessarily incurred on such taxation. Newton v. Harland, 4 Scott (N.R.) 769.

By an order of the court, the costs to be incurred by a married woman suing by her next friend in a future proceeding were ordered to be paid to A. B., her solicitor. Pending the proceedings, A. B. was discharged, and C. D. appointed solicitor. A. B. received the whole costs:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction, on petition, to order A. B. to pay over to C. D. his share of such costs. Bailey and Hope, Ex parte, Barnard, In re, 14 Beav. 18.

At the hearing, a plaintiff obtained an order for taxation of his costs of suit, and payment out of the fund in court. The plaintiff had, in the progress of the suit, employed three different sets of solicitors successively. The plaintiff and his solicitors, at the date of the decree, agreed to accept a gross sum in full of all costs, instead of proceeding to taxation, and received the sum accordingly, for which they gave a receipt to that effect. They applied the money to their own use, and never paid the former solicitors the costs incurred during the early period of the suit. The decree did not direct any distributive payment among the various solicitors of the plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff and his solicitors, at the date of the decree, had a right to waive taxation, and to accept of a gross sum, in satisfaction of all costs, without consulting the former solicitors. Mornington v. Wellesley, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 6.

It appearing that the gross sum was taken in satisfaction of all costs:—Held, that the lien of the former solicitors upon the fund in court was gone. Ib.

Semble, that the remedy of the former solicitors was by action against the solicitors who received the money, as for money had and received to their use. Ib.

Where a plaintiff changes his solicitor, and obtains judgment without having paid the first solicitor's costs, the taxing-master will be ordered to certify separately the costs incurred before the change, and the plaintiff will be restrained from proceeding to enforce payment of the costs until further order. Pritchard v. Shuttleworth, Ir. R. 4 C. L. 233; 18 W. R. 1200.

Where a defendant had changed his solicitor after an adverse decision, and the court of appeal had reversed the decision and given the defendant the costs of the proceedings in the court below, the substituted solicitor, who had obtained payment of the costs, was ordered to lodge them in court to meet the claims of the former solicitor. Eastwood v. Eastwood, 16 W. R. 942.

—— Lien.]—An order was made for the change of solicitors in a wife's suit for dissolution of marriage. At the date of the order the former solicitor had in his hands a sum of money, being the balance of an amount received by him on account of alimony due to the petitioner:—Held, that the solicitor had no lien for his costs upon the balance of alimony in his hands. Leete v. Leete, 48 L. J., P. 61; 40 L. T. 788; 37 W. R. 921. See also ante, cols. 1697 et seq.

—— Priority.]—Where a solicitor, by arrangement with his client, retired from the conduct of a suit in equity, and another solicitor conducted it thenceforth to its conclusion :—Held, on there being a deficiency in the fund applicable to the payment of costs, that the latter solicitor had priority. Cormack v. Beisley, 3 De G. & J. 157.

A solicitor, through whose instrumentality property has been recovered or preserved in an action, is entitled, under s. 28 of the Solicitors Act, 1860, to a declaration of charge upon such property, although his client may have discharged him before the trial of the action. In such a case his charge will be subject to the lien for costs of the client's solicitor for the time being. Wadsworth, In re, Rhodes v. Sugden, 54 L. J., Ch. 638 ; 29 Ch. D. 517 ; 52 L. T. 613 ; 33 W. R. 558. See also cases, col. 1669 et seq.

Appointment of Solicitor after Proceeding in Person.]—If a party has been proceeding in person, and afterwards appoints an attorney, he may give the other side notice of the fact by the very step which the attorney takes in the cause as attorney, without any formal notice. Jones v. King, 2 B. C. Rep. 192 ; 5 D. & L. 412.

Death of Solicitor.]—Upon the decease of the solicitor employed by a party to a suit, proceedings taken by a new solicitor employed by him are regular, although the change of solicitor is not authorised by any special order of the court. Whalley v. Whalley, 22 L. J., Ch. 632 ; 17 Jur. 254.

Upon the death of the attorney in the cause, notice must be given to the opposite party of the appointment of the new attorney, before he can proceed in the cause. Ryland v. Noakes, 1 Taunt. 342.

A notice of trial was, on the 10th August, 1849, given to the defendant's attorney for the first sittings in Michaelmas term. On the 9th October the defendant's attorney died. In pursuance of such notice the cause was duly entered, and tried on the 3rd November, when a verdict was found for the plaintiff. On the 8th November notice of taxation of costs was given on behalf of the plaintiff, by leaving the same at the deceased attorney's office, the plaintiff being unaware of his death. On the 9th November the plaintiff signed judgment for the debt and costs ; and in March, 1850, the defendant being in custody, a detainer was lodged against him. A rule having been obtained to set aside all the proceedings subsequent to the 9th October, the defendant swearing that he had no notice of any proceedings subsequent to the plea until the detainer was lodged, but omitting to state the time he first received intimation of the attorney's death, the court discharged the rule. Ashley v. Brown, 1 L., M. & P. 451 ; 19 L. J., Q. B. 477 ; 15 Jur. 399. See Lord v. Wardle, 3 C. B. 295 ; 15 L. J., C. P. 259.

A defendant's solicitor having died, the plaintiff (being unable to find the defendant) could not proceed in the accounts directed by a decree. The court ordered substituted service of a subpœna to name a new solicitor ; and the defendant having failed to appoint one, the court directed the accounts to be taken in his absence. Dean v. Lethbridge, 26 Beav. 397.

Partnership Dissolved.]—One of two solicitors in partnership obtains an order in the name of a client ; the partnership is dissolved, and the client and the other partner come as co-petitioners to discharge the order, and for other relief :—Held, that it was a misjoinder for such other partner to unite in it. Sangar v. Gardiner, C. P. Cooper, 119.

Solicitor leaving Country.] — Defendants, whose solicitor has left the country, and who have neglected to appoint another, may be served personally with process. Mathews v. Foote, 19 L. T. 306.

M. COUNTRY SOLICITOR AND LONDON AGENT.

Employment of Agent.]—A country solicitor who is authorised to institute a suit, is justified in employing a London agent for that purpose, in whose name as agent, the bill may be filed. Solley v. Wood, 16 Beav. 370.

Co-plaintiffs may employ separate solicitors acting by a common agent. Waldon v. Thompson, 37 L. J., Ch. 751 ; L. R. 6 Eq. 7.

Articles—Construction—"Client."]—A country solicitor is the "client" of his London agent within the meaning of a covenant not to transact business with any person who has been a client of the London agent. Reid v. Burrows, 61 L. J., Ch. 448 ; [1892] 2 Ch. 413 ; 67 L. T. 183 ; 40 W. R. 620.

Authority of Agent.]—The acts of an attorney's agent in town, in matters relative to the suit, are binding upon the parties. Griffiths v. Williams, 1 Term Rep. 710.

An attorney, as such, is bound by the acts done on his behalf of his London agent. Withers v. Parker, 5 H. & N. 725 ; 29 L. J., Ex. 320 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1033 ; 2 L. T. 602 ; 8 W. R. 550—Ex. Ch.

A retainer to a country solicitor does not justify an action in which his London agents are the solicitors on the record. A., an illiterate woman, being desirous of knowing whether there was any balance coming to her, as administratrix of C., her deceased husband, out of the proceeds of a sale by the mortgagee of property mortgaged by C., gave to B., a country solicitor (who had recovered judgment in an action against her, as administratrix, for a debt due to him from her deceased husband) this written retainer : "I hereby authorise you to act as my solicitor in the administration of my late husband's estate, and authorise you to investigate the accounts of the mortgagee, and take such steps as you may think proper in the matter on my behalf." A writ was subsequently issued by a London firm of solicitors in the names of A. and B., as plaintiffs, claiming an account of the proceeds of sale of the mortgaged property and payment of the balance, the claim by A. being "as legal personal representative of C.," by B. "as a creditor of C. who had obtained judgment against A., and had obtained execution by the appointment of a receiver of the balance due from C." Upon motion by A. that her name might be struck out of the writ as having been issued without her knowledge and without any authority on her part :—Held, that the retainer was not sufficient to justify the issue of the writ ; but whether sufficient or not, it was a retainer to B., and did not authorise the London firm to issue the writ in the name of A. as her solicitors. Wray v. Kemp, 53 L. J., Ch. 1020 ; 26 Ch. D. 169 ; 50 L. T. 552 ; 32 W. R. 334.

A receiver was appointed by the court upon the representation of the plaintiff's solicitor that the receiver had entered into the usual recognizances, which he had not, in fact, done. A loss occurred, in consequence of the receiver's liability being only in the nature of a simple contract debt. The solicitor was, at the instance of a defendant, made personally liable for the loss occasioned by his neglect. Simmons v. Rose, Ward, In re, 31 Beav. 1.

Held, also, that the country solicitor was liable, though the representations were made by his London agents. Ib.

Payment by a defendant to the London agent of the plaintiff's attorney is a payment to the plaintiff. Hanley v. Cussan, 11 Jur. 1088.

Petition — Signature by Agent.] — London solicitors acting for country solicitors duly authorised, obtained an order for taxation of costs. The names of the London solicitors were indorsed on the petition for taxation as principals. The order for taxation was discharged on the motion of the client, without costs. Scholes, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 626 ; 32 Ch. D. 245 ; 54 L. T. 466 ; 34 W. R. 515.

Notice of Appeal—Service on London Agent or Country Solicitor.]—In an action commenced in the high court the address for service mentioned on the writ was the address of certain London solicitors, agents for the plaintiff's solicitor. The action was remitted to a county court, and on the particulars which were duly lodged with the registrar and a copy of which was served upon the defendant's solicitors, the address for service was stated to be that of the plaintiff's country solicitor. After the action had been heard and judgment had been delivered in the plaintiff's favour, a notice of appeal on the part of the defendant was, on the last day for service of appeal, served upon the London agents, whose names appeared upon the writ :—Held, that the service was bad, on the ground that the address for service indorsed on the particulars was substituted for the address for service indorsed upon the writ. Malley v. Shepley, 62 L. J., Q. B. 31 ; 5 R. 78 ; 68 L. T. 294 ; 4 W. R. 63, 302.

In appeals from county courts where the solicitor for the respondent carries on business in the country, the notice of appeal should be served within the proper time upon the respondent's solicitor, and not on the solicitor's London agent. Powell v. Thomas ([1891] 1 Q. B. 97) followed. Jackson v. Margrett, 5 R. 181 ; 68 L. T. 91 ; 41 W. R. 267.

Semble, that in the case of an appeal from a county court where the solicitor to the respondent carries on business in the country, service of the notice of motion upon the London agent of the solicitor is not sufficient service to satisfy Ord. LIX. r. 12. Powell v. Thomas, [1891] 1 Q. B. 97 ; 63 L. T. 812 ; 39 W. R. 224.

Agent gives Credit to Solicitor, not to Client.] —A London agent of a country solicitor, acting in the ordinary course of business, is always taken to give credit to the country solicitor, not to the country solicitor's client. Waller v. Holmes, 1 Johns. & H. 239 ; 30 L. J., Ch. 24 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1367 ; 3 L. T. 289 ; 9 W. R. 32.

An attorney employing an agent to do business for his client, is primarily liable to such agent for his bill, though the latter knows the business is to be done for the client ; but to whom the credit is given is a question for the jury. Scrace v. Whittington, 3 D. & R. 195 ; 2 B. & C. 11 ; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 221.

A country client employs an attorney or solicitor in the country in a cause in chancery ; the solicitor employs a clerk in chancery ; the client in the country pays his solicitor, but the clerk in chancery is unpaid. The client is not bound to pay the clerk in chancery ; but if the latter has any papers in his hands, he may retain them. Farewell v. Coker, 2 P. Wms. 460.

Death of Country Solicitor—Effect of.]—The death of the principal attorney, pending a suit, does not revoke his agent's authority to obtain possession of a postea, after a verdict for the client of the former. Taunton v. Goforth, 6 D. & R. 384 ; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 229.

A country attorney, being retained to conduct an action (on behalf of an infant), in which he obtained a verdict, employed, in the latter stages of it, a London attorney as his agent, and died before judgment was signed. The London attorney wrote to the client in the country, stating that he had acted as the agent, and proposing to continue so to do ; and, receiving no answer, taxed costs, and signed final judgment, without the knowledge of the client ; meanwhile the client, without any notice, either to him or to the defendant, had employed another attorney. The court refused a rule to set aside the taxation ; the plaintiff's remedy, if any, being against the attorney. Davis v. Bowen, 7 L. T. 739 ; 11 W. R. 282.

Change of Agent.]—A solicitor in the country employed an agent in London to conduct a suit under a special contract. He afterwards obtained an order of course to remove the agent without mentioning the special contract. The order was discharged for irregularity on the motion of the agent. Richards v. Scarborough Market Co., 17 Beav. 83 ; 22 L. J., Ch. 759 ; 17 Jur. 294 ; 1 W. R. 250.

Wrong Procedure—Liability.]—If a bill is ordered to be taken off the file, on the ground that the plaintiffs assume to sue in a corporate character, to which they are not entitled, the costs will be ordered to be paid by the town agent of the plaintiffs, and not by their solicitor in the country. Ruthin Corporation v. Adams, 7 Sim. 345 ; 4 L. J., Ch. 167.

Where an affidavit is reported to be scandalous, the agent in London who filed the affidavit is responsible for the costs as between attorney and client, notwithstanding the country attorney may have himself drawn the affidavit. Wake, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 246 ; Mont. & Bli. 259 ; 2 L. J., Bk. 38.

Misconduct of Agent—Remedy of Client.]—If a London agent receives money improperly, the remedy of the client is not against him but against his attorney. Gray v. Kirby, 2 D. P. C. 601.

If the agent does wrong, the client cannot make a summary application against him. Jones, Ex parte, 2 D. P. C. 161.

A., being defendant in an action brought by B., paid the debt and costs to his own country attorney, for transmission to B. The attorney sent a cheque exceeding the amount to his own town agent, directing him to pay the debt and costs out of it. The agent acknowledged the receipt by letter to the country attorney, and therein promised to apply the money as directed ; but he retained it in reduction of a debt due to him from the attorney :—Held, that there was no sufficient privity to support an action for money had and received by A. against the agent. Cobb v. Becke, 6 Q. B. 930 ; 14 L. J., Q. B. 108 ; 9 Jur. 439.

Where a country attorney who is employed in a cause employs a London agent, there is not in general such privity between the client and the London agent as entitles the client to recover for money had and received against the agent in respect of proceeds of the cause which the agent has received in the ordinary course of his business. Robbins v. Fennell, 11 Q. B. 248 ; 17 L. J., Q. B. 77 ; 12 Jur. 157.

But if it appears that such proceeds have been received by the agent, without authority, either from the client or the country attorney, the court will, if the agent is an attorney of the court, compel him, upon application, to pay over the proceeds to the client, though the country attorney is indebted to the London agent in a greater sum on other accounts. Ib.

Where a town agent received moneys (not in any cause), belonging to B., the client of a country attorney, under a power of attorney from B., and placed them to the credit of the country attorney, the court refused a rule, on the application of B., to compel the agent to pay over the moneys to him, as the receipt of them did not establish the relation of attorney and client between the agent and B. Baker, Ex parte, W. W. & D. 591 ; 1 Jur. 894.

The town agent of the solicitor of the plaintiff, in an action in which judgment had been recovered for a debt, refused to pay over to the plaintiff the amount of the debt which had been received by him from the sheriff under a writ of fi. fa., on the ground that he was entitled to retain such amount for a debt due to him from the country solicitor of equal amount. The country solicitor had no lien on such amount against his client, the plaintiff :—Held, that the court, in the exercise of its summary jurisdiction over its own officers, would order the town agent to pay over the amount of the debt to the plaintiff. In such a case the court will exercise its summary jurisdiction, although there be no fraud imputed to the town agent. Edwards, Ex parte, Johnson, In re, 51 L. J., Q. B. 108 ; 8 Q. B. D. 262 ; 45 L. T. 578.

Proceedings for Account.]—Notwithstanding the definition of the word "client" in s. 3 of the Attorneys and Solicitors Act, 1870, that act does not apply to accounts between country solicitors and town agents. Ward v. Eyre, 49 L. J., Ch. 657 ; 15 Ch. D. 130 ; 43 L. T. 525 ; 28 W. R. 712 —C. A.

A bill by a country solicitor against a London solicitor, alleged that he had made a special agreement with the plaintiff to transact certain business for him on agency terms, and charged that the defendant falsely pretended that the agreement was one not for agency but for partnership in the particular business. The bill charged that, on either construction of the agreement, the plaintiff was entitled to an account, and prayed that the defendant might deliver his bills of costs as the plaintiff's agent, and also for a general account of all dealings and transactions between them. The defendant demurred, on the ground that the proper remedy of the plaintiff was by petition under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37 :—Held, that the demurrer ought to be overruled. Ward v. Lawson, 42 L. J., Ch. 273 ; L. R. 8 Ch. 65 ; 21 W. R. 88.

Attachment—Debtors Act.]—A solicitor, the London agent of a country solicitor, made default in payment of a sum ordered to be paid by him in an action for an account of his agency :—Held, that the defendant was liable to imprisonment under s. 4, sub-s. 3, of the Debtors Act, 1869, as a person acting in a fiduciary capacity, but not liable under s. 4, sub-s. 4, as a solicitor ordered to pay in his capacity of officer of the court. Litchfield v. Jones, 57 L. J., Ch. 100 ; 36 Ch. D. 530 ; 58 L. T. 20 ; 36 W. R. 397.

Costs—To whom Payable.]—At the request of the client of a country solicitor, R. paid to the solicitor a sum of money in part discharge of costs due to the solicitor in respect of administration suits to which the client was defendant, and the repayment was secured by a mortgage of the solicitor's lien. Afterwards the costs were ordered to be taxed, and paid out of a fund in court to the town agents of the solicitor :—Held, that the costs so ordered to be paid to the agent must be paid to R. in satisfaction of his claim under the mortgage. Cockayne v. Harrison, 42 L. J., Ch. 660 ; L. R. 15 Eq. 298 ; 21 W. R. 520.

—— What Recoverable as between Solicitor and Client.]—See ante.

—— Letters.]—A country solicitor with an office in town, conducting personally the business which would ordinarily be transacted by a London agent, is not entitled to charge for letters passing between the two offices. Harle, In re, 19 L. T. 305 ; 17 W. R. 21.

—— What Recoverable as between Party and Party.]—See Costs.

—— Assignment — Bankruptcy — Order and Disposition.]—A solicitor assigns his claim for costs to W., and becomes bankrupt, and W. gives notice to the London agents of the solicitor of their claim, and the assignees in bankruptcy petition for payment to them, subject to the London agents' claim :—Held, that the notice to the London agents, as far as costs became payable to them, took those costs out of the order and disposition of the bankrupt, the costs being ordered out of the fund in court. Petition refused. Sharples v. Marsh, 2 W. R. 400.

—— Share of—"Usual Agency Terms"—Out-of-pocket Expenses—Interest on Costs.]—As, according to the "usual agency terms" between a country solicitor and London agent, the London agent is only entitled to payment in full of all out-of-pocket expenses, and to a share (one-half or one-third, as may be agreed) of the profit charges, he is not, in the absence of special agreement, entitled to share in any other profits made by the country solicitor in the business, or in interest paid to the solicitor on unpaid costs. Ward v. Lawson, 59 L. J., Ch. 323 ; 43 Ch. D. 353 ; 62 L. T. 158 ; 38 W. R. 300—C. A.

An agreement by a country solicitor with a London solicitor, that the London solicitor should be his London agent on the usual agency terms, but that the London agent should not call upon the country solicitor to pay any of his agency bills until he had obtained payment of his bill of costs from his client, does not entitle the London agent to share in interest paid to the country solicitor on unpaid costs. Ib.

Taxation of Bill of Costs.]—The bill of the town agent of a solicitor cannot be ordered to be taxed on motion of the client. Wildbore v. Bryan, 8 Price, 677.

An order for taxation obtained by a London agent was discharged on the ground of his having signed the petition for taxation as principal. Scholes, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 626 ; 32 Ch. D. 245 ; 54 L. T. 466 ; 34 W. R. 515.

In an action for an attorney's bill, the town agent of the defendant's attorney obtains an order for taxing the bill. The plaintiff cannot call upon such agent to take up the master's allocatur and pay the fees. Becke v. Cattell, 3 Man. & G. 480 ; 4 Scott (N.R.) 246 ; 11 L. J., C. P. 49.

So, where part of the business is done in the House of Lords, and the certificate of the officer of the house is necessary for the purpose of enabling the taxing-master to complete his allocatur, the court will not compel the defendant's agent to take up such certificate. Ib.

A solicitor agreed to undertake the defence of another solicitor upon agency charges. On special petition a taxation of his bill was ordered "having regard to the agreement." Gedye, In re, 23 Beav. 347.

A solicitor agreed to conduct the defence of another solicitor upon agency terms, in case of the defence being unsuccessful. On entering into the agreement, the latter suppressed from the former the existence of a material correspondence, which was the principal ground of a decree being made against him. But the solicitor, after the discovery, still continued the defence without objection :—Held, that he was not released from the contract. Ib.

—— Agency Charges — Firms of Solicitors having Common Members.]—Agency charges for work done by a London firm of solicitors as agents for a country firm—two partners out of three in each firm being the same—were disallowed on taxation :—Held, that it having been the practice of the chancery taxing-masters for forty or fifty years not to treat cases of two firms having certain partners in common as agency cases at all, the court could not overrule the practice, and the charges were properly disallowed. Borough Commercial and Building Society, In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 365 ; [1894] 1 Ch. 289 ; 7 R. 75 ; 70 L. T. 51 ; 42 W. R. 161—C. A.

—— Part of Bill.]—Under the Solicitors Act, 1843, the court has no power to direct that one item or one branch of a bill of costs delivered shall be taken and remitted to the taxing-master for examination. But, apart from the terms of the statute, the court has jurisdiction to direct that part of a bill should be taxed, where the circumstances make it right that such jurisdiction should be exercised, upon such terms as would prevent any injustice being done. Storer v. Johnson and Wetherall, 60 L. J., Ch. 31 ; 15 App. Cas. 203 ; 62 L. T. 710 ; 38 W. R. 756—H. L. (E.)

London solicitors acted as agents in London for a country solicitor during the years 1877 to 1884 inclusive. The agency was terminated in 1884. During the period of the agency the London agents delivered to the country solicitor, generally once a year but sometimes oftener, detailed bills of the charges which they claimed against him in each of the actions or other matters in which they had acted for him. They also delivered to him a cash account for each year, in which he was credited with all payments made by him to them, and all moneys received by them on his behalf, and was debited with all payments made by them to him or on his behalf, and with the gross amounts of the several bills of charges which had been delivered. The balance appearing to be due from him on each account but the last was carried on to the next account. Some of the actions continued during several years, and one of them (Rhodes v. Jenkins) continued during the whole period of the agency, and was not then concluded. After the close of the agency the country solicitor claimed a taxation of the whole of the bills :—Held, by Pearson, J., that only those bills which had been delivered within twelve months could be taxed, and that the earlier bills must be treated as having been settled in account and thus paid. Held, by the court of appeal, that the bills of costs in Rhodes v. Jenkins (to which the appeal was limited), notwithstanding the fact that all the costs in it had not yet been taxed, being in fact separate bills could not be treated as one continuous bill at the option of the country solicitor. Nelson, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 998 ; 30 Ch. D. 1 ; 53 L. T. 415 ; 33 W. R. 645—C. A.

—— Charge for Counsel's Fees not yet paid.]—The London agents had charged the country solicitor with fees to counsel which had not yet been paid, but the country solicitor had not supplied them with sufficient funds to pay the fees :—Held, by Pearson, J., that this charge was not a circumstance sufficient to justify a taxation. Ib.

Lien between Town Agent and Client.]—A London solicitor acting as agent for a country solicitor has a general lien against the country solicitor upon any money recovered in an action, for all costs for agency business and disbursements due from the country solicitor, whether in the particular action or in any other proceedings ; but as between the town agent and the client, the lien of the former extends only to the costs of the particular action in which he is engaged. Lawrence v. Fletcher, 12 Ch. D. 858 ; 27 W. R. 937. S. P., White v. Royal Exchange Assurance Co., 1 Bing. 20 ; 7 Moore, 249 ; 25 R. R. 574.

A client paid her country solicitor his bill of costs before receiving any notice that the town agent of the solicitor claimed a lien upon the documents in his possession for a balance alleged to be due to him from the country solicitor on accounts stated between them :—Held, that the town agent's lien did not attach, and that he must deliver up all the documents in his possession. Vyse v. Foster, 44 L. J., Ch. 344 ; L. R. 10 Ch. 236 ; 32 L. T. 219 ; 23 W. R. 413.

A town agent has no lien for the general balance due to him from a country attorney, upon money of a client of the latter coming to his hands in a cause in which he acts as such town agent, because he must have known that the money was received for the client's use. Moody v. Spencer, 2 D. & R. 6 ; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 1.

Where a client has paid the bill of his country solicitor before receiving notice of anything remaining due from the solicitor of the London agent, the latter has no lien on documents which have come into his hands in the course of the suit. Waller v. Holmes, 1 Johns. & H. 239 ; 30 L. J., Ch. 24 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1367 ; 3 L. T. 289 ; 9 W. R. 32.

An attorney cannot set up the lien of his

London agent on the papers of his client, against the claim of that client, the client having paid his attorney's bill. Andrew, In re, 7 H. & N. 87; 30 L. J., Ex. 403.

A town agent of an attorney has a lien upon the money received in the particular cause, and upon the papers in the particular cause, for the account due to him by the attorney for the agency bill in that particular cause only, and he has this lien against all the world; and if he has had no payment made to him specifically on account of the cause, he is entitled to this lien, until his agency bill in the particular cause is satisfied. If the agent has parted with the possession of the papers by his own act, though by mistake, his lien is at an end; but if the papers did not get lawfully out of his possession, his lien continues. Dicas v. Stockley, 7 Car. & P. 587.

A decree was made in the usual form, ordering the payment of costs to the London agents of E. E.'s client had satisfied all claims of E. against him, and now prayed that the costs might be paid to him:—Held, that the order for payment to the London agents gave them no rights of lien or of set-off in respect of the costs, or in any way altered the rights of the principals. Peatfield v. Barlow, 38 L. J., Ch. 310; L. R. 8 Eq. 61; 20 L. T. 217; 17 W. R. 516.

A country client employs an attorney or solicitor in the country in a cause in chancery; the solicitor employs a clerk in chancery, the client in the country pays his solicitor, but the clerk in in chancery is unpaid. The client is not bound to pay the clerk in chancery, but if the latter has any papers in his hands he may retain them. Farewell v. Coker, 2 P. Wms. 460.

A clerk in court who lends money to the solicitor is not entitled thereby to detain a client's papers as a pledge. Gray v. Cockeril, 2 Atk. 114.

Where a clerk in court had obtained an order for taxing the costs of the solicitor who employed him, and afterwards another order for payment of the costs of taxation, he was allowed to detain the papers of the solicitor's client till the costs reported due under the first order were paid, but not for the costs of taxation. S. C., Barnard. 264.

Lien of the agent in town upon the papers in his hands, for what was due to him, as agent in the cause from the solicitor in the country. Ward v. Hepple, 15 Ves. 297; 10 R. R. 80.

Where town agents of a country solicitor (since a bankrupt) had received papers from him belonging to his client, for purposes of his client's business, they have a lien against the client for amount of money due from him to solicitor, and from solicitor to them, on account of business done in that cause. And where client had, after the solicitor's bankruptcy, paid the agent his bill to obtain such papers, although an action had been previously commenced against him by assignees for recovery of it, the court granted and continued an injunction against the action on the ground of agent's lien. Bray v. Hine, 6 Price, 203; 20 R. R. 623.

Agents of country attorneys, who finally become attorneys in a cause, and in such character receive the costs, cannot retain a certain portion above their demand upon the client, on the ground that the country attorneys were not satisfied as to their claims and that they received the money as stakeholders for them, no demand being made by the country attorneys themselves. Quarrington v. White, 6 L. J., C. P. 253.

—— Between Town Agent and Country Solicitor.]—A town agent has a lien as against the solicitor in the country to the extent of his entire bill. Steele, Ex parte, 16 Ves. 164.

Charging Order.]—London agents of a country solicitor have no right to a charge for costs, as they are not the solicitors employed by the client. Macfarlane v. Lister, 57 L. J., Ch. 92; 37 Ch. D. 88; 58 L. T. 201—C. A.

A town agent is entitled to a charge on all property recovered in three suits for an unascertained balance due to him by the country solicitor. Tardrew v. Howell, 3 Giff. 381; 31 L. J., Ch. 57; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1120; 5 L. T. 276; 10 W. R. 32. See also cases supra.

N. UNQUALIFIED PRACTITIONERS.

Acting in Name of a Qualified Solicitor.]—An unqualified person who acts as a solicitor commits an offence against 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 2, though he acts in the name and with the consent of a duly qualified solicitor. H., who had carried on the business of an accountant, arranged with C., who had been admitted as a solicitor, that he should use H.'s offices, and any business H. had he was to allow C. to attend to, H. to share in the profits, but in what proportion was not settled, or, according to H.'s version of the arrangement, H. was to be paid, as a commission, one half share of profits after deducting all expenses, including rent of offices, and was to find money and clerk to carry on the business. Pursuant to this arrangement, H., sometimes with C., and sometimes alone, transacted various matters which it was alone competent to a solicitor to transact, generally using the name of C. & Co., but sometimes not, and not always with the knowledge or express sanction of C.:—Held, that H. had been guilty of a contempt of court, and that an attachment must issue against him. Abercrombie v. Jordan, Hunt, In re, 8 Q. B. D. 187; 30 W. R. 810—C. A.

S., who carried on the business of an accountant, was instructed to collect a debt. Failing to recover the money he issued a writ which purported to be issued by Smale, a solicitor, but it was not signed by or on behalf of a solicitor, as required by Ord. V. r. 7, and the address for service given upon the writ was the address of S. After the writ was served, and after the summons had been taken out to stay proceedings on the ground that Ord. V. r. 7, had not been complied with, S. telegraphed to Smale, who was in London, asking for a reply that the writ was issued with his authority and privity. Smale replied that it was issued with his authority and privity, being under the impression that S. was acting as clerk to a solicitor, in whose service S. had formerly been, and with whom he had previously had transactions as his agent. The Incorporated Law Society obtained a rule calling upon S. to shew cause why a writ of attachment should not issue against him for contempt of court for having acted as a solicitor contrary to 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 2, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 26:—Held, that there was not sufficient evidence to shew that S. had put himself forward as actually acting as a solicitor, and on that ground alone the rule would be discharged upon S. paying all the costs. Dockings v. Vickery, Symons, In re, 46 L. T. 139.

Acting as Solicitor.]—An architect and surveyor entered a personal appearance on behalf of a defendant to an action for wrongfully refusing to accept a sub-lessee, paid the incidental court fees, obtained the defendant's signature to the necessary forms, and deposited them at the proper office; obtained and paid for duplicate copies, and forwarded them to the plaintiff's solicitor requesting a statement of claim. The architect who was also employed by the defendant in a dispute with the same plaintiff relating to certain house repairs, advised him to settle the action, and by correspondence and otherwise, negotiated with the plaintiff's solicitor to that end:—Held, that the architect in entering the appearance to the action, had committed a breach of s. 2 of the Solicitors Act, 1843, and was, therefore, liable to be attached for contempt of court, but that the provisions of the section did not extend to prevent his legally acting as he had done in the negotiations for the settlement of the action. Incorporated Law Society, Ex parte, Hall, In re, 5 R. 525; 69 L. T. 385.

Law stationers, not qualified as solicitors or proctors, were accustomed upon the instruction and in the names of London or country solicitors, to take to the registry of the probate division original wills and the engrossments thereof, with the proper affidavits, and if these were in order, to fetch away the probate; if any question arose as to the sufficiency of the documents the stationers communicated it to the solicitors. All the charges between solicitor and client were made by the solicitors, and the stationers charged the solicitors for their clerks' time only:—Held, that the stationers had not acted as solicitors or proctors, and were not liable to the penalties imposed by 23 & 24 Vict. c. 27, s. 26. Incorporated Law Society v. Waterlow, 52 L. J., Q. B. 674; 8 App. Cas. 407; 49 L. T. 141; 31 W. R. 754—H. L. (E.)

The respondent carried on business as a process server, and, in the course of such business, to support an order for substituted service, set out in the form of an affidavit the circumstances connected with the failure of his clerk to serve the writ. The affidavit was then sworn and sent to the solicitors employing him. A regular charge was made by him for effecting substituted service:—Held, that the respondent had not acted as a solicitor, and was not liable to be committed for contempt of court under the provisions of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 26. Incorporated Law Society, Ex parte, Lewis, In re, 60 L. J., Q. B. 500; [1891] 1 Q. B. 649; 64 L. T. 565; 39 W. R. 511.

Every person who acts as a solicitor contrary to s. 2 of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, is liable to attachment for contempt of court under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 26, whether he so acts in the name of any other person or in his own name, unless such person be duly qualified. Although the court will generally adopt the findings of the master as to such conduct, his report is not conclusive. Simmons, In re, 15 Q. B. D. 348; 53 L. T. 147; 33 W. R. 706; 49 J. P. 740.

—— Indictment.]—An indictment will lie against a person who acts as an attorney, without being admitted and inrolled pursuant to 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 2, although by s. 35, disabilities and penalties are imposed on a person so acting. Reg. v. Buchanan, 8 Q. B. 883; 15 L. J., Q. B. 227; 10 Jur. 736.

Pretending to Act as Solicitor.]—S., a partner in a firm of coal merchants, wrote to A., who was indebted to the firm for coals, a notice signed by himself, headed, "Final notice before proceeding in county court. Unless you pay the sum of 22*s.* 6*d.* to the firm of, &c., I shall proceed against you under the above act":—Held, the justices were wrong in convicting S. of pretending to be a solicitor contrary to 37 & 38 Vict. c. 68, s. 12. Symonds v. Incorporated Law Society, 49 J. P. 212.

B., an agent who used to issue county court summonses for people, was authorised by V. to write to a debtor of V. for payment. B. sent a notice signed by himself in the words, "County Courts. Unless the sum of 1*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.* due to V. is paid I shall proceed against you under the above acts." The real debt due to V. was only 1*l.* 6*s.* B. being summoned under 37 & 38 Vict. c. 68, s. 12:—Held, the magistrate was right in dismissing the summons, as there was no evidence that B. pretended, &c., to act as a solicitor. Incorporated Law Society v. Bedford, 49 J. P. 215.

Unqualified Person.]—Under 22 Geo. 2, c. 46, s. 11, a solicitor who had neglected to take out his certificate was not an unqualified person. Ross and Hodgson, In re, 4 N. & M. 763; 4 L. J., K. B. 264.

Acting as Agent for Unqualified Person.]—A solicitor made a verbal agreement with a debt collector to act for the debt collector as his solicitor in all county court matters, upon the terms that when the solicitor recovered a debt and costs he should bring the whole amount to the debt collector, and the debt collector should return half the costs to the solicitor, retaining one-half of the costs for himself, but taking the solicitor's receipts for the whole, and where no costs were recovered no division of costs should take place:—Held, that this agreement constituted the solicitor the agent of the debt collector, an unqualified person within s. 32 of the Solicitors Act, 1843. Incorporated Law Society, Ex parte, Solicitor, In re, 63 L. T. 350.

—— Punishment—Suspension.]—Sect. 32 of the Solicitors Act, 1843, enacts that if a solicitor shall wilfully and knowingly act as agent in any action for an unqualified person, then such solicitor "shall and may be struck off the roll, and for ever after disabled from practising":—Held, that the court, instead of striking off the rolls a solicitor who has brought himself within this section, has a discretion under its general authority over solicitors to inflict a minor punishment, such as suspension from practice. Incorporated Law Society, Ex parte, Solicitor, In re, 63 L. T. 350. See Palmer, In re, 4 N. & M. 529; 4 L. J., K. B. 110.

Semble, that the court, on being satisfied that a solicitor has been guilty of an offence under s. 32 of the Solicitors Act, 1843, has no discretion as to the punishment to be inflicted, but must strike such solicitor off the rolls. Kelly, In re, Incorporated Law Society, Ex parte, 64 L. J., Q. B. 129; [1895] 1 Q. B. 180; 15 R. 106; 71 L. T. 843; 43 W. R. 191.

Use of Name by Unqualified Person.]—When a solicitor employs a certificated conveyancer as his clerk, but both their names appear on the office door, the bills were made out in the joint names and the profits were divided equally, this is enabling an unqualified person to practise for his own profit in the solicitor's name. Jackson and Wood, In re, 1 B. & C. 270; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 115.

The mischief against which s. 32 of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, was directed is the practice or acting as an attorney or solicitor without being duly qualified. And the offence prohibited is not the mere permitting your name as an attorney or solicitor to be made use of in an action or suit "upon the account or for the profit of an unqualified person," but doing it in such a manner as thereby to enable such unqualified person to appear, act or practise in any suit at law or in equity. Scott v. Miller, Johnson, 220; 28 L. J., Ch. 584; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 858; 7 W. R. 470.

An agreement by an attorney with a certificated conveyancer, that in case the latter should introduce to the former any matters of professional business, for which the attorney would have a claim for costs, he would pay to the conveyancer a commission, is not, on the part of the attorney, such a permitting of his name to be made use of upon the account or for the profit of an unqualified person as was intended to be provided for by the section. Ib.

Such an agreement would not subject the parties to penalties for common barratry. Ib.

—— Order Striking off Rolls — Appeal to Court of Appeal.]—An appeal lies from an order of the high court made under s. 32 of the Solicitors Act, 1843, striking a solicitor off the rolls for having permitted his name to be used by an unqualified person, such an order not being a judgment in a criminal cause or matter within the meaning of s. 47 of the Judicature Act, 1873. Ex parte, In re, Davy, Ex parte, 59 L. J., Q. B. 376; 25 Q. B. D. 228; 38 W. R. 683—C. A.

—— Treatment in Prison — "Criminal Prisoner."]—A person committed to prison under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 32, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 26, for acting as a solicitor, though not duly qualified, is a "criminal prisoner" within 28 & 29 Vict. c. 126, s. 4, which enacts that "criminal prisoner shall mean any prisoner charged with or convicted of a crime." Such a person is not entitled to be treated as a misdemeanant of the first class by 40 & 41 Vict. c. 21, s. 41. Osborne v. Milman, 56 L. J., Q. B. 263; 18 Q. B. D. 471; 56 L. T. 808; 35 W. R. 397; 51 J. P. 437—C. A. Reversing 16 Cox, C. C. 138.

Uncertificated Practitioner—Liability of.]—If an unprofessional man undertakes to conduct legal proceedings for another, he is liable to that other for negligence, although he may have employed an attorney to do part of the work. Brown v. Tolley, 31 L. T. 485.

B., being in difficulties, employed the defendant to take him through the county court in bankruptcy for reward. A petition for liquidation, signed by an uncertificated attorney, was filed, and the plaintiff was appointed trustee; the defendant partly employing an attorney in the matter. The necessary notices for the meeting of creditors not having been inserted in the Gazette, the registrar refused to register the proceedings, which became inoperative, so that B. was forced to pay debts which would otherwise have been barred:—Held, that the defendant was liable to the plaintiff. Ib.

—— Proceedings taken by — How Client affected.]—Proceedings taken by an uncertificated attorney are not, as affects his client, deemed void or irregular. Brown v. Tolley, supra.

Notice of motion given by one not allowed to act as a solicitor is not good. Grosvenor, Ex parte, 3 P. Wms. 104.

Application to strike out an appearance entered by an attorney after the determination of his certificate for the current year, and before payment of the duty on his fresh certificate, but, after it had been issued, refused with costs. Sparling v. Brereton, 35 L. J., Ch. 461; L. R. 2 Eq. 64; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 330; 14 L. T. 166; 14 W. R. 515.

A solicitor who has been duly admitted and inrolled, but who has neglected to take out his annual certificate in proper time, is nevertheless competent, while uncertificated, to bind a client ignorant of the want of the certificate, as between such client and third persons. Ib.

The objection, that an interlocutory proceeding has been taken by an attorney not on the record is of a strict nature, and it is incumbent on the party making it to establish it distinctly. Lord v. Wardle, 3 C. B. 295; 15 L. J., C. P. 259.

Jurisdiction of County Court Judge.]—The judge of a county court has no jurisdiction to commit for contempt a person who has acted as a solicitor in an action in his court without being duly qualified. Reg. v. Brompton County Court Judge, 62 L. J., Q. B. 604; [1893] 2 Q. B. 195; 5 R. 462; 68 L. T. 829; 41 W. R. 648; 57 J. P. 648.

Agreement between Solicitor and Unqualified Person.]—An agreement by a solicitor to give to an unqualified party a share of profits arising from business, in which he was employed through the intervention of the latter, is not illegal; and even if illegal, the client could not deduct from the solicitor's bill of costs the amount agreed to be paid by him to such unqualified person. Gordon v. Dalzell, 15 Beav. 351; 21 L. J., Ch. 206; 16 Jur. 186.

A solicitor agreed to act for B., another solicitor, in his personal business, on the terms of principal and agent. B. neglected to take out his certificate during part of the time:—Held, that the agreement was not invalid. Foley v. Smith, 11 Beav. 456; 20 L. J., Ch. 621.

Granting a moiety of the profits of the business of an attorney to an unqualified person, for the mixed consideration of the goodwill of the business, which descended from father of grantor, and the advancement of money and family affection, is not contrary to the policy of the 22 Geo. 2, c. 46, s. 11. Candler v. Candler, 6 Madd. 141; Jac. 225.

But it is otherwise to enter into partnership with an unqualified person. Tench v. Roberts, cited 6 Madd. 145, n.

An agreement to share profits, and act as a writer in the office, but not to be considered as a partner, is in fact, a partnership, and within the above statute. Ib.

A partnership between a solicitor of a superior court, and a solicitor of an inferior court, in which both undertook to divide the profits of their general business, to recommend clients to the other, and to keep the partnership secret, is illegal. Gilfillan v. Henderson, 2 Cl. & F. 1.

Assistant Clerk Practising in County Court.]—An assistant clerk of a county court is an officer of the court within s. 29 of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, as explained by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, and is therefore liable to the penalty imposed by s. 30, if he practises as an attorney in the county court. Ackroyd v. Gill, 5 El. & Bl. 808; 25 L. J., Q. B. 111; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 184; 4 W. R. 204.

When in Prison.]—Conducting a plaint in a county court is "suing out process in a court of law," and subjects the solicitor to be struck off the roll who commences such proceedings whilst he is in prison. Flint, Ex parte, 1 B. & C. 254; 2 D. & R. 406; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 111.

Bankruptcy.]—The bankruptcy of a solicitor is no disqualification. Brown, Ex parte, 2 Ves. Jun. 68.

Libel—No Certificate.]—A solicitor may sue for libel reflecting on his profession and business, though he may have omitted to take out his certificate. Jones v. Stevens, 11 Price, 235.

Uncertificated Person — Right to recover Costs.]—The 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 26, only disables an uncertificated attorney from suing for fees, rewards or disbursements for any business, matter or thing done by him as an attorney or solicitor, in some suit or proceeding in one of the courts mentioned in the act, and not for business done, which had no reference to such suit or proceedings. Greene v. Reece, 8 C. B. 88. S. P., Richards v. Suffield, 2 Ex. 616; 6 D. & L. 22; 17 L. J., Ex. 362; 12 Jur. 731.

An attorney cannot recover for business done, unless he has obtained a certificate, which was in force for the period the work was done. Brunswick (Duke) Ex parte, Crowl, In re, 4 Ex. 492; 19 L. J., Ex. 112; 13 Jur. 1058.

An order for a new trial had been granted on payment of the costs by the defendant, the court refused to expunge the condition upon a suggestion that the plaintiff's solicitor was not on the roll. Punter v. Grantley (Lord), 3 Scott (N.R.) 647; 3 Man. & G. 295.

If an uncertificated attorney acts as an attorney, his acts are valid as regards other persons, though he cannot maintain an action for the costs of business done while he is without a certificate. Holdgate v. Slight, 2 L. M. & P. 662; 21 L. J., Q. B. 74.

Semble, a solicitor on taking out his certificate, according to 37 Geo. 3, c. 90, will be entitled to his costs for business done previously in the same year. Burchett v. Parsons, 3 L. J., Ch. 24.

Where an attorney omitted to take out his certificate for more than a year after admission:—Held, that admission de novo was not necessary, but that having been readmitted without fraud, he was restored to a capacity of acting. Chambers, Ex parte, Wilton, In re, 2 Keen, 497; 9 L. J., Ch. 200; 2 Jur. 489.

If an attorney practises in a court in which he has not been admitted, he cannot maintain an action for his fees, nor even for money out of pocket; neither has he any lien for his costs, or for money disbursed, upon a judgment recovered; and therefore he cannot prevent the damages and costs in one action being set off against those in another, though his costs have not been paid. Latham v. Hide, 1 D. P. C. 594; 1 C. & M. 128; 3 Tyr. 143; 2 L. J., Ex. 72.

A solicitor cannot recover from his client brief fees and refreshers paid by him to counsel if, at the time when the briefs were delivered and the case was heard, he had not taken out his certificate, although he had taken out his certificate before he actually paid the fees. Kent v. Ward, 9 R. 593; 70 L. T. 612—C. A.

Semble, that a solicitor cannot allocate any part of a sum received by him from his client on account of costs generally to the payment of disbursements on account of acts done by him when not duly qualified. Ib.

A proctor retained to conduct a salvage suit may legally employ a person who is not a solicitor or proctor as his agent at the out-port, but for the performance of other than proctorial acts only; and charges for work done and disbursements made by such agents in the capacity of a clerk will, if unobjectionable in other respects, be allowed to the proctor on taxation. The City of Brussels, 42 L. J., Adm. 72; L. R. 4 Adm. 194; 29 L. T. 312; 22 W. R. 71.

An attorney who does not hold a certificate within the meaning of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, cannot recover his costs in respect of proceedings in the Probate Court. Austin v. Davies, 28 L. T. 567; 21 W. R. 884.

Where A. and B. delivered a bill in their joint names for business done as attorneys, and the master disallowed a part of the bill, on the ground that B. was not a certificated attorney during a portion of the time to which the bill referred, the court, on affidavit that B.'s name was used at the request of friends, but that he was really not a partner with A., allowed A. to deliver a fresh bill in his own name only for the items so disallowed. Matchett v. Parkes, 9 M. & W. 767; 1 D. (N.S.) 924; 11 L. J., Ex. 287.

A person not duly qualified as a solicitor, who nevertheless acts for parties in an action in the county court and does solicitor's work for them, is not entitled to recover his expenses and fees from those for whom he acts; the Solicitors Act, 1874, s. 12, having enacted that none but duly-qualified solicitors shall be entitled to do so. Verlander v. Eddolls, 51 L. J., Q. B. 55; 45 L. T. 543; 30 W. R. 104; 46 J. P. 229.

The Solicitors Act, 1843, s. 26, does not extinguish the debt of a solicitor or an attorney for costs in respect of business done while uncertificated, but only his remedy. Jones, In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 83; L. R. 9 Eq. 63; 21 L. T. 482; 18 W. R. 159.

Therefore, where a client had taken out an order of course for taxation of his solicitor's bill, with the usual submission to pay what should be found due, and the master had disallowed certain items for business done while his certificate had not been renewed:—Held, that he was entitled to be allowed the items in question. Ib. This was, however, before the passing of the 33 & 34 Vict. c. 97, and the 37 & 38 Vict. c. 68, s. 12.

—— Right of Client to recover Costs against opposite Party.]—The successful party in an action cannot, where the person employed by him as solicitor is a person unqualified to act as a solicitor, recover his costs and disbursements from the opposite party, since the 12th section of 37 & 38 Vict. c. 68, enacts that "no costs . . . in relation to any act or proceeding done or taken by any person who acts as attorney or solicitor without being duly qualified . . . shall be recoverable . . . by any person or persons whomsoever." The statute applies, although the solicitor on the record is duly qualified, if the proceedings are in fact taken by a person who is not a solicitor. Irvin v. Sanger, 58 L. J., Q. B. 64; 59 L. T. 894.

The 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 26, merely prevents an attorney or solicitor from maintaining any action or suit for the recovery of his costs in respect of business done by him while uncertificated: but when a client has paid his solicitor his costs of business done while uncertificated, and the client's adversary is ordered to pay his taxed costs, the client is entitled to have the costs so paid to his solicitor included in the taxation. Hope, In re, L. R. 7 Ch. 766; 27 L. T. 670; 20 W. R. 1026.

Under the Attorneys and Solicitors Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 68), s. 12—which enacts that no costs, fee, reward, or disbursement on account of or in relation to any act or proceeding done or taken by any person who acts as an attorney or solicitor without being duly qualified so to act shall be recoverable in any action, suit, or matter by any person or persons whomsoever—the successful party in a legal proceeding cannot, where the solicitor employed by him was uncertificated, recover his costs or disbursements from the party otherwise liable. Fowler v. Monmouthshire Ry. and Canal Co., 48 L. J., Q. B. 457; 4 Q. B. D. 334; 41 L. T. 159; 27 W. R. 659.

—— Time for Objection.]—A bill of costs having been referred to taxation, items were objected to before the master, on the ground that the attorney, at the time those items were incurred, was uncertificated; and the master disallowed them:—Held, that the master acted rightly in disallowing the items. Angell, In re, 6 D. & L. 144.

An objection that an attorney was not duly certificated with a properly-stamped certificate, at the time when certain work was done by him for his client, and cannot therefore recover his costs in respect of such work by reason of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 26, comes too late if made after taxation of costs by the master, and made to the court in the first instance. Fullalove v. Parker, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 246; 31 L. J., C. P. 239; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1078; 6 L. T. 353; 10 W. R. 581.

After the plaintiff's costs had been taxed and paid, it was discovered that their agent in the cause had never been admitted as a solicitor, and an order was thereupon made that the master should review his taxation and disallow all such items as did not consist of fees paid to the clerk in court, with a view to having them refunded. Coates v. Hawkyard, 1 Russ. & M. 746; contra, Powrie v. Featherstone, 3 W. R. 184.

I. THE JURISDICTION.

A. CHARACTER AND EXTENT OF.

Discretion of Court.]—Specific performance is discretionary in the court. Clowes v. Higginson, 1 V. & B. 527; 12 R. R. 284. S. P., Mortlock v. Buller, 10 Ves. 294; 7 R. R. 417. Affirmed 2 Dow. 510.

A court of equity will not decree specific performance if by so doing injustice will be done. Powell v. Lloyd, 2 Y. & J. 372; 31 R. R. 598. See also Martin v. Mitchell, 2 J. & W. 420; 22 R. R. 184. Mason v. Armitage, 13 Ves. 25; 9 R. R. 131. Drew v. Hanson, 7 Ves. 35. Omerod v. Hardman, 5 Ves. 734. See 6 R. R. 19, n. Goring v. Nash, 3 Atk. 186. Jones v. Statham, 3 Atk. 389.

A bill for specific performance of an agreement is an application to the discretion, or rather the extraordinary jurisdiction, of the court, which cannot be exercised in favour of persons who have slept on their rights, or acquiesced for a long time in a title and possession adverse to their claim. Moore v. Blake, 1 Ball & B. 69.

The exercise of the jurisdiction is discretionary in the court; but the discretion is not arbitrary, but must be exercised according to the circumstances of the case. Bennett v. Smith, 16 Jur. 421.

Right to Relief.]—Specific performance is not of course because there is a contract, but a relief in the nature of indulgence peculiar to the jurisdiction of equity. Coe v. Middleton, 2 Drew. 290; 23 L. J., Ch. 618; 3 Eq. R. 631; 2 W. R. 284.

Specific performance of contract by competent party, and its nature and circumstances unobjectionable, are as much of course in equity as damages at law. Hall v. Warren, 9 Ves. 608; 7 R. R. 306.

Since Judicature Act, 1873.]—Since the Judicature Act, 1873, the court has jurisdiction (in any case in which the Statute of Frauds is not a bar), in one and the same action, to rectify a written agreement, upon parol evidence of mistake, and to order the agreement to be specifically performed. Olley v. Fisher, 56 L. J., Ch. 208; 34 Ch. D. 367; 55 L. T. 807; 35 W. R. 301.

Disentailing Assurance.]—The jurisdiction which the courts of equity had prior to the Fines and Recoveries Act of decreeing specific performance of a contract by a tenant in tail to bar the entail has not been excluded by s. 47 of the Fines and Recoveries Act, and the court can still as against the tenant in tail himself decree specific performance of a contract to execute a disentailing assurance. Bankes v. Small, 56 L. J., Ch. 832; 36 Ch. D. 716; 57 L. T. 292; 35 W. R. 765—C. A.

Where Action brought at Law.]—A plaintiff is not allowed to sue in equity for specific performance of an agreement for the breach of which he has brought an action at law. Gedye v. Montrose (Duke), 5 W. R. 537.

Legal Remedy defective.]—Principle of specific performance that the legal remedy is inadequate or defective. Flint v. Brandon, 8 Ves. 159.

A court of equity will, in many cases, enforce the specific execution of agreements, where the deed will not enable the party to recover damages at law. Chandos v. Brownlow, 2 Ridgw. 416.

A seller of land, like a purchaser of it, is entitled to file a bill for specific performance, where he seeks a more complete remedy than he could obtain by an action for damages for the non-performance of the contract. This rule applies equally to an incorporated company as to individuals. Eastern Counties Ry. v. Hawkes, 5 H. L. Cas. 331; 24 L. J., Ch. 601; 3 W. R. 609.

Specific execution of agreements decreed where damages would not answer the intention in making the contract, and a specific performance is therefore essential to justice; but equity will not decree specific performance of a covenant where, from circumstances, it is become unconscientious strictly to enforce specific performance of it. Davis v. Hone, 2 Sch. & Lef. 341; 9 R. R. 89.

Specific performance refused where the parties had treated the nonperformance of some of the stipulations as the subject of pecuniary compensation where the other stipulations might reasonably be dealt with in the same way. Paris Chocolate Co. v. Crystal Palace Co., 3 Sm. & G. 119; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 720; 3 W. R. 267.

Where no Right at Law.]—In agreements, no relief in equity where an action at law would not lie by reason of a substantial defect, such as a contingency not happening. Covenant to settle when A. comes into possession. A. dies before coming into possession. His heir shall not be compelled to a specific performance. Whitmel v. Farrel, 1 Ves. Sen. 256.

Incomplete Contract.]—Equity has jurisdiction to compel the specific performance of a complete contract, but cannot supply any term not agreed on. Ormond v. Anderson, 2 Ball & B. 369; 12 R. R. 103.

Per Lord St. Leonards: It is no objection to the specific performance of an agreement that collateral circumstances necessarily flowing out of the agreement are not mentioned in it. Ridgway v. Wharton, 6 H. L. Cas. 238; 27 L. J., Ch. 46; 5 W. R. 804.

B. EXERCISE OF.

1. In General.

Conduct of Parties.]—The court will not decree a specific performance of a contract, if any circumstances of suspicion exist which remain unexplained. West v. Habgood, 6 L. J., Ch. 369; 1 Jur. 259.

Where the manner of obtaining an agreement is not strictly just and regular, a court of equity ought not to decree a specific performance, although the agreement be in part executed. Rockford v. Creswick, 1 Bro. P. C. 171.

A bill for specific performance against the heir-at-law of a vendor was dismissed without costs, and the parties left to their remedy at law, the court not being satisfied as to the circumstances under which the contract was signed. Valentine v. Dickinson, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 857; 9 W. R. 625.

The rule that he who seeks equity must do equity is restricted to an equity in respect of the subject-matter of the suit. Gibson v. Goldsmid, 5 De G. M. & G. 757; 24 L. J., Ch. 279; 3 Eq. R. 106; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1; 3 W. R. 79.

Statutory Engagement.]—A bill to enforce a right springing from a statutory engagement is analogous to a bill for specific performance, and the plaintiff must come into court with clean hands. Fisher v. Tully, 47 L. J., P. C. 59; 3 App. Cas. 627; 38 L. T. 236.

What Plaintiff must Establish.]—He who seeks relief in equity on the foot of an agreement must shew that he has performed his part. Stratford v. Aldborough, 1 Ridgw. 287.

When an agreement is entered into between two parties, and performance by the first party of his part goes to the root of the whole agreement, and the first party fails to perform his part, and the second party also fails to perform his part, the court will restrain the first party from bringing an action against the second party for nonperformance of his part until he (the first party) shall have performed his part. Acraman v. Price, 18 W. R. 540.

—— Sale of Land.]—A plaintiff in an action for specific performance of a contract for a sale of land must prove readiness and willingness on his own part, and repudiation of the contract on the defendant's part does not relieve the plaintiff from this obligation. Ellis v. Rogers, 50 L. T. 660.

Impossibility of Performance.]—A court of equity will relieve against a contract become impossible to be performed. Smith v. Morris, 2 Bro. C. C. 311.

Performance of Contract—Becoming Possible.]—When a party has entered into a contract without having the power to perform it, and afterwards acquires the right to do so, he is then bound to perform it. Carne v. Mitchell, 15 L. J., Ch. 287. And see cases, infra, col. 1785.

If a person contracts to do a thing which he may do himself, or has the means of compelling others to do, equity will compel him to do it, unless it be highly unreasonable, in which case the other party shall not be held to the contract. Costigan v. Hastler, 2 Sch. & Lef. 166.

—— Hardship.]—The fact that the performance of an agreement has, owing to circumstances which have subsequently occurred, become hard in its consequences to one of the parties, or that he is called upon to perform it under circumstances which he had not contemplated, so that a decree for specific performance would be more productive of injustice than justice, may be grounds for refusing to decree specific performance. Webb v. Direct London and Portsmouth Ry., 9 Hare, 129; 1 De G. M. & G. 52; 21 L. J., Ch. 337; 16 Jur. 323.

—— Agreement to Make a Road—Approval of Local Board—Requirements of Local Board inconsistent with Specification.]—The defendants agreed to construct a road over land of the plaintiff, who was to grant the defendants a right of way over the road when completed, and to permit it to be declared a public highway by the local board. Defendants were to make the road according to a plan and specification already approved by the local board. The specification did not comply with the requirements of the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 152, and the board withheld their sanction to its being declared a public highway:—Held, that, inasmuch as to compel the defendants to construct the road so as to conform with the provisions of the act would be to enforce performance of terms at variance with the agreement and entirely outside the contemplation of the parties, specific performance could not be ordered. Saunders v. Brading Harbour Improvement Co., 52 L. T. 426.

Unfair Contract.]—Where a contract between two companies proves to be one by which one of the contracting parties will gain considerable advantages, at the expense of the other, while the other will receive no corresponding benefit, whether such contract is or is not legally valid, equity will not aid in enforcing it by a decree for specific performance. Shrewsbury and Birmingham Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 6 H. L. Cas. 113; 26 L. J., Ch. 482; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 775.

Specific performance of an agreement, become useless to the defendant, refused. —— v. White, 3 Swanst. 108, n.; 19 R. R. 182.

Plaintiff by his own Act unable to Perform Contract.]—Statement of claim asked for specific performance or 160*l.* as liquidated damages, and plaintiff after pleadings closed resold the property:—Held, that the action must be treated as one for specific performance with a claim for damages in the alternative as a substitute for specific performance, and that the plaintiff, having by his own act rendered specific performance impossible, was not in such action entitled to damages. Hipgrave v. Case, 54 L. J., Ch. 399; 28 Ch. D. 356; 52 L. T. 242—C. A.

Informal Contract.]—A court of equity cannot, when called on to decree specific performance of an agreement, direct any act to be done whereby the agreement itself, if not already legally binding, can be made so, and therefore, where an agreement had clearly been come to by a public company, but was not executed in the statutory form as required by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 16, s. 97, the court could not make the directors sign it, and dismissed the bill. Leominster Canal Co. v. Shrewsbury and Hereford Ry., 3 K. & J. 654; 26 L. J., Ch. 764; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 930; 5 W. R. 868. And see Kidderminster (Mayor) v. Hardwick, infra, col. 1771; Oxford (Mayor) v. Crow, infra, col. 1850.

Contract to Exercise Testamentary Power.]—The court will not decree specific performance of a contract to leave property by will entered into by a mere donee of a testamentary power of appointment. Parkin, In re, Hill v. Schwartz, 62 L. J., Ch. 55; [1892] 3 Ch. 510; 67 L. T. 77; 41 W. R. 120. And see Maddison v. Alderson, infra, col. 1769.

Indemnity.]—Special directions in a decree for specific performance against a company, providing for an indemnity to the company, and for works to be performed by the company. Powell v. South Wales Ry., 1 Jur. (N.S.) 773.

When actual specific performance cannot be directed, and an indemnity is prayed, the court will decree indemnity as ancillary to the relief by specific performance. Cruse v. Paine, 19 L. T. 127.

Interest of Third Party.]—If two parties for a valuable consideration enter into a contract, of which one of the stipulations is for the benefit of a third person, who is a stranger to the consideration, the court will not enforce the contract without securing his interest under it. Davenport v. Bishopp, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 451; 12 L. J., Ch. 492; 7 Jur. 1077. Affirmed 1 Ph. 98.

The interest which a third party may have against the specific performance of a contract may preclude the execution of it, as between trustees and cestui que trust; as, where an insolvent tenant made over his lease to another who treated for a renewal under a secret agreement, in trust for the original tenant. Featherstonhaugh v. Fenwick, 17 Ves. 313; 11 R. R. 77.

Order to Sign Judgment.]—A judge's order giving liberty to sign judgment, with a stay of execution in the event of certain conditions being performed, is not an agreement to perform those conditions; and even if the terms are ordered substantively to be performed, the remedy for default is in the court where the order was made, and not by a bill for specific performance. Thames Iron Works Co. v. Patent Derrick Co., 1 J. & H. 93; 29 L. J., Ch. 714; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1013; 2 L. T. 208; 8 W. R. 408.

Felony.]—The court will not execute an agreement to grant a lease to a man who has committed a felony. Willingham v. Joyce, 3 Ves. 169.

Defaulting Defendant — Conveyance to be executed as an Escrow.]—In a vendor's action for specific performance the defendant, not having complied with the decree, was ordered to pay the purchase-money into court within a limited time. The defendant did not comply with this order, and efforts to enforce it by sequestration proved ineffective. An application was then made for an order for payment of the amount to the plaintiff, so that if default was made a writ of fi. fa. could issue. The court made an order for a conveyance to be executed as an escrow, and delivered on payment of the purchase-money and interest, and for payment to the plaintiff by the defendant, at a time and place to be fixed by the judge, after the execution of the conveyance; and by a subsequent order, the conveyance having been executed, the defendant was ordered to pay the purchase-money and interest to the plaintiff within one month from the date of the order. Jessop v. Smyth, [1895] 1 Ir. R. 508. And see Hall v. Hall, 51 L. T. 226, infra, col. 1820.

2. Part Performance.

a. General Principles.

Extent of Doctrine.]—The equitable doctrine of part performance taking contracts out of the operation of s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds cannot be extended by the High Court of Justice, under s. 24, sub-s. 7, of the Judicature Act, 1873, beyond the limits to which it was confined by the courts of equity. It is, therefore, applicable only to contracts for the sale and purchase of lands, and not to a contract of service. Britain v. Rossiter, 48 L. J., Ex. 362; 11 Q. B. D. 123; 40 L. T. 240; 27 W. R. 482—C. A.

When a part of the agreement is performed on one side, it is just it should be carried into execution on the other. Walker v. Walker, 2 Atk. 100.

Allegation of Fraud.]—If an agreement is in part performed by one of the parties, it is too late for the other to complain of fraud, surprise, &c., or attempt to set the agreement aside on that account; for a court of equity will decree a specific performance of the remaining part of it. Anglesea (Earl) v. Annesley, 1 Bro. P. C. 289.

Material Acts.]—If defendant has concurred in a material unequivocal act, by which he has obtained a substantial part of his object, as taking possession or accepting a considerable part of the purchase-money, he shall not be allowed to retract, and plaintiff's right to a full execution of the contract has attached; but acts merely ancillary and introductory, though attended with some expense, will not sustain an agreement on the ground of part performance. Acceptance of a trifling earnest would probably not be deemed sufficient. See Simmons v. Cornelius, 1 Ch. Rep. 128; Voll v. Smith, 3 Ch. Rep. 16; Anon., 2 Freem. 128; Seagood v. Meale, Pre. Ch. 560, infra, col. 1770.

—— Acts of Ownership.]—To maintain a contract on the ground that it is taken out of the Statute of Frauds by part performance, the court will require it to be shewn that the party seeking relief has expended money or otherwise acted in reliance on and in the execution of the agreement, and that nonperformance would amount to a fraud upon him. Specific performance will not be enforced merely because the defendant has done acts on the property which, unless construed as acts of ownership, would, in the absence of licence, amount to a trespass. Phillips v. Alderton, 24 W. R. 8.

—— Repairs.]—Acts of part performance avoiding the Statute of Frauds, as repairs, &c., must be in their nature almost necessarily done in pursuance of the contract alleged. Hooper, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 479; 2 Rose, 328; 1 Mer. 7; 13 R. R. 244.

Deposit of Title Deeds.]—Whether a deposit of title deeds, in pursuance of a contract to charge real estate, is a sufficient part performance to take a case out of the Statute of Frauds, quære. Whitmore v. Farley, 45 L. T. 99; 29 W. R. 825; 14 Cox, C. C. 617—C. A.

Evidence.]—On a bill for specific execution relying on part performance, the agreement must be proved as stated. Savage v. Carroll, 1 Ball & B. 451. See 12 R. R. 32.

Parol evidence is not to be admitted on the ground of part performance, unless the agreement stated appears clearly to be the very same with that which was partly performed. Lindsay v. Lynch, 2 Sch. & Lef. 8; 9 R. R. 54.

Specific performance of a parol agreement for the sale of an estate, proved by one witness, confirmed by part performance, by taking possession, and acts of ownership, refused, there being some inconsistencies in the testimony of the witness, which, with other circumstances, placed the terms of the contract in doubt. Reynolds v. Waring, Younge, 346.

When a person has contracted for the purchase of land by an agreement, the terms of which are partly written and partly verbal, and has obtained possession upon performance of the written terms, to attempt to retain possession and refuse to perform the verbal terms amounts to a fraud. Jervis v. Berridge, 42 L. J., Ch. 518; L. R. 8 Ch. 351; 28 L. T. 481; 21 W. R. 244.

Casus Omissus—Statute of Frauds.]—Part performance takes a case out of Statute of Frauds. Aylesford's (Earl) Case, 2 Str. 763.

A performance only on one side is not a dispensation of the Statute of Frauds, but casus omissus against which there is no provision. Charlewood v. Bedford (Duke), 1 Atk. 497.

Parol Agreement.]—Plea of Statute of Frauds to discovery of a parol agreement not allowed where part performance. Taylor v. Beech, 1 Ves. Sen. 297.

Parol agreements in part performed, not resting on the agreement only, are in equity excepted out of the statute. Kine v. Balfe, 2 Ball & B. 343.

Equity will not decree upon a bare agreement by parol, without part performance. Popham v. Eyre, Lofft. 801.

Part performance of contract is not the mere tendering of conveyances, but it must be some act done, as in actual execution of contract, not towards the execution. Payment of earnest or delivery of possession of part are acts of part performance. Ib.

Parol agreement proved by one witness, corroborated by others, and not denied by answer, enforced upon the ground of part performance Toole v. Medlicott, 1 Ball & B. 393.

Where a parol agreement is begun to be put in execution, and intended to be continued, equity will enforce the execution of it, notwithstanding the Statute of Frauds. Guernsey (Lord) v. Rodbridges, Gilb. Eq. Rep. 4.

Recovery of Money Expended.]—Money expended on the alteration of premises, for the leasing of which an agreement has been entered into, but which is incapable of being enforced by reason of the Statute of Frauds, may be recovered back as on a failure of consideration. Pulbrook v. Lawes, 45 L. J., Q. B. 178; 1 Q. B. D. 284; 34 L. T. 95.

What is Sufficient.]—Specific performance of a parol agreement to sell land refused, notwithstanding many acts by which the defendant had treated the plaintiff as a purchaser. Whaley v. Bagnal, Wall. Lyn. 12, n.; 1 Bro. P. C. 345.

Agreement by parol, that upon plaintiff's procuring a release of right from a stranger, defendant would convey; plaintiff procures the release by paying a valuable consideration; that is not a part performance, and the Statute of Frauds may be pleaded to a bill for specific performance of such an agreement. O'Reilly v. Thompson, 2 Cox, 271; 2 R. R. 41.

A. and B. being joint lessees of a building lease, A., by parol, agrees to sell his interest to B., and accepts a pair of compasses in hand to bind the bargain. Quære, if within the Statute of Frauds. Alsopp v. Patten, 1 Vern. 472.

Specific performance decreed of a parol agreement in part performed for surrendering a lease and granting a new lease at a reduced rent. Parker v. Smith, 1 Coll. C. C. 608.

Acquiescence.]—Specific performance decreed of a parol agreement, made as a family compromise of doubtful rights, where there had been part performance by possession, and improvements, and acquiescence near nineteen years. Stockley v. Stockley, 1 V. & B. 23; 12 R. R. 184. S. P., Stapleton v. Stapleton, 1 Atk. 2.

Possession and Expenditure.]—A. gave the H. estate to his son, and signed a memorandum as follows: "H., together with my other freehold estates, are left in my will to my wife; but it is her wish, and I hereby join in presenting the same to our son for the purpose of furnishing him with a dwelling-house." The son took possession of the H. estate, and with the approbation.

of his father expended money on the erection of a dwelling-house thereon. Upon his death :—Held, that the son was entitled to have a conveyance to himself of the fee-simple of the H. estate. Dillwyn v. Llewellyn, 31 L. J., Ch. 658 ; 10 W. R. 742—L.C.

A., a tenant in possession, filed a bill against B. for the specific performance of a parol agreement for a lease of thirty years. A. had contracted to sub-let, and his sub-lessee had expended money in alterations and repairs with the knowledge and approval of B. :—Held, that the outlay by the sub-lessee was as much a part performance of the agreement as if made by A., who was therefore entitled to specific performance. Williams v. Evans, 44 L. J., Ch. 319 ; L. R. 19 Eq. 547 ; 32 L. T. 359 ; 23 W. R. 466.

Parol Agreement as to Easement of Light.]—The plaintiff and defendant, the owners of adjoining houses, being about to rebuild, entered into a verbal agreement. The plaintiff duly carried out his part of the agreement, but the defendant carried his out differently to the agreement, and so as to obstruct the light to the plaintiff's premises :—Held, that the plaintiff, having performed the agreement on his part, was entitled to have it enforced on the part of the defendant, and a mandatory injunction was granted. McManus v. Cooke, 56 L. J., Ch. 662 ; 35 Ch. D. 681 ; 56 L. T. 900 ; 35 W. R. 754 ; 51 J. P. 708.

Promise to Devise.]—Where a niece had been induced to render valuable services to her uncle on the faith of his representation that by so doing she would become entitled to the benefit of the trusts created in her favour by a codicil to his will, and the testator afterwards revoked such trusts :—Held, that he had no right to make such revocation, and a decree was made that the trusts in favour of the niece should be performed. Loffus v. Maw, 3 Giff. 592 ; 32 L. J., Ch. 49 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 607 ; 6 L. T. 346 ; 10 W. R. 513.

An intestate induced a woman to serve him as his housekeeper without wages for many years, and to give up other prospects of establishment in life by a verbal promise to make a will leaving her a life estate in land, and afterwards signed a will, not duly attested, by which he left her the life estate :—Held, that even if there had been a contract, although the woman had wholly performed her part by serving without wages, yet her service was not unequivocally referable to any contract, and was not such a part performance as to take the case out of the operation of the Statute of Frauds, s. 4 ; and that she could not maintain an action against the heir for a declaration that she was entitled to a life estate in the land. Loffus v. Maw (supra) disapproved. Maddison v. Alderson, 52 L. J., Q. B. 737 ; 8 App. Cas. 467 ; 49 L. T. 303 ; 31 W. R. 820 ; 47 J. P. 821—H. L. (E.) And see Parkin, In re, supra, col. 1765.

Trust.]—In consideration of K. (a reversioner) allowing F. (a mortgagee) to make a lease of lands to W., the father-in-law of K., the following document was signed by W. and K. :—"It is agreed between W. and K. that the lease and lands of Largan, after the death of W., shall be and become, through his love for her, the property of Mrs. K. in trust for her child or children by K., if not, to be for her sole use or benefit" :—Held, firstly, that this was a declaration of trust by W. in favour of Mrs. K. and her children, and that, after W.'s death, his personal representative became a trustee for them. Kelly v. Walsh, 1 L. R. Ir. 275.

Held, secondly, that if it was not a valid declaration of trust, it was an agreement which should be specifically performed, upon the ground that the consent by K. was a part performance which took the case out of the Statute of Frauds. Ib. And see cases, infra, col. 1778.

b. By Payment.

Real Estate.]—Payment of money is not part performance to take an agreement touching lands out of the statute. Clinan v. Cooke, 1 Sch. & Lef. 40 ; 9 R. R. 3.

Earnest Money.]—Payment of money by way of earnest money is not a part performance of agreement. Pengall v. Ross, 2 Eq. Ca. Abr. 46.

A. agrees with B. for the purchase of nine houses which were in mortgage to J. and pays him a guinea in earnest ; B. writes a note to J., and desires him to deliver up the writings, he having disposed of them, which J. refused, unless all the mortgage money was paid him down, and afterwards purchases them himself. On a bill, brought by A. for a specific execution of the agreement, it was held, that neither the guinea paid down nor the note was sufficient to take it out of the Statute of Frauds. Seagood v. Meale, Pre. Ch. 560.

Though a payment of a substantial part of the purchase-money will take an agreement as to land out of the Statute of Frauds, on the ground of part performance, a small part, as five guineas, the purchase-money being one hundred, will not do. The plea of the statute was allowed, and the bill was dismissed with costs. Main v. Melbourne, 4 Ves. 720.

What is sufficient.]—A. and B. agreed that B. should assign a term for years in his house, and certain chattels for 200 guineas, whereof one guinea was paid down, and nineteen more next day. Part of the agreement was, that it should be reduced into writing. On a bill for performance, B. pleaded the statute, and insisted that the twenty guineas were paid for the lease. Plea overruled. Leak v. Morris, 2 Ch. Ca. 135.

A parol agreement, and 30*l.* paid for the sale of a house, was decreed, without further execution proved. Anon., 2 Free. C. C. 128.

H. agreed with M. to convey her interest in a life estate for 300*l.* M. paid two-thirds, and then by accident the estate became more valuable, and M. agreed to give 140*l.* more ; H. died, and nothing further was done. The latter agreement, though not in writing, decreed to be executed in favour of M.'s administrator against his heirs. Lacam v. Mertins, 3 Atk. 1 ; 1 Ves. Sen. 312 ; Dick. 664.

—— Ship.]—H. contracted for the purchase of shares in a vessel, and paid part of the purchase-money to P. and obtained possession of the vessel, but no bill of sale was executed. The registered owners alleged that P. was not their agent to receive the money, and threatened to sell the shares. They were restrained from selling or proceeding in the admiralty court. Hughes v. Morris, 13 Jur. 1065.

—— For Alterations.]—W. lets premises to V. upon a contract written in pencil by V., and signed by him ; both act under the contract, but

V. ultimately alleges nonperformance by W. of certain things not contained in it, and W. makes like charges. The defendant had inter alia paid 25*l.* towards certain alterations and additions made by the plaintiff W., in accordance with the terms of the contract. Decree for specific performance made without costs. Waller v. Vigurs, 2 W. R. 51.

—— Auction Duty.]—Payment of the auction duty does not satisfy the Statute of Frauds, upon the general ground of part performance. Buckmaster v. Harrop, 13 Ves. 456; 6 R. R. 132.

Nudum Pactum.]—Promise to renew a lease in consequence of money already laid out is nudum pactum, and will not be specifically performed, and money laid out afterwards will not vary it; on this ground a demurrer allowed. Robertson v. St. John, 2 Bro. C. C. 140.

Release.] — Agreement by parol, that upon plaintiff's procuring a release of right from a stranger defendant would convey. Plaintiff procures the relief by paying a suitable consideration; that is not a part performance, and the Statute of Frauds may be pleaded. O'Reilly v. Thompson, 2 Cox, 271; 2 R. R. 41.

Monthly Rent.]—Where a corporation leased tolls by agreement not under seal, the payment of a monthly rent in advance was held insufficient to constitute a part performance. Kidderminster Corporation v. Hardwicke, 43 L. J., Ex. 9; L. R. 9 Ex. 13; 29 L. T. 612; 22 W. R. 160.

Payment of Wages.]—Articles of agreement are executed between the crew of a vessel, of the one part, and the captain, of the other part, containing a stipulation that the seamen are not to have any demand against the owner of the ship; the owner subsequently acts under the agreement, and, in pursuance of it, makes payment to the seamen out of the proceeds of the cargo:—Held, that the owner, by such conduct, becomes a party to the agreement, and that a bill for the performance of the agreement may be maintained against him. Gostling v. Smith, 3 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 5.

c. By Taking Possession.

In General.]—Delivery of possession is part performance of an agreement not reduced into writing. Lacam v. Mertins, 3 Atk. 4; 1 Ves. Sen. 312; Dick. 664.

A purchaser being let into possession is enough to take a contract out of the Statute of Frauds, whether the vendor or the purchaser is seeking specific performance. Wilson v. West Hartlepool Ry., 2 De G. J. & S. 475; 34 L. J., Ch. 241; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 124; 11 L. T. 692; 13 W. R. 361.

In cases of part performance of contracts not formerly binding in themselves, the court gives relief by decreeing specific performance, on the ground of protecting against fraud, and this principle applies as much to companies as to individuals. Ib.

In a suit for specific performance, where possession and expenditure are fairly referable to an express agreement with the landowner to give an adequate consideration, to be calculated on a principle sufficiently defined in the agreement, the court will, in favour of the possession and expenditure, endeavour to decree a specific performance; but not where the plaintiff, after filing his bill, but before the hearing, has obtained by an act of parliament the means of securing and keeping his possessions without the aid of the court. Meynell v. Surtees, 3 Sm. & G. 101. Affirmed 25 L. J., Ch. 257; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 737; 3 W. R. 535.

When Referable to Contract.] — Possession taken, referable only to a contract of sale, is part performance, and parol evidence may be given of the terms of such contract. Savage v. Carroll, 1 Ball & B. 451.

Possession, to be effective, must be a possession under the contract, and such that the vendor must be taken to know that it is claimed under the contract. Mills v. Haywood, 6 Ch. D. 196—C. A.

Where possession delivered under an agreement, and money expended in permanent improvements, parol evidence admitted to prove the agreement. Toole v. Medlicott, 1 Ball & B. 401.

Where possession taken was referable either to an alleged parol contract, or to a written memorandum:—Held, that the possession was not such as to constitute part performance, though the plaintiff had been let into possession some days previously to the date of the memorandum. Cunning v. Catling, 4 N. R. 259.

Possession of Part.] — There being a parol agreement for the purchase of a farm and farmhouse, the possession of the farm by the purchaser will be held an act of part performance sufficient to authorise the court to execute the contract, even though the house should have been occupied adversely to him. Gunter v. Halsey, Amb. 586.

Cutting Crops.]—Part performance by taking possession, cutting the crops, &c. Buckmaster v. Harrop, 13 Ves. 456; 6 R. R. 132.

Promise to give House—Charge.]—A. verbally promised, in consideration of his daughter's marriage, to give her a house as a wedding present, and immediately after the marriage he put the daughter and her husband into possession. A. was then the owner of the house, which was leasehold, and was subject to a charge payable by instalments. The father paid the instalments which fell due during his lifetime, and at his death there remained a balance of 110*l.*:—Held, that the verbal promise to give the house having been established, the possession took the case out of the Statute of Frauds; that the contract was to give the house free from incumbrances; and that the 110*l.* was payable out of the father's estate. Ungley v. Ungley, 46 L. J., Ch. 854; 5 Ch. D. 887; 37 L. T. 52; 25 W. R. 733—C. A.

—— Payment of Rates and Taxes.]—The plaintiff, who was proposing to enter into business, was induced by C. to abandon the project, C. promising her verbally that she should occupy a leasehold house of C.'s during her (the plaintiff's) life, the plaintiff to pay the ground-rent, rates and taxes, and maintain herself by letting lodgings. The plaintiff thereupon entered into possession of C.'s house, and continued there for several years until C.'s death, paying the ground-rent, rates and taxes. C. bequeathed the house to P. :—Held, that there had been a part performance of the contract between the plaintiff and C. sufficient to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds. Coles v. Pilkington, 44 L. J., Ch. 381; L. R. 19 Eq. 174; 31 L. T. 423; 23 W. R. 41. And see Millard v. Harvey, infra, col. 1780.

d. By Preparation of Conveyance.

Vendor Purchasing Mortgage on Estate.]—On the sale of an estate A.'s verbal offer was accepted, conveyances ordered to be got ready, and A. was put into possession, but disputes arose relative to the settling the conveyance. A. got an assignment of the mortgage to which the estate was subject, and refused to go on with the purchase. A. was decreed to proceed in the purchase. Pyke v. Williams, 2 Vern. 455.

Visits to the Property.]—A. verbally agreed for the purchase of an estate, and gave orders for conveyances to be drawn up, and went several times to view the estate:—Held, the Statute of Frauds may be pleaded to a bill for specific performance. Clerk v. Wright, 1 Atk. 12.

Escrow.]—Trustees of a settlement having power to lease, with written request of a married woman, in pursuance of a parol agreement, executed a lease, and delivered it to their solicitor to exchange for the counterpart, but before the exchange was made she refused to part with the deed:—Held, that the execution of the deed was not a part performance of the parol agreement, and that the deed was delivered as an escrow. Phillips v. Edwards, 3 N. R. 658; 33 Beav. 440.

Instructions to Solicitor.]—Putting a deed into the hands of a solicitor to prepare a conveyance of the estate to a son-in-law (after marriage) not a part performance of a parol agreement, so as to take it out of the Statute of Frauds. Redding v. Wilkes, 3 Bro. C. C. 400.

The defendant, during negotiations for the sale of lands and chattels, delivered a particular of the whole signed by him. The agreement was afterwards made at a less price. Both parties gave instructions to an attorney to prepare the conveyance: and the defendant delivered to him the particular, as instructions for the deed which was prepared:—Held, not sufficient to take it out of the statute, and being void as to the lands, void in toto. Cooke v. Tombs, 2 Anst. 420.

Fees—Drafts.]—Payment of fees to counsel, drawing drafts and engrossing them, and providing purchase-money, under circumstances, held a part performance. Child v. Comber, 3 Swanst. 427.

Rent-roll.]—A. agrees by parol with B. for the purchase of lands; B. delivers a rent-roll, which was dated and altered in his own handwriting, and shewed an agreement between them for the sale of the estate, at twenty-one years' purchase. An abstract of the title was also delivered to A., together with the deeds, in order to be compared with the rent-roll. B. likewise wrote letters to several of his creditors, informing them that he had contracted with A. for the sale of his estate, at twenty-one years' purchase, and sent the tenants to treat with A. for a renewal of their leases. Upon A.'s filing a bill for specific execution of this agreement, B. pleaded the Statute of Frauds, and the plea was allowed. Whaley v. Bagnel, 1 Bro. P. C. 345; Wall. Lyn. 12, n.

Admeasurement.]—Admeasurement not a part performance of an agreement to exchange lands. Pembroke v. Thorpe, 3 Swanst. 442; 19 R. R. 254.

3. In Particular Cases.

a. Contracts with a Parol Variation.

In General.]—A suit for specific performance of an agreement with a variation cannot be supported. Nurse v. Seymour (Lord), 13 Beav. 254. S. P., Jordan v. Sawkins, 4 Bro. C. C. 477.

Court of equity has no power to alter the contracts of parties from an eventual change not contemplated at the time. Revell v. Hussey, 2 Ball & B. 288; 12 R. R. 87.

Though a parol waiver of a written contract, amounting to a complete abandonment and clearly proved, would bar a specific performance, or even parol variations so acted upon that the original agreement could no longer be enforced without injury to one party, variations verbally agreed upon are not sufficient to prevent the execution of a written agreement; the situation of the parties, in all other respects, remaining the same. Price v. Dyer, 17 Ves. 356; 11 R. R. 102.

Defendant held to the offer in his answer, though the circumstances of the case were varied from what they were at the time of answer put in. Holford v. Burnell, 1 Vern. 448.

Different Agreement.]—Bill for specific performance of an agreement dismissed: the agreement appearing from letters produced to have been different from that set up by the bill, and proved by one witness. Legh v. Haverfield, 5 Ves. 452; 7 R. R. 199.

Part of Agreement omitted.]—Specific performance of a written agreement refused, on parol evidence that one term of the actual agreement was omitted. Garrard v. Grinling, 2 Swanst. 244; 1 Wils. 460.

What Relief granted.]—Quære, can a court of equity decree the performance of a written agreement where the bill states that the written agreement was subsequently varied by parol, and prays, in the alternative, either that the agreement, with these variations, may be executed, or that it may be executed as it stands in writing. Wright v. Howard, 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 94; 24 R. R. 169.

Original bill prayed execution of an agreement; defendant denied the agreement as in bill, but admitted a different agreement; plaintiff amended his bill, continuing to insist on the original agreement, but praying in the alternative, if not entitled to that, to have execution of the admitted agreement. Bill dismissed without prejudice to a bill for performance of the admitted agreement. Lindsay v. Lynch, 2 Sch. & Lef. 1; 9 R. R. 54.

No relief under an agreement stated by the answer, the bill not being adapted to that agreement, but framed upon a different ground, which failed. Pilling v. Armitage, 12 Ves. 78; 8 R. R. 295.

Bill for performance of written agreement, parol evidence read of different agreement, dismissed with costs; and plaintiff cannot resort to agreement set up by defendant; parol evidence allowed where a hard agreement, or in part executed. Legal v. Miller, 2 Ves. Sen. 299.

Upon a bill praying the performance of an agreement duly signed, but offering to the defendant the benefit of certain variations contained in an unsigned memorandum of a subsequent date, the court will decree a specific performance of the agreement with those variations, if the defendant elects to take advantage of them; and if the defendant does not so elect, it will decree specific performance of the original agreement. Robinson v. Page, 3 Russ. 114.

A bill for a specific performance insisted on the literal construction of a written agreement, which was proved to be contrary to the real intention of the parties; and the bill contained a false statement as to a fact which would have been inconsistent with the plaintiff's representation of the case. The bill was dismissed on the parol evidence. Molloy v. Egan, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 590.

Specific performance of an agreement refused, the plaintiff having, after the defendant had signed the agreement, attempted to vary the terms of it, though he ultimately acquiesced in the defendant's terms. Thornbury v. Bevill, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 554; 6 Jur. 407.

Variation not clear.]—Where the original agreement has been subsequently varied, unless there be certainty as to those variations as affecting the original agreement, so that both together should form one consistent agreement, the court will not grant an injunction prayed for in a bill for specific performance. Paris Chocolate Co. v. Crystal Palace Co., 3 Sm. & G. 119; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 720; 3 W. R. 267.

A parol addition to an agreement must be established without doubt or ambiguity before equity will assist in carrying the additional provision into effect. Vouillon v. States, 25 L. J., Ch. 875; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 845.

Inquiry.]—Where a party has failed to prove the terms of the agreement he relies on, equity will not assist him by directing an issue to ascertain the terms. If he be plaintiff, it is incumbent on him to state in his bill the agreement of which he calls on the court to decree the performance, and to prove the agreement as stated. Savage v. Carroll, 2 Ball & B. 451; 12 R. R. 108.

Where a parol agreement varying the terms of the written agreement is set up by the defendants in a suit for specific performance, and supported by evidence affording a presumption or suspicion of its existence, an inquiry will be directed. Van v. Corpe, 3 Myl. & K. 269; 6 L. J., Ch. 208; 1 Jur. 149.

Semble, in a suit for specific performance of a written agreement a parol variation in the terms of the contract, being not such a one as would defeat the right to specific performance, not set up by answer, but coming out on cross-examination of one of plaintiff's witnesses, who was defendant's agent, is a proper subject of inquiry; but the plaintiff accepting the variation, specific performance was decreed with costs. London and Birmingham Ry. v. Winter, Cr. & Ph. 57.

Evidence.]—Parol evidence admissible on the part of a defendant resisting the specific performance of an agreement to prove fraud, mistake or omission in the article, and also to shew the situation of the parties as connected with it. Flood v. Finlay, 2 Ball & B. 15; 12 R. R. 55.

Though a defendant, resisting specific performance, may go into evidence to shew that by fraud the true terms were not expressed in the written agreement, yet plaintiff cannot do so for the purpose of obtaining specific performance, with a variation of the contract. Woollam v. Hearn, 7 Ves. 211; 6 R. R. 113.

Distinction between admission of parol evidence to support or resist specific performance of contract for land: admissible for latter purposes on mistake and surprise, as well as fraud, but not to vary, add to, or explain the written contract. Clowes v. Higginson, 1 V. & B. 524; 12 R. R. 284.

Quære, whether a defendant, resisting the specific performance of an agreement, on the ground of alleged surprise and fraud, will be allowed to give parol evidence of a term of the contract, said to have been made at the same time with, but contradictory to, those terms of it which were reduced into writing, and signed by him. Bunning v. Bunning, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 56.

Parol evidence admissible in opposition to specific performance of written agreement upon heads of mistake or surprise, as well as of fraud, and upon such evidence the bill was dismissed. Another bill for specific performance of agreement corrected according to same evidence, contradicted by answer, was also dismissed. Townsend (Marquis) v. Stangroom, 6 Ves. 328; 5 R. R. 312.

Parol evidence of declarations of auctioneers at sale, warranting quantity, received as defence to bill for specific performance on ground of fraud, though not for purpose of enforcing specific performance. Winch v. Winchester, 1 V. & B. 375; 12 R. R. 238.

Parol evidence in aid of a specific performance upon the sale of the estate by auction, to explain, by declarations of the auctioneer, an ambiguity on the face of the particular, and also special provisions, the agreement, signed on the back of the particular, binding the purchaser, defendant, "to a strict fulfilment of this article, and to abide by the condition and declarations made at the sale," rejected; distinction where evidence is to resist a specific performance. Higginson v. Clowes, 15 Ves. 516; 10 R. R. 112.

Though a paper, as the particular upon a sale by auction, may by reference be engrafted into a contract within the Statute of Frauds, that will not authorise the introduction of parol evidence to shew what part was read. S. C., 15 Ves. 522.

Construction of a contract, that a reference of the expenses was confined to expense of the conveyance; but the evidence of the attorney was admitted for the defendant to prove the intention of both parties, according to verbal instructions that the plaintiff, the purchaser, should also pay the expense of making out the defendant's title. Ramsbottom v. Gosden, 1 V. & B. 165; 12 R. R. 207.

Where the plaintiff, in a suit for specific performance, had assigned over a lease to the defendant (the latter being a surety for the rent), in consideration of a parol agreement for an annuity, which was denied in the answer, but such agreement or consideration was not expressed in the assignment:—Held, not an objection to a decree for specific performance. Clifford v. Turrell, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 138; 14 L. J., Ch. 390.

Where persons sign a written agreement, and there has been no fraud or mistake, the written agreement binds at law and in equity according to its terms, although verbally a provision was agreed to which has not been inserted in the document, subject to this, that the defendant in equity may call upon the court to be neutral unless the plaintiff will consent to the omitted term. Martin v. Pycroft, 2 De G. M. & G. 785; 22 L. J., Ch. 94; 16 Jur. 1125; 1 W. R. 27, 58.

Where, therefore, the defendants agreed in writing to grant a plaintiff a lease at a specified rent and for a specified term, the plaintiff filed a claim for specific performance, stating the above agreement, and that it was further agreed that he should pay a premium of 200*l.*, which by his claim he offered to do:—Held, that this additional term did not render the Statute of Frauds a valid defence to the claim. Ib.

By the terms of a written agreement J. agreed to lease to W. a shop and premises which were to be built at a cost not to exceed 400*l.*, at the annual rental of 75*l.* J. expended 750*l.* in building the premises, and refused to grant a lease to W. at the annual rent of 75*l.* In an action by W. against J. for specific performance of the written agreement, the defendant set up as a defence a contemporaneous parol proviso to the agreement, to the effect that, if the outlay exceeded 400*l.*, the rent was to be raised in proportion:—Held, that, as such parol proviso did not contradict, but merely explained the terms of the written instrument, evidence of it was admissible; and, as the evidence proved that the plaintiff had agreed to such parol proviso, that the action must be dismissed. Williams v. Jones, 36 W. R. 573.

Different Estates.]—By a written agreement the plaintiff agreed to sell, and the defendant to purchase, the Leigh estate; and by the same agreement the defendant agreed to sell, and the plaintiff to purchase, another estate called the Haresfield estate, and it was not expressed that the two contracts were to be dependent on each other. The defendant was unable to make a good title to the Haresfield estate:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a specific performance of the contract as to the Leigh estate. Evidence aliunde was not admitted to shew that it was the real intention of the parties that the agreement should take effect on the basis of a mutual exchange. Croome v. Lediard, 2 Myl. & K. 251; 3 L. J., Ch. 98.

Quantity of Estate—Costs.]—Where an agreement is entered into for the sale of an estate, and the parties differ as to the quantity agreed to be sold, and the vendor files a bill for specific performance of the agreement as to part, and the vendee offers to complete the contract as to that part; but the vendor adds, as a condition, that the vendee shall pay the costs of the bill:—The court will refuse a decree for specific performance. Spence v. Mawson, 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 10.

New Agreement.]—W. D., by indenture, agreed to guarantee a certain composition to all the creditors of J. D. who should, before a fixed day, execute a release of their debts. The plaintiff, a creditor of J. D., did not execute by the time named, but insisted that this delay had taken place in consequence of an arrangement entered into between him and the agent of W. D. to allow him to postpone his execution of the release:—Held, that, the agreement being within the Statute of Frauds, any alteration in its terms must have been evidenced by writing; that, the condition in the original agreement not having been performed by the plaintiff, the agreement never took effect, so far as he was concerned; and that, in the absence of fraud, no parol agreement could be substituted. Emmet v. Dewhirst, 3 Mac. & G. 587; 21 L. J., Ch. 497; 15 Jur. 1115.

Reservation shewn on Contract, not on Receipt.]—A purchaser and his assignees sued for specific performance of a contract to sell land. The vendor pleaded that the contract, if any, reserved mines. The plaintiff denied any reservation. The contract signed by the purchaser contained a reservation; the receipt for deposit signed by the vendor stated the other terms, and was silent as to the reservation. Specific performance of the agreement with such reservation was decreed. Smith v. Wheatcroft, 47 L. J., Ch. 745; 9 Ch. D. 223; 39 L. T. 103; 27 W. R. 42.

b. Parol or Voluntary Agreements.

Voluntary Agreement.]—In general, a court of equity will not interpose in voluntary agreements made without fraud. Morris v. Burroughs, 1 Atk. 401. S. P., Wycherley v. Wycherley, 2 Eden, 177; Brownsmith v. Gibbourne, 2 Str. 738.

Parol Agreements in General.]—Under some circumstances, a mere parol agreement is binding, and will be carried into specific execution by a court of equity. Herbert (Lady) v. Powis (Earl), 1 Bro. P. C. 355.

Sale of Copyholds.]—Parol agreement for the sale of copyhold lands carried into execution. Borrett v. Gomesserra, Bunb. 94.

Testamentary Papers.]—Six documents were found amongst the papers of a testator written by his sister, and expressing a wish that he should benefit certain members of the family:—Held, that there was not sufficient evidence of a promise by the testator to enable the court to enforce specific performance of the sister's wish as against the testator's estate. Chester v. Urwick, 23 Beav. 407.

An unattested paper signed by A. and by him handed to B. stated that as a mark of his esteem and great friendship he agreed to allow B. 500*l.* a year, and that after his (A.'s) death he had in lieu thereof bequeathed to him 10,000*l.* B. took this document to C., who thereupon consented to the marriage of her daughter with B., such consent having hitherto been withheld on the ground of B.'s want of means. The marriage took place, but no settlement was made by B. on his wife. A. died about six months after signing the paper, having paid B. the first quarter of the allowance of 500*l.* a year. His will contained no provision whatever in favour of B.:—Held, that, assuming the consent of C. to her daughter's marriage with B. to have been given on the faith of the engagement contained in the paper, there was no such connection between A.'s promise or representation, and the consent given by C., as to sustain a claim against A.'s estate. Dashwood v. Jermyn, 12 Ch. D. 776; 27 W. R. 868.

Promise to Bequeath.]—One promised his brother's children that, if they would execute a deed, he would bequeath to them "at least as much as they would get under their father's will":—Held, that such promise, though verbal, constituted a binding obligation, and ought to be specifically performed. Ridley v. Ridley, 6 N. R. 11; 34 L. J., Ch. 462; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 475; 12 L. T. 481; 13 W. R. 763.

If a legatee promises a testator, that, in consideration of a disposition in her favour, she will do an act in favour of a third person, she who undertook to do the act must perform it. Drakeford v. Wilks, 3 Atk. 539.

Where a testator induced his niece to reside with him as his housekeeper on the verbal representation that he would leave her property by his will, which he accordingly caused to be prepared and executed, but subsequently by a codicil revoked, the court directed the trusts of the will to be performed. Laffus v. Maw, 3 Giff. 592; 32 L. J., Ch. 49; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 607; 6 L. T. 346; 10 W. R. 513.

A gift made by a revocable instrument in pursuance of a verbal representation, whereby the donee is influenced, and on the faith of which he confers a benefit on the donor, becomes irrevocable. Ib.

But see Maddison v. Alderson, supra, col. 1769.

Separation Deed.]—A husband, upon a treaty for separation from his wife, agreed with a trustee to pay his wife an annuity for her separate use, and also, during their separation, to permit their daughter to reside with, and be under the control of, and educated and supported by, her mother, in consideration whereof the wife (who was entitled under her marriage settlement to property, settled to her separate use without power of anticipation) agreed with the trustee to indemnify her husband in respect of any debt on her own account or on account of their daughter:—Held, first, that this was a voluntary agreement on the part of the husband, no consideration moving from the trustee, and the wife having no power to contract so as to bind property as to which she was restrained from anticipation. Walrond v. Walrond, 1 Johns. 18; 28 L. J., Ch. 97; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1099; 7 W. R. 33.

Held, secondly, that the agreement being voluntary on the part of the husband, the court could not decree specific performance of it by him, or order him to account in respect of arrears. Ib.

Will.]—An old gentleman, who had several children and grandchildren, had made and executed two wills, and disputes having arisen in the family about them, some of the oldest members of it entered into an agreement amongst themselves for a division of his real and personal estate. This was to be taken the next day to the testator for his approbation, and he was to be desired to cancel both wills. In the night the testator died. The personal property was divided according to the agreement, and a deed of covenant was executed with respect to the appropriation of the real estate, which deed the party, whose rights under the last will would be much diminished by it, understood to be a deed for carrying the first agreement into execution; but, in fact, the two instruments differed in many particulars:—Held, that the first agreement was only a recommendation to the testator, and could not be carried into effect in equity:—Held, also, that the second agreement differing from the first agreement, whilst it was understood to contain corresponding provisions, could not be carried into effect. No costs given, the defendant having secluded the testator from the other members of the family. Beastall v. Swain, Tam. 288.

Contract partly Executory.]—A voluntary contract in favour of a mother and her children:—Held, to be executory only as related to the children, and executed as to the mother, and therefore enforced for the benefit of the mother absolutely. Burrows v. Greenwood, 4 Y. & Coll. 251.

Bond.]—Though a parol agreement to give a bond might have been specifically enforced against an ancestor, yet, where terms of bond were not specified, court of equity will not enforce it against the heir. Brizeck v. Manners, 9 Mod. 284.

Use of House.]—The plaintiff moved his place of business to a house belonging to the defendant, his father-in-law, upon the faith of a parol promise by the defendant, that he should occupy the house rent-free during his life. During his occupation he spent money in repairs. The defendant brought an ejectment, and the plaintiff filed a bill for relief:—Held, that the change of the plaintiff's place of business did not constitute a sufficient consideration to support the parol agreement. Millard v. Harvey, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1167; 13 W. R. 125.

Held, also, that he was not entitled to any lien in respect of the moneys spent in repairs. Ib.

The plaintiff's wife, without his knowledge, asked the defendant to sell a field belonging to him. She paid the defendant 150*l.*, but he refused to sell the field, and nothing further was then done. A short time afterwards the defendant let the plaintiff into possession, and plaintiff, without knowing of the transaction between the defendant and his wife, continued in possession for ten years, without paying any rent. During this time no interest upon the 150*l.* was paid by the defendant:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence of a contract, and a decree was made for specific performance. Ib.

And see Ungley v. Ungley, and Coles v. Pilkington, supra, col. 1772.

Lease—Indemnity to Lessee.]—Specific performance decreed after a trial at law of parol undertaking, by the assignee of a lease, to indemnify the original lessee, the vendor, against the rents and covenants; a presumption arising from the nature of the transaction of the assignment being subject to the rents and covenants on the part of the lessee, although the conditions under which the lease was sold by auction expressed no such engagement. Pember v. Mathers, 1 Bro. C. C. 52; Dick. 550.

Grant of Underlease.]—A builder entered into a building agreement under which leases of plots of land were to be granted on completion of houses on them. He built a house on one plot, and verbally agreed on getting his lease to grant an underlease to M., who gave valuable consideration for the underlease, and entered into possession. Subsequently the builder, without the knowledge of M., obtained a lease of the house, and deposited it with the defendant to secure an advance made without notice of M.'s title. After this the builder, as agent for the plaintiff (who claimed under M.'s will), let the house to a tenant. Subsequently the builder granted to the defendant a legal mortgage to secure the previous advance:—Held, that the tenancy gave the defendant constructive notice at the time of taking the legal mortgage that the builder was a trustee for M., and that the legal estate was no protection to the defendant against the prior equity; and a decree was made for specific performance, but having regard to the negligence of M., without costs. Mumford v. Stohwasser, 43 L. J., Ch. 694; L. R. 18 Eq. 556; 30 L. T. 859; 22 W. R. 833.

Building Agreement.]—The plaintiff, a builder, agreed with the defendant, an owner of freehold land, to erect houses on the land on the terms of such agreement, and also of a parol understanding communicated to the plaintiff on behalf of the defendant prior to the signing of the principal agreement. A stipulation of the parol understanding was the advance of moneys in definite instalments by or through the defendant to the plaintiff for the purposes of the buildings. The plaintiff afterwards took leases of the unfinished houses and executed two successive mortgages to enable defendant to raise money on them as a security for the same purposes. The defendant failed to supply the plaintiff with the required funds as stipulated under the parol agreement, which, however, had been successively departed from:—Held, in a bill for specific performance of the parol understanding, together with damages, or at all events damages, that the plaintiff was entitled to neither. Thorpe v. Hosford, 20 W. R. 922.

See cases under PART PERFORMANCE IN GENERAL, supra, col. 1766; and INADEQUACY OF CONSIDERATION, infra, col. 1845.

c. Contracts Incapable of Complete Performance.

General Rule.]—It is fully settled that a contract cannot be specifically performed in part; it must be wholly performed or not at all. Ford v. Stuart, 15 Beav. 493; 21 L. J., Ch. 514. S. P., Wood v. Rowe, 2 Bligh. 595; 21 R. R. 119; Gervais v. Edwards, 2 Dr. & War. 80; 1 Con. & L. 242; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 555.

The courts will not decree a partial performance of articles; but when some parts appear unreasonable they always dismiss the bill. Goring v. Nash, 3 Atk. 189.

Accounts.]—The court will not direct an account as to a part of an agreement where it cannot decree a specific performance of the whole. Holmes v. Eastern Counties Ry., 3 K. & J. 675; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 737.

Ship.]—A firm of shipbuilders agreed to alter a vessel according to a specification; and in case of their failing to execute the alterations according to the agreement, the owners of the vessel should be at liberty to enter on the shipbuilders' yard, and themselves complete the alterations. The shipbuilders were adjudicated bankrupts before the vessel was completed:—Held, that the court could not specifically perform the whole agreement, and therefore would not restrain the trustee under the bankruptcy from selling the dock in which the vessel was lying, although the owners might thus be prevented from entering and completing the vessel. Merchants' Trading Co. v. Banner, 40 L. J., Ch. 515; L. R. 12 Eq. 18; 24 L. T. 861; 19 W. R. 707.

Partnership.]—Where the articles provided for the continuance of the partnership for twenty-one years, determinable upon the death of both, and also for the introduction of a relation of either of them, but made no provision for the death of one of them during the term, or for the amount of capital to be used:—Held, that the provisions for the continuance of the partnership during the remainder of the term could not be enforced against the representatives of the deceased partner. Downs v. Collins, 6 Hare, 418.

An owner of a coal wharf agreed to let it, and at the same time agreed to act as agent in the coal business for the tenant, and not to act for any other person:—Held, that these agreements were inseparable, and that specific performance of the agreement to let would not be decreed, because the court could not enforce performance on the other side. Ogden v. Fossick, 4 De G. F. & J. 426; 1 N. R. 143; 32 L. J., Ch. 73; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 288; 7 L. T. 515; 11 W. R. 128.

The agreement having been acted on for some time made no difference. Ib.

Sale of Estate and Timber.]—A contract for the purchase of copyhold land at a certain price, and the timber upon it at a specified valuation, enforced as one entire contract, although the vendor could not shew any licence from the lord or custom in the manor enabling the tenant of the manor or himself, or his assignees, to fell the timber. Crosse v. Keene, 9 Hare, 469.

Where, upon a contract for the sale of an estate, a separate and distinct contract is made for the sale of the timber upon it, the court will not enforce the latter contract, unless the vendor can give the purchaser such possession and dominion over the timber as will entitle him to fell and remove it. Crosse v. Lawrence, 9 Hare, 462; 21 L. J., Ch. 889; 16 Jur. 142.

Marriage Settlement.]—In a marriage settlement of the property of the wife, there was a covenant to convey after-acquired property of the wife to certain uses, including a life estate for her husband. After the death of the wife, the husband filed a bill against her heir-at-law, praying that a real estate to which she had become entitled during her lifetime might be conveyed to the uses of the settlement:—Held, that the right of the husband to a specific performance of part of the covenant drew with it the right to a specific performance of the whole, at least as against the heir of the settlor, whatever it might have done as against a purchaser for value. Davenport v. Bishopp, 1 Ph. 698. Affirming 2 Y. & C. C. C. 451; 12 L. J., Ch. 492; 7 Jur. 1077.

Construction of Railway.]—The defendants agreed with the plaintiffs to undertake to execute a branch railway according to the terms of a specification to be prepared by the plaintiffs' engineer for the time being, and to give a bond to secure the performance of their contract. The plaintiffs had at the date of the agreement a bill pending to enable them to make the branch, and holding them to complete within a specified time, on pain of a suspension of dividends on the capital of their entire line. The specification was prepared by the company's engineer, but prices having risen, the defendants repudiated their agreement. The plaintiffs then filed their bill for a specific performance of the agreement according to the terms of the specification, and to have the bond executed. On demurrer, it was held, first, that the agreement could not be enforced as regards the construction of the railway, because, from the nature of the works, it was an agreement the execution of which the court could not superintend, and the plaintiffs would have an adequate remedy in damages; secondly, that as the court could not superintend the general execution of the whole works, the execution of the bond would be a piecemeal performance of the agreement, which the court would not direct, and the demurrer was allowed. South Wales Ry. v. Wythes, 1 K. & J. 186. Affirmed 3 Eq. R. 153; 5 De G. M. & G. 880; 24 L. J., Ch. 87; 3 W. R. 133.

Whether in the simple case of an advance of money, with an agreement to execute a bond for its repayment, such an agreement would be executed in this court, quære. Ib.

Contract Partly Executed.]—The court will not decree specific performance of a contract unless it can enforce the whole; but the difficulty seems to be removed where the part which it is impossible to enforce has already been performed. Hope v. Hope, 22 Beav. 351; 8 De G. M. & G. 731; 26 L. J., Ch. 417; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 454; 4 W. R. 583.

Application to Parliament.]—By an agreement between three companies, A., B., and C., it was agreed that A. should purchase the other two railways when completed, and that, in the meantime, their capitals should be amalgamated for the purpose of such completion; and it was provided that all the three companies should concur in applications to parliament for the necessary powers to carry the agreement into effect. Powers to sell their railways were obtained, but before powers to amalgamate had been obtained by B. or C. a large majority of B.'s shareholders had become adverse to the project, so that no such act could be obtained; and the directors of that company, with the sanction of the shareholders, were proceeding to construct and dispose of their railway in a manner inconsistent with the agreement. On a bill by A. for specific performance and an injunction, an injunction was granted; it being clear that, for the completion of the purchase, no further parliamentary powers were necessary, and it being at least doubtful whether the defendants could be heard in this court to say that the plaintiffs were not entitled to the performance of that part of the agreement, merely because there was another part (viz., the provision for amalgamation) which required additional parliamentary powers to give effect to it, which powers they refused to apply for. G. W. Ry. v. Birmingham and Oxford Jn. Ry., 2 Ph. 597; 5 Railw. Cas. 241; 17 L. J., Ch. 243; 12 Jur. 106.

Accessory Agreement.]—Where the principal agreement cannot be enforced, the specific performance of the accessory agreement will not be decreed. Scottish North Eastern Ry. v. Stewart, 3 Macq. H. L. 382.

The court will not compel specific performance of an agreement by a company to employ a person as their broker; and the contract being at an end, that which is merely an adjunct to the principal relief sought—viz., an injunction to restrain the company from advertising, in breach of a stipulation contained in the agreement, the name of any other person as their broker, will not be granted. Brett v. East India and London Shipping Co., 10 L. T. 187; 12 W. R. 596.

If an agreement is capable of being carried out as a whole, the court will decree specific performance, although there may be collateral subordinate provisions which would not be enforced independently. Blackett v. Bates, 2 H. & M. 270; 34 L. J., Ch. 515; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 500; 12 L. T. 44; 13 W. R. 736.

Although a court of equity will not make a decree for the specific performance of an agreement to repair a railway simpliciter, it will do so if the agreement forms a collateral part only of a larger agreement, and the relation of lessee and lessor has been created between the parties. Ib.

An agent of a railway company, without direct authority, agreed to sell to the plaintiff a piece of land of the company at a certain price per acre. Some of the terms were, that the company should lay down a branch railway to the land; that the plaintiff, who was going to erect ironworks on the land, should use the company's railway in preference to others. The company's surveyor measured the land, the company's engineer laid down the branch railway to it, the plaintiff was let into possession, and his machinery was brought in the company's waggons to the land, and there deposited. After this the company refused to complete the sale:—Held, that the stipulations as to the use of the railway by the plaintiff did not render a decree for specific performance improper; for that the insertion of a covenant to that effect would effectuate what the parties must be held to have contemplated. Wilson v. West Hartlepool Ry., 2 De G. J. & S. 475; 5 H. L. Cas. 40; 5 N. R. 289; 34 L. J., Ch. 241; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 124; 11 L. T. 692; 13 W. R. 361.

Held, though the agent contracted without sufficient authority, the company had by its acts ratified the contract, and it was binding on them though not executed under seal nor according to 7 & 8 Vict. c. 16, s. 97. Ib.

Separate Terms.]—Parts of an agreement can be separately enforced if an intention to separate the parts appears in the agreement. Odessa Tramways Co. v. Mendel, 47 L. J., Ch. 505; 8 Ch. D. 235; 38 L. T. 731; 26 W. R. 887—C. A.

The fact that an agreement is carried out by two instruments affords a presumption that the contracts in the two instruments are separable. Ib.

By a written agreement the plaintiff agreed to sell, and the defendant agreed to purchase, upon the terms stated, a certain property called L.; and by the same agreement the defendant agreed to sell, and the plaintiff agreed to purchase, another estate called H., and it was not expressed that the two contracts were to be dependent on each other. The defendant was unable to make a good title to H.:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a specific performance of the contract as to L. Croome v. Lediard, 2 Myl. & K. 251; 3 L. J., Ch. 98.

When the conditions of an agreement between landlord and builder, whereby the landlord agrees to grant leases of successive plots of land as the houses upon each of them are built to a certain stage, are by the terms of the contract separable, there is no rule of equity to prevent them from being separately enforced. Wilkinson v. Clements, 42 L. J., Ch. 38; L. R. 8 Ch. 96; 27 L. T. 834.

Waiver of Part.]—Plaintiff may have a specific performance in part, waiving the rest, and the defendant cannot object. Mestaer v. Gillespie, 11 Ves. 640; 8 R. R. 261.

Impossibility of Performance.]—Difficulty of decreeing a partial performance of a contract where a vendor has not the power of fully performing it. Graham v. Oliver, 3 Beav. 124. And see Williamson v. Wooton, 3 Drew. 210.

Where a person contracts to grant a certain interest, which it afterwards appears he cannot carry into execution to the extent agreed on, yet the grant shall be available as far as his interest will permit. Stapleton v. Stapleton, 1 Atk. 2.

Performance becoming possible.]—A defendant agreed to become tenant to the plaintiff, with a right to lease for a term when he desired it. He wished to take possession speedily. At the date of the contract the plaintiff was unable to make the lease, but after bill filed, and before the hearing, he acquired power to do so:—Held, that he could not enforce specific performance. Forrer v. Nash, 6 N. R. 361; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 789; 14 W. R. 8. And see Carne v. Mitchell, supra, col. 1764.

Tenants in Common.]—Though specific performance might have been decreed against original parties holding as tenants in common, yet where an alteration prevented a decree as to one moiety, the court would not direct a performance as to the other, the contract being entire, and an execution of half of it inadequate to the prime object. Att.-Gen. v. Day, 1 Ves. Sen. 218.

Tenant from Year to Year.]—In an agreement for the purchase of an estate, one of the stipulations was, that the vendor should be tenant from year to year to the purchaser:—Held, that the inability of the vendor to perform this stipulation by reason of embarrassments of which the purchaser must have had some notice was no bar to the specific performance of the contract. Lord v. Stephens, 1 Y. & C. 222.

Sale at a Valuation.]—A contract for the sale of an estate for 24,000*l.*, and that certain furniture and other articles on the estate, the value of which was about 2,000*l.*, should be valued by valuers mutually agreed upon, and that the purchaser would take a part of the furniture and articles at that valuation. The vendor refused to appoint a valuer, and to complete. A decree made at the suit of the purchaser for specific performance of the contract, except so far as it related to the furniture and articles. Richardson v. Smith, 39 L. J., Ch. 877; L. R. 5 Ch. 648; 19 W. R. 81.

Building Lease.]—Under an agreement to grant a building lease, including a covenant to insure in a particular office in the joint names of lessor and lessee, and to give the lessee an option to purchase for 500*l.*, the lessee built a house and insured in his own name only, and in the wrong office. The lessor brought ejectment, and the lessee thereupon claimed to exercise his option of purchase, and specific performance of that part of the agreement was decreed. Green v. Low, 22 Beav. 625; 4 W. R. 669.

Agreement in part legal.]—Where there is an agreement to make the tithe rent-charge payable by the tenant, and the agreement rests in fieri, the court may, in favour of the intention, add the amount of the rent charge to the rent. Semble, where parties enter into an agreement for the letting of the lands, which is legal, to a certain extent, to which extent they mean that the agreement should be executed by an actual lease; and stipulate that something further, not malum in se, but which is merely prohibited, should rest in understanding, the court will decree the performance of the agreement as far as it is capable of legal execution. Carolan v. Brabazon, 3 Jo. & Lat. 200; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 124. And see cases infra, col. 1802.

d. Foreign Contracts.

Lands Abroad.]—Specific performance decreed of articles executed in England concerning boundaries of two provinces in America. Penn v. Baltimore, 1 Ves. Sen. 444.

Original jurisdiction as to bounds of proprietary governments is in the king in council; but by the contract of parties it is brought within this jurisdiction. Id. 446.

The court has jurisdiction to carry out an agreement entered into by persons in England and relating to lands abroad, although such agreement is not made in a form which by the foreign law would affect the land. Sichel v. Raphael, 3 N. R. 662; 34 L. J., Ch. 106; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1165; 11 L. T. 433; 13 W. R. 191—L.C.

Subject-matter in the Jurisdiction.]—The court will specifically enforce against a foreigner a contract of sale made abroad, if the subject-matter of the contract is within its jurisdiction. Hart v. Herwig, 42 L. J., Ch. 457. Affirmed L. R. 8 Ch. 860; 29 L. T. 47; 21 W. R. 663.

Therefore, when a contract was made abroad for the sale of a foreign vessel to be delivered in this country, the court granted an interim injunction to restrain the removal of the ship from an English port, allowing substituted service of the notice of motion on the captain. Ib.

Foreign Marriage Contract.]—A contract made in France, on the marriage of two people of that nation, who afterwards take refuge and live in England, shall be carried into a specific execution here, although the terms of it refer to the custom of Paris. Foubert v. Twist, 1 Bro. P. C. 129; Pre. Ch. 207.

Lien on Property Abroad.]—A suit between parties residing here to enforce a lien on immovable property situate out of the jurisdiction requires that some special state of circumstances should exist, in order to enable the court to give any relief. Norris v. Chambres, 29 Beav. 246. Affirmed 3 De G. F. & J. 583.

Contract of Foreign Government.]—An English court of equity has no jurisdiction to enforce the contracts of a foreign government against the property of such government in England. Smith v. Wequelin, 38 L. J., Ch. 465; L. R. 8 Eq. 198; 20 L. T. 724; 17 W. R. 904.

When the government of a state contracts a loan in another country, the contract is governed by the law of the state whose government contracts the loan, and not by the law of the country in which the contract is made. Ib.

4. Of Particular Contracts.

a. Agreements to Refer.

General Rule.]—Bill for specific performance of agreement to refer to arbitration will not lie. Street v. Rigby, 6 Ves. 818. S. P., Gourlay v. Somerset, 19 Ves. 431; 13 R. R. 234.

Specific performance of agreement to refer to arbitration, or to substitute master for arbitrators, refused. Agar v. Macklew, 2 Sim. & S. 418; 4 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 16.

—— Death of Arbitrator.]—Although a court of equity will not in general decree the specific performance of an agreement to refer to arbitration, or, on the death of an arbitrator, substitute the master for the arbitrator, yet, where matters of account have been referred to arbitration, which fails by the death of the arbitrator, a party who refuses to supply the defect, by naming a new arbitrator, will receive no relief from a court of equity, except upon the terms of his doing equity; and those terms may consist in his consenting to the accounts being taken by the master. Cheslyn v. Dalby, 2 Y. & C. 170.

Conditional Reference.]—The court refused specific performance of a contract containing a reference to arbitration in the event of the defendant suffering damage by the execution of the contract. Gervais v. Edwards, 2 Dr. & War. 80; 1 Con. & L. 242; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 555.

Suit Instituted after Award Made.]—Effect of an agreement for a reference to arbitration of a dispute between a vendor and purchaser as to certain terms of the contract, and of an award thereupon, in a suit subsequently instituted for the specific performance of the contract. Clay v. Rufford, 8 Hare, 290; 19 L. J., Ch. 295; 14 Jur. 803.

Where no Arbitration.]—A contract for the sale of land provided that A. and B., or their nominees, should have power to decide any question as to certain houses to be built thereon. There having been no decision, specific performance was refused. Tillett v. Charing Cross Bridge Co., 26 Beav. 419.

b. Awards.

Decree made.]—Award ordered to be performed. Reignolds v. Latham, Cary, 106.

Performance of award enforced by subpœna. Baker v. Baker, Cary, 57.

Suit to have award by assent decreed; both parties must have notice. Wakefield v. Hawson, Cary, 64.

Award not Binding.]—An award, though extra-judicial, and not binding in strictness of law, yet decreed to be performed in specie. Norten v. Mascall, 2 Vern. 24.

Award not legally binding is sometimes, in cases of part performance, enforced in equity, but not without such part performance. Bishop v. Webster, 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 51.

Acquiescence.]—If the terms of an agreement are to be ascertained by an award, being so ascertained, it shall be specifically performed; not if the acts done towards executing it are not valid at law, unless there has been acquiescence or part performance. Blundell v. Brettarch, 17 Ves. 241.

—— Parties not Agreeing.]—Bill will not lie to carry an award into execution where the parties to the submission do not acquiesce in it, nor agree afterwards to have it executed; but it must be enforced at law. Thompson v. Noel, 1 Atk. 62.

Held, that, although one party had to some extent acted on the award, there had not been such an acquiescence as to justify the court in enforcing it against him, no one appearing to have been misled by his acts. Nickels v. Hancock, 7 De G. M. & G. 300; 3 Eq. R. 689; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1149.

A bill lies for specific performance of award where party submitting has received purchase-money. Hall v. Hardy, 3 P. Wms. 187.

Unreasonable Terms.]—The specific performance of an award may be compelled on the principle that the award only ascertains the terms of a previous agreement between the parties; the court considering an award as the decision of judges chosen by the parties, will not examine whether it is unreasonable. Wood v. Griffith, 1 Swanst. 43; 1 Wils. 34; 18 R. R. 18.

Parol Agreement for Lease.]—In the course of the proceedings before an arbitrator the parties agree by parol that arbitrator shall determine as to a lease to be granted; such an agreement is within the Statute of Frauds, and the award, having directed a lease to be made, cannot be enforced. Walters v. Morgan, 2 Cox, 369.

Submission made Rule of Court.]—The court of chancery has jurisdiction to entertain a suit for specific performance of an award, although the submission has been made a rule of a court of law. Blackett v. Bates, 35 L. J., Ch. 324; L. R. 1 Ch. 117; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 151; 13 L. T. 656; 14 W. R. 319. And see 12 Jur. 874, n.

The award was made in June, 1863; a bill for specific performance was filed in July, 1864; the interval was filled up by legal proceedings, which the plaintiff could not accelerate, whereby he sought to set aside the award. Semble, such circumstances alone disentitled the plaintiff to specific performance. Ib.

Upon a reference by order of this court, the award may be enforced before it has been made a rule of court. Wood v. Taunton, 11 Beav. 449; 18 L. J., Ch. 207; 13 Jur. 954.

Award of arbitrators enforced in equity, although the submission to arbitration was to be made a rule of a court of common law. Hawksworth v. Brammall, 5 Myl. & Cr. 281.

The ground on which the court of chancery interferes to decree specific performance of an award not made a rule of that court is, that the award is an agreement between the parties to the submission, and that most, if not all, of the principles regulating specific performance are applicable. If, therefore, the arbitrator exceeds his authority, specific performance cannot be decreed, as the award, to that extent, does not embody an agreement between the parties. Nickels v. Hancock, supra.

Semble, the court cannot in such a case separate that part of the award which cannot be enforced, and decree specific performance of the rest. Ib.

Award as to Part of Matters.—Although an award of part of matters referred may be good, equity will not enforce it, unless of all matters referred. Hide v. Pettit, 1 Ch. Ca. 185.

Uncertainty.] — Uncertainty in award or valuation is ground for refusing specific performance. Hopcraft v. Hickman, 2 Sim. & S. 130 ; 3 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 43.

An award which leaves some of the questions undecided, or leaves in doubt whether some of the questions have been decided, cannot be enforced. Wakefield v. Llanelly Ry. and Dock Co., 11 Jur. (N.S.) 456; 12 L. T. 509 ; 13 W. R. 823.

To pay Money.]—Difference between award to pay money, and to do anything collateral, and why a bill may be proper only to compel specific performance of the latter. Hall v. Hardy, supra.

Bond.]—Bond put in suit for performance of an award stayed by injunction. Knight v. Hartwell, Cary, 104.

Charity Lease.]—The jurisdiction to give effect to an award confirmed by a decree of the court in the case of a charity is doubtful, but the renewal of a lease upon the terms of the award, having been twice directed by the court, was again enforced. Att.-Gen. v. Clements, Turn. & R. 58.

c. Building Agreements.

Preliminary Agreement.]—The court will not decree the specific performance of a preliminary building agreement, nor give damages for the breach of such an agreement. Wood v. Silcock, 50 L. T. 251 ; 32 W. R. 845.

Work Defined.]—The court has jurisdiction to enforce the specific performance of a contract by a defendant to do defined work upon his property, in the performance of which the plaintiff has a material interest, and which is not capable of adequate compensation in damages. Storer v. G. W. Ry., 2 Y. & C. C. C. 48 ; 3 Railw. Cas. 106 ; 12 L. J., Ch. 65.

Specific performance of an agreement to build may be decreed if sufficiently certain ; but a general covenant to lay out a certain sum in a building of a certain value cannot be so executed. Mosely v. Virgin, 3 Ves. 134.

Though the court will not, as a rule, specifically enforce contracts to build or repair, it will do so in cases where the contract for building is in its nature defined. Hepburn v. Leather, 50 L. T. 660.

In a suit for specific performance of an agreement, vague in its language, a court of equity, having regard to the terms of such agreement, will consider the surrounding circumstances, and conduct of the parties in dealing with the property comprised in it, in the interval between the making of the agreement and the commencement of the suit for its enforcement. Oxford v. Provand, 5 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 150 ; L. R. 2 P. C. 135.

P. & Co. entered into an agreement with O. & Co. for the transfer to them of the unexpired term of a lease held by P. & Co. of land and houses at Shanghai, and to build or finish certain houses thereon, to proceed with the building at once, to consult O. & Co.'s wishes in building the houses then in progress, and in building other houses not then commenced. Possession was given, and the buildings altered by P. & Co. at O. & Co.'s instance :—Held, decreeing specific performance of such agreement, that the terms of the agreement expressed with sufficient clearness the intentions of the parties. Ib.

Held, also, that that part of the agreement which provided that the wishes of O. & Co. should be consulted in erecting the buildings was not so vague or indefinite as to render the contract impossible to be enforced. Ib.

To Build House.]—Specific performance of a contract to build a house. Pembroke v. Thorpe, 3 Swanst. 437 ; 19 R. R. 254.

Plaintiff's father, seised in fee of land, articles to pay J. 1,000*l.* to build a house on the premises, and dies before the house is built. The plaintiff, the heir, may compel the builder to build it, and his father's executor to pay for it. Holt v. Holt, 2 Vern. 322 ; 1 Ch. Ca. 190.

Proceedings taken towards the fulfilment of a contract for the erection of a certain building may enable the court to decree a specific performance of the contract. Price v. Penzance Corporation, 4 Hare, 509.

A lessor agreed with the lessee to grant a lease of certain specified property if within a specified time the lessee erected certain specified buildings ; the time having nearly expired and the buildings not having been begun :—Held, at the suit of the lessor, that the court could not decree specific performance of this contract. Female Orphan Asylum v. Waterlow, 16 W. R. 1102.

Building Lease.]—An agreement for a lease containing a stipulation that the lessees should execute certain building works, and that the lessors should advance 1,000*l.* on mortgage to a company, was executed by the directors and secretary of the company as lessees :—Held, that the directors and secretary who signed the agreement were personally liable, and decree made for specific performance of the agreement to take a lease, but specific performance of the building stipulations refused, and an inquiry as to damages granted in respect thereof. Kay v. Johnson, 2 H. & M. 118.

Specific performance of agreement to grant building lease decreed generally, though plaintiff had erected brewhouse on land, injurious to lessor's property. Gorton v. Smart, 1 Sim. & S. 66 ; 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 36.

Deviations from Plan.]—Small deviations from a plan agreed upon for building not material ; otherwise if obstinate or corrupt. Craven v. Tickell, 1 Ves. J. 60.

S. agreed to erect a house according to a plan to be approved by the lessors, and to the regulations of the Metropolitan Building Act. A plan was sanctioned by the lessors, but the Metropolitan Board of Works objected to it. Decree for specific performance of the agreement modified so as to make it conformable to the regulations of the Metropolitan Building Acts. Cubitt v. Smith, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1123 ; 11 L. T. 298.

Party-wall — Award.] — The court will not decree specific performance of a building contract which provides that a party-wall shall be pulled down and rebuilt, after the adjoining owner has had the matter referred to arbitration under the Metropolitan Building Act, and an award has been made declaring that it is not necessary to take down such party-wall. Seawell v. Webster, 29 L. J., Ch. 71 ; 7 W. R. 691.

Rebuilding.]—Where a man in a building lease covenants to new-build the messuages, rebuilding some and repairing others is not sufficient, for the lessee must rebuild the whole ; neither is pulling down and rebuilding the fore and back fronts a rebuilding within the covenant ; upon such a covenant the lessors are entitled to a specific performance. Sed secus of a covenant to repair. In this case, however, the court, instead of decreeing a specific performance, left it to a jury to ascertain the damages sustained, and directed an issue accordingly. London (City of) v. Nash, 3 Atk. 512 ; 1 Ves. Sen. 12.

Repairing Lease.]—Agreement to grant a lease of copyhold premises for twenty-one years, and to put the same in repair, there being no evidence that to grant such lease would work a forfeiture, or that the licence of the lord could not be obtained :—Decreed, to be specifically performed. Paxton v. Newton, 2 Sm. & G. 437.

Though the court will not ordinarily decree specific performance of an agreement to repair, it is the habit of the court to decree specific performance of agreements involving the execution of leases or other instruments containing covenants to repair. Ib.

Covenant to Supply Water.]—A purchaser of a piece of land with a well or spring upon it covenanted with the vendor, who retained land adjoining intended to be disposed of for building sites, to erect a pump and reservoir, and to supply water from the well to all houses built on the vendor's land :—Held, that, though the covenant was not one of which the court would decree specific performance directly, as being for the construction of works which the court could not superintend, it could be enforced indirectly by an injunction restraining the defendant from allowing the work to remain unperformed. Cooke v. Chilcott, 3 Ch. D. 694 ; 34 L. T. 207.

d. Debts.

Sale of Debts.]—Court will not decree specific performance of contract for purchase of debt. Wright v. Bell, 5 Price, 325.

Specific performance decreed, at suit of vendor, of contract for sale of debts proved under commission of bankruptcy. Adderly v. Dixon, 1 Sim. & S. 607 ; 2 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 103 ; 24 R. R. 254.

Assignment to Creditor.]—A. stipulated that he would transfer and assign all his property to B., as his chief creditor, on B.'s discharging A. from all obligations then existing relating to the business, and particularly a debt due to a creditor, from which B. was to obtain a release :—Held, that A. had a right to a specific performance of the agreement in a court of equity. Clowes v. Garraway, 7 L. T. 243.

Substitution of Parties in Contract.]—The payee of two promissory notes being about to sue the maker, the brother of the maker agreed to pay 200*l.* to the payee, in trust for E., or 6*l.* 10*s.* per quarter, so long as the 200*l.* should be unpaid, so that the notes should be suspended and rendered inoperative so long as the brother continued to pay the 6*l.* 10*s.* a quarter to the payee, and on payment of the 200*l.* all claim on the notes to cease, and the same to be given up :—Held, that the brother was entitled to the specific performance of the agreement in equity, on the ground that this court, by modifying its decree, could give to all parties the benefit of the agreement which a court of law could not do. Beech v. Ford, 7 Hare, 208.

Verbal Agreement to Pay.]—The agent of a railway company made a verbal agreement with the contractor that if he would build on land of the company certain cottages and would leave them for the use of the company, then the company would pay him 5,000*l.* The cottages were built, and when the railway was completed the contractor left them on the land, and the agent of the company made an agreement with the contractor that he should be paid 500*l.* a year for the cottages by way of rent, with an option to the company to purchase them for 5,000*l.* This agreement was confirmed by a resolution of the board of directors. The company paid the 500*l.* a year some years, and then refused to pay :—Held, that the claim of the contractor being simply for payment of money could not be enforced in the Court of Chancery. Crampton v. Varna Ry., 41 L. J., Ch. 817 ; L. R. 7 Ch. 562 ; 20 W. R. 713.

e. Chattels.

Remedy at Law Inadequate.]—The principle of courts of equity in regard to cases of contracts concerning mere chattels is, that where courts of law, by awarding damages, can give adequate compensation, courts of equity will not interfere. Therefore that principle cannot apply where the defaulting party has become insolvent ; and the court of review acts on this principle. Masterman, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & C. 751 ; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 209 ; 4 L. J., Bk. 54. S. P., Withy v. Cottle, 1 Sim. & S. 174 ; Turn. & R. 78 ; 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 117. And see 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 5.

Chattels have a Peculiar Value.]—The court will enforce specific performance of a contract for the sale of a chattel where pecuniary damages would not be a sufficient compensation for the breach of the contract, as where the chattel is of unusual distinction and curiosity, and of doubtful value. Falcke v. Gray, 4 Drew. 651 ; 29 L. J., Ch. 28 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 645 ; 7 W. R. 535.

But where the contract, although not actually fraudulent, was one in which the parties were not on equal footing, the plaintiff knowing, and the purchaser being ignorant of the value of the thing sold, and the price appeared to be inadequate, the court refused relief. Ib.

Where a chattel, from being used in business or otherwise, has a peculiar value, the court will entertain a bill for an injunction to restrain its sale or detention. North v. G. N. Ry., 2 Giff. 64 ; 29 L. J., Ch. 301 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 244 ; 1 L. T. 510.

And see Pusey v. Pusey, 1 Vern. 273 ; Somerset (Duke) v. Cookson, 3 P. Wms. 389 ; 2 Eq. Ca. Abr. 164.

Specific Chattels.]—Specific performance of agreement, made on dissolution of partnership, that peculiar book used in trade should become exclusive property of one of the partners, and that copy of it should be delivered to other, will be decreed. Lingen v. Simpson, 1 Sim. & S. 600 ; 24 R. R. 249.

If there has been an engagement to appropriate to a certain individual a particular cargo, or a particular part of a larger cargo; in either of these cases equity will interfere to enforce performance of the engagement. Hoare v. Dresser, 7 H. L. Cas. 290.

Although the court will not in general entertain a bill for specific performance of an agreement simply for the delivery of specific chattels, yet specific performance of an agreement of which one clause provides for the delivery of specific chattels will not of necessity be refused. Marsh v. Milligan, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 979.

Trust.]—A court of equity will not enforce the specific performance of ordinary contracts for the sale of chattels, unless there is something very special in the nature of the contract. On the other hand, if a trust is created, the circumstance that the subject-matter is a personal chattel will not prevent the court from enforcing the due execution of the trust. Pooley v. Budd, 14 Beav. 34.

Sale of Goods for Export only.]—D. & Co. are manufacturers of fabrics, of which the patterns are supplied by their own artists. Every spring and autumn they introduce new patterns into the English market; and after the season is over they are in the habit of selling their surplus stock at a reduced price, for the purpose of having it shipped to foreign countries, where its sale could not injuriously affect the home trade of the plaintiffs. G., the plaintiff's agent, sold some surplus stock to P., at Manchester, upon the express agreement that the goods were to be shipped by P. to the United States and were not to be sold in the home market. Upon a bill for specific performance, and praying for an injunction to restrain P. from selling the goods in England:—Held, that the evidence of the contract was insufficient, and the proper remedy in such a case is at law. Dollfus v. Pickford, 2 W. R. 204.

Held, that an injunction will not be granted to restrain breach of agreement where damages at law are adequate. Id. 220.

Instalments.]—Semble, that the court will not decree specific performance of a contract for delivery of a chattel by instalments where mutual duties of a complicated nature are imposed upon the parties. Mere vicinity and convenience of situation will not induce the court to decree specific performance of a contract for supply of goods. Observations upon Buxton v. Lister (3 Atk. 383). Pollard v. Clayton, 1 K. & J. 462; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 342; 3 W. R. 349.

Coals.]—A contract to sell a quantity of coal to be raised and delivered is a simple contract for the sale of chattels, and will not be enforced in equity, damages to be ascertained by a jury being the proper remedy. Fothergill v. Rowland, 43 L. J., Ch. 252; L. R. 17 Eq. 132; 29 L. T. 414; 22 W. R. 42.

Cargo.]—Property in a cargo transferred by bill of sale signed by vendor and vendee; but by a new agreement signed by them before they parted, that it shall be sold and accounted for by the factor for vendor, it is reduced to agreement, and therefore remedy in equity. Weymouth v. Boyer, 1 Ves. J. 416.

Ship.]—An agreement was entered into for the sale of a ship to A. and B. Possession of the ship was delivered to the purchasers by the vendors. On a bill filed by the vendors against B., who had become the sole owner of the ship by purchase from A.'s assignee, the court held that it had jurisdiction, and decreed an account and payment of the unpaid purchase-money by B., or a resale of the ship in default of payment in a limited time. Lynn v. Chaters, 2 Keen, 521.

Barge and Stores.]—Specific performance of a contract for the sale of a barge, stores, &c., decreed in equity upon a claim. Claringbould v. Curtis, 21 L. J., Ch. 541.

Timber.]—Articles by a guardian for sale of timber have been carried into execution by a court of equity. Clavering v. Clavering, Moseley, 224; Buxton v. Lister, 3 Atk. 383.

In a contract for the purchase of timber, time is of the essence of the contract; and if, by difficulties improperly raised by the vendor, the timber is prevented from being felled and carried away at the time limited by the agreement, the court will not enforce the performance of the contract. Arkwright v. Stoveld, 3 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 49.

Copyright.]—A court of equity has jurisdiction to enforce specific performance of an agreement relating to a copyright. Thombleson v. Black, 1 Jur. 198.

Bill of Sale.]—In an action to enforce specific performance of a parol agreement to execute a bill of sale of personal chattels, upon an ex parte motion, there being evidence of immediate danger of the chattels in question being disposed of, an order was made appointing the plaintiff (without security) interim receiver for fourteen days, or until a receiver should be appointed under a reference to chambers. The plaintiff undertook to deal with the property only under the direction of the court, and to abide by any order which the court might make. Taylor v. Eckersley, 45 L. J., Ch. 527; 2 Ch. D. 302; 34 L. T. 637; 24 W. R. 450—C. A. And see Donnell v. Bennett, infra, col. 1807.

f. Loans.

Agreement to Advance Money.]—A court of equity will not decree specific performance of a mere agreement to advance money. Larios v. Gurety, L. R. 5 P. C. 346.

A court of equity will not decree the specific performance of a contract to borrow a sum of money on mortgage. Rogers v. Challis, 27 Beav. 175; 29 L. J., Ch. 240; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 334.

Partnership.]—An agreement to join the firm as partner, or otherwise to lend the firm 5,000*l.* for two years on the acceptances of the firm, is not a contract which can be specifically performed. Sichel v. Mosenthal, 30 Beav. 371; 31 L. J., Ch. 386; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 275; 5 L. T. 784; 10 W. R. 283.

A bill does not lie for specific performance of a partnership agreement, where the sole relief sought is the payment of a sum of money, for which there is a remedy by action. Bagnell v. Edwards, Ir. R. 10 Eq. 215.

Payment by Instalments.]—A court of equity will not decree specific performance of an agreement, to pay in a certain event, which has happened, an annual sum by quarterly instalments.

Brough v. Oddy, 1 Russ. & M. 55; Tam. 215; 8 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 23.

Where Remedy at Law.]—The court will not grant specific performance of an agreement for a purely money demand, the amount of which, if ascertained, the plaintiff would be entitled to recover by an action at law. Ord v. Johnston, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1063; 4 W. R. 37.

Bond to secure Repayment.]—Whether in the simple case of an advance of money with an agreement to execute a bond for its repayment, such an agreement would be executed in this court, quære. South Wales Ry. v. Wythes, 1 K. & J. 186. S. C., on appeal, 3 Eq. R. 153; 24 L. J., Ch. 87; 3 W. R. 133.

Absolute Conveyance.]—Where a person advancing money refuses after an absolute conveyance to execute a defeasance, the court will relieve. Walker v. Walker, 2 Atk. 100.

g. Bonds.

To Convey Lands.]—A bond, conditioned to convey lands for money received, is considered in equity as articles, and the condition shall be performed in specie. The obligee having been in possession twenty years, need not prove the money paid. Anon., Moseley, 37.

To Lease.]—Under a marriage settlement tenant for life had power to grant leases for ninety-nine years in possession. Twenty-eight years after the marriage the husband gave a bond conditioned for the granting a lease for ninety-nine years, upon the expiration of a subsisting lease. As soon as the subsisting lease determined, the obligee of the bond entered into possession, and for some years paid rent:—Held, that the representatives of the obligee were entitled to a decree for specific performance of the agreement contained in the bond. Butler v. Powys, 2 Coll. C. C. 156; 9 Jur. 959. And see South Wales Ry. v. Wythes, supra.

h. Stock and Shares.

Transfer of Stock.]—No specific performance of agreement for transfer of stock. Nutbrown v. Thornton, 10 Ves. 161; Mason v. Armitage, 13 Ves. 37; 9 R. R. 131.

A bill in equity will not lie for specific performance of an agreement to transfer stock; secus, where the thing contracted for may be particularly commodious to the party. Cud or Cuddee v. Rutter, 1 P. Wms. 570; 5 Vin. Abr. 538, pl. 21.

A bill in equity will not lie for specific performance of covenant to transfer South Sea stock. Ib.

On a bill to compel specific performance of an agreement to transfer 5,000*l.* York Buildings stock at 7*l.* 5*s.* per cent., demurrer overruled, for the case might be attended with such consequences as would make it just to decree specific performance of the parties' own agreement, or at least to pay the difference. Colt v. Netervill, 2 P. Wms. 304.

In 1814 the Grand Canal Company created certain stock with peculiar advantages to the subscribers, the legality of which was doubtful. In 1831 they empowered the court of directors to exchange for new stock such stock of 1814 as the holders thereof were willing to bring in, upon certain terms. Upon a bill filed for specific performance of the terms of the resolution of 1814 relief refused on the ground that the plaintiff's conduct might have induced other stockholders of 1814 to accept of the arrangement proposed by the resolution of 1831. Corballis v. Grand Canal Co., 3 Ir. Eq. R. 29.

Bill for a specific performance of a contract for 1,000*l.* York Buildings stock, at 105*l.* per cent., dismissed, for equity will not execute these contracts, but leave the parties to their remedy at law. Dorison v. Westbrook, 5 Vin. Abr. 510, pl. 22.

If an agreement or contract for South Sea stock be executed, the court will not break into it; if it be executory, the plaintiff must seek his remedy at law. Cappur v. Harris, Bunb. 135.

—— Delivery of Certificates.]—Bill will lie for specific performance of agreement to purchase government stock, where it prays delivery of certificates which give legal title to stock. Doleret v. Rothschild, 1 Sim. & S. 590; 2 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 125; 24 R. R. 243.

—— Account of Dividends.]—One is bound to transfer 300*l.* East India stock before the 30th September then next; though the stock was much risen, yet the defendant decreed to transfer the 300*l.* stock in specie, and to account for all dividends from the time it ought to be transferred. Gardner v. Pullen, 2 Vern. 394.

Agreement to take Shares.]—The defendant agreed in writing to take shares in a joint-stock company (which were transferable), "and to execute the deed of settlement when required." Specific performance was refused. Sheffield Gas Consumers' Co. v. Harrison, 17 Beav. 294.

Directors of a company proposed to a shareholder to relieve him from further liability, on his consenting to an absolute forfeiture. He assented, but the directors, having afterwards discovered that he was in good circumstances, refused to complete:—The court declined to compel the directors specifically to perform the contract. Harris v. North Devon Ry., 20 Beav. 384.

The court will decree a specific performance of an agreement for the sale of a certain number of shares in a railway company. Duncuft v. Albrecht, 12 Sim. 189.

Where there is a clear contract to accept shares, and the remedy at law is shewn to be inadequate, the court will decree specific performance. Oriental Inland Steam Co. v. Briggs, 2 J. & H. 625.

But where the validity of a contract to accept the shares was doubtful, and the inadequacy of the legal remedy not clearly made out, and there having been an unexplained delay of two years, a demurrer to a bill for specific performance of a contract to accept shares was allowed, with costs. Ib. S. C., 4 De G. F. & J. 191; 31 L. J., Ch. 241; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 201; 5 L. T. 477; 10 W. R. 125.

The court has no jurisdiction under the Companies Act of 1862, s. 35, to grant specific performance of an agreement to transfer shares or to enforce against the company an equitable claim to be registered as a shareholder. Tahiti Cotton Co., In re, Sargent, Ex parte, 43 L. J., Ch. 425; L. R. 17 Eq. 273; 22 W. R. 815.

The plaintiff agreed to transfer certain shares to the defendant, who agreed to take the same, and accept a transfer thereof, and to indemnify the plaintiff from future calls. No deposit had been paid by the plaintiff on the shares. A bill, filed for specific performance of the agreement, demurred to on the ground of no consideration. The demurrer overruled. Cheale v. Kenward, 3 De G. & J. 27; 27 L. J., Ch. 784; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 984; 6 W. R. 810.

—— Where Special Formalities required.]—Specific performance was decreed of a contract to sell shares in a company, although the deed of settlement provided that no shareholder should be at liberty to transfer his shares except in such manner as the board should approve; and the board refused to give its consent to the transfer. Poole v. Middleton, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1262; 4 L. T. 631; 9 W. R. 758.

The deed of settlement of a company provided that the liability of a vendor of shares in the company should cease after the approval of the purchaser by the directors, and entry of his name in the share register book. A. verbally agreed with B. to sell him certain shares in the company, and received the purchase-money for them, but the deed of transfer was not executed until after an order had been made for the winding-up of the company. The official assignee refused to acknowledge the purchaser as proprietor of the shares:—Held, that the agreement was conditional on the approval of the purchaser by the directors, and that the vendor could not enforce specific performance of it. Bermingham v. Sheridan, Waterloo Life, &c., Insurance Co., In re, 33 Beav. 660; 33 L. J., Ch. 571; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 415; 10 L. T. 256; 12 W. R. 658.

Removing Name from Register.]—A shareholder in a company whose articles of association contained a clause prohibiting the directors from carrying on the business of the company or making calls, until all the shares were taken up, except after a resolution to continue the company, successfully resisted an action for calls, on the ground that the whole of the shares were not taken up, and that no such resolution had been passed. He then applied to have his name removed from the register:—Held, that the power of the court to remove a shareholder's name from the register only existed in the two cases of his name having been improperly entered, and of his having ceased to be a member; and that neither circumstance occurred here. Ward, Ex parte, 37 L. J., Ex. 83; L. R. 3 Ex. 180; 18 L. T. 445; 16 W. R. 763.

And see COMPANY.

i. Personal Service.

General Principle.]—The court will not decree specific performance of a simple contract of hiring and service: and if one party abandons such a contract, however wrongfully, he will not be restrained from committing a breach of a negative covenant which was part of the contract. Brett v. East India and London Shipping Co., 2 H. & M. 404; 3 N. R. 688; 10 L. T. 187; 12 W. R. 596. And see Stocker v. Brocklebank, 3 Mac. & G. 250; 20 L. J., Ch. 401; 15 Jur. 591.

Specific performance cannot be enforced of an agreement, the essence of which is that it is one for personal services. White v. Boby, 37 L. T. 652; 26 W. R. 133.

A plaintiff will not obtain damages instead of specific performance, unless he can shew that he had an equity at the time of issuing the writ. Ib.

A suit cannot be sustained which seeks to enforce an agreement for the continuance of the plaintiff's duties or personal services to the defendant, inasmuch as those services might be rendered in a manner productive of injury rather than benefit to the latter; and the court does not possess the means of compelling a person to fulfil his duty to his employer under such a contract. Fitzpatrick v. Nolan, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 671.

Receiver of Rents.]—A grant was made by Y., Bishop of Ely, in 1801, to P. for his life of the office of receiver of the rents belonging to the see. For a long time the receiver had not only received the rents, but had prepared and registered leases and assignments of leases in a register kept by the bishop, and had made searches in the muniment room in the residence of the bishop, for all which duties he received fees. In 1836, Dr. A., immediately after his appointment as bishop, refused to continue P. in his office:—Held, no relief could be given to P. in equity, on the grounds of the hardship of forcing the services of a stranger in an office of trust upon the bishop. Pickering v. Ely (Bishop), 2 Y. & C. C. C. 249; 12 L. J., Ch. 271; 7 Jur. 479.

Manager of Baths.]—A contract by plaintiff to take the management of baths at a fixed salary:—Held, inter alia, that, the contract being for personal services, the court would not decree performance of it. Gillig v. M'Ghee 13 Ir. Ch. R. 48.

Agency.]—An owner of a coal wharf agreed to let it, and at the same time agreed to act as agent in the coal business for the tenant, and not to act for any other person:—Held, that these agreements were inseparable, and that specific performance of the agreement to let would not be decreed, because the court could not enforce performance on the other side. Ogden v. Fossick, 32 L. J., Ch. 73; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 288; 7 L. T. 515; 11 W. R. 128.

The fact of the agreement having been acted on for some time made no difference. Ib.

And see Chinnock v. Sainsbury, infra, col. 1801.

Carriers.]—An agreement had been entered into by carriers and a railway company, by which duties were to be performed by the carriers in loading and unloading goods at the termini of the railway:—Held, that the court would not interfere by injunction to restrain the company from acting contrary to the agreement which involved personal service. Chaplin v. North-Western Ry., 5 L. T. 601.

Agreement with reference to goods traffic. Injunction to restrain company from determining it irregularly, refused, as it involved personal service. Horne v. L. & N. W. Ry., 10 W. R. 170.

Agreement to work Line.]—A railway company agreed with contractors that the contractors should work the line and keep the engines and rolling plant in repair at a specified remuneration:—Held, that the agreement was not of such a kind as to be enforceable by injunction restraining the company from determining the contract and resuming the possession of their line. Quære, whether such an agreement is consistent with public policy. Johnson v. Shrewsbury and Birmingham Ry., 3 De G. M. & G. 914; 22 L. J., Ch. 921; 17 Jur. 1015.

Observations on the application of the principle of specific performance to contracts respecting personal services. Ib.

Manager and Overseer.]—The partners in certain brass works enter into articles with A., that he shall serve them as their manager and overseer during his life; and besides a stipulated yearly salary, he was to have 3*s.* 6*d.* for every hundredweight of brass wire made by him during his life:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to all the advantages thereby stipulated for by him. Bull v. Coggs, 1 Bro. P. C. 140.

To act as Servant.]—The defendant had agreed to act as servant to the plaintiff, and no other person, for seven years, with power to either party to determine the agreement on payment of 500*l.*, and subsequently engaged himself to another master without paying the 500*l.* An injunction having been granted by the Vice-Chancellor, on appeal, it was dissolved on the defendant bringing into court 600*l.* Thornton v. Kendall, 11 W. R. 352.

To act as Porter.]—The court will not enforce specific performance of a covenant to appoint a resident porter to attend on tenants of flats. Ryan v. Mutual Tontine, Westminster, Chambers Association, 62 L. J., Ch. 252; [1893] 1 Ch. 116; 2 R. 156; 67 L. T. 820; 41 W. R. 146—C. A.

Personal Services Consideration for Contract.]—A bill was filed for the specific performance of an agreement, by which the plaintiff was to receive a percentage upon bottles of mineral water, imported by the defendant, in consideration of personal services rendered by him to defendant for procuring the right of exportation. An agreement was also made that a deed should be executed to carry out the terms of the agreement. The defendant appeared to the bill, and applied for an extension of time to answer. The defendant then died, and upon a bill of revivor and supplement being filed against his personal representative a general demurrer was put in:—Held, that the court might direct the execution of a deed for carrying out an agreement of this nature, but the demurrer could not be sustained, since the defendant had applied for further time to answer, and his representative was bound by that act. Granville v. Betts, 18 L. J., Ch. 32.

Sale of Patents.]—The plaintiff, being owner of certain patents, entered into a written agreement with other persons to form a company for working these patents, he agreeing on his part to sell the patents in foreign countries, and to give his whole services to the company for two years, and to do his best to improve the invention, and to impart such improvements to the company:—Held, that he could not obtain specific performance because from the nature of his own part of the agreement, the court could not compel specific performance of it by him. Stocker v. Wedderburn, 3 K. & J. 393; 26 L. J., Ch. 713; 5 W. R. 671.

Specific performance of an agreement between four persons, regulating the right to all their future inventions, refused, on the ground that it involved a contract for personal services of an uncertain duration. Firth v. Ridley, 33 Beav. 516.

Articles of Apprenticeship.]—The court has no jurisdiction to order the cancellation of articles of apprenticeship, and the return of a portion of the premium, on the ground of the wrongful refusal of the master to continue to instruct his apprentice in his trade, according to his agreement. Webb v. England, 29 Beav. 44; 30 L. J., Ch. 222; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 153; 3 L. T. 574; 9 W. R. 183.

A bill for the specific performance of articles of apprenticeship cannot be maintained. The proper remedy is to sue at law for damages. Ib.

Reports of Cases.]—The court cannot specifically perform an agreement, whereby A. agrees to compose and write reports of cases determined in a court of justice, to be printed and published by a particular individual for a stipulated remuneration, nor interfere by injunction to restrain the party from permitting reports written by him to be published by another person. The remedy, if any, is at law. Clarke v. Price, 2 Wils. 157; 18 R. R. 159.

And see cases infra, col. 1856.

j. Indemnity.

Principal and Surety.]—Covenant to save harmless decreed in specie; to wit, the principal was decreed to indemnify the surety. Ranelagh v. Hayes, 1 Vern. 189.

Covenant.]—Where a bill is filed to enforce a covenant for a simple indemnity the court will not decree specific performance; but where the indemnifying party also covenants to do an act, the doing of which will constitute a complete indemnity, specific performance will be decreed. L. & S. W. Ry. v. Humphrey, 6 W. R. 784.

Indemnity on Transfer of Business.]—Where one insurance company, A., transferred all its business, property, effects and liabilities to another company, B., on the terms of A. shareholders being indemnified, on a bill, by A., for specific performance of the agreement, the court decreed such indemnity. Anglo-Australian Life Assurance Co. v. British Provident Society, 3 Giff. 521. S. C., 4 De G. F. & J. 341; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 628; 6 L. T. 517; 10 W. R. 588—L.JJ.

k. Other Contracts.

To procure Conveyance.]—Agreement to procure A. to convey to B., decreed to be performed in specie. Bradshawe v. Sutton, Colles' P. C. 25.

To quit Possession.]—A bill for an execution of agreement to quit the possession, and not extending to convey the lands, was dismissed. Gerrard v. Vaux, 1 Vern. 121.

To grant Deputation.]—Bill for specific performance of an agreement to grant a deputation of the office of register of a consistory court. Wheeler v. Trotter, 3 Swanst. 174; 19 R. R. 195.

To execute Mortgage.]—When a person had agreed to execute a mortgage of leasehold premises in the usual form, containing an absolute power of sale, in consideration of money due, and had, when requested to do so, failed to execute such mortgage:—The court made a decree for specific performance. Ashton v. Corrigan, 41 L. J., Ch. 96; L. R. 13 Eq. 76.

The court will decree specific performance of an agreement to execute a mortgage with an immediate power of sale. Hermann v. Hodges, 43 L. J., Ch. 192; L. R. 16 Eq. 18; 21 W. R. 571.

To give Bill of Sale.]—On the 13th March, A. commenced an action against B. to enforce specific performance of an agreement to execute a bill of sale of chattels. On the 16th March, A., on his ex parte application, was appointed interim receiver, pending a reference for the appointment of a receiver, and the same day he took possession and left a man in charge. The same night B. left, and the next day filed a liquidation petition:—Held, that the Bills of Sale Act did not apply, that the agreement created a good equitable charge in favour of A., and that the possession taken by A. as interim receiver took the chattels and effects out of the order and disposition of B. Taylor v. Eckersley, 5 Ch. D. 740; 36 L. T. 442; 25 W. R. 527.

Sale of Medical Practice.]—Whether the court can enforce specific performance of a contract to sell a medical practice, where the practice is non-dispensing, quære:—Semble, that there would be power to do so, if it were a dispensing practice. May v. Thomson, 51 L. J., Ch. 917; 20 Ch. D. 705; 47 L. T. 295—C. A.

Sale of Business of Attorney.]—Specific performance of an agreement to purchase the business of an attorney refused upon a bill by the vendor. Bozon v. Farlow, 1 Mer. 459.

Whether such an agreement void at law, upon ground either of morality or of public policy. Ib.

Quære, if legally a valid agreement, whether it is of such a nature as is capable of being enforced in equity. Ib.

To employ Auctioneers.]—Auctioneers advanced a sum of money to S., who agreed to put property in their hands for sale, from the proceeds of which they were to retain the money advanced. A part only of the property was delivered and sold, but it realised less than the sum advanced; S. refused to part with the remainder:—Held, that the court would not compel the performance of the contract for an agency; and that the claims of the agents must be determined in a court of law. Chinnock v. Sainsbury, 30 L. J., Ch. 409; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1318; 3 L. T. 258; 9 W. R. 7.

To Execute Separation Deed.]—An agreement between a husband and the father of the wife, that the husband and wife should live apart, and that the husband should execute a deed of separation, will be decreed to be specifically performed. Gibbs v. Harding, 39 L. J., Ch. 374; L. R. 5 Ch. 336; 18 W. R. 361.

Semble, in an action for specific performance of an agreement to execute a separation deed, the court will not go into evidence whether the provisions agreed upon are for the benefit of the children. Evershed v. Evershed, 46 L. T. 690; 30 W. R. 132.

A married woman can contract to live apart from her husband, and the husband is entitled to come to the court to enforce specific performance of such a contract, and is not debarred from enforcing a deed of separation and from obtaining an order restraining his wife from commencing an action for the restitution of conjugal rights by reason of trifling breaches of the covenants on his part. Besant v. Wood, 12 Ch. D. 605; 40 L. T. 445.

Right to Dig for Stones.]—Bill for a specific performance of a covenant, whereby the plaintiff was solely to have a pit in the defendant's ground, for digging black stones. Proved that the defendant had for above sixty years been in quiet possession of another pit for digging black stones. Bill dismissed. Scholefield v. Whitehead, 2 Vern. 127.

To Construct Siding.]—Specific performance of an agreement to construct and maintain a siding on land, was decreed, although the owner of the land had previously entered into negotiations for compensation in respect of the breach of the agreement. Greene v. West Cheshire Ry., 41 L. J., Ch. 17; L. R. 13 Eq. 44; 25 L. T. 409; 20 W. R. 54.

A railway company, as compensation for injury to the plaintiff's mill by the construction of their railway, agreed to lay down a siding from their line to the mill. The siding was made, but the plaintiff not having used it, the railway company removed the points and the rails, and the plaintiff having required them to be replaced, its secretary, on the 27th November, 1879, wrote to the plaintiff that the rails had been removed under misapprehension, and would be replaced at once, or that the directors would undertake to do so at any time when called on. On the 17th September, 1880, the plaintiff required the railway company to replace the siding. The secretary replied denying the liability of the company. In an action for specific performance of the agreement to replace the siding:—Held, first, that the non-user of the siding, and the expenses caused thereby, under the regulations of the Board of Trade, was not a defence to the action, and that the company was not entitled to any indemnity against those expenses. Todd v. Midland Gt. Western Ry., 9 L. R., Ir. 85.

Held, secondly, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree to replace the siding and keep it in working order, the court considering damages an insufficient remedy. Wilson v. Northampton and Banbury Jn. Ry. (infra), Powell Duffryn Steam Coal Co. v. Taff Vale Ry. (L. R. 9 Ch. 331), considered and distinguished. Ib.

To Erect Station.]—A railway company agreed for valuable consideration with a landowner to erect, construct and fit up a station on certain lands which they had bought from him. The company refused to erect a station in the specified place, and substituted one at a distance of two miles:—Held, that the case was one in which justice could be better done by an inquiry as to damages than by a decree for specific performance. Wilson v. Northampton and Banbury Jn. Ry., 43 L. J., Ch. 503; L. R. 9 Ch. 279; 30 L. T. 147; 22 W. R. 380.

C. WHAT RELIEF GRANTED.

1. INJUNCTION.

a. In general.

As to Part of Agreement.]—If an agreement consists of two distinct parts, one of which the court can enforce, but not the other, and a bill is filed simply for an injunction to restrain the violation of the former part, the court will grant the injunction, notwithstanding it would not enforce the agreement in toto. Rolfe v. Rolfe, 15 Sim. 88; 1 Coop. t. Cott. 87, n.; 10 Jur. 61.

W. agreed with L. to sing at his theatre during a certain period of time, and not to sing elsewhere without his written authority:—Held, on a bill filed to restrain her from singing for a third party, and to grant an injunction for that purpose, that the positive and negative stipulations of the agreement formed but one contract, and the court would interfere to prevent the violation of the negative stipulation, although it could not enforce the specific performance of the entire contract. Lumley v. Wagner, 1 De G. M. & G. 604; 21 L. J., Ch. 898; 16 Jur. 871. See Mapleson v. Bentham, infra, col. 1809, and Montague v. Flockton, infra, col. 1808.

The court cannot specifically perform an agreement whereby A. agrees to compose and write reports of cases determined in a court of justice, to be printed and published by a particular individual for a stipulated remuneration, nor interfere by injunction to restrain the party from permitting reports written by him to be published by another person. The remedy, if any, is at law. Clarke v. Price, 2 Wils. 157; 18 R. R. 159.

Protection of Rights.]—Consideration of the principle on which the court may, in certain cases, interpose to prevent a contract from being performed in specie; protecting the legal or supposed legal right of the party seeking such assistance, and preserving to the other party the substantial benefit of the specific performance. East Lancashire Ry. v. Hattersley, 8 Hare, 72.

Protection of Property.]—In an action for specific performance of an agreement to grant a colliery lease where the lessee had long retained possession, and had worked the coal and then threatened to cease pumping:—Held, that a motion for an injunction to restrain the lessee from ceasing pumping was a proper motion for preservation of the property pending the action under Ord. LII. r. 3. The motion having been ordered to stand over until the trial, the colliery had become drowned before the motion could be heard, owing to a cross-examination of the plaintiff's witness by the defendant:—Held, that it was proper at the trial to make the costs of the motion costs in the action. Strelley v. Pearson, 49 L. J., Ch. 406; 15 Ch. D. 113; 43 L. T. 155; 28 W. R. 752.

b. In aid of Suit for Specific Performance.

Restraining Action at Law.]—It is not the course of the court, when it entertains jurisdiction in specific performance, to permit an action at law to proceed for the same subject-matter. Beaufort (Duke) v. Glynn, 3 Sm. & G. 213.

A plaintiff who comes to a court of equity is bound to put under the control of the court his legal rights relating to the subject-matter of litigation. Prothero v. Phelps, 25 L. J., Ch. 105; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 173; 4 W. R. 189—L.JJ.

Therefore where a party brought a suit for specific performance of an agreement, and after obtaining a decree brought an action to recover damages for injury sustained in consequence of breaches of the agreement, an injunction was granted. Ib.

—— Balance of Convenience.]—Where there is a contract for the sale of land, the court will restrain the owner of the land from dealing with it until a suit for the specific performance of the contract has been disposed of; but when a plaintiff sues for specific performance, and there is a serious question whether any contract exists, the court will not interpose. Hadley v. London Bank of Scotland, 3 De G. J. & S. 63; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 554; 12 L. T. 747; 13 W. R. 978.

In a suit by a purchaser for specific performance, an injunction to restrain the vendor from selling the property was dissolved, it not being clear that he would be able to establish his right to specific performance, and it appearing that the granting the injunction would, in case of his ultimately failing, be more injurious to the vendor than the refusal of it would be to the purchaser, in the event of his ultimately succeeding. Ib.

The court will not, by interlocutory injunction, restrain one of the parties to a contract from an act for which, if wrongful, the plaintiff can obtain compensation in damages at the hearing of the cause, and where the contract is one of which specific performance cannot be decreed as against the plaintiff. Garrett v. Banstead and Epsom Downs Ry. 4 De G. J. & S. 462; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 654; 12 L. T. 654; 13 W. R. 878.

Where on motion for an interlocutory injunction the rights of the parties are doubtful on the evidence, the court will act on the consideration of the comparative injury which may arise from granting or withholding the injunction. Ib.

In a question on the effect of a contract in the circumstances of the case, where the court had concurrent jurisdiction with a court of law, and had assumed such jurisdiction by interfering to protect the rights of the parties, the court restrained the parties to the contract from bringing actions at law founded on the facts with regard to which the court had interfered, and in which actions the same question, of the legal effect of the agreement, in the circumstances, would necessarily arise. Brenan v. Preston, 10 Hare, 331.

—— Title of Party seeking Relief.]—It is not necessary for a party who seeks to continue an injunction to the hearing, to shew an indefeasible right to the decree prayed by bill; where, therefore, assignees of a bankrupt sought a specific performance of an agreement for a lease against a party who was herself a lessee, and restrained from assigning without the consent of the lessor in writing thereto obtained, the court continued the injunction to restrain proceedings at law, there being a probability of obtaining the consent of the lessor to the assignment. Powell v. Lloyd, 2 Y. & J. 427; 31 R.R. 598.

—— Equitable Plea.]—If a defendant in an action pleads an equitable plea, he cannot come for an injunction to restrain the action upon the same ground which is the subject of the plea, provided the court of law can give such relief as a court of equity will give. Waterlow v. Bacon, 35 L. J., Ch. 643; L. R. 2 Eq. 514; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 614; 14 L. T. 724; 14 W. R. 855.

But if it cannot, then the equitable plea is no bar to the defendant coming to a court of equity, subject, however, to the costs of the plea being controlled by the court of equity. Ib.

A court of equity will restrain an action for damages where the defence relied upon is an alleged agreement between the parties for the performance of certain acts, which a court of law cannot give effect to. Ib.

Primâ facie, a defendant, by pleading an equitable plea, thereby makes his election of the tribunal in which his case is to be tried; but if the case is such that the court of law cannot give full relief, then his having pleaded an equitable plea is no bar to his coming into equity. Ib.

Disposing of Property.]—Injunction granted, restraining sale of estate, till answer to a bill, alleging parol agreement to exchange, partly performed by plaintiff having purchased estate for that purpose. Curtis v. Buckingham (Marquis), 3 V. & B. 168; 13 R. R. 174.

Injunction restraining vendor defendant to a bill for specific performance, from conveying the legal estate. Echliff v. Baldwin, 16 Ves. 267; 10 R. R. 178.

Injunction in a suit for specific performance to restrain a vendor from letting or selling the estate, refused. Turner v. Wight, 4 Beav. 40.

Injunction to restrain the vendor of copyhold premises after delivery of possession, and receipt of part of the purchase-money, from surrendering them to persons other than the purchaser. Spiller v. Spiller, 3 Swanst. 556; 19 R. R. 276.

In general, during a suit for specific performance, the court will not restrain the owner from dealing with his property. Ib.

Owner Dealing with Property.]—A contract having been entered into for a purchase of land, it is not competent to the purchaser, before the title has been accepted, to obtain an injunction restraining the vendor from using or continuing to use the external wall of the building, the subject of the contract, as a party wall, or from encroaching on the land, or from building so as to obstruct the light or air coming to the premises contracted to be purchased. Heath v. Maydew, 11 L. T. 473.

In a suit for specific performance of an agreement for the sale of the next presentation to a living, the court will restrain the bishop of the diocese from taking advantage of a lapse pending the suit. Nicholson v. Knapp, 9 Sim. 326; 7 L. J., Ch. 219.

Cutting Timber.]—Purchaser before conveyance is the owner in equity for almost every purpose as to profit and loss, but, before payment, may be restrained from cutting timber: as between his representatives, it is real estate. Rawlins v. Burgis, 2 V. & B. 287.

Injunction against cutting timber in the case of trespass, viz. by a person having got possession under articles to purchase. Crockford v. Alexander, 15 Ves. 138; 10 R. R. 44.

Obstructing Light.]—A tenant under an agreement for a lease having filed a bill to restrain his lessor from obstructing the ancient lights in the premises comprised in the agreement, but not asking to have the agreement specifically performed, a motion for injunction was refused. Fox v. Purssell, 3 Sm. & G. 242.

Interference with Possession.]—When a contract is complete, the money paid, and possession given, the court will prevent the possession being interfered with by the vendor, although the purchaser does not ask for the specific performance of the contract. Hervey v. Smith, 22 Beav. 299.

Illegal Distress.]—Where a vendor has executed a legal assignment of property to a purchaser, the Court of Chancery will not, on the application of the latter, interfere by injunction to restrain the former from illegally distraining upon the tenants of the property assigned, for alleged arrears of rent accrued since the assignment. Drake v. West, 22 L. J., Ch. 375.

Ejectment — Insolvency.]—Bill for specific performance of parol agreement to grant farm lease, and injunction to prevent ejectment, plaintiff having taken possession. Upon answer, stating insolvency of plaintiff and various breaches of agreement, during possession, the injunction was continued, on undertaking to give judgment in ejectment, go to commission, and set down cause. Boardman v. Mostyn, 6 Ves. 467.

Upon a contract for a lease, the solvency or insolvency of the tenant is an objection of weight, depending upon the circumstances: upon that and other circumstances, an injunction against an ejectment by the landlord was dissolved, Buckland v. Hall, 8 Ves. 92; 7 R. R. 1.

—— Absolute Order refused.]—A bill was filed by a person in possession of certain lands, for the specific performance of an illegal parol agreement to grant him a lease for seven years, and for an injunction to restrain an ejectment; the defendant, by his answer, expressly denied that any such agreement had been made; and he insisted that the plaintiff was only tenant from year to year, and had done many acts which would have been breaches of the covenants of the lease supposed to have been contracted. The court, upon this answer, refused to make the order nisi absolute, and continued the injunction upon terms. Attwood v. Barham, 2 Russ. 186.

—— Evidence of Agreement.]—In a correspondence between lessor and lessee, the latter having spoken of the renewal of the old lease, the lessor did not object to this expression, but adverted to other subjects connected with the subject. On a bill filed for the specific performance of the agreement for renewal alleged to be contained in these letters:—Held, that they were so far evidence of such agreement, as to warrant the continuance of an injunction against an action of ejectment brought by the lessor against the lessee. Price v. Assheton, 1 Y. & C. 82; 4 L. J., Ex. Eq. 3.

Railway.]—Under a contract, with a condition that if the contractor failed to proceed with the works as required by the engineer of the company, the contract should be void, the company took possession of the works. The contractor alleged breaches of the contract:—Held, that the court would not restrain the company by interlocutory injunction until the questions between the company and the contractor were decided. Munroe v. Wivenhoe and Brightlingsea Ry., 4 De G. J. & S. 723; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 612; 12 L. T. 655; 13 W. R. 880.

Sale of Newspaper.]—Proprietors of a newspaper dissolved partnership, and one of them agreed to purchase the whole. Before the completion, and pending a suit for specific peformance, the purchaser published statements as to the profits and loss of the paper, in order to establish a company to carry it on. A motion for an injunction to restrain him was refused. Marshall v. Watson, 25 Beav. 501.

Sale of Opera House—Reservation of Box.]—W., in 1816, agreed to sell his term and interest in a certain opera house to C., reserving to himself, W., his executors, administrators and assigns, the right to a certain box therein, during the continuance of the said term. In an action to establish W.'s right to the box or to damages, an injunction was granted to restrain the defendant, &c., from preventing the plaintiff from enjoying the said box, without prejudice to the right of the plaintiff to compensation, in case it should appear that his right to enjoyment of the box had been actually lost through the act of the defendant. Helling v. Lumley, 3 De G. & J. 493; 28 L. J., Ch. 249; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 301; 6 W. R. 758.

Buying another Estate.] — A vendor is not entitled to an injunction to restrain a purchaser from buying another estate on the ground that it will incapacitate him from completing his first purchase. Syers v. Brighton Brewery Co., 11 L. T. 560; 13 W. R. 220.

c. Negative or Quasi-Negative Covenants.

General Principle.]—Where a contract contains an express negative covenant, and complete justice can be done between the parties, a court of equity will grant an injunction to restrain a breach of the negative covenant; but the court rarely interferes where there is no distinct negative stipulation, but the negative obligation is inferred only from the positive contract. Peto v. Brighton, Uckfield and Tunbridge Wells Ry., 1 H. & M. 468; 32 L. J., Ch. 677; 11 W. R. 874.

If a bill states a right or title in the plaintiff to the benefit of a negative agreement on the part of the defendant, the court will equally interfere by injunction, whether the right be at law or under an agreement, which cannot be otherwise brought under its jurisdiction. Dietrichsen v. Cabburn, 2 Ph. 52; 1 Coop. t. Cott. 72; 10 Jur. 60. And see Hills v. Croll, 2 Ph. 60; and see also Id. 62, n.

Covenant in Terms Positive.]—The plaintiff sold a piece of land to a society, who covenanted with him that he should have the exclusive right of supplying beer to any public-house erected on the land, but the plaintiff did not enter into any covenant to supply it. The defendant, a member of the society, acquired a portion of the land with notice of the covenant, and erected on it a public-house, which he supplied with his own beer:—Held, that the covenant was in substance negative, and that the court could interfere by injunction to restrain the defendant from acting in contravention of it. Catt v. Tourle, 38 L. J., Ch. 665; L. R. 4 Ch. 655; 21 L. T. 188; 17 W. R. 939.

In considering whether to grant or to refuse an injunction to restrain a breach of a particular clause of an agreement, the court will look to the substance of the act to be performed, and not merely to the presence or absence of negative words. Wolverhampton and Walsall Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 43 L. J., Ch. 131; L. R. 16 Eq. 433.

Where no Specific Performance.]—A contract for the sale of chattels to the plaintiff contained an express negative stipulation not to sell to any other manufacturer. The court granted an injunction to restrain the breach of the negative stipulation, although the contract was one of which specific performance would not have been granted. Wolverhampton and Walsall Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry. (supra) considered. Donnell v. Bennett, 52 L. J., Ch. 414; 22 Ch. D. 835; 48 L. T. 68; 31 W. R. 316.

The ground upon which a court of equity goes in enforcing, by injunction, a negative term in an agreement, the positive terms in which cannot be enforced by decree for specific performance, is, that the injunction is dependent upon the plaintiff performing his part of the contract, and will be dissolved upon his failing to do so. Stocker v. Wedderburn, 3 K. & J. 393; 26 L. J., Ch. 713; 5 W. R. 671.

The difference in the cases where a negative term of an agreement has been enforced by injunction, although the rest of the agreement could not have been specifically performed in equity, is, that the court could, at any time, upon a breach of any other term in the agreement, restore the parties to their former position, or nearly so, by dissolving the injunction. Ib.

The court will grant an injunction restraining defendants from acting contrary to a negative agreement, although it cannot specifically enforce the performance of the whole of the agreement. G. N. Ry. v. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Ry., 5 De G. & Sm. 138; 16 Jur. 146.

—— Vague Agreement.]—Where party agrees not to do a particular act, and there are other terms in the agreement which are so vague that the court cannot enforce them, it will not grant an injunction to restrain the breach of the negative term. Kimberley v. Jennings, 6 Sim. 340; 5 L. J., Ch. 115.

—— Theatrical Contract.]—The proprietors of Covent Garden theatre agreed with an actor, that he should act for twenty-four nights, during a certain period of time, at their theatre, and that, in the meantime, he should not act at any other place in London:—Held, that the court cannot enforce the positive part of the contract, and therefore it will not restrain by injunction a breach of the negative part. Kemble v. Kean, 6 Sim. 333.

A lady agreed with a theatrical manager to sing at his theatre for a definite period. She engaged "not to use her talents at any other theatre, nor in any concert or reunion, public or private, without the written authorisation of" the manager. The lady engaged with the manager of a rival theatre to sing at his theatre within the defined period:—Held, notwithstanding Kemble v. Kean (6 Sim. 333), that the court would prevent the violation of the negative term, and restrain the lady from singing at the rival theatre, though the positive term of the agreement could not be enforced. Lumley v. Wagner, 5 De G. & Sm. 485. Affirmed, 1 De G. M. & G. 604; 21 L. J., Ch. 898; 16 Jur. 871.

Kemble v. Kean (supra), and Kimberley v. Jennings (6 Sim. 340), overruled. Ib.

Any actor who enters into a contract to perform for a certain period at a particular theatre may be restrained by injunction from performing at any other theatre during the pendency of his engagement, notwithstanding that the contract contains no negative clause restricting the actor from performing elsewhere. Montague v. Flockton, 42 L. J., Ch. 677; L. R. 16 Eq. 189; 28 L. T. 580.

D., an actor, contracted with the manager of a theatre to play at his theatre for twelve consecutive nights, but there was no express condition that he should not act elsewhere during the twelve nights. On a quarrel arising, D.

advertised himself to act at another theatre on the night appointed for the commencement of his engagement:—Held, that an injunction might be granted to prevent D. acting during the twelve nights at any other theatre. Webster v. Dillon, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 432.

A singer, by agreement dated 1870, agreed to sing at a theatre for the whole London season, and nowhere else in the kingdom of Great Britain "pending l'année" 1871. The salary did not extend beyond the season, which ended on the 5th August. On motion for an injunction to restrain him singing elsewhere after the season was over, but during 1871:—Held, that the court would not grant an injunction on an interlocutory application. Mapleson v. Bentham, 20 W. R. 176.

A manager of a theatre engaged an actor for two years. Though there was nothing expressed, the court inferred an engagement on the part of the manager to employ the actor for a reasonable time, and on his part not to perform elsewhere. The manager delayed the actor's appearance for five months; he broke his engagement and went to another theatre:—Held, that he had a right so to do, and the manager was not entitled to an interlocutory injunction. Fechter v. Montgomery, 33 Beav. 22.

Incidental Clause.]—When the principal portion of an agreement is incapable of specific enforcement by the court, and it appears that the entire agreement has been broken, no relief will be granted in respect of a negative clause therein contained, which is merely incidental to the general relief sought. Brett v. East India and London Shipping Co., 2 H. & M. 404; 3 N. R. 688; 10 L. T. 187; 12 W. R. 596.

An agreement between a railway company and railway contractors for the construction of a branch railway, provided that the contractors should give a bond to secure the performance of the contract, and undertake to execute the works for a double line of railway, and the ballasting and permanent way for a single line:—Held, that this agreement was too uncertain to be enforced in a specific performance suit, and that the stipulation as to the execution of a bond could not be enforced apart from the rest, being merely an incidental and a subsidiary part of the agreement, and not within the principle of Lumley v. Wagner (supra), where the negative stipulation was a distinct and substantive part of the contract. South Wales Ry. v. Wythes, 5 De G. M. & G. 880; 3 Eq. R. 153; 24 L. J., Ch. 87; 3 W. R. 133. And see S. C., 1 K. & J. 186.

Protecting Rights of Parties.]—The court will, in some cases, by means of an injunction in a negative form, compel parties who have begun to take away the rights of others, in some measure to restore them before the hearing of the cause. Spencer v. London and Birmingham Ry., 8 Sim. 193; 7 L. J., Ch. 281.

The lessee of an inn covenanted to use and keep it open as an inn during the term, and not to do any act whereby the licences might become forfeited. The lessee having threatened to do certain acts inconsistent with the first branch of the covenant:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to restrain a person from discontinuing to use premises as an inn, no intention having been shewn on the part of the defendant to violate the negative part of the covenant. Hooper v. Brodrick, 11 Sim. 47; 9 L. J., Ch. 321.

Charterparty.]—Where property is disposed of, with notice of a prior contract entered into by the person disposing of it, the person taking it with such notice may be restrained from using it. De Mattos v. Gibson, 4 De G. & J. 276.

The court will not affirmatively enforce a charterparty, but a mortgagee with notice of a prior charterparty effected with the mortgagor will be in general restrained from doing anything to prevent its performance. Ib.

The Court of Chancery cannot decree the specific performance of a charterparty, but it can restrain the parties from employing the ship in a manner inconsistent with the rights under a charterparty. Le Blanch v. Granger, 35 Beav. 187. S. P., Sevin v. Deslandes, 30 L. J., Ch. 457; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 837; 9 W. R. 218.

Exclusive Right to Sell.]—When the owners of a public building contracted with the plaintiff that he, renting a stall from them, shall have the exclusive right to exhibit and sell certain goods, an injunction will lie against them for permitting the exhibition and sale by other renters of stalls of goods so specified. Altman v. Royal Aquarium Society, 3 Ch. D. 228.

Agreement not to set up Business.]—The defendant agreed to sell his business premises and goodwill to the plaintiff, and not to set up in the same business in the neighbourhood, the plaintiff agreeing to employ the former. The defendant was employed for a short time, and then dismissed for alleged neglect of his work. Some months afterwards the defendant committed a breach of the negative covenant. The court granted an injunction to restrain the breach, but, not being satisfied as to the bona fides of the dismissal, without costs. Daggett v. Ryman, 17 L. T. 486; 16 W. R. 302.

Agreement not to Build.]—Injunction granted to restrain the commissioners of woods from building on part of a site, in violation of the terms of an agreement entered into by them with the plaintiffs for a building lease of an adjoining part of the site. Rankin v. Huskisson, 4 Sim. 13.

Agreement not to Ring Bell.]—The plaintiff, annoyed by the ringing of a church bell, agreed, in writing with the churchwardens and inhabitants that she should erect a cupola and a clock at the church, in consideration of which the bell was not to be rung in the morning. This agreement good, and an injunction granted. Martin v. Nutkin, 2 P. Wms. 266.

Partnership Agreement.]—Where an agreement had been entered into between A. and B., and persons in their employ, containing terms and provisions of a harsh description, and one of the partners had filed a bill against the other for a dissolution of the partnership, the court refused to restrain the breach of the negative terms of the agreement. Croft v. Haw, 5 L. J., Ch. 305.

Secret Arrangement.]—A corporation advertised for tenders for the supply of stone. A., C., D. and E., quarry owners, entered into an arrangement that A. should send in the lowest tender, so that it should be accepted, that C. should not send in any tender, and that D. and E. should send in tenders higher than A.'s; it was also arranged that A. should purchase from C., D. and E. certain quantities of stone. C. sent in a tender, which was accepted:—Held, that a bill for an injunction would lie against C. to restrain him from supplying any stone to the corporation under his contract with them. Jones v. North, 44 L. J., Ch. 388; L. R. 19 Eq. 426; 32 L. T. 149.

2. Damages.

a. Before 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27.

Damages alone.]—The jurisdiction of equity is never exercised to decree compensation singly without other relief. As to the jurisdiction in cases of compensation generally, see Newham v. May, 13 Price, 749; M'Cle. 511.

Compensation for nonperformance of an agreement is not a mode of equitable relief. Clinan v. Cooke, 1 Sch. & Lef. 25; 9 R. R. 3.

In general, a court of equity will not direct any inquiry as to damage sustained by the nonperformance of an agreement. Williams v. Hignett, 6 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 125.

Plaintiff, in a bill for specific performance of a contract, is not entitled generally to satisfaction by way of damages for the nonperformance, to be ascertained by an issue, or a reference to the master. Todd v. Gee, 17 Ves. 273; 11 R. R. 76. See also Blore v. Sutton, 3 Mer. 237; 17 R. R. 74.

In a case decided before 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27:—Held, that the court has jurisdiction to award damages for the want of a literal performance of a contract, of which it directs the specific performance; it will in general do so rather than compel the parties to resort to another forum. Phelps v. Prothero, 7 De G. M. & G. 722; 25 L. J., Ch. 105; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 173; 4 W. R. 189.

A certain estate is covenanted to be conveyed, and is not so; the breach is remediable in damages. Wade v. Paget, 1 Bro. C. C. 364. For the judgment, see S. C., 1 Cox, 74.

Subject of Contract gone.]—When circumstances prevent the court from giving a decree for specific performance, the court may at the hearing award damages, although the subject-matter of the contract has then expired. Oakeley v. Ramsay, 27 L. T. 745.

A sub-lessee, having been evicted on the expiration of the term granted by his lease, sued on a covenant to grant an additional term; but the term covenanted to be granted having nearly expired at the time of the decree, instead of a specific performance, an account in the nature of an inquiry quantum damnificatus was directed. M'Nulty v. Hamill, Beat. 541.

On a bill for a specific performance of an agreement for the sale of a house, it appeared that the defendant had actually sold the house to another person for a valuable consideration, and without notice. The court directed the master to inquire what damage the plaintiff had sustained by the nonperformance of the agreement, and that such damages, together with the costs of the suit, should be paid by defendant. Denton v. Stewart, 1 Cox, 258.

Vendor, upon objection to the title, sold to another, after notice that she would do so if the title was refused. Under a bill for a specific performance, or an issue or reference to ascertain the loss of the first purchaser, a reference was directed upon the authority of Denton v. Stewart (supra). As to the principle, quære. Greenaway v. Adams, 12 Ves. 395.

How Assessed.]—In an action for specific performance, where, on an inquiry as to damages, it was necessary to examine witnesses, the inquiry was referred to an official referee. Stafford v. Coxon, 25 W. R. 788.

Where a bill for specific performance asks also for the damages consequential on nonperformance, and the defendant specifically performs his contract before the hearing, the court has, nevertheless, jurisdiction at the hearing to direct a reference as to the damages. Cory v. Thames Ironworks and Shipbuilding Co., 2 N. R. 16; 8 L. T. 237; 11 W. R. 589.

Simple questions, like the assessment of damages, are not such as the court will try by jury, but it will refer them to a court of law. Ib.

b. Since 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27.

i. In General.

Concurrent Remedies.]—The power conferred by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, s. 5, on the Court of Chancery, of directing an inquiry as to damages, was not intended to be exercised concurrently with the ancient jurisdiction of the court for granting an inquiry as to profits. Therefore a plaintiff cannot obtain an inquiry both as to damages and also as to profits. He must be put to his election between the two inquiries. De Vitre v. Betts, 42 L. J., Ch. 841; L. R. 6 H. L. 319; 21 W. R. 705.

Where no former Right at Law.]—The object and intention of Lord Cairns' Act (21 & 22 Vict. c. 27) was not to give any new right to damages, but to prevent the mischief arising from two distinct methods of procedure which, previously to the time of its passing, were in existence. In no case where damages could not previously have been recovered at law can they now be obtained under Lord Cairns' Act. Rock Portland Cement Co. v. Wilson, 52 L. J., Ch. 214; 48 L. T. 386; 31 W. R. 193.

The 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, has not conferred upon the court a jurisdiction to assess damages in cases where it did not before exist. Lawrence v. Austin, 34 L. J., Ch. 598; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 576; 13 L. T. 759; 13 W. R. 981.

Under Judicature Act, 1873.]—Under the Judicature Act, 1873, the court has complete jurisdiction both in law and in equity; so that, whether the court could in a particular case grant specific performance or not, it could give damages for breach of the agreement. Elmore v. Pirrie, 57 L. T. 333.

Under Lord Cairns' Act, the plaintiff had first to make out that he was entitled to specific performance before he could get damages at all; now he may come to the court and say, "If you think I am not entitled to specific performance of the whole or any part of the agreement, then give me damages." Ib.

The Judicature Act, 1873, s. 25, sub.-s. 11, does not extend the equity jurisdiction so as to enable the court to grant damages in a case wherein before the act damages were not recoverable, e.g. in the case of an oral agreement not capable of specific performance in equity, and in respect of which, in an action at law for damages, the defendant could have successfully pleaded the Statute of Frauds. Northumberland Avenue Hotel Co., In re, Sully's Case, 54 L. T. 76.

The equitable jurisdiction of part performance cannot be made use of for the purpose of obtaining damages on a contract, the specific performance of which is no longer possible; neither has the Judicature Act, 1873, extended the equitable jurisdiction so as to enable the court to give damages in cases where, before the act, specific performance would not have been decreed. Lavery v. Pursell, 57 L. J., Ch. 570; 39 Ch. D. 508; 58 L. T. 846; 37 W. R. 163.

Mistake.]—When an action is dismissed on the ground of mistake, the court will now consider the question of damages. Tamplin v. James, 15 Ch. D. 215; 43 L. T. 520; 29 W. R. 311—C. A.

Measure of—Compromise of Prior Action—Impossibility of Performance.]—Where an action for trespass has been compromised on the terms that the defendant should buy the land in dispute at a price to be fixed by arbitration, on the plaintiff shewing a good title, that each party should pay his own costs, and that all other claims by the defendant against the plaintiff should be thus settled—the measure of damages for non-performance of the contract by the vendor, owing to his inability to shew a good title, is the costs incurred by the purchaser in the arbitration and the investigation of title, exclusive of his costs in the compromised action. Bayley v. Birch, 8 R. 647.

ii. In addition to or Substitution for Specific Performance.

For Part of Agreement.]—When the court has jurisdiction to decree the specific performance of an agreement, but is unable to decree specific performance of certain parts of it which are merely incidents to the agreement, and do not affect its substance, it has power to provide for them by assessing the damages which, by reason of their non-performance, the plaintiff may have sustained. Middleton v. Greenwood, 2 De G. J. & S. 142; 3 N. R. 694; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 350; 10 L. T. 149.

After Decree.]—The court has no power, under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, upon motion, after a decree for specific performance of a covenant, to add an order for assessing damages for breach of the covenant. Such an order would be a supplemental decree upon facts which had subsequently occurred. Hythe Corporation v. East, 35 L. J., Ch. 257; L. R. 1 Eq. 620; 13 L. T. 788; 14 W. R. 273.

Decree for specific performance on an agreement for a lease, without prejudice to the question of damages. Tomlinson v. Dixon, 14 W. R. 528.

With Injunction.]—On a bill for specific performance of a negative contract, or, in the alternative, for damages, the plaintiff having come in time for an injunction as to part, an inquiry as to damages, under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, was directed in respect of the rest of the contract, the breach of which was complete at the time of filing the bill. Hindley v. Emery, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 874; 13 L. T. 272; 14 W. R. 25.

In Addition to Specific Performance.]—A plaintiff agreed to grant a lease to the defendant so soon as he should have built a new house on the land; and the defendant agreed to accept such lease when required, and by a certain day to pull down an old house and build a new one on the site:—Held, that the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, applied, and that the plaintiff was entitled to damages for the non-building of the house, and to specific performance of the contract to accept the lease. Soames v. Edge, 1 Johns. 669.

The defendant agreed with the plaintiffs by a certain day to pull down an old house and build a new one on the site, and the plaintiffs agreed, when the new building should be completed, to grant a lease of the premises, the defendant agreeing to accept such lease when required:—Held, that the plaintiffs, waiving the specific performance of that part which related to the building of the house, might be entitled to damages for the breach thereof, and to specific performance of the other part, viz. the contract to accept the lease. London Corporation v. Southgate, 38 L. J., Ch. 141; 20 L. T. 107; 17 W. R. 197.

Held, also, that such waiver might be made at the bar, and need not be offered by the bill. Ib.

A plaintiff agreed to take a house and premises for three years, and the defendant agreed to put the same in substantial and decorative repair, and keep the same so during the term. The plaintiff entered into possession, but the defendant refused to perform his part of the agreement. The court decreed specific performance, and directed an inquiry whether the agreement as to decorative repairs had been performed, and if not, decreed that the lessor should compensate the lessee in damages. Samuda v. Lawford, 4 Giff. 42; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 739; 6 L. T. 890.

A mortgagor agreed to grant a lease of a shop; the lessee entered into possession and commenced alterations; the mortgagees refused to confirm the lease or to allow him to proceed with the alterations. Upon a bill against the lessor for specific performance:—Held, as damages had clearly been sustained, that the court would make an order to assess them, though the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, in simple cases never intended to transfer the jurisdiction from a court of law to a court of equity. Howe v. Hunt, 31 Beav. 420; 32 L. J., Ch. 36; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 834; 7 L. T. 124; 10 W. R. 813.

—— How Assessed.]—The plaintiff agreed with the defendant to take a lease of premises belonging to the defendant for the purpose, as the defendant knew, of carrying on a trade which the plaintiff was about to commence. In consequence of his wilful refusal to fulfil his agreement, the plaintiff was unable for fifteen weeks to commence his trade:—Held, that in addition to judgment for specific performance of the agreement, damages must be awarded in respect of the loss of profits from his trade during the fifteen weeks; and 250*l.* damages were awarded. Jaques v. Millar, 47 L. J., Ch. 544; 6 Ch. D. 153; 37 L. T. 151; 25 W. R. 846.

—— Covenant not to Underlet.]—A., a lessee under a lease containing a covenant not to assign or underlet without a licence from the lessor, and a proviso for re-entry on breach of the covenant, agreed to grant an under-lease, but his lessor requiring a consideration for a licence which A. considered excessive, A. refused to complete. In a suit by the proposed under-lessee against A., the court made a decree for specific performance, with a reference as to damages in case the defendant should be unable to procure the licence. Hilton v. Tipper, 18 L. T. 626; 16 W. R. 888.

In every case where there is a valid contract and an unexceptionable subject, and the parties are under no disability, the court has power to decree damages. Ib.

In Substitution for Specific Performance.]—Semble, that the court will not enforce against a mortgagee specific performance of an agreement for a lease in which the mortgagor refuses to concur, but will give damages in substitution for the specific performance, where the concurrence of the mortgagor is no part of the agreement. Franklinski v. Ball, 4 N. R. 128; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 606; 10 L. T. 446; 12 W. R. 845.

And see Howe v. Hunt, supra.

A railway company agreed for valuable consideration with a landowner to erect, construct and fit up a station on certain lands which they had bought from him. The agreement contained no further description of the station, nor any stipulations as to the use of it. The company having refused to erect a station in the specified place, and substituted one at a distance of two miles:—Held, that the case was one in which justice could be better done by an inquiry as to damages than by a decree for specific performance. Wilson v. Northampton and Banbury Jn. Ry., 43 L. J., Ch. 503; L. R. 9 Ch. 279; 30 L. T. 147; 22 W. R. 380.

No Special Injury.]—The court will not, under the terms of the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, award any damages to a plaintiff, in addition to specific performance, where it does not appear that he has suffered any special injury from the delay which has occurred in the completion of the contract. Chinnock v. Ely (Marchioness), 2 H. & M. 221; 34 L. J., Ch. 399; 13 W. R. 178.

Defendant agreed to let premises for one year, with option for a lease for seven, fourteen or twenty-one years. Plaintiffs, having gone into possession under the agreement, and having laid out money in alterations, at the end of the year gave notice of their intention to exercise the option. The defendant could only shew title to a moiety of the premises. The defendant was decreed to perform specifically so much of the contract as she was able to perform, with an abatement of one moiety of the rent. An inquiry as to damages was refused, there being no evidence to shew that the plaintiffs had sustained any damage. Burrow v. Scammell, 51 L. J., Ch. 296; 19 Ch. D. 175; 45 L. T. 606; 30 W. R. 310.

S. contracted with J. for the purchase of a leasehold interest. S. entered into possession, with J.'s consent, in February, 1867, and on the 27th November J. forcibly turned S. out of possession. S. brought an action for specific performance and for damages. A decree was made for specific performance with costs against J., but the court refused an inquiry as to damages. Johnston v. Johnston, 17 W. R. 278.

iii. Where an Action for Specific Performance is not Maintainable.

What Relief granted.]—Under the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, damages, independent of relief, cannot be given by a court of equity, but the usual account of interest and rent will be directed. Chinnock v. Sainsbury, 30 L. J., Ch. 409; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1318; 3 L. T. 258; 9 W. R. 7.

The court has power to entertain questions of compensation for damages under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, only in those cases where it has power to enforce specific performance. Rogers v. Challis, 27 Beav. 175; 29 L. J., Ch. 240; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 334. S. P., De Brassac v. Martyn, 9 L. T. 287; 11 W. R. 1020.

Where a plaintiff has, by delay in prosecuting a suit, allowed the term in an agreement for the lease of a house to expire before the cause can be heard, the court will not direct an inquiry as to damages. Ib.

Where a plaintiff fails to establish any covenant, contract or agreement of which specific performance can be directed, the court has no jurisdiction to grant relief in damages. Lewers v. Shaftesbury (Earl), L. R. 2 Eq. 270; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 389; 14 L. T. 855.

It is not the intention of 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, s. 3, to enable a party to have damages for breach of specific performance assessed, where he has good reason to believe that a bill for specific performance cannot be sustained; but where on a bill for the specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease, it appeared that the defendant could not grant the lease on account of the mortgagees refusing to concur, the court directed an inquiry what damages the plaintiff had sustained by reason of the defendant's breach. Howe v. Hunt, 31 Beav. 420; 32 L. J., Ch. 36; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 834; 7 L. T. 124; 10 W. R. 813.

Plaintiff with no Title to Relief.]—Where in the result it appears that at the time of the plaintiff filing a bill for specific performance, he had no title to any equitable relief, the court has no power to assess damages under the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27. Ferguson v. Wilson, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 912; 15 L. T. 230; 15 W. R. 80.

The act 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, was never intended to transfer the jurisdiction of a court of law to a court of equity, but to enable a court of equity to do complete justice between the parties in matters actually within its own jurisdiction. Ib.

—— Breach by Assignee.] — Although the Chancery Division of the High Court exercises both legal and equitable jurisdictions, those jurisdictions still exist, and the court still acts upon the rule that there could be no damages at law for a breach by the assignee of an agreement. White v. Boby, 37 L. T. 652; 26 W. R. 133.

Damages instead of specific performance will only be given when a plaintiff had an equity at the time of issuing the writ. Ib.

As Consequential Relief.]—Although relief by award of damages, under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, is in the nature of consequential relief, yet the court has jurisdiction to grant it, notwithstanding that it may not be in a position at the hearing to grant an injunction or a specific performance on which the right to damages depends. Cory v. Thames Ironwork and Shipbuilding Co., 2 N. R. 16; 8 L. T. 237; 11 W. R. 589.

—— Acquiescence.]—A plaintiff, though barred by acquiescence or otherwise from his remedy by injunction, may obtain damages under the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, and that even though no action would be maintainable by the plaintiff. Eastwood v. Lever, 33 L. J., Ch. 355; 3 N. R. 232; 9 L. T. 615; 12 W. R. 195—L.JJ.

Damages not asked for.]—In a case for an injunction which, from circumstances arising after the bill was filed, could not be granted, the court, under the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, s. 2, awarded damages, though not specifically prayed for by the bill. Catton v. Wyld, 32 Beav. 266.

Agreement Court could not enforce.]—Where there was an implied covenant by lessor to procure land by certain compulsory powers and these powers expired:—Held, that as the court could not have compelled the defendant to provide the land, it had no jurisdiction to award damages. Acraman v. Price, 24 L. T. 487; 19 W. R. 364.

Agreement to Repair.]—A. agreed with the plaintiff to grant a lease of premises, and to execute such repairs as they should jointly agree upon; upon the performance of which stipulation the plaintiff agreed to accept a lease. The plaintiff entered, and, after several years, A. died without any joint agreement having been come to as to the repairs, and having, shortly before his death, sold the premises. On a bill against the purchaser and A.'s executors, for specific performance and damages:—Held, that the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, did not apply. Norris v. Jackson, 1 J. & H. 319; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 540; 4 L. T. 503.

Several Agreements.]—The plaintiffs claimed the specific performance of an agreement for the composition of a literary work by the defendant, contained in three written documents. At the trial the first and third of the documents were proved; the second was not produced, nor was any evidence given of its contents. The defendant, by his statement of defence, denied that he had agreed with the plaintiffs as alleged by them with reference to the second document:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to specific performance of the agreement or to damages for the breach of it. Post v. Marsh, 50 L. J., Ch. 287; 16 Ch. D. 395; 43 L. T. 628; 29 W. R. 198.

Agreement to Advance Money.]—A Gibraltar firm entered into a contract with A., in Spain, to open a credit in his favour and to honour his drafts. After advancing him some sums of money, they refused to make any further advances. Proceedings were thereupon commenced by him in the Supreme Court of Gibraltar to enforce a specific performance of the contract, and to obtain an award of damages under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, for the non-performance of the contract:—Held, that a court of equity will not decree the specific performance of a mere agreement to advance money. Moreover, that that being so, it has no jurisdiction to award damages. Larios v. Gurety, L. R. 5 P. C. 346.

Though the Supreme Court of Gibraltar may be bound, in administering the law, to follow the prinicples which govern English courts of law, and, in administering equity, to follow the principles which govern English courts of equity, yet where a suit for specific performance is wrongly begun, it may amend the pleadings and continue as if the action were for damages. Ib.

Contract to pay Money.—The court will not entertain a bill for specific performance of a contract to pay a sum of money, either on the ground of part performance, or on the ground that for want of formality the contract is not enforceable at law; nor in such a case can the court give damages in lieu of specific performance under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 27. Crampton v. Varna Ry., 41 L. J., Ch. 817; L. R. 7 Ch. 562; 20 W. R. 713.

Agreement for Partnership.]—Upon a bill for specific performance of agreement for a partnership:—Held, that the court would not grant damages under 21 & 22 Vict. c 32, there being a difficulty in suing at law, and no case which would have entitled the plaintiff to relief before the act. Scott v. Rayment, 38 L. J., Ch. 48; L. R. 7 Eq. 112; 19 L. T. 481.

Sale of Land to Railway—Bridges over Land.]—A railway company contracted with A. to purchase not less than eight acres of his land, for which they were to pay at the rate of 1,000*l.* an acre over and above the compensation to be awarded to him for severing and otherwise injuring his estate. The company took more than the eight acres, for which they paid him the price agreed for, and also 2,660*l.*, being the amount awarded for injuring and severing his property. Some years after the railway was made A. alleged that by the true construction of the agreement he was entitled to receive payment at the above rate of 1,000*l.* an acre, for portions of his roads, amounting to about three roods, over which the railway company had thrown bridges:—Held, that, assuming the construction of the agreement to be as A. contended, it was such a contract as the court would not decree specific performance of, but would leave A. to his legal remedy. Ingram v. Midland Ry., 3 L. T. 533.

Covenant to employ Porter to perform certain Duties.]—The defendants demised to the plaintiff a residential flat, and covenanted to appoint a resident porter who should be constantly in attendance, either by himself or, in his temporary absence, by some trustworthy assistant. The defendants appointed as porter a man who did not do his duties:—Held, that this was not a contract of which the court would decree specific performance, and that the plaintiff must be left to his remedy in damages. Ryan v. Mutual Tontine Westminster Chambers Association, 62 L. J., Ch. 252; [1893] 1 Ch. 116; 2 R. 156; 67 L. T. 820; 41 W. R. 146—C. A.

Ejectment.]—The defendant, in December, 1873, demised to the plaintiff premises for twenty-one years. In October, 1874, the defendant commenced an action of ejectment against the plaintiff for breach of covenant. The plaintiff then had the premises examined, and found that in several respects the provisions of the Metropolitan Building Act, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 122, had been violated. The plaintiff by his bill sought to have the lease cancelled, the action of ejectment stayed, and damages awarded:—Held, that as the bill was filed before the Judicature Acts came into operation, and was really for damages and not for the rescission of a contract, as the defendant did not seek to enforce the contract, it could not be sustained. The plaintiff's remedy was at law and not in equity. Thorley v. Glossop, 34 L. T. 169. And see cases supra, col. 1806.

3. Rescission.

When Decree not Obeyed.]—A plaintiff in a specific performance suit may obtain a rescission of the contract on the defendant's default to obey the decree. Watson v. Cox, 42 L. J., Ch. 279;

L. R. 15 Eq. 219; 27 L. T. 814; 21 W. R. 310.

After decree against a purchaser for specific performance, the defendant made default in payment of the purchase-money:—Held, that the vendor was entitled to rescind the contract. Foligno v. Martin, 16 Beav. 586.

A decree for specific performance was made against a purchaser in possession, but he was unable to complete the purchase. The court rescinded the contract and ordered the purchaser to pay to the vendor the rents received by him, together with the costs of suit and those occasioned by the non-completion of the purchase. Clark v. Wallis, 35 Beav. 460.

A decree for specific performance was made against a purchaser. Not having paid the purchase-money, he was ordered, on motion, to pay it within a limited time, and in default, that the contract should be rescinded and all proceedings stayed. He was also ordered to pay the costs of the motion. Simpson v. Terry, 34 Beav. 423. S. P., Dunn v. Vere, 23 L. T. 432; 19 W. R. 151.

—— Damages.]—On default by purchaser after decree for specific performance:—Held, that the plaintiffs were only entitled to have the agreement rescinded, and could not at the same time claim damages for its breach. Henty v. Schröder, 48 L. J., Ch. 792; 12 Ch. D. 666; 27 W. R. 833.

After decree, on default by defendant and an attachment for default, the court rescinded the contract and stayed all proceedings except as to such application as the plaintiff might make to assess damages caused by breach of contract. Sweet v. Meredith, 4 Giff. 207; 32 L. J., Ch. 147; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 569; 7 L. T. 664.

—— Lien.]—A vendor obtained judgment for specific performance, a declaration of lien, and liberty to apply to enforce it; on the purchaser making default:—Held, that the agreement might be rescinded, instead of enforcing the lien. Henty v. Schröder (supra) distinguished. Baker v. Williams, 62 L. J., Ch. 315; 3 R. 305; 68 L. T. 634; 41 W. R. 375.

—— Default of Party obtaining Decree—Costs.]—After a decree for specific performance, if the party in whose favour the decree has been made is unable or neglects to carry the decree into effect, the person against whom the decree was made is entitled to an order for rescission of the contract, retaining the benefit of any direction as to costs of the action, but not to damages or to occupation rent. He is also entitled to the costs of obtaining the order for rescission. Henty v. Schröder (supra), Foligno v. Martin (supra), and Watson v. Cox (supra), explained and followed. Sweet v. Meredith (supra) not followed. Hutchings v. Humphreys, 54 L. J., Ch. 650; 52 L. T. 690; 33 W. R. 563.

Order to Pay Purchase-Money.]—After a decree, the defendant, the purchaser, refused to complete by payment of the purchase-money. At the instance of the plaintiff, who had executed the conveyance, which had been approved in chambers, an order was made appointing a time and place for the defendant to pay the purchase-money on delivery to him of the conveyance executed by the plaintiff. Morley v. Clavering, 30 Beav. 108; 9 W. R. 801.

Attachment.]—When a person has been directed to execute a lease, but refuses to do so, the court can only enforce such execution by attachment, the Trustee Act, 1850, having omitted to provide for such a case. Grace v. Baynton, 25 W. R. 506.

Execution of Lease.]—A decree for specific performance of an agreement to grant a new lease, and the defendant was ordered to execute such new lease. The defendant having refused to obey the order, the plaintiff moved for leave to issue a writ of attachment against her:—Held, that there having been a decree for specific performance, the court had jurisdiction under s. 30 of the Trustee Act, 1850, to appoint a person to execute the lease in place of the defendant. The motion having been amended, an order was made declaring the defendant a trustee of the premises within the meaning of the Trustee Act, and a person was appointed in place of the defendant to execute the lease to the plaintiff. Hall v. Hall, 51 L. T. 226. See now 47 & 48 Vict. c. 61, s. 14. And see Jessop v. Smyth, [1895] 1 Ir. R. 508, supra, col. 1766.

Delivery of Deeds.]—The decree in a vendor's action for specific performance directed that, on the plaintiff executing an assignment and delivering to the defendant the deeds and writings relating to the property, the defendant should pay to the plaintiff the amount certified to be due for purchase-money, interest and costs. The plaintiff executed the assignment, and tendered the deeds to the defendant. The defendant refused to receive the deeds, or to pay the money. The plaintiff moved for leave to issue execution for the amount certified to be due, on the ground that he had performed the condition:—Held, that the plaintiff must deposit the executed assignment and the deeds in court, and on such deposit an order should be drawn up that the defendant should pay the amount certified and the costs of the motion within four days. Bell v. Denvir, 54 L. T. 729; 34 W. R. 638.

Form of Order.]—Form of order on further consideration in an action for specific performance by vendor where the defendant has persistently endeavoured to evade the judgment. Morgan v. Brisco, 55 L. J., Ch. 194; 31 Ch. D. 216; 53 L. T. 852; 34 W. R. 193.

Form of four-day order in an action by vendor for specific performance, where the defendant has persistently endeavoured to evade both the judgment and the order on further consideration. S. C., 32 Ch. D. 192; 54 L. T. 230; 34 W. R 360.

Motion for Payment into Court.]—By the judgment in an action by vendors it was ordered that an account should be taken of what was due to the plaintiffs; that the plaintiffs should be at liberty to prepare and execute a conveyance of the property to the defendant (as an escrow to be delivered to the defendant on payment of the balance of purchase-money, interest and costs within the time limited); and that the defendant should pay to the plaintiffs the balance of the purchase-money, interest and costs, and thereupon the plaintiffs should deliver to the defendant the conveyance and the title deeds. This order was not served on the defendant. The plaintiffs attended on the day fixed with the conveyance and title deeds, but the defendant did not attend:—Held, that an order for payment into court could not be made, but that the plaintiffs were entitled to a new order for payment to themselves of the amount found due within seven days after service of such new order for the purpose of working out the former order. Robinson v. Galland, 60 L. T. 697; 37 W. R. 396.

The Metropolitan Board of Works agreed to purchase houses of the plaintiffs. They afterwards claimed an abatement of the purchase-money on the ground that plaintiffs' lease was shorter than he had represented. The plaintiff refused to make the abatement, and brought an action against the board for specific performance of the agreement. The board then moved for an order giving them possession of the houses on their paying into court the amount of the agreed price with interest, and the judge made the order:—Held, on appeal, that the judge had no power to make the order as the statutory requirements had not been complied with. Bygrave v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 55 L. J., Ch. 602; 32 Ch. D. 147; 54 L. T. 889; 50 J. P. 788—C. A.

Appointment of Receiver.]—In an action for specific performance of an agreement to execute a bill of sale, the plaintiff applied ex parte, and before the appearance of the defendant, for the appointment of a receiver, and the usual order was made directing a reference to chambers to appoint a receiver:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to have the property protected in the meantime, and the order of the court below varied by directing the appointment of the plaintiff as interim receiver without security for fourteen days, or until a receiver should be appointed under the order. Taylor v. Eckersley, 45 L. J., Ch. 527; 2 Ch. D. 302; 34 L. T. 637; 24 W. R. 450—C. A.

And see Cook v. Andrews, 66 L. J., Ch. 137; [1897] 1 Ch. 266; 76 L. T. 16.

Defendant not Appearing.]—In a vendor's action the defendant delivered a defence admitting that he was unwilling to complete, and did not appear at the trial:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to immediate judgment rescinding the contract and forfeiting the deposit, but only to the usual judgment for specific performance. Stone v. Smith, 56 L. J., Ch. 871; 35 Ch. D. 188; 56 L. T. 333; 35 W. R. 545.

Where a condition of sale empowered vendor on purchaser failing to complete, to forfeit deposit and resell, and the defendant did not complete at the time fixed, and did not appear to the writ:—Held, that, in lieu of judgment for specific performance, a declaration may be made that the vendor is entitled to forfeit the deposit and resell the property, if the writ has claimed such a declaration in the alternative. But held, that the order should direct plaintiff to pay the costs of the action. Stone v. Smith (supra) distinguished. Kingdon v. Kirk, 57 L. J., Ch. 328; 37 Ch. D. 141; 58 L T. 383; 36 W. R. 430.

Writ of Execution.]—Where a covenant in an agreement for a lease was broken, and a verdict obtained for 1,500*l.* as damages for the breach, but the plaintiff in the action died before the judgment was perfected, so that the damages were lost at law, the court, on a bill by his representatives for specific performance of the agreement, refused a writ of ne exeat regno for the amount. Jenkins v. Parkinson, 2 Myl. & K. 5; Coop. t. Brough, 179; 3 L. J., Ch. 36.

II. DEFENCES.

A. FROM CONDUCT OF PARTIES.

1. Mistake.

General Principle.]—Principles on which the court proceeds in refusing specific performance in cases of mistake. Swaisland v. Dearsley, 29 Beav. 430; 30 L. J., Ch. 652; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 984; 4 L. T. 432; 9 W. R. 526.

When the description of property sold is ambiguous, and the purchaser swears he made a mistake, and this is not disproved, the contract will not be enforced; but if there appears no ground on the particulars for the mistake, it is not sufficient for the purchaser to swear that he has made a mistake. Ib.

Where, upon a sale by public auction, there was in the description of the property something about which a person might bonâ fide make a mistake, and the purchaser swore positively that he did make a mistake, the court refused to enforce specific performance of the contract against him. Ib.

Specific performance of an agreement the subject of discretion, refused in the case of mistake, though no fraud. Mason v. Armitage, 13 Ves. 25; 9 R. R. 131.

Where a contract cannot be performed specifically, the court will not interfere, in the absence of any step taken to reform the agreement, so as to make a new contract, even although there has been a virtual mistake, but will leave the plaintiff to his relief in damages. Raphael v. Thames Valley Ry. Co., 35 L. J., Ch. 659; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 656; 14 L. T. 652; 14 W. R. 750.

Caused by one Party.]—The purchaser may escape from his bargain on the ground of mistake, if it was a mistake which the vendors contributed to; if the mistake was entirely his own, then the court ought not to let him off his bargain. Goddard v. Jeffreys, 51 L. J., Ch. 57; 45 L. T. 675; 30 W. R. 270.

Specific performance of a contract will not be enforced where the defendant has contracted under a mistake to which the plaintiff has by his acts even unintentionally contributed. Bashcomb v. Beckwith, 38 L. J., Ch. 536; L. R. 8 Eq. 100; 20 L. T. 862; 17 W. R. 812.

The owner of an estate put up the whole estate, except a small piece of land, for sale in lots, subject to conditions which provided that no public-house should be built and no trade carried on upon the property:—Held, that a purchaser of a mansion-house a hundred yards distant from the excepted piece of land, who had purchased in the belief that the whole of the vendor's estate would be subject to the restrictive conditions, could not be compelled to complete his purchase unless the vendor would enter into restrictive covenants as to the excepted piece of land. Ib.

It is a settled principle, that if a purchaser contracts under a bonâ fide mistake, not attributable to any negligence of his own, the court will not enforce specific performance; and if that mistake is in any degree occasioned or confirmed by erroneous statements on the part of the vendor, although innocently made, the court will not decree a specific performance. Mowey v. Bigwood, 4 De G. F. & J. 351; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 803; 10 L. T. 466; 12 W. R. 811.

Where a purchaser contracts under a natural mistake, which is not attributable to any negligence on his part, it is the duty of the vendor to relieve him from that mistake. Ib.

Where a purchaser, after an inspection of some property, had entered into a contract under a mistake that a piece of ground was to form part of the conveyance, and the mistake was not attributable to any neglect upon his part, but was in some degree occasioned by statements of the vendor:—Held, that the vendor was not entitled to have a specific performance of the contract. Ib.

Where the boundary of an estate was denoted by stumps hid by shrubs, and a purchaser after inspection bought in the belief that the boundary was an iron fence surrounding the shrubs, which fence was not indicated on the plan:—Held, that the purchaser inspecting the property with the plan in his hand would naturally conclude the iron fence to be the boundary; that there was nothing to put him on inquiry whether it was not; that he had been misled by the fault of the vendors: and that specific performance could not be decreed against him. Denny v. Hancock, L. R. 6 Ch. 1; 23 L. T. 686; 19 W. R. 54.

Purchaser Negligent.]—Mistake of fact is not the less a ground for relief because the person who has made the mistake had the means of knowledge. Willmott v. Barber, 15 Ch. D. 96; 43 L. T. 95; 28 W. R. 911.

In an agreement for the sale of shares of a coal mine there was an article stating two conveyances by which six undivided shares of the land, beneath which the coal lay, had been conveyed to the vendors' predecessor in title, but stating that there was no express mention in the conveyances of the minerals under the land, and requiring that the purchasers should assume that six undivided shares of the minerals passed by the conveyances of the land, and thereby became absolutely vested in the vendors' predecessor in title. In the abstract furnished mention was made of a deed, and on inquiry the purchasers were told it was lost and it was believed that it did not affect the vendors' title. Subsequently, the deed was found and shewed that the six undivided shares belonged to some person quite different from the vendors, and that neither they nor their predecessor in title had ever had any title to those shares. The purchasers refused to proceed, whereupon the vendors brought this action for specific performance:—Held, that as there had been no fraud in the matter, but the vendors had acted under a bonâ fide mistake, and the purchasers had had the fact that there was a doubt as to the title brought to their notice before entering into the agreement, and had thought fit to run the risk of taking the property without having the matter cleared up, specific performance of the agreement ought to be decreed with a deduction from the purchase-money as compensation to the purchasers for the loss of the six shares. English v. Murray, 49 L. T. 35; 32 W. R. 84.

Where a purchaser relying on his knowledge of the property, purchased an inn and a saddler's shop in the belief that two pieces of garden ground at the back, in the occupation of the tenants of the inn and shop, were included in the sale, though this was not so stated in the description of the property:—Held, that the purchaser could not resist specific performance on the ground of mistake. Tamplin v. James, 15 Ch. D. 215; 43 L. T. 520; 29 W. R. 311.

Where specific performance is refused on the ground of mistake by the defendant, so that under the old practice a bill for specific performance would have been dismissed without prejudice to an action, the court will proceed to consider the question of damages. Ib.

Where defendant purchased a public-house in the belief that the freeholder had effectively released a restrictive covenant, but the abstract delivered shewed that the consent of another party was necessary, and, notwithstanding this, the defendant paid his purchase-money and took possession:—Held, that the defendant, not having discovered the mistake till after completion through his own negligence, was too late in taking his objection, and specific performance was decreed. Allen v. Richardson, 49 L. J., Ch. 137; 13 Ch. D. 524; 41 L. T. 614; 28 W. R. 313.

Two sets of particulars were issued, the second only stating that lot eight was subject to a mortgage. Defendant attended sale with a copy of the first particulars, and bought lot eight. The contract was signed on a copy of the second particulars, which the auctioneer had read out. The defendant refused to complete his contract, on the ground that he had supposed the lot to be free from incumbrances:—Held, that, if he had made any mistake, it was owing to his own gross negligence, and the vendor was entitled to specific performance. Goddard v. Jeffreys, 51 L. J., Ch. 57; 45 L. T. 674; 30 W. R. 269.

The particulars described the lot as let to a responsible tenant for a term of which seventeen years were unexpired. It appeared that only fifteen years of the term were unexpired, and it was determinable in 1881 or 1888, at the option of the tenant:—Held, not to entitle the purchaser to resist specific performance. Ib.

Condition inserted by Mistake—Sale under Foreclosure Decree.]—A mortgagee, with power of sale, obtained a foreclosure decree, and then entered into an agreement to sell the estate, with a clause providing that as the vendor was mortgagee, with power of sale, she would only enter into the usual covenant that she had not incumbered. The purchaser objected to the validity of the foreclosure decree, and insisted upon having the conveyance under the power of sale; and on the vendor declining to convey in that form, instituted a suit for specific performance, in which the vendor adduced evidence, shewing that the above-mentioned clause was inserted by inadvertence, and that she never intended to incur the risk of opening the foreclosure by conveying under the power:—Held, that the misapprehension was a sufficient defence to the enforcement of a conveyance under the power. Watson v. Marston, 4 De G. M. & G. 230.

Contract in fieri.]—Where one party seeks the execution of a contract which is still in fieri, the other may shew that the contract was not conformable to the real intention of the parties. Law v. Warren, 1 Dr. 31; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 299.

But where the contract has been executed, it is not open to a party, by way of defence, to allege that the instrument does not truly contain the real contract of the parties. Ib.

To sustain such a defence, the defendant must file a bill to reform the contract. Ib.

Contract completed.]—Semble, that the court will, even in the case of a completed contract, give relief against a common mistake without fraud. Jones v. Clifford, 45 L. J., Ch. 809; 3 Ch. D. 779; 32 L. T. 93.

Contract Ambiguous.]—Where an agreement is in writing and is unambiguous, it is the duty of the court to construe it quite independently of the ideas of the parties as to what it means, but where an agreement is ambiguous or capable of two constructions, semble, it would be very strange indeed if a plaintiff, who had always acted on the one construction, should succeed in persuading the court to grant specific performance on the footing that it ought to bear the opposite construction. Marshall v. Berridge, 51 L. J., Ch. 329; 19 Ch. D. 241; 45 L. T. 599.

A contract for the sale and purchase of an uncertain thing, the extent and value of which is understood to be unknown to both parties, is valid, and neither party can resist completing, merely because the reality has turned out to be different from what was anticipated. Baxendale v. Seale, 19 Beav. 601; 24 L. J., Ch. 385; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 581.

But where something different from what is claimed by the purchaser was intended to be sold by the vendor, the court will not compel the latter specifically to perform the contract, which, in substance, though not in terms, is really different from that which was entered into. Ib.

Where the terms of a contract are ambiguous, and, by adopting the construction of the purchaser, would compel the vendor to convey property not intended, or believed by him to be included in the contract, the court will not decree a specific performance. Ib.

Construction of Contract in Dispute.]—Where in an action for specific performance the parties disputed the construction of the agreement, the defendant swearing that his intention at the time of executing the agreement was not according to the construction contended for by the plaintiff, the court being satisfied that there had been no concord between the parties, dismissed the bill. Griffin v. Coleman, 28 L. T. 493.

The owner of a mill and piece of ground adjoining a canal, sold the mill. By the Canal Act, owners of land within twenty yards of the canal were authorised to draw water for the sole purpose of condensing steam. The contract was silent as to the right to the water; but the plaintiff alleged that he bought on the faith of having the water, while the defendant alleged that he never intended to sell it:—Held, that he was not entitled to a decree for specific performance, as it was a case of mistake. Butterworth v. Walker, 11 L. T. 436; 13 W. R. 168.

The court will not decree a specific performance against a party who has mistaken a material fact in the agreement. Where, on an agreement for the sale of a garden, it was clear that the vendor could never have intended that buildings which had been erected on part of the garden, and necessary to the enjoyment of his own premises, were within the agreement, and formed part of the premises to be conveyed, a specific performance was refused. Neap v. Abbott, C. P. Cooper, 333.

Term Omitted.]—Specific performance of an agreement which is clearly worded, cannot be resisted on the ground that other terms must have been in contemplation of the parties, shewn by the improvidence of the express contract. Sullivan v. Jacob, 1 Moll. 473.

The proof must be very clear which should induce a court of equity to refuse to enforce a written agreement, upon the ground that a term of the real agreement between the parties has been omitted by mistake. Clay v. Rufford, 8 Hare, 281; 19 L. J., Ch. 295; 14 Jur. 803.

Specific performance of a written agreement refused, on parol evidence that one term of the actual agreement was omitted. Garrard v. Grinling, 2 Swanst. 244; 1 Wils. 460.

Where the defendant asserted that there had been a verbal agreement as to a premium which was not mentioned in the written agreement, and this was disproved, but in the defendant's letter containing the first offer of terms to the plaintiffs there was the following passage: "I am giving to all the brewers who have left cards the offer in rotation"; and it was proved, that immediately before the offer to the plaintiffs the defendant had offered the premises to another brewer on the same terms as to the plaintiffs, viz., with the additional term of the premium:—Held, that this was sufficient evidence of a mistake by the defendant in accidentally omitting the premium in the terms first mentioned to the plaintiffs. Wood v. Scarth, 2 K. & J. 33; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1107; 4 W. R. 31.

The defendant was not prevented from setting up the defence of mistake in his original proposition because he had also set up the defence (which failed) that the plaintiffs had agreed to vary the terms of that original proposition. Ib.

Before the sale a second set of particulars reserving a right of way were issued. These particulars were read by the auctioneer. The contract was signed by the auctioneer (inadvertently) and by the purchaser on a copy of the particulars of sale not containing the reservation. After the purchase-money was paid and possession given, the purchaser filed his bill for a specific performance of the contract without the reservation; and the bill was dismissed without costs. Manser v. Back, 6 Hare, 443.

As to Legal Effect of Contract.]—It is no answer to a suit for specific performance for the defendant to say that, though he understood what the words of the agreement were, he was under a mistake as to their legal effect. Evershed v. Evershed, 46 L. T. 690; 30 W. R. 132. S. P., Hart v. Hart, 50 L. J., Ch. 697; 18 Ch. D. 670; 45 L. T. 13; 30 W. R. 8; Powell v. Smith, 41 L. J., Ch. 734; L. R. 14 Eq. 85; 20 W. R. 602.

Where a written agreement has been signed, though it is in some cases a defence to an action for specific performance according to its terms that the defendant did not understand it according to what the court holds to be its true construction, the fact that the plaintiff has put an erroneous construction upon it, and insisted that it included what it did not include, does not preclude the plaintiff from waiving the question of construction and obtaining specific performance according to what the defendant admits to be its true construction. Preston v. Luck, 27 Ch. D. 497.

Result of Mistake Proved.]—Though a defendant to a bill for specific performance may have a decree for performance, according to its construction, if adopted by the court, without a cross-bill, the decision being, not according to his construction, but only that he had contracted under a mistake, created by the plaintiff, the bill was merely dismissed. Higginson v. Clowes, 15 Ves. 516; 10 R. R. 112.

Evidence.]—Parol evidence admissible in opposition to specific performance of written agreement upon heads of mistake or surprise, as well as of fraud, and upon such evidence the bill was dismissed. Another bill for specific performance of agreement, corrected according to the same evidence, contradicted by answer, was also dismissed. Townsend v. Strangroom, 6 Ves. 328; 5 R. R. 312.

Verbal declarations of an auctioneer at the time of sale not to be received in contradiction to the printed particulars. But quære as to the effect of personal information of a mistake in the particulars. Ogilvie v. Foljambe, 3 Mer. 53; 17 R. R. 13.

Mistake as to Extent of Property.]—Where a vendor instructed an auctioneer to sell certain premises, and by mistake on the part of the vendor, such instructions were wide enough to take in certain premises to which the vendor had no title, and a person who heard the particulars read at the auction became the purchaser, in the belief that he would obtain the whole of the premises:—Held, that mistake was no defence. Dyas v. Stafford, 7 L. R., Ir. 590.

Mistake as to Authority.]—Where a vendor made a bonâ fide mistake as to the authority which he had given to an auctioneer, and the property was knocked down to a purchaser for a less sum than that at which the vendor considered that he had instructed the auctioneer to sell, the court refused to decree specific performance at the instance of a purchaser. Day v. Wells, 30 Beav. 220; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1004; 9 W. R. 857.

Mistake as to Price.]—Trustees not to be compelled to perform an agreement entered into under mistake, to sell for an inadequate consideration. Bridger v. Rice, 1 J. & W. 74.

A., by letter, offered to sell some property to B. for 1,250*l.* by mistake, intending 2,250*l.* B., by letter, accepted the offer. The court refused to enforce the contract. Webster v. Cecil, 30 Beav. 62.

Property unsuitable for Building.]—A. offered for sale a plot of land fronting the street, 176 feet deep, possessing a frontage of about 40 feet, which he described as well adapted for a carriage factory. B. contracted to purchase it as a site for a carriage factory, but discovered that he would not be able to build within 62 feet 3 inches of the street, by reason of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 75:—Held, that B. could resist specific performance on the ground that he had purchased under a misapprehension. Bray v. Briggs, 26 L. T. 817; 20 W. R. 962.

Mistake in Parcels.]—A vendor contracted to sell a certain leasehold messuage, but through a mistake in the parcels actually conveyed the next door to it, which also belonged to him:—Held, on an application to compel the purchaser to accept the title and pay the purchase-money into court, that the purchaser must do so. Grissell v. Peto, 2 Sm. & Gif. 39; 18 Jur. 591; 2 W. R. 178.

Contract by a railway company to grant a lease of the whole of a house No. 1, and part of a house No. 2; but only part of No. 1 was designated in the plan:—A bill to compel a lease of the whole house dismissed. Richards v. North London Ry., 20 W. R. 194.

Wrong Lot.]—Where a party by mistake bid for the wrong lot, and was declared the purchaser:—Held, that as it was a clear mistake, the court would leave the party to his remedy at law, and the bill dismissed, without costs. Malins v. Freeman, 2 Keen, 25; 6 L. J., Ch. 133.

Clerical Error.]—A. agrees to be bound in a bond as a surety to B., and signs and seals it accordingly; but, by neglect, A.'s name was not inserted. The obligee shews the condition, and his name and seal, demands payment and threatens to sue him unless he would give fresh security, which A. agrees to, but after finding the mistake, refused, equity will compel him. Crosby v. Middleton, Pre. Ch. 309.

In the draft articles of an agreement a mistake of a name had been made. The court of chancery, on a consideration of what appeared in the bill and answer, and on a consideration of the articles themselves, directed the specific performance of them according to what appeared to be their plain intention:—Held, that the decree of the court of chancery was correct. Wilson v. Wilson, 5 H. L. Cas. 40; 23 L. J., Ch. 697.

Intoxication.]—Evidence that the defendant, a farmer, was incapable through intoxication of contracting when agreement was signed for sale of forty-five acres, and that he only owned thirty-five acres:—Held, that the circumstances were such as to bring the case within the rule of surprise and mistake, and bill dismissed with costs. Cox v. Smith, 19 L. T. 517.

2. MISREPRESENTATION AND MISDESCRIPTION.

Rescission or Specific Performance.]—Misrepresentation, though in a slight degree, is an objection to a specific performance. Distinction upon a bill to rescind the contract. Cadman v. Horner, 18 Ves. 13; 11 R. R. 135.

—— Possession and Acts of Ownership.]—There may be a degree of unfairness in obtaining articles for the purchase of an estate, for which this court will not set them aside; but will refuse its aid to carry them into execution. And if the party who obtained such articles hath been in possession, and made lasting improvements, he shall be allowed for them on consenting to deliver up the articles and account for the profits; otherwise, if he goes to law, and fails there. Savage v. Taylor, Cas. t. Talbot, 234.

—— Acquiescence.]—Misrepresentation, whereby one has been induced to enter into an agreement, may afford a good defence to a suit for specific performance of the agreement, although it is not such a clear and direct misrepresentation as would afford a good ground for a suit to set the agreement aside, or for an action for damages upon it. Lamare v. Dixon, 43 L. J., Ch. 203; L. R. 6 H. L. 414; 22 W. R. 49.

Where on agreement to take a lease the proposed tenant went into possession, and for two years called on the landlord from time to time to fulfil promises alleged to have been the inducement for the contract, and always paid his rent under protest:—Held, not such an acquiescence as to prevent the tenant from ultimately refusing to perform the contract. Ib.

Conduct of Parties.]—Unless it appear that the party seeking a specific execution of an agreement has acted not only fairly, but in a manner clear of all suspicion, equity will not interfere; for if there be a reasonable doubt on the transaction, the party will be left to his legal remedy for nonperformance of the contract. O'Rourke v. Percival, 2 Ball & B. 58; 12 R. R. 68.

The jurisdiction of the court to decree specific performance will not be exercised in favour of the vendor who fails to satisfy the court that he has done all he can to avoid misrepresentation. Turquand v. Rhodes, 37 L. J., Ch. 830; 18 L. T. 844; 16 W. R. 1074.

Equity will not decree an execution of articles unless fairly obtained, and without surprise or circumvention. Phillips v. Bucks (Duke), 1 Vern. 227.

Where an estate was devised to trustees to convert and hold upon certain trusts, and the trustees did not sell, but the cestuis que trustent sold to an annuitant, upon a bill filed by the purchaser against the trustee, and cestuis que trustent for a conveyance of the legal estate:—Held, that the purchaser must prove the transaction fair and perfect, before the court will interfere to give a complete title; and the bill was dismissed against the defendants, without costs, but as against the trustee with costs. Hannah v. Hodgson, 30 L. J., Ch. 738; 9 W. R. 129.

A party contending for specific performance must shew that his conduct has been fair. If he has made material misrepresentations to the defendant, it is no answer to say that the defendant might have found out that they were misrepresentations. Cox v. Middleton, 2 Drew. 209; 2 Eq. R. 631; 23 L. J., Ch. 618; 2 W. R. 284.

Misrepresentation voids Contract.]—Party obtaining an agreement by a partial misrepresentation, not entitled to a specific performance, on waiving the part affected by the misrepresentation. The effect of partial misrepresentation is not to alter or modify the agreement, pro tanto, but to destroy it entirely, and to operate as a personal bar to the party who has practised it. Clermont (Viscount) v. Tasburgh, 1 J. & W. 112; 20 R. R. 243.

Knowledge of Parties.]—Where misrepresentation is alleged, the plaintiff is barred by proof that he was from the beginning cognisant of all the matters complained of, or after full information of them continued to deal with the property. Vigers v. Pike, 8 Cl. & F. 650.

A purchaser, offering to perform his part of the contract, required, by notice, the vendor to complete within a month:—Held, that the purchaser could not afterwards set up, as a defence, misrepresentation of the vendor, of which he was aware at the time of giving the notice. Macbryde v. Weeks, 22 Beav. 533; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 918.

Where a purchaser can shew that he entered into a contract in reliance on the truth of representations which turn out to be false, and without resort to other means of information, he will not be compelled to perform it; but if, not satisfied with the representations, he investigates and inquires for himself, and has a fair opportunity of testing the accuracy of them, the vendor is relieved from responsibility. Clarke v. Mackintosh, 4 Giff. 134; 1 N. R. 160; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 114; 7 L. T. 558; 11 W. R. 183. Afterwards compromised on appeal, 11 W. R. 652.

Specific Performance with Abatement of Price.]—It is a general principle that where a misrepresentation is made by a vendor as to a matter within his knowledge, even though it may be founded upon an honest belief in the truth of what he states, and the purchaser has been misled by such misrepresentation, the purchaser is entitled to have the contract specifically performed so far as the vendor is able to do so, and to have compensation for the deficiency. Durham (Earl) v. Legard (34 Beav. 611) must be treated as an exception to the general rule. Connor v. Potts, [1897] 1 Ir. R. 534.

Caveat Emptor.]—The court will not apply the maxim, caveat emptor, to cover a false and positive representation, essentially material to the subject. Lowndes v. Lane, 2 Cox, 363.

Where a misrepresentation has been made by a vendor, the court applies the rule caveat emptor with great caution. Colby v. Gadsden, 34 Beav. 416; 17 L. T. 97; 15 W. R. 1185.

Where a purchaser agreed to buy an estate upon a statement that it lay upon coal, which coal afterwards proved to have been mostly worked out:—Held, that the doctrine of caveat emptor applied, and that it was the business of the purchaser to inquire as to the extent to which the coal had already been worked. Ib.

Value Misrepresented.]—Misrepresentation of value of estate sufficient ground to refuse specific performance. Walls v. Stubbs, 1 Madd. 80; 15 R. R. 210. S. P., Brereton v. Cowper, 1 Bro. P. C. 211.

Erroneous Balance Sheet.]—A purchaser cannot be compelled to complete a contract entered into by him, on the faith of a balance sheet produced by the vendor, as being, though subject to slight errors, substantially correct: where errors were in fact so serious that the business was barely solvent. Charlesworth v. Jennings, 11 L. T. 439.

Statements by Agent.]—An agent, commissioned by a vendor to find a purchaser, has authority to describe the property, and to state any fact or circumstance which may affect the value, so as to bind the vendor: and if an agent so commissioned makes a false statement as to the description or value (though not instructed so to do), which the purchaser is led to believe, and upon which he relies, the vendor cannot recover in an action for specific performance. Mullens v. Miller, 52 L. J., Ch. 380; 22 Ch. D. 194; 48 L. T. 103; 31 W. R. 559.

Intended Improvements.]—Specific performance refused on the ground of representations having been made at the sale on the part of the vendor, of improvements, affecting the value of the premises, intended by him, which were not carried into effect. Beaumont v. Dukes, Jacob, 422; 23 R. R. 110.

A. agreed to purchase part of an estate, on the faith of representations made to him by the vendor's agent, that the vendor would do certain acts on the remainder of the estate. Those acts, however, were not done; in consequence of which the value of the land purchased was considerably diminished. A bill for specific performance dismissed with costs. Myers v. Watson, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 523.

Assertion of Good Title.]—The mere assertion by a vendor that he has a good title, on the faith of which the purchaser relies without investigating the title, is not necessarily such a misrepresentation as will preclude the vendor from enforcing the contract. Hume v. Pocock, 35 L. J., Ch. 731; L. R. 1 Ch. 379; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 445; 14 L. T. 386; 14 W. R. 681.

Representations, which a purchaser has chosen to accept from the vendor's agent on the subject of the vendor's title, and which turn out, in fact, but not when made, to have been known by the agent to be untrue, do not amount to such fraud as absolves a purchaser from his contract. Ib.

Property not Identified.]—Where the abstract of the property to be sold excepted a small piece of land but this piece of land was in no way identified and the vendors' solicitors refused to mark it on the plan and stated that the premises were too distinctly defined to admit of any mistake:—Held, that the purchaser was not bound to inquire further as to this excepted piece; and that, as the representation of the vendors' solicitor had tended, not to remove, but to confirm the error, a bill by the vendors for a specific performance ought to have been dismissed with costs. Moxey v. Bigwood, 4 De G. F. & J. 351. Affirmed 10 Jur. (N.S.) 957; 10 L. T. 466; 12 W. R. 811—H. L. (E.)

Sale by Administrator.]—Purchase at an auction of leaseholds stated to be sold "by order of executors"; the vendor was really administrator de bonis non cum testamento annexo durante absentiâ A., who was the next of kin to the testator, and also to his last surviving trustee and executor, A. being in Canada. Bill for specific performance by the vendor dismissed. Webb v. Kirby, 26 L. J., Ch. 145; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 73; 5 W. R. 189.

Lessors not stated.]—Leaseholds were described in the particulars of sale as in the occupation of a company under a lease. At the sale C. asked to see the lease, which was not produced, but he was informed by the vendors' solicitor that he did not remember the name of the lessees, but believed N. and M. to be two of them. C. became the purchaser. The lease had been in fact granted to N., M. and another as trustees for the company. C. refused to complete on the ground of misrepresentation. Specific performance decreed against C. Farebrother v. Gibson, 1 De G. & J. 602.

Underlease described as Lease.]—By an agreement, the committee of Verulam church agreed to purchase from W. "his interest in the lease held by him of Verulam church for the sum of 550*l.*" W. brought an action for specific performance, and judgment was given directing the usual inquiry whether a good title could be made. The chief clerk's certificate found that a good title could be made to a derivative term:—Held, that the words of the agreement took the case out of the authority of Madeley v. Booth (2 De G. & Sm. 718), and that the plaintiff was entitled to specific performance. Waring v. Scotland, 57 L. J., Ch. 1016; 59 L. T. 132; 36 W. R. 756.

Life Interest.]—On a sale of a life interest, the life was described in the particulars of sale to be that of a very healthy gentleman, aged forty-eight. In a subsequent part of the particulars, the life was described as that of a healthy gentleman, aged forty-eight, whose life was insurable. On a bill by the vendors for specific performance it was proved the vendors had insured the life shortly before the sale at a rate higher than the highest rate charged in London for a healthy life of that age:—Held, that, with the knowledge of this fact, the vendors were not justified in describing the life as a healthy life; and the bill was dismissed with costs. Brealey v. Collins, Younge, 317.

Sale of Brickfield.]—In the negotiations for sale of a brickfield R., when asked by S., said falsely that he had not put the property into the hands of an agent to sell for less money than he was then asking:—Held, that this was such a material misrepresentation as to prevent the court enforcing the contract in an action brought by R. Roots v. Snelling, 48 L. T. 216.

Proof of Misrepresentation.]—Where it is alleged that the person seeking specific performance had represented the house to be substantially and well built, and the plaintiff on his examination merely says he was never asked, and the defendant swears such representations were made, and his statement is corroborated:—Held, that the misrepresentations of the plaintiff were proved. Bill dismissed with costs. Cox v. Middleton, 2 Drew. 209; 2 Eq. R. 631; 23 L. J., Ch. 618; 2 W. R. 284.

Performance by Vendor becoming possible.]—A. agreed to purchase all B.'s interest in a coal and fire-clay pit, in the belief that B. had some lease from R., owner of the mine; and A. had been let into possession, and had worked the mine for four years under the agreement. At the date of the agreement B. had no lease from R., but two years after B. obtained a lease:—Held, that the agreement could be specifically enforced against A., subject, however, to the court finding on an inquiry that B. had made no substantial misrepresentation to A. as to the area of the workings. Southern v. Harriman, 12 W. R. 704.

Held, also, that a question of misrepresentation as to the area of the workings round a coal pit is not waived by the purchaser taking possession and working the pit. Ib.

Purchase by Third Party.]—When A. has refused to sell to B., except for ready money, and C. clandestinely attempts to purchase for B., and money is not ready, court will not enforce agreement. Popham v. Eyre Lofft, 786.

If A. in contracting with B. falsely represents himself to be the agent of C., and thereby obtains better terms, the court will, notwithstanding, enforce the contract, unless A. knew that such would be the effect of the misrepresentation. Fellows v. Gwydyr (Lord), 1 Sim. 63; 5 L. J.

(O.S.) Ch. 43 ; 27 R. R. 166. Affirmed, 1 Russ. & M. 83.

No Solicitor employed by Party.]—Where a solicitor purchases from A. B., who was ignorant of his legal position, an estate at a low price, informing A. B. that the nature and title of the property were such as that no one but a professional man would purchase it—such representation being false, and no solicitor having been employed on behalf of A. B., specific performance of the contract refused. Davis v. Abraham, 5 W. R. 465.

Specific performance was decreed in favour of a purchaser, though no solicitor acted for the vendor, and though the contract was executed under circumstances which might easily have led to fraud, no fraud being proved in the vendor or his agent. Lightfoot v. Heron, 3 Y. & C. 586.

Where a person having a clear title to 12*l.* for rent, and claiming the property of the land, is induced, by the representations of two professional persons, that he had no right to either rent or land, to agree to accept 10*l.* in full, for rent and land, the court will not entertain a bill for the specific performance of the agreement. Stanley v. Robinson, 1 Russ. & M. 527.

And see cases under preceding section.

3. Fraud and Concealment.

General Principle.]—A court of equity will not decree a specific execution of articles where they appear to be unreasonable, or founded on fraud. Young v. Clerk, Pre. Ch. 538. And see Tilly v. Peers, cited 10 Ves. 301.

A purchase obtained by fraud would be, in effect, no purchase, and could not acquire any validity by the Confirming Statute, 54 Geo. 3, c. 173, and 57 Geo. 3, c. 100. Beaden v. King, 2 Hare, 523.

Same Solicitor employed by both Parties.]—It is not a defence to a purchaser's suit for specific performance that the vendor's solicitor and agent in the sale had a short time previously been professionally employed by the purchaser in relation to his intended purchase. Hesse v. Briant, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 922.

Concealment by Vendor.]—Specific performance not decreed where there is a concealment on the part of the vendor. Skirley v. Stratton, 1 Bro. C. C. 440.

Disclosure by Purchaser.]—It is not generally the duty of a purchaser to inform a vendor of any circumstances which may make it desirable for him to purchase, such as a contract for re-sale at a higher value. Dalman v. Nokes, 22 Beav. 402.

There being no fiduciary relation between a vendor and a purchaser in a negotiation, the purchaser is not bound to disclose any fact exclusively within his knowledge, which would influence the price of the subject sold. Walters v. Morgan, 3 De G. F. & J. 718 ; 4 L. T. 758.

Simple reticence does not amount to legal fraud ; but if a purchaser in any manner induces a vendor to believe the existence of a non-existing fact, which might influence the price of the subject contracted to be sold, the contract cannot be supported. Ib.

Where, therefore, an intended lessor and lessee of minerals were in the above position as to knowledge, and the intended lessee brought to the lessor a lease ready prepared, without previous negotiation as to the details of it, and induced the latter to sign it, saying that he might trust to the proposed lessee for making a fair allowance if the minerals turned out more valuable than was supposed :—Held, that a bill for specific performance by the intended lessee, offering to make a fair extra allowance, could not be sustained, and its dismissal was confirmed on appeal. Ib.

The owners of a colliery entered into a contract with an adjoining landowner for the purchase of his estate, without disclosing the fact, of which he was ignorant, that they had, without authority, gotten a considerable quantity of coal from under it :—Held, that the court would not enforce the contract. Phillips v. Homfray, L. R. 6 Ch. 770.

Outgoings not disclosed.]—A contract having been made for sale of an estate, it afterwards appeared that there were several outgoings from the estate which were not disclosed at the time of the contract, yet these being matters which lie in compensation, the contract shall be carried into execution, with an allowance only to the purchaser for those particulars which diminish the value. Howland v. Norris, 1 Cox, 59.

A small incumbrance which may be the subject of compensation, no objection to a specific performance. Guest v. Homfray, 5 Ves. 818 ; 5 R. R. 176.

Excessive Price.]—Where a purchaser (who was a solicitor), after viewing a farm, and being informed of the rent at which it was let, agreed to buy at 5,000*l.* :—Held, first, that the difference between this price and 3,500*l.*, which the court considered to be the value of the property, was not a defence to a suit for a specific performance. Secondly, that the refusal by the defendant to complete having arisen from a cause other than that of insufficiency of title, he ought to pay the general costs of the suit, though title was first shewn in the master's office. Abbott v. Sworder, 4 De G. & Sm. 448 ; 22 L. J., Ch. 235.

The court will not decree specific performance, neither will it rescind a contract at an excessive price where there are no circumstances of fraud or surprise. Day v. Newman, 2 Cox, 77 ; 2 R. R. 1.

Misleading Conditions of Sale.]—Property was sold by auction. The conditions of sale were, inter alia, (8) that the purchaser shall not object to the title in connection with the sale of the premises to R., to whom the assignment of them, dated the 29th January, 1870, was made, but should assume that R. acquired under and by virtue of the deed a valid title to the premises by the deed expressed to be assigned to him. The title was bad on the ground that R., the assignee of the deed of 1870, had purchased the premises sold for X. and others, X. being one of the trustees for sale of the property so bought :—Held, in a suit for specific performance by the vendor, that the eighth condition was so framed as to deceive the purchaser, and entirely throw him off his guard by unwarrantably suppressing and masking a fatal defect in the title. Boyd v. Dickson, Ir. R. 10 Eq. 239.

At a sale a solicitor for an intending purchaser objected to one of the conditions as one which the contemplated purchaser could not be advised to assent to. The property was bought in. On the following day the proprietor of the estate called upon the contemplated purchaser, and persuaded him to sign an agreement for the purchase of the estate, as it was alleged, at a most exorbitant price, and containing a reference to the objected condition of sale:—Held, that specific performance of the agreement could not be enforced. Lee v. Dawson, 4 L. T. 464.

Sale by Auction — Fictitious Bidding by Stranger.]—It is no defence to an action for specific performance brought by the vendors against the purchaser at a sale by auction, that unknown to the vendors a fictitious bidding was made, and that the purchaser was thereby induced to give more than he had previously bid, which was more than the reserved price. Union Bank v. Munster, 57 L. J., Ch. 124; 37 Ch. D. 51; 57 L. T. 877; 36 W. R. 72; 52 J. P. 453.

And see VENDOR AND PURCHASER; FRAUD AND MISREPRESENTATION.

4. HARDSHIP AND DURESS.

General Principle.]—The court will not give any assistance to a party seeking to enforce a hard bargain. Kimberley v. Jennings, 6 Sim. 340; 5 L. J., Ch. 115. And see Faine v. Brown, cited 2 Ves. Sen. 307; Talbot v. Ford, 13 Sim. 173.

In cases of specific performance, courts of equity exercise a discretion. In cases of great hardship they will not interfere, but will leave the plaintiff to his remedy by recovery of damages at law. Wedgwood v. Adams, 6 Beav. 600.

Personal Services.]—A grant was made by Dr. Y., bishop of Ely, in 1801, to P. for his life of the ancient office of receiver of the rents of the lands belonging to the see of Ely. The services rendered by the receiver were in the nature of personal services. In 1836 Dr. A., immediately after his appointment as bishop, sent a notice to P. not to act as receiver:—Held, that whatever might be the legal right of P. to the office, and to its alleged appurtenances, no relief could be given to him in equity, on the grounds of the hardship of forcing the services of a stranger in an office of trust upon the bishop. Pickering v. Ely (Bishop), 2 Y. & C. C. C. 249; 12 L. J., Ch. 271; 7 Jur. 479.

Advowson.] — Where father is possessed of advowson, which he apparently intended for his son, and is prevailed on, when in an infirm state, to enter into articles for sale of it. Specific performance was refused, though no fraud was imputed to purchaser. Bell v. Howard, 9 Mod. 302.

Covenants.]—Specific performance refused of covenants by dean and chapter leases of long standing. Ely (Dean) v. Stewart, 2 Atk. 44; Barnard. 170.

Insurance of Leaseholds.]—Leasehold property was sold by auction on the 8th June, 1858, with a condition for completion on the 20th June following. The completion did not take place till the 26th August. The purchaser then discovered that the property became uninsured on the 24th July, and thereupon became forfeited to the lessors. On the 7th September the purchaser absolutely repudiated the contract. The vendors subsequently renewed the insurance, and obtained a waiver of the forfeiture from the lessors, and filed a bill for specific performance:—Held, that, although the vendors were not bound to renew the insurance, yet having done so in so unusual a manner, the court would not decree specific performance, and the bill was dismissed, but without costs. Dowson v. Solomon, 1 Dr. & Sm. 1; 29 L. J., Ch. 129; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 33; 1 L. T. 246; 8 W. R. 123.

What is Sufficient.] — On the question of executing an agreement, hardship cannot be regarded, unless it amounts to a decree of inconvenience and absurdity so great as to afford judicial proof that such could not be the meaning of the parties. Prebble v. Boghurst, 1 Swanst. 329.

Events happening after Contract.]—The fact that the performance of an agreement has, owing to circumstances which have subsequently occurred, become hard in its consequences to one of the parties, or that he is called upon to perform it under circumstances which he had not contemplated, is no objection to the specific performance of the contract in equity, there being nothing doubtful in the meaning of the agreement, and nothing hard or oppressive in its terms at the time it was made, semble. Webb v. Direct London and Portsmouth Ry., 9 Hare, 129; 1 De G. M. & G. 52; 21 L. J., Ch. 337; 16 Jur. 323.

A sub-lessee demised to the plaintiff, covenanting to renew, and to use his best endeavours to obtain a renewal from his immediate lessor. He afterwards purchased his immediate lessor's estate. The lessor refused to renew, except at a greatly increased fine, which he paid:—Held, that he was bound to renew to the plaintiff without any contribution. Lawder v. Blackford, Beat. 522.

Where the equitable title is complete, a legal conveyance will be decreed, though the property may have been much enhanced or depreciated in value. Subsequent events will not in equity vary a contract fairly entered into. Revell v. Hussey, 2 Ball & B. 287; 12 R. R. 87.

A. holding under a corporation and in the habit of obtaining renewals on favourable terms, demised to B. at a certain rent, with a covenant to renew at the same rent, as often as the corporation should renew to him. The corporation at length raised the rent payable by A. A. was bound, notwithstanding, to renew to B. on the former terms. Evans v. Walshe, 2 Sch. & Lef. 519. See 12 R. R. 88, n.

Property Bought for Specific Purpose.]—A contract in writing for sale of land by trustees to a Roman Catholic priest, did not specify the use that was to be made of the land, but the court was satisfied by the evidence that there had been an understanding that a church should be built on it. Before completion the purchaser contracted to sell the land to a third party, who intended to erect a manufactory on it, and the trustees then refused to complete:—Held, on a bill filed against the trustees, that the court would not, under the circumstances, compel them to complete the contract. Trappes v. Cobb, 16 W. R. 117.

B. treats with A. for a piece of land, having an intention to build a mill, to which the consent of the corporation is necessary; but A. refuses to treat on condition. B. fails in obtaining consent: this failure in his speculation is no defence against a bill for specific performance. Adams v. Weare, 1 Bro. C. C. 567.

No Right of Way.]—A contract was entered into for the sale of a piece of land described as arable land, not stating anything as to the existence of a right of way to it. It turned out that it was extremely doubtful whether there was any right of cartway to it:—Held, that specific performance ought not to be decreed at the suit of the vendor. Denne v. Light, 8 De G. M. & G. 774; 26 L. J., Ch. 459; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 627; 5 W. R. 430.

Mining Lease.]—A person contracting for the lease of a mine cannot resist its performance, on the ground of his ignorance of mining matters, and of the mine turning out worthless. Haywood v. Cope, 25 Beav. 140; 27 L. J., Ch. 468; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 227; 6 W. R. 304.

Taking possession of a mine by intended lessee:—Held, not to be an acceptance of the title. Ib.

Nuisance known to Vendor.]—Whether the existence of a nuisance in the neighbourhood of a house contracted to be purchased for a residence, which nuisance is known to the vendor, and is one which a provident purchaser could not discover, is a ground for refusing a decree for specific performance of the contract. Quære. Lucas v. Jones, 7 Hare, 410; 18 L. J., Ch. 329; 13 Jur. 912.

Intoxication.]—In a suit for specific performance of a contract for sale of property, the defence was, that at the time the contract was entered into the vendor was so intoxicated that he was not conscious of what he was doing. No fraud was alleged:—Held, that such a defence was of no avail. Shaw v. Thackray, 1 Sm. & G. 537; 17 Jur. 1045.

A court of equity will not decree specific performance of an agreement more favourable to the plaintiff than to the defendant, involving hardship upon the defendant and damage to his property, if he entered into it without advice or assistance, and there is reasonable ground for doubting whether he entered into it under intoxication. Vicers v. Tuck, 1 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 516; 9 L. T. 554.

The fact that a party was considerably in liquor when he entered into an agreement, is no reason for the court refusing a decree for specific performance, if there was no fraud. Lightfoot v. Heron, 3 Y. & C. 586.

Evidence.]—Bill for performance of written agreement, parol evidence read of different agreement, dismissed with costs; and plaintiff cannot resort to agreement set up by defendant; parol evidence allowed where a hard agreement, or in part executed. Legal v. Miller, 2 Ves. Sen. 299.

Contract advised by Solicitor.]—A., having a general shop, agreed with B., against whom he had actions pending, to abandon them on condition that B. should execute a bond not to be concerned in any trading establishment within a certain range:—Held, that B. having entered into the arrangement by advice of his solicitor, could not be regarded as acting under duress. Avery v. Langford, 2 Eq. R. 1097; 1 Kay, 663; 23 L. J., Ch. 837; 18 Jur. 905; 2 W. R. 615.

5. Delay and Laches.

General Principle.]—A bill for specific performance of an agreement is an application to the discretion, or rather the extraordinary jurisdiction, of the court, which cannot be exercised in favour of persons who have slept on their rights, or acquiesced for a long time in a title and possession adverse to their claims. In cases seeking a specific execution, laches is equally as strong against a plaintiff in not prosecuting as in not commencing suit. Moore v. Blake, 1 Ball & B. 69: 4 Dow, 230.

There is no distinction between laches on the part of a vendor and laches on the part of a purchaser as a bar to a suit for specific performance. Rich v. Gale, 24 L. T. 745.

The tendency of the court in modern cases has been to restrict the exercise of its jurisdiction in enforcing specific performance of contracts to those cases in which the plaintiff has been prompt in seeking his equitable remedy. Southcomb v. Exeter (Bishop), 6 Hare, 213; 16 L. J., Ch. 378; 11 Jur. 725.

A contract for sale was made on the 16th October, 1840. Objections were taken to the title, and a correspondence between the solicitors continued until the 20th August, 1841, when the purchaser gave notice to the vendor that, the title being defective, he rescinded the contract. The correspondence with reference to the title still proceeded until the 17th January, 1842. The bill was filed on the 30th August, 1843:—Held, that the interval between the 20th August, 1841, and the 17th January, 1842, ought not to be regarded in the question of laches, but that the delay after the 17th January, 1842, before the bill was filed, precluded the vendor from sustaining his suit for specific performance. The possession of part of the property, taken under a mutual arrangement, and in ignorance of the objection to the title, which was afterwards discovered and relied on, did not affect the question of laches. Ib.

Specific performance refused for laches of plaintiff, the vendor. Guest v. Homfray, 5 Ves. 818; 5 R. R. 176.

Specific performance refused for gross laches of plaintiff, the purchaser. Harrington v. Wheeler, 4 Ves. 686.

When a contract has lain dormant for many years, and nothing done by either party in pursuance of it, a court of equity ought not to decree a specific performance. Wingfield v. Whaley, 1 Bro. P. C. 200. S. P., Ridgway v. Wharton, 2 Eq. R. 839; 6 H. L. Cas. 238; 27 L. J., Ch. 46; 5 W. R. 804.

Statute of Limitations.]—The Statute of Limitations cannot be pleaded to a suit for specific performance. Talmarsh v. Mugleston, 4 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 200.

If there has been such a lapse of time that the court, proceeding upon a rule adopted by analogy to the Statute of Limitations, would refuse to enforce specific performance; these circumstances, if not disclosed in the bill so as to enable the defendant to demur, ought to be stated in the plea; and the court, for the purpose of applying its own rule, will advert to the statute; though not pleaded. Ib. S.P., Ally v. Deschamps, 13 Ves. 225.

Position affected by Delay.]—Where one party to an agreement trifles or shews a backwardness in performing his part of it, equity will not decree a specific performance in his favour; especially if the circumstances and situation of the other party are materially altered in the meantime. Hayes v. Caryll, 1 Bro. P. C. 126.

Where the object of one of the parties contracting would be defeated by delay in the execution of it, if the other party delay, he shall not afterwards be allowed to insist on performance. So, if the delay were injurious to one of the parties. Crofton v. Ormsby, 2 Sch. & Lef. 604; 9 R. R. 107.

Delay of both Parties.]—If the plaintiff in a suit for specific performance has delayed for a length of time to enforce the agreement, acquiescence in a breach of the agreement, or in a misrepresentation on the faith of which the defendant entered into the agreement, will not be imputed to the defendant by reason of a similar delay on his part in repudiating it, though accompanied by possession. Lamare v. Dixon, 43 L. J., Ch. 203; L. R. 6 H. L. 414; 22 W. R. 49.

When a suit is instituted for specific performance of a contract, and the defence set up is, that the contract was made in consideration of certain promises which the plaintiff has not fulfilled, a delay to defeat that defence must be such as amounts to an acquiescence in the non-fulfilment of the alleged promises. Ib.

Held, also, that as there had been delay on both sides, the plaintiff's bill ought to be dismissed, without costs. Ib.

Submission not Bar to Action.]—Semble, that mere submission to a wrongful act which has been completed without the knowledge or assent of the person whose right is infringed cannot, without some conduct amounting to accord and satisfaction, or a release under seal being shewn, bar his right of action; although, under the name of laches, it may afford a ground for refusing relief under some particular circumstances. De Bussche v. Alt, 47 L. J., Ch. 381; 8 Ch. D. 286; 38 L. T. 370—C. A.

Time of the Essence.]—The time at which a contract is to be performed, is not essential in equity as at law. The relief against the lapse of time is in the discretion of the court upon the circumstances, as if the contract is abandoned. Radcliffe v. Warrington, 12 Ves. 326.

Specific performance, the lapse of time being trifling and the result of fraud. Savage v. Brocksopp, 18 Ves. 335.

Lapse of time, if not an essential object of the contract, is no objection to a specific performance. Hearne v. Tenant, 13 Ves. 287. S. P., Jessop v. King, 2 Ball & B. 91; Reynolds v. Nelson, 6 Madd. 290; 22 R. R. 225.

—— Valuation.]—The time of valuation is of the essence of a contract to sell at a price to be fixed by that valuation, but defendant cannot take advantage of it, if he improperly occasioned the delay. Morse v. Merest, 6 Madd. 26; 22 R. R. 226.

Negotiations Continued.]—Laches will not be imputed to a vendor on account of delay, however long, in filing his bill for specific performance, where negotiations respecting the title have been going on the whole time. M'Murray v. Spicer, 37 L. J., Ch. 505; L. R. 5 Eq. 527; 16 W. R. 332.

H., in 1839, contracted with I. for the purchase of a piece of land, and subsequently sold his bargain to M. In May, 1839, the abstract of title was delivered. A covenant, not in the draft, was inserted in the ingrossment by the vendor, and objected to on behalf of the purchaser; and a correspondence on the subject was carried on down to 1843, when H. and M. filed a bill for specific performance:—Held, that there had been no abandonment of the contract. Moxhay v. Inderwick, 11 Jur. 837.

Agreements for sale to be completed by 29th September, 1846. The vendor made two requisitions to the purchaser to complete, the second on the 25th January, 1847, and intimated that non-compliance with the requisitions would be treated as a breach of the agreements. The purchaser did not comply, but his solicitors reiterated claims to certain deductions and abatements. On the 13th February, 1847, the purchaser filed a bill seeking specific performance: — Held, that the delay did not constitute such default by the plaintiff as to preclude him from a title to specific performance; but it appearing that the cause of delay was the purchaser's inability to pay the purchase-money up to the date of filing the bill, the court held that the purchaser had lost the right to enforce a specific performance, and dismissed his bill; but declined giving the costs, except upon the terms of his returning the deposit. Gee v. Pearse, 2 De G. & Sm. 325.

Descent of Estate during Delay.] — Great delay in the completion of a contract is no defence to a purchaser who has himself been accessory to that delay. Gunter v. Halsey, Amb. 386.

Where delay is occasioned by the purchaser, and the legal estate descends to an infant heir, the purchaser cannot avail himself of that to protect himself from specific performance. Ib.

Quære, whether the descent of the legal estate to an infant heir, after the contract, will prevent the court from decreeing specific performance, where there has been no improper delay on the part of the purchaser. King v. Turner, 3 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 58.

Possession given.]—Delay and laches, on the part of the plaintiff, are a good defence to a suit for specific performance; but they are inapplicable where the contract, though incomplete, has continued to be acted on, as by giving possession. Sharp v. Milligan, 22 Beav. 606.

The fixed rule of equity that specific performance of an agreement for a lease will not be granted after a long lapse of time will not be relaxed merely on account of possession and payment of rent during the whole of such time. Powis v. Dynevor (Lord), 35 L. T. 940.

A purchaser was let into the receipt of rents before completion, and without payment of purchase-money. Great delay having occurred, and no payment having been made to the vendor, he gave notice to the tenants, and prevented any further receipt of the rents by the purchaser:—Held, that this did not deprive the vendor of his right to have the contract specifically performed. Colby v. Gadsden, 34 Beav. 416; 5 N. R. 456; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 760; 12 L. T. 197.

And see Mills v. Hayward, 6 Ch. D. 196—C. A.

Demand of Deposit.]—If the purchaser demand his deposit at the day for completing the contract, and the vendor has not delivered his abstract before that time, and also neglects to deliver it until after an action brought for the deposit, it is evidence of an abandonment of the contract by the vendor, who shall not be entitled afterwards to a specific performance. Lloyd v. Collett, 4 Bro. C. C. 469.

Specific performance of an agreement to purchase may be decreed after considerable delay, if the vendee has not demanded his deposit or shewn a determination not to proceed in the purchase. Pincke v. Curteis, 4 Bro. C. C. 329.

No Title shewn.]—Bill for performance of articles for the purchase of an estate dismissed with costs, the title not having been laid before the vendee's counsel within the time limited, and the South Sea stock, from whence the money was to be raised, having fallen in the meantime 16*8* per cent. Lewis v. Lechmere (Lord), 10 Mod. 503.

No Objection to Title.]—Specific performance decreed against purchaser without reference as to title on ground of possession, a correspondence, and no objection to title till two years after delivery of abstract. Anspach (Marquis) v. Noel, 1 Madd. 310 ; 16 R. R. 227.

Possession and Payment of Rent.]—In 1855 A. agreed with B. that "in the event of B. marrying his daughter," he would grant him a ninety-nine years' lease of a shop at C., "should he at any time require it," at a rent. B. was let into possession of the shop, and married A.'s daughter, and duly paid the rent to A. and his assigns until March, 1874, when his then landlord gave him notice to quit. Specific performance of the agreement refused on the ground of B.'s laches. Davenport v. Walker, 34 L. T. 168.

In July, 1857, B. signed an agreement to accept from A. a new lease at the same rent as was reserved by the old lease, and payment of 600*l.* on 1st August, 1857, with interest if the lease should not be completed on the day fixed. A draft lease was sent to B., but was not returned, and no steps were taken by A. to press for completion. B. remained in possession and paid rent, but no payment of the 600*l.* or interest was ever demanded. In 1871 A. died :—Held, that as B.'s possession and payment of rent must be referred to the new agreement, and not to a holding over after the expiration of the former lease, specific performance was decreed, with interest on the 600*l.* from the 1st of August, 1857. Shepheard v. Walker, 44 L. J., Ch. 648 ; L. R. 20 Eq. 659 ; 33 L. T. 47 ; 23 W. R. 903.

Payment of Incumbrances.]—B. contracts for purchase of estate, and is let into possession. The estate being greatly incumbered, B. pays off some of the incumbrances. Great delay on part of vendor in clearing other incumbrances and making good title :—Held, not sufficient to discharge purchaser from contract. Smith v. Dolman, 6 Bro. P. C. 291.

Condition for Resale.]—On a sale of real estate the purchaser paid 500*l.* "as a deposit, and in part payment of the purchase-money." The contract provided that the purchase should be completed on a day named, and that if the purchaser should fail, the vendor should be at liberty to resell. The purchaser was not ready with his purchase-money, and after repeated delays the vendor resold the property for the same price :—Held, that the purchaser had lost by his delay his right to enforce specific performance. Howe v. Smith, 53 L. J., Ch. 1055 ; 27 Ch. D. 89 ; 50 L. T. 573 ; 32 W. R. 802 ; 48 J. P. 773—C. A.

What Delay Sufficient.]—Delay of ten weeks held no bar to relief. Rummens v. Robins, 3 De G. J. & S. 88 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 631 ; 14 L. T. 717 ; 13 W. R. 979.

Delay, after the parties were at arm's length, of three calendar months and thirteen days, held a bar to relief. Glashrook v. Richardson, 23 W. R. 51.

When a plaintiff to a bill for specific performance has allowed five months to elapse after the defendant has rescinded the contract before filing his bill, it is not a sufficient explanation of the delay to state that the defendant's solicitor was suffering from mental alienation. Leave, however, to amend may be given. Huxham v. Llewellyn, 28 L. T. 577 ; 21 W. R. 776.

A delay from May to December in filing a bill for specific performance, is sufficient to deprive a vendor of his right to have the contract enforced. Colby v. Gadsden, supra.

Bill by a company against proprietors of coal mines for specific performance of an agreement to sell to the company, at a fixed price per ton, all of certain beds of coal, at the rate of 500 tons per week. Demurrer allowed, mainly on ground of laches, the company having neglected to file their bill until eleven month after they discovered that defendants had ceased to deliver the coal, and were referred by defendants to their solicitors. Pollard v. Clayton, 1 K. & J. 462 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 342 ; 3 W. R. 349.

In contracts relating to commodities fluctuating from day to day in market price, the court expects persons to be unusually vigilant and active in asserting their right to specific performance, which it is inequitable to grant after such an interval, and when the parties may be no longer in the same position. Ib.

Observations on Taylor v. Neville, and the reports of Burton v. Lister (3 Atk. 383). Ib.

Plaintiff filed his bill a year after notice that purchaser abandoned his contract ; the bill was dismissed on the ground of unreasonable delay. Watson v. Reid, 1 Russ. & M. 236.

A vendor cannot come at any distance of time for a performance ; but a bill filed fourteen months after the correspondence upon the objection to the title ceased, was referred to the master. Hertford (Marquis) v. Boore, 5 Ves. 719 ; 5 R. R. 149.

Vendor gave notice to rescind on 7th April, 1869. The purchaser filed a bill for specific performance on the 30th August, 1870 :—Held, that the delay was fatal to his claim for relief. Rich v. Gale, 24 L. T. 745.

Claim filed in November, 1853, for specific performance of a contract to purchase made in February, 1852, dismissed (without costs) on the ground of plaintiff's laches. Lloyd v. Wilkes, 2 Eq. R. 1081 ; 2 W. R. 501.

A company contracted to purchase lands, but did not enter into possession, or commence works, for two years ; suit for specific performance dismissed. Bodington v. G. W. Ry., 13 Jur. 144.

Persons entitled in remainder on death of tenant for life agree to sell, and W., one of the persons, contracts in April, 1851, to sell to F. No deposit is made, nor any step taken. An abstract is first asked for by the purchaser in February, 1852, and delivered by W. on behalf of all parties. B., another of the persons, denies W.'s authority to act. The tenant for life died in September, 1852, and R., one of the persons, then confirmed the sale to F. In May, 1854, F. filed a bill against B. for a conveyance of the property :—Held, that, on the ground of delay, the purchaser was not entitled to a specific performance against B., except as to the share of B. Bill dismissed, with costs, as to B.'s original share ; no costs as to the other shares. Firth v. Greenwood, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 866 ; 3 W. R. 358.

Specific performance refused on ground of delay for three years and a half. Eads v. Williams, 4 De G. M. & G. 674; 3 Eq. R. 244; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 193; 3 W. R. 98.

In 1827, A. wrote to B., that he had credited B.'s account with 220*l.* in consideration of an agreement by B. to convey two houses. The abstract was delivered but there was no acceptance in writing on the part of B. Five years afterwards, B. filed a bill against A. for specific performance. The court dismissed the bill on the ground of the delay. Williams v. Williams, 17 Beav. 213.

In June, 1846, A. agreed to sell his share in a mine to B. and four months afterwards he agreed to sell it to C., who paid part of the purchase-money. In the month following, A., having given notice to B. that he repudiated the first contract, conveyed to C. No steps were taken by B. for ten and a half years, when a suit was instituted against C. alone, to have a declaration that C. was a trustee, and for a conveyance:—Held, that the right was barred by lapse of time and laches. Alliway v. Braine, 26 Beav. 575.

A specific performance will not be decreed after a delay of ten years, when nothing has been done in the meantime. Ib.

Equity will not decree specific execution of agreement upwards of fifteen years after it is dated, under which plaintiff had never been in possession, nor paid any consideration. Gill v. Fleming, 1 Ridgw. 420.

Acquiescence for fifteen years, held under the circumstances a bar. Cood v. Cood, 3 N. R. 275; 33 L. J., Ch. 273; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1335.

After bill, answer and replication, no further steps were taken in a cause for upwards of twenty years. This is not of itself sufficient ground for refusing specific performance, there being acquiescence on both sides. But a good reason for refusing costs. Cane v. Allen (Lord), 2 Dow, 289.

Vendor being in possession for upwards of fifty years, and purchaser having done acts inconsistent with the notion of his being the owner, specific performance of agreement to sell was refused, as amounting to a waiver. Ross (Earl) v. Stirling, 4 Dow, 442.

6. Bankruptcy.

Of Purchaser.]—Bankruptcy of a person who has agreed to purchase does not discharge the contract. Brooke v. Hewitt, 3 Ves. 255. See 8 R. R. 377, n.

An act of bankruptcy and a docket struck, though no commission issued, a sufficient objection to a bill for specific performance for the sale of an estate to the plaintiff, in a case where part of the money had been paid, and sub-contract for sale of part entered into by the plaintiff; and the defendants had agreed to convey accordingly. Franklyn v. Brownlow (Lord), 14 Ves. 550; 9 R. R. 346.

Purchaser discharged on motion upon affidavit of imprisonment for debt and insolvency. Hodder v. Ruffin, 1 V. & B. 544.

Secret Trust.]—A., being in insolvent circumstances, suffers another person to become the apparent owner of his farm (though under a secret trust for him). A. shall not have against the landlord, a specific execution of an agreement made by him with the trustee, the landlord supposing the trustee to have been the rightful owner, and confiding in his solvency. O'Herlihy v. Hedges, 1 Sch. & Lef. 123; 9 R. R. 23.

Assignment before Bankruptcy.]—Action for specific performance by trustees to whom a trader had conveyed all his property to sell for the benefit of his creditors; before answer the trader becomes bankrupt, and his assignees file a supplemental bill to enforce the contract, and specific performance was decreed. Goodwin v. Lightbody, Daniell, 123.

7. Acts inconsistent with continuance of Contract.

Agreement for Lease—Breach of Covenant.]—Where a tenant has entered into possession of premises under an agreement for a lease void as a lease, the tenant is, until payment of rent, merely tenant at will. The court will not decree specific performance of such an agreement where the tenant has committed a breach of one of the covenants contained in the draft lease which has been signed as approved by both the parties; and the matter is in no wise affected by s. 14 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881. Coatsworth v. Johnson, 55 L. J., Q. B. 220; 54 L. T. 520—C. A.

A tenant having violated the conditions of an agreement for a lease under which he had taken possession, the landlord brought an ejectment against him. Upon a bill by the tenant for a specific performance of the agreement, and to restrain proceedings at law, the court refused an injunction, on the ground that the tenant had himself violated the agreement. Perrett v. Barnes, 2 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 142.

Covenant as to use of adjoining Lands.]—Where land is conveyed in fee by deed of feoffment, subject to a perpetual ground rent, and the feoffee covenants for himself, his heirs and assigns with the feoffor, the owner of adjoining lands, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, not to use the land in a particular manner, with a view to the more ample enjoyment by the feoffor of such adjoining lands, and the subsequent acts of the feoffor, or of those claiming under him, have so altered the character and condition of the adjoining lands, that with reference to the land conveyed, the restriction in the covenant ceases to be applicable according to the intent and spirit of the contract, a court of equity will not interpose to enforce the covenant, but will leave the parties to law. Whether upon such a covenant there could be any remedy at law against the assignees of the covenantor, quære. Bedford (Duke) v. British Museum Trustees, 2 My. & K. 552; 2 L. J., Ch. 129.

Company unable to purchase the Land agreed.]—Quære, whether a court of equity will decree the specific performance of a contract by a railway company to purchase land, if the company should afterwards so exercise their powers as to disable themselves from taking the same land; and whether the vendor has any and what remedy in such a case. Tomlinson v. Manchester and Birmingham Ry., 2 Railw. Cas. 104.

Agreement as to Maintenance.]—A., by deed, contracted with B., in consideration of 100*l.* to maintain, educate, and apprentice B.'s child, and if he had no child of his own, on B.'s child attaining twenty-one years to give him all his real and personal estate at his death, subject to a life interest for his widow. There was some evidence that the child was at A.'s house after the date of the deed, but it appeared doubtful whether the child ever lived with A. in the manner provided by the contract, and he soon after was residing with his father (B.), and the court was satisfied that A. and B. abandoned the contract, and that the status of the child had not been altered by anything done by A. in pursuance of the contract:—Held, that the contract, having been abandoned by the contracting parties, could not be enforced by the child. Hill v. Gomme, 5 Myl. & Cr. 250; 9 L. J., Ch. 54; 4 Jur. 165. Affirming 1 Beav. 540.

Revocation of Authority to Auctioneer.]—Where a person agrees with auctioneers for the sale by them of property in a particular manner, and he then changes his mind, the rule is that, subject to the claims of the auctioneers for their expenses incurred, the court will not enforce such an agreement. Chinnock v. Sainsbury, 30 L. J., Ch. 409; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1318; 3 L. T. 258; 9 W. R. 7.

Notice of Abandonment.]—W. contracted to sell a dwelling-house to H.; possession to be given on the 26th of February; H. wanted the house for immediate occupation. On February 26th the vendor had not made a good title, and the purchaser did not enter into possession. He continued, however, to negotiate for some time longer, when he gave a peremptory notice of immediate abandonment of the contract:—Held, that there must be a decree for specific performance. Webb v. Hughes, 39 L. J., Ch. 606; L. R. 10 Eq. 281; 18 W. R. 749.

B. FROM NATURE OF THE CONTRACT.

1. Inadequacy of Consideration.

General Principle.] — Specific performance is a matter of discretion, to be exercised, however, according to fixed rules, and the mere inadequacy of consideration is not a ground for exercising such discretion by refusing a specific performance. Haywood v. Cope, 25 Beav. 140.

Inadequacy of value is not an objection to decreeing specific performance, unless the inadequacy is so great as to prove fraud, or that the parties could not have intended to execute the contract. Callaghan v. Callaghan, 8 Cl. & F. 374; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 441.

Where the defendant agreed to sell certain cottages and gardens to the plaintiff for an annuity payable to the defendant during his life:—Held, that the consideration being dependent on the uncertainty of life, although gross inadequacy might be a ground for refusing a specific performance, yet that a difference of 7 or 8 per cent. was not such inadequacy; and performance of the agreement decreed. Bower v. Cooper, 2 Hare, 408; 11 L. J., Ch. 287; 6 Jur. 681.

Inadequacy of consideration is not sufficient for refusing specific performance of purchase by auction, without something more, as fraud or surprise, &c. White v. Damon, 7 Ves. 30; 6 R. R. 71.

Contract executed though the consideration was inadequate; not amounting to fraud; but without costs. Burrowes v. Lock, 10 Ves. 470; 8 R. R. 33, 856. S. P., Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. 348; 1 Smith, 233; 7 R. R. 107; Collier v. Brown, 1 Cox, 428; 1 R. R. 70; Griffith v. Spratley, 1 Cox, 383.

Inadequacy of consideration no ground for resisting the execution of a contract to sell, the vendor not being under any incapacity, deficiency of judgment, or led by accident or design into a misapprehension of the value. Western v. Russell, 3 V. & B. 187; 13 R. R. 178.

The executrix of a lessee agreed without advice to sell to A. the residue of her term (except a day) and the fixtures for 400*l*. Subsequently the landlord, knowing that there had been a negotiation, if not an agreement, between the executrix and A., agreed with her for the purchase of the residue of the term for 550*l*. A., on hearing of this, offered the executrix, if she would complete her contract with him, 1,000*l*. as purchase-money, and indemnity against any proceedings on the part of landlord. She accepted the offer, and demised the premises to A. for the whole term, wanting a day:—Held, that the original agreement with A. was in its nature not of any validity in equity, unless the price was shewn to be equal or more than equal to the value of the property; and that as this was not shewn the landlord was entitled to a specific performance, not only against the executrix, but against A. Goodwin v. Fielding, 4 De M. & G. 90, 255; 1 W. R. 343.

Where no fiduciary relation exists between two parties dealing for the sale and purchase of an estate, mere inadequacy of consideration, or irregularity in the statement of it in the conveyance, is not sufficient to impeach the contract. Harrison v. Guest, 8 H. L. Cas. 481.

Value how Estimated.]—Principles upon which the court acts in considering the question of value. Brinkley v. Hann, 1 Dr. 175.

Purchaser from Expectant Heir.]—It is incumbent on purchaser of reversionary interest from an expectant heir, to make out a case of adequacy of consideration. Ryle v. Swindells, 1 M'Cle. 519; 13 Price, 758.

Price Adequate at time of Sale.]—Equity will enforce a specific performance of an agreement for a purchase, if the price was reasonable at the time of the sale, however disproportionable after-accidents might make it. Keen v. Stukeley, Gilb. Eq. Rep. 155.

Lease at Undervalue.]—M. being in embarrassed circumstances, in consideration of a loan of 900*l*. makes a lease to D., with covenant for perpetual renewal of lands of yearly value of 450*l*., at rent of 150*l*., subject to private parol agreement, that M. might redeem within two years, on payment of 1,300*l*. S. knowing circumstances, with consent of M. purchases from D. his interest, to whom S. pays the 1,300*l*. S. afterwards purchases the whole interest of this and other lands of M., for additional sum of 3,706*l*. The clear profit rent at which the lands were let the year following being 600*l*. a year and other advantages:—Held, binding on M. Meredith v. Saunders, 2 Dow, 515; 14 R. R. 201.

Contract with Solicitor—Oppression.]—A. B., being desirous of raising money to enable him to prosecute his claim to a fund in court, applied to a solicitor for that purpose. An agreement was executed, by which the solicitor agreed to lend 1,000*l.*, and A. B. agreed to purchase from him some land for 6,000*l.* (ten times its value). The land was conveyed, and the funds in court mortgaged by A. B. for the 6,000*l.*; but the 1,000*l.* was not advanced at the time. The court, on the ground of the gross inadequacy of value, coupled with the other circumstances of the case, set aside the whole transaction with costs. Cockell v. Taylor, 15 Beav. 103; 21 L. J., Ch. 545.

Inadequacy of value, though it is not by itself a sufficient ground for avoiding a sale, is yet of great weight when coupled with circumstances of oppression. Ib.

The court looks with suspicion at the evidence of value derived from the mere opinion given by surveyors, unsupported by any other circumstances. Ib.

Agreement for Annuity — Completion when Annuitant was Dying.]—A purchase upheld which was agreed to on the vendor's death-bed, and in consideration of an annuity for his life, the vendee having afterwards acquired the legal estate, and the agreement having been in pursuance of a contract made out by letters written some months previous to the final agreement. Barry v. O'Grady, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 550.

Value of Property Not Known.]—A wife became entitled to a share of an intestate's property amounting to 3,609*l.* The husband, whilst he was ignorant of the amount of the share, assigned it in trust for his wife and children, subject to the payment of 10*s.* a week to himself for his life. Although the deed recited that the intestate's estate was very considerable, yet as the administrators, parties to the transaction, did not disclose to the husband the amount of the share, the deed was set aside. Groves v. Perkins, 6 Sim. 576.

Trustees.]—Trustees not to be compelled to perform an agreement entered into under mistake, to sell for an inadequate consideration. Bridge v. Rice, 1 J. & W. 74.

Specific Performance Refused.]—Mere inadequacy of price is a sufficient reason to refuse specific performance of a contract. Flacke v. Gray, 4 Drew. 651; 29 L. J., Ch. 28; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 645.

Specific performance of agreement refused under circumstances of inadequate consideration. Underwood v. Hitchcock, 1 Ves. Sen. 279.

Price to be Fixed.]—Specific performance will not be decreed of an agreement to sell certain property at a price to be settled by two persons who are named, if the court sees reason to believe that the price subsequently fixed by these persons is considerably below the real value of the property. Parken v. Whitby, Turn. & R. 366; 24 R. R. 74.

Specific performance of an agreement to purchase at a price to be fixed by third persons named in the contract, decreed, though price thus fixed was inadequate, there being no evidence that the valuation was unfair. Weeks v. Gallard, 21 L. T. 655; 18 W. R. 331.

Death of Vendor.]—If a vendor of real estate dies before conveyance, intestate, and his heir-at-law contests the sufficiency of the consideration for the purchase, he ought to file a bill to have the agreement set aside, and not rest upon inadequacy of consideration as a defence to a bill for specific performance. Hoddel v. Pugh, 33 Beav. 489; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 534; 10 L. T. 446; 12 W. R. 782.

And see cases supra, col. 1778.

2. ILLEGALITY.

Contrary to Statute.]—When the plain intent of an agreement is unobjectionable, this court will decree specific performance of it according to such intent, though in its terms the agreement was contrary to a statute. Daly v. Duggan, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 311.

Where an equal agreement cannot, by reason of a subsequent act of parliament, or some other lawful impediment, be performed in the whole, yet the same shall be specifically executed in such part of it as remains lawful. Betteswortb v. St. Paul's (Dean), 1 Bro. P. C. 240.

Agreement partly Illegal.]—If an instrument contains distinct engagements to do certain acts, some of which are legal and some illegal at common law, the performance of those which are legal may be enforced, though those which are illegal cannot. Bank of Australasia v. Breillat, 6 Moore, P. C. 152; 12 Jur. 189.

Threat to Prosecute.]—A court of equity will not enforce an agreement against a party, who was induced to enter into it, in order to save his sons from a threatened prosecution for felony. Dewar v. Elliott, 2 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 178.

Evasion of Stamp Act.]—A clause in an agreement, providing that, if it should become necessary to stamp it and to pay any penalty for that purpose, the creditor may charge it against the debtor, is an evasion of the Stamp Acts, and the court will not enforce it. Abbott v. Stratten, 3 Jo. & Lat. 603; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 233.

Fraud on the Public.]—The plaintiffs proposed to publish a book with a title-page, stating that it was edited by K. (assisted by M., the defendant). K. was known as having published other books of a similar description, and had allowed the plaintiffs to make use of his name, but he had taken no part whatever in the compilation, which was the work of M.:—Held, that the proposed title-page would be a fraud on the public, and that on this ground the plaintiffs were disentitled to relief. Post v. Marsh, 50 L. J., Ch. 287; 16 Ch. D. 395; 43 L. T. 628; 29 W. R. 198.

Champerty.]—The purchase of an estate for the purpose of setting aside a previous agreement affecting the property on the ground of fraud, partakes of the nature of champerty, and will not be enforced in equity. De Hoghton v. Money, L. R. 2 Ch. 164.

Compromise of Divorce Proceedings.]—Where an agreement for the compromise of a suit for a divorce, provided that the wife should have the custody of two of the children, and should educate them in a particular manner, the first part of such provision being contrary to public policy, and the latter incapable of being enforced against the wife, a demurrer to a bill filed by her for specific performance was allowed. Vansittart v. Vansittart, 4 K. & J. 63. Affirmed 2 De G. & J. 249; 27 L. J., Ch. 289; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 519; 6 W. R. 386.

And see COMPROMISE.

Illegal Association.]—A member of an association, which is an illegal association within s. 4 of the Companies Act, 1862, and which is regulated by a trust deed, cannot bring an action for the administration of the trust, as the trust deed is an illegal contract, which the court will not enforce. Sykes v. Beadon, 48 L. J., Ch. 522; 11 Ch. D. 170; 40 L. T. 243; 27 W. R. 464.

3. Ultra Vires.

Contract by Directors.] — Directors having entered into a contract, ultra vires:—Held, that it could not be specifically performed. Ellis v. Colman, 25 Beav. 662; 27 L. J., Ch. 611; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 350; 6 W. R. 360.

Assignees of an agreement between A. and a company sued for specific performance:—Held, that they could sustain the action, but specific performance refused, as the agreement contained clauses ultra vires the power of the directors of the company. Browne v. London Necropolis and National Mausoleum Co., 6 W. R. 188.

Agreement not to Oppose Bill in Parliament.]—An agreement between railway companies not to oppose a bill in parliament, promoted by one of the railways:—Held, that the agreement was ultra vires, and ought not to be decreed to be specifically performed. Shrewsbury and Birmingham Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 4 De G. M. & G. 115; 6 H. L. Cas. 113; 22 L. J., Ch. 682; 17 Jur. 845; 1 W. R. 172.

Contract by Trustees.]—Bill for the execution of a covenant contained in a renewed lease granted by trustees dismissed, the covenant being ultra vires of the trustees. Bellringer v. Blagrave, 1 De G. & Sm. 63; 11 Jur. 407.

Contract by Executor.]—One of two executors erroneously believing that he was acting with the authority of the other, contracted to sell a house, part of the testator's estate:—Held, that the purchaser could not enforce a specific performance of the contract. Sneesby v. Thorne, 7 De G. M. & G. 399; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1058; 3 W. R. 605.

Quære, whether he could have done so if the executor had been under no misapprehension. Ib.

And see Avery v. Griffin, infra, col. 1853.

4. Uncertainty.

General Principle.]—In a suit for specific performance of a contract vague in its language, a court of equity, having regard to the terms of the agreement, will consider the surrounding circumstances and conduct of the parties in dealing with the property comprised in it, in the interval between the making of the agreement and the commencement of the suit for its enforcement. Oxford v. Provand, 5 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 150; L. R. 2 P. C. 135.

Courts of equity will not decree specific performance of an agreement, the object of which is uncertain. Callaghan v. Callaghan, 8 Cl. & F. 374. And see S. C., 4 Ir. Eq. R. 441.

Ambiguous Document.]—Where an agreement is in writing, and is unambiguous, it is the duty of the court to construe it quite independently of the ideas of the parties as to what it means; but where an agreement is ambiguous or capable of two constructions, I think it would be very strange indeed if a plaintiff, who had always acted on the one construction, should succeed in persuading the court to grant specific performance on the footing that it ought to bear the opposite construction—per Jessel, M.R. Marshall v. Berridge, 51 L. J., Ch. 329; 19 Ch. D. 241; 45 L. T. 599. And see Bromley v. Jefferies, infra, col. 1853.

What is.]—An agreement to give so much of a thing as may be necessary for a specified purpose confers a right of a nature known to the law, and is not open to the objection of uncertainty. Under an agreement to give so much of a specified piece of land as may be necessary for a specified purpose, when the quantity has been determined, the right of selecting the position of the piece to be given belongs to the promisee. If the promisor, however, had any objection to the promisee's selection, and made a reasonable offer in lieu thereof, the court might listen to it. Rumble v. Heygate, 18 W. R. 749.

Specific performance of an agreement, "subject to a contract to be settled," will not be enforced. Harvey v. Barnard's Inn (Principal), 50 L. J., Ch. 750; 45 L. T. 280; 29 W. R 922.

Executory Contract to pull down and Build—Indefiniteness.]—By two letters of the 10th and 13th May, 1892, to the corporation of Oxford, C. offered to surrender his existing lease, to pull down an old building and erect a new building on the site of a line marked out by a specified surveyor, at a cost of 4,000*l.*, and to carry out the work within twelve months, provided that the city would grant him a new lease for seventy-five years, at a ground-rent of 100*l.* per annum; and he would agree to a line being drawn in the rear, giving up part of his cellar for the purpose of straightening the dividing line between the properties; this proposal to include all claims he might have for compensation for the loss of business and other things incidental to the taking down and rebuilding:—Held, that specific performance would be withheld, on the ground that no date was fixed for the surrender of the old lease and the commencement of the new term, and there was a want of definiteness in the provisions of the contract. Oxford Corporation v. Crow, [1893] 3 Ch. 535; 69 L. T. 228.

5. Want of Mutuality.

General Principle.]—Where nothing has been done under an agreement, the court ought not to decree a specific performance, except when the right to compel it exists both in plaintiff and defendant. Lawrenson v. Butler, 1 Sch. & Lef. 13.

The written undertaking of any party will be enforced, although the other party is not mutually bound by writing. Palmer v. Scott, 1 Russ. & M. 391; Tam. 488; 8 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 127.

Where damages in action for breach of contract to sell chattel would be insufficient remedy for purchaser, though sufficient for vendor, specific performance decreed, as remedy must be mutual. Withy v. Cottle, 1 Sim. & S. 174; Turn. & R. 78; 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 117; 23 R. R. 187.

Specific performance refused because lien of remedy was not mutual. Armiger v. Clarke, Bunb. 111.

The court will not interfere by injunction to prevent the violation of an agreement of which, from the nature of the subject, there could be no decree for a specific performance, as, for instance, to restrain the defendant from imparting the secret of an invention which had been the subject of a patent long since expired. Newbury v. James, 2 Mer. 446.

Specific performance refused on the ground of want of specific mutuality and other circumstances. Hamilton v. Grant, 3 Dow, 33; 1 Bligh (N.S.) 594; 15 R. R. 5.

Motion to restrain a defendant from violating his part of an agreement refused, on the ground of the agreement being such that the court could not compel a specific performance by the plaintiff of his part of it. Hills v. Croll, 1 Coop. t. Cott. 84, n.; 2 Ph. 60; 14 L. J., Ch. 444; 9 Jur. 645.

The rights of parties to agreements to enforce a specific performance in equity are not co-extensive, for their respective rights depend upon their conduct; and the conduct of one may give him the right to apply to the court, where the conduct of the other may debar him from that right. S. E. Ry. v. Knott, 10 Hare, 122.

Custody of Children.]—An agreement by a father, that the mother of his deceased wife should have the custody of the infant children during three months of every year, is bad for want of mutuality, and cannot be enforced against the deceased wife's mother. Kennedy v. May, 7 L. T. 819; 11 W. R. 358. And see Vansittart v. Vansittart, supra, col. 1848.

Infant.]—An infant cannot sustain a suit for the specific performance of a contract, because the remedy is not mutual. Flight v. Bolland, 4 Russ. 298; 28 R. R. 101.

Contract Enforceable on Event Happening.]—The doctrine of non-mutuality being a bar to specific performance, does not apply to a contract which, to the knowledge of both parties, cannot be enforced by either until the occurrence of a contingent event. Wylson v. Dunn, 56 L. J., Ch. 855; 34 Ch. D. 569; 56 L. T. 192; 35 W. R. 405; 51 J. P. 452.

In a contract for sale of land, the vendor, tenant for life, with a proviso against alienation, agreed to apply for an act of parliament to enable him to convey; the court refused to stop a suit for specific performance on the ground that the act of parliament had not been yet obtained. Devenish v. Brown, 26 L. J., Ch. 23; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1043; 4 W. R. 783.

Where a contract is made which both parties to it know at the time cannot be carried out without the act or consent of a third party, and that act or consent is done or given by the third party within a reasonable time, want of mutuality at the time of contract is no bar to its performance. Blackburn Union v. Brooks, 26 W. R. 57.

Contract Court cannot enforce.]—When the terms of a contract are such that the court cannot superintend so as to secure the performance by a plaintiff on his part, it will not decree specific performance. Peto v. Brighton, Uckfield and Tunbridge Wells Ry., 1 H. & M. 468; 9 L. T. 227; 11 W. R. 874.

If, on nonperformance by a plaintiff, both parties cannot have equal justice, it will not, in the absence of an express negative covenant, grant an injunction to restrain acts, the doing of which is inconsistent with the maintenance of the contract. Ib.

The court will not entertain a bill for specific performance of an agreement, which contains terms that cannot be enforced against the plaintiff, where the effect of a decree would be that, on the plaintiff refusing to perform his part of the contract, the defendant could not be restored to his former position. Stocker v. Wedderburn, 3 K. & J. 393; 26 L. J., Ch. 713; 5 W. R. 671.

The circumstance that an agreement, of which specific performance is sought in equity, contains stipulations on the part of a plaintiff which could not themselves be specifically enforced, affords no valid objection to making a decree in favour of the plaintiff, if the intention of the parties was that the performance of those stipulations should be secured by covenant only. Wilson v. West Hartlepool Harbour and Ry., 5 H. L. Cas. 40; 5 N. R. 289; 2 De G. J. & S. 475; 34 L. J., Ch. 241; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 124; 11 L. T. 692; 13 W. R. 361.

—— Compromise of Actions.]—An agreement was signed between the plaintiff and the defendant, that a patent, standing in the name of the plaintiff, but which was claimed by the defendant, should be held for their mutual benefit, the defendant to pay 100*l.* towards the expenses of taking out the patent. The plaintiff agreed to "rase" all proceedings, each party paying his own costs, "it being agreed that all claims between the defendant and the plaintiff are settled up to this date." The plaintiff filed a bill for specific performance of the agreement:—Held, that the agreement was such an one as the court would decree the performance of; and that it was not bad for want of mutuality. Marsh v. Milligan, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 979.

—— Personal Service.]—By a grant, dated in 1801, the then Bishop of Ely granted to P., a solicitor, "the office of receiver of all issues, profits, sum and sums of money, arising and issuing" from the possessions of the see, for his life. P. held the office under three successive bishops and attended all searches for records in the bishop's muniment room, of which he kept a key, for the performance of which acts he received fees and emoluments. Upon the accession of A. to the bishopric in 1836, he refused to admit P.'s claim of right to perform these acts; upon which P. filed his bill against the bishop:—Held, first, that the plaintiff's claim was not of such a nature as to induce this court to interfere to protect him; and, secondly, that the relief sought being analogous to the specific performance of an agreement, the bill must fail on the ground of want of mutuality. Pickering v. Ely (Bishop), 2 Y. & C. C. C. 249; 12 L. J., Ch. 271; 7 Jur. 479.

By an agreement between the plaintiffs and the defendants, the former were to have the exclusive right of engraving and publishing a series of maps, from drawings to be furnished to them by the defendants. The court refused to restrain the defendants from acting in violation of the agreement, as it could not compel the defendants to furnish the drawings, and therefore could not decree a specific performance of the agreement. Baldwin v. Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge, 9 Sim. 393; 2 Jur. 161.

Price not Fixed.]—The plaintiffs had entered into an agreement with the defendant's vendor to become lessees of premises, with the option of purchasing within a given period at a sum fixed. A second memorandum was afterwards signed by the lessor alone, prolonging the term, and giving the plaintiffs the chance of purchasing during the enlarged term, but not fixing any price:—Held, that the agreement was not void for want of mutuality, but was in all respects good and valid. Heys v. Astley, 4 De G. J. & S. 34; 3 N. R. 19; 9 L. T. 356; 12 W. R. 64.

Where the plaintiff has acted upon an agreement, want of mutuality is not a sufficient ground for refusing specific performance. Ib.

Sale of Patents.]—An agreement was entered into by which the owners of an English and certain foreign patents agreed to transfer to A. shares in a proposed company to be formed to purchase their patents. The scheme of the company, as first proposed, was abandoned, and a company under a different name, with a different capital, was brought out to purchase the English patent only:—Held, that the second company comprehended, in effect, the substance of the contract which existed between the parties, and that an objection for want of mutuality in the contract could not be sustained. Turner v. Moy, 32 L. T. 56.

Covenant to Sell Lands.]—A., on the marriage of his daughter to B., covenants that B. should have his land for 1,500*l.* less than any other would give for it, and afterwards devises the premises and dies. Court refused to decree a specific performance of this agreement, by reason of the uncertainty and want of mutuality in it. Bromley v. Jefferies, 2 Vern. 415; Pre. Ch. 138.

Invalid Lease by Tenant for Life.]—Where a tenant for life agreed to grant a mining lease containing a clause not within his powers of leasing:—Held, that the tenant for life not having a power to grant such a lease, the reversioner, although able to do so, was not entitled to enforce a specific performance of it. Ricketts v. Bell, 1 De G. & Sm. 355; 11 Jur. 918.

Contract Invalid, not being under Seal.]—Where a contract between an individual and a corporation to grant a lease was invalid, as not being under the seal of the corporation, and therefore not enforceable by the corporation, specific performance was refused. Oxford Corporation v. Crow, [1893] 3 Ch. 535; 8 R. 279; 69 L. T. 228; 42 W. R. 279. And see cases supra, col. 1765.

Sale by one Devisee in Trust.]—A feme covert, one of several devisees in trust for sale, cannot bind herself to convey the estate, and a bill by the purchaser to enforce specific performance of a contract by such trustees was dismissed. Avery v. Griffin, L. R. 6 Eq. 606. And see Sneesby v. Thorne, supra, col. 1849.

Joint Tenants—Contract for Lease of Entirety—One Joint Tenant only bound—Moiety.]—A contract entered into by an agent of two joint tenants, one of whom is an infant, for a lease of the entirety of the subject-matter of the tenancy, which is not enforceable against the two joint tenants as to the entirety, will not be enforced by specific performance against the adult joint tenant as to his moiety where there has been no misrepresentation on his part. Lumley v. Ravenscroft, 64 L. J., Q. B. 441; [1895] 1 Q. B. 683; 14 R. 347; 72 L. T. 382; 43 W. R. 584; 59 J. P. 277—C. A. And see cases infra, col. 1856.

6. Breach of Trust or Forfeiture.

Breach of Trust.]—The court will not decree a specific performance which involves a breach of trust. Maw v. Topham, 19 Beav. 576. S. P., Wood v. Richardson, 4 Beav. 174; 5 Jur. 623.

The court refuses to enforce specific performance of a contract which is a breach of trust, equally at the suit of the vendors as of the purchasers. Dunn v. Flood, 54 L. J., Ch. 370; 28 Ch. D. 586; 52 L. T. 699; 33 W. R. 315—C. A.

Sale by Trustees.]—Where act of sale by trustees takes place, under circumstances of breach of trust, court will not decree specific performance in favour of bonâ fide or innocent purchaser. Ord v. Noel, 5 Madd. 438; 21 R. R. 328.

An agreement by trustees of two properties held on different trusts for a mining lease of both at a rent of so much per acre worked:—Held, a breach of trust, and specific performance at the suit of the trustees refused. Tolson v. Sheard, 46 L. J., Ch. 815; 5 Ch. D. 19; 36 L. T. 756; 25 W. R. 667.

Contract by trustees for sale of trust property, conjointly with property not subject to the trusts, will be specifically performed only where the terms of the contract furnish means of ascertaining clearly the proportion of the proceeds of the sale to be attributed to the trust premises. Rede v. Oakes, 4 De G. J. & S. 505; 34 L. J., Ch. 145; 11 L. T. 549; 13 W. R. 303.

A trustee, with the authority of his co-trustees, signed an agreement for the sale of trust property. In an action for specific performance, to which the co-trustees were not parties:—Held, that specific performance could not be ordered either as to the whole or as to the part in which the contracting trustee had a beneficial interest. Naylor v. Goodall, 47 L. J., Ch. 53; 37 L. T. 422; 26 W. R. 162.

A trustee entered into a contract for the sale of trust property, and it was agreed that the purchaser should, out of the purchase-money, retain a private debt due to him from the trustee. On a bill by the trustee:—Held, that this court would not decree the specific performance of such a contract. Thompson v. Blackstone, 6 Beav. 470.

Sale for Agreed Purpose.]—A contract in writing entered into for sale of land by trustees on the parol understanding that a church should be built. Purchaser before completion agreed to sell to a third party, who intended to erect a manufactory on it, and the trustees then refused to complete:—Held, that the court would not compel them to complete. Trappes v. Cobb, 16 W. R. 117.

Property liable to Pre-emption.]—It is no defence to a suit for specific performance against trustees of a turnpike road, that the land they have contracted to sell is liable to pre-emption by the owner of the adjoining land under the General Turnpike Act, 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, s. 39, even where the offer required has not, through inadvertence, been made to such owner, and it is in evidence that the owner insists on his right, the purchaser making no objection to the title, and being content to take such estate as the trustees could convey. Barrett v. Ring, 2 Sm. & G. 43.

Purchase of Sub-Lease instead of Lease.]—Where a town council is empowered to purchase or rent lands for the purposes of baths and wash-houses, the purchase of lands held under a sub-lease, the interest in which might be lost by the default of the lessees, is a breach of trust, and specific performance will not be decreed. Mulholland v. Belfast Corporation, 9 Ir. Ch. R. 292.

Sale of Bankrupt's Estate.]—The provision in a contract for the sale of the property of a bankrupt, entered into by the creditor's assignees, that the purchase-money is to be received by the solicitor of the assignees, is not a breach of trust which would induce the court to refuse specific performance of the contract. Hughes v. Morris, 9 Hare, 636; 21 L. J., Ch. 761; 16 Jur. 603.

Breach of Trust by Directors.]—The directors of a railway company are trustees (in an important sense of the word) of their statutory powers, and an agreement entered into by the company amounting to a breach of trust will not be enforced. Shrewsbury and Birmingham Ry. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 4 De G. M. & G. 115; 6 H. L. Cas. 113; 22 L. J., Ch. 682; 17 Jur. 845; 1 W. R. 172.

Prior Inconsistent Agreement.]—The court will not compel a defendant specifically to perform an agreement when the result would be to compel him to commit a breach of a prior agreement with another person. Willmott v. Barber, 15 Ch. D. 96; 43 L. T. 95; 28 W. R. 911.

Forfeiture.]—Although a court of equity will not in general decree specific performance of an agreement, of which the forfeiture of a lease will be the consequence, it will not allow a person to set that consequence up as a defence to a decree for specific performance, where the act creating the forfeiture is one which he might himself have guarded against. Helling v. Lumley, 3 De G. & J. 493; 28 L. J., Ch. 249; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 301; 7 W. R. 152.

Where the acts of the party to a contract are such as would have worked a forfeiture of all benefit of the contract if it had been executed, the court will not decree a specific performance. But when there is a doubt as to whether there has been any breach of the contract, and the evidence is conflicting, or the breaches of the agreement are nominal, the court may make a decree, leaving the plaintiff to his remedy at law. Cartan v. Bury, 10 Ir. Ch. R. 387.

Forfeiture not Probable.]—Agreement to grant a lease of copyhold premises for twenty-one years, and to put the same in repair, there being no evidence that to grant such lease would work a forfeiture, or that the licence of the lord could not be obtained:—Decreed, to be specifically performed. Paxton v. Newton, 2 Sm. & G. 437.

—— Agreement for Underlease—Covenant not to Underlet without Licence—Unreasonable Refusal.]—The plaintiff and defendant signed a memorandum of agreement, by which the defendant was to take an underlease of a house on certain terms. By the lease under which the plaintiff held, there was a covenant that the lessee would not assign or underlet without the licence in writing of the lessor, but the licence was not to be withheld in the case of the lessee obtaining a respectable and responsible person as tenant. The defendant was a respectable and responsible tenant, but the lessor declined to consent to the underlease, unless a certain undertaking was given by the defendant:—Held, that the defendant would get a good title and run no substantial risk of having it impeached on the ground of any breach of covenant by the granting of the underlease. He was therefore ordered to specifically perform the contract. White v. Hay, 72 L. T. 281.

7. Where Court cannot carry out its Order.

Work of Unspecified Character.]—Where there is an agreement to do certain works to the satisfaction of a referee named, without specifying the nature, materials, or extent of such works, no decree for specific performance can be made. Semble, a court of equity makes a decree in the sense that a court of law awards damages, and will not make a decree which it cannot enforce. L. & S. W. Ry. v. Humphrey, 6 W. R. 784.

Definite Work.]—A court of equity has jurisdiction to enforce the specific performance of a contract by a defendant to do defined work upon his property, in the performance of which the plaintiff has a material interest, and which is not capable of adequate compensation in damages. Storer v. G. W. Ry., 2 Y. & C. C. C. 48; 3 Railw. Cas. 106; 12 L. J., Ch. 65. And see cases supra, col. 1789.

Employment of Person to Construct Works.]—The court has not jurisdiction to decree the specific performance of a contract for which the consideration on the part of the plaintiff is the execution of certain works which the court is unable to superintend. Peto v. Brighton, Uckfield and Tunbridge Wells Ry., 1 H. & M. 468; 9 L. T. 227; 11 W. R. 874.

Therefore, where a bill stated an agreement to employ the plaintiffs as contractors for making a railway, a motion for an injunction was refused. Ib.

Specific performance will not be decreed of a contract to employ a person to construct works which the court is unable to superintend. Greenhill v. Isle of Wight (Newport Junction) Ry., 23 L. T. 885; 19 W. R. 345.

Therefore, where directors of a railway company entered into a written agreement to give G. "a contract for the construction of the line for 55,000*l.*, subject to a specification of the works to be agreed upon between G. and the engineer of the company":—Held, that the agreement was of such a nature that specific performance could not have been decreed. Ib.

The defendants agreed with the plaintiffs to undertake to execute a branch railway according to the terms of a specification to be prepared by the plaintiffs' engineer for the performance of their contract. The specification was prepared by the company's engineer, but, prices having risen, the defendants repudiated their agreement:—Held, first, that the agreement could not be enforced as regards the construction of the railway, because, from the nature of the works the subject of the agreement, it was an agreement the execution of which the court could not superintend consistently with public convenience, inasmuch as the motions would be incessant for committal or otherwise for nonperformance of orders with regard to the making of particular works. South Wales Ry. v. Wythes, 1 K. & J. 186. Affirmed 3 Eq. R. 153; 5 De G. M. & G. 731; 24 L. J., Ch. 87; 3 W. R. 133.

To work Line and repair Rolling Stock.]—A company agreed with contractors that the contractors should work the line and keep the engines and rolling plant in repair at a specified remuneration, and that the contract should be in force for seven years, but with a proviso for its determination if the contractors did not, within forty-eight hours after notice given by the company, obey the instructions contained in such notice:—Held, that the agreement was not of such a kind as to be enforceable by injunction restraining the company from determining the contract. Johnson v. Shrewsbury and Birmingham Ry., 3 De G. M. & G. 914; 22 L. J., Ch. 921; 17 Jur. 1015.

And see Cook v. Chilcott, supra, col. 1791.

To make Siding.]—A railway company, requiring some of the plaintiff's land, entered into a contract for the purchase, by which the company agreed to make and maintain, so long as it should be a convenience, a siding, with all necessary approaches, at B., for public use, for the reception and delivery of goods:—Held, that the court will not dismiss the bill, on the ground that the agreement was not such as could be carried out under the superintendence of the court. Lytton v. G. N. Ry. 2 K. & J. 394; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 436; 4 W. R. 441.

And see cases sub head PERSONAL SERVICE, supra, col. 1797.

III. PRACTICE.

A. IN GENERAL.

Questions at Hearing.]—In suits for specific performance, all questions as to the validity of the contract, and whether it is such as ought to be specifically enforced, must be raised upon the hearing. Hood v. Oglander, 34 Beav. 513; 6 N. R. 245; 34 L. J., Ch. 528; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 498; 12 L. T. 627; 13 W. R. 705.

It is the duty of the court, in a bill for specific performance arising out of a doubtful point of law, to settle the law on the subject. Bell v. Holtby, 42 L. J., Ch. 266; L. R. 15 Eq. 178; 28 L. T. 9; 21 W. R. 321.

On a bill for specific performance, the questions whether time was originally of the essence of the contract, and whether the defendant has waived it are questions depending on evidence, and to be decided upon the hearing. Levy v. Lindo, 3 Mer. 81.

Defective Title.]—Where answer to bill for specific performance raises other objections to performance besides defect of title court will not, on motion by plaintiff for reference of title after answer, decide whether other objections are frivolous or not, semble. Withy v. Cottle, 1 Sim. & S. 174; Turn. & R. 78; 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 117; 23 R. R. 187. S. P., Gordon v. Ball, 1 Sim. & S. 178.

If defence to bill for specific performance of agreement depends merely on want of title in vendor, defendant ought to rest on his answer, and not file a cross-bill. Hilton v. Barrow, 1 Ves. J. 284.

Issue Tried.]—Bill for specific performance dismissed, although an issue had been tried and had resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff, the court being of opinion that the agreement was one of which specific performance could not be decreed, and that the issue ought not to have been directed. Morrison v. Barrow, 1 De G. F. & J. 633.

Bill Dismissed.]—Where a plaintiff has failed at the hearing to prove his title to a decree for a specific performance on a point not raised by the pleadings, the court dismissed the bill, without prejudice to any other bill that the plaintiff may be advised to file. Clay v. Rufford, 5 De G. & Sm. 768.

Different Agreement set up.]—Where a plaintiff sought the specific performance of an agreement, and the defendant set up by his answer a different agreement, the terms of which the plaintiff had always repudiated:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled, upon the hearing, to have the agreement set up by the defendant specifically performed. Jeffery v. Stephens, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 947; 8 W. R. 427.

In a suit for a specific performance of a contract for the sale to the plaintiff of certain bonds, the plaintiff cannot at the bar abandon his case as to the particular bonds, and ask specific relief by the delivery of other bonds of the same kind, admitted by the defendant to be in his hands. Simpson v. Malherbe, 6 N. R. 245: 13 L. T. 112; 13 W. R. 887. And see Marshall v. Berridge, supra, col. 1850.

Different Agreement Proved.]—Bill for specific performance of a parol agreement to renew, the only witness for the plaintiff proved an agreement different from that in the bill; two defendants by an answer stated an agreement different from both: in strictness the bill ought to be dismissed, but specific performance was decreed according to the answers, with costs against the plaintiff. Mortimer v. Orchard, 2 Ves. J. 242.

And see cases supra, col. 1774.

Compromise—Fresh Bill when Necessary.]—In a redemption suit against the mortgagee in possession a compromise was agreed upon, under which the mortgagor was to pay a fixed sum on a certain day and the mortgagee was to carry on the business and give up possession on payment, and all proceedings in the suit were to be stayed. The mortgagor failed to pay:—Held, that the agreement for compromise could not be enforced on motion in the suit, but a fresh bill must be filed for specific performance. Pryer v. Gribble, 44 L. J., Ch. 676; L. R. 10 Ch. 534; 32 L. T. 238; 23 W. R. 642.

Authority of Agent.]—The former practice, which, in a suit for specific performance, required the authority of an agent to enter into a binding contract on behalf of his principal to be specially pleaded, still prevails. Vale of Neath Colliery Co. v. Furness, 45 L. J., Ch. 276; 34 L. T. 231; 24 W. R. 631.

In an action for specific performance of an agreement made by an agent, the statement of defence, after alleging unsoundness of mind of the principal, denied that any agreement had been entered into by a person lawfully authorised:—Held, that the defendant had not put in issue the question of the authority of the agent, and was only entitled to adduce evidence with respect to the unsoundness of mind. Byrd v. Nunn, 47 L. J., Ch. 1; 7 Ch. D. 284; 37 L. T. 585; 26 W. R. 101.

Advancing Cause.]—In a suit for specific performance of an agreement to let a house for a short term, the plaintiff should apply to have the cause advanced so that it may be heard before the term has expired. De Brassac v. Martyn, 9 L. T. 287; 11 W. R. 1020.

Mode of Trial.]—In an action for the specific performance of an agreement by the incumbent and patron of a church to give up a portion of his district to form a part of a district for another church, an application by the plaintiff, under r. 26, Ord. XXXVI., Rules of Supreme Court, 1876, that the action might be tried by a judge without a jury, was granted, although the defendant had given notice under r. 3 of the same order, for the trial of the issues of fact by a jury. Usil v. Whelpton, 50 L. J., Ch. 511; 45 L. T. 39; 29 W. R. 799.

Pleading.]—An allegation in a bill by a purchaser for specific performance, that he was informed by his agent that a written agreement was executed, followed by statements referring to the agreement as actually made, is a sufficient allegation of the execution of a written contract. Heard v. Pilley, 38 L. J., Ch. 718; L. R. 4 Ch. 548; 21 L. T. 68; 17 W. R. 750.

A bill by a vendor for specific performance of a contract to sell, stating or shewing by reasonable inference that the vendor cannot give a valid conveyance, is demurrable; otherwise, where the allegations only disclose difficulties in the mode of conveyance. Beaufort (Duke) v. Glynn, 3 Sm. & G. 213.

Bill by a vendee for specific performance, insisting that the vendors could not make a good title, dismissed with costs. Nicolson v. Wordsworth, 2 Swanst. 365; 19 R. R. 86.

Signature.]—If bill for specific performance of agreement state that agreement in writing, signature will be presumed. Rist v. Hobson, 1 Sim. & S. 543; 2 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 86.

Where the want of signature to an agreement for the sale of lands clearly appears on the bill, the objection may be taken advantage of by general demurrer, but the statements of this bill not being inconsistent with a signature by the party to be charged, and containing allegations of part performance, a general demurrer thereto was overruled. Field v. Hutchinson, 1 Beav. 599; 3 Jur. 792.

Case Strictly Stated.]—The terms of an agreement sought to be specifically executed must be accurately stated, and the case must be proved as stated on the record. Ormond v. Anderson, 2 Ball & B. 270; 12 R. R. 103.

Agreement by Letters.]—Where letters are stated in bill as the agreement, no testimony aliunde is admissible; otherwise, where stated as evidence of the agreement only. Bird v. Blotchley, 6 Madd. 17.

Parol Agreement.]—Bill alleging a written agreement, may be sustained by evidence of a parol agreement. Spurrier v. Fitzgerald, 6 Ves. 548.

Joint Contract.]—Where a joint contract of sale is alleged, a joint contract must be proved. Wollaston v. Osborn, 1 W. R. 163.

Waiver of Title.]—In a suit for specific performance of an agreement to take a lease, it must be alleged and charged in the bill that the defendant has waived the production of the lessor's title, if such waiver is intended to be relied on. Gaston v. Frankum, 2 De G. & Sm. 561; 13 Jur. 739.

B. PARTIES.

1. Parties to Contract.

Parties in General.]—To a bill founded on a contract, the parties to the contract are in general the only necessary parties. Humphreys v. Hollis, Jacob. 75. S. P., Wood v. White, 4 Myl. & Cr. 460; 2 Keen, 664; 8 L. J., Ch. 209; 3 Jur. 117.

A person not a party to the contract, ought not to be made party to a suit for specific performance. Peacock v. Penson, 11 Beav. 355; 18 L. J., Ch. 57; 14 Jur. 518.

Entire strangers to an agreement, and claiming under an adverse title to it, cannot be parties to a suit for its specific performance. De Houghton v. Money, 15 L. T. 403; 15 W. R. 214.

It is a rule of equity that specific performance can only be decreed against parties to the original contract, or persons claiming under them. Lumley v. Timms, 28 L. T. 157; 21 W. R. 319.

Stranger to Contract.]—A purchaser may, under special circumstances, make other persons than the parties to the contract who are interested in the estate parties to a bill for specific performance. Tasker v. Small, 6 Sim. 633; 3 Myl. & Cr. 63; 5 L. J., Ch. 321.

If a person not originally a party to an agreement, acts under it, and professes to render accounts and make payments according to its provisions, a bill for the performance of it may be maintained against him, even though the original agreement stipulated that it was not to extend to create any demand against him. Cockell v. Whiting, 3 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 6.

Specific performance decreed at the instance of a person entitled to the benefit of an agreement, though not a party to it. Hook v. Kinnear, 3 Swanst. 417; 19 R. R. 251.

Party to Antecedent Agreement.]—Although a person claiming land by title paramount is not a proper party to a suit for specific performance, a person who, by virtue of an antecedent agreement with the vendor, claims to be interested in the purchase-money, is a proper party to a suit by the purchaser to have the right to the purchase-money ascertained, and for specific performance against the vendor. West Midland Ry. v. Nixon, 1 H. & M. 176.

Where Sub-Contract.]—B. agreed to sell property to W., who, before the completion of the agreement, contracted to sell a portion of the property to F. Subsequently F. filed a bill against B. and W., praying for the specific performance of his agreement:—Held, that B. was a proper party to the suit. Fenwick v. Bulman, L. R. 9 Eq. 165; 21 L. T. 628; 18 W. R. 179.

A party claiming an interest in a purchase by virtue of a contract as having been entered into on his behalf, is a proper party to a suit by the vendor for the specific performance of the contract: Chadwick v. Maden, 9 Hare, 188; 21 L. J., Ch. 876.

Joint Purchasers.]—A bill was filed for the specific performance of a contract, by one of two joint purchasers, against the other purchaser and the vendor. An objection taken by the vendor, on the ground that the plaintiff could not support his bill, unless the joint purchaser joined him as a co-plaintiff therein, was overruled. Mackreth v. Dunn, 10 L. J., Ch. 367. And see Hornsby v. Bird, infra, col. 1863.

Tenant.]—A. agreed to sell to B. a piece of land in the occupation of his tenant, and to buy up the tenant's interest. B. having entered on the land before payment of his purchase-money, A. and his tenant served him with notices not to trespass, and afterwards A. filed a bill against B. for a specific performance, and to restrain the trespass:—Held, that the tenant was not a necessary party to the suit. Robertson v. G. W. Ry., 10 Sim. 314; 1 Railw. Cas. 459; 9 L. J., Ch. 17.

Owner of Inheritance.]—Whether the owner of the inheritance is a necessary party to a suit, against tenant for life, for specific performance of an agreement for a lease for lives renewable for ever, quære. Lowry v. Dufferin. 1 Ir. Eq. R. 281.

Claim for specific performance of an agreement by a railway company to purchase land from trustees:—Held, that persons beneficially interested in the land were not necessary parties to the suit. Potts v. Thames Haven Dock & Ry., 15 Jur. 1004.

Corporation.]—Tenant for life, who is restricted by the instrument under which he holds from alienating his estate, or from agreeing or attempting so to do, contracts to sell a portion of the property to visitors of the county lunatic asylum. Upon a bill by the vendor for specific performance, the court refused to stop the suit by allowing a demurrer, although the title was not such as could be forced upon an unwilling purchaser, the plaintiff being entitled to fair opportunity for application to parliament to cure the defect. The clerk of the visitors of the county lunatic asylum is a sufficient party to a suit for specific performance of an agreement by them to purchase, without the treasurer of the county, he being a trustee of the money which has come to his hands, and bound to pay it over to the clerk. Devenish v. Brown, 4 W. R. 783.

Company.]—To enforce specific performance of an agreement entered into by the directors of a company, it is sufficient to make the company a defendant. Scott v. Oakley, 4 N. R. 258; 33 L. J., Ch. 612; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 648; 10 L. T. 801; 12 W. R. 897.

—— Shareholders.]—To a suit by the directors of a joint-stock company on behalf of themselves and all other the shareholders, seeking to have the benefit of an agreement entered into by an agent of the company, it is not necessary that all the shareholders should be made parties. Taylor v. Salmon, 4 Myl. & Cr. 134.

A person who sets up a title adverse to the company, may be properly made a defendant in such a suit, although he also sustains the character of a shareholder. Ib.

Apportionment of Rent—Landlord.]—A company arranged by private contract the price of the interest of a tenant in lands they required, there being a covenant in his lease not to assign without the consent of his landlord. The contract provided an apportionment of rent:—Held, that the company could not resist specific performance, because the lessor was not a party to such apportionment. Slipper v. Tottenham and Hampstead Junction Ry., 36 L. J., Ch. 841; L. R. 4 Eq. 112.

Beneficiary.]—Upon a bill for the specific performance of a covenant with A. for the benefit of B., A. must be a party. Cooke v. Cooke, 2 Vern. 36.

Trustees.]—In a bill to compel performance of covenant to surrender copyhold estate to A. in trust for others, A. must be a party. Cope v. Parry, 2 J. & W. 538.

Where trustees sell property with depreciatory conditions which render the sale liable to be impeached by the cestuis que trustent, the trustees cannot maintain an action for specific performance against the purchasers. Dunn v. Flood, 49 L. T. 670; 32 W. R. 197.

—— Breach of Trust.]—An agreement by trustees of a will to grant an underlease of their testator's property, is primâ facie inconsistent with a trust for sale of it. There may be circumstances to justify the agreement, but the court cannot enter into the consideration of those circumstances in a suit for specific performance between the trustees and the underlessee, the cestuis que trustent not being parties to it. Evans v. Jackson, 8 Sim. 217; 6 L. J., Ch. 8.

—— Purchase on behalf of.]—A party purchased land, and signified at the time that he made the purchase on behalf of the trustee in his marriage settlement, who had money vested in him to be laid out in land, and a bill being filed against him for specific performance, the court would not allow the case to proceed until the trustee was made a party. Wynniat v. Lindo, Tam. 512.

Remainderman.]—In a case resting simply upon covenant, if the party seeking specific performance be entitled in possession, he has a right to the enjoyment of the property, modo et formâ, according to his covenant; but if he be entitled in remainder only, he must shew that he has sustained some material damage by reason of the breach to entitle him to relief of this nature. Johnstone v. Hall, 2 K. & J. 414; 25 L. J., Ch. 462; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 780; 4 W. R. 417.

Auctioneer.]—The proper practice is not to make an auctioneer holding the deposit a defendant when the deposit is of small amount, unless he refuses to pay it into court when required; but where the deposit is of large amount, he may be properly made a defendant, unless he has paid it into court before action brought. Egmont (Earl) v. Smith, 46 L. J., Ch. 356; 6 Ch. D. 469.

Lease.]—Lease of lands is granted, reserving mines, &c., and a power of working them, lessor paying for damage done, which mines are leased to B. On a bill for performance of covenants against representatives of lessor, B. need not be a party. Green v. Poole, 5 Bro. P. C. 504.

—— Mortgage.]—A. agreed to grant B. a lease, but before he had done so he mortgaged the property to C. with notice, who in no way contested A.'s right to the lease:—Held, that C. was not a proper party to a suit for specific performance. Long v. Bowring, 33 Beav. 585.

Sub-Lessee.]—A lessee of a house agreed to sub-let; he afterwards became bankrupt, and his trustee disclaimed the lease. The landlord commenced an action of ejectment against the sub-lessee. The sub-lessee filed his bill to restrain the action, and to compel the landlord to grant him a lease according to the terms of his agreement with the first lessee. The provisions of the agreement differed from those of the lease:—Held, that the sub-lessee had no equity to enforce the provisions of the agreement against the landlord. Taylor v. Gillott, 44 L. J., Ch. 740; L. R. 20 Eq. 682; 32 L. T. 795; 24 W. R. 65.

A lessee covenanted with his under-lessees, that in case he obtained an extension of the term he would give to the under-lessees a like extension of his under-term. A lease was subsequently taken from the ground landlord for an extended term in the name of a trustee for the separate use of the lessee's wife. The under-lessees filed a bill against the lessee, his wife, and her trustee, charging that the extended lease had been taken in a trustee's name, in order to defeat their rights under the lessee's covenant, and praying that the wife and her trustee might be decreed to grant an under-lease to the plaintiff for the extended term:—Held, that the action failed, as the suit was virtually one for specific performance against persons who were not parties to the original covenant or contract to renew the underlease. Lumley v. Timms, 28 L. T. 608; 21 W. R. 494—L.JJ.

Joint Vendors.]—Five persons contracted to sell an estate in land, and a formal agreement was prepared, but before execution it was discovered that the entirety belonged to four only; and accordingly it was verbally agreed that the fifth should not be required to execute. The agreement was executed by the four only as vendors and by the purchaser, but as no alteration was made in the body of the agreement it still purported to be an agreement by the five to sell and convey:—Held, that the four who executed could not maintain a bill for specific performance against the purchaser. Hornsby v. Bird, 38 L. J., Ch. 244; 17 W. R. 367.

Husband and wife may maintain a suit for specific performance of an agreement by them with a third party, for the sale to him of lands whereof the husband is seised in right of the wife. Fennelly v. Anderson, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 706.

Joint Lessees.]—Where three joint lessees of a manor agreed with M., upon the expiration of a subsisting grant, to make a fresh grant to him, and entered into a bond for performance of the agreement; one of the lessors afterwards conveyed his interest subject to the agreement, and afterwards died, leaving the plaintiff his executor, who, pending a suit against him, and the co-lessors, were unable to make the grant, upon which several actions on the bond were brought against the plaintiff and the other lessors, but a consolidation rule was obtained to abide the event of one of the actions:—Held, that M., being a party to the rule, and the question as against him being the same at law and in equity, he could not maintain a suit for specific performance of the agreement. Hole v. Pearse, 5 Hare, 408.

Creditors.]—Plaintiff, having become surety for the defendant for due payment of an annuity, the defendant who was tenant in tail in remainder, covenanted with the plaintiff, that he would suffer a recovery of the entailed premises for the benefit of the plaintiff. Upon a bill being filed for a specific performance of the contract, the defendant objected that certain creditors, upon judgments entered up against the defendant subsequently to the date of the indenture of indemnity, had, by the statute 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 13, acquired charges upon the entailed premises prior in point of date to the plaintiff's claim, and that such creditors were necessary parties to the suit:—Held, the objection went to the relief, and not to the want of parties. Petre v. Duncombe, 17 L. J., Ch. 370; 12 Jur. 261.

2. Real and Personal Representatives.

Death of Vendor.]—A vendor of a real estate died before completion, intestate as to his real estate:—Held, that the legal personal representatives of the vendor might maintain a bill against the vendor's heir and the purchaser for a specific performance Hoddel v. Pugh, 33 Beav. 489; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 534; 10 L. T. 446; 12 W. R. 782.

To a suit by the personal representative of a vendor of real estate for specific performance of the contract, the real representative of the vendor is a necessary party. Roberts v. Marchant, 1 Ph. 370; 1 Hare, 547; 13 L. J., Ch. 56.

Death of Purchaser.] — A bill for specific performance of a contract for the sale of real estate was brought against the heir of a purchaser, alleging that he in his ancestor's lifetime took upon himself the contract. To this suit the administratrix of the purchaser was made a defendant, and upon her death the suit was revived against the grantee of limited letters of administration, de bonis non of the purchaser, the plaintiff not seeking any general administration; quære, whether such grantee was a proper and sufficient party to the revived suit; or whether the general personal representative of the purchaser ought to have been made a party. Care v. Cork, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 130; 12 L. J., Ch. 156; 7 Jur. 461.

Where the purchaser dies before completion, his real and personal representatives are necessary parties, unless not interested in the subject-matter. S. C., 6 Jur. 385.

—— Infant Devisees.]—Suit for specific performance of contract to purchase freehold; defendant had paid several large sums on account of the purchase-money, and a considerable portion was still due. He died when cause was at issue, leaving real and personal estate to infant children. Plaintiffs revived against executors only:—Held, that infant devisees were necessary parties. Suit ordered to stand over to amend, in that respect, by supplemental bill. Townsend v. Champernowne, 9 Price, 130.

Heir of Devisor.]—Bill by devisees in trust to sell for specific performance of an agreement to purchase, that the heir of the devisor is not a party to the suit, is not matter of exception to the report in favour of the title. Wakeman v. Rutland (Duke), 3 Ves. 234. And see VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

3. DERIVATIVE PURCHASERS.

In General.]—Quære, in what cases successive purchasers are properly made parties to a suit for specific performance. Nelthorpe v. Holgate, 1 Coll. C. C. 203; 8 Jur. 551. See cases stated 1 Coll. C. C. 223, n. et seq.

A party claiming an interest as a sub-purchaser is not a proper party to a suit by the vendor for specific performance, semble. Chadwick v. Maden, 9 Hare, 188; 21 L. J., Ch. 876.

H. contracted with J. for the purchase of a piece of land, and subsequently sold his bargain to M. The abstract of title was delivered. The draft conveyance was prepared and approved:—Held, that H. and M. were not improperly made co-plaintiffs. Moxhay v. Inderwick, 11 Jur. 837.

Purchaser of Part of Property.]—B. agreed to sell property to W., who before the completion of the agreement, contracted to sell a portion of the property to F. Subsequently F. filed a bill against B. and W., praying for the specific performance of his agreement, and of so much of the agreement between B. and W. as related to the property comprised in his agreement:—Held, that B. was a proper party to the suit. Fenwick v. Bulman, L. R. 9 Eq. 165; 21 L. T. 628; 18 W. R. 179.

Assignee of Purchaser.]—An original vendee of an estate is not a necessary party to a bill against his assignee for specific performance of an agreement to purchase. Hall v. Laver, 3 Y. & C. 191.

Bill for specific performance of an agreement to purchase against the original vendee and assignee of his contract, dismissed as against the former, the plaintiff being held to have accepted the latter as purchaser. Quære, if the bill had been filed against the original purchaser only. Holden v. Hayn, 1 Mer. 47; 15 R. R. 83.

Company—Transfer to New Company.]—The Mid-Kent Railway Company entered into a contract for the purchase of land, but did not pay the purchase-money, and subsequently thereto an act of parliament was passed, transferring all the property of that company to the South Eastern Railway Company. On bill against both companies for the specific performance of the contract:—Held, the South Eastern Railway was a proper party. Hacker v. Mid-Kent Ry. and S. E. Ry., 11 Jur. (N.S.) 634; 12 L. T. 699.

Cross Bill by Sub-Purchaser.]—Vendors, to their bill against purchaser for specific performance of, or for rescinding the agreement, made a sub-purchaser a defendant; and the sub-purchaser afterwards filed a bill against his vendor for specific performance of his agreement, and made the original vendors defendants. A demurrer by the original vendors to the sub-purchaser's bill was overruled, on the ground that they had made him a defendant to their bill. Fenwick v. Bulman, supra.

4. SALE IN LOTS.

Two Houses under one Lease.]—Two houses, held under one lease, were sold in separate lots, and it was stipulated that the purchasers should be parties to each other's assignment:—Held, that the purchaser of lot 2 was not a necessary party to a suit for specific performance against the purchaser of lot 1. Paterson v. Long, 5 Beav. 186.

Sale to Building Society.]—The plaintiff sold some land to a building society, retaining an equitable mortgage on it for the purchase-money. The land was divided and sold in lots to the members:—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain a suit against the purchasers of some of the lots to recover his debt, in the absence of the purchasers of the other lots. Peto v. Hammond, 29 Beav. 91.

Building Plots — Restrictive Covenants.]—Where an estate is vested in trustees who sell in plots for building subject to restrictive covenants, each purchaser has an equity against the others to compel the observance of the covenants. In a suit to enforce such an equity the trustees are necessary parties, and the remaining purchasers ought to be represented on the record. Eastwood v. Levers, 33 L. J., Ch. 355; 9 L. T. 615; 12 W. R. 195.

Joint Power of Appointment—Infant Beneficiary.]—Contracts for sale of different parts of an estate held under the same title had been entered into with different purchasers by a father and son who had a joint power of appointment under a settlement. The son died before the conveyances were executed. The legal estate under the settlement thereupon became vested in the father for life, with the remainder in tail to an infant. On a bill by one of the purchasers for the purpose of having the several contracts carried into effect, Turner, L. J., declined to make a decree against the infants in a suit of that form. The bill was amended by making all the purchasers co-plaintiffs, and the decree was then made against the infant and unborn persons claiming under the settlement. Hargreaves v. Wright, 1 W. R. 408.

Alteration of Particulars of Sale.]—A bill brought by a purchaser for the specific performance of an agreement to sell lot A. as described in the particulars of sale, was resisted on the ground that by an arrangement, to which the plaintiff was a party, part of lot A. as described, was deducted from that lot, and added to lot B.:—Held, that the plaintiff, on amending his bill, and puting in issue this averment, was bound to make the purchasers of lot B. defendants to the suit. Mason v. Franklin, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 239.

Mistake in Parcels.]—Where on a sale in lots, H., the purchaser of lot 6, obtained from the vendor a portion of the property comprised in lot 5, and the purchaser of lot 5 brought an action, and it was held that he was entitled to an assignment of that portion wrongly assigned to H.:—Held, also that the vendor was not a proper party to the suit. Leuty v. Hillas, 2 De G. & J. 110; 27 L. J., Ch. 534; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1166; 6 W. R. 217.

C. INQUIRIES AND ACCOUNTS.

Account.]—Bill for specific performance against vendor in possession, and an account being necessary of the vendee's personal estate, referred to the master to fix a short day for the payment of the purchase-money, otherwise the bill to be dismissed as against those defendants, with costs. Lowther v. Andover, 1 Bro. C. C. 396.

Fact not in Issue.]—If, in the course of proceedings for specific performance, there comes out a fact, not put in issue by either party, which affects the legality of the contract, or tends to shew that the contract is not fully stated in the bill, the court will direct an inquiry into the fact so disclosed. Parken v. Whitby, Turn. & R. 366; 24 R. R. 74.

Parol Variation.]—Semble, in a suit for specific performance of a written agreement, a parol variation, not set up by the answer, but coming out on the cross-examination of the defendant's agent, who was one of the plaintiff's witnesses, is a proper subject for inquiry before the court finally disposes of the case. London and Birmingham Ry. v. Winter, Cr. & Ph. 57.

Where a parol agreement, varying the terms of the written agreement, is set up by the defendants in a suit for specific performance, and supported by evidence affording presumption or suspicion of its existence, an inquiry will be directed. Van v. Corpe, 3 Myl. & K. 269; 6 L. J., Ch. 208; 1 Jur. 149. And see cases supra, col. 1775.

Inquiry as to Title.]—If the common decree for specific performance and for inquiry as to title be made, and no special directions, the purchaser may under it raise objections which he had abandoned before suit. Curling v. Austin, 2 Dr. & Sm. 129; 10 W. R. 682.

The court will not add any special inquiry on the subject to the decree, or direct the chief clerk to state special circumstances. Ib.

Inquiry as to Terms of Contract.]—Where contract for the purchase of an estate is not complete in the lifetime of the ancestor, the terms of it not being ascertained, heir is not entitled to have the personal estate applied in payment of the purchase money. A reference or issue will not be granted to ascertain the terms of the contract. Savage v. Carroll, 1 Ball & B. 265. See 12 R. R. 32.

Agreement for Lease.]—Decree for specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease, rejecting one item for such conditions, &c., as shall be judged proper by J., and substituting reference to the master, the agency of J. not being of the essence of the contract. Gourlay v. Somerset (Duke), 19 Ves. 429; 13 R. R. 234.

Mixed Fund.]—When estates and other property forming a mixed fund are settled, the court, where the parties entitled to this mixed fund are numerous, will not, as against a purchaser of part of the mixed fund in which purchase one of its objects acquiesced, act as against that purchaser without knowing all the dispositions of that mixed fund, and will direct inquiries accordingly. Thompson v Simpson, 1 Dr. & War. 459.

Share in Partnership.]—The vendor of a share in a co-partnership business filed a bill against the purchaser, who had taken possession, charging that he had grossly mismanaged the property and destroyed its value, and praying that he might be declared to have accepted the title, and might be decreed to perform the contract specifically. The court was of opinion that the title had not been accepted, and as a good title was not shewn, a specific performance could not be decreed:—Held, that upon a record so framed, no accounts or inquiries could be directed. Stevens v. Guppy, 3 Russ. 171; 6 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 164.

D. COSTS.

General Rule.]—The rule, that the costs of a suit for specific performance depend upon when the title was first shewn, is to be strictly adhered to. Wilkinson v. Hartley, 15 Beav. 183.

The costs of a suit for specific performance do not depend upon when a good title was first shewn, but upon the conduct of each party in causing the litigation. Parr v. Lovegrove, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 600; 6 W. R. 201.

The rule which makes the costs of a suit for specific performance depend upon when the title was first shewn relaxed; first, where the requisition was not made until after a bill was filed; and, secondly, where, although the requisition was made before the bill was filed, noncompliance was attributable to the purchaser having claimed compensation, in respect of which his bill had been dismissed with costs. Lyle v. Yarborough (Earl), 1 Johns. 70.

Title, when Proved.]—A vendor is entitled to costs of action, if he shewed and offered a good possessory title before action, though it is not proved till afterwards in chambers. Games v. Bonnor, 54 L. J., Ch. 517; 33 W. R. 64—C. A.

When a vendor succeeds in a suit for specific performance, he is entitled to costs, notwithstanding the title was first shewn in the master's office, if the suit was occasioned solely by the conduct of the defendant. Peers v. Sneyd, 17 Beav. 151.

The fact of a title having been perfected in the master's office does not determine the question of the costs, which depends upon whether the defects removed there were the occasion of the suit. Scoones v. Morrell, 1 Beav. 251.

Where a purchaser objects to specific performance upon other grounds than those of title, and fails, and the vendor does not make out his title until after decree, the purchaser is liable to the costs of the vendor's suit, except the costs of making out title. Abbott v. Calton, 22 L. J., Ch. 936.

Where the vendor does not shew a good title till after the commencement of the suit, he must pay the costs, though specific performance be decreed. Townsend v. Champernowne, 3 Y. & C. 505.

If vendor can make a good title at hearing, on further directions, it is sufficient for specific performance, vendor paying costs. Paton v. Rogers, 6 Madd. 256.

Vendor not making good title when bill filed, pays costs till report of good title. Harford v. Purrier, 1 Madd. 532; 16 R. R. 260.

Abstract Imperfect.]—A vendor seeking a specific performance should have his title prepared, and therefore, where the abstract delivered is imperfect, he pays the costs of the suit up to the time of the defects being supplied. Wilson v. Allen, 1 J. & W. 623; 21 R. R. 255. S. P., —— v. Collinge, cited, 3 V. & B. 143, n.

Specific performance decreed without costs, the abstract delivered not containing a satisfactory title. Wilson v. Clapham, 1 J. & W. 36; 20 R. R. 213.

Costs to a purchaser; the vendor having established his title before the master, after contest, upon a different ground from that in the abstract delivered. Fielder v. Higginson, 3 V. & B. 142; 13 R. R. 167.

Vendor alleged acceptance of title, purchaser asserted title defective. On suit by vendor neither allegation turned out correct, and, though a good title was first shewn in the master's office, the decree was made without costs. Sidebotham v. Barrington, 5 Beav. 261.

Production of Documents.]—Specific performance without costs, the suit being occasioned by the refusal of the vendor to produce documents insisted on by the purchaser, some of which were necessary and others not. Newall v. Smith, 1 J. & W. 263; 21 R. R. 164.

Unnecessary Expenses.]—Where the plaintiff (vendor) has shewn a good title, but has been the means of great expense being incurred at chambers, the court will give him his costs up to the hearing only. Goold v. White, 2 Eq. R. 1100.

Vendor's Error.]—No costs given against the purchaser who had failed in his objections, the error having occurred in the vendor's deed. Lecoy v. Mogford, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1084; 4 W. R. 805.

Title how shewn.]—A purchaser was ordered to pay all the costs, though a good title was not shewn until after the institution of the suit by the production of a declaration which was not the cause of dispute, and had not been previously required. Bridges v. Longman, 24 Beav. 27.

Where the plaintiff, the vendor, shewed a good title from the time of producing certain evidence of which the defendant knew, but it had formed the subject of dispute between him and the vendor:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the suit. Monro v. Taylor, 3 Mac. & G. 713; 21 L. J., Ch. 525. Affirming 8 Hare, 51.

In a suit by a vendor, the costs will be thrown upon the purchaser, though the master reports that a good title was not shewn till after the filing of the bill, on the ground that certain evidence had not been previously furnished, which the vendor had offered to produce, but which had not been actually produced, before the institution of the suit, in consequence of the purchaser insisting upon other unsubstantial objections. Long v. Collier, 4 Russ. 269.

Specific performance decreed with costs in a case when the defendant, objecting to title, had been served with notice of a prior decision in a different cause in favour of the same title. Biscoe v. Wilks, 3 Mer. 456.

Unnecessary Objections.]—If purchaser makes frivolous objections to title, he pays costs, but not otherwise. Thorpe v. Freer, 4 Madd. 466. And see Litchfield v. Brown, 23 L. J., Ch. 176.

If a defendant questions the title of a plaintiff and fails, and by that course puts the plaintiff to any costs, such defendant should pay so much of the costs as has been occasioned by the objection. Jones v. Morrall, 2 Sim. (N.S.) 254; 21 L. J., Ch. 630.

On a sale by trustee of a will open to suspicion, the title was approved, but before completion the heir-at-law brought an action to upset the will. The purchaser refused to complete, and an action for specific performance was begun. The action by the heir failed, and thereupon a reference to title was directed, and the master having reported in favour of the title, a decree was made for specific performance. On appeal, however, the Lord Chancellor (Lord Cottenham) ordered the case to stand over generally, with liberty for the vendor to take such proceedings for establishing the will as he should be advised. The vendor then instituted a suit against the heir, which resulted in the will being established. The Lord Chancellor (Lord Truro) thereupon confirmed the decree for specific performance, and directed the purchaser to pay interest from the time when under the contract the sale ought to have been completed, and also to pay the costs of the suit subsequently to the hearing, when the reference as to title was directed. Grove v. Bastard, 1 De G. M. & G. 69.

The judgment of Lord Cottenham in this case (2 Ph. 619) observed upon. Ib.

In a suit for specific performance, a purchaser, who set up a defence which prevented the plaintiff obtaining, on motion, a reference as to title, and failed in establishing it, was ordered to pay the costs up to, and inclusive of the hearing. Hyde v. Dallaway, 4 Beav. 606; 6 Jur. 119.

In a suit for specific performance, where an objection to the contract had been overruled at the hearing, and the defendant had afterwards raised an objection to the title in the master's office, and that objection was cleared up, the court ordered that the costs after the decree should be paid by the defendant, but that up to the decree on the hearing there should be no costs on either side. Woodward v. Miller, 16 L. J., Ch. 16; 10 Jur. 1027. And see Wright v. Howard, infra, col. 1875.

No Title shewn.]—Where a master's report is against the title, a vendor's bill may now be dismissed with costs upon motion. Bennett College v. Carey, 3 Bro. C. C. 390. S. P., Walters v. Pyman, 19 Ves. 351.

Vendor not making a good title ordered to pay costs, though he was only a trustee to sell. Edwards v. Harvey, G. Cooper. 40.

A purchaser having unsuccessfully objected, no costs were given on either side on a bill for specific performance by vendor, who had not made out his title. Weddall v. Nixon, 17 Beav. 160; 22 L. J., Ch. 939; 17 Jur. 642; 1 W. R. 250.

Where it appears on the face of a bill for a specific performance, that the plaintiff could not convey, according to the agreement, without the direction of the court, he will not have the costs up to the hearing; but if the defendant insists on inquiries into the title, and fails in them, the plaintiff's costs incurred in these inquiries, and at the hearing on further directions, must be paid by the defendant. Allen v. Currie, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 135.

Title Doubtful.]—Where in a suit by a vendor the master reported in favour of the title, but the court, on an exception taken by the purchaser, deemed the title doubtful, an order was made, dismissing the bill without costs, but neither allowing nor disallowing the exception. Willcox v. Bellaers, Turn. & R. 491.

Purchaser brought into court on a doubtful title ought to be discharged with costs. Blosse v. Clanmorris, 3 Bligh, 62.

In a doubtful case of title, where the doubt is only removed at the hearing by an act of the plaintiffs, the plaintiffs must pay the defendant's costs. Ashley v. Waugh, 9 L. J., Ch. 31; 4 Jur. 572.

—— Action by Purchaser.]—Bill by purchaser for specific performance, insisting that the vendors could not make a good title, dismissed with costs. Nicloson v. Wordsworth, 2 Swanst. 365; 19 R. R. 86.

Where a bill for specific performance is filed by a purchaser, and it turns out that the vendor cannot make a good title, the bill is dismissed, but without costs. Malden v. Fyson, 9 Beav. 347.

Plaintiffs in a suit for specific performance, in which the only question was one of title, which was decided against them, ordered to pay the costs, though a decree was made in their favour. Hood v. Oglander, 34 Beav. 513; 6 N. R. 57; 34 L. J., Ch. 528; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 498; 12 L. T. 627; 13 W. R. 705.

Negligence of Vendor.]—Where purchaser raised objections which were overruled, but before the certificate was signed discovered an objection on which it was held vendor (plaintiff) had no title:—Held, that the vendor was to blame, as he might, with reasonable diligence, have informed himself of this defect before selling, and that, therefore, although he had been right on all points which arose before the bill was filed, he ought not to receive costs. Phillipson v. Gibbon, 40 L. J., Ch. 406; L. R. 6 Ch. 428; 24 L. T. 602; 19 W. R. 661.

Time of the Essence of Contract—Notice to complete.]—Although time is not of the essence of the contract, yet, where there is unnecessary delay, the purchaser has a right to limit by notice the time for completing it, or to abandon the contract; where the purchaser failed in this defence:—Held, liable to costs up to the hearing, and the usual reference ordered. Taylor v. Brown, 2 Beav. 180; 9 L. J., Ch. 14.

In a suit by a vendor for specific performance, if the contract stipulated that the possession should be given at a specified day, it is competent for the purchaser to insist that both time and a vacant possession are the essence of the contract. Where a purchaser has consented to enlarge the time for completion, and where a vacant possession was of the essence of the contract, it is competent for him to object to complete at the expiration of such enlarged time, if the possession is not then vacant, and if he has done no act towards completion of the contract after he had notice that vacant possession could not be given at the day. But where a purchaser had by his acts waived the time for completion in the first instance, and had gone on for some time inducing the vendor to incur expenses to perfect his title, and suddenly, upon the discovery that vacant possession could not be given, declined to complete, the court dismissed a bill filed against such a purchaser, without costs. Nokes v. Kilmorey, 1 De G. & Sm. 444.

When, after a contract for the sale of land has been entered into, a notice is given to make time of the essence of the contract, the question whether the notice is reasonable or not must be judged of as at the date when it is given. The plaintiff held a lease from the defendant with an option to purchase, on giving three months' previous notice in writing. On the 24th March, 1877, the plaintiff gave the defendant notice of his intention to exercise the option. On the 24th September, 1878, the defendant gave the plaintiff a notice in writing, requiring him to complete the purchase, and stating that, unless he completed it on or before the 31st October, 1878, the defendant would treat the contract as rescinded, and that in that respect time should be deemed of the essence of the contract. On the 1st November, 1878, the defendant's solicitors wrote to the plaintiff that the defendant, in pursuance of his notice, declared the contract at an end; and they requested the return of the abstract, and demanded payment of rent for the property:—Held, that the notice of the 24th September fixed an unreasonably short time for the completion of the purchase, and was therefore invalid. Specific performance was decreed, and the defendant was ordered to pay the costs of the action up to and including the trial. Crawford v. Toogood, 49 L. J., Ch. 108; 13 Ch. D. 153; 41 L. T. 549; 28 W. R. 248.

Death of Vendor.]—Where, after contracting to sell land, the vendor devises to parties, some of whom are infants at his decease, his estate must bear the costs of the suit which he has thus voluntarily rendered necessary to a completion of the contract, and a mere devise of trust estates does not in such a case avoid the necessity of a suit. Purser v. Darby, 4 K. & J. 41.

Secus, if he dies intestate. Sanderson v. Chadwick, 2 N. R. 414. S. P., Williams v. Glenton, 35 L. J., Ch. 284; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 175; 13 L. T. 727; 14 W. R. 294. Affirming 34 Beav. 528; L. & S. W. Ry. v. Bridger, 4 N. R. 261; 12 W. R. 948.

A vendor, after the contract, and before the conveyance to the purchaser, died, without having devised the legal estate in the premises in trust to complete the purchase, and a suit for a specific performance against the trustees and the infant devisees of interests in his estate having become necessary, the court made the decree without costs, there having been no default on either side. Hinder v. Streeten, 10 Hare, 18; 16 Jur. 650.

A., having devised his real estate to B., contracted to sell a portion to the plaintiffs, and died before the contract was completed, leaving B. his infant heir and devisee:—Held, on the authority of Hinder v. Streeten (supra), that the heir was entitled to his costs up to the hearing of a suit by the plaintiffs for specific performance. Midland Counties Ry. v. Rice, 2 Eq. R. 1109. S. P., Heard v. Cuthbert, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 369. Mudin v. Patey, 1 N. R. 566; White v. Beck, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 63; 20 W. R. 275; Hale v. Bushill, 35 Beav. 343; 35 L. J., Ch. 381; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 243; 14 L. T. 246; 14 W. R. 495.

—— Equitable Estate.]—When, in order to give the purchaser an immediate estate in fee, both legal and equitable, a decree for specific performance of the contract, under the statute 11 Geo. 4, and 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 17, was necessary:—Held, that as this was a question of title, and the vendor had contracted to deduce a good title at her own expense, and there were no laches on either side, the costs of the suit must be paid out of the vendor's estate. Farrar v. Winterton (Earl), 4 Y. & C. 472.

—— Intestacy.]—A contract for the sale of real estate had been entered into, but before completion, the vendor died intestate, leaving an infant heir-at-law:—Held, that in a suit instituted by the purchaser for specific performance, no costs of suit would be given on either side, otherwise if the estate had been devised by the vendor. Hodson v. Carter, 1 N. R. 179; 7 L. T. 504. S. P., Hanson v. Lake, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 328. And see Bannerman v. Clarke, 3 Drew. 632; 26 L. J., Ch. 77; 5 W. R. 37; Longinotto v. Morss, 26 L. T. 828.

If a vendor dies before completion, his infant heir, not disputing the contract, is entitled to be paid out of the purchase-money his costs and expenses of a suit to carry the contract into effect. Barker v. Venables, 34 L. J., Ch. 420; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 480; 12 L. T. 796; 13 W. R. 803.

A vendor died intestate, and it became necessary to file a bill to make his infant heir a trustee:—Held, that each party must bear his own costs. Scott v. Scott, 8 L. T. 450; 11 W. R. 766.

Distinction in this respect between suits rendered necessary by the voluntary act of the deceased, and those caused by the mere act of God, as where the deceased has died intestate, leaving an infant heir. Ib.

The heir-at-law of a vendor, who refused to convey to the purchaser an estate sold by his ancestor, was ordered to pay costs of a suit to compel him. Hoddel v. Pugh, 33 Beav. 489; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 534; 10 L. T. 446; 12 W. R. 782.

After decree in a suit for specific performance against the infant heir of the vendor, a petition must be presented under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, for an order that the infant may convey to the purchaser. The costs of the suit were ordered to be paid out of the purchase-money. Prytharch v. Havard, 6 Sim. 9.

Insanity of Vendor.]—Where, by reason of one of several vendors becoming of unsound mind before the purchase-money is paid, a suit for specific performances becomes necessary, no costs of the suit will be given on either side. Cresswell v. Haines, 31 L. J., Ch. 237; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 208; 10 W. R. 121.

On a claim by vendor for specific performance by purchaser found by inquisition to have been lunatic at the time of the contract, the court declared the contract to have been null and void, and ordered the residue of the deposit, after deducting the vendor's costs, charges, and expenses, to be repaid to the committee of the lunatic's estate. Frost v. Beavan, 22 L. J., Ch. 638; 17 Jur. 369.

Offer by Party.]—Interpretation of a subsequent correspondence, in reference to the original contract. The agreement is not impaired nor altered by proposals which the purchaser makes subsequently, with a view to an amicable arrangement. Such proposals may have an influence on costs. Bunning v. Bunning, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 56.

Where the court has declared, in a suit by a vendor, against his contention on a matter of conveyance, that being the substantial ground of the litigation, the vendor must pay the costs. It is the duty of the vendor plaintiff who has a defective title, when the objection is removed, to offer the purchaser the costs up to that time, and to give him a conveyance. Freer v. Hesse, 2 Eq. R. 13; 23 L. J., Ch. 338—L.JJ.

Property was put up for sale, and in the particulars advertised was described as being an absolute reversion in a freehold estate, falling into possession on the death of a lady in her seventieth year; and by the conditions of sale, which were read for the first time at the auction previously to the commencement of the biddings, the property was stated to be sold subject to two mortgages, and the purchaser's solicitor paid the deposit on his behalf after having read the conditions. The purchaser was deaf, and did not understand that he was buying only an equity of redemption in the property:—Held, that though in an ordinary case, as the purchaser's carelessness had contributed to the mistake, he would not have been entitled to the costs of the suit, he might have them, having, previously to the commencement of the suit, offered, on condition of having the contract rescinded and the deposit returned, to pay the costs of the sale. Torrance v. Bolton, 42 L. J., Ch. 177; L. R. 8 Ch. 118; 27 L. T. 738; 21 W. R. 134.

—— Lis Pendens.]—A purchaser refused to complete, on the grounds that the original title was at least doubtful, and that lis pendens was a charge on the property. The lis pendens was afterwards decided to form no charge on the property; after which the vendor offered to stay all further proceedings if the purchaser would complete his contract and pay the costs up to the time of the offer:—Held, that the vendor was entitled to a decree for specific performance, and costs up to and inclusive of the hearing. Bull v. Hutchons, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 954; 8 L. T. 716; 11 W. R. 866.

Supplemental Bill filed Pendente Lite.]—Purchaser pendente lite, on filing supplemental bill, is liable to all costs from beginning of suit. Anon., 1 Atk. 89.

Sale by Trustees.]—A trust to sell with all convenient expedition, and within five years:—Held, to authorise a sale after the five years. Costs of specific performance not given. Pearce v. Gardner, 10 Hare, 287; 1 W. R. 98.

Devisees in trust for sale contract to sell in the ordinary form; an abstract of title is delivered, when the counsel for the purchaser advises him to claim indemnity against covenants not to build, &c., not set out in the contract but contained in the testator's purchase deed. A draft conveyance tendered, when the vendors insert a proviso embodying the covenants in the conveyance, and the purchaser objects to execute it in that form:—Held, that the disclosure of the covenants on the draft conveyance brought the contract down to that date, and the purchaser had the option to rescind or give the covenants. Claim dismissed without costs. Lukey v. Higgs, 3 Eq. R. 510; 24 L. J., Ch. 495; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 200; 3 W. R. 306.

A trustee having power to sell land in order to raise 600*l.* and the expenses, put it up to sale in two lots, and sold the first for 600*l.*, and the second for 510*l.*:—Held, that the sale of the second lot was not improper, and that the purchasers must pay the costs of a suit for specific performance brought against them by the trustee. Thomas v. Townsend, 16 Jur. 736.

Upon a bill for specific performance, the court thought that it would press too severely on the defendants, who were mere trustees, to make a decree. The court held that, in dismissing the bill, it had no authority to give the plaintiff his costs. Wedgwood v. Adams, 8 Beav. 103.

Bill being dismissed without costs as a hard case, parties made trustees without their knowledge, and as such being necessary parties to the bill, cannot have costs against plaintiff, but left to their remedy against their principal. Brodie v. St. Paul, 1 Ves. J. 326.

Parties refusing to Convey.]—A bill for a specific performance of an agreement was made necessary by trustee refusing to join in the conveyance. The court being of opinion that the trustees ought to pay all the costs of the suit, the decree was, that the plaintiff should pay the costs of all the other defendants (although he had a decree against them), and recover over the whole costs from the defendant, the trustee. Jones v. Lewis, 1 Cox. 199.

Bill by purchaser for specific performance ordered to be dismissed for defect of title, a necessary party not choosing to concur in conveying; order to dismiss without costs, it being against the principles of the court to order the defendant to pay the plaintiff his costs in such case. Lewis v. Loxham, 3 Mer. 429.

A contract was entered into for the purchase of property as to which the vendor, whose interest was subject to his wife's dower, stated that she would release her dower. The wife refused to join:—Held, that the purchaser was entitled to specific performance with compensation, and that there was nothing to deprive the purchaser of his costs upon further consideration. Wilson v. Williams, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 810.

Unsuccessful Defence.]—In a suit for specific performance, where the purchaser insisted that the contract was abandoned and he was decreed to complete the contract on a good title being shewn, he must pay the costs of the suit up to the hearing. Taylor v. Brown, 2 Beav. 180; 9 L. J., Ch. 14.

A purchaser, who had altogether denied the vendor's right to a specific performance, ordered to pay the costs of a suit, instituted by the vendor for that purpose, down to the hearing, although the title was not finally completed until after the decree, but where since that time both parties claimed what they were not entitled to, no costs on either side were given. Carradus v. Sharp, 20 Beav. 56.

To a bill by a vendor for the specific performance of a contract for the sale of property, the defendant raised three objections, and at the hearing failed in two:—Held, that the defendant ought to pay so much of the costs of the suit as had been occasioned by his unsuccessful objections. Smallwood v. Cotty, 6 L. J., Ch. 265.

If the purchaser, in his answer, besides insisting on the want of title in the vendor, sets up a defence that he was seduced into the contract by fraud and misrepresentation, and that defence is not supported by evidence, he will be loaded with so much of the expense of the suit as was occasioned by those improper allegations. Wright v. Howard, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 94. And see Woodward v. Miller, supra, col. 1870.

Compensation.] — A claim of compensation being the sole cause of suit, plaintiff to pay the costs; bill dismissed without costs against subsequent purchaser, with notice of plaintiff's contract, who had formally abandoned, but given plaintiff no notice thereof. Feuster v. Turner, 11 L. J., Ch. 161; 6 Jur. 144.

Claim for Damages.]—In a suit for specific performance and damages, an issue was directed to be tried at common law to ascertain the amount of damages. The plaintiff set up a very large claim based on special user, but this claim was disallowed, and only a much smaller claim for common user allowed. On the cause being brought back into chancery the plaintiff was disallowed the extra costs occasioned by the excessive claim. Cory v. Thames Iron Works and Shipbuilding Co., 16 W. R. 475.

Sale of Leaseholds.]—In conditions of sale of leaseholds it was stated, that the purchaser should have possession on a certain day; "all outgoings" up to that day being cleared by the vendors. The vendors refused to pay half a quarter's rent which had accrued due between the last quarter day and the date fixed for completion:—Held that the vendors were entitled to specific performance, subject to paying the half-quarter's rent; but that, as the purchaser had refused to accede to inexpensive modes which had been proposed for adjusting the dispute, there should be no order as to costs. Lawes v. Gibson, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 873; 13 L. T. 316; 14 W. R. 25.

Terms not expressed in Contract.]—W. let premises to V. upon a contract written in pencil by V., and signed by him in a notebook belonging to W.; both act under the contract, but V. ultimately alleges non-performance by W. of certain things not contained in it, and W. makes like charges. On a claim for specific performance, decree for specific performance made without costs. Waller v. Vigurs, 2 W. R. 51.

Plea of Statute of Frauds.]—Specific performance of an agreement refused, under the circumstances, but the costs occasioned by the defendant setting up the Statute of Frauds were disallowed. Cowell v. Watts, 2 Hall & Tw. 224.

Purchase of Advowson.]—Party who had contracted with person, since dead, for the purchase of advowson, but had taken no steps during the life of vendor to enforce contract, and for a considerable time after his death:— Held, not entitled as against devisee to present, if a vacancy occur in the meanwhile, though he insists on completion of contract; but entitled to costs as far as his claim comes in question. Wyrill v. Exeter (Bishop), 1 Price, 292; 16 R. R. 727.

Sale of Copyholds.]—Bill to have execution of articles for the sale of some copyhold lands to plaintiff, and to compel the lord of the manor to admit plaintiff in fee, according to the agreement, which was decreed; but there being no tender of a surrender to the lord, and consequently no refusal, he was to have his costs. Sayle v. Reeves, Gilb. Eq. Rep. 188.

Transfer of Shares.]—Where the registered holder of shares disputes the right of an applicant for a transfer under an agreement, the court has no jurisdiction to make the former pay the costs rendered necessary by his opposition. Tahiti Cotton Co., In re, Sargent, Ex parte, 43 L. J., Ch. 425; L. R. 17 Eq. 273; 22 W. R. 815.

Duty of Solicitor.]—A. verbally agreed with B., his solicitor, for the sale of land to B. This agreement, which was never reduced to writing, provided that possession should be at once given. B. entered into possession, but took no further steps in completion of the purchase, and, before the purchase-money became due died:—Held, that B., as A.'s solicitor, ought to have had an agreement in writing prepared, and that the executor was bound to complete the purchase and pay the costs of the suit. Brafield v. Scriven, 22 W. R. 202.

A lease contained a covenant by the lessor to grant a further lease, and a stipulation that the lease should be prepared by the lessor's solicitor:

—Held, that the lessor's solicitor was bound to prepare a proper lease, and the lessor was ordered to pay the costs of the suit, and of the dispute occasioned by him. Mappin v. Savory, 20 L. T. 777.

The defendants' solicitors, two days before a bill for specific performance was filed, but while the bill was in course of being printed, wrote to the plaintiff's solicitor, to propose an early day for completing the purchase, and the plaintiff's solicitor, on the very day on which the bill was filed, wrote to accept the appointment, but afterwards claimed the costs of the suit, which the defendants refused to pay:—Held, that the plaintiff must pay the costs of the suit. Chester v. Metropolitan Ry., 11 L. T. 699; 13 W. R. 333.

Misrepresentation.]—The vendors having by their misrepresentations occasioned the suit, were ordered to pay all the costs. Harrison v. Coppart, 2 Cox, 319.

Fraud.] — A. and B. having entered into a verbal treaty for the purchase of certain premises belonging to A., and not being able to agree as to the amount of the purchase-money, A. agreed to take a certain sum from B. for the premises. During the period of this negotiation between A. and B., A. entered into a contract with D. for the sale of the same premises, and although notice of the agreement between A. and B. was given to D., actually conveyed the premises to D.:— Held, that D. having had notice of the agreement between A. and B., the conveyance to him must be considered fraudulent, and should be delivered up to be cancelled, and that the conduct of A. having been very fraudulent, the costs of B. should in the first place be paid out of the funds lodged by him in the hands of C. Field v. Boland, 1 Dr. & Wal. 37.

Costs of Appeal.]—A bill for specific performance was dismissed with costs in the court below. On appeal, the defendant, whose harsh and unreasonable conduct had made the suit necessary, was ordered to pay the whole costs, including the costs of the appeal. Lillie v. Legh, 3 De G. & J. 204.

In a suit by the purchasers of certain mines to set aside a sale, a decree with costs was made in favour of the plaintiffs. The House of Lords reversed the decree, and remitted the cause to the court below. The court directed the costs to be repaid to the defendants, but without interest. Small v. Attwood, 3 Y. & C. 105; 8 L. J., Ex. Eq. 67.

Costs at Law.]—A defendant demurred to a bill for specific performance, and his demurrer was overruled. He then asked for a case to be sent to a court of law, which was granted, and the opinion of the judges was against him. Ultimately, however, the bill was dismissed with costs:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to his costs at law as well as in equity. Forbes v. Peacock, 12 Sim. 528; 13 L. J., Ch. 46; 7 Jur. 688.

Third Party Claim.] — Where a third person not a party to a suit for specific performance for a contract of sale, made a claim independently of vendor and purchaser, the bill was dismissed without costs. Heseltine v. Simmons, 6 W. R. 268.

When in a suit against a vendor for specific performance of a contract the refusal to complete arose from a claim made by the defendant T. under a prior contract, but which claim T. was held to have abandoned in favour of the plaintiff, a decree was made with costs against both defendants, but with a declaration that as between the defendants the costs should be borne by T. Wilson v. Thomson, 44 L. J., Ch. 527; L. R. 20 Eq. 744; 23 W. R. 744.

Contract uncertain.] — In the absence of special circumstances, a court of equity will not enforce specific performance of a contract for the purchase of land which is silent as to the means of access to it, when it is reasonably uncertain whether any means of entering on the land at all times can be conferred on the purchaser. A bill for specific performance was dismissed with a fixed amount of costs. Denne v. Light, 8 De G. M. & G. 774; 26 L. J., Ch. 459; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 627; 5 W. R. 430.

By a contract T. agreed to sell an estate to a purchaser with the following reservation: T. "reserves the necessary land for making a railway through the estate to P." :—Held, on suit for specific performance by the purchaser, that the contract was too uncertain for the court to make a decree for specific performance of it, and the bill was dismissed with costs. Pearce v. Watts, 44 L. J., Ch. 492; L. R. 20 Eq. 492; 23 W. R. 771.

Where Specific Performance impossible.] — On a bill for a specific performance of an agreement for the sale of a house, the plaintiff made out his case; but it appeared that the defendant had actually sold the house to another person for a valuable consideration. The court directed the master to inquire what damages the plaintiff had sustained by the non-performance of the agreement, and that such damages, together with the costs of the suit, should be paid by defendant. Denton v. Stewart, 1 Cox, 258.

Semble, where a decree has been made for specific performance, and an objection is subsequently raised for the first time, which the court cannot get over, the proper course is to dismiss the bill without costs. Jenkins v. Green, 28 L. J., Ch. 820; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 304; 7 W. R. 304.

Bankruptcy of Vendor.]—Where there was a sufficient part performance to take a parol contract for sale out of the Statute of Frauds, and the purchaser became bankrupt:—Held, that the vendor, wishing to have effect given to his lien for unpaid purchase-money, was entitled to have his costs out of the estate sold. Cooper, Ex parte, Taylor, In re, 3 Mont. D. & D. 717.

A vendor resisted a bill for specific performance. He became bankrupt, and his assignee afterwards continued the resistance, but failed at the hearing:—Held, that the assignee must pay the plaintiff's costs of suit incurred subsequently to the bankruptcy. Foxwell v. Greatorex, 33 Beav. 345.

Covenant to Renew.]—A landlord who does not litigiously oppose a covenant for renewal shall be entitled to his costs. Doneraile v. Chartres, 1 Ridgw. 137; Jones v. Lewis, 1 Cox, 137.

A tenant having by his conduct made his title to a renewal doubtful, and thereby rendering a suit for it necessary, was, on obtaining a renewal, decreed to pay all the costs. Barrett v. Pearson, 2 Ball & B. 189.

Set-off.]—One of the terms of an agreement was, that the contract should be void if the purchaser's counsel should be of opinion that a marketable title could not be made good. The counsel being of that opinion, a bill by the purchaser for a specific performance, with a compensation, was dismissed with costs: and an application by the plaintiff that his deposit might be set off against the defendant's costs, was refused with costs. Williams v. Edwards, 2 Sim. 78; 29 R. R. 61. And see Phipps v. Child, 3 Drew. 709.

Priority of Purchaser's Costs over Mortgage after Contract.]—A vendor brought an action claiming a declaration that his contract for sale was at an end. The purchaser made a counter-claim for the specific performance of the contract. Judgment was given for the defendant, with costs, on both claim and counter-claim:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to deduct his costs from his purchase-money in priority to a mortgage of the plaintiff, whose mortgage had been created after the contract for sale, but before the commencement of the action. Green v. Serin, 13 Ch. D. 589.

Inquiry.]—By a decretal order specific performance was decreed against a vendor: an inquiry was directed what damage had been sustained by the plaintiff by reason of certain acts of the defendant. The inquiry found that plaintiff was entitled to damages for some acts and not for others:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the inquiry so far as he had succeeded, but must pay all the other costs of the inquiry. Krehl v. Park, 44 L. J., Ch. 286; L. R. 10 Ch. 334; 33 L. T. 83; 23 W. R. 475.

A. EFFECT OF FORMAL PARTS.

1. TITLE.

Full Title.]—The title of a statute is no part of the law. Rex v. Williams, 1 W. Bl. 95—per Lord Mansfield. S. P., Att.-Gen. v. Lord Weymouth, Ambl. 23—per Lord Hardwicke; Salkeld v. Johnson, 2 Ex. 283—per Pollock, C.B.

There is authority for saying that the title of a statute may be used where there is any ambiguity in the statute. Coomber v. Berks JJ., 51 L. J., M. C. 297, 304; 9 Q. B. D. 33; 30 W. R. 785; 46 J. P. 629.

The title cannot be resorted to for the purpose of construing the provisions of the act. Hunter v. Nockolds, 1 Mac. & G. 640; 1 Hall & T. 644; 19 L. J., Ch. 177; 14 Jur. 256.

The title of a statute does not go for much in construing it, but I do not know that it is to be absolutely disregarded. The title of Lord Campbell's Act, 9 & 10 Vict. c. 93, was certainly referred to as not without significance in the court of queen's bench in Blake v. Midland Ry. Co., 18 Q. B. 93. Kenrick v. Lawrence, 25 Q. B. D. 99; 38 W. R. 779—per Wills, J.

If there is in the provisions of an act anything admitting of a doubt, the title of the act is a matter proper to be considered in the interpretation of the act. Shaw v. Ruddin, 9 Ir. C. L. R. 214. S. P., Reg. v. Mallow Union, 12 Ir. C. L. R. 35.

The Sale of Farming Stock Act, 1816, 56 Geo. 3, c. 50, s. 11, which enacts that no assignee of any bankrupt or of any insolvent debtor's estate, nor any assignee under any bill of sale, nor any purchaser of the stock or crop of a tenant on lands let to farm, shall take, use or dispose of any hay or other produce, in any other manner than the tenant ought to do, applies to all sales, though the title, preamble and other sections of the act are confined to the sale of farming stock taken in execution. Wilmot v. Rose, 3 El. & Bl. 563; 2 C. L. R. 677; 23 L. J., Q. B. 281; 18 Jur. 518; 2 W. R. 378.

58 Geo. 3, c. 51 (repealed), described by their titles and dates several acts relating to persons employed in the woollen and other manufactures, which acts it in part repealed. Among these was an act stated to have been passed in 13 Geo. 3, but agreeing in title with 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, and with no act passed in 13 Geo. 3:—Held, that this act might be identified by the title with the act recited, and that the legislature must be deemed to have mistaken the date. Reg. v. Wilcock, 7 Q. B. 317. S. P., Boothroyd, In re, 13 M. & W. 1; 15 L. J., Ex. 170.

The enacting part of an act is not to be controlled by the title or recitals unless the enacting part is ambiguous, and then the title and recitals may be referred to for the purpose of ascertaining the intention of the legislature. Bentley v. Rotherham Local Board, 46 L. J., Ch. 284; 4 Ch. D. 588.

Short Title.]—Short title a good general description of all that was done by the Superannuation Act, 1859, in Middlesex JJ. v. Reg., 53 L. J., Q. B. 505; 9 App. Cas. 757; 51 L. T. 513; 33 W. R. 49.

2. PREAMBLE.

General Rule.]—It is a general rule, in the construction of statutes, that the preamble may extend, but cannot restrain, the effect of an enacting clause. Kearns v. Cordwainers' Company, 6 C. B. (N.S.) 388; 28 L. J., C. P. 285; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1216.

We ought not to restrict a section in an act of parliament by the preamble or general purview of the act where the section is not inconsistent with the spirit of the act. Sutton v. Sutton, 52 L. J., Ch. 333, 338; 22 Ch. D. 521; 48 L. T. 98; 31 W. R. 372—per Jessel, M.R., and Bowen, L.J.

We are to give effect to the preamble to this extent, namely, that it shews us what the legislature are intending; and if the words of enactment have a meaning which does not go beyond that preamble, or which may come up to the preamble, in either case we prefer that meaning to one shewing an intention of the legislature which would not answer the purposes of the preamble or which would go beyond them. To that extent only is the preamble material. West Ham Overseers v. Iles, 52 L. J., Q. B. 650; 8 App. Cas. 387; 49 L. T. 205; 31 W. R. 923; 47 J. P. 708.

The preamble of an act of parliament is proper to explain the general body of it. Copeman v. Gallant, 1 P. Wms. 317.

Only to be resorted to in case of Ambiguity.]—If the enacting part of a statute will bear only one interpretation, the preamble shall not confine it; but if it is doubtful, the preamble may be applied to throw light upon it. Mason v. Armitage, 13 Ves. 36; 9 R. R. 131.

If the words of the statute are in themselves precise and unambiguous, then no more can be necessary than to expound these words in their natural and ordinary sense. But if any doubt arises from the terms employed by the legislature, it has always been held a safe means of collecting the intention to call in aid the ground and cause of making the statute and to have recourse to the preamble, which, according to Dyer, C.J., in Stowell v. Lord Zouch (Plow. at p. 369), is a key to open the minds of the makers of the act, and the mischiefs which they are intended to redress. Sussex Peerage Case, 11 Cl. & F. 143. S. P., Income Tax Commissioners v. Pemsel, 61 L. J., Q. B. 265; [1891] A. C. 532; 65 L. T. 621.

In construing an act of parliament, or any other instrument, the court is at liberty to regard the state of the law at the time, and the facts which the preamble or recitals of the act of instrument prove to have been the existing circumstances at the time of its preparation. Att.-Gen. v. Powis (Earl), 1 Kay, 186; 2 Eq. R. 566; 2 W. R. 140.

The preamble of an act of parliament, though it may assist ambiguous words, cannot control a clear and express enactment. Lees v. Summersgill, 17 Ves. 508.

But it may serve to give a definite and qualified meaning to indefinite and general terms. Emanuel v. Constable, 3 Russ. 436, overruling Lees v. Summersgill, supra.

A preamble, reciting the existence of outrages, and making provision against them, is admissible to prove an introductory averment in an information for a libel, that acts of outrage had been committed. Rex v. Sutton, 4 M. & S. 532.

Though the preamble of one act may seem directed against a particular evil, and though another act may be passed to aid its application, the enactments of the second act are not necessarily to be confined to the special purpose which seemed to be the particular object that the first had in view. Its own words must be considered as explaining and defining its objects and means. Copland v. Davies, L. R. 5 H. L. 358; 21 W. R. 1.

The preamble of an act cannot be resorted to in order to ascertain the intention of the act, unless there is an ambiguity in the enacting part. Taylor v. Oldham Corporation, 46 L. J., Ch. 105; 4 Ch. D. 395; 35 L. T. 696; 25 W. R. 178.

Although the preamble is generally the key to the construction, yet it does not always open all the parts of it, as sometimes the legislature, having a particular mischief in view, which was the primary object of the statute, merely states that in the preamble, and then goes on to provide a remedy for general mischiefs of the same nature, but of different species, neither expressed in the preamble, nor perhaps then in immediate contemplation. Mann v. Cammel, Lofft, 783.

To be considered as part of a whole.]—In construing acts, the court must take into consideration not only the language of the preamble, or any particular clause, but of the whole act; and if, in some of the enacting clauses, expressions are to be found of more extensive import than in others, or than in the preamble, the court will give effect to those more extensive expressions, if, upon a view of the whole act, it appears to have been the intention of the legislature that they should have effect. Doe d. Bywater v. Brandling, 7 B. & C. 643; 1 M. & Ry. 600; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 162.

Effect of Repeal by Statute Law Revision Act.]—The preamble of the Betting Act, 1853, has been repealed by the Statute Law Revision Act, 1892, by which it is provided that such preamble may be omitted from any revised edition of the statutes; but the same act provides (s. 1) that the repeal shall not affect the operation or construction of the statute; and it is therefore legitimately to be referred to as affording information of the circumstances under which the act came to be passed, and, in so far as it directly throws light upon the question, of the object which the legislature had in view. Hawke v. Dunn, 66 L. J., Q. B. 364; [1897] 1 Q. B. 579; 76 L. T. 355; 45 W. R. 359; 61 J. P. 292.

3. Recitals.

General Effect of Recitals.]—A clear and explicit enactment is not to be cut down by a more limited preamble or recital; but if the enactment is not explicit in itself, it may be explained and cut down by the preamble or recital. Hughes v. Chester and Holyhead Ry., 1 Dr. & Sm. 524; 9 W. R. 760.

In construing an act, the court is at liberty to regard the state of the law at the time, and the facts which the preamble or recital of the act prove to have been the existing circumstances at the time of its preparation. Att.-Gen. v. Powis (Earl), 1 Kay, 186; 2 Eq. R. 566; 2 W. R. 140.

The object of the act is to abolish the distinction between specialty and simple contract debts, and the recital of the act is that that alone is the object. I must therefore read the enactment as corresponding with the express recital of its object; and if I find words that may be carried further, I must read them with reference to the mischief intended to be remedied, and to the express recital of the act. Crowder v. Stewart, 50 L. J., Ch. 136; 16 Ch. D. 370; 29 W. R. 331—per Malins, V.-C.

A mere recital in a statute, either of fact or of law, is not conclusive, and the court is at liberty to consider the fact of the law to be different from the statement in the recital. Reg. v. Haughton, 1 El. & Bl. 501; 22 L. J., M. C. 89; 17 Jur. 455; 1 W. R. 164.

A recital in an act will not bind those who are not within its enacting part. Edinburgh and Glasgow Ry. v. Linlithgow (Magistrates), 3 Macq. H. L. 704.

The recitals in the Disabling Statute do not limit the force of the subsequent enactment to cases in which the mischief by the alienation is done to the personal interest of the successor of the alienor; for it is evident from the enactment that the legislature intended to apply the prohibition to the case of persons who were seised either as mere trustees, or in a great measure in trustees, and among other persons to the master or guardian of an hospital. York (Dean) v. Middleborough, 2 Y. & J. 196; 31 R. R. 566.

Semble, that the recitals in private acts of parliament of recent date are not evidence of the facts stated in them, such recitals being no longer submitted to the previous approval of the judges. Shrewsbury Peerage, 7 H. L. Cas. 1.

The recitals in a private act do not bind third parties. Taylor v. Parry, 1 Macq. H. L. 604; 1 Sc. (N.R.) 576; 9 L. J., C. P. 298.

4. Marginal Notes.

The marginal note to a section in the copy printed by the Queen's printer, forms no part of the statute itself, and is not binding as an explanation or as a construction of the section. Claydon v. Green, 37 L. J., C. P. 226; L. R. 3 C. P. 511; 18 L. T. 607; 16 W. R. 1126—per Willes, J. S. P., Att.-Gen. v. G. E. Ry., 48 L. J., Ch. 429; 11 Ch. D. 449; 40 L. T. 265; 27 W. R. 759—C. A. —per Bramwell and Baggallay, L.JJ.

The dictum in Venour's Settled Estates, In re (2 Ch. D. 525), is not correct, and the marginal notes to the sections of an act of parliament are not to be taken as part of the act. Sutton v. Sutton, 52 L. J., Ch. 334; 22 Ch. D. 513; 48 L. T. 96; 31 W. R. 370—per Jessel, M.R.

5. HEADINGS.

Headings Grammatically Connected.]—The headings of different portions of a statute are to be referred to in order to determine the sense of any doubtful expression in a section ranged under any particular heading. Hammersmith and City Ry. v. Brand, 38 L. J., Q. B. 265; L. R. 4 H. L. 171; 21 L. T. 238; 18 W. R. 12. S. P., Eastern Counties Co. v. Marriage, 9 H. L. Cas. 41; Bryan v. Child, 5 Ex. 368.

Headings not Grammatically Connected.]—Remarks as to the effect upon interpretation of dividing an act of parliament into parts with appropriate headings. Union Steamship Co. of New Zealand v. Melbourne Harbour Trust, 53 L. J., P. C. 59; 9 App. Cas. 365; 50 L. T. 337—P. C.

Headings in Glasgow Police Act considered. Long v. Kerr, 3 App. Cas. 529.

Sub-headings in Public Health Act, 1875, considered. Reg. v. Local Government Board, 52 L. J., M. C. 4; 10 Q. B. D. 309; 49 L. T. 244; 31 W. R. 72—per Brett, L.J.

6. PUNCTUATION.

The words in 13 Geo. 3, c. 21, s. 3, are to be read, "aliens' duties, customs and impositions," and not "aliens, duties, customs and impositions"; and therefore the grandchild of a natural-born subject, born out of the Queen's allegiance, is entitled to the benefit of that statute in regard to holding lands as a natural-born subject, although he has not complied with the formalities specified in the third section. Barrow v. Wadkin, 24 Beav. 327.

7. INTERPRETATION CLAUSE.

Does not affect plain Meaning of Words in Themselves.]—But for the interpretation clause, no difficulty as to the construction would have arisen. But I think an interpretation clause should be used for the purpose of interpreting words which are ambiguous or equivocal, and not so as to disturb the meaning of such as are plain. Reg. v. Pearce, 49 L. J., M. C. 81; 5 Q. B. D. 386, 389; 28 W. R. 568; 44 J. P. 216—per Lush, J. S. P., Robinson v. Barton-Eccles, 52 L. J., Ch. 5; 8 App. Cas. 798; 47 L. T. 286; 32 W. R. 249 —per Lord Selborne.

An interpretation clause in an act should be understood to define the meaning of the word thereby interpreted, in cases as to which there is nothing else in the act opposed to or inconsistent with that interpretation. Midland Ry. v. Ambergate, Nottingham and Boston and Eastern Junction Ry., 10 Hare, 359.

Part of, ex abundanti cautelâ, does not alter Law.]—The interpretation of "justice of the peace," in s. 3 of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, as meaning (inter alia) a justice not interested does not alter the law so as to prevent waiver of an objection to jurisdiction on the ground of interest. Wakefield v. West Riding Ry., 6 B. & S. 801; 35 L. J., M. C. 69; L. R. 1 Q. B. 84.

Objections to Interpretation Clauses.]—An interpretation clause is a modern innovation, and frequently does a great deal of harm. Lindsay v. Cundy, 1 Q. B. D. 348—per Blackburn, J.. S. P., Ely (Dean of) v. Bliss, 2 De G. M. & G. at p. 471—per Lord St. Leonards; Reg. v. Boilers Explosion Act Commissioners, 60 L. J., Q. B. 544; [1891] 1 Q. B. 703; 64 L. T. 674; 39 W. R. 440.

B. DISTINCTION BETWEEN PUBLIC AND LOCAL ACTS.

How Distinguished.]—Whether an act is to be deemed a public act, binding on all the Queen's subjects, or merely a private act, depends upon the nature and substance of the case, and not upon the technical consideration whether the act does or does not contain a clause declaring that it shall be deemed to be a public act. Dawson v. Paver, 5 Hare, 415; 16 L. J., Ch. 274; 11 Jur. 766.

Acts of parliament relating to trade in general are public acts. Kirk v. Nowill, 1 Term Rep. 125; 1 R. R. 160.

The 23 Hen. 6, c. 10, is a public act; and therefore the courts will take judicial notice of it, although not pleaded. Samuel v. Evans, 2 Term Rep. 569. S. P., Lovell v. London Corporation, 15 East, 320.

An act for the formation of a railway, containing a declaration that it is to be judicially taken notice of as a public act, cannot be treated or construed as a private assurance. Hargreaves v. Lancaster and Preston Ry., 1 Railw. Cas. 416.

A local act, though containing a clause making it a public act, is not public notice of its powers over land therein mentioned. Ballard v. Way, 2 Gale, 61; 1 M. & W. 520; 1 Tyr. & G. 851; 5 L. J., Ex. 207.

A canal act is not rendered a public act by containing provisions empowering the company to regulate and take tonnage rates and tolls from persons using the canal. Brett v. Beales, M. & M. 421; 31 R. R. 744.

Building Acts.]—The Building Act (14 Geo. 3, c. 78) was an act of a local and personal nature. Richards v. Easto, 15 M. & W. 244; 3 D. & L. 515; 15 L. J., Ex. 163; 10 Jur. 695.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 84 (repealed), for regulating the construction and the use of buildings in the metropolis and its neighbourhood, although printed among the public general statutes, was an act of a local and personal nature, and ought to have been so classed. Ib.

—— Metropolitan Police.]—The Metropolitan Police Acts (2 & 3 Vict. c. 47; 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71; and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 84) are not local and personal within s. 5 of the Limitation of Actions and Costs Act, 1842, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, s. 5, and therefore the times limited by the statutes respectively for the bringing of actions are not altered by that section. Barnett v. Cox, 9 Q. B. 617; 2 New Sess. Cas. 487; 16 L. J., M. C. 27; 11 Jur. 118.

Local and Personal Act Generally, what is, and what is not.]—The repealed 8 & 9 Vict. c. 21, gave power to the justices of the county of Lancaster to make rates on the division of Manchester for the purposes of the act, and provided that all existing powers and provisions relating to county rates should be taken to apply to rates made under the act. The County Rates Act (55 Geo. 3, c. 51) provided a limitation of three months as the period within which actions must be brought for anything done in pursuance of the act. The Limitation of Actions and Costs Act, 1842, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, s. 5, provides that actions for anything done in pursuance of local or personal acts shall be brought within two years:—Held, that the limitation in 55 Geo. 3, c. 51, was incorporated in 8 & 9 Vict. c. 21; and that even if the latter act is to be considered as a local one, it must be taken to have repealed the act of 1842, as far as regards the period of limitation; and, therefore, that an action brought for seizing the plaintiff's goods for a rate under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 21, was brought too late after the expiration of three months after the seizure. Boden v. Smith, 18 L. J., C. P. 121; 13 Jur. 428.

An act for establishing a court of requests, empowering commissioners to adjudicate on demands, not exceeding a certain amount, by any persons against defendants resident within certain limits, and having a clause making it a public act, is a public, local and personal act. Cock v. Gent, 1 D. & L. 413; 12 M. & W. 234; 13 L. J., Ex. 24.

11 Geo. 1, c. 30, s. 43, is not such a local and personal act as is contemplated and repealed by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, s. 3. Carr v. Royal Exchange Insurance Co., 1 B. & S. 956; 31 L. J., Q. B. 93; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 384; 6 L. T. 105; 10 W. R. 352.

Statutes which, since the resolution of the House of Commons in 1801, have been printed by the king's printers, amongst the public, local and personal acts, are statutes commonly called public, local and personal, within 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97. Shepherd v. Sharp, 1 H. & N. 115; 25 L. J., Ex. 254; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 617; 4 W. R. 570—Ex. Ch.

An act for preventing nuisances in the parish of St. Mary, Islington, enacted that, "if any person put or caused to be put, or cast out of any waggon, &c., in or near any of the roads, within the parish of St. Mary, Islington, or should put or cast, within the parish, and in or within a quarter of a mile of any of the roads, any noisome or offensive matter, such person might be apprehended and carried before a magistrate":—Held, that the whole of the clause applied to such nuisances only when committed within the parish of St. Mary, Islington, and not when committed out of the parish, although within a quarter of a mile of a road within it. Flight v. Clarke, 13 M. & W. 155; 13 L. J., Ex. 309.

The statute 9 Anne, c. 22, created a tax upon coals coming into the port of London, and provided for the appointment of commissioners for the purpose of building fifty new churches in and about London and finishing Westminster Abbey and Greenwich Hospital. By 10 Anne, c. 11, the commissioners were empowered to purchase land for cemeteries to be used in connection with the new parish churches; and, by s. 4, it was provided that, wherever they should purchase for the cemetery of a new parish a piece of ground outside the bounds of the parish, the ground so purchased should thenceforth be deemed to be part of the parish:—Held, that whether the above statutes, regard being had to the whole scope of them, were "general" acts, or "local and personal" acts, s. 4 of the latter statute was a "local and personal" enactment within s. 59, sub-s. 6 of the Local Government Act, 1888, and that therefore a county council could, under s. 57, amend s. 4 of 10 Anne, c. 11, by ordering the re-transfer of a cemetery to the parish of which it originally formed a part. Reg. v. London County Council, 63 L. J., Q. B. 4; [1893] 2 Q. B. 454; 4 R. 529; 69 L. T. 580; 42 W. R. 1; 58 J. P. 21—C. A.

C. CONSTRUCTION GENERALLY.

1. General Rules.

Rules such as are Applicable to all Documents.]—It is safer to abstain from imposing with regard to acts of parliament, any further canons of construction than those applicable to all documents. Lamplugh v. Norton, 58 L. J., Q. B. 279; 22 Q. B. D. 452; 37 W. R. 422; 53 J. P. 389—Bowen, L.J.

Duty of Court.]—When a doubt arises upon the construction of the words of an act of parliament, it is the duty of the court to remove the doubt by deciding it; and when the court has given its decision, the point can no longer be considered doubtful. Bell v. Holtby, 42 L. J., Ch. 266; L. R. 15 Eq. 178; 28 L. T. 9; 21 W. R. 321.

According to Ordinary Sense of Language.]—An act is to be construed according to the ordinary and grammatical sense of its language, if there be no inconsistency apparent in its provisions; and a proviso, which, on the face of the act, is not inconsistent with the other enactments of it, is not to be limited in its effect by reason of local circumstances, not apparent on the face of the act causing such inconsistency. Smith v. Bell, 2 Railw. Cas. 877; 10 M. & W. 378.

Acts should be construed according to the intent of parliament. If the words of the statute are of themselves precise and unambiguous, then no more can be necessary than to expound those words in their natural and ordinary sense. The words themselves in such case, best declare the intention of the legislature. Sussex Peerage, 11 Cl. & F. 86; 8 Jur. 793.

The intention of the legislature must be ascertained from the words of a statute, and not from any general inferences to be drawn from the nature of the objects dealt with by the statute. Fordyce v. Bridges, 1 H. L. Cas. 1; 11 Jur. 157.

The court knows nothing of the intention of an act, except from the words in which it is expressed, applied to the facts existing at the time. Logan v. Courtown (Earl), 13 Beav. 22; 20 L. J., Ch. 347.

The court must read the words in their grammatical sense, unless they be in such a sense repugnant to the act. Richards v. McBride, 51 L. J., M. C. 15; 8 Q. B. D. 119; 45 L. T. 677; 30 W. R. 121; 46 J. P. 247.

The language of a statute taken in its plain ordinary sense, and not its policy or supposed intention, is the safer guide in construing its enactments. Philpott v. St. George's Hospital,

6 H. L. Cas. 338; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1269; 5 W. R. 845.

I prefer to adhere to the golden rule of construction, that the words of a statute are to be read in their ordinary sense, unless the so construing them will lead to some incongruity or manifest absurdity. Collins v. Welch, 5 C. P. D. at p. 29—per Grove, J.

When Ordinary Signification should be Restricted.]—When from the provision contained in a statute it is clear that a restriction must be put upon the ordinary and literal signification of some word or expression, and it is uncertain from anything to be found in the act itself or in the circumstances judicially cognisable under which the provision was inserted, what the exact character and extent of that restriction is, it is the duty of the court to put no greater restriction than the nature of the provision and the subject-matter to which it relates necessarily impose. Sullivan v. Mitcalfe, 49 L. J., C. P. 815; 5 C. P. D. 459; 45 L. T. 8; 29 W. R. 181—per Thesiger, L.J.

Any one who contends that a section of an act of parliament is not to be read literally, must be able to shew one of two things, either that (1) there is some other section which cuts down its meaning, or else (2) that the section itself is repugnant to the general purview of the act. Nuth v. Tamplin, 51 L. J., Q. B. 177; 8 Q. B. D. 253; 30 W. R. 346; 46 J. P. 692; 1 Colt. 260.

A statute is not to be construed literally when a literal construction would end in an absurdity or inconsistency with the intention of the legislature, as evidenced by the provisions of the statute, but it is to be construed in harmony with common-sense and the intention of the legislature. Walton, Ex parte, Levy, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 657, 662; 17 Ch. D. 756; 45 L. T. 1; 30 W. R. 395.

When two Constructions can be put upon Words.] — The more literal construction of a section of a statute ought not to prevail if it is opposed to the intentions of the legislature as apparent by the statute, and if the words are sufficiently flexible to admit of some other construction by which that intention will be better effectuated. Caledonian Ry. v. North British Ry., 6 App. Cas. 122; 29 W. R. 685—per Lord Selborne, L.C., and Lord Blackburn.

No court is entitled to depart from the intention of the legislature as appearing from the words of the act because it is thought unreasonable. But when two constructions are open, the court may adopt the more reasonable of the two. Rothes (Countess) v. Kirkcaldy Waterworks Commissioners, 7 App. Cas. 702—per Lord Blackburn.

An act of parliament is to be construed according to the ordinary meaning of the words in the English language, as applied to the subject-matter, unless there is some very strong ground, derived from the context or reason, why it should not be so construed. Hornsey Local Board v. Monarch Investment Building Society, 59 L. J., Q. B. 105; 24 Q. B. D. 1; 61 L. T. 867; 38 W. R. 85; 54 J. P. 391—per Lord Esher, M.R.

Application to Subject-Matter.] — Whenever you have to construe a statute or a document you do not construe it according to the mere ordinary general meaning of the words, but according to the ordinary meaning of the words as applied to the subject-matter with regard to which they are used, unless there is something which obliges you to read them in a sense which is not their ordinary sense in the English language as so applied—per Brett, M.R. Lion Insurance Association v. Tucker, 53 L. J., Q. B. 185; 12 Q. B. D. 186; 49 L. T. 764; 32 W. R. 546.

In construing an act of parliament, the court is bound by the verbal construction of the section in question if plain and simple; but if there is doubt upon that, it is entitled to look, first, at the circumstances attending the passing of the act; next, to the preamble; and, lastly, to the whole purport and scope of the act, beyond the section immediately under consideration: primâ facie, the acts of an independent legislature must be supposed to deal with those matters only which are within its own jurisdiction. Cope v. Doherty, 2 De G. & J. 614; 27 L. J., Ch. 600; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 699; 6 W. R. 695.

Ambiguous words occurring in an act of parliament ought not to be extended to institutions which are well known to exist, but are not named in the act. St. James's Club, In re, 2 De G. M. & G. 383; 16 Jur. 1075.

Intention of Legislature.]—Where the main object and intention of a statute are clear it must not be reduced to a nullity by the draftsman's unskilfulness or ignorance of law, except in the case of necessity or the absolute intractability of the language used. Salmon v. Duncombe, 55 L. J., P. C. 69; 11 App. Cas. 627; 55 L. T. 446—P. C.

The ordinary meaning of the words used in a statute must be adhered to unless that meaning is at variance with the intention of the legislature to be collected from the statute itself or leads to some absurdity or repugnance. Pietermaritzburg Corporation v. Natal Land Co., 57 L. J., P. C. 82; 13 App. Cas. 478; 58 L. T. 895—P. C.

The more literal construction of a section of a statute ought not to prevail if it is opposed to the intentions of the legislature as apparent by the statute, and if the words are sufficiently flexible to admit of some other construction by which that intention will be better effectuated. Semble. Caledonian Ry. v. North British Ry., 6 App. Cas. 122; 29 W. R. 685.

Unless the court is obliged to do so, it must not suppose that the legislature intended to do a palpable injustice. Semble. Corbett, Ex parte, Shand, In re, 14 Ch. D. 122.

You are not to attribute to general language used by the legislature a meaning that would not only carry out its object, but produce consequences which to the ordinary intelligence are absurd. You must give it such a meaning as will carry out its object. The Duke of Buccleuch, 15 P. D. 86; 62 L. T. 94; 6 Asp. M. C. 471—per Lindley, L.J.

Semble, a statute is not to be construed literally when a literal construction would end in an absurdity or inconsistency with the intention of the legislature, as evidenced by the provisions of the statute, but is to be construed in harmony with common-sense and the intention of the legislature. Walton, Ex parte, Levy, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 657, 662; 17 Ch. D. 756; 45 L. T. 1; 30 W. R. 395.

Uniformity in the Law.]—If we can fairly construe an act so as to carry out what must obviously have been the intention of the legislature, although the words may be a little difficult to deal with, and although they may possibly admit of more than one interpretation, we ought from those general considerations to adopt the interpretation which will make the law uniform, and will remedy the evil which prevailed in all the cases to which the law can be fairly applied —per Jessel, M.R. Freme v. Clement, 44 L. T. 399 ; 30 W. R. 3.

Beneficial rather than Injurious Meaning.]—The court should, in construing a statute, endeavour to attach a rational and beneficial meaning, if that is possible, rather than an irrational and an injurious meaning, to the statutes passed by the legislature. Mersey Steel and Iron Co. v. Naylor, 51 L. J., Q. B. 576, 584 ; 9 Q. B. D. 648 ; 47 L. T. 369 ; 31 W. R. 83.

Unless you are obliged to do so, you must not suppose that the legislature intended to do a palpable injustice. Corbett, Ex parte, Shand, In re, 14 Ch. D. 122, 129.

A very strong case of injustice arising from giving the language of an act of parliament its natural meaning must be made out before the court will construe a section in a way contrary to the natural meaning of the language used. Hall, In re, 57 L. J., Q. B. 494 ; 21 Q. B. D. 141 ; 59 L. T. 37 ; 36 W. R. 892.

If the words of an act of parliament, though capable of an interpretation which would work manifest injustice, can possibly within the bounds of grammatical construction and reasonable interpretation be otherwise construed, the court ought not to attribute to the legislature what is a clear, manifest, and gross injustice. Plumstead Board of Works v. Spackman, 53 L. J., M. C. 142 ; 13 Q. B. D. 878 ; 51 L. T. 760.

When the language of the legislature construed literally produces great injustice, the courts act upon the view that the legislature could not have intended to produce a result which would be palpably unjust, and would revolt the mind of any reasonable man, unless that intention has been manifested by express words—Esher (Lord), M.R. Dunn, Ex parte, Brockelbank, In re, 58 L. J., Q. B. 375 ; 23 Q. B. D. 461 ; 61 L. T. 543 ; 37 W. R. 537 ; 6 M. B. R. 138.

If the apparent logical construction of a statute leads to results which it is impossible to believe that those who framed or those who passed the statute contemplated, and from which one's own judgment recoils, there is good reason for believing that the construction which leads to such results cannot be the true construction—per Coleridge, C.J. Reg. v. Clarence, 58 L. J., M. C. 10 ; 22 Q. B. D. 65 ; 59 L. T. 780 ; 37 W. R. 166 ; 16 Cox, C. C. 511 ; 53 J. P. 149.

Collateral Effects—Injurious to third parties.]—Of two possible constructions the court prefers that which does not extend the operation of a statute to collateral effects and consequences beyond its general objects and policy and is not injurious to third parties. Railton v. Wood, 59 L. J., P. C. 84 ; 15 App. Cas. 363 ; 63 L. T. 13—P. C.

If it can be shewn that a particular interpretation of a taxing statute would operate unreasonably in the case of a foreigner sojourning in this country, it would afford a reason for adopting some other interpretation if it were possible consistently with the ordinary canons of construction —per Lord Herschell. Colquhoun v. Brooks, 59 L. J., Q. B. 53 ; 14 App. Cas. 493 ; 61 L. T. 518 ; 38 W. R. 289 ; 54 J. P. 277.

Act of God.]—An act which in general terms imposes a liability in a certain event is to be read subject to the implied qualification that the liability will not arise where the event happens through the act of God. Wear River Commissioners v. Adamson, 1 Q. B. D. 546 ; 35 L. T. 118 ; 24 W. R. 872—C. A.

Therefore the Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 27), s. 74, imposes no liability on the owner of a vessel for damage to a pier occasioned by the vessel being driven against the pier by stress of weather after it has been wrecked and abandoned on the high seas. Ib.

Policy of a Statute.]—It is never very safe ground in the construction of a statute to give weight to views of its policy, which are themselves open to doubt and controversy—per Lord Selborne, L.C. Municipal Building Society v. Kent, 53 L. J., Q. B. 290 ; 9 App. Cas. 273 ; 51 L. T. 6 ; 32 W. R. 681.

Statutory Fiction.]—When a statute enacts that something should be deemed to have been done which in fact was not done, the court is entitled and bound to ascertain for what purposes and between what persons the statutory fiction is to be resorted to—per James, L.J. Walton, Ex parte, Levy, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 657, 662 ; 17 Ch. D. 756 ; 45 L. T. 1 ; 30 W. R. 395.

History of Statute—When Inquiry Relevant.]—In order to construe an act of parliament the court is entitled to consider the state of the law at the time it was enacted—per Lord Esher, M.R. Philipps v. Rees, 59 L. J., Q. B. 1 ; 24 Q. B. D. 17 ; 61 L. T. 713 ; 38 W. R. 53 ; 54 J. P. 293.

It is useless to enter into an inquiry with regard to the history of an enactment, and any supposed defect in former legislation on the subject which it was intended to cure, in cases where the words of the enactment are clear. It is only material to enter into such an inquiry where the words of an enactment are ambiguous and capable of two meanings, in order to determine which of the two meanings was intended—per Lord Esher, M.R. Reg. v. London (Bishop), 59 L. J., Q. B. 169 ; 24 Q. B. D. 213 ; 62 L. T. 167 ; 38 W. R. 214 ; 54 J. P. 340.

If the words are really and fairly doubtful, then, according to well-known legal principles and principles of common-sense, historical investigation may be used for the purpose of clearing away the doubt which the phraseology of the statutes creates. Reg. v. Most, 50 L. J., M. C. 113, 116 ; 7 Q. B. D. 251 ; 44 L. T. 823 ; 29 W. R. 760 ; 14 Cox, C. C. 583 ; 45 J. P. 696—per Coleridge, C.J.

The court cannot impute to the legislature, in passing statutes, confirming titles created by means of parliamentary powers, ignorance of the transactions which had taken place in exercise of such powers. Beadon v. King, 9 Hare, 522 ; 22 L. J., Ch. 111.

When Common Law is affected.]—A statute which refers to the matter of a common-law liability and declares to whom it shall attach will not thereby create a new and extended application of that liability, unless it contains words expressly declaring such a purpose. Wear River Commissioners v. Adamson, supra, 47 L. J., Q. B. 193 ; 2 App. Cas. 743 ; 37 L. T. 543 ; 26 W. R. 217—H. L.

It is the most natural and genuine exposition of a statute to construe one part by another, for that best expresseth the meaning of the makers; and this exposition is ex visceribus actus. Reg. v. Mallow Union, 12 Ir. C. L. R. 35.

The common-law rights of the subject, in respect of the enjoyment of his property, are not to be trenched upon by a statute, unless such intention is shewn by clear words or necessary implication. Ib.

Statutes restrictive of the common law receive a restrictive construction. Ash v. Abdy, 3 Swans. 664.

In construing acts which infringe on the common law, the state of the law before the passing of the act must be ascertained to determine how far it is necessary to alter that law, in order to carry out the object of the act. Swanton v. Gould, 9 Ir. C. L. R. 234.

A right to demand a poll is a common law incident of all popular elections, and as such cannot be taken away by mere implication which is not necessary for the reasonable construction of a statute—per Brett, L.J. Reg. v. Wimbledon Local Board, 51 L. J., Q. B. 219; 8 Q. B. D. 459; 46 L. T. 47; 30 W. R. 400.

A married woman cannot vote at a municipal election, her existence for such a purpose being merged in that of her husband by the common law, which is not affected by the statutory enfranchisement of women for municipal elections. Reg. v. Harrald, 41 L. J., Q. B. 173; L. R. 7 Q. B. 361; 26 L. T. 616; 20 W. R. 328.

Interference with Common-law Rights.]—The fact that statutes interfere with a plaintiff's common-law rights is no reason why they should be construed differently from any other acts of parliament. The Warkworth, 53 L. J., P. 4; 9 P. D. 21; 49 L. T. 715; 32 W. R. 479; 5 Asp. M. C. 194—per Butt, J.

Injuring Persons without Compensation.]—It is a proper rule of construction not to construe an act of parliament as interfering with or injuring persons' rights without compensation, unless one is obliged to so construe it. Att.-Gen. v. Horner, 54 L. J., Q. B. 227; 14 Q. B. D. 257; 33 W. R. 93—per Brett, M.R.

Common-law Rights presumed not to be affected.]—We ought not to assume without the clearest language that parliament intends to destroy common-law rights, though such legislation is possible. Rendall v. Blair, 59 L. J., Ch. 641; 45 Ch. D. 139; 63 L. T. 265; 38 W. R. 689—per Bowen, L.J.

A statute which refers to the matter of a common-law liability and declares to whom it shall attach will not thereby create a new and extended application of that liability, unless it contains words expressly declaring such a purpose. Wear River Commissioners v. Adamson, supra, col. 1892.

Affecting General Law of Country.] — The general law of the country is not altered or controlled by partial legislation, made without any special reference to it. Denton v. Manners (Lord), 27 L. J., Ch. 199; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 151; 6 W. R. 238. Affirmed 27 L. J., Ch. 623; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 714; 6 W. R. 742.

The general words of a statute are not to be so construed as to alter the previous policy of the law, unless no sense or meaning can be put upon those words consistently with the intention of preserving the existing policy untouched; but the title and preamble of the General Inclosure Act, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 118, being quite general, the words of the 147th section appear to be so general as to make it impossible to limit them to exchanges of freeholds of the same species, notwithstanding inconveniences and seeming injustice to parties. Minet v. Leman, 20 Beav. 269; 24 L. J., Ch. 545; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 410; 3 Eq. R. 501; 3 W. R. 359.

Remedy by Summary Jurisdiction—Jurisdiction of High Court.]—Where by an act of parliament a claim thereunder is made enforceable by a court of summary jurisdiction, it is not competent to enforce such claim by means other than those prescribed by the statute, or to have recourse to the high court in order to determine the right. Barraclough v. Brown, 66 L. J., Q. B. 672; [1897] A. C. 615; 76 L. T. 797—H. L. (E.)

Inconvenience.]—If upon ambiguous words or expressions the balance of hardship or inconvenience seems to be strongly against the public upon one construction, or strongly against a private person upon another construction, I think it is consistent with all sound principles to have regard to the balance of inconvenience in determining the question of construction. Dixon v. Caledonian Ry., 5 App. Cas. 827; 43 L. T. 513; 29 W. R. 250—per Selborne, L.C.

With regard to inconvenience, I think that it is a most dangerous doctrine. I agree if the inconvenience is not only great, but what I may call an absurd inconvenience, by reading an enactment in its ordinary sense, whereas if you read it in a manner in which it is capable of being read, though not its ordinary sense, there would not be any inconvenience at all, there would be reason why you should not read it according to its ordinary grammatical meaning. Reg. v. Tonbridge Overseers, 13 Q. B. D. 342.

Affecting Custom.]—As a rule, existing customs or rights are not to be taken away by mere general words in an act. But, without words especially abrogating them, they may be abrogated by plain directions to do something which is wholly inconsistent with them. And this may be the case though the act is a private act, and though the particular custom may have been confirmed, years before, by a verdict in a court of law. Green v. Reg., 1 App. Cas. 513; 35 L. T. 495.

The usage of a particular place cannot control the operation of a general statute. Rex v. Hogg, 1 T. R. 721; Cald. 266; 1 R. R. 375.

Long usage is of no avail against plain statutory enactments, and it can be binding on parties only as the interpreter of a doubtful law, and as affording a contemporaneous exposition. Where a statute, expressive as to some points, is silent as to others, usage may well supply the defect, if not inconsistent with express directions of the statute. Dunbar Magistrates v. Roxburghe (Duchess), 3 Cl. & F. 335.

Neither usage nor long-continued practice can have any effect upon acts of parliament relating to tolls. Northern Bridge Co. v. Reg., 55 L. T. 759.

Jurisdiction taken away by.]—An existing jurisdiction cannot be taken away by an act of parliament, except by precise and distinct words. Galsworthy v. Durrant, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 743; 8 W. R. 594.

Dealing primâ facie with things within the Jurisdiction.]—It seems to me that unless parliament expressly declares otherwise the proper construction to be put on general words used in an English act of parliament is, that parliament was dealing only with such persons or things as are within the general words and also within the proper jurisdiction, and that we ought to assume that parliament (unless it expressly declares otherwise) when it uses general words is only dealing with persons or things over which it has properly jurisdiction. Colquhoun v. Heddon, 59 L. J., Q. B. 465; 25 Q. B. D. 129; 62 L. T. 853; 38 W. R. 545—per Lord Esher, M.R.

Contemporanea Expositio.]—When there are ambiguous expressions in an act passed one or two centuries ago, it may be legitimate to refer to the construction put upon these expressions throughout a long course of years, by the unanimous consent of all parties interested, as evidencing what must presumably have been the intention of the legislature at that remote period. But I feel bound to construe a recent statute according to its own terms, when these are brought into controversy, and not according to the views which interested parties may have hitherto taken. Clyde Navigation Trustees v. Laird, 8 App. Cas. 673—per Lord Watson.

Ut res magis valeat quam pereat.]—The words of a statute must be construed so as to give a sensible meaning to them if possible. The words ought to be construed ut res magis valeat quam pereat. Curtis v. Stovin, 58 L. J., Q. B. 174; 22 Q. B. D. 513; 60 L. T. 772; 37 W. R. 315—Bowen, L.J.

Wresting Words when superfluous.]—Nothing can be more mischievous than the attempt to wrest words from their proper and legal meaning, only because they are superfluous. Hough v. Windus, 53 L. J., Q. B. 165; 12 Q. B. D. 229; 50 L. T. 312; 32 W. R. 452; 1 Morrell, 1—per Selborne, L.C.

As to Service.]—Where personal service is not required by a statute, service at the dwelling-house is sufficient. Lowe, Ex parte, 2 New Sess. Cas. 331; 3 D. & L. 737; 15 L. J., M. C. 99; 10 Jur. 595.

Consideration of Practice under Statute.]—Whilst it is true that we ought not to construe an act itself by looking at the practice which has taken place in carrying the act out, it is equally true that we are entitled to construe a subsequent act not only with regard to the actual words used, but also to the practice which had grown up and existed at the time the subsequent act was passed. Yewens v. Noakes, 50 L. J., Q. B. 132, 135; 6 Q. B. D. 535; 44 L. T. 128; 28 W. R. 562; 45 J. P. 8—per Thesiger, L.J.

Parol Evidence to Explain.]—Upon the trial of an information at the suit of the attorney-general against a member of the house of commons for voting without having taken the oath of allegiance within the meaning of the Parliamentary Oaths Act, 1866, as amended by the Promissory Oaths Acts, 1868, evidence of the practice observed in the house of commons as to taking the oath of allegiance is admissible for the purpose of explaining the construction of those statutes. Att.-Gen. v. Bradlaugh, 54 L. J., Q. B. 205; 14 Q. B. D. 667; 52 L. T. 589; 33 W. R. 673—C. A.

Interference with Private Rights, Construction against.]—A statute must not be deemed to take away or extinguish the right of a subject, unless it appear by express words or by plain implication, that it was the intention of the legislature so to do. Western Counties Ry. v. Windsor and Annapolis Ry., 51 L. J., P. C. 43; 7 App. Cas. 188; 46 L. T. 351.

On those who seek to establish that the legislature intended to take away the private rights of individuals lies the burden of shewing that such an intention appears by express words or necessary implication. Semble. Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill, 50 L. J., Q. B. 353; 6 App. Cas. 208; 44 L. T. 653; 29 W. R. 617.

Where the terms of a statute are not imperative, but permissive, the fair inference is that the legislature intended that the discretion, as to the use of the general powers thereby conferred, should be exercised in strict conformity with private rights. Semble. Ib.

No inference from a statute designed in favour of the liberty of the subject to the prejudice of that liberty. Crowley's Case, 2 Swan. 68; Buck, 264.

Where an equal agreement cannot, by reason of a subsequent act of parliament, or some other lawful impediment, be performed in the whole, yet the same shall be specifically executed in such part of it as remains lawful. Bettesworth v. St. Paul's (Dean), 1 Bro. P. C. 240.

An affirmative statute, giving a new right, does not of itself and necessarily destroy a previously existing right, created by another statute to which it does not refer; but will do so if it appears to have been the intention of the legislature that the two rights should not exist together. O'Flaherty v. M'Dowell, 6 H. L. Cas. 142.

A party interested in the subject-matter of a private act of parliament will have his rights affected by its provisions, though it may have been introduced and passed without notice duly given to him. Edinburgh Ry. v. Wauchope, 8 Cl. & F. 710; 3 Railw. Cas. 233.

An enacting clause which interferes with private rights must be construed strictly; but the largest and most liberal construction will be given to an exception which protects those rights. Finch v. Birmingham Canal Proprietors, 5 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 17.

When an act confers upon a landowner a private right creating a burden upon a railway and restraining the directors from regulating the traffic so as best to accommodate the public it must be construed strictly. Turner v. L. & S. W. Ry., 43 L. J., Ch. 430; L. R. 17 Eq. 561.

A statute relating to the corporate property of a city, with the usual clause declaring that it shall be deemed a public act, does not bind strangers with notice; and the mere probability of a purchaser knowing it, or precautions taken by him in a purchase of corporate property, will not fix him with constructive notice. Att.-Gen. v. Marrett, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 167.

When persons having, as a class, certain privileges, are by statute subjected to certain liabilities, their privileges being expressly reserved to them, and other persons having the same privileges are afterwards, as a class, subjected to the same liabilities, but nothing is said of their privileges, these privileges still continue to exist. Newcastle (Duke) v. Morris, L. R. 4 H. L. 661; 19 W. R. 26.

Where an act of parliament interferes with private rights and private interests, it ought to receive a strict construction, so far as those rights and interests are concerned. Hughes v. Chester and Holyhead Ry., 31 L. J., Ch. 97; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 821; 7 L. T. 197; 10 W. R. 219.

Privilege, Act giving, Construction of.]—56 Geo. 3, c. 67 (repealed), allowing children of soldiers, and others employed since 1802, to set up any trade, any statute to the contrary notwithstanding, does not exempt such persons from the general provisions of the licensing and other acts. Killin v. Swatton, 76 L. T. 55; 45 W. R. 235; 61 J. P. 150.

2. On whom Binding.

Generally.]—Primâ facie an English statute affects only English subjects or foreigners who come, either permanently or temporarily, within the allegiance of the English Crown. Blain, Ex parte, Sawers, In re, 12 Ch. D. 522; 41 L. T. 46; 28 W. R. 334—C. A.

Whether to be confined to United Kingdom.]—A statute, if there be nothing pointing to the contrary intention, will primâ facie be taken to apply only to the United Kingdom; but where it is applicable to the Queen's dominions, it will be taken to apply to all persons in the Queen's dominions, including those who owe temporary allegiance—such as foreigners during their residence in the country; and according to its context it may be taken to apply to the Queen's subjects anywhere. Reg. v. Jameson, 65 L. J., M.C. 218; [1896] 2 Q. B. 425; 75 L. T. 77; 60 J. P. 662; 18 Cox, C. C. 392—Trial at Bar.

A statute, if any other construction be possible, is not to be construed as applying to foreigners in respect of acts done by them outside the dominions of the enacting sovereign power. Ib.

The Crown.]—An enactment distinct, and without exception in itself, is not to be controlled or limited by a doubtful implication to be drawn from a previous section of the same statute, especially in respect of the prerogatives of the crown, which are not to be affected except by distinct enactment. Exeter (Bishop), Ex parte, Gorham, In re, 10 C. B. 102; 19 L. J., C. P. 200.

By 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 8 (repealed), writs of error upon any judgments given by the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas or Exchequer, were returnable by the judges and barons, or judges only of the other two courts, in the Exchequer Chamber:—Held, that the Crown was bound by this enactment, and that therefore a writ of error lay upon a judgment for the Crown in a petition of right to the Exchequer Chamber. De Bode (Baron) v. Reg., 13 Q. B. 364; 14 Jur. 970—Ex. Ch.

A defendant at the suit of the Crown is liable to arrest as if the Debtors Act had not passed, Crown debts not being either directly or by implication referred to in that act. Att.-Gen. v. Edmunds, 22 L. T. 667.

Ireland.]—Every act since the union embraces Ireland, unless Ireland is excluded from its operation in express terms, or by necessary implication to be gathered from the construction of the statute. Reg. v. Mallow Union, 12 Ir. C. L. R. 25.

Colonies.]—If the scope and object of an imperial statute leads to the conclusion that the legislature intended it to affect a colony, and the words used are calculated to have that effect, they must be so construed. Callander v. Lagos (Colonial Secretary), 60 L. J., P. C. 33; [1891] A. C. 460; 65 L. T. 297—P. C.

There is a general rule of construction that English acts of parliament, when dealing with property in general, are not to be treated as applying to foreign or colonial property. Colquhoun v. Brooks, 57 L. J., Q. B. 70; 19 Q. B. D. 406; 57 L. T. 448; 36 W. R. 332—per Wills, J.

Foreigners.]—Part IX. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, corresponding to Part VIII. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, limiting the liability of shipowners, in case of loss or damage to any other ship, had no application where one of such ships was a foreign vessel, and, therefore, none where both were foreign, and the lex loci applied only to the form of procedure, and not to the substance of the proceeding itself; and excepting where foreign ships are expressly mentioned, Part IX. of the Act of 1854 applied only to British ships. Cope v. Doherty, 2 De G. & J. 614; 27 L. J., Ch. 600; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 699; 6 W. R. 695.

3. Prospective or Retrospective Effect.

Statutes generally not Retrospective.]—Primâ facie the general rule of construing acts of parliament is that they are prospective, and you are not to interfere with rights unless you find express words to that effect. Allhusen v. Brooking, 53 L. J., Ch. 520; 26 Ch. D. 564; 51 L. T. 57; 32 W. R. 657.

It certainly requires very clear and unmistakable language in a subsequent act of parliament to revive or re-create an expired right. It is a fundamental rule of English law that no statute shall be construed so as to have a retrospective operation, unless its language is such as to plainly require such a construction. And the same rule involves another and subordinate rule to the effect that a statute is not to be construed so as to have a greater retrospective operation than its language renders necessary. Lauri v. Renad, 61 L. J., Ch. 580; [1892] 3 Ch. 402; 67 L. T. 275; 40 W. R. 679—C. A.

The International Copyright Act, 1886, must be construed according to these well settled rules. Ib.

The Gaming Act, 1892, provides that any promise to pay any person any sum under any wagering contract shall be null and void, and that no action shall be maintained to recover any such sum:—Held, that although the words barring an action might be redundant, yet that they could not be held retrospective, so as to bar a right of action commenced after the passing of the act to recover payments made before it to a betting agent for lost bets paid by the agent. Knight v. Lee, 62 L. J., Q. B. 28; [1893] 1 Q. B. 41; 5 R. 54; 67 L. T. 688; 41 W. R. 125.

Statutes are, primâ facie, deemed to be prospective only. Pettumberdass v. Thackoorseydass, 5 Moore, Ind. App. 109; 7 Moore, P. C. C. 239; 15 Jur. 257.

The general rule in construing recent statutes is "Nova constitutio futuris formam imponere debet, non præteritis," but the rule, which is one of construction only, will yield to a sufficiently-expressed intention of the legislature, that the enactment should have a retrospective operation. Moon or Moore v. Durden, 2 Ex. 22; 12 Jur. 138. S. P., Quilter v. Mapleson, 52 L. J., Q. B. 44; 9 Q. B. D. 672; 31 W. R. 75—per Jessel, M.R.

A retrospective effect will not be given to a statute unless the statute by precise words clearly shews that such was the intention of the legislature. Thompson v. Lack, 3 C. B. 540; 16 L. J., C. P. 75.

As a general principle, acts of parliament, especially when they alter the rights of parties, are not to be construed retrospectively, unless otherwise provided. Hickson v. Darlow, 52 L. J., Ch. 453, 454; 31 W. R. 362—per Fry, J. Affirmed 23 Ch. D. 690; 48 L. T. 449; 31 W. R. 361.

An act is not to be construed as retrospective by inference, but only by express enactment. Evans v. Williams, 2 Dr. & Sm. 324.

Clear and unambiguous words are necessary to give a retrospective effect to an act, so as to deprive a party of a vested right of action. Marsh v. Higgins, 9 C. B. 551; 1 L. M. & P. 253; 19 L. J., C. P. 297.

General presumption that a statute is not intended to have retrospective operation may give way to contrary inference, from remedial nature of the particular enactment. The Ironsides, Lush. 458; 31 L. J., Adm. 129; 6 L. T. 59.

Criminal Offence.]—Unless the intention of the legislature is clearly expressed criminal offences are not to be created by giving a retrospective operation to acts of parliament. Reg. v. Griffiths, 60 L. J., M. C. 93; [1891] 2 Q. B. 145; 39 W. R. 719; 56 J. P. 87—C. C. R.

Sect. 11 of 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85 (repealed) (by which a party charged with felony may, notwithstanding acquittal, be found guilty of assault), ruled to apply to offences committed before it came into operation. Reg. v. Hagan, 8 Car. & P. 167—per Bolland, B., and Coltman, J.

When Words not Plain.]—The rule of construction, which is only available when the words of an act of parliament are not plain, is embodied in the well-known maxim "nova constitutio futuris temporibus formam imponere debet non præteritis," that you ought, except in special cases, to construe the new law so as to interfere as little as possible with vested rights or vested dispositions of property. It seems to me that even if an act is to a certain extent retrospective, and even if construing a section which is to a certain extent retrospective, we ought nevertheless to bear in mind that maxim as applicable whenever we reach the line at which the words of the section cease to be plain. Reid v. Reid, 55 L. J., Ch. 294; 31 Ch. D. 102; 54 L. T. 100; 34 W. R. 333—per Bowen, L.J.

When a statute renders necessary to the validity of a transaction a condition with which it is impossible that the parties to the transaction could comply at the time when the statute comes into operation, the statute cannot apply to antecedent transactions, unless the legislature have plainly expressed their intention that it is to apply to them. Todd, Ex parte, Ashcroft, In re, infra—per Fry, L.J.

Statute Repealing former Statute and in part Re-enacting it.]—In determining whether any provision of an act was intended to be retrospective or not, I think the consequences of holding that it is not retrospective must be looked at, and to my mind it is inconceivable that the legislature, when, in a new act which repeals a former act, they repeat in so many words certain provisions of the repealed act, should have intended that persons who, before the passing of the new act, had broken the provisions of the old act, should entirely escape the consequences of their wrong-doing by reason of the repeal of the old act. I think it is a wholesome doctrine to hold that the section is retrospective so far as it is a repetition of the former enactment, but that it is not retrospective so far as it is new. Todd, Ex parte, Ashcroft, In re, 56 L. J., Q. B. 431; 19 Q. B. D. 195; 57 L. T. 835; 35 W. R. 676; 4 Morrell, 209—per Lord Esher M.R.

Commencement with Commencement of Day of Royal Assent.]—The Bastardy Law Amendment Act, 1872, 35 & 36 Vict. c. 65, s. 3, provides for an application for an order of affiliation by any single woman who may be delivered of a bastard child "after the passing of this act." The act, which came into immediate operation, received the royal assent on the 10th August, 1872:—Held, that an order of affiliation might be made under the act in respect of a child born at any time of the day on the 10th August, 1872, inasmuch as the act, in contemplation of law for this purpose, came into effect from the commencement of the day on which it received the royal assent. Tomlinson v. Bullock, 48 L. J., M. C. 95; 4 Q. B. D. 230; 40 L. T. 459; 27 W. R. 552.

Although it is expressly enacted that an act shall commence and take effect from a day named, yet, if the royal assent is not obtained until a subsequent day, the provisions of a particular section in its terms prospective do not take effect until such subsequent day. Burn v. Carvalho, 4 N. & M. 893; 1 A. & E. 895.

Statutes as to Procedure retrospective.]—The rule that statutes ought not to be construed retrospectively, unless an intention in the legislature that they should be so construed distinctly appears, does not apply to statutes which only affect the procedure or practice of courts of justice. Wright v. Hale, 6 H. & N. 227; 30 L. J., Ex. 40; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1212; 3 L. T. 444; 9 W. R. 157.

A statute relating to procedure is retrospective. Curtis v. Stovin, 58 L. J., Q. B. 174; 22 Q. B. D. 513; 60 L. T. 772; 37 W. R. 315.

Where an enactment deals with procedure only, unless the contrary is expressed, the enactment applies to all actions, whether commenced before or after the passing of the act. Singer v. Hasson, 50 L. T. 326.

Where the law is altered by a statute pending an action, the law as it existed when the action was commenced must decide the rights of the parties, unless the legislature, by the language used, shews a clear intention to vary the mutual relation of the parties. Hitchcock v. May, 6 A. & E. 943; 2 N. & P. 72.

A party who mistakes his rights and sues in a wrong form is not entitled to an order that would deprive the defendants of the benefit of any alterations made in the law in the meantime. Waterford (Marquis) v. Knight, 11 Cl. & F. 653. Reversing 4 Y. & Coll. 283; 10 L. J., Ex. Eq. 57; 5 Jur. 818.

After a suit was instituted by a railway company for specific performance, the company obtained legislative powers to retain possession of the land in question:—Held, that the cause must be decided as if the act had not passed. Ib.

—— Issue of an Alias.]—A writ of summons issued under the Uniformity of Process Act expired before the 24th of October, 1852, when the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, came into operation:—Held, that an alias to save the statute must issue pursuant to the former act. Gapp v. Robinson, 12 C. B. 828; 22 L. J., C. P. 5; 16 Jur. 977; 1 W. R. 21.

Retrospective effect on Action Commenced.]—It has been considered in many cases that where a person has commenced an action he had a vested right, and that any subsequent statute ought not to be construed as retroactive so as to alter that right. This is not an invariable rule, and does not apply if the language of the statute is clear and express. Att.-Gen. v. Theobald, 24 Q. B. D. 557; 62 L. T. 768; 38 W. R. 527—per Pollock, B.

Vexatious Actions Act, 1896—Retrospective Operation.]—The Vexatious Actions Act, 1896, has a retrospective operation, and applies equally whether the vexatious legal proceedings complained of have taken place before or after the passing of the act. Chaffers, In re, Att.-Gen., Ex parte, 76 L. T. 351; 45 W. R. 365.

Declaratory Act retrospective.]—A declaratory act is, as a general rule, retrospective. Jones v. Bennett, 63 L. T. 705; 6 Asp. M. C. 596.

Retrospective where New Remedy.]—A statute is retrospective without express words, where it is intended to remedy an existing evil, and in order to do so gives to the parties injured a new remedy. Reg. v. Birwistle, 58 L. J., M. C. 158, 159.

Retrospective Effect of Repealing Statute.]—In August, 1887, the appellants obtained a licence to work a coal area for two years under a statute which provided that the licence "shall be extended to three years" upon an additional payment. Before the two years had expired this enactment was repealed, and other statutory rights were given in substitution for those which were abolished. Of these rights the appellants had an opportunity of availing themselves. They did not, however, apply for the substituted rights, but for a renewed licence under the provisions of the repealed statute:—Held, that when the amended statute was passed, the appellants had no accrued right under the repealed statute to obtain an extension of their licence, and therefore could not avail themselves of an enactment which was no longer in force. Reynolds v. Att.-Gen. for Nova Scotia, 65 L. J., P. C. 16; [1896] A. C. 240; 74 L. T. 108—P. C.

Non-Retrospective Operation of Amending Statute.]—Sect. 4 of the Trustee Act, 1893, Amendment Act, 1894, is not retrospective, and will not therefore have the effect of relieving trustees from a breach of trust committed before the passing of the act by the retention of an investment which has ceased to be an investment authorised by the instrument of trust or by the general law. Chapman, In re, Cocks v. Chapman, 65 L. J., Ch. 170; [1896] 1 Ch. 323; 73 L. T. 658; 44 W. R. 311.

Mercantile Law Amendment Act.]—The Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856, 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 1, does not operate retrospectively, so as to prevent the goods of an execution debtor being bound by fieri facias lodged with the sheriff before the act came into operation. Williams v. Smith, 4 H. & N. 559; 28 L. J., Ex. 286; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1107; 7 W. R. 503—Ex. Ch.

Where a payment has been made (of interest or principal) on a promissory note by one of the co-contractors, before the passing of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 97), an action might be maintained by the holder of the note against any other of the co-contractors within six years after such payment, notwithstanding s. 14, as that section has no retrospective effect. Jackson v. Woolley, 8 El. & Bl. 771; 27 L. J., Q. B. 448; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 656; 6 W. R. 686—Ex. Ch.

Disqualification by Conviction.]—Sect. 14 of the Wine and Beerhouse Act Amendment Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 29), provides that "every person convicted of felony" shall be disqualified from selling spirits by retail, and makes any licence held by such person void:—Held, that the section had a retrospective operation, and applied to a person convicted before the passing of the act, so as to make a licence held by him void. Reg. v. Vine, 44 L. J., M. C. 60; L. R. 10 Q. B. 195; 31 L. T. 842; 23 W. R. 649; 13 Cox, C. C. 43.

Poor Law Settlements.]—The first paragraph of s. 35 of the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 61), which abolishes derivative settlements, except in the case of a wife from her husband, and of a child under the age of sixteen from its parent, is to be read retrospectively as well as prospectively, both in the enacting part and in the exception. Westbury-on-Severn Union v. Barrow-in-Furness Overseers, 47 L. J., M. C. 79; 3 Ex. D. 88; 38 L. T. 315; 26 W. R. 372.

Sect. 35 of the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1876, so far as it provides that an illegitimate child shall retain the settlement of its mother until it acquires another settlement, is not retrospective so as to affect a pauper who has acquired a birth settlement by attaining the age of sixteen before its passing. Tenterden Union v. St. Mary, Islington, 47 L. J., M. C. 81; 38 L. T. 485.

Bankruptcy Acts.]—The Bankruptcy Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 224), enacted that every deed of arrangement "now or hereafter entered into between any such trader and his creditors, and signed by six-sevenths of them in number and value, whose debts amount to 10*l.*, shall be obligatory upon all the creditors who shall not have signed the deed, as if they had signed it":—Held, that the section was not retrospective in its operation, and that a creditor was not barred by a deed of arrangement entered into by six-sevenths of the creditors of a debtor before the act came into operation, to which he was not a party. Waugh v. Middleton, 8 Ex. 352; 22 L. J., Ex. 109.

Where a debtor has been adjudged bankrupt prior to January 1, 1884, he is not subject to the disqualifications mentioned in s. 32 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and may therefore be elected and act as a member of a school board after that date (Lord Esher, M.R., dissenting). Pulborough School Board Election, In re, Bourke v. Nutt, 63 L. J., Q. B. 497; [1894] 1 Q. B. 725; 9 R. 395; 70 L. T. 639; 42 W. R. 388; 58 J. P. 572; 1 Manson, 172—C. A.

Under s. 25, sub-s. 2 (b), of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, which came into force on January 1st, 1891, a trustee under any deed of arrangement, as defined by s. 4 of the Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1887, is not required to furnish accounts of receipts and payments which took place prior to January 1, 1891. Norman, In re, Board of Trade, Ex parte, 63 L. J., Q. B. 34; [1893] 2 Q. B. 369; 4 R. 584; 69 L. T. 675—C. A.

Semble, that enactment is not retrospective, and does not apply to deeds of arrangement executed before that date. Ib.

Building Societies Act.]—Semble, the court of appeal must give effect to s. 10 of the Building Societies Act, 1894 (providing that advanced members, on the dissolution of a building society, are only liable to pay in accordance with the terms of their contracts), though the act was passed after the decision given in the court below. Kemp v. Wright, 64 L. J., Ch. 59; [1895] 1 Ch. 121; 6 R. 631; 71 L. T. 650; 43 W. R. 213—C. A.

Judicature Act, s. 22.]—A bill, which the court held to be a mere ejectment bill, was filed shortly before 2nd of November, 1874, when the Judicature Act came into operation: — Held, that although the bill could not have been sustained before the Judicature Acts, the objection to the jurisdiction was removed by s. 22 of the Judicature Act, 1873. Hurst v. Hurst, 51 L. J., Ch. 729; 21 Ch. D. 278; 46 L. T. 899—C. A.

Sect. 25, sub-s. 6, of the Judicature Act, 1873, is retrospective, and applies to assignments of choses in action made before that act came into operation. Dibb v. Walker, 62 L. J., Ch. 536; [1893] 2 Ch. 429; 3 R. 474; 68 L. T. 610; 41 W. R. 427.

Solicitors Act, 1843.]—Retrospective operation of the Solicitors Act, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 73, to make taxable bills not previously liable to taxation incurred before, but remaining unsettled at, the time of the passing of the act. Rhodes, In re, 8 Beav. 224; 14 L. J., Ch. 97.

The act applies to bills of costs, although incurred prior to the act, and although no part would have been before the act taxable; where a special agreement covers only part of the bill, it is competent to the master to proceed with the taxation, and without a special order; if the agreement is valid, and goes to the whole, as it would preclude taxation, the validity must first be decided, and quære, if the master is authorised to decide as to the validity, and whether, if to be brought before the court, upon petition or by bill. Eyre, In re, 2 Ph. 367; 17 L. J., Ch. 277.

Payment, before the act came into operation, of a previously taxable bill would not preclude taxation under the act upon a proper application made in due time. But payment before the act came into operation of a bill not previously taxable precludes taxation. Ib.

The act, as regards taxation, is retrospective with respect to bill previously taxable, and also as to bills thereby made taxable, provided the latter remained unpaid at the passing of the act. Lees, In re, 5 Beav. 410; 13 L. J., Ch. 151.

County Courts Act, 1867.]—The 10th section of the repealed County Courts Act, 1867, 30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, as to security for costs by plaintiff in tort, was retrospective, and applied to an action commenced before the passing of the statute. Kimbray v. Draper, 37 L. J., Q. B. 80; L. R. 3 Q. B. 160; 18 L. T. 540; 16 W. R. 539.

—— Statute of Gloucester.]—A writ of summons was issued in 1866, a verdict was taken, subject to a reference, the order of reference being made on the 7th of August, 1867; the award was made on the 29th of February, 1868, ordering a verdict of 5*l.* to be entered for the plaintiff, but giving no certificate; and a judge's order for costs, on the ground that title came in question, was obtained:—Held, that the County Courts Act, 1867, only repealed the Statute of Gloucester in cases where absolutely and at all events the plaintiff's right to costs was taken away; that in other cases they only added certain conditions to the right given by the Statute of Gloucester; that, on the repeal of such statutes by the County Courts Act, 1867, the Statute of Gloucester in such other cases stood freed from the conditions as respects actions previously commenced (special provision being made as to actions commenced afterwards), and that therefore the plaintiff was entitled to his costs. Mount v. Taylor, 37 L. J., C. P. 325; L. R. 3 C. P. 645; 18 L. T. 476; 16 W. R. 866.

Before the passing of the County Courts Act, 1867, a plaintiff brought an action for goods sold; and upon the trial, which took place after the act came into operation, he recovered a verdict for 13*l.* It was not a case of conclusive or concurrent jurisdiction, nor was there any certificate or order entitling the plaintiff to his costs:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to his costs. Mirfin v. Attwood, 9 B. & S. 414; 38 L. J., Q. B. 181; L. R. 4 Q. B. 330; 20 L. T. 778; 17 W. R. 820.

An action in a case where there would have been concurrent jurisdiction under County Courts Act, 1846, s. 128, having been commenced before the passing of the County Courts Act, 1867, was tried by order, after the passing of the act, before a county court judge, and a verdict obtained for 5*l.* only:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to his costs, as the right to judgment did not accrue until after the passing of the County Courts Act, 1867, and in cases of conclusive or concurrent jurisdiction, the right to costs was substantially preserved by the former county courts acts; so that the Statute of Gloucester could not be considered as repealed with regard to such cases. Levi v. Sanderson, 9 B. & S. 410; 38 L. J., Q. B. 135; L. R. 4 Q. B. 330; 17 W. R. 443.

Where, in an action of contract referred at the trial, an award was made in the plaintiff's favour for less than 20*l.* before the passing of the County Courts Act, 1867:—Held, that the coming into operation of that act did not entitle the plaintiff to costs under the Statute of Gloucester. Oldcrire v. Puckeridge, 37 L. J., Ex. 90; L. R. 3 Ex. 145; 18 L. T. 333; 16 W. R. 872.

A plaintiff commenced an action of trespass before the 20th August, 1867, on which day the County Courts Act, 1867, received the royal assent, and recovered at the summer assizes a verdict for less than 5*l.*; but title to land came in question. The judge, before whom the cause was tried, did not certify on the record for costs, nor did the plaintiff obtain an order from a judge for that purpose before the 1st January, 1868:—Held, first, that the plaintiff having, under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, ss. 11, 12, become entitled to judgment for the amount of the verdict and no costs, unless he obtained an order under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 4, the repeal of these statutes did not enable him to sign judgment for costs under the Statute of Gloucester. Butcher v. Henderson, 9 B. & S. 403; 37 L. J., Q. B. 133, 139; L. R. 3 Q. B. 335; 16 W. R. 855.

Held, secondly, that 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 4, being repealed, the court had no power to make an order for costs. Ib.

—— Not Entitled to Sign Judgment until after Commencement.]—On the 5th of October, 1867, an action of tort was commenced; on the 29th of November a verdict was found for 5*l.* (no certificate), with leave to the defendant to move: in Hilary term, 1868, the defendant moved, but eventually abandoned the matter; in May, 1868, the plaintiff applied to be allowed to tax his costs. But for the County Courts Act, 1867, he would have been entitled to his costs, on the ground of concurrent jurisdiction:—Held, that the case fell within the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 5, and the plaintiff was not entitled to costs. Ings v. L. & S. W. Ry., 38 L. J., C. P. 8; L. R. 4 C. P. 17; 17 W. R. 120.

A plaintiff who recovers less than 20*l.* in an action of contract commenced after the 20th of August, 1867, though before the 1st of January, 1868, is deprived of his costs by the County Courts Act, 1867, though he dwelt more than twenty miles from the defendant. Wood v. Hunt, L. R. 4 C. P. 18, n.; 16 W. R. 678.

When prior Act took Effect — Action after Passing—Judgment before Commencement.]—A plaintiff having recovered less than 20*l.* in an action founded on contract, and commenced in a superior court after the passing of the County Courts Act, 1867, but before the time fixed for it to come into operation:—Held, that the act had no operation till the 1st January next after it was passed, notwithstanding that the words used in s. 5 were "after the passing of this act"; and that the plaintiff was, therefore, entitled to his costs, although a judge had not certified, and they had not been allowed by a court or a judge. Wood v. Riley, 37 L. J., C. P. 24; L. R. 3 C. P. 26; 17 L. T. 216; 16 W. R. 146.

—— Certificate not obtained before Commencement.]—A plaintiff, before the 1st of January, 1868, recovered 5*l.* in an action of contract. After the 1st of January, 1868, he applied to a judge for an order for his costs under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 4, on the ground that there was concurrent jurisdiction:—Held, that the judge's power to make such order was not taken away by the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 5, that section not applying to actions in which a verdict had been obtained before the act came into operation. Restall v. L. & S. W. Ry., 37 L. J., Ex. 89; L. R. 3 Ex. 141; 18 L. T. 331; 16 W. R. 872.

4. General Words.

Construction of General Words.]—One of the safest guides to the construction of sweeping general words it is difficult to apply in their full literal sense is to examine other words of like import in the same instrument, and to see what limitations must be imposed on them. If it is found that a number of such expressions have to be subjected to limitations or qualifications, and that such limitations or qualifications are of the same nature, that forms a strong argument for subjecting the expression in dispute to a like limitation or qualification. Blackwood v. Reg., 52 L. J., P. C. 10, 14; 8 App. Cas. 94; 48 L. T. 441; 31 W. R. 645—P. C.

The general words of a statute are not to be so construed as to alter the previous policy of the law, unless no sense or meaning can be put upon those words consistently with the intention of preserving the existing policy untouched; but the title and preamble of the Inclosure Act (8 & 9 Vict. c. 118) being quite general, the words of s. 147 appear to be so general as to make it impossible to limit them to exchanges of freeholds of the same species, notwithstanding inconveniences and seeming injustice to parties. Minen v. Leman, 20 Beav. 269.

General words in an act do not always extend to every case which falls literally within them. Cope v. Doherty, 2 De G. & J. 614; 27 L. J., Ch. 600; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 699; 6 W. R. 695.

Semble, as a matter of ordinary construction, where several words are followed by a general expression which is as much applicable to the first and other words as to the last, that expression is not limited to the last, but applies to all. G. W. Ry. v. Swindon and Cheltenham Ry., 53 L. J., Ch. 1075; 9 App. Cas. 787; 32 W. R. 957.

If an act of parliament, by general words, purports to confer a power upon several donees, one of whom possesses the same power more amply at common law as incident to his estate, the statute shall not be intended to apply to him, so as by implication to abridge his power; and acts of his, therefore, which the statute would have authorised, will be referred to his common-law right. Clayton, Ex parte, 1 Russ. & M. 369.

General Words in Special Section.]—Where there are general words in one section of an act and a subsequent special section limits the general words, the latter is the governing section. Johnson, Ex parte, Watson, In re, [1893] 1 Q. B. 21; 4 R. 90; 67 L. T. 519; 41 W. R. 34—C. A.

5. Particular Words.

Generally.]—The meaning of particular words in a statute, in the absence of express definition, "is to be found not so much in a strict etymological propriety of language, nor even in popular use, as in the subject or occasion on which they are used, and the object that is intended to be attained."—Per Abbott, C.J., in Rex v. Hall, 1 B. & C. 136; 25 R. R. 332, approved of in the case of The Lion, 6 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 163, 171; 38 L. J., Adm. 51; L. R. 2 P. C. 525; 21 L. T. 41; 17 W. R. 993.

"And," "Or."]—The question is whether the word "or" is used in the disjunctive or conjunctive. We think in construing "or" as conjunctive, we are construing the act according to an ordinary use of language, though it may not be strictly grammatical. Metropolitan Board of Works v. Steed, 51 L. J., M. C. 21, 24; 8 Q. B. D. 447; 45 L. T. 612; 30 W. R. 891—per Grove, J.

"Or" read as "And."]—I know no authority for reading "or" as "and" unless the context makes the necessary meaning of "or" "and," as in some instances it does; but I believe it is wholly unexampled so to read it when doing so will upon one construction entirely alter the meaning of the sentence, unless some other part of the same statute or the clear intention of it requires that to be done. It may indeed be doubted whether some of the cases of turning "or" into "and" and vice versâ have not gone to the extreme limit of interpretation. Mersey Docks v. Henderson, 58 L. J., Q. B. 152; 13 App. Cas. 603; 59 L. T. 697; 37 W. R. 449—Halsbury, L.C.

"Now."]—"Now" to be construed retrospectively or prospectively in an act of parliament. See Larpent v. Bibby, 5 H. L. Cas. 481; 24 L. J., Q. B. 301; Noble v. Gadban, 5 H. L. Cas. 504.

"On."]—Whatever meaning may be given to the word "on" in an act of parliament, it is very difficult to extend it to above a year. It is not necessary to express an opinion as to what time should be allowed, but it is not to be conceived that a period of more than a year can be included in the word "on." "On," if not confined to the time of making the decree, must mean shortly after. Robertson v. Robertson, 8 P. D. 96; 48 L. T. 591; 31 W. R. 652.

Whether "Person" includes Corporation.]—If a statute provides that no person shall do a particular act except on a particular condition, it is, primâ facie, natural and reasonable to understand the legislature as intending such a person as by the proper means may be able to fulfil the condition; and not those who, though called "persons" in law, have no capacity to do so at any time, by any means or under any circumstances whatever; and therefore a penalty for selling poison cannot be recovered from an incorporated company, though the actual seller must be a qualified person. Pharmaceutical Society v. London and Provincial Supply Assn., 49 L. J., Q. B. 736; 5 App. Cas. 862; 43 L. T. 389; 28 W. R. 957; 45 J. P. 20.

Trustees of a will had power to grant leases to any "person or persons" they should think fit:—Held, that this authorised them to grant a lease to a limited company. Jeffcock's Trusts, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 507.

A municipal corporation is included in the words "all and every person and persons" in 39 Eliz. c. 5, enabling the foundation of hospitals. Newcastle Corporation v. Att.-Gen., 12 Cl. & F. 402.

An action against the Melbourne harbour trust commissioners is an action brought against a "person" within the meaning of s. 46 of the Melbourne Harbour Trust Act. Union Steamship Co. of New Zealand v. Melbourne Harbour Trust, 53 L. J., P. C. 59; 9 App. Cas. 365; 50 L. T. 337—P. C.

A corporation, such as a board of guardians, is included in the word "person," so as to be within the protection of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875. Enniskillen Union v. Hilliard, 14 L. R., Ir. 214.

"Person"—Tramway Company.]—A local tramway act authorised the Board of Trade to make by-laws providing that engines should be brought to a stand at cross streets, and a penalty was imposed on any person offending:—Held, that the word "person" included the company. St. Helens Tramway Co. v. Wood, 56 J. P. 71.

"Person" not limited to Adults.]—The Crown Lands Alienation Act, 1861, of New South Wales, by s. 13, provides that, on and after the 1st day of June, 1861, crown lands, with certain exceptions, shall be opened for conditional sale by selection in manner following, viz.: "Any person may, upon any land office day, tender to the land agent for the district a written application for the conditional purchase of any such lands":—Held, that the word "person" in the above section is not limited to persons of the age of twenty-one years. O'Shanassy v. Joachim, 45 L. J., P. C. 43; 1 App. Cas. 82; 34 L. T. 265; 24 W. R. 792.

6. Technical Words.

Particular Trade.]—If an act deals with matters affecting everybody generally, the words used have the meaning attached to them in the common and ordinary use of language. If an act is passed with reference to a particular trade, business or transaction, then the words used have the meaning that every one conversant with that trade, business or transaction would assign to them, though that meaning may differ from the common or ordinary meaning. Unwin v. Hanson, 60 L. J., Q. B. 531; [1891] 2 Q. B. 115; 65 L. T. 511; 39 W. R. 587; 55 J. P. 662—per Esher (Lord), M.R.

Applicable to particular Trade.]—An act of parliament which is made applicable to a large trade or business should be construed, if possible, not according to the strictest and nicest interpretation of language, but according to a reasonable and business interpretation of it with regard to the trade or business with which it is dealing. It seems to me impossible reasonably to hold that those who have to regulate a large trade or business should be supposed to have made an enactment which would prevent that trade or business from being carried on, unless you are forced to come to such a conclusion by the language. The Dunelm, 53 L. J., P. 81; 9 P. D. 171; 51 L. T. 214; 32 W. R. 970; 5 Asp. M. C. 304—per Brett, M.R.

Where words have been long used in a technical sense, and have been judicially construed to have a certain meaning, and have been adopted by the legislature as having a certain meaning prior to a particular statute in which they are used, the rule of construction requires that the words used in such statute should be construed according to the sense in which they have been so previously used, although that sense may vary from the strict literal meaning of the words. Ruckmaboye v. Lalloobhoy Mottichund, 8 Moore, P. C. 4; 5 Moore, Ind. App. 234.

7. Previous Decisions.

Legislature presumed to know State of Law.]—The legislature must be presumed to have known at the time of the passing of an act of parliament the state of the law, as laid down in decided cases. Kent County Council, Ex parte, 60 L. J., Q. B. 435; [1891] 1 Q. B. 725; 65 L. T. 213; 39 W. R. 465; 55 J. P. 647—C. A.

If an act of parliament uses the same language which was used in a former act of parliament referring to the same subject, and passed for the same purpose and for the same object, the safe and well-known rule of construction is to assume that the legislature, when using well-known words upon which there have been well-known decisions, uses those words in the sense which the decisions have attached to them. Greaves v. Tofield, 50 L. J., Ch. 118; 14 Ch. D. 563, 571; 43 L. T. 100; 28 W. R. 840—per James, L.J. S. P., Sample, Ex parte, Cathcart, In re, L. R. 5 Ch. 703; 23 L. T. 289; 18 W. R. 1056.

Words in Later Act following those in Former Act.]—Where cases have been decided in courts of justice on particular forms of words, and acts of parliament use those forms of words which have received judicial construction, in the absence of anything in the acts shewing that the legislature did not mean to use the words in the sense attributed to them by the courts, the presumption is that parliament did so use them. Barlow v. Teal, 54 L. J., Q. B. 400; 15 Q. B. D. 403; 53 L. T. 52—per Coleridge, C.J.

When a clause in an act which has received a judicial interpretation is re-enacted in the same terms, the legislature is to be deemed to have adopted that interpretation. Campbell, Ex parte, Cathcart, In re, L. R. 5 Ch. 703; 23 L. T. 289; 18 W. R. 1056.

Where the legislature have reproduced words upon which a case has been decided, they must be taken to have known the interpretation that had been put upon them in that case. Clark v. Wallond, 52 L. J., Q. B. 321, 322—per Mathew, J.

Reference to Cases on former Acts.]—The proper course is to read a section of an act, and to ascertain its meaning, and not to trouble ourselves about decisions upon a former act. Any other course would be apt to lead us astray. If the later act can clearly have only one meaning, we ought to give effect to it accordingly. If instead of doing that we compare it with the former act, and say that it differs from it only to such and such an extent, and then consider the decisions upon the former act, we might in that way go back to half-a-dozen older acts, and, after considering the decisions on them, we might at last arrive at a conclusion exactly contrary to the later act. Blaibery, Ex parte, Toomer, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 461, 463; 23 Ch. D. 258; 49 L. T. 16; 31 W. R. 906—per Jessel, M.R.

Semble, the court ought to find out the meaning of a word from the section itself, and if it can do that, it need not have recourse to the use of the same word in the other sections of the act. If it cannot find out the meaning of the word by reading the particular section, then it may look through the other sections to see in what sense the word is there used, for, as a general rule, a word is to be considered as used throughout an act of parliament in the same sense. Spencer v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 52 L. J., Ch. 249, 252; 22 Ch. D. 262; 47 L. T. 465; 31 W. R. 351.

Semble, the court construes a word in one statute by reference to its use in another, in which the context may be different; and that the Lord Chancellor in Metropolitan District Ry. v. Sharpe (5 App. Cas. 425) did not intend to lay down any general rule to the contrary. Ib.

Amending Act—Previous Decisions.]—Where a limited interpretation has been placed upon prior acts of parliament and the words of an amending act have been enlarged, the inference is that that enlargement must have been intentional on the part of the legislature. Hurlbatt v. Barnett, 62 L. J., Q. B. 1; [1893] 1 Q. B. 77; 4 R. 103; 67 L. T. 818; 41 W. R. 33—C. A.

Sect. 11 of the Mercantile Law Amendment (Scotland) Act, 1856, is in the same terms with s. 6 of the corresponding English act; and enacts that "no acceptance of any bill of exchange . . . shall be sufficient to bind or charge any person unless the same be in writing on such bill . . . and signed by the acceptor or some person duly authorised by him." On the 2nd March, 1878, in Hindlaugh v. Blakey (3 C. P. D. 136), it was held that an acceptance by the drawee was null by reason of there being no writing except the signature. On the 16th April, 1878, the Bills of Exchange Act was passed, which, after reciting the above-quoted section of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, and that "it is expedient that the meaning of the said enactment should be further declared," provides "that an acceptance of a bill of exchange is not and shall not be deemed to be insufficient under the provisions of the said statutes by reason only that such acceptance consists merely of the signature of the drawee written on such bill":—Held, that the act of 1878 was in effect a declaration by the legislature, that the decision in the case of Hindlaugh v. Blakey was erroneous; and as no distinction whatever was made by the terms of the English enactment corresponding with the 11th section of the Scottish act between one kind of acceptance and another, the effect of that declaration, although in terms confined to an acceptance by the drawee of a bill, was necessary to displace the whole construction of the English statute on which that decision was founded. Steele v. McKinlay, 5 App. Cas. 754; 43 L. T. 358; 29 W. R. 17.

Binding Character of House of Lords' Decisions.]—Decisions of the House of Lords upon questions of law, as to the construction of statutes, and especially of fiscal acts, are binding on the house in subsequent cases. Inland Revenue Commissioners v. Harrison, 43 L. J., Ex. 138; L. R. 7 H. L. 1; 30 L. T. 274; 22 W. R. 559.

8. IMPERATIVE, DIRECTORY, OR PERMISSIVE.

Distinction between.]—Negative words will make a statute imperative; words in the affirmative are directory only. Rex v. Leicester JJ., 9 D. & R. 772; 7 B. & C. 12; 5 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 95; 31 R. R. 138.

Provisions as to Time imperative.]—Provisions which appear on the face of them obligatory cannot, without strong reasons given, be held only directory. The rule is, that provisions with respect to time are always obligatory, unless a power of extending the time is given to the court. Barker v. Palmer, 51 L. J., Q. B. 110; 8 Q. B. D. 10; 45 L. T. 480; 30 W. R. 59—per Grove, J. S. P., Reg. v. Barclay, 51 L. J., M. C. 47; 8 Q. B. D. 486; 46 L. T. 335; 30 W. R. 672; 46 J. P. 693—C. A.

Contract by Urban Authority under Public Health Act.]—Sub-sect. 1 of s. 174 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), by which every contract under that act by an urban authority "shall," if the value exceeds 50*l.*, be in writing and sealed, is imperative, so that although the other party may have executed the contract he cannot recover against the urban authority if the contract was not under seal. Young v. Leamington Corporation, 52 L. J., Q. B. 713; 8 App. Cas. 517; 49 L. T. 1; 30 W. R. 500. S. P., Hunt v. Wimbledon Local Board, 4 C. P. D. 48—C. A.; Frend v. Dennett, 27 L. J., C. P. 314.

A statute enacted, that certain persons should be a company, and that it should be lawful for the plaintiff to sell his letters-patent to them. It then made regulations for the company, and by a subsequent section recited that the letters-patent had become void from the non-inrolment of them within four months, and enacted, that the letters-patent should be as valid and effectual, to all intents and purposes, as if duly inrolled:—Held, that the last section was not conditional upon a compliance with the previous sections, and that, in an action by the patentee for an infringement of the patent, a plea shewing that the previous sections had not been complied with was no answer. Stead v. Curey, 1 C. B. 496; 14 L. J., C. P. 177; 9 Jur. 511.

By an act for paving and lighting a township, the commissioners for carrying the act into execution were empowered from time to time to enter into contract or contracts for the performance of the works, or for furnishing materials for the performance thereof, or for any other of the purposes of the act, with any persons who should be willing to undertake and engage in the same: provided always, that no such contract should be made for a longer term than three years, and before such contract should be entered into, ten days' public notice at the least should be given, in order that persons might make proposals to the commissioners at a time and place in such notice to be specified; and all such contracts should specify the several works to be done, and the prices to be paid for the same, and the times when the works were to be completed, together with the penalties to be incurred in the case of nonperformance; and the same should be signed by the commissioners, or by any three of them, or by their clerk, and by the person or persons contracting to perform such works; and copies of the contract should be entered in a book to be kept by the clerk to the commissioners:—Held, that the proviso in this clause applied to the duration of the contract only, and that the subsequent provisions were directory only, and not conditional, and that a contract, signed otherwise than in the manner therein pointed out, was not therefore void. Cole v. Green, 6 Man. & G. 872; 7 Scott (N.R.) 682; 13 L. J., C. P. 30.

By 43 Geo. 3, c. 59, s. 2, where any bridge or bridges, or roads at the end thereof, repaired at the expense of any county, shall be narrow and incommodious, it shall and may be lawful to and for the justices of the county, at any of their general quarter sessions, to order and direct such bridge or bridges, and roads, to be widened, improved and made commodious for the public, provided that no money shall be applied to the amendment or alteration of any such bridge or bridges, until presentment shall have been made of the insufficiency, inconveniency, or want of reparation of such bridge or bridges, in pursuance of some or one of the statutes made and now in force concerning public bridges:—Held, that the section is permissive, not imperative, and leaves the justices a discretion whether or not to order a bridge to be widened, though it is proved to them to be narrow and incommodious. Newport Bridge, In re, 2 El. & El. 377; 29 L. J., M. C. 52; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 97; 1 L. T. 131; 8 W. R. 62.

"Shall"—"May."]—When a statute declares that something "shall" be done, the language is considered imperative, and the thing must be done; where the word "may" is used, the language is, as a general rule, permissive. Davies v. Evans, 51 L. J., M. C. 132; 9 Q. B. D. 243; 46 L. T. 419; 30 W. R. 548; 46 J. P. 471. S. P., Reg. v. Montgomeryshire JJ., 51 L. J., M. C. 95; 46 J. P. 517.

The words "shall and may" are only imperative where the clause in a statute is for the public benefit. Rex v. Flockwold Inclosure Commissioners, 2 Chit. 251.

The word "may," in 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61 (County Courts Extension Act), s. 13, which provides that, in certain cases, the court or a judge at chambers may, by rule or order, direct that the plaintiff shall recover his costs, is not used to give a discretion, but to confer a power upon the court or judge, and the exercise of such power depends not upon the discretion of the court or judge, but upon proof of the particular case out of which such power arises. MacDougal v. Paterson, 11 C. B. 755; 6 Ex. 337, n.; 21 L. J., C. P. 27. S. P., Crake v. Powell, 2 El. & Bl. 210; 21 L. J., Q. B. 183.

The words of s. 9, "shall and may," are obligatory and not merely permissive. Chapman v. Milvain, 5 Ex. 61; 1 L. M. & P. 209; 19 L. J., Ex. 228; 14 Jur. 251.

"It shall be Lawful"—Enabling or Compulsory.]—The words in a statute, "it shall be lawful," of themselves merely make that legal and possible which there would otherwise be no right or authority to do. Their natural meaning is permissive and enabling only. But there may be circumstances which may couple the power with a duty to exercise it. It lies upon those who call for the exercise of the power to shew that there is an obligation to exercise it. Julius v. Oxford (Bishop), 49 L. J., Q. B. 577; 5 App. Cas. 214; 42 L. T. 546; 28 W. R. 726; 44 J. P. 600.

In all cases where jurisdiction is given to a court of justice by act of parliament, by the words "it shall be lawful," those words, unless they are controlled by other parts of the act, give the court a discretion in the exercise of that jurisdiction. Bridgman, In re, 1 Dr. & Sm. 164; 2 L. T. 560; 8 W. R. 598.

Enabling Words when Compulsory.]—Enabling words are always compulsory where they are words to effectuate a legal right. Julius v. Oxford (Bishop), supra.

An act for making a railway recited that the formation of the railway would be beneficial to the public, and that the company was willing to execute it, and the power of compulsorily taking lands, with the then ordinary powers, was given to the company. A mandamus issued, commanding the company to complete the line:—Held, that the mandamus ought not to go, no duty being cast on the company to make the line; the words of the act being enabling, not obligatory, and there being nothing in the subject-matter or context to require that they should be construed as compulsory. York and North Midland Ry. v. Reg., 1 El. & Bl. 858; 7 Railw. Cas. 459; 1 C. L. R. 119; 22 L. J., Q. B. 225; 17 Jur. 690; 1 W. R. 358—Ex. Ch.

When Construed apart from Practice under Previous Law.]—Where an act recites that the manner of proceeding in certain cases requires amendment, its provisions may be construed independently of the practice under the previously-existing law. Or at all events the previous practice is a matter of very slender and remote consideration. Julius v. Oxford (Bishop), supra—per Penzance (Lord).

Permissive Words give a Discretion.]—Where the terms of a statute are not imperative, but permissive, the fair inference is that the legislature intended that the discretion, as to the use of the general powers thereby conferred, should be exercised in strict conformity with private rights. Metropolitan Asylum District Managers v. Hill, 50 L. J., Q. B. 353; 6 App. Cas. 208; 44 L. T. 653; 29 W. R. 617; 45 J. P. 664—per Watson (Lord).

Where an act directs that, under certain circumstances, one or other of two matters shall be done, the party to do the act has the option of doing which act he pleases. Reg. v. S. E. Ry., 3 H. L. Cas. 471; 1 C. L. R. 932; 17 Jur. 901.

—— Exemption from Rating.]—Under the Sunday and Ragged Schools (Exemption from Rating) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 40), s. 1. by which rating authorities may exempt from their rates buildings used as Sunday or ragged schools, the rating authority has a discretion, and is not bound to exempt any such school. Bell v. Crane, 42 L. J., M. C. 122; L. R. 8 Q. B. 481; 29 L. T. 217; 21 W. R. 911.

Where Observance Optional.]—Where an act directs that, under certain circumstances, one or other of two matters shall be done, the party to do the act has the option of doing which act he pleases. Reg. v. S. E. Ry., 3 H. L. Cas. 471; 1 C. L. R. 932; 17 Jur. 901.

A railway company obtained an act for making a branch within seven years. They gave the usual notices. While their bill was before parliament, they agreed to purchase the land of a certain owner. It was a term of this contract that it should not be enforced against the company within the seven years, and the purchase-money was to be paid when the company, on obtaining their act, should have "begun to execute the branch." The company obtained their act, but never executed or began to execute the branch. The seven years expired:—Held, that permissive words in the act of parliament were not obligatory. Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee Ry. v. Philip, 2 Macq. H. L. 514; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 249; 5 W. R. 377.

9. Effect of One Part on Another.

One part of an Act may be explained by another.]—If any part of a statute is obscure, and other passages in the same act will elucidate that obscurity, recourse may be had to such context for that purpose. Rex v. Palmer, 1 Leach, C. C. 352, 355; 2 East, P. C. 898. S. P., Reg. v. Mallow Union, ante, col. 1893.

If it is doubtful whether a statute declaring an act, instrument or contract void, makes it voidable only, another clause in the same statute imposing a penalty on such act, instrument or contract, is a clear test that it is ipso facto void. Gye v. Felton, 4 Taunt. 876.

Where the words of a law in their ordinary signification are sufficient to include infants, the virtual exception must be drawn from the intention of the legislature manifested by other parts of the law, from the general purpose and design of the law, and the subject-matter of it. Thus, the Statute of Limitations and of Fines would have bound infants, &c., without any express exception. Beckford v. Wade, 17 Ves. 92; 11 R. R. 20.

Reference to other Sections in same Statute.]—We ought to find out the meaning of a word from the section itself, and if we can do that, we need not have recourse to the use of the same word in the other sections of the act. If we cannot find out the meaning of the word by reading the particular section then we may look through the other sections to see in what sense the word is there used, for, as a general rule, a word is to be considered as used throughout an act of parliament in the same sense. Spencer v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 52 L. J., Ch. 249, 252; 22 Ch. D. 162; 47 L. T. 465; 31 W. R. 351—per Jessel, M.R.

Where one section gives to A. the power which B. has, and a subsequent section gives B. new powers, A. does not acquire the new powers given to B. Edwards v. Hodges, 15 C. B. 477; 3 C. L. R. 472; 24 L. J., M. C. 81; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 12; 3 W. R. 167.

Right of Action given by Two Sections Conjointly.]—One section of an act for paving and improving a town empowered commissioners to pave the streets, and enacted that the expenses should be paid to them by the owners of the land adjoining, in equal shares; and that it should be lawful for such commissioners to recover such expenses by action. The following section, beginning with "provided always," enacted, that before the commissioners should pave the streets, they should give notice to the owner of land, adjoining the street, requiring him to pave the same; and, if the owner should neglect to pave for six months, it should be lawful for the commissioners to pave the same, and to recover the expenses from such owner in such manner as in the act was mentioned. A declaration by the commissioners, to recover from the defendant his share of the expenses of paving a street, stated that he was the owner of land within the street, that the commissioners paved the same, that his share of the expenses amounted to a certain sum of money, and alleged, as a breach, that he had not paid the same:—Held, that the giving a notice to the defendant to pave the street was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right of action, and, therefore, that the declaration was bad for not containing such an averment. Salford Corporation v. Ackers, 16 M. & W. 85; 16 L. J., Ex. 6.

By one section of a local act it was enacted, that money allowed by commissioners of a navigation to their clerk, appointed by them, should be paid by the proprietors of the tolls on the navigation in certain proportions. A subsequent section enacted, that if any proprietor should neglect or refuse to pay on demand made, either of him or his agent, the money might be recovered by action, with double costs, in the clerk's name, against such proprietor, or, if he could not be found, against his agent; or otherwise the sum might be levied by distress upon the goods of the proprietor, or, if no such goods could be found, on the goods of his agent. The clerk obtained a verdict against a proprietor, but averred no demand in the declaration:—Held, that the right of action was given by the two sections conjointly; that the demand, if necessary to the action, must be presumed after verdict; and therefore, that the declaration must be considered as framed, and the verdict recovered, under both sections, and that the plaintiff was entitled to double costs. Tibbits v. Yorke, 4 A. & E. 134; 5 N. & M. 609; 5 L. J., C. P. 54.

Two Sections of same Act Inconsistent.]—An act was passed on the 21st of July, 1851, called "The Governor and Company of Copper Miners Act, 1851," for arranging their affairs; and s. 22 provided, that after a reconveyance the company should hold their property discharged from all rights and claims of all creditors and claimants. The 12th section referred to another action previously brought by the plaintiff against the company on the same contract, and which had been referred to an arbitrator, and provided that the plaintiff should be considered as a creditor for a certain amount till the award was made:—Held, that s. 22 referred to debts or liquidated claims, and was not a bar to an action in respect of the damage which accrued after the passing of the act. Wood v. Copper Miners' Co., 14 C. B. 428; 2 C. L. R. 1735; 23 L. J., C. P. 209; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 65.

Whether Schedule Restricts Enactment.]—It would be quite contrary to the recognised principles upon which courts of law construe acts of parliament to enlarge the conditions of the enactment and thereby restrain its operation by any reference to the words of a mere form given for the sake of convenience in a schedule, and still more so when that restricted operation is not favourable to the liberty of the subject, but the reverse. Dean v. Green, 8 P. D. 89—per Penzance (Lord).

Different Words in same Statute in relation to same Subject-matter.]—Where in the same statute, and in relation to the same subject-matter, different words are used, the court must see whether the legislature has not made the alteration intentionally and with some definite purpose; primâ facie such an alteration would be considered intentional. Brighton Guardians v. Strand Union, 60 L. J., M. C. 105; [1891] 2 Q. B. 156; 64 L. T. 722; 39 W. R. 581; 55 J. P. 743—per Esher (Lord), M.R.

Whole Statute must be Considered.]—In construing the terms of any provision found in a statute we are entitled and indeed bound to consider any other parts of the act which throw light upon the intention of the legislature. Colquhoun v. Brooks, 59 L. J., Q. B. 53; 14 App. Cas. 493; 61 L. T. 518; 38 W. R. 289; 54 J. P. 277—Herschell (Lord).

Rules of construing a statute where a general enactment in it would override a particular one, and where two parts of it are contradictory. Pretty v. Solly, 26 Beav. 606.

Where one clause of an act directs specific acts to be done, but such acts would be included in the general terms of a subsequent prohibitory clause, the former clause is not controlled by the latter. De Winton v. Brecon Corporation, 26 Beav. 533.

—— General Provisions — Land Drainage Charge—Priority.]—The General Land Drainage and Improvement Company's Act, 1849, and the Lands Improvement Company's Act, 1853, each contained a section which provided that upon the final order or certificate of the inclosure commissioners and the execution of the improvements the company should have a first charge upon the inheritance of the improved lands in priority over every other then existing or future charge. The company of 1853 having executed improvements of land already subject to a charge in favour of the company of 1849, contended that the latter charge was displaced by theirs:—Held, that the two sections were not irreconcilable, and that the charge which was first in order of time was entitled to priority. Pollock v. Lands Improvement Co., 57 L. J., Ch. 853; 37 Ch. D. 661; 58 L. T. 374; 36 W. R. 617.

General provisions in an act do not override special provision; so that where an act contains special provisions as to particular property they must be read as exceptions from general provisions, whether contained in the same or any other act. Taylor v. Oldham Corporation, 46 L. J., Ch. 105; 4 Ch. D. 395; 35 L. T. 696; 25 W. R. 178.

Ordinary or Extended Meaning.]—Although the court are primâ facie bound to read the words of an act according to their ordinary meaning in the language, if there are other circumstances which shew that the words must have been used by the legislature in a sense larger than their ordinary meaning, the court is bound to read them in that sense. The rest of an act must therefore be considered to see whether there is any reason for reading the words in a sense larger than their ordinary meaning. Barlow v. Ross, 59 L. J., Q. B. 183; 24 Q. B. D. 381; 62 L. T. 552; 38 W. R. 372—per Esher (Lord), M.R.

10. REFERENCE TO DEBATE IN PARLIAMENT.

Opinion of Lord Chancellor expressed in Speech in House of Lords as to Construction.]—During the argument of a case counsel proposed to cite as an authority for the interpretation of the Church Discipline Act, s. 3, the opinion of the Lord Chancellor as to its construction, contained in a speech delivered by him during a debate in the House of Lords upon the third reading of the bill:—Held, by Bramwell and Baggallay, L.JJ. (Thesiger, L.J., dubitante), that the speech of the Lord Chancellor might be lawfully read for that purpose by counsel during his argument. Reg. v. Oxford (Bishop), 48 L. J., Q. B. 609; 4 Q. B. D. 525; 41 L. T. 122—C. A. See next case.

Reference to Debate in Parliament.]—An act cannot be construed by reference to a debate in parliament. It has been regretted in the House of Lords that the court of appeal had allowed such a reference to be made in Reg. v. Oxford (Bishop), supra. S. E. Ry. v. Railway Commissioners, 50 L. J., Q. B. 201, 203—per Selborne, L.C.

When Founded on Report of Commissioners.]—Where a statute is supposed to have been founded on a report of commissioners appointed by the crown, that report ought not to be referred to in a court of justice as a guide in construing the statute. Martin v. Hemming, 18 Jur. 1002. S. P., Ewart v. Williams, 3 Drew. 21, 24; Arding v. Bonner, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 763.

11. Mistake or Casus Omissus.

Mistake in Act not Assumed.]—We cannot assume a mistake in an act of parliament. The draftsman may have made a mistake, but if so, the legislature must amend it. Richards v. McBride, 51 L. J., M. C. 15; 8 Q. B. D. 119; 45 L. T. 677; 30 W. R. 121; 46 J. P. 247.

Elimination of Word.]—Where a word in a statute would make the clause in which it occurs unintelligible, the word may be eliminated, and the clause read without it. Stone v. Yeovil Corporation, 46 L. J., C. P. 137; 2 C. P. D. 99; 36 L. T. 279; 25 W. R. 240—C. A.

The Lands Clauses Act, 1845. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, s. 9, provides for assessment of purchase-money for lands taken from parties under disability and compensation for injury "to any such lands": —Held, that the section may be read as if the word "such" were not in it, and therefore a party under disability is entitled to compensation for injury to lands not taken. Ib.

Alteration of Word.]—When the intention of the legislature can be collected from the statute itself, words may be modified, altered, or supplied in the statute, so as to obviate any repugnancy to, or inconsistency with, such intention. Quin v. O'Keeffe, 10 Ir. C. L. R. 393.

There is a very serious consideration whether we can alter the word "convenient" in the 8th section of the Prescription Act by putting the word "easement" instead. That is a question which appears to me to be one of very considerable difficulty. A judge may take the view that the 8th section as it stands is so absurd that the word "convenient" cannot stand there, but that does not quite conclude the question as to whether you can insert another word. Laird v. Briggs, 19 Ch. D. 33; 45 L. T. 238—per Jessel, M.R.

Alterations permissible to complete sense of s. 6 of the Statute of Frauds Amendment Act, 1828, 9 Geo. 4, c. 14 (Lord Tenterden's Act). Lyde v. Barnard, 1 M. & W. 101; 1 Tyr. & G. 250; 5 L. J., Ex. 117.

Alterations refused to complete sense of s. 2 of Warrants of Attorney Act, 1822, 3 Geo. 4, c. 39. Green v. Wood, 7 Q. B. 178.

Casus Omissus.]—We ought not to create a casus omissus by interpretation save in some case of strong necessity. Mersey Docks v. Henderson, 58 L. J., Q. B. 152; 13 App. Cas. 595; 59 L. T. 697; 37 W. R. 449; 6 Asp. M. C. 338—per Lord Fitzgerald.

D. CONSTRUCTION SPECIALLY.

1. Of Ancient Acts.

Construction by reference to Date.]—Ancient statutes are to be construed with reference to the state of things at the time of their passing, M'Williams v. Adams, 1 Macq. H. L. 120.

The construction of an old act may be cleared by contemporanea expositio, shewing the conduct and understanding of parties at the time of its passing, and subsequently; and for this purpose the annals or histories of the period, and antiquarian researches, may be referred to. Montrose Peerage, 1 Macq. H. L. 401.

Semble, when there are ambiguous expressions in an act passed one or two centuries ago, it may be legitimate to refer to the construction put upon those expressions throughout a long course of years, by the unanimous consent of all parties interested, as evidencing what must presumably have been the intention of the legislature at that remote period. A recent statute should be construed according to its own terms, when these are brought into controversy, and not according to the views which interested parties may have hitherto taken. Clyde Navigation Trustees v. Laird, 8 App. Cas. 673.

2. Remedial, Penal, or Prohibitory.

Remedial—Construed liberally.]—In the case of a remedial statute, everything is to be done in advancement of the remedy that can be done consistently with any construction that can be put upon it. Johnes v. Johnes, 3 Dow, 15. S. P., Atcheson v. Everitt, Cowp. 391.

It is by no means unusual, in construing a remedial statute, to extend the enacting words beyond their natural import and effect, in order to include cases within the same mischief. St. Peter's, York (Dean and Chapter) v. Middleborough, 2 Y. & J. 196.

Statutes intended to remedy a grievance ought to be construed liberally, so as to afford the utmost relief which the fair meaning of their language will allow. Dapuoto v. Wyllie, The Pieve Superiore, 43 L. J., Adm. 20; L. R. 5 P. C. 482; 30 L. T. 887; 22 W. R. 777.

Penal—To be Construed Strictly.]—When the words of a statute are equally applicable to penal or to civil consequences, the court will construe the statute in favour of the latter. Dickinson v. Fletcher, 43 L. J., M. C. 25; L. R. 9 C. P. 1; 29 L. T. 540.

Every statute which introduces a capital punishment must be construed strictly. Rex v. Harvey, 1 Wils. 164.

As a general rule, where a penalty is affixed by an act of parliament to an act or omission, such penalty is the only punishment or loss incurred by the party guilty of such act or omission. International Patent Pulp and Paper Co., In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 625; 37 L. T. 351; 25 W. R. 822.

A statute which is penal must be construed strictly. Lloyd v. Rosbee, 2 Camp. 453; 11 R. R. 764. S. P., Stephenson v. Higginson, 3 H. L. Cas. 638.

In construing a statute by which a penalty is imposed, we must look strictly at the language in order to see whether the person against whom the penalty is sought to be enforced has committed an offence within the section. Graff v. Evans, 51 L. J., M. C. 25; 8 Q. B. D. 377; 46 L. T. 347; 30 W. R. 381; 46 J. P. 262.

A person who seeks to recover a penalty imposed by a statute must pursue the method pointed out by statute with all possible strictness. Smith v. Wood, 59 L. J., Q. B. 5; 24 Q. B. D. 23; 61 L. T. 870; 38 W. R. 138; 54 J. P. 324—C. A. S. P., Crane v. Lawrence, 59 L. J., M. C. 110; 25 Q. B. D. 152; 63 L. T. 197; 38 W. R. 620; 54 J. P. 471—per Cave, J.

Penal laws are not to be construed according to rules of equity. Harrison v. Southcote, 1 Atk. 537.

Effect of Penal Statute.]—Subsequent statutes in the affirmative giving new penalties do not repeal former methods of proceeding ordained by previous acts without negative words. Middleton v. Crofts, 2 Atk. 265 (Appendix).

When a statute inflicts a penalty for not doing an act provided for, the penalty enacted implies that there is a legal compulsion to do the act in question, and this principle is not affected by the fact that the penalty has a particular destination. Redpath v. Allan, 9 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 340; 42 L. J., Adm. 8; L. R. 4 P. C. 511; 27 L. T. 725; 21 W. R. 276.

Forbidding a thing under a penalty, to protect the revenue, does not make void the thing if done, nor prevent an action thereon. If a thing is prohibited for other than revenue purposes, no action lies thereon. Swan v. Bank of Scotland, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 661.

Where a penalty is imposed by an act of parliament upon any transaction, the transaction will be illegal, though it is not expressly prohibited by the act. Cork and Youghal Ry., In re, L. R. 4 Ch. 748.

Recovery under, when by Crown exclusively.]—Where a penalty is created by statute, and nothing is said as to who may recover it, and it is not created for the benefit of a party aggrieved, and the offence is not against an individual, it belongs to the Crown, and the Crown alone can maintain a suit for it. Bradlaugh v. Clarke, 52 L. J., Q. B. 505; 8 App. Cas. 354; 48 L. T. 681; 31 W. R. 677—H. L. (E.)

Prohibitory, what are.]—The 9 Geo. 2, c. 36 (Mortmain Act), is a prohibitory, not a penal, statute. Philpot v. St. George's Hospital, 6 H. L. Cas. 338; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1269; 5 W. R. 845.

Prohibitory statutes must not be interpreted on a principle of tendency; if anything done is substantially that which is prohibited, the thing is void, not because of its tendency, but because it is, within the true construction of the statute, the thing prohibited. Ib.

Where a statute, with the view of affording protection to the public, imposes a penalty for doing an act, it thereby prohibits the act itself, and renders it illegal. D'Allax v. Jones, 26 L. J., Ex. 79; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 979.

The 3 Hen. 8, c. 11, which imposes a penalty on a person exercising or occupying himself as a surgeon without being duly admitted, is a prohibition of his practising as a surgeon, and disables him from recovering for work and labour as such. Ib.

The 44 Geo. 3, c. 98, s. 14, which imposes a penalty on any unqualified person who acts as a conveyancer, is a prohibitory act, and therefore such person cannot recover the fees for conveyances drawn by him. Taylor v. Crowland Gas and Coke Co., 2 C. L. R. 1247; 10 Ex. 293; 23 L. J., Ex. 254; 18 Jur. 913; 2 W. R. 563.

—— Effect of.]—When a statute prohibits, under a penalty, any person from agreeing to pay certain expenses, an agreement to pay such expenses is invalid, and no action is maintainable upon it, although the statute does not expressly prohibit the other party to the agreement from receiving such expenses, or impose a penalty upon him for so doing. O'Brien v. Dillon, 9 Ir. C. L. R. 318.

Prohibitory statutes must not be interpreted on a principle of tendency; if anything done is substantially that which is prohibited, the thing is void, not because of its tendency, but because it is, within the true construction of the statute, the thing prohibited. Philpot v. St. George's Hospital, supra.

A contract entered into in contravention of a statutory provision, whether the provision is express or implied, from the imposition of a penalty, will not support an action. Cundell v. Dawson, 4 C. B. 376; 17 L. J., C. P. 311.

Where a penalty is imposed by an act of parliament upon any transaction, the transaction will be illegal, though it is not expressly prohibited by the act. Cork and Youghal Ry. Co., In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 277; L. R. 4 Ch. 748; 21 L. T. 735; 18 W. R. 26.

In a statute respecting marriage, prohibitory and negative words do not create a nullity, unless such nullity is expressly declared in the statute. Catterall v. Sweetman or Catterall, 1 Rob. Ecc. Rep. 580; 9 Jur. 951.

3. Fiscal.

Strict Construction of Fiscal Statutes.]—Fiscal statutes must be construed strictly. Partington v. Att.-Gen., 38 L. J., Ex. 205; L. R. 4 H. L. 100; 21 L. T. 370.

The principle of all fiscal legislation is this: if the person sought to be taxed comes within the letter of the law he must be taxed, however great the hardship may appear to the judicial mind to be. On the other hand, if the Crown, seeking to recover the tax, cannot bring the subject within the letter of the law, the subject is free, however apparently within the spirit of the law the case may otherwise appear to be. In other words, if there is admissible, in any statute, what is called an equitable construction, certainly such a construction is not admissible in a taxing statute, where you can simply adhere to the words of the statute. Partington v. Att.-Gen., L. R. 4 H. L. 122—per Cairns (Lord).

A statute which imposes a tax or duty must be construed strictly; and any ambiguity will entitle the subject to be exempt from the tax or duty. Hull Dock Co. v. La Marche, 8 B. & C. 42; 2 M. & Ry. 107; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 216.

A taxing act is to be construed upon the same principle and by the same rules as any other act. Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v. Lucas, 51 L. J., Q. B. 114; 46 J. P. 388—per Brett, L.J.

Taxing acts must be construed strictly. And where therefore land which, in 4 Will. & M., being employed for charitable purposes, as the site for an almshouse or hospital, was on that account declared by a statute then passed (4 Will. & M. c. 1) to be exempt from the land tax at that time imposed, and the like words of exemption were used in 38 Geo. 3, c. 5, the fact that other land had since been applied to the same charitable purposes, and the original land had been, by order of the court of chancery, directed to be held by the trustees of the charity to their own use, freed from its charitable trust, did not, without more, render it liable, even in the hands of a tenant, to the taxation from which it had previously been exempt. Cox v. Rabbits, 47 L. J., Q. B. 385; 3 App. Cas. 473; 38 L. T. 430; 26 W. R. 483.

Taxing acts must be construed strictly, that is to say, that they are not to be extended so as to have the effect of imposing on the subject a tax which parliament has not clearly made him pay

Thorley, In re, Thorley v. Massam, 60 L. J., Ch. 537; [1891] 2 Ch. 613; 64 L. T. 515; 39 W. R. 565.

Decisions of the House of Lords upon questions of law, as to the construction of statutes, and especially of fiscal acts, are binding on the house in subsequent cases. Inland Revenue Commissioners v. Harrison, 43 L. J., Ex. 138; L. R. 7 H. L. 1; 30 L. T. 274; 22 W. R. 559.

Intention to Tax must be Clearly Shewn.]—Acts, in order to infringe upon the legal rights of the subject, and especially to impose a tax, must be expressed in language clear beyond all reasonable doubt. Shaw v. Ruddin, 9 Ir. C. L. R. 214. S. P., Reg. v. Mallow Union, 12 Ir. C. L. R. 35.

An intention to impose a charge on the subject must be shewn by clear and unambiguous language. Oriental Bank v. Wright, 50 L. J., P. C. 1; 5 App. Cas. 842, 856; 43 L. T. 177—P. C. S. P., Ingram v. Drinkwater, 44 L. J., P. C. 83; 32 L. T. 746.

Where such intention is doubtful, that meaning must be adopted which is most beneficial to the public. Pryce v. Monmouthshire Canal and Ry. Co., 49 L. J., Ex. 130; 4 App. Cas. 187; 40 L. T. 630; 27 W. R. 666.

Ambiguity—Imposition of Rate.]—Where an act gives power to a company to impose a toll or rate upon the public, and it is left ambiguous which of two tolls they have a right to impose, the court must decide in favour of that which is least onerous or burdensome to the public. South Staffordshire Waterworks Co. v. Barrow, 61 J. P. 661—C. A.

—— Exception or Modification.]—The cases which have decided that taxing acts are to be construed strictly probably meant little more than this—that, inasmuch as there was not any a priori liability in any subject to pay any particular tax, or any antecedent relationship between the taxpayer and the taxing authority, no reason founded on any supposed relationship of the taxpayer and the taxing authority could be brought to bear upon the construction of the act, and therefore the taxpayer had a right to stand upon a literal construction of the words used, whatever might be the consequences. I cannot think this principle applies to any considerable extent where the payment spoken of in the act is a payment to be made in return for services rendered, and above all in a case where parliament does not step in to give the right to payment, but rather to moderate and limit a right to payment which otherwise might exist without limit, or, at all events, with only such limits as would be placed upon it by a quantum meruit assessment—per Lord Cairns, L.C. Ib.

Doctrine that Money to be Laid out in Land is Land.]—The doctrine of the court of equity, that money directed to be laid out in land is land, does not extend to the interpretation of statutes imposing duties on personal estate. De Lancey v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, 38 L. J., Ex. 193; L. R. 4 Ex. 345. Affirmed in Ex. Ch. 39 L. J., Ex. 76; L. R. 5 Ex. 102; 22 L. T. 239; 18 W. R. 468.

Retrospective Operation.]—Where a duty is imposed, with a retrospective date depending on a fact which has taken place, and which is provided for by the alternative expressions "shall be," or "shall have been found," it seems that the duty attaches from such retrospective date. Hume v. Haig, 8 Bro. P. C. 198.

Accommodation for Toll.]—When an act authorises the exaction of a toll, the accommodation for which the toll is authorised must be provided. Aiton v. Stephen, 1 App. Cas. 456.

4. Consolidating or Codifying.

Consolidation Statute—Alteration of Law.]—In construing a consolidation statute, the court refused to put upon certain words a construction which they did not otherwise properly bear, although by reason of alterations in the law between the dates of the original and the consolidation statutes it was difficult in any other way to give effect at the time to those words. Mitchell v. Simpson, 58 L. J., Q. B. 425; 23 Q. B. D. 373; 61 L. T. 248; 37 W. R. 798; 53 J. P. 694.

In construing an act of parliament which is a consolidating act and does not profess to amend or alter the provisions of the acts consolidated, primâ facie the same effect ought to be given to its provisions as was given to those of the acts for which it was substituted. Mitchell v. Simpson, 59 L. J., Q. B. 355; 25 Q. B. D. 183; 63 L. T. 405; 38 W. R. 565; 55 J. P. 36.

Consolidating and Amending Act.]—In construing a consolidating and amending act as distinguished from a codifying act, the court is entitled to have regard to previous decisions. Budgett, In re, Cooper v. Adams, [1894] 2 Ch. 557; 63 L. J., Ch. 847; 8 R. 424; 71 L. T. 72; 42 W. R. 551; 1 Manson, 230.

Codification Act.]—In construing a statute that expressly codifies the law the court cannot interpret it by the light of previous decisions except in the case of words of doubtful import or other exceptional circumstances. Bank of England v. Vagliano, 60 L. J., Q. B. 145; [1891] A. C. 107; 64 L. T. 353; 39 W. R. 657; 55 J. P. 676—per Lord Halsbury, L.C., and Lord Herschell.

In the interpretation of a statutory code the earlier law and decisions can only be resorted to upon special grounds, as where the code contains provisions of doubtful import or uses language that previously had acquired a technical meaning. Robinson v. Canadian Pacific Ry., 61 L. J., P. C. 79; [1892] A. C. 481; 67 L. T. 505—P. C.

5. Local and Personal.

General Construction of.]—Where an act interferes with private rights and private interests, it ought to receive a strict construction so far as those rights and interests are concerned. Hughes v. Chester and Holyhead Ry., 31 L. J., Ch. 97; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 221; 7 L. T. 197; 10 W. R. 219.

An estate act is to be construed according to the intention of the legislature, clearly expressed therein; and its validity cannot be questioned on the suggested ground that all the parties who ought to have been were not before parliament during the discussion, or that parliament assented to it under a false impression, imposed upon them by interested parties, in the absence of other parties equally interested. Shrewsbury (Earl) v. Hope Scott, 6 C. B. (N.S.) 1; 29 L. J., C. P. 34. Affirmed 6 C. B. (N.S.) 221; 29 L. J., C. P. 190; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 472—Ex. Ch.

An act empowering a company to contract, for purposes of public advantage, ought not to receive a narrow construction. Dover Gas Light Co. v. Dover Corporation, 7 De G. M. & G. 545; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 812.

Acts prepared by Company strictly construed against it.]—The respondents had the preparation of their own measure, and were bound to see that it fitly expressed the purposes of parliament. They were not forced to adopt the act if they had reason to complain of its harshness or injustice; and it behoved them to have any terms favourable to themselves and involving burthens on the public explicitly and unequivocally stated. If they have not done so, the fault is theirs, and they must take the consequences. Pryce v. Monmouthshire Ry. and Canal Co., 49 L. J., Ex. 130; 4 App. Cas. 197; 40 L. T. 630; 27 W. R. 666—H. L. (E.)

Representations made on plans deposited by the promoters of an intended railway in pursuance of the standing orders of the houses of parliament previously to an application for an act, do not bind the railway company after the act is obtained nor give other persons any equity against the company, except so far as they are incorporated with the act. Att.-Gen. v. G. E. Ry., L. R. 6 H. L. 367. Affirming 41 L. J., Ch. 505; L. R. 7 Ch. 475; 26 L. T. 749; 20 W. R. 599.

Construed in Favour of Person sought to be Charged.] — Clauses in acts empowering companies to levy a charge upon the public, as in railway acts, for example, must, where the meaning is doubtful, be construed favourably for the public. Stockton and Darlington Ry. v. Barrett, 11 Cl. & F. 598; 8 Scott (N.R.) 641; 7 Man. & G. 870. S. P., Scales v. Pickering, 4 Bing. 448; 1 M. & P. 195; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 53.

Although when an act imposing a duty or a toll is equally capable of two constructions it is to be construed so as to relieve, and not to impose a burden upon, the subjects of the realm, yet if of the two constructions the one is reasonable, and will effect the object of the act, which the other construction will not, the former is to be adopted. Hibernian Mine Co. v. Tuke, 8 Ir. C. L. R. 321.

It is a very well established rule, that if a statute imposes a charge on the subject, it must be strictly construed as against the party in whose favour the charge is imposed. Reg. v. Barclay, 51 L. J., M. C. 27; 8 Q. B. D. 306; 46 L. T. 102; 30 W. R. 472; 46 J. P. 167.

When an act is obtained by a company incorporated for purposes of profit, to confer upon them rights and powers which they would not have at common law, the provisions of such a statute must be somewhat jealously scrutinised, and I think that they ought not to be held to possess any right unless it be given in plain terms, or arises as a necessary inference from the language used. Scottish Drainage Co. v. Campbell, 14 App. Cas. 142—per Lord Herschell.

I have always understood that if a charge is imposed by a private act upon the person of an individual, it must be so imposed in clear and express terms, and not left to implication. Ib.—per Lord Fitzgerald.

Rate—Burthen of Proof.] — Whenever it is sought to impose a rate, the burthen lies on those seeking to enforce it to shew that the words used by the legislature are clear and unambiguous in order to charge the subject. Ingram v. Drinkwater, 44 L. J., P. C. 83; 32 L. T. 746.

The construction of private acts is to be governed by the principles of common law, and applied to the subject in a manner analogous to the rules of interpretation in a private deed or conveyance. Eton College v. Winchester (Bishop), Lofft, 401.

Where by a statute a special authority is delegated to particular persons, affecting the property of individuals, it must be strictly pursued, and appear to be so upon the face of their proceedings. Rex v. Croker, Cowp. 26.

A local act of parliament is not to be construed strictly as against the public, who were, in fact, no parties to the passing of the act. Campbell v. Lang, 1 Eq. R. 98; 1 Macq. H. L. 451.

Where a public company is created by act of parliament, with liabilities and duties cast upon it, and privileges and rights are granted to the persons dealing with it, the party imposing duties on the company must be taken to know the provisions of the statute, although it is a private act. Cahill v. L. & N. W. Ry., 10 C. B. (N.S.) 154; 30 L. J., C. P. 289; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1164; 4 L. T. 246; 9 W. R. 653.

Observations as to the construction of doubtful passages of acts of parliament, as between a company and the public. Eton College, Ex parte, 20 L. J., Ch. 1; 15 Jur. 45.

The domestic statutes of a charitable foundation say, that the trustees "shall and may" turn out, &c. This shall be construed imperatively that they "must." Att.-Gen. v. Lock, 3 Atk. 164. S. P., Stamper v. Miller, 3 Atk. 212.

And the same words shall be construed imperatively in acts of parliament. Ib.

Construction of charitable bequests with reference to a local act of parliament, concerning charitable bequests to the parish, &c. Att.-Gen. v. Freeman, 5 Price, 425; Daniell, 117; 19 R. R. 641.

Construction of the Glamorganshire Canal Acts. Principles applicable to the construction of acts of parliament establishing public companies, with extraordinary powers, for the execution of works of local or general utility. Blakemore v. Glamorganshire Canal Navigation, 1 Myl. & K. 154; 2 L. J., Ch. 95.

Compensation for Damage.]—Statutory provisions as to compensation for damage, in a local and personal act, must be regarded as a contract between the parties, whether made by their mutual consent or forced on them by the legislature. Rothes (Countess) v. Kirkcaldy Waterworks Commissioners, 7 App. Cas. 707.

By the 43rd section of the Kirkcaldy and Dysart Waterworks Act, 1867, it was provided that the commissioners under the act "should be bound to make good to the Countess of Rothes and her heirs, &c., all damages which may be occasioned to her or them, by reason of or in consequence of any bursting, or flow, or escape of water from any reservoir, or aqueduct, or pipe, or other work connected therewith" which may be constructed by the commissioners. The countess is proprietress of land situated below the site of one of the reservoirs, and during an extraordinary rainfall a great quantity of water was continuously discharged from the reservoir, through a waste weir, into the watercourse of a burn, and did much damage to the countess's lands. She claimed compensation. There was no failure or insufficiency of the works and no negligence: —Held, that on the construction of the above clause the countess was entitled to compensation for damage by flood waters from the reservoir, no matter how caused. Ib.

Effect of.]—A party interested in the subject-matter of a local act will have his rights affected by its provisions, though it may have been introduced and passed without notice duly given to him. Edinburgh and Dalkeith Ry. v. Wauchope, 8 Cl. & F. 710; 3 Railw. Cas. 233.

A local act must be judicially noticed, and must have all the operation of a public statute. Aiton v. Stephen, 1 App. Cas. 456.

Not affected by Public General Act.]—A partial exemption from the payment of rates for borough improvement purposes, conceded by a local act, is not taken away by the mere passing of public general acts for similar purposes. Reg. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 35 L. T. 626; 25 W. R. 52. S. C., in H. L., 48 L. J., M. C. 57; 4 App. Cas. 467; 41 L. T. 160; 28 W. R. 52.

As Evidence.]—A private act is not evidence in support of an ancient customary payment of toll within a manor. Beaufort (Duke) v. Smith, 4 Ex. 450; 19 L. J., Ex. 97.

Local Act excluding the Operation of the Statute of Limitations (37 & 38 Vict. c. 57).]—In the year 1850, an act (13 Vict. c. v.) was passed to enable commissioners (appointed by 6 Geo. 4, c. cxxix.) for managing the affairs of Brighton to purchase the Pavilion estate. By s. 19 of the act the commissioners were expressly prohibited from letting or selling any part of the property to be so acquired by them without the consent of the vestry. In 1854, the town of Brighton was incorporated, and in 1855 the powers and property of the commissioners under the act 6 Geo. 4 were transferred to the corporation. Down to the year 1853 the guardians of the poor of Brighton had had the use of offices in the town hall. On the 7th of March in that year they removed (by arrangement with the commissioners) to buildings which formed part of the Pavilion estate, in the adaptation of which to their purposes they expended a considerable sum of money; and they continued in the exclusive occupation of their new offices without payment of rent or any acknowledgment of title in the commissioners or the corporation, down to the 19th November, 1879, when an action was brought by the latter to recover possession:—Held, that, inasmuch as the guardians had had the exclusive possession of the offices for more than twelve years (assuming their relation to the corporation to have been that of tenants at will), the claim of the corporation was barred by the Statute of Limitations, notwithstanding the prohibition against letting or selling without the consent of the vestry, contained in the local act. Brighton Corporation v. Brighton Union, 49 L. J., C. P. 648; 5 C. P. D. 368; 44 J. P. 683.

Private Act—Right of Public to sue upon.]—A private act of parliament, authorising the construction of a railway, imposed upon another railway company, whose line was already in existence, an obligation to carry a particular class of traffic at rates not exceeding a fixed amount:—Held (Lord Morris dissenting), that the regulation was not a matter of contract between the two companies, but that it gave rights to the public upon which traders, who alleged that they had suffered injury owing to rates being charged in excess of the amount authorised, could sue. Davis v. Taff Vale Ry., 64 L. J., Q. B. 488; [1895] A. C. 542; 11 R. 189; 72 L. T. 632; 44 W. R. 172—H. L. (E.)

Judicial Notice of.]—A local act must be judicially noticed, and must have all the operation of a public statute. Aiton v. Stephen, 1 App. Cas. 456—H. L. (Sc.)

Expenses of Obtaining.]—When commissioners appointed by a private act are authorised to do all things necessary for carrying out the object of the act, that will not give them authority to apply to parliament for a further act, so as to allow their applying funds raised for the purposes of the first act in discharging the expenses of obtaining the second act. Att.-Gen. v. West Hartlepool Improvement Commissioners, 39 L. J., Ch. 624; L. R. 10 Eq. 152; 22 L. T. 510; 18 W. R. 685.

Where the expenses of passing a public local act are directed to be defrayed out of certain tolls to be levied under the act, it is incumbent on the party who sues for the expense of soliciting the act to shew that tolls have been collected to cover his demand. Andrews v. Dally, 4 Bing. 566; 1 M. & P. 490; 6 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 117.

Proof of Private Act.]—In ejectment for land, in order to shew that an act of Edw. 6 had passed for disgavelling the land, after evidence of a clerk in the parliament office, who had the custody of the records in the House of Lords, that no such act was to be found on the parliament roll, a calendar was put in, purporting to contain the titles of sixty acts passed in 2 & 3 Edw. 6, that numbered 40 being called "An act for disgavelling lands in Kent." The calendar so produced was made in 1640. Two calendars were kept in the office, one called the long calendar, the other the short calendar; and the practice had been to enter upon the long calendar such acts as passed as soon as they had received the royal assent, but not before, with their numbers: —Quære, whether this was sufficient evidence that such an act really did pass. Doe d. Bacon v. Brydges, 7 Scott (N.R.) 333; 6 Man. & G. 282; 13 L. J., C. P. 209.

An act for the regulation of the affairs of an insurance company containing a clause directing that it should be deemed and taken to be a public act, and should be judicially taken notice of as such by all judges, justices and others, without being specially pleaded, is sufficiently proved for all legal purposes by the production of a copy purchased at the office of the king's printer. Beaumont v. Mountain, 4 M. & Scott, 177; 10 Bing. 404; 3 L. J., C. P. 118.

Where copies of a private act, printed by the queen's printer, are made evidence, counsel cannot make an objection founded on that act a ground of an application for a nonsuit, if the act has not been given in evidence on the part of the plaintiff, because it is not an act to be judicially noticed, and is only before the court when given in evidence. Greswolde v. Kemp, Car. & M. 635.

An act, private in its nature, is not made admissible against strangers by a clause declaring "that it shall be deemed and taken to be a public act, and shall be judicially taken notice of without being specially pleaded." Brett v. Beales, M. & M. 421; 31 R. R. 744.

Proof of Local Act.]—A local act, with a clause declaring it to be a public act, and that it shall be taken notice of as such without being specially pleaded, need not be proved either to have been examined with the parliament rolls, or to have been printed by the king's printer. Woodward v. Cotton, 1 C. M. & R. 44; 6 Car. & P. 457; 4 Tyr. 689; 3 L. J., Ex. 300.

Parliamentary Declaration.]—In the reign of Richard II., an earldom was created of an apparently nondescendible dignity. The earl was beheaded by Henry of Lancaster when he invaded England, and before he received or even claimed the crown. There was no evidence whether there had been any trial, or form of trial before the beheading. When Henry I. was declared king a proceeding took place in parliament in which the commons were represented to have prayed that all that was done in the pursuit, arrest and judgment of the earl might be declared good for the common profit of the realm. The king, with the assent of the lords temporal, declared that it was so. This proceeding was entered on the placita coronæ in parliament, but not on the rolls of parliament. Semble, that this was not an act of parliament. Wiltes Peerage claim, L. R. 4 H. L. 126.

But it was a solemn declaration pronounced by the king in open parliament at the prayer of the commons, and with the advice of the lords, and must be taken as a parliamentary declaration that, whatever had been the nature of the grant to the earl, it was wholly at an end. Ib.

6. Colonial.

Should be Construed in Accordance with English Decisions.]—An act of a colonial legislature, where English law prevails, is governed by the same rules of construction as prevail in England respecting statutes in pari materiâ; and English authorities upon an act are authorities for the interpretation of a colonial act in pari materiâ. Catterall v. Catterall or Sweetman, 1 Rob. Ecc. Rep. 580; 9 Jur. 951.

Where a colonial legislature has passed an act in the same terms as an imperial statute, and the latter has been authoritatively construed by a court of appeal in England, such construction should be adopted by the courts of the colony. Trimble v. Hill, 49 L. J., P. C. 49; 5 App. Cas. 342; 42 L. T. 103; 28 W. R. 479—P. C.

Authority of Colony to Pass.]—By an act of a colonial legislature it was provided that a banking company should sue and be sued in the name of its chairman, and that execution of any judgment against the company might be issued against the property of any member for the time being, in like manner as if such judgment had been obtained against such member personally. In an action against a member of the company on a judgment obtained in the colony against the chairman:—Held, that the colonial legislature had authority to pass the act, and that there was nothing repugnant to the law of England or to natural justice in enacting that actions on contracts made by the company in the colony, instead of being brought against the shareholders individually, should be brought against the chairman whom they had appointed to represent them. Bank of Australasia v. Nias, 16 Q. B. 717; 20 L. J., Q. B. 284.

Force of.]—An act of the local legislature lawfully constituted, whether in a settled or in a conquered colony, assented to by the crown, has, as to matters within its competence and the limits of its jurisdiction, the operation and force of sovereign legislation, though subject to be controlled by the imperial parliament. Phillips v. Eyre, 10 B. & S. 1004; 40 L. J., Q. B. 28; L. R. 6 Q. B. 1; 22 L. T. 869—Ex. Ch. Affirming 17 W. R. 375.

E. Construction of Particular Parts.

1. Exceptions and Provisoes.

What is an Exception.] — Where a general intention is expressed, and the act expresses also a particular intention incompatible with the general intention, the particular intention is to be considered in the nature of an exception. Churchill v. Crease, 2 M. & P. 415; 5 Bing. 177, 180; 7 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 63.

Where in a fiscal act of parliament (54 Geo. 3, c. 92. s. 6) there is a saving, co-extensive with and therefore repugnant to the enactment, the enactment must prevail. The rule of law, that an exception must be of part of the thing only, and not of all, applies as well to acts of parliament as to deeds. Cleland v. Ker, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 35. Affirmed, 1 Dr. 227.

In general a right cannot be raised out of a mere salvo or an exception in an act. Lord Advocate v. Hamilton, 1 Macq. H. L. 46.

Proviso — Enacting Part — Construction.]—If the language of the enacting part of a statute does not contain the provisions which are said to occur in it, those provisions cannot be imported by implication from a proviso—per Lord Watson. West Derby Union v. Metropolitan Life Assurance Society, 66 L. J., Ch. 726; [1897] A. C. 647; 77 L. T. 284; 61 J. P. 820—H. L. (E.)

Proviso in Section — Presumption as to.]—When one finds a proviso to a section, the natural presumption is, that, but for the proviso, the enacting part of the section would have included the subject-matter of the proviso. Mullins v. Surrey (Treasurer), 5 Q. B. D. 170, 173.

Effect of Saving Clause.]—A local board of health, after having made a valuation as required by the Public Health Act, 1848, and other acts, duly gave a notice of their intention to make a rate under those acts. On the day when this notice expired, the acts under which it was made were repealed by the Public Health Act, 1875. The local board, not knowing this, proceeded to lay and collect the rate. The Public Health Act, 1875, is a consolidation act, and preserves the machinery and proceedings of the old acts. There is no difference in the kind or length of notice required, or in the estimate or the objects of the rate, but a slight alteration is made in the mode of valuing assessable property. The act contained a clause saving things duly done under the repealed acts. A question having arisen as to the validity of the rate:—Held, that the rate was valid, the valuation and notice being "things duly done" under the saving clause, and the rate itself in all material points being a good rate under the new act. Reg. v. Yorkshire, West Riding, JJ., 45 L. J., M. C. 97; 1 Q. B. D. 220; 35 L. T. 358.

Under the Nuisances Removal Acts (18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, ss. 12, 13, and 29 & 30 Vict. c. 90, s. 19), justices made an order on the 15th of May, 1875, for the abatement of a nuisance and prohibiting the recurrence of the same. On the 11th of August, 1875, the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), came into operation, and repealed the above Nuisances Removal Acts, but with a saving clause in s. 343 that such repeal should not affect any right or liability acquired, accrued or incurred under any enactment thereby repealed. A complaint was made before the justices for disobedience of the order, by allowing a recurrence of the nuisance, on the 12th of August, 1875. The justices refused to convict on the ground that the order was gone by reason of the repealing statute:—Held, that the justices were wrong, on the ground that the defendant was liable to be convicted, as he had incurred a liability under the repealed enactment which was not affected by the repeal. Barnes v. Edleston, 1 Ex. D. 102; 45 L. J., M. C. 162; 33 L. T. 822.

Saving Rights of Crown.]—Semble, that a saving clause in an act of parliament in favour of the Crown refers to rights of property or rights in the nature of property which belong to the Crown as Crown property. Yarmouth Corporation v. Simmons, 47 L. J., Ch. 792; 10 Ch. D. 518; 38 L. T. 881; 26 W. R. 802.

Saving in Inclosure Act.]—In construing an inclosure act the reservation clause which is in derogation of the right of freehold given by the act to the allottees of the land inclosed must be construed most strictly against the lord of the manor. Devonshire (Duke) v. O'Connor, 59 L. J., Q. B. 206; 24 Q. B. D. 468; 62 L. T. 917; 38 W. R. 420; 54 J. P. 740—per Lord Esher, M.R.

2. Forms, Rules, and Conveyances.

Form of Notice.]—If a particular form of a notice or an order is prescribed by a private act, it must be fully set out and precisely pursued, and an allegation that due notice was given is not sufficient. Rex v. Croker, Cowp. 30.

And a defective notice under a private act is not cured by the appearance of the party. Ib.

If the legislature prescribes formalities to be observed by parties contracting inter se, and one of them endeavours to avail himself of the want of such forms to postpone or avoid the completion of a contract entered into, the court will itself ascertain whether the intentions of the legislature have, in substance, been complied with; and if they have it will carry the contract into effect. Baker v. Metropolitan Ry., 31 Beav. 504; 32 L. J., Ch. 7; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 61; 7 L. T. 494; 11 W. R. 18.

Rules framed in pursuance of—Validity—Jurisdiction of Courts of Law—Fees.]—Where a statutory power is given to the board of trade to impose fees for a particular purpose, it is not within the province of courts of law to determine what is a reasonable amount at which the fees may be fixed. Chartered Institute of Patent Agents v. Lockwood, 63 L. J., P. C. 74; [1894] A. C. 347; 6 R. 219; 71 L. T. 205—H. L. (Sc.)

Where a statute is merely a skeleton piece of legislation, expressing a general object and providing a penalty, but leaving all material particulars to be filled up by rules which are to be framed by a public department, such as the board of trade, which rules are, subject to the fulfilment of certain conditions, to "be of the same effect as if they were contained in this act, and shall be judicially noticed," such rules—if in the opinion of the department they are requisite for giving effect to the object of the statute, and if the conditions imposed by the statute have been complied with—cannot be questioned in a court of law (Lord Morris dissenting). Ib.

A conveyance by the commissioners of the court for the sale of incumbered estates in Ireland is, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 77, s. 27, "effectual to pass the fee simple discharged of all former estates," subject only to "such tenancies, leases, &c., as shall be expressed therein." Where such a conveyance is duly executed by the commissioners, it becomes under s. 49 conclusive evidence that everything required by the act to be done has been rightly done. Rorke v. Errington, 7 H. L. Cas. 617; 9 Ir. C. L. R. 357; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1227.

A conveyance made under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 72, is, by s. 85, for all purposes conclusive evidence that all previous proceedings leading to such conveyance have been regularly taken. Where, therefore, proceedings had been taken for the sale of estates, and their sale and resale had been directed in a manner which was declared by the House of Lords to be marked with great irregularity, but the party complaining had not brought the matter before the court of appeal until after the conveyances had been executed:—Held, that the House was precluded by the provisions of the statute from affording the appellant relief against the consequences of such irregularities. Power v. Reeves, 10 H. L. Cas. 645.

Forms in Bastardy.]—The Bastardy Act, 1845, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 10, s. 1, reciting the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1844, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, declares that all proceedings in matters of bastardy, under the recited act, which shall have been set forth "according to the forms in the schedule hereunto annexed, or to the like tenor and effect, shall be taken to have been valid and sufficient in law." Where an order of two justices on a putative father of a bastard child was in substance in the form given in the schedule:—Held, that it was no objection to the order that it did not state the evidence to have been given on oath, as the court would not intend that the blank in the form given in the act, after the words "evidence of such woman," was to be filled up with the words "on oath" or "on affirmation." Reg. v. Cheshire JJ., 2 New Sess. Cas. 161; 3 D. & L. 337; 15 L. J., M. C. 3; 10 Jur. 311.

An order in bastardy, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 3, stated, that application had been made and summons granted by a justice of the peace, usually acting in the division in which the mother resided:—Held, that, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 10, the word "in" was to be taken to be synonymous with the word "for" contained in the forms given in the schedule, and that, consequently, the order shewed jurisdiction on the part of the magistrate granting the summons. Reg. v. Milner, 3 D. & L. 128; 14 L. J., M. C. 157; 10 Jur. 334.

Form of Affidavit.]—By 23 & 24 Geo. 3, c. 39 (Irish), for the encouragement of planting timber trees, tenants for lives by settlement, impeachable of waste, or tenants for years exceeding fourteen unexpired, who should plant or cause to be planted any timber trees, might fell and dispose of them at any time during the term. To secure the landlords, s. 2 enacted, that "any tenant so planting," &c., "should within twelve calendar months after such planting lodge with the clerk of the peace of the county" "an affidavit," &c., "reciting the number and kinds of trees, and the name of the lands, in form following :—I, A. B., do swear that I have planted," &c., "on the lands of ——, in the parish of ——, held by me from ——, the following trees [here reciting the number and kinds of trees]." The form throughout was couched in the first person, and, in fact, in its terms, was only applicable to a tenant for years. A lessee for three lives having planted many trees, his agent made the affidavit required, in his own name, as agent for the lessee :—Held, that as the form given in the statute could not possibly apply to the majority of the cases which its provisions sought to meet, it did not mean that no one but the tenants was to make the affidavit ; and that the form, if another person made the affidavit, might be varied. Mountcashell (Earl) v. O'Neill (Viscount), 5 H. L. Cas. 937 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1030 ; 4 W. R. 818.

Conveyances.]—Where a statute points out the manner in which a canal company shall convey lands, and enacts that "every such conveyance shall be valid," it does not cure any defect in the title of lands so conveyed. Ward v. Scott, 3 Camp. 284.

A conveyance by the commissioners of the court for the sale of incumbered estates in Ireland is, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 77, s. 27, "effectual to pass the fee-simple discharged of all former estates," subject only to "such tenancies, leases, &c., as shall be expressed therein." Where such a conveyance is duly executed by the commissioners, it becomes under s. 49 conclusive evidence that everything required by the act to be done has been rightly done. Rorke v. Errington, 7 H. L. Cas. 617 ; 9 Ir. C. L. R. 357 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1227.

A conveyance made under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 72 (Irish), is, by s. 85, for all purposes conclusive evidence that all previous proceedings leading to such conveyance have been regularly taken. Where, therefore, proceedings had been taken for the sale of estates, and their sale and resale had been directed in a manner which was declared by the House of Lords to be marked with great irregularity, but the party complaining had not brought the matter before the court of appeal until after the conveyances had been executed :—Held, that the House was precluded by the provisions of the statute from affording the appellant relief against the consequences of such irregularities. Power v. Reeves, 10 H. L. Cas. 645.

—— Transfer of Debentures.]—By a local and personal act, transfers of debentures were to be by indorsement by deed, and in a given form, and were to be entered in the books of the company, and "after such entry, but not till then, the assignee was to be entitled to the benefit" :—Held, that this did not apply to a transfer by act of law, as in the case of bankruptcy. Lane v. Smith, 14 Beav. 49 ; 15 Jur. 735.

F. EFFECT OF ONE ACT ON ANOTHER.

1. READING TOGETHER.

Of Statutes on same Subject.]—Statutes on the same subject must be construed together. Anon., Lofft, 398.

If there are several acts upon the same subject, they are to be taken together as forming one system, and as interpreting and enforcing each other. Rex v. Palmer, 1 Leach, C. C. 352, 355 ; 2 East, P. C. 898.

It is a rule that several statutes on the same subject are to be read as one statute. M'William v. Adams, 1 Macq. H. L. 120.

The 32 Hen. 8, c. 28, and 13 Eliz. c. 10, are in pari materiâ, and must be taken together. Doe d. Tennyson v. Yarborough (Lord), 7 Moore, 258 ; 1 Bing. 24 ; 25 R. R. 575.

By 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 3, that act and 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95 (County Courts Act), are to be read as one act. "That clause is frequently inserted in modern acts of parliament, but if the two acts be in pari materiâ, the construction would be the same without it." Waterlow v. Dobson, 8 El. & Bl. 585 ; 27 L. J., Q. B. 55—per Campbell (Lord), C.J.

A repealed statute in pari materiâ with an existing one may properly be referred to for the purpose of construing the latter. Copeland, Ex parte, 2 De G. M. & G. 914 ; 22 L. J., Bk. 17 ; 17 Jur. 121 ; 1 W. R. 9.

Operation inter se.]—An act repealed existing statutes and gave certain powers "in terms of the said recited acts," which were the repealed statutes :—Held, that this phrase incorporated the provisions of the repealed statutes and consolidated them. Blantyre (Lord) v. Clyde Navigation Trustees, 6 App. Cas. 273—H. L. (Sc.)

A prior statute may operate upon the provision of a subsequent one, without express words. Perrin, In re, 2 Dr. & War. 147 ; 1 Con. & L. 567 ; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 362.

Contradicting other Statutes.]—If it is found that, reading enactments in their ordinary sense, they would contradict some other enactments, but that, reading them in a sense in which, though not their ordinary sense, they were reasonably capable of being read, they would not contradict such other enactments, then I agree that they should be read so that all the enactments should be read together without contradicting each other. Reg. v. Tonbridge Overseers, 53 L. J., Q. B. 489 ; 13 Q. B. D. 342 ; 51 L. T. 199 ; 33 W. R. 24 ; 48 J. P. 740—per Brett, M.R.

If two statutes can be read together without contradiction, or repugnancy, or absurdity, or unreasonableness, they should be read together. Reg. v. Oastler, 50 L. J., M. C. 6 ; 43 L. T. 404 ; 45 J. P. 93—per Brett, L.J. And see Fulham Union v. Isle of Thanet Union, 50 L. J., M. C. 101 ; 7 Q. B. D. 539 ; 44 L. T. 678 ; 29 W. R. 723 ; 45 J. P. 552—C. A.

In adjusting the general provisions in a general act to the particular provisions of the special act, considerations of reason and justice, and the universal analogy of such provisions in similar acts of parliament, are proper to be borne in mind, and ought to have much weight and force. Metropolitan District Ry. v. Sharpe, 50 L. J.,

Q. B. 16; 5 App. Cas. 431; 43 L. T. 130; 28 W. R. 617; 44 J. P. 716—H. L. (E.)

—— Burden of Proof as regards Reading together.]—When a statute is not expressly repealed, the burden is on those who assert that there is an implied repeal to shew that the two statutes cannot stand consistently the one with the other. Lybbe v. Hart, 29 Ch. D. 15; 52 L. T. 636.

Reference to other Statute.]—I do not see how we can construe a word in one statute by reference to its use in another, in which the context may be different, and I do not think that Lord Selborne in Metropolitan District Ry. v. Sharpe (5 App. Cas. 425) intended to lay down any general rule to the contrary. Spencer v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 52 L. J., Ch. 251; 22 Ch. D. 157; 47 L. T. 464; 31 W. R. 350—per Jessel, M.R., and Cotton, L.J.

We cannot use the interpretation of one statute in construing another not made with the same intent. Reg. v. Income Tax Commissioners, 58 L. J., Q. B. 196; 22 Q. B. D. 296; 60 L. T. 446; 37 W. R. 294; 53 J. P. 198—per Lord Esher, M.R.

2. Incorporation by Reference.

Effect of, on Crown.]—Assuming that the Lands Clauses Act would have been read into the special act of 1855, in any ordinary case, can this be done in the case of these commissioners, who it is said represent the crown, and are in fact the crown, the crown not being mentioned in the Lands Clauses Act? The Lands Clauses Act is brought into the act of 1855 by reference, and the legal effect of its incorporation is this, that the moment the latter act is passed it must be considered that the legislature has written into it the provisions of the Lands Clauses Act, and if that be so, the act of 1855, in dealing with these commissioners, if they are to be taken to be the crown, is dealing with the crown itself. Therefore the objection that the crown is not mentioned in the Lands Clauses Act falls to the ground. Wood's Estate, In re, Commissioners of Works and Buildings, Ex parte, 55 L. J., Ch. 488; 31 Ch. D. 607; 54 L. T. 145; 34 W. R. 375—per Lord Esher, M.R.

Incorporation of Parts of other Statute—To what Extent.]—Where statute A. incorporates sections of statute B., and those sections in statute B. refer to a particular class of cases (e.g. settled estates), statute A. must not be construed as to these sections as only referring to the particular class of cases affected by statute B., but must be construed in a fair manner and not with any such restriction. Barker, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 334; 17 Ch. D. 241; 44 L. T. 33; 29 W. R. 873.

Whether a special act only incorporates "such parts of a general act as are applicable to, and not inconsistent with, the special act," or "the whole act, except so far as its provisions are expressly varied by the special act," makes no difference in the application of the general to the special act. Weld v. L. & S. W. Ry., 1 N. R. 415; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 510; 8 L. T. 13; 11 W. R. 448.

A clause of reference in an excise statute to a former law only extends to the general powers and provisions of that law, and not to every particular clause. Rex v. Surrey JJ., 2 Term Rep. 504, 510.

An act empowered a canal company to construct canals and railroads, paying compensation to the owners of lands used; and also to make railroads to ironworks, within eight miles of the canals or railroads first mentioned: and it provided that, if the owners of certain species of property situate within eight miles from any part of the canals or railways before particularly described and authorised to be made should think it expedient that railways should be made through the lands of other persons, for the purpose of conveying goods from the canals or railways before particularly described, and if the company should refuse to make such railways, such owners might at their own cost make such railways, paying compensation to the proprietors of the lands over which they were to be made; and that the railways so made should be open to the public on payment of such tolls as the company could demand. A subsequent act incorporated a tramroad company, and gave them or the canal company power to make certain railways, and to take thereon the tolls authorised by the former act; and it provided that the companies should have the same powers for recovering the tolls as were given by the first act, and that the several clauses, privileges, penalties, and provisions therein contained, should, as far as the same would apply and the case would admit, extend to the works constructed under the new act, as if the clauses had been repeated, and the tramroad company had been therein named instead of the canal company:—Held, that this did not authorise owners of the specified kind of property within eight miles of the new works, unless authorised by the first act, to make railways from their property to the new works. Sirhowy Tramroad Co. v. Jones, 3 A. & E. 641, n.; 5 N. & M. 88.

Incorporation of General Statutes in Special Acts.]—The effect of the incorporation of a general act of parliament into the special act of any company is, that the general act must be looked at with reference to the powers conferred upon companies of dealing with the land when required; but it is to the special act that regard must be had for the purpose of ascertaining the contract between the landowner and the company, and the power which the company has of taking the land. Simpson v. South Staffordshire Waterworks Co., 4 De G. J. & S. 679; 34 L. J., Ch. 380; 12 L. T. 360; 13 W. R. 729.

When a general act of parliament is incorporated with a special act, if there is any contradiction between them, the special act is to prevail. Att.-Gen. v. G. E. Ry., 41 L. J., Ch. 505; L. R. 7 Ch. 475; 26 L. T. 749; 20 W. R. 599.

Effect of Subsequent General Act upon Prior Special Act Incorporating Prior General Act.]—In 1847 the Gasworks Clauses Act was passed; in 1853 a company obtained a special act which incorporated the act of 1847. In 1871 another Gasworks Clauses Act was passed, and in it was this provision: "The Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847, and this act shall be construed together as one act":—Held, that the act of 1871 was incorporated in the act of 1853. Dudley Gas Co. v. Warmington, 50 L. J., M. C. 69; 44 L. T. 475; 29 W. R. 680; 45 J. P. 649.

Repeal of Act Incorporated by Reference.]—Where a statute is incorporated by reference into a second statute, the repeal of the first statute by a third does not affect the second, so that the first, so far as the second incorporated it, remains unrepealed. Clarke v. Bradlaugh, 51 L. J., Q. B. 7; 8 Q. B. D. 69; 46 L. T. 52: 30 W. R. 55—per Brett, L.J. S. P., Reg. v. Smith, 42 L. J., M. C. 46; L. R. 8 Q. B. 146; 28 L. T. 129; 21 W. R. 382.

3. Repeal.

a. General Rules.

No Repeal by Disuse.]—An act of parliament does not become inoperative by mere non-user, however long the time may have been since it was known to have been actually put in force; but the fact of non-user may be extremely important when the question is, whether there has been a repeal by implication. The India, 33 L. J., Adm. 193.

Test of Implied Repeal.]—The test of whether there has been a repeal by implication by subsequent legislation is this: Are the provisions of a later act so inconsistent with, or repugnant to, the provisions of an earlier act that the two cannot stand together? In which case "Leges posteriores contrarias abrogant." West Ham v. Fourth City Mutual Building Society, 61 L. J., M. C. 128; [1892] 1 Q. B. 654; 66 L. T. 350; 40 W. R. 446; 56 J. P. 438.

A repeal by implication is only effected when the provisions of a later enactment are so inconsistent with or repugnant to the provisions of an earlier one, that the two cannot stand together, in which case the maxim "Leges posteriores contrarias abrogant" applies. Kutner v. Phillips, 60 L. J., Q. B. 505; [1891] 2 Q. B. 267; 64 L. T. 628; 39 W. R. 526.

Implied Repeal not Favoured.]—Repeal by implication is never to be favoured; it is, no doubt, the necessary consequence of inconsistent legislation whenever it occurs, but which must not be imputed to the legislature unless absolutely necessary. Dobbs v. Grand Junction Waterworks Co., 51 L. J., Q. B. 504; 9 Q. B. D. 158; 46 L. T. 820; 31 W. R. 15; 46 J. P. 756.

No statute can lose its force by non-user alone. Presumption is against the repeal of a statute by implication; but a subsequent statute, though not expressly referring to it, will be taken to have repealed a prior one, if the provisions of the two statutes are incompatible with each other or would lead to absurd consequences. The India, Br. & Lush. 221; 33 L. J., Adm. 193; 12 L. T. 316.

Inconsistent Affirmative Acts.]—No point is more clear, than that a subsequent affirmative statute may repeal a prior one, if the words are contrariant; but it is equally clear, that if there be two affirmative statutes made on the same subject, in all points in which they do not contradict each other, both shall stand. Hayden v. Carroll, 3 Ridgw. P. C. 592.

Where two inconsistent acts are passed at different times relative to the same subject-matter, the last is to be obeyed and take effect, although it may subvert the former. Ely (Dean) v. Bliss, 5 Beav. 582; 11 L. J., Ch. 351; 6 Jur. 496.

An affirmative statute is not repealed by a subsequent affirmative statute, unless the two cannot stand together. Warrington, Ex parte, 3 De G. M. & G. 159; 22 L. J., Bk. 33; 17 Jur. 430; 1 W. R. 261.

If there are two affirmative statutes inconsistent and incompatible with each other, the earlier statute is repealed by the later one. O'Flaherty v. M'Dowell, 6 H. L. Cas. 142; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 33.

Affirmative words in an act do not repeal the provisions of a former act, unless there is some obvious inconsistency between the enactments. Pakins v. Seaman, 9 M. & W. 777.

The mere recital in a subsequent statute of an intention to repeal a former specific statute will not operate by implication to repeal the former statute. In order to accomplish such a repeal, there must be a clause to that effect in the latter statute. Mahony v. Wright, 10 Ir. C. L. R. 420.

Mere general words in a subsequent affirmative statute, not referring expressly to a former specific statute, are not sufficient to effect a repeal of the former statute, if both statutes can stand together. Ib.

Penalties.]—Where a later statute describes an offence created by a former statute, and affixes a different punishment to it, varying the procedure, and giving an appeal when there was no appeal before, the offence must be prosecuted under the later statute. Michell v. Brown, 1 El. & El. 267; 28 L. J., M. C. 53; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 707; 7 W. R. 80.

When a statute prohibits a particular act, and imposes a penalty for doing it, and a subsequent statute imposes a different penalty for the same offence, the latter statute operates as a repeal of the former. Robinson v. Emerson, 4 H. & C. 352, 355; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 378; 14 L. T. 391; 14 W. R. 658.

The Crown.]—Clauses which limit in any way the right of the Crown must be considered as repealed by subsequent statutes, unless expressly re-enacted. Att.-Gen. v. Newman, 1 Price, 438.

When Two Acts repugnant to each other come into Operation on the same Day.]—Where two acts come into operation on the same day, and are repugnant, the one which last received the royal assent virtually repeals the other, although the former by reason of the classing of the different acts may be numbered as of a chapter later down in order than the latter. Rex v. Middlesex JJ., 1 L. J., M. C. 5; 1 D. P. C. 117; 2 B. & Ad. 818.

Two Acts giving Inconsistent Powers to Different Public Bodies—Repeal of earlier one.]—Where two statutes give authority to two public bodies to exercise powers which cannot consistently with the object of the legislature co-exist, the earlier must necessarily be repealed by the later statute. Daw v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 161; 31 L. J., C. P. 223; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1040; 6 L. T. 353.

Re-enactment.]—A section of a statute, which merely re-enacts a provision in a previous statute, will not be construed as virtually repealing an inconsistent enactment in an act made subsequently to the first, but before the last act. Morisse v. Royal British Bank, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 67; 26 L. J., C. P. 62; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 137; 5 W. R. 138.

Repeal of Private Act by Private Act.]—A private act does not repeal a former private act by implication. Birkenhead Docks (Trustees) v. Laird, 4 De G. M. & G. 732; 23 L. J., Ch. 457; 18 Jur. 883; 2 W. R. 7.

Where, therefore, a private act gave power to commissioners to construct a sea wall, the property in which was to be vested in them, with liberty to proprietors of adjoining lands to purchase portions of the wall, and to make openings in it, under the superintendence of the engineer of the commissioners:—Held, that under a subsequent act empowering a dock company to take some adjoining lands and to make such works for the purposes of their undertaking "as they might deem expedient," the power thus conferred was subject to the provisions of the former act. Ib.

b. Particular Cases.

Metropolitan Acts.]—Sect. 1 of the Street Music Act, 1864, does not by implication repeal s. 77 of the Metropolitan Police Act, 1839; and, therefore, a street musician who, under s. 1 of the Street Music Act, 1864, is convicted and fined forty shillings, may in default of payment of the fine be committed to prison for one month under s. 77 of the Metropolitan Police Act, 1839, although the punishment by imprisonment provided by s. 1 of the Street Music Act, 1864, cannot exceed three days. Reg. v. Hopkins, 62 L. J., M. C. 57; [1893] 1 Q. B. 621; 5 R. 315; 68 L. T. 292; 41 W. R. 431; 57 J. P. 152.

The provisions of s. 6 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1878, by which building within twenty feet of the centre of the highway is prohibited, are inconsistent with a special act empowering the London School Board to acquire compulsorily a particular site, defined by metes and bounds, for the purpose of providing school accommodation. Consequently the school board take such site, or so much of it as is necessary for school accommodation, free from the restriction imposed by the general act. City and South London Ry. v. London County Council ([1891] 2 Q. B. 513) followed. London County Council v. London School Board, 62 L. J., M. C. 30; [1892] 2 Q. B. 606; 5 R. 1; 40 W. R. 604; 56 J. P. 791.

Sect. 119 of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, does not impliedly repeal the provisions contained in s. 65 of Michael Angelo Taylor's Act, which impose a penalty upon the hanging out of articles in front of any houses within the metropolis; such provisions are, therefore, still in force. Wyatt v. Gems, 62 L. J., M. C. 158; [1893] 2 Q. B. 225; 5 R. 507; 69 L. T. 456; 42 W. R. 28; 57 J. P. 665.

The powers given to the metropolitan local authorities by s. 65 of Michael Angelo Taylor's Act to order the removal of goods, barrows, &c., from carriage or footways are inconsistent with and therefore impliedly repealed as far as they affect costermongers by s. 6 of the Metropolitan Streets Act, 1867, and s. 1 of the Metropolitan Streets Act Amendment Act, 1868. Summers v. Holborn Board of Works, 62 L. J., M. C. 81; [1893] 1 Q. B. 612; 5 R. 284; 68 L. T. 226; 41 W. R. 445; 57 J. P. 326.

Amendment Act — Implied Re-enactment.]—In 1877 the Metropolitan Street Improvements Act was passed, authorising the Metropolitan Board of Works to execute certain street improvements and to take land for that purpose. It incorporated the Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts. Sect. 33 provided that accommodation should be furnished for such of the labouring classes as would be displaced by the proposed improvements, and authorised the board of works to acquire or appropriate certain lands, and sell or let the same for the purpose of providing such accommodation, and imposed certain restrictions on the board. An amending act was passed in 1882, which by s. 2 enacted that the board should, in exercise of the powers by the act of 1877 conferred upon them, appropriate lands, shewn on a certain plan, to the erection of artizans' dwellings in three pieces successively. Sect. 3 enacted that, in reference to the land shewn in the said plan, the act of 1877 should be read as though s. 33 were not contained therein:—Held, that s. 33 of the act of 1877 had not been repealed for all purposes, and that the board had by implication the powers of selling and letting conferred by that section for the purpose of carrying out the buildings referred to in s. 2 of the act of 1882. Wigram v. Fryer, 56 L. J., Ch. 1098; 36 Ch. D. 87; 57 L. T. 255; 36 W. R. 100.

Licensing Act—Betting.]—The provisions of s. 17 of the Licensing Act, 1872, whereby a licensed person is liable to a penalty of 10*l.* for using his premises for the purpose of betting, do not repeal the provisions of s. 3 of the Betting Houses Act, 1853, whereby such person is liable to a penalty of 100*l.* for the same offence. Sims v. Pay, 58 L. J., M. C. 39; 60 L. T. 602; 16 Cox, C. C. 609; 53 J. P. 420.

Implied Repeal.] — The applicant had been convicted of an offence against 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 53 (an act to consolidate and amend the law relating to the collection and management of the revenue of excise), by which act (s. 83) no appeal was allowed against a conviction, unless the appellant should, at and immediately upon the giving of the judgment appealed against, give notices in writing to the justices from whose judgment such appeal should be made, and also to the adverse party. The applicant gave notice of appeal within four days after his conviction. The justices in quarter sessions declined to hear the appeal, on the ground that the appellant had not given notice of appeal "at and immediately upon the giving of the judgment appealed against":—Held, that the effect of s. 6 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1884, was to get rid of all procedure in appeals from courts of summary jurisdiction but that provided by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, and that the notice of appeal was sufficient, as having been given within the time provided by the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1884. Reg. v. Glamorganshire JJ., 58 L. J., M. C. 93; 22 Q. B. D. 628; 60 L. T. 536; 37 W. R. 493; 16 Cox, C. C. 593; 53 J. P. 294.

Gas Act.]—By local act, a penalty of 200*l.* was imposed on any gas or other company for suffering any impure matter to flow into any stream, to be sued for by common informer. Afterwards, by s. 21 of the Gasworks Clauses Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 15), a like penalty is imposed for the same offence, such penalty to be recovered by the person into whose water such substance shall be conveyed, or whose water shall be fouled by any such act:—Held, that the later provision was, pro tanto, a repeal of the former. Parry v. Croydon Commercial Gas Co., 11 C. B. (N.S.) 579. Affirmed 15 C. B. (N.S.) 568; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 172; 9 L. T. 694; 12 W. R. 212—Ex. Ch.

Gaol Act.]—By a local act passed prior to 5 & 6 Vict. c. 98, in furtherance of arrangements made between the justices of a county and the council of a borough having a separate court of quarter sessions, it was provided that the prisoners of the borough should be maintained in the county gaol on certain terms:—Held, that this act was not a special contract within the meaning of the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 98, s. 18, and that the local act, being inconsistent with the general enactment, was repealed by it, though not expressly mentioned. Bramston v. Colchester Corporation, 6 El. & Bl. 246; 25 L. J., M. C. 73; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 809; 4 W. R. 401.

Harbours Act.]—The 19 Geo. 2, c. 22, s. 1, which imposed a penalty for the offence of throwing ballast into navigable rivers, is repealed impliedly by the Harbours Act, 1814 (54 Geo. 3, c. 159, s. 11), which provides a different punishment for the same offence, and prescribes a different mode of procedure. Mitchell v. Brown, 1 El. & El. 267; 28 L. J., M. C. 53; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 707; 7 W. R. 80.

c. Repeal of Special by General.

General Rule.]—Where an act of parliament dealing in a special way with a particular subject-matter is followed by a general act dealing in a general way with the subject of the previous legislation, general words in the general act are not to be held as repealing the prior special legislation, unless the general act contains some reference to the special legislation, or unless the general act cannot be given effect to without such a repeal. Smith, In re, Clements v. Ward, 56 L. J., Ch. 726; 35 Ch. D. 589; 56 L. T. 850; 35 W. R. 514; 51 J. P. 692.

It does not necessarily follow that a previous special act is to remain standing, notwithstanding the general provisions of a subsequent general act, if it is found on the consideration of the act or acts that such is not the intention of the legislature. Williams, In re, Jones v. Williams, 57 L. J., Ch. 264; 36 Ch. D. 573; 57 L. T. 756; 36 W. R. 34.

Where there are general words in a later act capable of reasonable and sensible application without extending them to subjects specially dealt with by earlier legislation, you are not to hold that earlier and special legislation to be indirectly repealed, altered, or derogated from, merely by force of such general words, without any indication of a particular intention to do so. Seward v. The Vera Cruz, 54 L. J., P. 9; 10 App. Cas. 68; 52 L. T. 474; 33 W. R. 477; 5 Asp. M. C. 386—per Selborne, L.C.

The principle to be applied to the construction of acts is, that a general act is not to be construed to repeal a previous particular act, unless there is some express reference to the previous legislation on the subject, or unless the two acts are necessarily inconsistent. Thorpe v. Adams, 40 L. J., M. C. 52; L. R. 6 C. P. 125; 23 L. T. 810; 19 W. R. 352. S. P., Reg. v. Champneys, 40 L. J., C. P. 95; L. R. 6 C. P. 384, 394; 24 L. T. 181; 19 W. R. 386.

If a statute professes merely to repeal a former statute of limited operation, and to re-enact its provisions in an amended form, an intention to extend the operation of its provisions to classes of persons not previously subject to them is not to be presumed as a necessary inference, unless the intention to the contrary is clearly shewn. Brown v. McLachlan, 9 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 384; 42 L. J., P. C. 18; L. R. 4 P. C. 543; 21 W. R. 277.

A general enactment in a later statute does not repeal a particular enactment in an earlier statute, unless the intention to do so is manifest, or the implication is irresistible. Thames Conservators v. Hall, 37 L. J., C. P. 163; L. R. 3 C. P. 415; 18 L. T. 361; 16 W. R. 971.

It is now well settled, that a general enactment of a later act cannot repeal a specific enactment in an earlier act merely by implication. Gard v. Commissioners of Sewers, 49 L. T. 327.

Repeal of Private Act by Public Act.]—A local act is not, in the absence of any indication of intention to the contrary, repealed by a subsequent public general act. Fitzgerald v. Champneys, 2 Johns. & H. 31; 30 L. J., Ch. 777; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1006; 9 W. R. 850. S. P., Parnell v. Wolverhampton Waterworks Co., 10 C. B. (N.S.) 576; 4 L. T. 513.

The rule of construction, that a general act does not repeal or affect a prior special act without express words of reference, applies to church building acts. Ib.

The insertion in a general act of a saving clause, providing that the act shall not apply to a special case which had previously been regulated by a special act not otherwise referred to, will not prevent the application of the above rule of construction. Ib.

A clause in a private act which is quite inconsistent with a clause in a subsequent public act dealing with the same subject is thereby repealed. Great Central Gas Consumers' Co. v. Clarke, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 838; 32 L. J., C. P. 41; 11 W. R. 123—Ex. Ch.

A gas company was by its act of incorporation restricted to a charge of 4*s.* per 1,000 cubic feet. By a subsequent public act (23 & 24 Vict. c. 125) for the supply of gas to the metropolis, an increased standard of purity and illuminating power was required by the companies electing to adopt the provisions of that act as to force, purity and illuminating power, and an increased charge to be made by them:—Held, that the company was no longer subject to the restriction as to force contained in its private act. Ib.

Where a railway company has taken land under a private act passed before 1845, a subsequent act dealing with the same railway, and incorporating the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, does not alter the contract entered into under the earlier act without express words to that effect in the later act. G. W. Ry. v. Cefn Cribbwr Brick Co., 63 L. J., Ch. 500; [1894] 2 Ch. 157; 8 R. 178; 70 L. T. 279; 42 W. R. 493.

Where special legislation provides specific procedure it would seem that such special legislation would not be repealed by subsequent general legislation as to procedure. East London Ry., In re, Oliver's Claim, 24 Q. B. D. 507; 63 L. T. 147; 38 W. R. 312—per Fry, L.J.

d. Repeal of General by Special.

Inconsistency between General and Special Acts.]—If there is an inconsistency between the general act and a subsequent special act the latter must prevail. Yarmouth Corporation v. Simmons, 47 L. J., Ch. 792; 10 Ch. D. 518; 38 L. T. 881; 26 W. R. 802.

A later special act impliedly repeals a former general act when they cannot be read together so as to harmonise. City and South London Ry. v. London County Council, 60 L. J., M. C. 149; [1891] 2 Q. B. 513; 65 L. T. 362; 40 W. R. 166; 56 J. P. 6—C. A. S. P., London County Council v. London School Board, [1892] 2 Q. B. 606; 40 W. R. 604; 56 J. P. 791.

A section in a private act cannot by implication repeal a provision of the common law, or of a public statute. The Clan Gordon, 7 P. D. 190; 46 L. T. 490; 30 W. R. 691; 1 Asp. M. C. 513.

A public general statute held to have been impliedly repealed, pro tanto, by a subsequent affirmative, but inconsistent, local and personal act. Kelly, Ex parte, Ir. R. 9 C. L. 114.

By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 85, s. 6, all withs and partitions between any chimney or flue, which at any time after the passing of this act shall be built or re-built, shall be of brick or stone, and at least equal to half a brick in thickness. By the Huddersfield Improvement Act, 1871, Local and Personal, s. 111, the chimneys and flues of every new building shall be constructed in such a mode and of such materials and dimensions as shall from time to time be determined on and approved by the corporation. A master builder built a chimney having a partition of stone slate of less than half a brick in thickness, and was convicted of so doing contrary to the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 85, s. 6, but he had submitted a plan and detailed section of the building to the corporation, in accordance with which it was built, under s. 103 of the local act, and such plans had been approved by them:—Held, that there was not such a contrariety between the two acts as to make the subsequent local act repeal by implication the prior general statute so as to enable the corporation to dispense with the requirements of the former statute; and the conviction was held good. Hill v. Hall, 45 L. J., M. C. 153; 1 Ex. D. 411; 35 L. T. 860.

Where the legislature has vested special powers in a particular body for special purposes, a general act subsequently passed will not override those special powers. London and Blackwall Ry. v. Limehouse District Board of Works, 3 Kay & J. 123; 26 L. J., Ch. 164.

e. Effect of Repeal.

General Effect of Repeal.]—In order to ascertain the effect of a repealing statute the repealed words must be looked at. Where in any statute special words are followed by general words, any subject-matter which is aptly described by the special words comes within the purview of the statute by force of the special words, and not of the general words. If, therefore, the special words are repealed, the subject-matter ceases to be within the purview of the statute, though aptly described by the general words in the absence of the special words. Att.-Gen. v. Lamplough, 47 L. J., Ex. 555; 3 Ex. D. 214; 38 L. T. 87; 26 W. R. 323—C. A.

No proceedings can be pursued under a repealed statute, though commenced before the repeal, unless by special exception. Miller's Case, 3 Wils. 420; 1 W. Bl. 451.

An act from its passing repealed a former act which ousted clergy from a certain offence, and imposed a new punishment on the same offence from and after its passing:—Held, that an offence committed before the passing of the new act, but not tried till after, was not liable to be punished under either of these statutes. Rex v. M'Kenzie, R. & R. C. C. 429.

Where an act directs a mode of procedure to be adopted as contained in a former act, the repeal of such act does not operate to repeal the procedure directed, which is to be considered as incorporated in the latter act. Reg. v. Stock, 3 N. & P. 420; 8 A. & E. 405.

Effect of the repeal of a statute which modified a former statute considered. Glaholm v. Barker, 35 L. J., Ch. 259; L. R. 1 Ch. 223; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 82; 13 L. T. 653; 14 W. R. 296.

Observations upon the repealing effect of subsequent statutes. London and Blackwall Ry. v. District Board of Works, 3 Kay & J. 123; 26 L. J., Ch. 164; 5 W. R. 64.

Repealed Act to be considered as if never passed.]—Where an act or part of an act is repealed, it must, except as to transactions which are past and closed, be considered as if it had never existed. Griswood, Ex parte, 4 De G. & J. 544; 28 L. J., Ch. 769; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1191.

After a statute has been repealed it cannot be acted upon in respect of a proceeding under it commenced before its repeal, and in this respect there is no valid distinction between matters of form and substance. Where, therefore, between the finding of an indictment for nonrepair of a road and plea pleaded, the statute alone upon which the indictment could be supported was repealed, and afterwards the indictment was proceeded with and a conviction obtained, the court arrested the judgment. Reg. v. Denton, 18 Q. B. 761; Dears. C. C. 3; 21 L. J., M. C. 207; 17 Jur. 453.

Costs of Action where Right already Vested.]—The repeal of a statute does not, without express words, take away the power of the courts to make an order for costs of an action to which a right has already vested under the repealed statute. Restall v. L. & S. W. Ry., 37 L. J., Ex. 89; L. R. 3 Ex. 141; 18 L. T. 331; 16 W. R. 872.

Liability for Trespass for Acting under Jurisdiction given by Repealed Statute.]—A local act prohibited the exposing for sale of goods on the footway of a street, under a penalty of 10*s.*, and, by one of the sections, the justices had a summary jurisdiction to enforce the payment of the penalty. By a subsequent act, entitled "An act to amend and enlarge the former act," the section in the first act creating the offence was repealed and re-enacted, with this difference, that the penalty was made 20*s.* instead of 10*s.* There was no clause in the last act as to the mode in which the penalty should be enforced:—Held, that as the first act was repealed by the second, the justices, having granted a distress warrant for the purpose of enforcing payment of a penalty imposed by the latter act, were liable to an action of trespass. Ward v. Stevenson, 1 New Sess. Cas. 162.

Where a road had been presented by a magistrate, under 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 24, and the presentment was removed by certiorari after trial, but before judgment, that statute was repealed by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 1:—Held, that the court could not give judgment for the Crown, as the proceedings were founded on the presentment which was no longer valid. Reg. v. Mawgan, 3 N. & P. 502; 8 A. & E. 496; 7 L. J., M. C. 98.

12 & 13 Vict. c. 109, s. 44 (repealed), required the name and address of any person, party to an action, suit or proceeding now pending on the common law side of the court of chancery, or their attorney, to be entered in a book kept in the petty bag office. This act repealed 11 & 12 Vict. c. 94, s. 39, which was similar to 12 & 13 Vict. c. 109, s. 44:—Held, that a compliance with the provision of the repealed act was a compliance with the new statute, and that a second entry of the name and address was not necessary. Baddely v. Denton, 1 L. M. & P. 172.

Not to affect Right acquired—Effect of s. 38 of Interpretation Act, 1889.]—Sect. 38 of the Interpretation Act, 1889, provides that unless the contrary intention appears the repeal of a statute shall not affect any right acquired:—Held, that the power of a bankrupt to apply for his discharge was a right acquired, and therefore a bankrupt adjudicated under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, was entitled to his discharge under a repealed section in that act. Raison, Ex parte, Raison, In re, 60 L. J., Q. B. 206; 63 L. T. 709; 39 W. R. 271; 8 Morrell, 11.

When a repealing statute saves all rights accrued, the effect is not to leave it open to any one who could have taken advantage of any of the repealed enactments still to take advantage of them. Abbott v. Minister for Lands, 64 L. J., P. C. 167; [1895] A. C. 425; 11 R. 466; 72 L. T. 402—P. C.

Repeal "except as to acts done under them."]—A proviso in a repealing statute, that the repealed statutes shall be repealed, "except as to acts done under them," will operate to preserve to parties sued for acts alleged to have been done under colour of the powers of the repealed statutes a protection which those statutes conferred upon persons sued for such acts, at all events, if the action is brought before the repealing statute passes. Foster v. Pritchard, 2 H. & N. 151; 26 L. J., Ex. 215; 5 W. R. 610.

Qualified Repealing Section considered.]—It has been urged that the power to order service out of the jurisdiction which was conferred by the acts 2 Will. 4, c. 33, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 84, is still subsisting, notwithstanding the repeal of those acts, and no doubt the act 46 & 47 Vict. c. 49, and each of the repealing acts, contain a saving clause, which provides that the repeal is not to affect any jurisdiction established by any enactment repealed by the act. But where, as here, we have a code of rules providing for service out of the jurisdiction, I think it would be wrong to hold that by virtue of this saving clause a further jurisdiction exists under a statute which has been repealed. Busfield, In re, Whaley v. Busfield, 55 L. J., Ch. 467; 32 Ch. D. 123; 54 L. T. 220; 34 W. R. 372—per Cotton, L.J.

Qualification of Statute Law Revision Act considered.]—I should like to refer to the great difficulty of interpreting what, if any, limitation can be put upon sub-s. (b) of s. 5 of the Statute Law Revision Act, 1883. I have never been able to attach any definite meaning to that section. It is almost wide enough to preserve everything intended to be swept away by the act. Its professed object is to pave the way to a revised edition of the statutes in force, and to eliminate obsolete statutes; yet, by this sub-section, jurisdiction, rights and liabilities are preserved for which reference must be made to numerous old statutes, while by ss. 7 and 8 powers are given and provisions enacted which are expressly stated to be interpreted according to the provisions in the sections of the three Common Law Procedure Acts, 1852, 1854, and 1860; yet these are professed to be specifically repealed in the schedule of the act. Winfield v. Boothroyd, 54 L. T. 574; 34 W. R. 501.

The preamble of the Betting Act, 1853, has been repealed by the Statute Law Revision Act, 1892, by which it is provided that such preamble may be omitted from any revised edition of the statutes; but the same act provides (s. 1) that the repeal shall not affect the operation or construction of the statute; and it is therefore legitimately to be referred to as affording information of the circumstances under which the act came to be passed, and in so far as it directly throws light upon the question of the object which the legislature had in view. Hawke v. Dunn, 66 L. J., Q. B. 364; [1897] Q. B. 579; 76 L. T. 355; 45 W. R. 359; 61 J. P. 292.

Consolidation of Repealed Statutes.]—An act repealed existing statutes and gave certain powers "in terms of the said recited acts," which were the repealed statutes:—Held, that this phrase incorporated the provisions of the repealed statutes and consolidated them. Blantyre (Lord) v. Clyde Navigation Trustees, 6 App. Cas. 273—H. L. (Sc.)

Repeal of Act—Revivor—Right of Way—Closure by Act of Parliament.]—When an act of parliament, originally passed for twenty-one years and subsequently extended, closes an old public bridle-road and vests the soil thereof in the owners, who have given land for making a new road, which the act authorises to be made, the repeal of this act does not revive any public right of way over the old bridle-road, inasmuch as the closing thereof is a matter passed and closed under the repealed act. Gwynne v. Drewitt, 63 L. J., Ch. 870; [1894] 2 Ch. 616; 8 R. 814; 71 L. T. 190; 43 W. R. 551.

Practice under Repealed Statutes.]—On a motion to strike out a plea to a return to a writ of mandamus it was contended that, because the statutes which allowed a plea in any case had been repealed, and because the rules of 1883 did not provide for the case of a plea to a return of the kind, therefore the practice which existed under those statutes was no longer in operation. By Ord. LXVIII. r. 1, and by Ord. LXXII. r. 2, nothing in these rules is to affect the procedure or practice in proceedings on the crown side of the Queen's Bench Division:—Held, that the practice prevailing at the time the rules came into operation still existed, and therefore the plea which was in accordance with the repealed statutes must stand. Reg. v. Staffordshire JJ., or Pirehill North JJ., 54 L. J., M. C. 17; 14 Q. B. D. 13; 51 L. T. 534; 33 W. R. 205—C. A.

Repeal — Unlawful Acts not conferring Rights.]—Though the general rule of law is that when a statute is absolutely repealed, it is to be treated as if it had not been passed, an act, or series of acts, done during its continuance, which were by it rendered unlawful, cannot confer rights as if they had not been thereby prohibited, and until a user becomes lawful it remains inoperative, and the required period of enjoyment commences to run from the time the act is repealed. Traill v. McAllister, 25 L. R., Ir. 524.

4. CONTINUANCE OF TEMPORARY ACTS.

Effect of.]—A temporary act, when made perpetual by a subsequent act, is in effect perpetual ab initio. Rex v. Swiney, 1 Alc. & Nap. 139.

The legislature, in continuing a statute, is not bound to use any particular form of words. Rex v. Longmead, 2 Leach, C. C. 794.

A local act, entitled "An act for amending the roads and highways in the Isle of Wight," contained provisions other than related to turnpikes, but clauses, also, enabling the commissioners appointed under the act to raise money upon the security of tolls. The 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 10, and other subsequent statutes, continued "all and every act for making, amending and repairing any turnpike roads in Great Britain, which will expire," &c.:—Held, that the local act was thereby continued. Barnes v. White, 1 C. B. 192; 14 L. J., M. C. 65; 9 Jur. 182.

39 Geo. 3, c. 79, s. 15, declared certain places to be disorderly places, within 36 Geo. 3, c. 8, and then enacted penalties with regard to them:—Held, that these penalties might be enforced, although the 36 Geo. 3, c. 8, which was to continue in force for a limited time, had expired. Higginbotham, Ex parte, 9 D. P. C. 200.

G. EXERCISE OF STATUTORY POWERS.

1. GENERAL RULES.

Limits of Special Powers.]—Where persons have special powers conferred on them by parliament for effecting a particular purpose, they cannot be allowed to exercise those powers for any purpose of a collateral kind. Galloway v. London Corporation, 35 L. J., Ch. 477; L. R. 1 H. L. 34; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 747; 14 L. T. 865.

When a statute prohibits, under a penalty, any person from agreeing to pay certain expenses, an agreement to pay such expenses is invalid, and no action is maintainable upon it, although the statute does not expressly prohibit the other party obtaining the funds to carry its declared objects into effect, and, in order to effect them, it must not exceed the limits of its powers. Ib.

A company authorised (making due compensation) to take compulsorily the lands of any person for a definite object may be restrained by injunction from any attempt to take them for another object. Ib.

Where the legislature has conceded power to a body of adventurers for a certain purpose (as, for example, the formation of a railway), such a body must shew some ground for the concession, and the legislature has no concern with its means for obtaining the funds to carry its declared objects into effect, and in order to effect them it must not exceed the limits of its powers. But the case is different where an existing public body, such as the corporation of a city, is entrusted by the legislature with the duty of making public improvements in its city, and the powers thus entrusted to it for such a purpose will not be subject, as in the other case, to a strict and restrictive construction. Ib.

Things not Authorised Prohibited.]—Ashbury Ry. v. Riche (L. R. 7 H. L. 653) appears to me to decide this, at all events, that where there is an act of parliament creating a corporation for a particular purpose, and giving it powers for that particular purpose, what it does not expressly or impliedly authorise is to be taken to be prohibited. Att.-Gen. v. G. E. Ry., 5 App. Cas., at p. 481—per Lord Blackburn.

Effect of subsequent Act.]—Whenever the legislature has, by a special act, conferred powers upon a corporation or a body of commissioners for an object of public benefit, those powers are not affected by a subsequent statute giving to other persons, for another public purpose, inconsistent powers, in terms which, from their generality, would seem to overrule the powers given by the former act. London and Blackwall Ry. v. Limehouse District Board of Works, 3 Kay & J. 123; 26 L. J., Ch. 164; 5 W. R. 64.

Power to Public Body—Extent of.]—Where the legislature gives power to a public body to do anything of a public character, the legislature means also to give to the public body all rights without which the power would become wholly unavailable, although such a meaning cannot be implied in relation to circumstances arising accidentally only. Dudley Corporation, In re, 51 L. J., Q. B. 124; 8 Q. B. D. 93; 45 L. T. 734; 46 J. P. 340—per Brett, L.J.

If there are two possible constructions, we ought, I think, to adopt that construction which is based on the theory that the legislature only gave such powers as were necessary to enable the local authority to carry out the objects of the statute, and we ought not to presume that the legislature intended to confer upon the local authority any larger powers than were necessary. Wandsworth Board of Works v. United Telephone Co., 53 L. J., Q. B. 457; 13 Q. B. D. 904; 51 L. T. 148; 32 W. R. 776; 48 J. P. 676—per Bowen, L.J.

A power to borrow money from the Public Works Loan Commissioners for the purpose of repairing churches must be exercised in exact accordance with the authority given, and the restrictions imposed, by the act itself. Reg. v. All Saints', Wigan, Overseers, 1 App. Cas. 611; 35 L. T. 381; 25 W. R. 128.

Ministerial or Judicial Act—Duty imposed by Statute.]—When a public duty is imposed by act of parliament upon a body of persons, which duty consists in the exercise of a discretion, it cannot be said that the exercise of that discretion is a merely ministerial act. If the act cannot be considered to be merely ministerial, it must be considered as judicial. Partridge v. Medical Council, 59 L. J., Q. B. 475; 25 Q. B. D. 90; 62 L. T. 787; 38 W. R. 729; 55 J. P. 4—per Esher (Lord), M.R.

Two Statutes—Acting under which presumed.]—Where a public body may have acted under two statutes, one of which increases its liability, and there is no evidence to shew under which statute it did act, the presumption is that it acted in pursuance of that statute under which its liability was not increased. Burton v. Salford Corporation, 52 L. J., Q. B. 668; 11 Q. B. D. 286; 49 L. T. 43; 31 W. R. 815.

Authority to Execute Works—Extent of.]—Where an act of parliament authorises the execution of certain works, that authority includes everything reasonably necessary for the execution of the works. Harrison v. Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co., 60 L. J., Ch. 630; [1891] 2 Ch. 409; 64 L. T. 864.

In construing statutes creating bodies corporate the legislature must be considered, unless the contrary appears, to intend that the corporate body shall have the same duties and liabilities as are imposed by the general law upon private persons doing the same things. Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v. Penhallow. Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v. Gibbs, 11 H. L. Cas. 686; 35 L. J., Ex. 225; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 571; 14 L. T. 677; 14 W. R. 872.

Exercise of—Injunction.]—When the promoters of a public undertaking have authority from parliament to interfere with private property on certain terms, any person whose property is interfered with by virtue of that authority has a right to require that the promoters shall comply with the letter of the enactment so far as it makes provision on his behalf. Nor can any court remodel arrangements sanctioned, or relax conditions imposed by act of parliament. Herron v. Rathmines Commissioners, [1892] A. C. 498; 67 L. T. 658—H. L. (Ir.)

Persons obtaining from the legislature power to interfere with the rights of property are bound strictly to adhere to the powers so conceded to them, to do no more than the legislature has sanctioned, and to proceed only in the mode which the legislature has pointed out; but (except in a proceeding at the instance of the attorney-general) any one seeking the assistance of a court of equity to restrain the violation of such a contract with the legislature is bound to shew that he has a private interest in the matter. Liverpool Corporation v. Chorley Waterworks Co., 2 De G. M. & G. 852.

Does not necessarily affect previously existing Right.]—An affirmative statute, giving a new right, does not of itself and necessarily destroy a previously existing right, created by another statute to which it does not refer; but will do so, if it appears to have been the intention of the legislature that the two rights should not exist together. O'Flaherty v. M'Dowell, 6 H. L. Cas. 142; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 33.

—— Or Rights of other Persons.]—Where an act empowers persons to deal with their own property, or with property in a place or district or defined by a description, and does not by express words, or by necessary implication, import that the legislature intended to affect the rights of other persons in other property, courts of law do not construe mere general words in the act as affecting the rights of strangers as to property not within the description of that with which the act expressly purports to deal. Dawson v. Paver, 5 Hare, 415; 16 L. J., Ch. 274; 11 Jur. 766.

When persons having, as a class, certain privileges, are by statute subjected to certain liabilities their privileges being expressly reserved to them, and other persons having the same privileges are afterwards, as a class, subjected to the same liabilities, but nothing is said of their privileges, these privileges shall continue to exist. Newcastle (Duke) v. Morris, 40 L. J., Bk. 4; L. R. 4 H. L. 661; 23 L. T. 569; 19 W. R. 26.

When commissioners appointed by a private act are authorised to do all things necessary for carrying out the object of the act, that will not give them authority to apply to parliament for a further act, so as to allow their applying funds raised for the purposes of the first act in discharging the expenses of obtaining the second act. Att.-Gen. v. West Hartlepool Improvement Commissioners, 39 L. J., Ch. 624; L. R. 10 Eq. 152; 18 W. R. 685.

Heads of agreement for a lease were sanctioned by majorities of three-fifths at meetings of two companies without any certificate of the board of trade being obtained, and were acted upon for several years, but no formal lease, or agreement for a lease, was ever executed. The heads of agreement were also invalid as providing for payment of the rent out of profits not so applicable:—Held, that the arrangement was not ratified by reference to it in subsequent local and personal acts of parliament not expressing any direct intention to confirm it. Kent Coast Ry. v. L., C., & D. Ry., L. R. 3 Ch. 656; 19 L. T. 174; 16 W. R. 1027.

Effect of the subsequent acts of parliament not being retrospective, and not altering the effect of a previous bargain and conveyance. Caledonian Ry. v. Sprot, 2 Macq. H. L. 449; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 623.

Persons authorised by act of parliament to cut a canal, and required to appropriate certain sums for the construction and maintenance of works to protect a harbour in which the canal was intended to terminate, not restrained from cutting through their own lands, at a distance from the harbour, in the event of a present insufficiency of funds for the completion of the undertaking, pending an application to parliament for further powers to levy money. King's Lynn Corporation v. Pemberton, 1 Swanst. 244; 18 R. R. 62.

But persons authorised by act of parliament to cut canal, if their funds are insufficient for completion of undertaking, may, on the prompt application of the owner of lands through which they are cutting, be restrained from proceeding. Id. 250.

Acts which might be carried out without Purchasing Lands—Onus of Proof as to Ownership of Lands.]—Provisions in different acts of parliament appointed conservators of a river navigation and gave them full powers to do what was necessary for carrying the object of the acts into effect, including powers to purchase land and levy tolls. The conservators executed the powers of the acts so far as related to the improvement of the river navigation, and the making of towing-paths, and they levied tolls. There was no evidence that they had actually purchased any of the land that lay along the course of the navigation, and had been used to form the towing-paths:—Held, that, as the acts might be carried into effect without purchasing, the burden of proof lay on the conservators to shew that they had purchased; and since they had failed to shew it, though they were entitled to an injunction to prevent any owner of adjoining land from so using the towing-paths as to obstruct in any way their free use for the purposes of the navigation, they were not entitled to be treated as owners of the soil of the towing-paths. Lee Navigation Conservators v. Button, 51 L. J., Ch. 17; 6 App. Cas. 685; 45 L. T. 385; 30 W. R. 233; 46 J. P. 164—H. L. (E.)

A railway company was empowered by its special act to widen a branch of the railway passing through London, and to build additional stations. In conformity with the powers so given, the company proceeded to erect a station on its land by the side of a highway, within the distance required to be left between buildings and highways in London by the Metropolis Management Act, which had passed shortly after the special act of the company:—Held, that the powers conferred on the company by their special act were not controlled by the latter statute, and that the company was authorised so to build their station. London and Blackwall Ry. v. Limehouse Board of Works, 26 L. J., Ch. 166.

By a statute passed prior to the special act, the trustees of the particular highway had power to prevent any building being erected so near to the road as the station was being built. The Metropolis Management Act repealed this statute, and vested this authority in the managing body thereby constituted:—Held, that the trustees of the road must be taken to have been present at the passing of the special act, as well as of the Metropolis Act, and, therefore, the powers given by the Railway Act must prevail. Ib.

Giving Rights in alieno solo.]—The rights thus conferred are, as regards the landowner, of a very onerous nature, and being thus exercised in alieno solo, must, in my opinion, be construed strictly, and must be carried no further than the language of the act declaring the custom expressly warrants. Wake v. Redfearn, 43 L. T. 123, 126; 44 J. P. 681—per Cockburn, C.J.

When Power Exhausted or Extinguished.]—An agreement was entered into between two water companies, by which company A. should take over the works, provide for a mortgage debt, and pay interest upon the shares of company B. This agreement was sanctioned by act of parliament, and the transaction was carried into effect by a deed of January, 1857, which provided that if company A. (or their intended assignees, the corporation or local board of health), being desirous of becoming the absolute and unrestricted owners of the works of company B., subject only to the mortgage debt, should, "on or before any 25th December, after having given to company B. six months' previous notice of their desire to avail themselves of the option thereby given, pay unto the company B." 46,246*l.*, the amount of their share capital, the party so paying should become absolutely entitled to the works. In June, 1870, the corporation, who had acquired the interest of company A., gave notice to company B. of their intention to pay this sum on the 25th of December following, but they were unable for want of funds to carry out the purchase. In June, 1871, they again gave notice that they would pay the money on the 25th of December, 1871:—Held, that the corporation, by giving the first notice and failing to act upon it, had not lost the right given to them by the deed of January, 1857, of purchasing, after six months' notice, on or before any 25th day of December. Ward v. Wolverhampton Waterworks Co., 41 L. J., Ch. 308; L. R. 13 Eq. 243; 25 L. T. 487; 20 W. R. 85.

When powers to make certain works are granted by act of parliament, they can only be exercised once and for all, and the grantees have no power afterwards to enlarge such works. Taylor v. St. Helens (Corporation), 46 L. J., Ch. 857; 6 Ch. D. 264; 37 L. T. 253; 25 W. R. 885.

2. AUTHORISATION OF NUISANCE.

Statutory Powers when a Justification for a Nuisance.]—If the legislature prescribe that a public body shall provide hospital accommodation, no injunction could issue, provided it were proved that the directions of the act could not be complied with at all without creating a nuisance. And if a position has not been specified in the act for the hospital, the onus of proof that the creation of a nuisance will be the inevitable result lies on the persons seeking to justify the nuisance. The justification depends on their making good these two propositions, (1) that such are the imperative orders of the legislature, and (2) that they cannot possibly obey those orders without infringing private rights. Metropolitan Asylum District Managers v. Hill, 50 L. J., Q. B. 353; 6 App. Cas. 208; 44 L. T. 653; 29 W. R. 617; 45 J. P. 664—H. L. (E.)—per Watson (Lord).

Primâ facie nobody is authorised to commit a nuisance under an act of parliament, unless it appears from express words or by necessary implication that the act was to be done or might be done notwithstanding its tending to the creation of a nuisance. Vernon v. St. James (Vestry), 50 L. J., Ch. 81; 16 Ch. D. 466; 44 L. T. 229; 29 W. R. 222—C. A.

Statutory powers, although granted for the public benefit, are only co-extensive with the power to exercise them without an infringement of the general law. Where the exercise of such powers is not compulsory upon those to whom they were granted, and new and unforeseen circumstances subsequently arise which render the exercise of them a nuisance, an indictment lies in respect thereof. Reg. v. Bradford Navigation Co., 6 B. & S. 631; 34 L. J., Q. B. 191; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 769; 13 W. R. 892.

Railways Station Yard for Cattle Traffic.]—A railway company were by their act authorised to carry cattle, and also to purchase by agreement (in addition to the lands which they were empowered to purchase compulsorily) any lands, not exceeding in the whole fifty acres, in such places as should be deemed eligible for the purpose of providing additional stations, yards, and other conveniences for receiving, loading, or keeping any cattle, goods, or things conveyed or intended to be conveyed by the railway, or for making convenient roads or ways thereto, or for any other purposes connected with the undertaking which the company should judge requisite. The company were also empowered to sell such additional lands, and to purchase in lieu thereof other lands which they should deem more eligible for the aforesaid purposes, and so on from time to time. The act contained no provision for compensation in respect of lands so purchased by agreement. Under this power the company, some years after the expiration of the compulsory powers, bought land adjoining one of their stations, and used it as a yard or dock for their cattle traffic. To the occupiers of houses near the station, the noise of the cattle and drovers was a nuisance which, but for the act, would have been actionable. There was no negligence in the mode in which the company conducted the business:—Held, that the purpose for which the land was acquired being expressly authorised by the act, and being incidental and necessary to the authorised use of the railway for the cattle traffic, the company were authorised to do what they did, and were not bound to choose a site more convenient to other persons; and that the adjoining occupiers were not entitled to an injunction to restrain the company. Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill (6 App. Cas. 193) distinguished. L., B. & S. C. Ry. v. Truman, 55 L. J., Ch. 354; 11 App. Cas. 45; 54 L. T. 250; 34 W. R. 657; 50 J. P. 388—H. L. (E.)

Tramway Company—Smell from Stables of.]—The defendants had statutory powers to lay down certain tramway lines, "with all proper works and conveniences connected therewith," but had no statutory power to purchase land or to construct stabling. The defendants bought some land near the plaintiff's premises, and erected thereon a large block of stables, which occasioned offensive smells and constituted a nuisance to the plaintiff:—Held, that the defendants had no statutory authority to commit the nuisance complained of, and the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction. The fact that the defendants had taken all reasonable care to prevent a nuisance was therefore no legal excuse. Rapier v. London Tramways Co., 63 L. J., Ch. 36; [1893] 2 Ch. 588; 2 R. 448; 69 L. T. 361—C. A.

Electrical Current.] — Where a nuisance is created by a body acting under statutory powers it is protected from liability for damages so far as such powers extend. National Telephone Co. v. Baker, 62 L. J., Ch. 699; [1893] 2 Ch. 186; 3 R. 318; 68 L. T. 283; 57 J. P. 373.

There is no express or implied provision in the Electric Lighting Act, 1882, which relieves a company formed thereunder from liability to an action for a nuisance committed in the execution of the powers of the act. National Telephone Co. v. Baker (3 R. 318) supra, distinguished. Mouse's Brewery Co. v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., 8 R. 823; 70 L. T. 762; 42 W. R. 644. Varied 12 R. 441; 43 W. R. 238—C. A.

Sewer.]—The town of H. having been drained for a long time into a river, the company obtained a local act to make a sewer and intercept the sewage and purify it and then discharge the effluent water into the river; all inhabitants of H. being at the same time prohibited from draining direct into the river. The act provided that the N. company should not discharge sewage water into the river until after being purified by the best known process:—Held, that the statutory provisions superseded all common law rights, that the N. company were entitled to discharge the effluent water after being purified by the best process, and that no action lay against the N. company for polluting the river, though the process was still imperfect. Lea Conservancy Board v. Hertford Corporation, 1 C. & E. 299; 48 J. P. 628.

Non-Liability for Damage where the Inevitable Result of Compliance with the Statute.]—The defendants, under the powers conferred upon them by the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 12), ss. 135, 136, constructed, and properly constructed, a sewer having its outfall at Deptford Creek, a little above the plaintiff's coal wharf, with water-gates, which it was the duty of the person in charge of them to open when the water within them became eight feet deep,—a depth which was reached only in heavy rainfalls. On the 29th of August, 1879, there was an exceptionally heavy rainfall, and it became necessary to open the water-gates to prevent a large district from being flooded. This having been done and the rain increasing in violence, the rush of water from the sewer carried away a portion of the plaintiff's wharf, with a barge moored thereto, and a quantity of coals deposited therein and thereon:—Held, that the injury complained of was occasioned by the opening of the water-gates, and not by the act of God, and therefore the defendants were primâ facie liable for the damage done, within the principle of Rylands v. Fletcher (L. R. 3 H. L. 330); but that, as they were a public body acting in the discharge of a public duty, and as that which happened was only the inevitable result of what parliament had authorised them to do, they were not liable. Dixon v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 50 L. J., Q. B. 772; 7 Q. B. D. 418; 45 L. T. 312; 30 W. R. 83; 46 J. P. 4—per Coleridge, C.J.

H. INTERFERENCE WITH CONTRACTS.

Different kinds of Acts.]—Distinctions between acts of parliament denying legal effect to instruments, as the Act for Inrolling Bargains and Sales, and the Registry Act, 7 Anne, c. 20, and acts declaring instruments void to all intents, as the Annuity and the Ship Registry acts; notwithstanding the former, the party is bound in equity by the contract. Davis v. Strathmore (Earl), 16 Ves. 428.

Part Interference.]—Where an equal agreement cannot, by reason of a subsequent act of parliament, or some other lawful impediment, be performed in the whole, yet the same shall be specifically executed in such part of it as remains lawful. Bettesworth v. St. Paul's (Dean), 1 Bro. P. C. 240.

Impairing Obligation of Person's Contract.]—It is a principle of law to avoid, if possible, a construction of a statute which would enable a person to defeat or impair the obligation of his own contract by his own act. Gowan v. Wright, 56 L. J., Q. B. 131; 18 Q. B. D. 201; 35 W. R. 297—C. A.

Purpose of Act must be considered.]—Clauses in statutes avoiding transactions or instruments are to be interpreted with reference to the purpose for which they are inserted, and, when open to question, are to receive a wide or a limited construction according as the one or the other will best effectuate the purpose of the statute. Byrne, Ex parte, Burdett, In re, 57 L. J., Q. B. 263; 20 Q. B. D. 314; 58 L. T. 708; 36 W. R. 345; 5 Morrell, 32—C. A.

Act in pursuance of Contract not made Actionable Wrong.]—A statute cannot make an act done in connection with a private contract an actionable wrong if it was not actionable independently of the statute. Ward v. Hobbs, 48 L. J., Q. B. 281; L. R. 4 App. Cas. 13; 40 L. T. 73; 27 W. R. 114.

Where a statute prohibited persons from sending animals affected with a contagious disease to market and inflicted penalties on any person so sending them, the act of sending them, if known to be so infected, was a public offence, but did not amount by implication to a representation that they were sound, and did not of itself raise, as between the vendor of the animals and the purchaser of them, any right on the part of the purchaser to claim damages in respect of an injury he had suffered in consequence of their purchase. Ib.

Contract Illegal by Statute, not made good by Repeal of Statute.]—A contract declared by a statute to be illegal is not made good by a subsequent repeal of the statute. Jacques v. Withey, 1 H. Bl. 65.

Recognition by Subsequent Act of Contract held Invalid under prior Act.]—Where a corporation, previously to an act giving them compulsory powers of taking land, entered into an agreement for the re-sale of certain lands if the act should (as it did) authorise them to be taken, it had been held that such agreement was invalid, as being an abuse of the powers conferred by parliament, and as fettering the discretion of the corporation as to the quantity of land necessary for the purposes of the act. Subsequently an act was passed, by which it was enacted that nothing therein contained should prejudice the rights under the agreement of the party taking under it, but that all its covenants and provisions should be as applicable to a purchase under that act as to a purchase under the act in contemplation of the passing of which the agreement was entered into :—Held, that by this act the legislature had recognised the agreement, and had removed the former objection to its validity. Galloway v. London Corporation, 35 L. J., Ch. 477 ; L. R. 1 H. L. 34 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 747 ; 14 L. T. 865.

Discharge by Act from Obligations of Covenant.]—Land was demised to trustees for a parish, they covenanting to build a workhouse thereon, and to possess and enjoy the premises, for the sole use, maintenance, and support of the poor of the parish, and not to convert the building or the land to any other use or purpose whatsoever. Proviso for re-entry on breach of the covenant. The house was built, and together with the land used agreeably to the covenant. Afterwards, under the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76 (Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834), the poor law commissioners incorporated the parish in a union, and removed all the paupers to the union. The workhouse became uninhabited, and was locked up, and the land was let at a rack-rent, which was applied in aid of the poor rates. On ejectment brought (three years afterwards) for breach of the covenant :—Held, that no breach of the covenant appeared ; but, semble, that a breach caused by the compulsory operation of the statute would have been thereby excused. Doe d. Anglesea (Lord) v. Rugeley Overseers, 6 Q. B. 107 ; 13 L. J., M. C. 137 ; 8 Jur. 615. S. P., Wynn v. Shropshire Union Railways and Canal Co., 5 Ex. 420.

A landowner who has covenanted in the usual form that neither he nor his assigns shall build upon his land, is discharged from his covenant, after selling the premises to a railway company under its compulsory powers, as the company becomes an assignee of the land, not by the voluntary act of the former owner, but by compulsion of law. Baily v. De Crespigny, 38 L. J., Q. B. 98 ; L. R. 4 Q. B. 180 ; 19 L. T. 681 ; 17 W. R. 494.

The defendant let the basement of a store to the plaintiff, and covenanted to keep the premises in proper repair and condition, so that the same might be available for storing cartridges, and for quiet enjoyment by the plaintiff. Other parts of the store were let to other persons for the storage of gunpowder. Soon afterwards the Explosives Act, 1875, was passed, making it illegal to store cartridges and gunpowder in the same store without a licence, under pain of forfeiture. On the act coming into operation the defendant removed the cartridges which the plaintiff had deposited in the store, and gave notice that he would inform the authorities if the plaintiff stored any more :—Held, that there had been a trespass, but no eviction by the defendant, and that there had been no breach of covenant by the defendant, the covenant to keep the demised premises in proper condition for storing cartridges only referring to physical condition, and there being no obligation on the defendant to procure a licence to make the storage legal notwithstanding the act. Newby v. Sharpe, 47 L. J., Ch. 617 ; 8 Ch. D. 39 ; 38 L. T. 583 ; 26 W. R. 685—C. A.

Act passed subsequently.]—A building agreement provided that A. should build houses on land within a specified time, and that on their completion B. would grant to A. leases of them, A. agreed to pay a specified rent to B. from the date of the agreement to the expiration of the leases. The houses were not built by the specified time, and before they were built, an act of parliament rendered their erection illegal :—Held, that A. was not relieved from his liability to pay the rent under the agreement. Gibbons v. Chambers, 1 Cab. & E. 577.

By an agreement between the N. local board and the C. local board, it was agreed that the N. board should make a sewer and allow the sewers of the C. district to drain into it, but the sewage of any other districts or places was not to be permitted by the C. board to pass into their sewers so as to discharge into the sewer to be made by the N. board. Under acts of parliament then in existence, the owner of premises beyond the limits of a district had power to make a sewer to communicate with the sewers of the district, and by an act subsequently passed similar powers were given :—Held, that the provisions of the agreement were overruled by the subsequent act, and that the N. board could not restrain the C. board and the owners of premises beyond their district from making sewers which would discharge into the sewer of the N. district :—Held, also, that the agreement must be taken to have been made subject to the provisions of the law then existing, under which the owners of premises beyond the C. district had similar powers. Newington Local Board v. Cottingham Local Board, 48 L. J., Ch. 226 ; 2 Ch. D. 725 ; 40 L. T. 58.

Indemnity unaffected by Act.]—The plaintiff gave a bond to the crown conditioned to be void if a certain railway was completed within a given time, and the defendants undertook to indemnify the plaintiff against all liability which he might incur in giving such bond. The railway was not completed, and the plaintiff, under the Railway Companies Act, 1867, which was passed after the giving of the bond, applied to the board of trade to authorise the abandonment of the railway and to cancel the bond, which was ordered upon condition that the money secured by it should be applied as assets of the company. The company was accordingly wound up, and the plaintiff paid, under an order of the court, a part of the money secured by the bond, which was then cancelled. The plaintiff brought an action to recover the amount so paid from the defendants on their undertaking to indemnify. On demurrer to the statement of claim :—Held, that the payment made by the plaintiff to obtain the cancelling of the bond was a liability incurred by him in giving the bond, for which the defendants were liable to indemnify him, although the Railway Companies Act, 1867, enabling the plaintiff to take proceedings to cancel the bond, was not passed when the indemnity was given. Webster v. Petre, 4 Ex. D. 127 ; 27 W. R. 662.

Generally, as to Infringement of Legal Rights.] —Where a person would have, at common law, a right of action grounded upon an interference with a given public right, when such interference had operated to his individual injury, if the public right is taken away by statute, and vested in a body of conservators to be exercised or controlled for a specified object, e.g. the benefit of trade and commerce, then, the right being thus resigned by the public, the individual right of action is lost also, and there can be no redress by action on account of any interference, duly authorised by such body, with private rights, of the nature of those to which the powers of the body relate. Kearns v. Cordwainers' Co., 6 C. B. (N.S.) 388 ; 28 L. J., C. P. 285 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1216.

By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, s. 1, articles of a convention between her majesty and the King of the French, for the guidance of the fishermen of the two countries in the seas between the British Islands and France, are to have the force of law. By the articles all transgressions of the regulations, and all disputes between the fishermen, are to be submitted to the exclusive jurisdiction of and settled by the tribunal or magistrates designated by law, which tribunal may summarily impose penalties for such transgressions, and award compensation to parties injured ; sect. 11 declares such tribunal in England to be any magistrate or justice of the peace having jurisdiction in the place in which, or in waters adjacent, to which the offence shall have been committed, or to which the offender shall be brought. Such magistrate may impose penalties, and award and enforce compensation to parties injured :—Held, that no action can be maintained for the breach of any article of the convention, or for damage caused by such breach, the remedy provided by the act being exclusive. Marshall v. Nicholls, 18 Q. B. 882 ; 21 L. J., Q. B. 343 ; 16 Jur. 1155.

An act of parliament empowered a company to make and maintain a canal, and provided that the owners of lands within the distance of twenty yards from the canal should make a communication by pipes, between the water therein and any steam-engine, and draw from the canal such quantities of water as should be sufficient to supply the engine with cold water, for the sole purpose of condensing the steam, and for working any such engine as aforesaid ; and for no other use or purpose ; and there was a proviso, that if any dispute should arise between the company and any person who should be desirous of taking water out of the canal for the purposes of any such engine, or who should be in the use of taking the same, such dispute should be finally settled by the commissioners appointed under the act. In an action the declaration alleged that the defendant, the owner of a steam-engine, who had laid down a pipe communicating with the canal, used the water which had been drawn off by means of the pipes, for other purposes than for condensing the steam, and more than was necessary for condensing :—Held, that the special power of adjudication conferred upon the commissioners did not take away the right of action. Rochdale Canal Co. v. King, 14 Q. B. 122 ; 18 L. J., Q. B. 293 ; 14 Jur. 16.

To an action by an incorporated company for calls, the defendant pleaded that the shares had been declared by the company to be forfeited :—Held, that the plea was bad, as the right of action and the power to forfeit shares on non-payment of calls conferred by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 16, were not alternative but cumulative remedies. G. N. Ry. v. Kennedy, 7 D. & L. 197 ; 4 Ex. 417. S. P., Inglis v. G. N. Ry., 1 Macq. H. L. 112 ; 16 Jur. 895.

A railway act enacted, that any penalty imposed thereby, the recovery of which was not otherwise provided for, might be recovered by summary proceeding, upon complaint before two or more justices :—Held, that this did not bar the party entitled from his remedy by action. Collinson v. Newcastle and Darlington Ry., 1 Car. & K. 546.

Action for obstruction by a railway company of a private right of way. No special damage was alleged. Plea, justifying under the private act of the company, and other acts therewith incorporated. Replication, that the way was a road within the Railways Clauses Act (8 & 9 Vict. c. 20), and that the company had interfered with the same within the meaning of that act : —Held, that 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20 takes away the common-law right of action for an interference under the powers of a railway company with a private right of way, except when special damage has been sustained. Watkins v. G. N. Ry., 16 Q. B. 961 ; 20 L. J., Q. B. 391.

Where a pecuniary obligation is created by a statute, and a remedy expressly given for enforcing it, that remedy must be adopted. St. Pancras Vestry v. Batterbury, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 477 ; 26 L. J., C. P. 243 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1106.

By an act, incorporating the Railways Clauses Act, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, and the Towns Clauses Act, 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, certain expenses incurred by the commissioners in paving streets might be recovered as damages. An action having been brought to recover expenses so incurred :—Held, that such action was not maintainable, for that the proper construction of the several acts was that the expenses were to be recovered as damages, upon a proceeding before justices. Blackburn Corporation v. Parkinson, 28 L. J., M. C. 7 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 572 ; 7 W. R. 11.

The 2 Geo. 1, c. 17 (Ir.), s. 4, requires a master to give a discharge (if required) to a servant on leaving his employment ; in case of refusal, s. 5 enables the servant to obtain a discharge from a magistrate :—Held, that the statutory remedy was exclusive. Handley v. Moffat, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 104 ; 21 W. R. 231.

A private enclosure act gave the commissioners power by their award to direct by whom and in what manner certain necessary drainage works were to be made and maintained. The commissioners having directed by their award that the expenses of the works should be paid by a rate to be levied and recovered by certain surveyors in the same manner as parish rates were by law recoverable in the parish :—Held, that the rate must be recovered by distress and not by action. Danby v. Watson, 46 L. J., M. C. 179 ; 36 L. T. 412 ; 25 W. R. 464.

The repealed Municipal Corporations Act, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 60), which gave a summary remedy against a corporate officer, who refuses to comply with the provisions of the act as to giving up to the town council of the borough all documents in the custody of such officer and paying over moneys, did not take away the right of action which the corporation has against such officer for the breach of duty so imposed by that section. Lichfield Corporation v. Simpson, 8 Q. B. 65 ; 15 L. J., Q. B. 78.

I. WAIVER OF STATUTORY RIGHTS.

By Person benefited.]—A statute, or charter having the force of a statute, may be waived by the party for whose benefit it was enacted, so as to render the acts of persons disregarding it legal. Goldsmid v. G. E. Ry., 53 L. J., Ch. 371 ; 25 Ch. D. 511 ; 49 L. T. 717 ; 32 W. R. 341—C. A.

An obligation imposed by statute ought to be capable of enforcement with respect to all future dealings between parties affected by it. As to the result of past breaches of the obligation people may come to what agreement they like ; but as to future breaches of it, there ought to be no encouragement given to the making of an agreement between A. and B. that B. shall be at liberty to break the law which has been passed for the protection of A. Baddeley v. Granville (Earl), 56 L. J., Q. B. 501 ; 19 Q. B. D. 426 ; 57 L. T. 268 ; 36 W. R. 63 ; 51 J. P. 822.

Provisions of s. 14 of County Court Act, 1850, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61 (repealed), requiring party appealing to give notice of appeal and security for costs, held not to be conditions precedent to jurisdiction of the court to hear the appeal, and therefore not to prevent a waiver by the respondent. Park Gate Iron Co. v. Coates, 39 L. J., C. P. 317 ; L. R. 5 C. P. 634 ; 22 L. T. 658 ; 18 W. R. 928.

"Contract out of" Act.]—A contract with employer by workman for himself and his representatives not to claim compensation under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, is valid, and a bar to an action by the workman's widow for damages under Lord Campbell's Act. Griffiths v. Dudley (Earl), 51 L. J., Q. B. 543 ; 9 Q. B. D. 357 ; 47 L. T. 10 ; 30 W. R. 797.

J. ENFORCEMENT OF STATUTORY RIGHTS.

General Rules.]—There are three classes of cases in which a liability may be established by statute :—(1) Where a liability existed at common law and was only re-enacted by the statute with a special form of remedy, in such cases the plaintiff had his election unless the statute contained words necessarily excluding the common-law remedy ; (2) where a statute has created a liability, but given no remedy, then the party may adopt an action of debt or other remedy at common law to enforce it ; (3) where the statute creates a liability not existing at common law and gives a particular remedy, here the party must adopt the form of remedy given by the statute. Vallance v. Falle, 53 L. J., Q. B. 459 ; 13 Q. B. D. 109 ; 51 L. T. 158 ; 32 W. R. 770 ; 48 J. P. 519 ; 5 Asp. M. C. 280.

When an act of parliament imposes a statutory duty, an action does not necessarily lie for the breach of such duty at the suit of any person injured by such breach. Atkinson v. Newcastle and Gateshead Water Co., 46 L. J., Ex. 775 ; 2 Ex. D. 441 ; 36 L. T. 761 ; 25 W. R. 794—C. A.

Whether such a right of action exists, depends upon the general scope and object of the particular statute. Ib.

By the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 17), s. 42, the undertakers are at all times to keep charged with water at a certain pressure all their pipes to which fire plugs shall be affixed, and to allow all persons at all times to take and use such water for extinguishing fire without making compensation for the same. By s. 43, if the undertakers neglect to keep their pipes charged at the statutory pressure, they are to be liable to a penalty of 10*l.* for each offence, to be recovered by a common informer. In an action to recover damages against a water company, for not keeping its pipes supplied with water at the statutory pressure, whereby a house was burnt down :—Held, that the action would not lie. Ib.

Courts of law and equity can only enforce the rights of parties under acts of parliament by the application of their known rules and principles. If they are inadequate to the purpose, the legislature alone can supply the defect. Weale v. West Middlesex Waterworks Co., 1 Jac. & Walk. 371 ; 21 R. R. 183.

Relief cannot be given against a forfeiture created by act of parliament ; but a court of equity will see that the proceedings working the forfeiture have been regular. Blennerhassett v. Day, 2 Ball & B. 128.

One act giving final jurisdiction, and another act giving jurisdiction subject to appeal, the court cannot proceed on both acts. Bedford Charity, In re, 2 Swanst. 518 ; 19 R. R. 107.

Right of Action for Breach of Statute.]—When a statute creates a duty with the object of preventing a mischief of a particular kind, a person who, by reason of another's neglect of the statutory duty, suffers a loss of a different kind, is not entitled to maintain an action in respect of such loss. Gorris v. Scott, 43 L. J., Ex. 92 ; L. R. 9 Ex. 125 ; 30 L. T. 431 ; 22 W. R. 575.

A shipowner undertook to carry sheep from a foreign port to England. On the voyage some of the sheep were washed overboard by reason of the shipowner's neglect to take a precaution enjoined by an order of privy council, which was made under the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869, s. 75 :—Held, that the object of the statute and the order being to prevent the spread of contagious diseases among animals, and not to protect them against perils of the sea, the owners of the sheep could not recover. Ib.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, s. 118, required that every ship navigating between the United Kingdom and any place out of the same should keep constantly on board a sufficient supply of medicines suitable to accidents and diseases arising on sea voyages, and in case any default were made in keeping such medicines, the owner of a ship was liable to a penalty at the suit of any person, which was to be applied in part to the informer and as to the residue to the Seamen's Hospital Society : —Held, that the penalty was recoverable for a breach of the public duty created by the statute, and that the provisions of the statute did not interfere with the common-law right of a seaman serving on board a vessel to maintain an action for special damage resulting to him from the breach of the duty. Couch v. Steel, 3 El. & Bl. 402; 2 C. L. R. 940; 23 L. J., Q. B. 121; 18 Jur. 515; 2 W. R. 170, questioned in Atkinson v. Newcastle and Gateshead Water Co., col. 1958, supra.

Statutory Rights—Provision for special benefit of Individual.]—Where an act of parliament contains a provision for the special protection or benefit of an individual, he may enforce his rights thereunder by an action without either joining the attorney-general as a party or shewing that he has sustained any particular damage. Devonport Corporation v. Plymouth Tramways Co., 52 L. T. 161; 49 J. P. 405—C. A.

Where a statute confers a right and annexes penalties for its infringement, an action for damages will not lie against the party infringing the right by the party aggrieved. Stevens v. Jeacocke, 17 L. J., Q. B. 163; 11 Q. B. 731; 12 Jur. 477. S. P., Reg. v. Beat, 1 Den. C. C. 157; 2 Car. & K. 179.

Remedy given by Statute, how far Exclusive.]—It is a settled rule that if a statute creates a new right and gives a particular remedy for enforcing it, there is no other remedy. Semble. West v. Downman, 14 Ch. D. 111; 42 L. T. 340; 29 W. R. 6.

Where a new offence and a penalty for it are created by statute, a person proceeding under the statute is confined to the recovery of the penalty, and no other relief can be asked for. This is true as a general rule, but there are two exceptions to this rule—(1) The ancillary remedy in equity by injunction to protect a right; that is, a mode of preventing that being done which if done, would be an offence. (2) The remedy created by s. 25, sub-s. 8, of the Judicature Act. Cooper v. Whittingham, 49 L. J., Ch. 752; 15 Ch. D. 501; 43 L. T. 16; 28 W. R. 720.

As a general rule, where a penalty is affixed by an act of parliament to an act or omission, such penalty is the only punishment or loss incurred by the party guilty of such act or omission. International Patent Pulp Co., In re, Knowle, In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 625; 37 L. T. 351; 25 W. R. 822.

Where a special remedy is given for the failure to comply with the directions of a statute, that remedy must be followed, and no other can be supposed to exist. Bailey v. Bailey, 53 L. J., Q. B. 583; 13 Q. B. D. 859—per Brett, M.R.

The general rule must be examined with reference to the terms in which the statute deals with the subject. Brain v. Thomas, 50 L. J., Q. B. 663—C. A.—per Selborne (Lord), L. C.

Semble, when a statute refers generally to powers to enforce obedience, and does not prescribe any procedure, those powers generally referred to would be the powers of the court in which the proceedings are deemed to be taken. Green, In re, Green v. Penzance (Lord), 51 L. J., Q. B. 25; 6 App. Cas. 675; 45 L. T. 353; 30 W. R. 218.

The rule that where a statute creates an obligation, and supplies a remedy for its enforcement, that remedy alone must be followed, is subject to this qualification, that the remedy supplied must cover the whole right given. Stubbs v. Martin, [1895] 2 Ir. R. 70—C. A.

When an act creates an obligation, and enforces its performance in a specified manner, the performance of it can only be enforced in the manner pointed out by the act, and a person injured by the violation of the obligation so created has no remedy but that given by the act. Handley v. Moffat, Ir. R. 7 Ch. 104; 21 W. R. 231.

When a statute creates a new offence by prohibiting and making unlawful anything which was lawful before, and appoints a specific remedy against such new offence by a particular method of proceeding, that particular method of proceeding must be pursued, and no other. Reg. v. Lovibond, 24 L. T. 357; 19 W. R. 753.

The penalty provided by s. 29 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, for the neglect by sanitary authorities of the duty to remove street refuse is the sole remedy available against sanitary authorities. Saunders v. Holborn District Board of Works, 64 L. J., Q. B. 101; [1895] 1 Q. B. 64; 15 R. 25; 71 L. T. 519; 43 W. R. 26; 59 J. P. 453.

Indictment Superseded by Peculiar Remedy.]—Where a statute makes a new offence which is not prohibited by the common law and appoints a peculiar manner of proceeding against the offender without mentioning an indictment, the peculiar remedy is a bar to an indictment. Reg. v. Hall, 60 L. J., M. C. 124; [1891] 1 Q. B. 747; 64 L. T. 394; 17 Cox, C. C. 278.

Whether Criminal Proceedings Bar to Civil Remedy.]—A statute provided that a person who misapplied certain moneys should on summary conviction be liable to a penalty and to be ordered to repay all moneys improperly applied, and in default of such repayment or of the payment of the penalty should be imprisoned:—Held, that an order made under this statute was a bar to an action brought to recover the same moneys. Vernon v. Watson, 60 L. J., Q. B. 472; [1891] 2 Q. B. 288; 64 L. T. 728; 39 W. R. 520—C. A.

Enforcing Statutory Duty—Mandamus.]—A rule for a prerogative writ of mandamus is not the proper mode for enforcing a statutory obligation which can be made the subject of an action. Reg. v. Lambourn Valley Ry. (58 L. J., Q. B. 136; 22 Q. B. D. 463) followed. Reg. v. L. & N. W. Ry. and G. W. Ry., 65 L. J., Q. B. 516; 74 L. T. 624.

—— Within Specified Time.]—A railway company constructed a culvert to carry off water from land adjacent to the railway. No complaint was made by the owner of the land of the insufficiency of the culvert, and no application was made to justices for additional accommodation works within the five years limited by the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 73. An injury having subsequently arisen to the land from the insufficiency of the culvert to carry off all the water, an action in respect of such injury was brought by the occupier against the railway company, in which it was alleged that the culvert was insufficient:—Held, on demurrer, that the action would not lie. Colley v. L. & N. W. Ry., 49 L. J., Ex. 575; 5 Ex. D. 277; 42 L. T. 807; 29 W. R. 16; 44 J. P. 427.

Remedy—Whether exclusive or cumulative.]—The conservators of the river Tone, in Somerset, were empowered by special acts, 10 & 11 Will. 3, c. 8, and 6 Anne, c. 9, to levy duties upon goods in barges navigating the river, and "in case of nonpayment the boats, &c., to be stopped till duty paid." A railway company, as successor to such conservators, brought an action of debt at common law to recover unpaid duties:—Held, that they were entitled to do so on the ground that the remedy of the detention of boats and barges given by the act must be taken as a cumulative, and not an exclusive, remedy. G. W. Ry. v. Sharman, 61 L. J., Q. B. 600; 40 W. R. 643.

Where a new obligation is created, and a remedy to compel performance is given in the same section, as a general rule there cannot be any other mode to compel performance than that specified. Lamplugh v. Norton, 58 L. J., Q. B. 279; 22 Q. B. D. 452; 37 W. R. 422—per Lord Esher, M.R.

Sect. 11 of the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1862 (repealed), which provided that the Lord Chancellor might make an order for payment of the expenses of and incidental to the presentation of a petition for an inquiry as to the sanity of an alleged lunatic, and that such expenses might be ordered to be paid by the parties who either present or oppose the petition, or out of the estate of the alleged lunatic, was an enabling and not an imperative enactment, and did not take away the previously existing right of a person to bring an action at law against a lunatic so found by inquisition, and his committee, for the expenses so incurred. Brockwell v. Bullock, 58 L. J., Q. B. 289; 22 Q. B. D. 567; 37 W. R. 455; 53 J. P. 405—C. A.

An act giving a summary remedy, though in terms apparently prescribing such remedy, is cumulative, and does not take away a previous right to sue by action. Sharp v. Warren, 6 Price, 131.

Subsequent statutes, which only add accumulative penalties, do not repeal former statutes. Rex v. Jackson, Cowp. 297.

Where a statute gives accumulated damages to the party aggrieved, it is not a penal statute. Woodgate v. Knatchbull, 2 Term Rep. 154; 1 R. R. 449.

If an act, by general words, purports to confer a power on several donees, one of whom possesses the same power more amply at common law, as incident to his estate, the statute will not be intended to apply to him, so as by implication to abridge his power, and acts of his, therefore, which the statute would have authorised, will be referred to his common-law right. Clayton, Ex parte, 1 Russ. & M. 369.

Provision for Special Benefit of Individual.]—Where an act of parliament contains a provision for the special protection or benefit of an individual, he may enforce his rights thereunder by an action without either joining the attorney-general as a party, or shewing that he has sustained any particular damage. Devonport Corporation v. Plymouth Tramways Co., 52 L. T. 161; 49 J. P. 405—C. A.

Action, where Special Tribunal Non-existent.]—Where a special tribunal, appointed by statute for ascertaining the compensation to be given for damage sustained by the exercise of compulsory powers, is no longer available, the compensation may be ascertained and enforced by action. Bentley v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry., 60 L. J., Ch. 641; [1891] 3 Ch. 222; 65 L. T. 22.

Abolition of Superior of two Remedies.]—Where there are two remedies for the non-observance of a right, and the superior remedy is abolished by act of parliament, the necessary result is that the inferior remedy is brought into exercise. Christie v. Barker, 53 L. J., Q. B. 541—per Brett, M.R.

Statute of Doubtful Construction.]—The court will not grant an injunction to restrain parties from proceeding to deal with property, whose right, if it exists, depends upon the construction of a doubtful statute, where the granting of the injunction would for ever deprive them of an opportunity of exercising the right, especially if no irreparable mischief is to be apprehended from allowing them to proceed. Principles of the court with respect to ex parte injunctions. Att.-Gen. v. Liverpool Corporation, 1 Myl. & C. 171.

Where the construction of a particular section of an act of parliament is doubtful, the court will not interfere by interlocutory injunction. Dover Harbour (Warden and Assistants) v. L., C. & D. Ry., 30 L. J., Ch. 474; 9 W. R. 523.

It is highly inconvenient for the court to grant an injunction to restrain the performance of works "in any other manner than authorised by the words of an act of parliament" unaccompanied by a statement of what, in the opinion of the court, is the right mode of constructing those works. Ib.

When Statute gives no Remedy.]—The plaintiff and defendant possessed adjoining collieries in the Forest of Dean, which were gales subject to 1 & 2 Vict. c. 43, and the rules made thereunder. The defendant's gale being drained by a steam-engine, he was bound by r. 19 to work the engine so as to prevent the water of his gale from falling into plaintiff's gale. The defendant stopped his engine, whereby the plaintiff's gale was flooded and damaged. Sect. 29 provides that a person working his gale contrary to the rules shall be liable to forfeit it, and may be evicted by her majesty; and, in addition thereto, "the compliance with such rules may be enforced by and on behalf of her majesty, or by any other person, by injunction of her majesty's court of exchequer, or otherwise, in such manner as the court shall on application think fit":—Held, that the plaintiffs had a statutory private right, which had been violated by non-compliance with the rules on the part of the defendant; that s. 29 gave no specific remedy for such breach of duty, and that the plaintiffs were therefore entitled to maintain an action at common law to recover damages. Ross v. Rugge-Price, 45 L. J., Ex. 777; 1 Ex. D. 269; 34 L. T. 535; 24 W. R. 786.

—— Or Prescribes no Procedure.]—When a statute refers generally to powers to enforce obedience, and does not prescribe any procedure, those powers generally referred to would be the powers of the court in which the proceedings are deemed to be taken—per Lord Selborne, L.C. Green, In re, Green v. Penzance (Lord), 51 L. J., Q. B. 25; 6 App. Cas. 675; 45 L. T. 353; 30 W. R. 218—H. L. (E.)

Exclusive Jurisdiction of Judge of Assize.]—An act of parliament provided that in case of any dispute as to the amount of compensation for working mines, the same should be determined by an issue at law to be tried before the justices of assize for the county in which the cause of action should arise and a special jury :—Held, that the chancery division had no jurisdiction to entertain an action for compensation under the act. Hanley Coal Co. v. North Staffordshire Ry., 64 L. T. 656.

Non-appointment of Receiver.]—An act empowered commissioners to borrow money upon the security of the rates for the purposes of local improvements and provided that they should every year pay off 100*l.* at the least of the moneys so borrowed to such of the mortgagees of the rates as should be selected by ballot. All interest upon the mortgages was duly paid, and the prescribed mode of payment of the annual instalments was observed. The mortgagees gave the commissioners notice requiring them to pay off their mortgage in six months. The commissioners refused to do so, and the mortgagees filed a bill to establish their right to be paid off and for a receiver of the rates :—Held, that they had no right to have their mortgage debt paid off, except under the provisions of the act, and that the court had no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of parish rates, and the bill was dismissed. Preston v. Great Yarmouth Corporation, 41 L. J., Ch. 310 ; 26 L. T. 235. Affirmed 41 L. J., Ch. 760 ; L. R. 7 Ch. 655 ; 27 L. T. 87 ; 20 W. R. 875.

Special Remedy excluding Ordinary Remedy.]—A private act enacted that in all cases of encroachments of buildings on the streets of P. by projections on the true lines thereof, it should be competent for the corporate council to have the same dealt with and adjudicated upon, on due notice of any such intention given to the owner thereof. The act created a board of assessors with power to award compensation to owners of property :—Held, that the private act ousted the jurisdiction of the courts, and that it was incumbent upon the corporation to proceed under it for the removal of an encroachment on the street. Pietermaritzburg Corporation v. Natal Land Co., 57 L. J., P. C. 82 ; 13 App. Cas. 478 ; 58 L. T. 895—P. C.

Private Act—Right of Public to sue upon.]—A private act of parliament, authorising the construction of a railway, imposed upon another railway company, whose line was already in existence, an obligation to carry a particular class of traffic at rates not exceeding a fixed amount :—Held (Lord Morris dissenting), that the regulation was not a matter of contract between the two companies, but that it gave rights to the public upon which traders, who alleged that they had suffered injury owing to rates being charged in excess of the amount authorised, could sue. Davis v. Taff Vale Ry., 64 L. J., Q. B. 488 ; [1895] A. C. 542 ; 11 R. 189 ; 72 L. T. 632 ; 44 W. R. 172—H. L. (E.) ; reversing S.C., infra, col. 1964.

Notice of Statutory Obligation, a Condition precedent to enforcement of it.]—When a person is bound by a private act to do certain acts whenever necessary, and the necessity is within the knowledge of the person for whose benefit the acts are to be done, and cannot be ascertained by the person who is to do them, the obligation to do the acts exists only after notice. L. & S. W. Ry. v. Flower, 45 L. J., C. P. 54 ; 1 C. P. D. 77 ; 33 L. T. 687.

A private act authorised the making of a road under a railway. By the act the defendant was bound to maintain the railway bridge over the road, under the superintendence and to the satisfaction of the engineer of the railway company, and to make good to the railway company all expenses occasioned by reason of the execution or failure of the works, or of any act or omission of the defendant. Repairs became necessary, but the necessity could only be ascertained by entry on and examination of the bridge. The company did the repairs without giving notice to the defendant, and sued for the expenses :—Held, that the company could not recover. Ib.

Private Act giving one Company rights as against another Company—Right of Public to benefit of Act.]—The plaintiffs were empowered by their acts to charge certain tolls for conveyance of goods upon their line. The B. railway constructed a line which joined that of the plaintiffs. By the special act of the B. railway it was provided that the plaintiffs should forward goods destined for or coming from the B. railway from or to the junction or any place northward thereof at rates per mile not greater than the lowest rate which should, for the time being, be charged by them for like traffic to or from certain seaports to which the plaintiffs' railway ran :—Held, that this provision was passed for the protection of the B. railway, that it only conferred rights as between the two companies, and did not impose any rights as between the plaintiffs and the public which the latter could enforce ; and that, therefore, the plaintiffs were entitled to charge the public rates for the carriage of goods to the junction from places northward thereof up to the maximum allowed by their own act. Taff Vale Ry. v. Davis, 63 L. J., Q. B. 347 ; [1894] 1 Q. B. 43 ; 9 R. 82 ; 42 W. R. 215—C. A. ; reversed on appeal, supra, col. 1963.

1. PROHIBITION AS TO WORKING.

Coach Proprietors.]—The owner of a stage-coach is not within 3 Car. 1, c. 1, or 22 Car. 2, c. 7; and therefore an action may be maintained against him for neglecting to take a person as a passenger on a Sunday. Sandiman v. Breach, 7 B. & C. 96; 9 D. & R. 796; 5 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 298; 31 R. R. 169.

Drivers.]—The driver of a stage-van is subject to the penalties of 3 Car. c. 1, for travelling on Sunday. Rex v. Middleton, Middleton, Ex parte, 4 D. & R. 824; 3 B. & C. 164; 2 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 220.

But the driver of a stage-coach is not. Sandiman v. Breach, 7 B. & C. 96; 9 D. & R. 796; 5 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 298; 31 R. R. 169.

—— Of Cattle.]—A local act for a parish, in which was a large cattle market, enacted, that it should not be lawful for any drover or other person to conduct or drive through any of the streets in the parish any oxen, sheep, or other cattle during Sunday:—Held, that a person driving a van with horses, in which were calves being conveyed to the market, was not driving or conducting cattle within the meaning of the statute. Triggs v. Lester, L. R. 1 Q. B. 259; 13 L. T. 701; 14 W. R. 279.

Farmer.]—A farmer is not within s. 1 of the Sunday Observance Act, 1677, even though he works with his own hands. Reg. v. Silvester, 33 L. J., M. C. 79; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 360. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Cleworth, 4 B. & S. 927; 9 L. T. 682; 12 W. R. 375.

Semble, that the term "labourer," in s. 1, extends to an agricultural labourer. Ib.

——Work of Necessity.]—Whether haymaking is a work of necessity, is a question of fact on which the finding of the justices before whom a party is convicted under this section must be taken as conclusive. Ib.

Barber.]—An apprentice to a barber in Scotland, bound by his indenture "not to absent himself from his master's business on holidays and week-days, late hours or early, without leave," went away on Sundays without leave, and without shaving his master's customers:—Held, that the apprentice could not be lawfully required to attend his master's shop on Sundays for the purpose of shaving the customers, and that work and all other sorts of handicraft were illegal in England as well as in Scotland, not being works of necessity, or mercy, or charity. Phillips v. Innes, 4 Cl. & F. 234.

Baker.]—Baking puddings and pies and such things for dinner on Sunday is not an offence within the Sunday Observance Act, 1677. Rex v. Younger, 5 Term Rep. 449; 2 R. R. 638. S. P., Rex v. Cox, 2 Burr. 785.

But baking bread in the ordinary course of business is. Ib.

Solicitor.]—An attorney, who, acting on behalf of his client, agrees to become personally responsible for part of the debt owing by him, does not thereby do any work of his ordinary calling within the meaning of the Sunday Observance Act, 1677. Peate v. Dickens, 3 D. P. C. 171; 1 C. M. & R. 422; 5 Tyr. 116; 4 L. J. Ex. 28.

Enlistment.]—An enlistment may be made on a Sunday. Wolton v. Gavin, 16 Q. B. 48; 20 L. J., Q. B. 73; 15 Jur. 329.

Affidavits.]—Quære, whether an affidavit, which appears by the jurat to have been sworn in court on a Sunday, is void. Doe d. Williamson v. Roe, 3 D. & L. 328; 15 L. J., Q. B. 39.

Canal Traffic.]—A power given to a canal company to make by-laws for the government of the company, for the good and orderly using of the navigation, and of warehouses, wharves, &c., and for the well-governing of the bargemen, does not authorise them to close the canal on Sundays by a chain suspended across it; and a by-law for so closing the canal on Sundays is illegal and void. Calder and Hebble Navigation Co., v. Pilling, 14 M. & W. 76; 3 Railw. Cas. 735; 14 L. J., Ex. 223; 9 Jur. 377.

Sale of Liquor in Public-houses.]—See INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

Workshop—Closing—Exception in Favour of Jews—Workshop "open for Traffic on Sunday."]—The appellant, who is of the Jewish religion, was the occupier of a workshop. He made arrangements with his customers to do certain work at certain prices upon certain articles sent to him. The workshop was closed on Saturday, and was open on Sunday in order that the articles might be sent to and fetched from his workshop in pursuance of such prior arrangements, and for no other purpose whatever:—Held, that the appellant did not keep his workshop "open for traffic on Sunday" within s. 51 of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1878. Goldstein v. Vaughan, 66 L. J., Q. B. 380; [1897] 1 Q. B. 549; 76 L. T. 262; 46 W. R. 399; 61 J. P. 277.

Charter—Admission to Building.]—A charter of incorporation was granted to the company, on condition that no person should be admitted to a company's building or grounds on the Lord's day in consideration of any money payment, whether made directly or indirectly, unless the sanction of the legislature should be obtained. The company having obtained an act of parliament, authorising their directors to agree with the proprietors of any shares or stock for the conversion thereof into tickets of admission for life or years for such proprietor or his nominee, but providing that nothing therein contained should relieve the company from any condition contained in the charter, advertisements were issued by the directors, offering to accept the surrender of shares in exchange for tickets of admission for a term limited, to be made out to bearer, and to be available for Sundays as well as ordinary days:—Held, that the admission of any person on a Sunday, by means of such ticket as proposed, would occasion a forfeiture of the company's charter, and upon a bill filed by a shareholder, the company was restrained from accepting a surrender of any shares in exchange for such ticket of admission. Rendall v. Crystal Palace Co., 4 K. & J. 326; 27 L. J., Ch. 397; 6 W. R. 416.

Act of Bankruptcy.]—Denial on Sunday is not an act of bankruptcy. Preston, Ex parte, 2 Ves. & B. 312; 2 Rose, 21.

2. EFFECT OF STATUTE ON CONTRACTS.

In what Cases.]—The Sunday Observance Act, 1677, applies as well to private as to public conduct; therefore, a horse-dealer cannot maintain an action upon a private contract for the sale and warranty of a horse if made on a Sunday. Fennell v. Ridler, 8 D. & R. 204; 5 B. & C. 406; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 207; 29 R. R. 278.

A coach proprietor having refused to carry the plaintiff because there were no other passengers, he hired a post-chaise to go to his destination:—Held, that the proprietor was liable for the chaise hire, notwithstanding the contract was made on a Sunday. Sandiman v. Breach, 7 B. & C. 96; 9 D. & R. 796; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 298; 31 R. R. 169.

Warranty on Sale.]—But in an action for a breach of warranty of a horse, the seller will not be allowed to set up in answer thereto that he was a horse-dealer, and sold the horse on a Sunday. Bloxsome v. Williams, 5 D. & R. 82; 3 B. & C. 232; 1 Car. & P. 294; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 224; 27 R. R. 337.

Not in ordinary Calling.]—A sale of goods made on a Sunday, which is not made in the exercise of the ordinary calling of the vendor or his agent, is not void at common law, or by the statute. Drury v. Defontaine, 1 Taunt. 131.

When a person sent a mare to a farmer, to be covered by a stallion belonging to him, and the mare was taken to his stables and covered accordingly, upon a Sunday:—Held, that the contract was not void, on the ground of its having been made and executed on a Sunday, it not being made by the farmer in the exercise of his ordinary calling. Searfe v. Morgan, 4 M. & W. 270; 1 H. & H. 292; 7 L. J., Ex. 324.

As s. 5 of the Sunday Observance Act, 1677, prohibits only the labour, business, or work done in the course of a man's ordinary calling, it does not apply to a contract of hiring; and therefore such a contract for a year made on a Sunday between a farmer and a labourer is valid, and service under it conferred a settlement before the passing of 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 64. Rex v. Whitnash, 7 B. & C. 596; 1 M. & Ry. 452; 6 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 26.

Sect. 1 of that statute does not extend to any case where the consideration has been executed, and a property either general or special, has passed in the chattels which are the subject of it. Ib.

A guarantee, given by B., a tradesman, to A., another tradesman, for the faithful services of C., a traveller, to be employed by A., is not an act done in the way of the ordinary business of B., within s. 1. Norton v. Powell, 4 Man. & G. 42; 11 L. J., C. P. 202.

Made by an Agent.]—An action will not lie on a contract entered into on a Sunday, though entered into by an agent, and although the objection is taken by the party at whose request the contract was entered into. Smith v. Sparrow, 4 Bing. 84; 12 Moore, 266; 2 Car. & P. 544; 5 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 80; 29 R. R. 514.

Bills of Exchange.]—Where, in an action by an indorsee against an acceptor of a bill of exchange, it appeared that the bill was drawn on a Sunday:—Held, that the bill was not void. Begbie v. Levi, 1 C. & J. 180; 1 Tyr. 130; 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ex. 51.

Subsequent Promise to Pay.]—Where a contract for the sale of goods, which have been delivered to and returned by the purchaser, was void by reason of its having been made on a Sunday, a subsequent promise to pay will entitle the vendor to recover the value upon a quantum meruit. Williams v. Paul, 4 M. & P. 532; 6 Bing. 653; 8 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 280; 31 R. R. 512.

Acceptance of Goods.]—To a count for goods sold and delivered, the defendant pleaded that they were goods sold and delivered to him by the plaintiff in the way of his trade on a Sunday, contrary to the statute. The plaintiff replied, that the defendant, after the sale and delivery of the goods, kept them for his own use, without returning or offering to return them, and thereby became liable to pay the sum mentioned in the plea, being so much as they were reasonably worth:—Held, bad. Simpson v. Nicholls, 3 M. & W. 240; 6 D. P. C. 355; 1 H. & H. 12; 7 L. J., Ex. 117. See also 5 M. & W. 705, n.

A. agreed to purchase of B. a carriage then standing in the shop of B., A. at the same time desiring that certain alterations might be made in it. The alterations having been made, the carriage was, at A.'s request, placed in the back shop. On Saturday, the 14th November, A. called at the shop, and requested B. to hire a horse and man for him, and to send the carriage to his house on the following day, in order that he might take a drive in it; A. having previously intimated his intention to take the carriage out a few times, in order that, as he was going to take it abroad, it might pass the custom-house as a second-hand carriage. The carriage was accordingly sent and used by A. on the Sunday, A paying for the hire of the horse and man. A. afterwards refused to take or pay for the carriage:—Held, that there was a sufficient acceptance of the carriage by A. before Sunday, the 15th November, within s. 17 of the Statute of Frauds, to entitle the plaintiff to recover upon a count for goods bargained and sold. Beaumont v. Brengeri, 5 C. B. 301.

Contract within Statute of Frauds.]—A plea, that the contract declared upon, being a contract which, under the Statute of Frauds, required the defendant's signature, was entered into with the plaintiff on a Sunday, in the way of the plaintiff's ordinary business, is not supported by evidence that the contract was signed and delivered by the defendant to C. on a Sunday, and delivered by C. to the plaintiff on a subsequent day. Norton v. Powell, 4 Man. & G. 42; 11 L. J., C. P. 202.

Cloak-room at Railway Station.]—A passenger arriving in London by railway on Saturday evening left a portmanteau at the luggage and clock office of the company, on the up-platform of the Paddington station, and on paying 2*d.* received a ticket acknowledging the receipt, with printed conditions, among which was a notice that the company would not deliver up luggage except to persons producing the proper receipt. On Sunday evening, intending to leave London by another railway, he came to the Paddington station for his portmanteau, and found the office shut. After some time he was told by a porter that the superintendent was on the other side; whereupon he went across to the down-platform, from which a train was starting, and the superintendent sent a porter with a key of the office, and he obtained his portmanteau. He was thus delayed forty minutes, and prevented from leaving London by railway that night:—Held, that by the ticket the company was bound to deliver up the portmanteau on Sunday as well as on other days on a reasonable request and within a reasonable time; and that whether there had been an unreasonable delay was a question for the jury. Stallard v. G. W. Ry., 2 B. & S. 419; 31 L. J., Q. B. 137; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1076; 6 L. T. 217; 10 W. R. 488.

3. Penalties and Convictions.

Jurisdiction — One Penalty for a Day.]—A person can commit but one offence on the same day, by exercising his ordinary calling on a Sunday, contrary to the Sunday Observance Act, 1677; and if a justice of the peace proceeds to convict him in more than one penalty for the same day, it is an excess of jurisdiction, for which an action will lie. Crepps v. Durden, Cowp. 640.

Written Consent to Prosecute — Commencement of Proceedings.]—A prosecution under the Sunday Observance Act, 1677, by a person other than the chief officer of police, will be invalid unless the written consent to prosecute has been obtained—either from the chief officer of police in the district in which the offence is committed, or from two justices, as required by s. 1 of the Sunday Observation Prosecution Act, 1871—previous to the laying of the information, which must be held to be the institution of the prosecution. Thorpe v. Priestnall, 66 L. J., Q. B. 248; [1897] 1 Q. B. 159; 45 W. R. 223; 60 J. P. 821.

Mode of Recovery—Distress.]—By ss. 1, 2, of the Sunday Observance Act, 1677, a penalty of 5*s.* is imposed to be levied by distress, and in default of such distress, or in cases of insufficiency or inability to pay the penalty, the offender is to be set publicly in the stocks for two hours. By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 18, the amount of costs is to be specified in a conviction, and is to be recoverable in the same manner as any penalty adjudged by such conviction is to be recoverable. A conviction under s. 1 of the act of 1677, adjudged the offender to forfeit and pay 5*s.* and 11*s.* costs, and that the several sums, if not paid, should be levied by distress, and in default of sufficient distress, that the party convicted should be set publicly in the stocks for the space of two hours, unless the several sums should be sooner paid:—Held, that the conviction was bad, as the justice was not warranted in adjudging that the offender should be set in the stocks in default of payment of the costs, that not being a method provided by the act of 1677, for recovering the pecuniary penalty, but a substituted punishment. Reg. v. Barton, 3 New Sess. Cas. 470; 12 Q. B. 389; 18 L. J., M. C. 56; 13 Jur. 232.

—— Illegal Order—Action against Justice.]—Under the conviction, the offender's goods were distrained, but the conviction was afterwards quashed on account of the illegal alternative as to confinement in the stocks, and an action was brought for the distress against the justice:—Held, that the justice was protected by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 1, and that s. 2 did not apply to the act of distraining for which the action was brought, being one which the justice had jurisdiction to order. Barton v. Bricknell, 13 Q. B. 393; 20 L. J., M. C. 1; 15 Jur. 668.

4. Lord's Day Act.

Place of Entertainment—What is.]—A company incorporated by an act of parliament was the owner of the Brighton Aquarium, a building which consisted of chambers below the level of the ground, and a terrace above. The chief part was used as an aquarium, filled with glass tanks for the exhibition of marine fish and animals. The whole was open to the public on Sunday on the payment of 6*d.* each person. A band played sacred music on the evenings of Sunday, and programmes were issued, stating what music the band would play, and at what time the fish would be fed. An action having been brought against the company to recover a penalty under 21 Geo. 3, c. 49, s. 1, for keeping open a place of entertainment or amusement on the Lord's Day or Sunday:—Held, that the aquarium, under these circumstances, was a place of entertainment and amusement within the statute. Warner v. Brighton Aquarium Co., 44 L. J., M. C. 175, n.; L. R. 10 Ex. 221. S. P., Terry v. Brighton Aquarium Co., 44 L. J., M. C. 173; L. R. 10 Q. B. 306; 32 L. T. 458.

—— Science Lectures.]—A place duly and honestly registered as a place of public worship (though that worship is not according to any established or usual form), in which no music but sacred music is performed or sung, where nothing dramatic is introduced, where the discourses delivered are intended to be instructive and contain nothing hostile to religion, where the object of the promoters may be either to advance their own views of religion, or as they allege "to make science the handmaid of religion," is not a place "used for public entertainment or amusement" on the Lord's Day within 21 Geo. 3, c. 49, s. 1. Baxter v. Langley, 38 L. J., M. C. 1; L. R. 4 C. P. 21; 19 L. T. 321; 17 W. R. 254.

The fact that payment is required for admission to a reserved portion of the place, the doors being open gratuitously, does not deprive the promoters of the protection of 1 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 18, continued by 21 Geo. 3, c. 49, s. 8. Ib.

—— Lectures — Penalties — "Keeper" — Manager.]—A person who acts merely as the agent for the owner of a hall let for the delivery of lectures on Sundays is not a "keeper" of such hall within s. 2 of 21 Geo. 3, c. 49, although he sanctions the terms on which the hall is let and is the person to whom the licence for such hall from the local authorities is granted. A person who acts merely as chairman at a lecture delivered in a hall on Sunday to which the public are admitted on payment of small sums, and who has no control over the lecturer or the subject of the lecture, and whose sole authority is derived from the audience, is not liable under s. 1 of 21 Geo. 3, c. 49, as the "person managing or conducting such entertainment or amusement." Nor is he liable as "master of the ceremonies," that term being inapplicable to an entertainment in the form of a lecture. Nor is he liable as chairman, as the words in the section relating to a chairman refer only to a chairman of a meeting for public debate, which a lecture is not. Reid v. Wilson, 64 L. J., M. C. 60; [1895] 1 Q. B. 315; 14 R. 94; 71 L. T. 739; 43 W. R. 161; 18 Cox, C. C. 56; 59 J. P. 516—C. A.

5. Service and Execution of Process and Proceedings.

Indictable Offences.]—The exception in s. 6 of the Sunday Observance Act, 1677, extends to all indictable offences, and is not restricted to treason and felony, and such misdemeanors as involve an actual breach of the peace. Rawlins v. Ellis, 16 M. & W. 172; 16 L. J., Ex. 5; 10 Jur. 1039.

Service of Process.]—The service of process on a Sunday is absolutely void, and cannot be made good by any subsequent waiver of the defendant by his not objecting till after a rule to plead given. Taylor v. Phillips, 3 East, 155; 6 R. R. 575.

Where a declaration in ejectment was left at the house of a tenant on Saturday, and received by him on the Sunday:—Held, that this was service of process on a Sunday, and void. Doe d. Warren v. Roe, 8 D. & R. 342. S. P., Goodtitle d. Mortimer v. Notitle, 2 D. & R. 232; 5 B. & C. 764.

Service of notice of plea filed on a Sunday is void. Roberts v. Monkhouse, 8 East, 547; 9 R. R. 497.

So service of a notice to produce on a Sunday is bad. Hughes v. Budd, 8 D. P. C. 315; 4 Jur. 150.

When a fi. fa. had been executed on a Sunday, and the execution had been abandoned the next day:—Held, that an entry on the following Thursday to execute a distress warrant was not invalid. Percival v. Stamp, 9 Ex. 167; 2 C. L. R. 282; 23 L. J., Ex. 25; 2 W. R. 14.

The defendant, who was in custody at Cambridge, received an order on Saturday for his discharge; this was forwarded to the undersheriff, at Wisbeach. On the next day, Sunday, the gaoler received a warrant of detainer under a ca. sa., which had been issued the day before:—Held, that the sheriff was entitled to detain the defendant for a reasonable time after the receipt of the order, for the purpose of searching his office for writs; and that the defendant was not entitled to his discharge on the ground that the service of the warrant on Sunday was void. Samuel v. Buller, 1 Ex. 439; 17 L. J., Ex. 54.

Supœna served on Sunday irregular; attachment and injunction therefore set aside before appearance, on entering appearance with the registrar. Mackreth v. Nicholson, 19 Ves. 367.

Arrest.]—Arrest under chancellor's warrant, for contempt of court, good on Sunday. Whitchurch, Ex parte, 1 Atk. 55.

Where a prisoner has been arrested on a Sunday, a subsequent detainer by another party, without collusion, is not vitiated by the illegality of the original arrest. Hooper v. Lane, 6 H. L. Cas. 443.

Where a prisoner has been arrested on a Sunday, a subsequent detainer by another party, without collusion, is not vitiated by the illegality of the original arrest. Ramsden, In re, 15 L. J., M. C. 113.

By 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 60, the town council may apply to justices against a town clerk, to compel him to deliver up books, papers and writings in his custody; and, upon his refusal, they are required "to commit such offender to the common gaol" until he shall have delivered up such books, papers and writings. The return to a habeas corpus, directed to a county gaoler, stated that E. was delivered into his custody, under a warrant of two justices, obtained by a town council, for not delivering up accounts and vouchers in his custody as town clerk; and that whilst he was in custody another warrant, under the hands of the same justices, and at the instance of the same parties, was lodged with him:—Held, first, that the breach of duty provided for in s. 60 was not an offence within the exception in 29 Car. 2, c. 7, s. 6; and therefore the arrest (which was shewn by affidavits to have been on Sunday) was illegal. Eggington, Ex parte, 2 El. & Bl. 717; 2 C. L. R. 385; 23 L. J., M. C. 41; 18 Jur. 224; 2 W. R. 10, 76.

—— Taking Sureties for Good Behaviour.]—The defendant was arrested under a warrant, brought before a magistrate and required to give sureties for good behaviour, or, in default, be imprisoned. The defendant refused, and a warrant was made out, under which he was committed to prison till he should find the sureties. All these proceedings took place on Sunday, and the warrants and entry in the sessions book bore date of that day:—Held, that although the arrest might be good, the taking sureties and committal in default was a judicial act, and therefore void as being done on Sunday. Reg. v. Ramsay, 16 W. R. 191.

Testing a Writ.]—A writ of summons tested on a Sunday is a nullity; but a copy tested on a Sunday, and service thereof (the writ being correctly tested), are merely irregular, and the irregularity will be waived by laches. Corrall v. Foulkes, 2 B. C. Rep. 262; 5 D. & L. 590.

Notice of Appeal.] — Service of a notice of appeal on Sunday would be void. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., 3 New Sess. Cas. 152; 2 B. C. Rep. 271; 17 L. J., M. C. 111; 11 Jur. 434.

Notices.]—The 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 4, enacts, that persons desirous of being put upon the register of voters, shall give or send to the overseers, on or before the 20th of July, a notice in writing; the 20th of July happening to be a Sunday:—Held, that the notice might legally be given upon that day. Rawlings v. West Derby Overseers, 2 C. B. 72; 15 L. J., C. P. 70. S. P., Colville v. Lewes, 2 C. B. 60.

Delivery of Nomination Paper.]—By an article of the general orders of the poor-law board, the nomination papers on the election of guardians shall be sent to the clerk of the guardians after the 14th and on or before the 26th March; and by another article, when the day for the performance of any act relating to the election of guardians shall be a Sunday, "such act shall be performed on the day next following, and each subsequent proceeding shall be postponed one day":—Held, that the delivery of a nomination paper to the clerk on the 26th March, being Sunday, might be treated as a delivery on the Monday following, and was valid. Westbury-on-Severn Union, In re, 4 El. & Bl. 314. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Poor Law Commissioners, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 251; 3 W. R. 74.

Of Process—By Post.]—Delivery of process by post on Sunday is not service of process within the Sunday Observance Act, 1677. Reg. v. Leominster, 2 B. & S. 391; 31 L. J., M. C. 95; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 793; 6 L. T. 216.

Notice to Quit.—A notice to quit, given on a Sunday, is valid. Sangster v. Noy, 16 L. T. 157.
